INTRODUCTION

A GREAT poet needs no biography : in fact (were it not for the future critic who will otherwise attribute his poetry to some one else) he is generally better off without it. Moore, however, is not a great poet : and since in this hurried age minor poetry that pleased in its day is in sad danger of being undeservedly forgotten, it is fortunate that he is provided with an 'aid to immortality' in the shape of his own admirably readable Journal.

When all is said and done, it is not a highly poetic personality—as most understand the somewhat vague term 'poetic'—which these records eventually reveal : and the reasons of Moore's immediate and widespread popularity as a poet remain only partially explained. It is not easy to recall any writer who has been admired by his public from the very outset of his career with so little to show for it at first, and in spite, as one might think, of actual obstacles to success. On the mere record of fact, he might be quoted as an encouragement to all young poetasters and literary adventurers seeking their fortune in the great world. The son of a small Dublin shopkeeper in an age when classes were as widely separated as they have been at any time in English history—a Catholic when the Penal Laws were still unrepealed, and to be a Catholic was to be in many respects a pariah—Moore came from Trinity College in Dublin (where his religion forbade him to compete with Protestants for academic distinction) into the world of London, with a cheerful temper and a vivacious intellect, but no actual literary credentials save his forthcoming translation of the so-called Odes of Anacreon—a work showing that he possessed a neat talent for versification, a voluptuous imagination, and a certain amount of classical scholarship. He was then, in 1799, only twenty years old.

With as much literary equipment many an aspirant has ended in a Grub Street garret, or seeing in time the error of his ways has returned sadder and wiser to the paternal business. But Moore was born under a happier star. To begin with, he had a patron, Lord Moira, who was very ready to serve him: if patronage was no longer of much value in the world of letters, it could do much in the way of social advancement: a youth of Moore's accomplishments was worth patronizing, and his cheerfulness and readiness to please and to be pleased made him friends everywhere. He had a perfect genius indeed for making friends, and (what has not been granted to all poets) the art of keeping them as well. In one way or another, 'Anacreon' Moore became the fashion, as a singer who could make graceful trifles out of serious subjects, scribble tender and witty verses in ladies' albums, or write a good song and sing it himself. Many of the primitiae of this period were published among his 'juvenile' works as the Poems of Thomas Little: these are for the most part slight erotic trifles, many of which go even farther than the not very prudish mode of the day. Casual versifying, however, was hardly likely to provide a living, though it might gain the entrée of distinguished drawing-rooms. Moore had to find a profession; and when for want of anything better he accepted a position as Admiralty Registrar in Bermuda, it might well have been supposed that even the fame of a translator of Anacreon would not survive transportation across the Atlantic, and that London society would forget him and all his works as easily as it had taken him up. And no doubt this would have been the fate of any one else: but Moore bore a charmed life. To him exile meant simply reculer pour mieux sauter. He did not indeed like Bermuda, and he detested the United States: nevertheless he made friends there, as he did everywhere: and his western experiences provided him with a great deal of new 'copy', or rather, a new and interesting setting for his usual theme of Wein, Weib und Gesang. The Odes and Epistles are mainly the outcome of his residence and travel abroad. (In the present edition (Moore's own arrangement) Poems relating to America stand by themselves, the remaining pieces from Odes and Epistles being included among Juvenile Poems.) Most people will agree that this volume contains as good serious poetry as any that Moore ever wrote. It is for the most part the poetry of the senses rather than of the spirit—voluptuously tender and amatory, luscious and ornamental as Lalla Rookh and The Loves of the Angels were to be afterwards: full of the ‘simile plus moral’ machinery which the poet was fond of all his life; diversified occasionally by a burst of really good rhetoric, as in the Letter to Lord Forbes.

Altogether the Odes and Epistles contain a few things that have somehow stood the test of time, and a great many that are as pretty as verse can be that is not beautiful. Probably even modern criticism will agree with that: and as for the public of 1805, if it had been pleased by Anacreon and Thomas Little, it was enraptured by the Odes and Epistles.

Their publication was important to Moore’s Life. Jeffrey reviewed Moore in the Edinburgh with strong condemnation of his morals rather than of his poetry: and Moore was so much irritated that he sent a challenge to Jeffrey. The poet and critic actually met, and had it not been for the intervention of police officers there might possibly have been bloodshed—only possibly: for scandal continued to assert (what Moore vigorously denied) that the pistols were not loaded with anything more than powder. But the outcome of the matter was that Moore instead of killing one enemy gained two friends. There was a reconciliation between him and Jeffrey, and reconciliation led to friendship. Some time afterwards, Byron, as all the world knows, permitted himself to revive the joke about this duel and to talk of ‘Little’s leadless pistol’, whereupon Moore very nearly called him out too: but in the end the pourparlers which passed between the parties paved the way for Moore and Byron’s long and close intimacy. Moore made friends even out of his quarrels.

The reception of Odes and Epistles was but a foretaste of fame. By the date of his first friendship with Byron the days of real success had begun to come. It is noteworthy that the poems by which Moore is best known—Lalla Rookh and the Irish

Melodies—were both written to a publisher's order. An arrangement was made in 1807 between Moore and the brothers Power, according to which Moore was to write the words for a collection of Irish Melodies, the music to be adapted by Stevenson from national airs : the songs were to be issued in successive volumes. The result shows that Messrs. Power knew what they were about ; for whatever else of Moore's has been proved to be perishable stuff, the Melodies at least live to-day and will probably live for many years yet. Charming as these songs are, it would be rash to say that literary merit has had a great deal to do with their permanence, or that they go very far to prove Moore a poet. Music has been here as elsewhere a strong antiseptic. It is difficult to assess the worth of the Irish Melodies—difficult to think of them at all—apart from their often delightful music ; but at least they show that Moore, if he was very far from possessing the true lyric gift, as Burns or as Shelley possessed it, could at least write an admirably good song ; which is an altogether different accomplishment. That was in fact his true and genuine vocation. Nor can it be claimed that Moore's Muse is really and truly racy of the soil, expressive (as some later and not better poetry has been) of something distinctly un-English. At the risk of being severely censured for making any definite statement about that most indefinite and elusive of all realities, the 'Celtic spirit', one may venture to assert that while it has been caught for a moment by an Irish singer here and there—a Mangan or a Yeats or a 'Moira O'Neill'—there is very little of it in the Irish Melodies. There is nothing in Moore that is vague, mystic, intangible : everything is clear, definite, demonstrative rather than suggestive. Every Irishman with an imagination and an ear for music will find the very spirit of his country in the music of many of the Melodies—in 'Savourneen Dheesh', or 'The Coolin', or (above all) 'Shule Aroon'. But he will not find it in Moore's words. He will find wit in abundance and tenderness and graceful and charming fancies—adornments of literature which are not forbidden, it must be allowed, even to the Saxon ; but hardly anything that is uniquely and characteristically Irish. Nevertheless Moore deserved well of his country. At least he provided the 'national spirit' with a means of expression which, if not the expression of what we have since been taught to regard as real popular sentiment, yet could by virtue of its very conventionalism appeal to and be understood by the world; and a literature which later Irish 'patriots' exploited to the full, and which even a long succession of Nationalist orators has not succeeded in rendering entirely ridiculous. Picturesque conventionalities live longest: it was the manner of the masters of the Romantic school to create a legendary heroic figure out of the Celt—Scotch Highlanders or 'O'Rourkes, O'Tooles, the ragged royal blood of Tara'—with whom indeed they were in very imperfect sympathy. Their ability popularized the convention; and even now it sometimes passes for reality.

Moore and his method certainly won popularity enough. All the English-speaking race admired his Irish Melodies. In Byron's judgement, 'As a beam o'er the face of the waters,' 'When he who adores thee,' 'Oh blame not the bard,' 'Oh breathe not his name,' were 'worth all the epics that ever were composed'. Even the 'Saxon oppressor', still loving liberty in the abstract while he took care to dole it out very sparingly to Catholics, forgave the poet for patriotic aspirations so delightfully expressed. Indeed, Moore's 'Nationalism' in the Melodies was purely an affair of sentiment. Born in 1779, he saw or professed to see in Grattan's Parliament, Protestant though it was, the dawn of a new and brighter era for Ireland. 'Ninety-eight' for him was the age of the 'Ultimi Romanorum'. He had been the friend of the unfortunate Robert Emmet, and had himself been almost drawn into the vortex of conspiracy while he was an undergraduate at Trinity. But Moore was not born to be a rebel. Like Mr. Brooke in Middlemarch, he 'saw what it might lead to', and made up his mind to a prudent abstention. That was characteristic of Moore always. He was a friend of the Whigs, if a candid one ('But bees on flowers alighting cease to hum,—So, settling upon places, Whigs grow dumb'): as a champion of Catholic emancipation and a foe to Protestant supremacy he was a nominal ally of the Whig party: but he was no popular reformer, and rather feared the legislation of 1832. Moore had not the Radical temper : no Irishman has : it is the failure to realize this elementary fact which causes disappointment to English politicians. There remained with him an imaginative enthusiasm for 'Ireland a nation', happy and 'free' as she might have been in some legendary golden age; and lines like

On our side is virtue and Erin,
On theirs is the Saxon and guilt—

or

We tread the land that bore us,
Her green flag glitters o'er us,
The friends we've tried are at our side,
And the foe we hate before us—

only mean that Moore had a poet's eye for the mythical glories of his country. He pleaded eloquently and justly for Catholic emancipation, but he was never an anti-English Nationalist, and could even talk—quite in a Saxon vein—of 'those unfortunate Irish, who are always in some scrape or other, either rebelling, or blarneying, or starving'. England meant so much to him that he could not really sympathize with O'Connell and Repeal. For all that, Catholic Ireland, proud of the first Irish singer—and a singer who was also a true patriot—welcomed him as a heaven-born genius : 'Tom Moore' was for many years the idol of the majority of his countrymen, and even Protestant Irishmen—never very ready to admit merit of any kind in a political opponent—allowed that if he was a bad politician he was a good poet. It was about this period that Byron's enthusiasm for Moore rose to its height. 'There is nothing,' he writes in 1813, 'that Moore may not do, if he will but seriously set about it. In society' (Byron would allow a man to be a poet if he liked, but it was essential to cut a good figure in the world) 'he is gentlemanly, gentle, and altogether more pleasing than any individual with whom I am acquainted.' The Byronic class-list of poets is worth recording—first, Scott; second, Rogers; third, Moore and Campbell; fourth, Southey, Wordsworth, Coleridge; and then 'The Many'. Poets' judgements on each other are rarely final.

The publication of the Melodies went on intermittently till 1835. But some years after it began Moore had more serious work (or what he considered such) on hand.

It is probable that in our more critical and perhaps more prosaic age very few publishers would be prepared to offer £3,000—even to a popular favourite—for an Oriental tale. Such, however, were the terms of the commission proposed by Longmans to Moore in 1812, and it is not likely that the investment turned out ill for the publisher. Moore entered con amore into the task of assimilating the legends of the gorgeous East, which became more gorgeous as seen through the conventional poetic aura which could turn a suburban dinner-party for him into an Olympian banquet—when he was writing serious poetry. Lalla Rookh had an immediate and complete success: Longmans had gauged the public taste quite correctly. The poem was translated into many languages. Moore's friend Luttrell congratulated him on its being sung 'in the streets of Ispahan'. Few can dogmatize about the literary standards of Ispahan: what is at first sight rather remarkable is that Lalla Rookh should have been sung in the streets of London. At any rate, we have lost the taste for this kind of oriental apologue; and if some of Moore's sentimental beauties remain familiar to us—'Oh ever thus—from childhood's hour' for instance—it is parody as much as admiration that keeps their memory green. Much of Lalla Rookh, for all its prettiness, does not rise far above the level of respectable operatic libretto. It is for the stage—the operatic stage; and perhaps the truest appreciation was that of the German Court where these apologues were acted with great success by a distinguished company—Serenities and Transparencies taking the parts of Peris and Fire-worshippers and Veiled Prophets. After all, it is not so very surprising that quite serious critics should have admired this kind of literature; much less that 'Dear Lalla Rookh' should have delighted generations of schoolgirls. Anything akin to Byronism and the Byronic hero—and Moore's heroes have something of the picturesqueness of Laras and Manfreds, though neither their passion nor their pessimism—was sure to be dear to the romantic hearts of the public of 1820. Moreover, if many respectable persons might be shocked by the rebel temper of Byron, and still more by that of Shelley, Moore might lie on any drawing-room table. There was nothing in Lalla Rookh which could be undesirable for the Young Person; if its details were sensuous, its respectability was unimpeachable: never was so voluptuous an imagination employed in the cause of morality. Lalla Rookh was published in 1817, and the next serious poem was the Loves of the Angels (1823), a poem distinguished by the same qualities as its more famous predecessor. The theme, one imagines, might inspire great poetry. But Moore's combination of luscious ornament and conventional morality produces nothing more than a sort of glorified operatic libretto. His erotics transferred from earth to heaven tremble on the verge of the ridiculous: the reader feels the proximity of bathos. However, it is fair to say that the Loves of the Angels was taken quite seriously. Many genuinely admired the poem; some (alarmed by the introduction of 'sacred subjects', in spite of the fact that 'Virtue points the moral lay') paid it the compliment of being as genuinely shocked. The mise-en-scène of the Loves and Lalla Rookh is distinctly stagey, and Moore's next work, a collection called Evenings in Greece, was actually intended for dramatic production. Written in 1825 for Moore's musical publishers Messrs. Power, the Evenings are a series of slight and graceful drawing-room songs strung together on a still slighter thread of narrative. But Moore's songs of Hellas are faint echoes of the Muse of Byron—to whom indeed he would have been well advised to leave the theme of Greek aspirations.

These (with the pieces which he was all his literary life writing for the Powers and others, now generally included under the heading of Songs and Ballads and Miscellaneous Poems) make up Moore's contribution to 'serious' poetry. It would be quite wrong to say that his sentimentalities (however artificial and conventional they may appear) are not genuine. Moore's sensuous imagination was just as real as any other part of his character. Nevertheless it will be admitted by most that the real man is a wit rather than a poet. He is truest to himself in his lighter vein, which best reflects what was most characteristic in Moore, his interest in visible life, the pleasure which he took in society, his desire to amuse and to be amused. A recent poet described himself as a 'born sobber'; Moore was a born laughter—and born too with a genius for criticism which he employed freely on others and occasionally on himself. He could hardly fail to become a contributor of 'occasional verse' on topics of the day. But he was thirty-four before his 'Muse ventured', as he says, 'out of the go-cart of a newspaper' in a volume of jeux d'esprit, mostly republished, called the Twopenny Post Bag. It is hard to form any just estimate of humorous verse which deals with byways of ancient politics and persons whose foibles have long been forgotten. But it appears that the Post Bag, whether by its native wit or by the spiciness of its reflections on the Prince Regent and his entourage, achieved a distinguished success at the time, before its jests came to need a commentary. Byron was loud in its praise. If it does not shine in comparison with later work by the same hand, at least it showed the public that the topics of the day could be handled with wit and high spirits and without coarseness. Later on, owing to the mismanagement or dishonesty of the deputy whom he had left in occupation of his Bermuda Registrarship, Moore apparently either was or imagined himself to be in actual danger of being arrested for debt, and went to reside in Paris till his financial affairs should be arranged. It was a cheerful period of exile. Moore in Paris was quite as much in his element as Moore in England. He found a congenial atmosphere everywhere, a public to dine with and to sing to and to make jokes about. It was now that he wrote The Fudges in Paris—the rhymed correspondence of an English or Anglo-Irish family living under the restored Bourbon monarchy: the father, a political creature and secret agent of Moore's bugbear and butt Castlereagh: the son, a vulgar and would-be fashionable gourmand: the daughter, a silly romantic girl captivated by a supposed 'prince in disguise' who of course turns out to be a shopwalker. There is much admirable humour in the Fudge correspondence: probably Moore is nearer to absolute excellence here than in anything that he ever wrote: the Twopenny Post Bag suffers from obscurity sometimes, but the Fudge papers are as amusing as on the day when they were written. In 1821 Moore returned to England, though even now with some trepidation ('bought a pair of mustachios, by advice of the women, as a mode of disguising myself'), and another series—The Fudges in England—appeared eventually in 1835. Here Miss Fudge, the original prima donna, is now a lady of wealth and a certain age, courted by pietistic fortune-hunters. The whole thing is a skit on the Low Church revival of the 'twenties'. Clearly the press wanted pens like this, and it is not surprising that Moore became a regular contributor of satirical verse to the Times. That journal was not yet at the zenith of its greatness. It was not the arbiter of politics, and Barnes, the editor, was not a Delane: to be connected with the Times was no great matter for pride. But a Whig organ, with sufficient vogue in political circles, could give Moore what he wanted—a medium for making fun of various things and people; and fun, too, which was pretty lucrative. To throw off these metrical jests came naturally to him: it was 'no more difficile Than to a blackbird 'tis to whistle'. In fact he could not help doing it, though he realized (as he says in the Journal) that he ought to be flying at higher game.

The little volume called Cash, Corn, and Catholics, consists of squibs contributed to the Times from 1826 to 1828. There had been another before this, Tom Crib's Memorial to Congress (1819). But through half his lifetime Moore was always publishing the expression of the passing mood—epigram, pasquinade, versicles sometimes grave, more often gay—in various newspapers and magazines: it is these that make up his Miscellaneous Poems and Satirical and Humorous Poems. Most of them have gone the way of ephemeral verse. Here and there one finds something that has contrived to live, not so much by that different kind of humour which has since gone to the making of the best 'light verse', as by sheer smartness of expression: such as the memorable question, 'Why is a Pump like Viscount Castlereagh?' or the lines on Lord Lauderdale—

Bright Peer! to whom Nature and Berwickshire gave
A humour endowed with effects so provoking
That whenever the House is unusually grave
You may always be sure that Lord Lauderdale's joking!

No one has been so copious as Moore in this kind, and hardly any one perhaps so good : none certainly so sparkling. Praed, who wrote much political verse at the same period or a little latter, cannot stand beside him. But then Moore could not have written The Vicar.

Moore was an excellent squib-writer, but he had not the makings of a good satirist. Too much of a sentimentalist to be like Horace, he had too little saeva indignatio to be a Juvenal. It was not his nature to be angry with society. He disliked and laughed at a number of things and people, undoubtedly. He had a sneer for the Holy Alliance, and Viscount Castlereagh, and dullards, and Protestant supremacy. But a wilderness of Orangemen would not put him out of conceit with his world :—

They may rail at this life—since the hour I began it
I found it a life full of kindness and bliss :

nothing would have made him a Byron or a Shelley in regard to the established order of society ; and his satire, such as it was, was so essentially good-humoured that it made him hardly any enemies.

Indeed, until the last sad years few men can have had a pleasanter existence ; even then, deeply as he felt the loss of his children, and conscious as he was of his own failing intellect, the buoyant-tempered man could hardly suffer as keenly as he had enjoyed. Till then, at least, he warmed both hands before the fire of life. He valued domestic happiness above all, and for many years had that in full measure : no man was ever more fortunately married : and thoroughly enjoying social intercourse, he had plenty of that as well. Formed to please and to be pleased, he mixed with all sorts and conditions of men ; preferably ‘The Great’ and such society as he met in the Holland House circle. There, while no doubt ‘Tommy loved a lord’, it is equally certain that lords loved him. ‘Tom Moore’ was welcome wherever he went, fêted and admired, flattered in private and rapturously received in public. It is true that he was always ill off for money, and had to work hard for the support of his family. But if paupertas impulit audax ut versus faceret—and prose too—it was no more than an additional incentive to the doing of what came naturally to him; and it did not interfere with his independence, or prevent his refusing pecuniary help or lucrative work when the one would have offended his scrupulous delicacy or the other might have been uncongenial. Moore was never a literary hack. But work was constantly pressed upon so deft and popular a craftsman, and he wrote on a large variety of subjects. His contributions to the Edinburgh Review include an essay on 'The Fathers', and another on 'German Rationalism' among other and distinctly lighter exercises. He was the most industrious of litterateurs—like many of his trade turning more as the years went on to the writing of prose: by which, indeed, it appears that he wished to be judged, rather than by verse.

Moore's prose ranges over much the same field as his verse, with which indeed it has often a good deal in common. Captain Rock and the Travels of an Irish Gentleman in search of a Religion,—both polemical satires, directed respectively against English misgovernment of Ireland and the claim of Protestantism to be the only true form of Christianity—are animated by the same spirit that produced many of the Satirical and Humorous Poems: the same tender and luscious treatment of a romantic motive pervades the Songs and Ballads or the Odes and Epistles and The Epicurean. This last, indeed, was originally designed as a poem, and eventually developed into a prose romance; but those who prefer a poetical form can read the same story in Alciphron. The prose version runs with that rather stilted conventional fluency which seems to have been the special possession of the early nineteenth century, and its manner suggests a link between Lalla Rookh and the Last Days of Pompeii: one sees the genesis of Lytton; and like all Moore's serious and sentimental work, it abounds in imagery. Careful critics have counted I know not how many hundreds of similes in the Life of Sheridan, a sympathetic biography which is probably still read by students of politics. All the world knows the Life of Byron, and the story which hangs thereby—how Moore, acting on his own and others' judgement, sanctioned the destruction of certain autobiographical notes left in his charge by the poet. Our inquisitive age sometimes blames the Life for a similar suppression of personal detail which would surely be interesting because it was scandalous enough for Moore to keep it back : but when all is said and done, the Byron is sufficiently revealing. It was popular on the day of its publication, and is still Moore's most admired prose work. None of the rest, indeed, are now much in demand : least of all perhaps his latest and largest book, the four-volume History of Ireland which was contributed to Lardner's Cyclopaedia, between 1835 and 1846.

Moore is not likely to live by his prose—except in so far as it is concerned with the always interesting personality of Byron. Yet he valued himself on his prose work rather than on his poetry. That, he knew, had not the stuff that makes immortality : and indeed Lalla Rookh, his most admired creation, enjoyed a very short-lived popularity : the Tennysonian age was not much moved by Moore's sentimentalities. Moore, in fact, was a very much better critic of his own poetry than most of the admirers—Byron included—who told him that he was a great poet. One can only record the literary likes and dislikes of our forefathers. Diversities of aesthetic taste do not admit of explanation : we have other ideas, and there is no more to be said ; perhaps the standards of a public which preferred Rogers to Wordsworth are better relegated to their proper place in a museum of curiosities. But the special character of Moore's public and its relation to himself may at least be noted. After all, 'rank and fashion' counted for more among the reading public than it does at present. In the circles in which Moore mostly moved and for which he wrote, there were many then as there are many now who would call a good song-writer a poet : and Moore was certainly a good song-writer. Moreover, he and Byron gave their 'fashionable' audiences exactly what the hearers wanted—Byron rhetoric and real passion, Moore rhetoric and sentiment, which did very nearly as well as real passion, and does duty for it not infrequently. Moore profited enormously by the vogue of Byronism—being himself in his serious moods superficially a sort of optimistic Byron, minus the Byronic gloom. He was artificial, no doubt : but it was a pleasing, and on the whole a novel, kind of artificiality. Above all Moore was very easy to understand, and the kind of public for which he wrote will never trouble itself about anything else. Poetry is its délassement; and nowadays it prefers fiction.

Moore was eminently a man of his own age, and in sympathy with the common mind of his contemporaries: and the common taste of every age admires those who are most like itself. It may be said that the measure of Moore's popularity is the unpopularity of the major poets who had to wait long for proper appreciation, but who have now far outshone such minora sidera of the nineteenth century as Bowles, Campbell, and Rogers. Of course the men of the early decades ought to have known better—but the fact remains that Byron called the Excursion a 'drowsy, frowsy poem', that Praed talked of 'old Bentham's prose, old Wordsworth's verses', as the epitome of dullness, and that the Quarterly said that Keats would never do. The real literary movement of the time went on quite apart from the public for which Moore wrote and which understood and admired him—a public which, being intensely prosaic at heart and sentimental without being reflective, had no real use for Wordsworth, Shelley, Keats, and did not care much for De Quincey, Hazlitt, and Lamb. Nor did Moore himself move much in the circles of these immortals. Circumstances brought him pretty often into contact with Wordsworth, whom he regarded with the distant respect due to a great poet—one, that is, who was considered by good judges to be a great poet, but by whose attitude towards life and society a singer who was by no means a recluse himself might be excusably surprised. Moore's judgement of Keats is not on record: it is permissible to suppose that he would not have fully appreciated the 'Hellenic' spirit. Shelley, the 'poets' poet', might have appealed to him more strongly, and it is on record that Shelley admired much in Moore; but (apart from differences of opinion as to what was right and decent in private life) no respecter of the convenances could really admire a visionary enthusiast and a dangerous Radical, who was considered to exercise a bad influence over the already discontented mind of Byron. Moore had no sympathy at all with Shelley's revolutionary ideas, and was 'perplexed by that sublimity, losing itself in its own vagueness, which so much characterized the writings of Lord Byron's extraordinary friend'. He himself suffered from no divine discontent, nor was he in advance of his age : and (therefore perhaps) he left no enduring mark on the thought and literature of his age. But he wrote much that pleased his own generation, and might still please us : and if few will claim that he is a great poet, yet shining literary and social talent combined with absolute simplicity and uprightness of life make him one of the most attractive figures of the nineteenth century.

The present edition exactly reproduces the text and arrangement of Moore's poems as they were printed under his own supervision in 1841. The editor has omitted the historical Preface which accompanied each of the ten original volumes ; such notes as are not strictly explanatory ; the Appendix following the Irish Melodies, no part of which has much interest for modern readers, while some of it is not even by Moore's hand ; and the prose tale called The Epicurean—a prose version of Alciphron. But he has never presumed to tamper with the form or order of the poems themselves which was approved by Moore's own mature judgement. To follow the example of some comparatively recent editors, and to print poems as they originally appeared rather than as their author subsequently wished them to be read, is surely illogical and unjust. On the same principle, we should print the erased but still legible words of a manuscript instead of those substituted by the author, or set aside the last will of a testator in favour of an earlier one. Further, editors who adopt this method are not consistent. If they omit the 'Thomas Little' poems which Moore's later judgement suppressed for being too erotic, why do they retain The Grecian Girl's Dream in its first form, which was subsequently altered by Moore on precisely the same grounds ? There is only one safe rule in these matters—to retain what the author wished to survive, and to exclude what he wished to perish. On this principle it has seemed best to follow the arrangement of the ten-volume edition. Editors who depart from this sequence appear to do so on chronological grounds—at least it is hard to see what other justification they have; and yet they cannot and do not apply that principle rigorously to the Miscellaneous Poems, or the Songs and Ballads, which, if arranged according to the dates of their first appearance (and the date of many must be quite conjectural) would be scattered here and there all over the volume.

How far the order of poems in the present edition is chronological—it is so, but very roughly—can best be shown by the appended list of Moore's volumes as originally published, with the dates of their appearance.

Most of the volumes of verse were republished in toto in 1841, with alterations here and there of individual pieces. Others were dismembered, and the fragments either suppressed or incorporated in newly formed groups: for instance, most of the 'T. Little' poems and some of the Odes and Epistles go to make up what now stand as Juvenile Poems, the Poems relating to America being taken out of the Odes and Epistles and forming a separate unit. Similarly, the Miscellaneous and Satirical and Humorous Poems are a blend of Cash, Corn, and Catholics, a few verses from Tom Crib's Memorial, and a great many pieces which had never before 1841 appeared elsewhere than in newspapers and magazines.

ODES OF ANACREON

TRANSLATED INTO ENGLISH VERSE

WITH NOTES

TO HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS
THE PRINCE OF WALES

SIR,

IN allowing me to dedicate this Work to Your Royal Highness, you have conferred upon me an honour which I feel very sensibly : and I have only to regret, that the pages which you have thus distinguished are not more deserving of such illustrious patronage.

Believe me, SIR,

With every sentiment of respect,

Your Royal Highness's

Very grateful and devoted Servant,

THOMAS MOORE.

REMARKS ON ANACREON

THERE is but little known with certainty of the life of Anacreon. Chamaeleon Heracleotes,¹ who wrote upon the subject, has been lost in the general wreck of ancient literature. The editors of the poet have collected the few trifling anecdotes which are scattered through the extant authors of antiquity, and, supplying the deficiency of materials by fictions of their own imagination, have arranged, what they call, a life of Anacreon. These specious fabrications are intended to indulge that interest which we naturally feel in the biography of illustrious men; but it is rather a dangerous kind of illusion, as it confounds the limits of history and romance,² and is too often supported by unfaithful citation.³

Our poet was born in the city of Téos, in the delicious region of Ionia, and the time of his birth appears to have been in the sixth century before Christ.⁴ He flourished at that remarkable period, when, under the polished tyrants Hipparchus and Polycrates, Athens and Samos were become the rival asylums of genius. There is nothing certain known about his family, and those who pretend to discover in Plato that he was a descendant of the monarch Codrus, show much more of zeal than of either accuracy or judgment.⁵

The disposition and talents of Anacreon recommended him to the monarch of Samos, and he was formed to be the friend of such a prince as Polycrates. Susceptible only to the pleasures, he felt not the corruptions of the court; and, while Pythagoras fled from the tyrant, Anacreon was celebrating his praises on the lyre. We are told too by Maximus Tyrius, that, by the influence of his amatory songs, he softened the mind of Polycrates into a spirit of benevolence towards his subjects.

The amours of the poet, and the rivalry of the tyrant, I shall pass over in silence; and there are few, I presume, who will regret the omission of most of those anecdotes, which the industry of some editors has not only promulged, but discussed. Whatever is repugnant to modesty and virtue is considered in ethical science, by a supposition very favourable to humanity, as impossible; and this amiable persuasion should be much more strongly entertained, where the transgression wars with nature as well as virtue. But why are we not allowed to indulge in the presumption? Why are we officiously reminded that there have been really such instances of depravity?

Hipparchus, who now maintained at Athens the power which his father Pisistratus had usurped, was one of those princes who may be said to have polished the fetters of their subjects. He was the first, according to Plato, who edited the poems of Homer, and commanded them to be sung by the rhapsodists at the celebration of the Panathenaea. From his court, which was a sort of galaxy of genius, Anacreon could not long be absent. Hipparchus sent a barge for him; the poet readily embraced the invitation, and the Muses and the Loves were wafted with him to Athens.

² The History of Anacreon, by Gacon (le Poète sans fard, as he styles himself), is professedly a romance; nor does Mademoiselle Scuderi, from whom he borrowed the idea, pretend to historical veracity in her account of Anacreon and Sappho. These, then, are allowable. But how can Barnes be forgiven, who, with all the confidence of a biographer, traces every wandering of the poet, and settles him at last, in his old age, at a country villa near Téos?

³ The learned Bayle has detected some infidelities of quotation in Le Fevre. (Dictionnaire Historique, &c.) Madame Dacier is not more accurate than her father: they have almost made Anacreon prime minister to the monarch of Samos.

⁴ I have not attempted to define the particular Olympiad, but have adopted the idea of, Bayle, who says, 'Je n'ai point marqué d'Olympiade; car pour un homme qui a vécu 85 ans, il me semble que l'on ne doit point s'enfermer dans des bornes si étroites.'

The manner of Anacreon's death was singular. We are told that in the eighty-fifth year of his age he was choked by a grape-stone;¹ and, however we may smile at their enthusiastic partiality, who see in this easy and characteristic death a peculiar indulgence of Heaven, we cannot help admiring that his fate should have been so emblematic of his disposition. Caelius Calpagninus alludes to this catastrophe in the following epitaph on our poet:—

Those lips, then, hallow'd sage, which pour'd along
A music sweet as any cygnet's song,
The grape hath clos'd for ever!
Here let the ivy kiss the poet's tomb,
Here let the rose he lov'd with laurels bloom,
In bands that ne'er shall sever.

But far be thou, oh! far, unholy vine,
By whom the favourite minstrel of the Nine
Lost his sweet vital breath;
Thy God himself now blushes to confess,
Once hallow'd vine! he feels he loves thee less,
Since poor Anacreon's death.

It has been supposed by some writers that Anacreon and Sappho were contemporaries; and the very thought of an intercourse between persons so congenial, both in warmth of passion and delicacy of genius, gives such play to the imagination, that the mind loves to indulge in it. But the vision dissolves before historical truth; and Chamaeleon and Hermesianax, who are the source of the supposition, are considered as having merely indulged in a poetical anachronism.²

To infer the moral dispositions of a poet from the tone of sentiment which pervades his works, is sometimes a very fallacious analogy; but the soul of Anacreon speaks so unequivocally through his odes, that we may safely consult them as the faithful mirrors of his heart. We find him there the elegant voluptuary, diffusing the seductive charm of sentiment over passions and propensities at which rigid morality must frown. His heart, devoted to indolence, seems to have thought that there is wealth enough in happiness, but seldom happiness in mere wealth. The cheerfulness, indeed, with which he brightens his old age is interesting and endearing: like his own rose, he is fragrant even in decay. But the most peculiar feature of his mind is that love of simplicity, which he attributes to himself so feelingly, and which breathes characteristically throughout all that he has sung. In truth, if we omit those few vices in our estimate which religion, at that time, not only connived at, but consecrated, we shall be inclined to say that the disposition of our poet was amiable; that his morality was relaxed, but not abandoned; and that Virtue, with her zone loosened, may be an apt emblem of the character of Anacreon.

¹ Fabricius appears not to trust very implicitly in this story. 'Uvae passae acmo tandem suffocatus, si credimus Suidae in οἰνοποτρῆς; alii enim hoc mortis genere perisse tradunt Sophoclem.'—Fabrici Bibliothec. Graec. lib. ii. cap. 15. It must be confessed that Lucian, who tells us that Sophocles was choked by a grape-stone, in the very same treatise mentions the longevity of Anacreon, and yet is silent on the manner of his death. Could he have been ignorant of such a remarkable coincidence, or, knowing, could he have neglected to remark it? See Regnier's introduction to his Anacreon.

² Barnes is convinced (but very gratuitously) of the synchronism of Anacreon and Sappho. In citing his authorities, he has strangely neglected the line quoted by Fulvius Ursinus, as from Anacreon, among the testimonies to Sappho:—

Εμὶ λαβὼν εἰσάρας Σαπφῶ παρθενοῦ ἀδύφωνον.

Fabricius thinks that they might have been contemporary, but considers their amour as a tale of imagination. Vossius rejects the idea entirely; as do also Olaus Borrichius and others.

Of his person and physiognomy time has preserved such uncertain memorials, that it were better, perhaps, to leave the pencil to fancy; and few can read the Odes of Anacreon without imagining to themselves the form of the animated old bard, crowned with roses, and singing cheerfully to his lyre. But the head of Anacreon, prefixed to this work,¹ has been considered so authentic, that we scarcely could be justified in the omission of it; and some have even thought that it is by no means deficient in that benevolent suavity of expression which should characterise the countenance of such a poet.

After the very enthusiastic eulogiums bestowed both by ancients and moderns upon the poems of Anacreon², we need not be diffident in expressing our raptures at their beauty, nor hesitate to pronounce them the most polished remains of antiquity.³ They are, indeed, all beauty, all enchantment.⁴ He steals us so insensibly along with him, that we sympathise even in his excesses. In his amatory odes there is a delicacy of compliment not to be found in any other ancient poet. Love at that period was rather an unrefined emotion: and the intercourse of the sexes was animated more by passion than by sentiment. They knew not those little tendernesses which form the spiritual part of affection; their expression of feeling was therefore rude and unvaried, and the poetry of love deprived it of its most captivating graces. Anacreon, however, attained some ideas of this purer gallantry; and the same delicacy of mind which led him to this refinement, prevented him also from yielding to the freedom of language, which has sullied the pages of all the other poets. His descriptions are warm; but the warmth is in the ideas, not the words. He is sportive without being wanton, and ardent without being licentious. His poetic invention is always most brilliantly displayed in those allegorical fictions which so many have endeavoured to imitate, though all have confessed them to be inimitable. Simplicity is the distinguishing feature of these odes, and they interest by their innocence, as much as they fascinate by their beauty. They may be said, indeed, to be the very infants of the Muses, and to lisp in numbers.

I shall not be accused of enthusiastic partiality by those who have read and felt the original; but, to others, I am conscious, this should not be the language of a translator, whose faint reflection of such beauties can but ill justify his admiration of them.

² Besides those which are extant, he wrote hymns, elegies, epigrams, &c. Some of the epigrams still exist. Horace, in addition to the mention of him (lib. iv. od. 9), alludes also to a poem of his upon the rivalry of Circe and Penelope in the affections of Ulysses, lib. i. od. 17; and the scholiast upon Nicander cites a fragment from a poem upon Sleep by Anacreon, and attributes to him likewise a medicinal treatise. Fulgentius mentions a work of his upon the war between Jupiter and the Titans, and the origin of the consecration of the eagle.

³ See Horace, Maximus Tyrius, &c. His style (says Scaliger) is sweeter than the juice of the Indian reed.—Poet. lib. i. cap. 44. 'From the softness of his verses (says Olaus Borrichius) the ancients bestowed on him the epithets sweet, delicate, graceful, &c.'—Dissertationes Academicæ, de Poetis, diss. 2. Scaliger again praises him thus in a pun; speaking of the μέλος, or ode, 'Anacreon autem non solum dedit hanc μέλην sed etiam in ipsis mollis.'

In the age of Anacreon music and poetry were inseparable. These kindred talents were for a long time associated, and the poet always sung his own compositions to the lyre. It is probable that they were not set to any regular air, but rather a kind of musical recitation, which was varied according to the fancy and feelings of the moment.¹ The poems of Anacreon were sung at banquets as late as the time of Aulus Gellius, who tells us that he heard one of the odes performed at a birthday entertainment.²

The singular beauty of our poet's style, and the apparent facility, perhaps, of his metre have attracted, as I have already remarked, a crowd of imitators. Some of these have succeeded with wonderful felicity, as may be discerned in the few odes which are attributed to writers of a later period. But none of his emulators have been half so dangerous to his fame as those Greek ecclesiastics of the early ages, who, being conscious of their own inferiority to their great prototypes, determined on removing all possibility of comparison, and, under a semblance of moral zeal, deprived the world of some of the most exquisite treasures of ancient times. The works of Sappho and Alcaeus were among those flowers of Grecian literature which thus fell beneath the rude hand of ecclesiastical presumption. It is true they pretended that this sacrifice of genius was hallowed by the interests of religion; but I have already assigned the most probable motive;³ and if Gregorius Nazianzenus had not written Anacreontics, we might now perhaps have the works of the Teian unmutated, and be empowered to say exultingly with Horace,

Nec si quid olim lusit Anacreon
Delevit aetas.

The zeal by which these bishops professed to be actuated, gave birth more innocently, indeed, to an absurd species of parody, as repugnant to piety as it is to taste, where the poet of voluptuousness was made a preacher of the gospel, and his muse, like the Venus in armour at Lacedaemon, was arrayed in all the severities of priestly instruction. Such was the Anacreon Recantatus, by Carolus de Aquino, a Jesuit, published 1701, which consisted of a series of palinodes to the several songs of our poet. Such, too, was the Christian Anacreon of Patriganus, another Jesuit, who preposterously transferred to a most sacred subject all that the Grecian poet had dedicated to festivity and love.

His metre has frequently been adopted by the modern Latin poets; and Scaliger, Taubman, Barthius, and others, have shown that it is by no means uncongenial with that language.⁴ The Anacreontics of Scaliger, however,

¹ In the Paris edition there are four of the original odes set to music, by Le Sueur, Gossec, Mehul, and Cherubini. 'On chante du Latin, et de l'Italien,' says Gail, 'quelquefois même sans les entendre; qui empêche que nous ne chantions des odes Grecques?' The chromatic learning of these composers is very unlike what we are told of the simple melody of the ancients; and they have all, as it appears to me, mistaken the accentuation of the words.

² The Parma commentator is rather careless in referring to this passage of Aulus Gellius (lib. xix. cap. 9). The ode was not sung by the rhetorician Julianus, as he says, but by the minstrels of both sexes, who were introduced at the entertainment.

³ We may perceive by the beginning of the first hymn of Bishop Synesius, that he made Anacreon and Sappho his models of composition.

Ἀγε μοι, λυγρὰ φορμυγῆ,
Μετὰ Τηϊῶν αὐδῶν,
Μετὰ Δαρβιῶν τε μολπῶν.

Margunius and Damascenus were likewise authors of pious Anacreontics.

⁴ Thus too Albertus, a Danish poet:—

Fidii tui minister
Gaudebo semper esse,
Gaudebo semper illi
Litare thure mulso;
Gaudebo semper illum
Laudare pumillilis Anacreonticillis.

See the Danish Poets collected by Rostgaard. These pretty little pieces defy translation. A beautiful Anacreontic by Hugo Grohus may be found Lib. i, Farraginis.

scarcely deserve the name; as they glitter all over with conceits, and, though often elegant, are always laboured. The beautiful fictions of Angerianus¹ preserve more happily than any others the delicate turn of those allegorical fables, which, passing so frequently through the mediums of version and imitation, have generally lost their finest rays in the transmission. Many of the Italian poets have indulged their fancies upon the subjects, and in the manner of Anacreon. Bernardo Tasso first introduced the metre, which was afterwards polished and enriched by Chabrieria and others.²

To judge by the references of Degen, the German language abounds in Anacreontic imitations; and Hagedorn³ is one among many who have assumed him as a model. La Farre, Chaulieu, and the other light poets of France, have also professed to cultivate the muse of Téos; but they have attained all her negligence with little of the simple grace that embellishes it. In the delicate bard of Schiras⁴ we find the kindred spirit of Anacreon: some of his gazelles, or songs, possess all the character of our poet.

We come now to a retrospect of the editions of Anacreon. To Henry Stephen we are indebted for having first recovered his remains from the obscurity in which, so singularly, they had for many ages reposed. He found the seventh ode, as we are told, on the cover of an old book, and communicated it to Victorius, who mentions the circumstance in his Various Readings. Stephen was then very young; and this discovery was considered by some critics of that day as a literary imposition.⁵ In 1554, however, he gave Anacreon to the world,⁶ accompanied with annotations and a Latin version of the greater part of the odes. The learned still hesitated to receive them as the relics of the Teian bard, and suspected them to be the fabrication of some monks of the sixteenth century. This was an idea from which the classic muse recoiled; and the Vatican manuscript, consulted by Scaliger and Salmasius, confirmed the antiquity of most of the poems. A very inaccurate copy of this MS. was taken by Isaac Vossius, and this is the authority which Barnes has followed in his collation. Accordingly he misrepresents almost as often as he quotes; and the subsequent editors, relying upon his authority, have spoken of the manuscript with not less confidence than ignorance. The literary world, however, has at length been gratified with this curious memorial of the poet, by the industry of the Abbé Spaletti, who published at Rome, in 1781, a facsimile of those pages of the Vatican manuscript which contained the odes of Anacreon.⁷

A catalogue has been given by Gail of all the different editions and translations of Anacreon. Finding their number to be much greater than I could possibly have had an opportunity of consulting, I shall here content myself with enumerating only those editions and versions which it has been in my power to collect; and which, though very few, are, I believe, the most important.

⁴ See Toderini on the learning of the Turks, as translated by de Cournard. Prince Cantemir has made the Russians acquainted with Anacreon. See his Life, prefixed to a translation of his Satires, by the Abbé de Guasco.

⁵ Robertellus, in his work De Ratione corrigendi, pronounces these verses to be the triflings of some insipid Graecist.

⁶ Ronsard commemorates this event:—

Je vay boire à Henrie Etienne

Qui des enfers nous a rendu,

Du vieil Anacréon perdu,

La douce lyre Teienne. Ode xv, book 5.

I fill the bowl to Stephen's name,
Who rescued from the gloom of night
The Teian bard of festive fame,
And brought his living lyre to light.

⁷ This manuscript, which Spaletti thinks as old as the tenth century, was brought from the Palatine into the Vatican library; it is a kind of anthology of Greek epigrams, and in the 676th page of it are found the Ἕμιαιβια Συμποσιακα of Anacreon.

The edition by Henry Stephen, 1554, at Paris—the Latin version is attributed by Colomesius to John Dorat.¹

The old French translations, by Ronsard and Belleau—the former published in 1555, the latter in 1556. It appears from a note of Muretus upon one of the sonnets of Ronsard, that Henry Stephen communicated to this poet his manuscript of Anacreon, before he promulgated it to the world.²

The edition by Degen, 1786, who published also a German translation of Anacreon, esteemed the best.

A translation in English verse, by Urquhart, 1787.

The edition by Gail, at Paris, 1799, with a prose translation.

ODES OF ANACREON⁶

ODE I

I SAW the smiling bard of pleasure,
The minstrel of the Teian measure;
'T was in a vision of the night,
He beam'd upon my wondering sight.
I heard his voice, and warmly prest
The dear enthusiast to my breast.
His tresses wore a silvery dye,
But beauty sparkled in his eye;

Sparkled in his eyes of fire,
Through the mist of soft desire. 10
His lip exhal'd, whene'er he sigh'd,
The fragrance of the racy tide;
And, as with weak and reeling feet
He came my cordial kiss to meet,
An infant, of the Cyprian band,
Guided him on with tender hand.
Quick from his glowing brows he drew
His braid, of many a wanton hue;

Colomesius, however, seems to have relied too implicitly on Vossius; almost all these Particularités begin with 'M. Vossius m'a dit.'

² La fiction de ce sonnet, comme l'auteur même m'a dit, est prise d'une ode d'Anacréon, encore non imprimée, qu'il a depuis traduite, Σὺ μὲν φίλῃ χεῖρῳ.

³ The author of Nouvelles de la Répub. des Lett. bestows on this translation much more praise than its merits appear to me to justify.

⁴ I find in Haym's Notizia de' Libri rari, Venice, 1670, an Italian translation by Cappone mentioned.

⁵ This is the most complete of the English translations.

⁶ This ode is the first of the series in the Vatican manuscript, which attributes it to no other poet than Anacreon. They who assert that the manuscript imputes it to Basilus, have been misled by the words Τὸν αὐτοῦ βασιλέως in the margin, which are merely intended as a title to the following ode. Whether it be the production of Anacreon or not, it has all the features of ancient simplicity, and is a beautiful imitation of the poet's happiest manner.

I took the wreath, whose inmost twine
Breath'd of him and blush'd with wine.¹
I hung it o'er my thoughtless brow 21
And ah! I feel its magic now:²
I feel that even his garland's touch
Can make the bosom love too much.

ODE II

GIVE me the harp of epic song,
Which Homer's finger thrill'd along;
But tear away the sanguine string,
For war is not the theme I sing.
Proclaim the laws of festal rite,³
I'm monarch of the board to-night;
And all around shall brim as high,
And quaff the tide as deep as I.
And when the cluster's mellowing dew
Their warm enchanting balm infuse, 10
Our feet shall catch th' elastic bound,
And reel us through the dance's round.
Great Bacchus! we shall sing to thee,
In wild but sweet ebriety;
Flashing around such sparks of thought,
As Bacchus could alone have taught.

Then, give the harp of epic song,
Which Homer's finger thrill'd along;
But tear away the sanguine string,
For war is not the theme I sing. 20

ODE III

LISTEN to the Muse's lyre,
Master of the pencil's fire!

¹ *I took the wreath, whose inmost twine
Breath'd of him, &c.*

Philostatus has the same thought in one of his Ερωτικά, where he speaks of the garland which he had sent to his mistress. Εἰ δὲ βούλει τι φίλῳ χαρίζεσθαι, τὰ λειψάνῳ ἀντιπεμψόν, μηκέτι πνέοντα πόθων μόνον ἀλλὰ καὶ σου. 'If thou art inclined to gratify thy lover, send him back the remains of the garland, no longer breathing of roses only, but of thee!' Which pretty conceit is borrowed (as the author of the Observer remarks) in a well-known little song of Ben Jonson's:—

'But thou thereon didst only breathe,
And sent it back to me;
Since when it looks and smells, I swear,
Not of itself, but thee!'

² And ah! I feel its magic now. This idea, as Longepierre remarks, occurs in an epigram of the seventh book of the Anthologia.

*Ἐξοτε μοι πινοντι συνεσταυσα Χαρικλῶ
Λαβὴν τοὺς ἰδίους ἀμφεβαλε στεφανούς,
Πῦρ ὁλοὺν δαπτει με.*

While I unconscious quaff'd my wine,
'Twas then thy fingers slyly stole

Sketch'd in painting's bold display,
Many a city first portray;
Many a city, revelling free,
Full of loose festivity.
Picture then a rosy train,
Bacchant's straying o'er the plain;
Piping, as they roam along,
Roundelay or shepherd-song. 10
Paint me next, if painting may
Such a theme as this portray,
All the earthly heaven of love
These delighted mortals prove.

ODE IV

VULCAN! hear your glorious task;
I do not from your labours ask
In gorgeous panoply to shine,
For war was ne'er a sport of mine.
No—let me have a silver bowl,
Where I may cradle all my soul;
But mind that, o'er its simple frame
No mimic constellations flame;
Nor grave upon the swelling side,
Orion, scowling o'er the tide. 10
I care not for the glitt'ring wain,
Nor yet the weeping sister train.
But let the vine luxuriant roll
Its blushing tendrils round the bowl,
While many a rose-lipp'd bacchant maid⁴
Is culling clusters in their shade.
Let sylvan gods, in antic shapes,
Wildly press the gushing grapes,

Upon my brow that wreath of thine,
Which since has madden'd all my soul.

³ Proclaim the laws of festal rite. The ancients prescribed certain laws of drinking at their festivals, for an account of which see the commentators. Anacreon here acts the symposiarch, or master of the festival. I have translated according to those who consider κυπελλὰ θεσμων as an inversion of θεσμων κυπελλων.

⁴ This ode, Aulus Gellius tells us, was performed at an entertainment where he was present.

⁵ While many a rose-lipp'd bacchant maid, &c. I have availed myself here of the additional lines given in the Vatican manuscript, which have not been accurately inserted in any of the ordinary editions:—

*Ποίησον ἀμπελούς μοι
Καὶ βοτρυὰς κατ' αὐτῶν
Καὶ μαινάδας τρυγασσας.
Ποιεὶ δὲ λήνον οἶνον,
Ληνοβάτας πατούσας,
Τοὺς σατύρους γελώντας,
Καὶ χρυσοὺς τοὺς ἑρωτάς,
Καὶ Κυβερνήν γελώσας,
'Ομοῦ καλῶ Δυσίω
Ἐρωτὰ κ' Ἀφροδίτην.*

And flights of Loves, in wanton play,
Wing through the air their winding way;
While Venus from her harbour green,
Looks laughing at the joyous scene, 22
And young Lyaeus by her side
Sits, worthy of so bright a bride.

ODE V¹

SCULPTOR, wouldst thou glad my soul,
Grave for me an ample bowl,
Worthy to shine in hall or bower,
When spring-time brings the reveller's
hour.

Grave it with themes of chaste design,
Fit for a simple board like mine.
Display not there the barbarous rites
In which religious zeal delights;
Nor any tale of tragic fate
Which History shudders to relate. 10
No—cull thy fancies from above,
Themes of heav'n and themes of love.
Let Bacchus, Jove's ambrosial boy,
Distil the grape in drops of joy,
And while he smiles at every tear,
Let warm-ey'd Venus, dancing near,
With spirits of the genial bed,
The dewy herbage deftly tread.
Let Love be there, without his arms,
In timid nakedness of charms; 20
And all the Graces, link'd with Love,
Stray, laughing, through the shadowy grove;

While rosy boys disporting round,
In circlets trip the velvet ground.
But ah! if there Apollo toys,
I tremble for the rosy boys.²

ODE V³

As late I sought the spangled bowers,
To cull a wreath of matin flowers,

¹ Degen thinks that this ode is a more modern imitation of the preceding.

² But ah! if there Apollo toys,
I tremble for the rosy boys.

An allusion to the fable, that Apollo had killed his beloved boy Hyacinth, while playing with him at quoits. "This (says M. la Fosse) is assuredly the sense of the text, and it cannot admit of any other."

The Italian translators, to save themselves the trouble of a note, have taken the liberty of making Anacreon himself explain this fable. Thus Salvini, the most literal of any of them:—

Ma con lor non giocchi Apollo;
Che in fiero rischio

Where many an early rose was weeping,
I found the urchin Cupid sleeping.
I caught the boy, a goblet's tide
Was richly mantling by my side,
I caught him by his downy wing,
And whelm'd him in the racy spring.
Then drank I down the poison'd bowl,
And Love now nestles in my soul. 10
Oh yes, my soul is Cupid's nest,
I feel him fluttering in my breast.

ODE VII

THE women tell me every day
That all my bloom has past away.
'Behold,' the pretty wantons cry,
'Behold this mirror with a sigh;
The locks upon thy brow are few,
And, like the rest, they're withering
too!'

Whether decline has thinn'd my hair,
I'm sure I neither know nor care;
But this I know, and this I feel,
As onward to the tomb I steal, 10
That still as death approaches nearer,
The joys of life are sweeter, dearer;
And had I but an hour to live,
That little hour to bliss I'd give.

ODE VIII

I CARE not for the idle state
Of Persia's king, the rich, the great:
I envy not the monarch's throne,
Nor wish the treasur'd gold my own.
But oh! be mine the rosy wreath,
Its freshness o'er my brow to breathe;
Be mine the rich perfumes that flow,
To cool and scent my locks of snow.⁴

Col duro disco
A Giacinto fiaccò il collo.

³ This beautiful fiction, which the commentators have attributed to Julian, a royal poet, the Vatican MS. pronounces to be the genuine offspring of Anacreon. It has, indeed, all the features of the parent:—

et facile insciis
Noscetitur ab omnibus.

⁴ Be mine the rich perfumes that flow,
To cool and scent my locks of snow.

In the original, μυρωσι καταβρεχειν ὑψηλόν. On account of this idea of perfuming the beard, Cornelius de Pauw pronounces the

To-day I'll haste to quaff my wine,
 As if to-morrow ne'er would shine; 10
 But if to-morrow comes, why then—
 I'll haste to quaff my wine again.
 And thus while all our days are bright,
 Nor time has dimm'd their bloomy light,
 Let us the festal hours beguile
 With mantling cup and cordial smile;
 And shed from each new bowl of wine
 The richest drop on Bacchus' shrine.
 For Death may come, with brow unpleasant,
 May come, when least we wish him
 present, 20
 And beckon to the sable shore,
 And grimly bid us—drink no more!

ODE IX

I PRAY thee, by the gods above,
 Give me the mighty bowl I love,
 And let me sing, in wild delight,
 'I will—I will be mad to-night!'
 Alcmaeon once, as legends tell,
 Was frenzied by the fiends of hell;
 Orestes too, with naked tread,
 Frantic pac'd the mountain-head;
 And why? a murder'd mother's shade
 Haunted them still where'er they strayed. 10
 But ne'er could I a murderer be,
 The grape alone shall bleed by me;
 Yet can I shout, with wild delight,
 'I will—I will be mad to-night.'

Aloides' self, in days of yore,
 Imbrued his hands in youthful gore,
 And brandish'd, with a maniac joy,
 The quiver of th' expiring boy:
 And Ajax, with tremendous shield,
 Infuriate scour'd the guiltless field. 20
 But I, whose hands no weapon ask,
 No armour but this joyous flask;
 The trophy of whose frantic hours
 Is but a scatter'd wreath of flowers,
 Ev'n I can sing with wild delight,
 'I will—I will be mad to-night!'

whole ode to be the spurious production of some lascivious monk, who was nursing his beard with unguents. But he should have known that this was an ancient Eastern custom, which, if we may believe Savary, still exists: 'Vous voyez, Monsieur (says this traveller), que l'usage antique de se parfumer la tête et la barbe, célébéré par le prophète

ODE X

How am I to punish thee,
 For the wrong thou'st done to me,
 Silly swallow, prating thing!—
 Shall I clip that wheeling wing?
 Or, as Tereus did, of old,
 (So the fabled tale is told,)
 Shall I tear that tongue away,
 Tongue that utter'd such a lay?
 Ah, how thoughtless hast thou been!
 Long before the dawn was scen, 10
 When a dream came o'er my mind,
 Picturing her I worship, kind,
 Just when I was nearly blest,
 Loud thy matins broke my rest!

ODE XI

'TELL me, gentle youth, I pray thee,
 What in purchase shall I pay thee
 For this little waxen toy,
 Image of the Paphian boy?'
 Thus I said, the other day,
 To a youth who pass'd my way:
 'Sir,' (he answer'd, and the while Answer'd all in Doric style,)
 'Take it, for a trifle take it;
 'Twas not I who dared to make it; 10
 No, believe me, 'twas not I;
 Oh, it has cost me many a sigh,
 And I can no longer keep Little gods, who murder sleep!'
 'Here, then, here,' (I said with joy,)
 'Here is silver for the boy:
 He shall be my bosom guest,
 Idol of my pious breast!'

Now, young Love, I have thee mine,
 Warm me with that torch of thine; 20
 Make me feel as I have felt,
 Or thy waxen frame shall melt:
 I must burn with warm desire,
 Or thou, my boy—in yonder fire.

Roi, subsiste encore de nos jours.' Lettre 12, Savary likewise cites this very ode of Anacreon. [Silly swallow, prating thing, &c.] The loquacity of the swallow was proverbialized; thus Nicosthratus:—

Εἰ το συνεχὲς καὶ πολλὰ καὶ ταχέως λαλεῖν
 Ἦν του φρονεῖν παρασημον, αἱ χελιδόνες
 Ἐλεγον! ἂν ἡμῶν σωφρονεστέραί πολυ.

ODE XII

THEY tell how Atys, wild with love,
 Roams the mount and haunted grove;
 Cybele's name he howls around,¹
 The gloomy blast returns the sound!
 Oft too, by Claros' hallow'd spring,
 The votaries of the laurel'd king
 Quaff the inspiring, magic stream,
 And rave in wild, prophetic dream.
 But frenzied dreams are not for me,
 Great Bacchus is my deity! 10
 Full of mirth, and full of him,
 While floating odours round me swim,
 While mantling bowls are full supplied,
 And you sit blushing by my side,
 I will be mad and raving too—
 Mad, my girl, with love for you!

ODE XIII

I WILL, I will, the conflict's past,
 And I'll consent to love at last.
 Cupid has long, with smiling art,
 Invited me to yield my heart;
 And I have thought that peace of mind
 Should not be for a smile resign'd:
 And so repell'd the tender lure,
 And hop'd my heart would sleep secure.

But, slighted in his boasted charms,
 The angry infant flew to arms; 10
 He slung his quiver's golden frame,
 He took his bow, his shafts of flame,
 And proudly summon'd me to yield,
 Or meet him on the martial field.
 And what did I unthinking do?
 I took to arms, undaunted, too;
 Assum'd the corslet, shield, and spear,
 And, like Pelides, smil'd at fear.
 Then (hear it, all ye powers above!)
 I fought with Love! I fought with
 Love! 20

¹ Cybele's name he howls around, &c.] I have here adopted the accentuation which Elias Andreas gives to Cybele:—

In montibus Cybelen
 Magno sonans boatu.

² *And, having now no other dart,
 He shot himself into my heart!*
 Dryden has parodied this thought in the following extravagant lines:—

— I'm all o'er Love;
 Nay, I am Love, Love shot, and shot so fast,
 He shot himself into my breast at last.

And now his arrows all were shed,
 And I had just in terror fled—
 When, heaving an indignant sigh,
 To see me thus unwounded fly,
 And, having now no other dart,
 He shot himself into my heart!^a
 My heart—alas the luckless day!
 Receiv'd the god, and died away.
 Farewell, farewell, my faithless shield!
 Thy lord at length is forc'd to yield. 30
 Vain, vain, is every outward care,
 The foe's within, and triumphs there.

ODE XIV

COUNT me, on the summer trees,
 Every leaf that courts the breeze;
 Count me, on the foamy deep,
 Every wave that sinks to sleep;
 Then, when you have number'd these
 Billowy tides and leafy trees,
 Count me all the flames I prove,
 All the gentle nymphs I love.
 First, of pure Athenian maids
 Sporting in their olive shades, 10
 You may reckon just a score,
 Nay, I'll grant you fifteen more.
 In the fam'd Corinthian grove,
 Where such countless wantons rove,³
 Chains of beauties may be found,
 Chains, by which my heart is bound;
 There, indeed, are nymphs divine,
 Dangerous to a soul like mine.
 Many bloom in Lesbos' isle;
 Many in Ionia smile; 20
 Rhodes a pretty swarm can boast;
 Caria too contains a host.
 Sum them all—of brown and fair
 You may count two thousand there.
 What, you stare? I pray you, peace!
 More I'll find before I cease.
 Have I told you all my flames,
 'Mong the amorous Syrian dames?

³ *In the fam'd Corinthian grove,
 Where such countless wantons rove, &c.*

Corinth was very famous for the beauty and number of its courtezans. Venus was the deity principally worshipped by the people, and their constant prayer was, that the gods should increase the number of her worshippers. We may perceive from the application of the verb κοπιῶνταί, in Aristophanes, that the lubricity of the Corinthians had become proverbial.

Have I numbered every one,
 Glowing under Egypt's sun ? 30
 Or the nymphs, who blushing sweet
 Deck the shrine of Love in Crete ;
 Where the God, with festal play,
 Holds eternal holiday ?
 Still in clusters, still remain
 Gades' warm, desiring train ;¹
 Still there lies a myriad more
 On the sable India's shore ;
 These, and many far remov'd,
 All are loving—all are lov'd ! 40

ODE XV

TELL me, why, my sweetest dove,²
 Thus your humid pinions move,
 Shedding through the air in showers
 Essence of the balmiest flowers ?
 Tell me whither, whence you rove,
 Tell me all, my sweetest dove.

Curious stranger, I belong
 To the bard of Teian song ;
 With his mandate now I fly
 To the nymph of azure eye ;— 10
 She, whose eye has madden'd many,³
 But the poet more than any.
 Venus, for a hymn of love,
 Warbled in her votive grove,
 ('Twas in sooth a gentle lay,)
 Gave me to the bard away.
 See me now his faithful minion,—
 Thus with softly-gliding pinion,
 To his lovely girl I bear
 Songs of passion through the air. 20
 Oft he blandly whispers me,
 'Soon, my bird, I'll set you free.'
 But in vain he'll bid me fly,
 I shall serve him till I die.

The music of the Gaditanian females had all the voluptuous character of their dancing, as appears from Martial :—

Cantica qui Nili, qui Gaditana susurrat.

Lib. iii. epig. 63.

² The dove of Anacreon, bearing a letter from the poet to his mistress, is met by a stranger, with whom this dialogue is imagined,

Never could my plumes sustain
 Ruffling winds and chilling rain,
 O'er the plains, or in the dell,
 On the mountain's savage swell,
 Seeking in the desert wood
 Gloomy shelter, rustic food. 30
 Now I lead a life of ease,
 Far from rugged haunts like these.
 From Anacreon's hand I eat
 Food delicious, viands sweet ;
 Flutter o'er his goblet's brim,
 Sip the foamy wine with him.
 Then, when I have wanton'd round
 To his lyre's beguiling sound ;
 Or with gently-moving wings
 Fann'd the minstrel while he sings : 40
 On his harp I sink in slumbers,
 Dreaming still of dulcet numbers !

This is all—away—away—
 You have made me waste the day.
 How I've chatter'd ! prating crow
 Never yet did chatter so.

ODE XVI

THOU, whose soft and rosy hues
 Mimic form and soul infuse,⁴
 Best of painters, come, portray
 The lovely maid that's far away.
 Far away, my soul ! thou art,
 But I've thy beauties all by heart.
 Paint her jetty ringlets playing,
 Silky locks, like tendrils straying :
 And, if painting hath the skill
 To make the spicy balm distil, 10
 Let every little lock exhale
 A sigh of perfume on the gale.
 Where her tresses' curly flow
 Darkles o'er the brow of snow,

³ She, whose eye has madden'd many, &c.] For rupavrov, in the original, Zeune and Schneider conjecture that we should read rupavrov, in allusion to the strong influence which this object of his love held over the mind of Polycrates. See Degen.

⁴ Thou, whose soft and rosy hues, Mimic form and soul infuse,

I have followed here the reading of the Vatican MS. ποδενς. Painting is called 'the rosy art,' either in reference to colouring, or as an indefinite epithet of excellence, from the association of beauty with that flower. Salvini has adopted this reading in his literal translation :—

Della rosea arte signora.

Let her forehead beam to light,
Burnish'd as the ivory bright.
Let her eyebrows smoothly rise
In jetty arches o'er her eyes,
Each, a crescent gently gliding,
Just commingling, just dividing. 20

But, hast thou any sparkles warm,
The lightning of her eyes to form ?
Let them effuse the azure rays
That in Minerva's glances blaze,
Mix'd with the liquid light that lies
In Cytherea's languid eyes.
O'er her nose and cheek be shed
Flushing white and soften'd red ;
Mingling tints, as when there glows
In snowy milk the bashful rose.¹ 30
Then her lip, so rich in blisses,
Sweet petitioner for kisses,
Rosy nest, where lurks Persuasion,
Mutely courting Love's invasion.
Next, beneath the velvet chin,
Whose dimple hides a Love within,
Mould her neck with grace descending,
In a heaven of beauty ending ;
While countless charms, above, below,
Sport and flutter round its snow. 40
Now let a floating, lucid veil,
Shadow her form, but not conceal ;
A charm may peep, a hue may beam,
And leave the rest to Fancy's dream.
Enough—'tis she ! 'tis all I seek ;
It glows, it lives, it soon will speak !

ODE XVII

AND now with all thy pencil's truth,
Portray Bathyllus, lovely youth !
Let his hair, in masses bright,
Fall like floating rays of light ;²
And there the raven's die confuse
With the golden sunbeam's hues.
Let no wreath, with artful twine,
The flowing of his locks confine ;

¹ *Mingling tints, as when there glows
In snowy milk the bashful rose.*

Thus Propertius, eleg. 3. lib. ii.

Utque rosae puro lacte natant folia.

And Davenant, in a little poem called 'The Mistress,'

Catch as it falls the Scythian snow,
Bring blushing roses steep'd in milk.

Thus too Taygetus :—

Quae lac atque rosas vincis candore rubenti.

But leave them loose to every breeze,
To take what shape and course they please. 10

Beneath the forehead, fair as snow,
But flush'd with manhood's early glow,
And guileless as the dews of dawn,
Let the majestic brows be drawn,
Of ebon hue, enrich'd by gold,
Such as dark, shining snakes unfold.
Mix in his eyes the power alike,
With love to win, with awe to strike ;
Borrow from Mars his look of ire,
From Venus her soft glance of fire ; 20
Blend them in such expression here,
That we by turns may hope and fear !

Now from the sunny apple seek
The velvet down that spreads his cheek ;
And there, if art so far can go,
Th' ingenuous blush of boyhood show.
While, for his mouth—but no,—in vain
Would words its witching charm explain.

Make it the very seat, the throne,
That Eloquence would claim her own ;
And let the lips, though silent, wear 31
A life-look, as if words were there.

Next thou his ivory neck must trace,
Moulded with soft but manly grace ;
Fair as the neck of Paphia's boy,
Where Paphia's arms have hung in joy.
Give him the winged Hermes' hand,
With which he waves his snaky wand ;
Let Bacchus the broad chest supply,
And Leda's sons the sinewy thigh ; 40
While, through his whole transparent
frame,

Thou show'st the stirrings of that flame,
Which kindles, when the first love-sigh
Steals from the heart, unconscious why.

But sure thy pencil, though so bright,
Is envious of the eye's delight,
Or its enamour'd touch would show
The shoulder, fair as sunless snow,

These last words may perhaps defend the 'flushing white' of the translation.

² *Let his hair, in masses bright,
Fall like floating rays of light ; &c.*

He here describes the sunny hair, the 'flava coma,' which the ancients so much admired.
The Romans gave this colour artificially to their hair. See Stanisł. Kobienzyck. de Luxu Romanorum.

Which now in veiling shadow lies,
Remov'd from all but Fancy's eyes. 50
Now, for his feet—but hold—forbear—
I see the sun-god's portrait there; ¹
Why paint Bathyllus? when, in truth,
There, in that god, thou'st sketch'd the youth.

Enough—let this bright form be mine,
And send the boy to Samos' shrine;
Phoebus shall then Bathyllus be,
Bathyllus then, the deity!

ODE XVIII

Now the star of day is high,
Fly, my girls, in pity fly,
Bring me wine in brimming urns, ²
Cool my lip, it burns, it burns!
Sunn'd by the meridian fire,
Panting, languid I expire.
Give me all those humid flowers,
Drop them o'er my brow in showers.
Scarce a breathing chaplet now
Lives upon my feverish brow; 10
Every dewy rose I wear

I see the sun-god's portrait there.

The abrupt turn here is spirited, but requires some explanation. While the artist is pursuing the portrait of Bathyllus, Anacreon, we must suppose, turns round and sees a picture of Apollo, which was intended for an altar at Samos. He then instantly tells the painter to cease his work; that this picture will serve for Bathyllus; and that, when he goes to Samos, he may make an Apollo of the portrait of the boy which he had begun.

² Bring me wine in brimming urns, &c.] Orig. πινε ἀμυστι. The amystis was a method of drinking used among the Thracians. Thus Horace, 'Threiciā vincat amystide.' Mad. Dacier, Longepierre, &c. &c.

Parrhasius, in his twenty-sixth epistle (Thesaur. Critic. vol. i), explains the amystis as a draught to be exhausted without drawing breath, 'uno haustu.' A note in the margin of this epistle of Parrhasius says, 'Politianus vestem esse putabat,' but adds no reference.

³ Every dewy rose I wear
Sheds its tears, and withers there.

There are some beautiful lines, by Angerianus, upon a garland, which I cannot resist quoting here:—

Ante fores madidae sic sic pendete corollae,
Mane orto imponet Caelia vos capiti;
At quum per niveam cervicem infuxerit humor,
Dicite, non roris sed pluvia haec lacrimae.

By Celia's arbour all the night
Hang, humid wreath, the lover's vow;
And haply, at the morning light,
My love shall twine thee round her brow,

Sheds its tears, and withers there. ³
But to you, my burning heart,
What can now relief impart?
Can brimming bowl, or flowret's dew,
Cool the flame that scorches you?

ODE XIX

HERE recline you, gentle maid, ⁴
Sweet is this embowering shade;
Sweet the young, the modest trees,
Ruffled by the kissing breeze;
Sweet the little founts that weep,
Lulling soft the mind to sleep;
Hark! they whisper as they roll,
Calm persuasion to the soul;
Tell me, tell me, is not this
All a stilly scene of bliss? 10
Who, my girl, would pass it by?
Surely neither you nor I.

ODE XX ⁵

ONE day the Muses twin'd the hands
Of infant Love with flow'ry bands;

Then, if upon her bosom bright
Some drops of dew shall fall from thee,
Tell her, they are not drops of night,
But tears of sorrow shed by me!

⁴ Here recline you, gentle maid, &c.] The Vatican MS. reads βαθυλλον, which renders the whole poem metaphorical. Some commentator suggests the reading of βαθυλλον, which makes a pun upon the name; a grace that Plato himself has condescended to in writing of his boy Αστηρ. See the epigram of this philosopher, which I quote on the twenty-second ode.

There is another epigram by this philosopher, preserved in Laertius, which turns upon the same word.

Αστηρ πριν μὲν ελαμπες ἐν ζωοισιν ἔως
Νυν δὲ θανῶν λαμπρὴς ἑσπερος ἐν φθιμένοις.

In life thou wert my morning star,
But now that death has stol'n thy light,
Alas! thou shinest dim and far,
Like the pale beam that weeps at night.

⁵ The poet appears, in this graceful allegory, to describe the softening influence which poetry holds over the mind, in making it peculiarly susceptible to the impressions of beauty. In the following epigram, however, by the philosopher Plato (Diog. Laert. lib. 3), the Muses are represented as disavowing the influence of Love.

⁶ Α Κυπρις Μουσασι, κορασια, ταν Αφροδιταν
Τιματ, η τον Ερωτα υμιν εφοπλισμαι.
Αι Μουσαι ποτι Κυπριν, Αρει τα στωμυλα ταυτα.
⁷ Ίμιν ου πεταται τοιτο το παιδαριον,

And to celestial Beauty gave
The captive infant for her slave.
His mother comes, with many a toy,
To ransom her beloved boy;
His mother sues, but all in vain,—
He ne'er will leave his chains again.
Even should they take his chains away,
The little captive still would stay. 10
'If this,' he cries, 'a bondage be,
Oh, who could wish for liberty?'

ODE XXI¹

OBSERVE when mother earth is dry,
She drinks the droppings of the sky,
And then the dewy cordial gives
To ev'ry thirsty plant that lives.
The vapours, which at evening weep,
Are beverage to the swelling deep;
And when the rosy sun appears,
He drinks the ocean's misty tears.
The moon too quaffs her paly stream
Of lustre, from the solar beam. 10
Then, hence with all your sober thinking!

Since Nature's holy law is drinking;
I'll make the laws of nature mine,
And pledge the universe in wine.

ODE XXII

THE Phrygian rock, that braves the storm,
Was once a weeping matron's form;

¹ I cannot omit citing those remarkable lines of Shakspeare, where the thoughts of the ode before us are preserved with such striking similitude:

I'll example you with thievery.
The sun's a thief, and with his great attraction
Robs the vast sea. The moon's an arrant thief,
And her pale fire she snatches from the sun.
The sea's a thief, whose liquid surge resolves
The mounds into salt tears. The earth's a thief,
That feeds, and breeds by a composture stol'n
From general excrements.

Timon of Athens, act iv. sc. 3.

² Or, better still, the zone, that lies,
Close to thy breast, and feels its sighs!

This ταινία was a riband, or band, called by the Romans fascia and strophium, which the women wore for the purpose of restraining the exuberance of the bosom. Vide Polluc. Onomast. Thus Martial:—

Fasciæ crescentes dominae compeſce papillas.
The women of Greece not only wore this zone, but condemned themselves to fasting, and made use of certain drugs and powders for the same purpose. To these expedients

And Progne, hapless, frantic maid,
Is now a swallow in the shade.
Oh! that a mirror's form were mine,
That I might catch that smile divine;
And like my own fond fancy be,
Reflecting thee, and only thee;
Or could I be the robe which holds
That graceful form within its folds; 10
Or, turn'd into a fountain, lave
Thy beauties in my circling wave.
Would I were perfume for thy hair,
To breathe my soul in fragrance there;
Or, better still, the zone, that lies
Close to thy breast, and feels its sighs!²
Or ev'n those envious pearls that show
So faintly round that neck of snow—
Yes, I would be a happy gem,
Like them to hang, to fade like them. 20
What more would thy Anacreon be?
Oh, any thing that touches thee;
Nay, sandals for those airy feet—
Ev'n to be trod by them were sweet!

ODE XXIII³

I OFTEN wish this languid lyre,
This warbler of my soul's desire,
Could raise the breath of song sublime,
To men of fame, in former time.
But when the soaring theme I try,
Along the chords my numbers die,
And whisper, with dissolving tone,
'Our sighs are given to love alone!'

they were compelled, in consequence of their inelegant fashion of compressing the waist into a very narrow compass, which necessarily caused an excessive tumidity in the bosom. See Dioscorides, lib. v.

³ According to the order in which the odes are usually placed, this (Θεῶν λεγεῖν Ἀπριδας) forms the first of the series; and is thought to be peculiarly designed as an introduction to the rest. It however characterises the genius of the Teian but very inadequately, as wine, the burden of his lays, is not even mentioned in it:—

— cum multo Venerem confundere mero
Precepit Lyrici Teia Musa senis. OVID.

The twenty-sixth Ode, Σὺ μὲν λεγεῖς πᾶ ὅστις, might, with just as much propriety, be placed at the head of his songs.

We find the sentiment of the ode before us expressed by Bion with much simplicity in his fourth idyl. The above translation is, perhaps, too paraphrastic; but the ode has been so frequently translated, that I could not otherwise avoid triteness and repetition.

Indignant at the feeble lay,
 I tore the panting chords away, 10
 Attun'd them to a nobler swell,
 And struck again the breathing shell ;
 In all the glow of epic fire,
 'To Hercules I wake the lyre.
 But still its fainting sighs repeat,
 'The tale of love alone is sweet !' 1
 Then fare thee well, seductive dream,
 That mad'st me follow Glory's theme ;
 For thou my lyre, and thou my heart,
 Shall never more in spirit part ; 20
 And all that one has felt so well
 The other shall as sweetly tell !

ODE XXIV

To all that breathe the air of heaven,
 Some boon of strength has Nature given.
 In forming the majestic bull,
 She fenced with wreathed horns his skull ;
 A hoof of strength she lent the steed,
 And wing'd the timorous hare with speed.
 She gave the lion fangs of terror,
 And, o'er the ocean's crystal mirror,
 Taught the unnumber'd scaly throng
 To trace their liquid path along ; 10
 While for the umbrage of the grove,
 She plum'd the warbling world of love.

To man she gave, in that proud hour,
 The boon of intellectual power.
 Then, what, oh woman, what, for thee,
 Was left in Nature's treasury ?
 She gave thee beauty—mightier far
 Than all the pomp and power of war.
 Nor steel, nor fire itself hath power
 Like woman in her conquering hour. 20
 Be thou but fair, mankind adore thee,
 Smile, and a world is weak before thee !

ODE XXV

ONCE in each revolving year,
 Gentle bird ! we find thee here.
 When Nature wears her summer-vest,
 Thou com'st to weave thy simple nest ;

¹ But still its fainting sighs repeat,
 'The tale of love alone is sweet !'

The word αρεφονει in the original, may imply that kind of musical dialogue practised by the ancients, in which the lyre was made to respond to the questions proposed by the singer. This was a method which Sappho used, as we are told

But when the chilling winter lowers,
 Again thou seek'st the genial bowers
 Of Memphis, or the shores of Nile,
 Where sunny hours for ever smile.
 And thus thy pinion rests and roves,—
 Alas ! unlike the swarm of Loves, 10
 That brood within this hapless breast,
 And never, never change their nest !
 Still every year, and all the year,
 They fix their fated dwelling here ;
 And some their infant plumage try,
 And on a tender winglet fly ;
 While in the shell, impregn'd with fires,
 Still lurk a thousand more desires ;
 Some from their tiny prisons peeping,
 And some in formless embryo sleeping.
 Thus peopled, like the vernal groves, 21
 My breast resounds with warbling
 Loves ;
 One urchin imps the other's feather,
 Then twin-desires they wing together,
 And fast as they thus take their flight,
 Still other urchins spring to light.
 But is there then no kindly art,
 To chase these Cupids from my heart ;
 Ah, no ! I fear, in sadness fear,
 They will for ever nestle here ! 30

ODE XXVI

THE harp may sing of Troy's alarms,
 Or tell the tale of Theban arms ;
 With other wars my song shall burn,
 For other wounds my harp shall mourn.
 'Twas not the crested warrior's dart,
 That drank the current of my heart ;
 Nor naval arms, nor mailed steed,
 Have made this vanquish'd bosom bleed ;
 No—'twas from eyes of liquid blue,
 A host of quiver'd Cupids flew ; 10
 And now my heart all bleeding lies
 Beneath that army of the eyes !

ODE XXVII²

WE read the flying courser's name
 Upon his side, in marks of flame ;
 And, by their turban'd brows alone,
 The warriors of the East are known.

by Hermogenes ; "ὅταν την λυραν ερωτα Σαπφω, και ὅταν αὐτὴ ἀποκρινηται."—Περὶ Ἰδεω, τομ. δευτ.

² This ode forms a part of the preceding in the Vatican MS., but I have conformed to the editions in translating them separately.

But in the lover's glowing eyes,
The inlet to his bosom lies ;
Through them we see the small faint
mark,
Where Love has dropp'd his burning spark !

ODE XXVIII

As, by his Lemnian forge's flame,
The husband of the Paphian dame
Moulded the glowing steel, to form
Arrows for Cupid, thrilling warm ;
And Venus, as he plied his art,
Shed honey round each new-made dart,
While Love, at hand, to finish all,
Tipp'd every arrow's point with gall ;
It chanc'd the Lord of Battles came
To visit that deep cave of flame. ¹⁰
'Twas from the ranks of war he rush'd
His spear with many a life-drop blush'd ;
He saw the fiery darts, and smil'd
Contemptuous at the archer-child.
'What !' said the urchin, 'dost thou
smile ?
Here, hold this little dart awhile,
And thou wilt find, though swift of flight,
My bolts are not so feathery light.'

Mar took the shaft—and, oh, thy look,
Sweet Venus, when the shaft he took !—
Sighing, he felt the urchin's art, ²¹
And cried, in agony of heart,
'It is not light—I sink with pain !
Take—take thy arrow back again.'
'No,' said the child, 'it must not be ;
That little dart was made for thee !'

ODE XXIX

Yes—loving is a painful thrill,
And not to love more painful still ;
But oh, it is the worst of pain,
To love and not be lov'd again !
Affection now has fled from earth,
Nor fire of genius, noble birth,
Nor heavenly virtue, can beguile
From beauty's cheek one favouring
smile.

¹ Barnes imagines from this allegory, that our poet married very late in life. But I see nothing in the ode which alludes to matrimony, except it be the lead upon the feet of

Gold is the woman's only theme,
Gold is the woman's only dream. ¹⁰
Oh ! never be that wretch forgiven—
Forgive him not, indignant heaven !
Whose grovelling eyes could first adore,
Whose heart could pant for sordid ore.
Since that devoted thirst began,
Man has forgot to feel for man ;
The pulse of social life is dead,
And all its fonder feelings fled !
War too has sullied Nature's charms,
For gold provokes the world to arms : ²⁰
And oh ! the worst of all its arts,
It rends asunder loving hearts.

ODE XXX¹

'Twas in a mocking dream of night—
I fancied I had wings as light
As a young bird's, and flew as fleet ;
While Love, around whose beauteous
feet,
I knew not why, hung chains of lead,
Pursued me, as I trembling fled ;
And, strange to say, as swift as thought,
Spite of my pinions, I was caught !
What does the wanton Fancy mean
By such a strange, illusive scene ? ¹⁰
I fear she whispers to my breast,
That you, sweet maid, have stol'n its
rest ;
That though my fancy, for a while,
Hath hung on many a woman's smile,
I soon dissolv'd each passing vow,
And ne'er was caught by love till now !

ODE XXXI

ARM'D with hyacinthine rod,
(Arms enough for such a god,)
Cupid bade me wing my pace,
And try with him the rapid race.
O'er many a torrent, wild and deep,
By tangled brake and pendent steep,
With weary foot I panting flew,
Till my brow dropp'd with chilly dew.
And now my soul, exhausted, dying,
To my lip was faintly flying ; ¹⁰
And now I thought the spark had fled,
When Cupid hover'd o'er my head,

Cupid ; and I agree in the opinion of Madame Dacier, in her life of the poet, that he was always too fond of pleasure to marry.

And fanning light his breezy pinion,
Rescued my soul from death's dominion;
Then said, in accents half-reproving,
'Why hast thou been a foe to loving?'

ODE XXXII

STREW me a fragrant bed of leaves,
Where lotus with the myrtle weaves;
And while in luxury's dream I sink,
Let me the balm of Bacchus drink!
In this sweet hour of revelry
Young Love shall my attendant be—
Drest for the task, with tunic round
His snowy neck and shoulders bound,
Himself shall hover by my side,
And minister the racy tide! 10

Oh, swift as wheels that kindling roll,
Our life is hurrying to the goal:
A scanty dust, to feed the wind,
Is all the trace 'twill leave behind.
Then wherefore waste the rose's bloom
Upon the cold, insensate tomb?
Can flowery breeze, or odour's breath,
Affect the still, cold sense of death?
Oh no; I ask no balm to steep
With fragrant tears my bed of sleep: 20
But now, while every pulse is glowing,
Now let me breathe the balsam flowing;
Now let the rose, with blush of fire,
Upon my brow in sweets expire;
And bring the nymph whose eye hath
power
To brighten even death's cold hour.
Yes, Cupid! ere my shade retire,
To join the blest elysian choir,
With wine, and love, and social cheer,
I'll make my own elysium here! 30

ODE XXXIII

'Twas noon of night, when round the pole
The sullen Bear is seen to roll;
And mortals, wearied with the day,
Are slumbering all their cares away:
An infant, at that dreary hour,
Came weeping to my silent bower,
And wak'd me with a piteous prayer,
To shield him from the midnight air.
'And who art thou,' I waking cry,
'That bid'st my blissful visions fly?' 10
'Ah, gentle sire!' the infant said,
'In pity take me to thy shed;

Nor fear deceit: a lonely child
I wander o'er the gloomy wild.
Chill drops the rain, and not a ray
Illumes the drear and misty way!'

I heard the baby's tale of woe;
I heard the bitter night-winds blow;
And sighing for his piteous fate, 19
I trimm'd my lamp and op'd the gate.
'Twas Love! the little wand'ring sprite,
His pinion sparkled through the night.
I knew him by his bow and dart;
I knew him by my fluttering heart.
Fondly I take him in, and raise
The dying embers' cheering blaze;
Press from his dank and clinging hair
The crystals of the freezing air,
And in my hand and bosom hold is little fingers thrilling cold. 30

And now the embers' genial ray
Had warm'd his anxious fears away;
'I pray thee,' said the wanton child,
(My bosom trembled as he smil'd,)
'I pray thee let me try my bow,
For through the rain I've wand'ring so,
That much I fear, the midnight shower
Has injur'd its elastic power.'
The fatal bow the urchin drew;
Swift from the string the arrow flew; 40
As swiftly flew as glancing flame,
And to my inmost spirit came!
'Fare thee well,' I heard him say,
As laughing wild he wing'd away;
'Fare thee well, for now I know
The rain has not relax'd my bow;
It still can -end a thrilling dart,
As thou shalt own with all thy heart!'

ODE XXXIV

OH thou, of all creation blest,
Sweet insect, that delight'st to rest
Upon the wild wood's leafy tops,
To drink the dew that morning drops,
And chirp thy song with such a glee,
That happiest kings may envy thee.
Whatever decks the velvet field,
Whate'er the circling seasons yield,
Whatever buds, whatever blows,
For thee it buds, for thee it grows. 10
Nor yet art thou the peasant's fear,
To him thy friendly notes are dear;

For thou art mild as matin dew ;
 And still, when summer's flowery hue
 Begins to paint the bloomy plain,
 We hear thy sweet prophetic strain ;
 Thy sweet prophetic strain we hear,
 And bless the notes and thee revere !
 The Muses love thy shrilly tone ; ¹
 Apollo calls thee all his own ; ²⁰
 'Twas he who gave that voice to thee,
 'Tis he who tunes thy minstrelsy.

Unworn by age's dim decline,
 The fadeless blooms of youth are thine.
 Melodious insect, child of earth,
 In wisdom mirthful, wise in mirth ;
 Exempt from every weak decay,
 That withers vulgar frames away ;
 With not a drop of blood to stain
 The current of thy purer vein ; ³⁰
 So blest an age is pass'd by thee,
 Thou seem'st—a little deity !

ODE XXXV²

CUPID once upon a bed
 Of roses laid his weary head ;
 Luckless urchin, not to see
 Within the leaves a slumbering bee ;
 The bee awak'd—with anger wild
 The bee awak'd, and stung the child.
 Loud and piteous are his cries ;
 To Venus quick he runs, he flies ;
 ' Oh mother !—I am wounded through—
 I die with pain—in sooth I do ! ¹⁰
 Stung by some little angry thing,
 Some serpent on a tiny wing—
 A bee it was—for once, I know,
 I heard a rustic call it so.³
 Thus he spoke, and she the while
 Heard him with a soothing smile ;
 Then said, ' My infant, if so much
 Thou feel the little wild-bee's touch,
 How must the heart, ah, Cupid ! be, ¹⁹
 The hapless heart that's stung by thee !

¹ The Muses love thy shrilly tone ; &c. Phile, de Animal. Proprietat. calls this insect Μουσας φίλος, the darling of the Muses ; and Μουσών ορνυ, the bird of the Muses ; and we find Plato compared for his eloquence to the grasshopper, in the following punning lines of Timon, preserved by Diogenes Laertius :—

Των παντων δ' ηγετο πλατυστατος, αλλ' αγορητης
 'Ηδυστης τερτιζεν ισογραφος, οι θ' 'Εκδημου
 Δανδρει εφεζομενοι οπα λευροεσσαν Ιοιου.

This last line is borrowed from Homer's Iliad, γ, where there occurs the very same simile.

ODE XXXVI

If hoarded gold possess'd the power
 To lengthen life's too fleeting hour,
 And purchase from the hand of death
 A little span, a moment's breath,
 How I would love the precious ore !
 And every hour should well my store ;
 That when Death came, with shadowy pinion,

To waft me to his bleak dominion,
 I might, by bribes, my doom delay,
 And bid him call some distant day. ¹⁰
 But since not all earth's golden store
 Can buy for us one bright hour more,
 Why should we vainly mourn our fate
 Or sigh at life's uncertain date ?
 Nor wealth nor grandeur can illumine
 The silent midnight of the tomb.
 No—give to others hoarded treasures—
 Mine be the brilliant round of pleasures ;
 The goblet rich, the board of friends,
 Whose social souls the goblet blends ; ²⁰
 And mine, while yet I've life to live,
 Those joys that love alone can give.

ODE XXXVII

'Twas night, and many a circling bowl
 Had deeply warm'd my thirsty soul ;
 As lull'd in slumber I was laid,
 Bright visions o'er my fancy play'd.
 With maidens, blooming as the dawn,
 I seem'd to skim the opening lawn ;
 Light, on tiptoe bath'd in dew,
 We flew, and sported as we flew !

Someruddy striplings who look'd on—
 With cheeks, that like the wine-god's shone, ¹⁰
 Saw me chasing, free and wild,
 These blooming maids, and slyly smil'd ;

² Theocritus has imitated this beautiful ode in his nineteenth idyl ; but is very inferior, I think, to his original, in delicacy of point and nuanced of expression. Spenser, in one of his smaller compositions, has sported more diffusely on the same subject. The poem to which I allude begins thus :—

Upon a day, as Love lay sweetly slumbering
 All in his mother's lap ;
 A gentle bee, with his loud trumpet murmuring,
 About him flew by hap, &c. &c.

Smil'd indeed with wanton glee,
Though none could doubt they envied
me.

And still I flew—and now had caught
The panting nymphs, and fondly
thought

To gather from each rosy lip
A kiss that Jove himself might sip—
When sudden all my dream of joys,
Blushing nymphs and laughing boys, 20
All were gone!—'Alas!' I said,
Sighing for th' illusion fled,
'Again, sweet sleep, that scene restore,
Oh! let me dream it o'er and o'er!' 1

ODE XXXVIII

LET us drain the nectar'd bowl,
Let us raise the song of soul
To him, the god who loves so well
The nectar'd bowl, the choral swell;
The god who taught the sons of earth
To thrice the tangled dance of mirth;
Him, who was nurs'd with infant Love,
And cradled in the Paphian grove;
Him, that the snowy Queen of Charms
So oft has fondled in her arms. 10
Oh 'tis from him the transport flows,
Which sweet intoxication knows;
With him, the brow forgets its gloom,
And brilliant graces learn to bloom.

Behold!—my boys a goblet bear,
Whose sparkling foam lights up the air.
Where are now the tear, the sigh?
To the winds they fly, they fly!
Grasp the bowl; in nectar sinking!
Man of sorrow, drown thy thinking! 20
In life, can the tears we lend to thought
In life's account avail us aught?

¹ *"Again, sweet sleep, that scene restore,
Oh! let me dream it o'er and o'er!"*

Doctor Johnson, in his preface to Shakspeare, animadverting upon the commentators of that poet, who pretended, in every little coincidence of thought, to detect an imitation of some ancient poet, alludes in the following words to the line of Anacreon before us:—"I have been told that when Caliban, after a pleasing dream, says, 'I cried to sleep again,' the author imitates Anacreon, who had, like any other man, the same wish on the same occasion."

² *"Snows may o'er his head be flung,
But his heart—his heart is young."*

Saint Pavin makes the same distinction in a sonnet to a young girl.

Can we discern with all our lore,
The path we've yet to journey o'er?
Alas, alas, in ways so dark,
'Tis only wine can strike a spark!
Then let me quaff the foamy tide,
And through the dance meandering glide;
Let me imbibe the spicy breath
Of odours chaf'd to fragrant death; 30
Or from the lips of love inhale
A more ambrosial, richer gale!
To hearts that court the phantom Care,
Let him retire and shroud him there;
While we exhaust the nectar'd bowl,
And swell the choral song of soul
To him, the god who loves so well
The nectar'd bowl, the choral swell!

ODE XXXIX

How I love the festive boy,
Tripping through the dance of joy!
How I love the mellow sage,
Smiling through the veil of age!
And when'er this man of years
In the dance of joy appears,
Snows may o'er his head be flung,
But his heart—his heart is young.²

ODE XL

I KNOW that Heaven hath sent me here
To run this mortal life's career;
The scenes which I have journey'd o'er,
Return no more—alas! no more;
And all the path I've yet to go,
I neither know nor ask to know.
Away, then, wizard Care, nor think
Thy fetters round this soul to link;
Never can heart that feels with me
Descend to be a slave to thee! 10

Je sais bien que les destinées
Ont mal compassé nos années;
Ne regardez que mon amour;
Peut-être en serez vous émue.
Il est jeune et n'est que du jour,
Belle Iris, que je vous ai vue.

Fair and young thou bloomest now,
And I full many a year have told;
But read the heart and not the brow,
Thou shalt not find my love is old.

My love's a child; and thou canst say
How much his little age may be,
For he was born the very day
When first I set my eyes on thee!

And oh ! before the vital thrill,
Which trembles at my heart, is still,
I'll gather Joy's luxuriant flowers,
And gild with bliss my fading hours ;
Bacchus shall bid my winter bloom,
And Venus dance me to the tomb !

ODE XLI

WHEN Spring adorns the dewy scene,
How sweet to walk the velvet green,
And hear the west wind's gentle sighs,
As o'er the scented mead it flies !
How sweet to mark the pouting vine,
Ready to burst in tears of wine ;
And with some maid, who breathes but
love,

To walk, at noontide, through the grove,
Or sit in some cool, green recess—
Oh, is not this true happiness ?

ODE XLII

YES, be the glorious revel mine,
Where humour sparkles from the wine.
Around me, let the youthful choir
Respond to my enlivening lyre ;
And while the red cup foams along,
Mingle in soul as well as song.
Then, while I sit, with flowrets crown'd,
To regulate the goblet's round,
Let but the nymph, our banquet's pride,
Be seated smiling by my side, 10
And earth has not a gift or power
That I would envy, in that hour.
Envy !—oh never let its blight
Touch the gay hearts met here to-night.
Far hence be slander's sidelong wounds,
Nor harsh dispute, nor discord's sounds
Disturb a scene, where all should be Attuned to peace and harmony.

Come, let us hear the harp's gay note
Upon the breeze inspiring float, 20
While round us, kindling into love,
Young maidens through the light dance
move.
Thus blest with mirth, and love, and peace,
Sure such a life should never cease !

1 The character of Anacreon is here very strikingly depicted. His love of social, harmonised pleasures, is expressed with a warmth, amiable and endearing. Among the epigrams imputed to Anacreon is the following; it is the only one worth translation, and it breathes

ODE XLIII

WHILE our rosy fillets shed
Freshness o'er each fervid head,
With many a cup and many a smile
The festal moments we beguile.
And while the harp, impassion'd, flings
Tuneful raptures from its strings,
Some airy nymph, with graceful bound,
Keeps measure to the music's sound ;
Waving, in her snowy hand,
The leafy Bacchanalian wand, 10
Which, as the tripping wanton flies,
Trembles all over to her sighs.
A youth the while, with loosen'd hair
Floating on the listless air,
Sings, to the wild harp's tender tone,
A tale of woes, alas, his own ;
And oh, the sadness in his sigh,
As o'er his lip the accents die !
Never sure on earth has been
Half so bright, so blest a scene. 20
It seems as Love himself had come
To make this spot his chosen home ;—
And Venus, too, with all her wiles,
And Bacchus, shedding rosy smiles,
All, all are here, to hail with me
The Genius of Festivity !

ODE XLIV

Buds of roses, virgin flowers,
Cull'd from Cupid's balmy bowers,
In the bowl of Bacchus steep,
Till with crimson drops they weep.
Twine the rose, the garland twine,
Every leaf distilling wine ;
Drink and smile, and learn to think
That we were born to smile and drink.
Rose, thou art the sweetest flower
That ever drank the amber shower ; 10
Rose, thou art the fondest child
Of dimpled Spring, the wood-nymph
wild.
Even the Gods, who walk the sky,
Are amorous of thy scented sigh.
Cupid, too, in Paphian shades,
His hair with rosy fillet braids,

the same sentiments with this ode :—

Ου φίλος, ὃς κρητὴρὶ παρα πλεω οἰνοποταζών.
Νεῖκεα καὶ πολεμὸν δακρυοειντα λέγει.
Ἀλλ' ὅστις Μούσῳ τε, καὶ ἀγλαὰ δωρ' Ἀφροδίτης
Συμμισγών, ἐρατὴς μνησκέται εὐφροσύνης.

When with the blushing, sister Graces,
The wanton winding dance he traces.
Then bring me, showers of roses bring,
And shed them o'er me while I sing, 20
Or while, great Bacchus, round thy shrine,

Wreathing my brow with rose and vine,
I lead some bright nymph through the dance,¹

Commingle soul with every glance.

ODE XLV

WITHIN this goblet, rich and deep,
I cradle all my woes to sleep.

Why should we breathe the sigh of fear,
Or pour the unavailing tear ?

For death will never heed the sigh,
Nor soften at the tearful eye ;
And eyes that sparkle, eyes that weep,
Must all alike be seal'd in sleep.

Then let us never vainly stray,
In search of thorns, from pleasure's
way ; 10

But wisely quaff the rosy wave,
Which Bacchus loves, which Bacchus
gave ;

And in the goblet, rich and deep,
Cradle our crying woes to sleep.

ODE XLVI²

BEHOLD, the young, the rosy Spring,
Gives to the breeze her scented wing ;
While virgin Graces, warm with May,
Fling roses o'er her dewy way.
The murmuring billows of the deep
Have languish'd into silent sleep ;

¹ I lead some bright nymph through the dance, &c.] The epithet, βαρυκόλπος, which he gives to the nymph, is literally 'full-bosomed.'

² The fastidious affectation of some commentators has denounced this ode as spurious. Degen pronounces the four last lines to be the patch-work of some miserable versificator, and Brunck condemns the whole ode. It appears to me, on the contrary, to be elegantly graphical : full of delicate expressions and luxuriant imagery. The abruptness of Ἰδὲ πῶς εἶπός φανερόν is striking and spirited, and has been imitated rather languidly by Horace :—

Vides ut alta stet nive candidum
Soracte —

The imperative ἴδε is infinitely more impressive :—as in Shakespeare,

And mark ! the fitting sea-birds lave
Their plumes in the reflecting wave ;
While cranes from hoary winter fly
To flutter in a kinder sky. 10
Now the genial star of day
Dissolves the murky clouds away ;
And cultur'd field, and winding stream,
Are freshly glittering in his beam.

Now the earth prolific swells
With leafy buds and flowery bells ;
Gemming shoots the olive twine,
Clusters ripe festoon the vine ;
All along the branches creeping,
Through the velvet foliage peeping, 20
Little infant fruits we see,
Nursing into luxury.

ODE XLVII

'Tis true, my fading years decline,
Yet can I quaff the brimming wine,
As deep as any stripling fair,
Whose cheeks the flush of morning wear ;
And if, amidst the wanton crew,
I'm call'd to wind the dance's clue,
Then shalt thou see this vigorous hand,
Not faltering on the Bacchant's wand,
But brandishing a rosy flask,
The only thyrsus e'er I'll ask ! 10

Let those, who pant for Glory's
charms,
Embrace her in the field of arms ;
While my inglorious, placid soul
Breathes not a wish beyond this bowl.
Then fill it high, my ruddy slave,
And bathe me in its brimming wave.

But look, the morn, in russet mantle clad,
Walks o'er the dew of yon high eastern hill.

There is a simple and poetical description of Spring, in Catullus's beautiful farewell to Bithynia. Carm. 44.

Barnes conjectures, in his life of our poet, that this ode was written after he had returned from Athens, to settle in his paternal seat at Teos ; where, in a little villa at some distance from the city, commanding a view of the Aegean Sea and the islands, he contemplated the beauties of nature and enjoyed the felicities of retirement. Vido Barnes, in Anac. Vita, § xxxv. This supposition, however unauthenticated, forms a pleasing association, which renders the poem more interesting.

For though my fading years decay,
 Though manhood's prime hath pass'd
 away,
 Like old Silenus, sire divine,
 With blushes borrow'd from my wine,
 I'll wanton 'mid the dancing train, 21
 And live my follies o'er again !

ODE XLVIII

WHEN my thirsty soul I steep,
 Every sorrow's lull'd to sleep.
 Talk of monarchs ! I am then
 Richest, happiest, first of men ;
 Careless o'er my cup I sing,
 Fancy makes me more than king ;
 Gives me wealthy Croesus' store,
 Can I, can I wish for more ?
 On my velvet couch reclining,
 Ivy leaves my brow entwining, 10
 While my soul expands with glee,
 What are kings and crowns to me ?
 If before my feet they lay,
 I would spurn them all away !
 Arm ye, arm ye, men of might,
 Hasten to the sanguine fight ;
 But let me, my budding vine !
 Spill no other blood than thine.
 Yonder brimming goblet see,
 That alone shall vanquish me— 20
 Who think it better, wiser far
 To fall in banquet than in war.

ODE XLIX

WHEN Bacchus, Jove's immortal boy,
 The rosy harbinger of joy,
 Who, with the sunshine of the bowl,
 Thaws the winter of our soul—¹
 When to my inmost core he glides,
 And bathes it with his ruby tides,
 A flow of joy, a lively heat,
 Fires my brain, and wings my feet,
 Calling up round me visions known
 To lovers of the bowl alone. 10

¹ *Who, with the sunshine of the bowl,
 Thaws the winter of our soul—&c.*

Ανακτορ is the title which he gives to Bacchus in the original. It is a curious circumstance that Plutarch mistook the name of Levi among the Jews for Αἰν (one of the bacchanal cries), and accordingly supposed that they worshipped Bacchus.

² Faber thinks this ode spurious ; but, I believe, he is singular in his opinion. It has

Sing, sing of love, let music's sound
 In melting cadence float around,
 While, my young Venus, thou and I
 Responsive to its murmurs sigh.
 Then, waking from our blissful trance,
 Again we'll sport, again we'll dance.

ODE L²

WHEN wine I quaff, before my eyes
 Dreams of poetic glory rise ;
 And freshen'd by the goblet's dews,
 My soul invokes the heavenly Muse.
 When wine I drink, all sorrow's o'er,
 I think of doubts and fears no more,
 But scatter to the railing wind
 Each gloomy phantom of the mind.
 When I drink wine, th' ethereal boy,
 Bacchus himself, partakes my joy ; 10
 And while we dance through vernal
 bowers,
 Whose ev'ry breath comes fresh from
 flowers,
 In wine he makes my senses swim,
 Till the gale breathes of nought but him !

Again I drink,—and, lo, there seems
 A calmer light to fill my dreams ;
 The lately ruffled wreath I spread
 With steadier hand around my head ;
 Then take the lyre, and sing ' how blest
 The life of him who lives at rest ! ' 20
 But then comes witching wine again,
 With glorious woman in its train ;
 And, while rich perfumes round me rise,
 That seem the breath of woman's sighs,
 Bright shapes, of every hue and form,
 Upon my kindling fancy swarm,
 Till the whole world of beauty seems
 To crowd into my dazzled dreams !
 When thus I drink, my heart refines,
 And rises as the cup declines ; 30
 Rises in the genial flow,
 That none but social spirits know,

all the spirit of our author. Like the wreath which he presented in the dream, ' it smells of Anacreon.'

The form of the original is remarkable. It is a kind of song of seven quatrains stanzas, each beginning with the line

'Οἶ' εἶναι πῶς τὸν ὄνον

The first stanza alone is incomplete, consisting but of three lines.

When, with young revellers, round the bowl,
The old themselves grow young in soul !
Oh, when I drink, true joy is mine,
There's bliss in every drop of wine.
All other blessings I have known,
I scarcely dar'd to call my own ;
But this the Fates can ne'er destroy,
Till death o'er shadows all my joy. 40

ODE LI

FLY not thus my brow of snow,
Lovely wanton ! fly not so.
Though the wane of age is mine,
Though youth's brilliant flush be thine,
Still I'm doom'd to sigh for thee,
Blest, if thou couldst sigh for me !
See, in yonder flowery braid,
Cull'd for thee, my blushing maid,
How the rose, of orient glow,
Mingles with the lily's snow ; 10
Mark, how sweet their tints agree,
Just, my girl, like thee and me !

ODE LII¹

AWAY, away, ye men of rules,
What have I to do with schools ?
They'd make me learn, they'd make me think,
But would they make me love and drink ?
Teach me this, and let me swim
My soul upon the goblet's brim ;
Teach me this, and let me twine
Some fond, responsive heart to mine,
For, age begins to blanch my brow,
I've time for nought but pleasure now.

Fly, and cool my goblet's glow 11
At yonder fountain's gelid flow ;

¹ 'This is doubtless the work of a more modern poet than Anacreon ; for at the period when he lived rhetoricians were not known.'—Degen.

Though this ode is found in the Vatican manuscript, I am much inclined to agree in this argument against its authenticity ; for though the dawnings of the art of rhetoric might already have appeared, the first who gave it any celebrity was Corax of Syracuse, and he flourished in the century after Anacreon.
² 'This ode is written upon a picture which represented the rape of Europa.'—Madame Dacier.

I'll quaff, my boy, and calmly sink
This soul to slumber as I drink.
Soon, too soon, my jocund slave,
You'll deck your master's grassy grave ;
And there's an end—for ah, you know
They drink but little wine below !

ODE LIII

WHEN I behold the festive train
Of dancing youth, I'm young again !
Memory wakes her magic trance,
And wings me lightly through the dance.
Come, Cybeba, smiling maid !
Cull the flower and twine the braid ;
Bid the blush of summer's rose
Burn upon my forehead's snows ;
And let me, while the wild and young
Trip the mazy dance along, 10
Fling my heap of years away,
And be as wild, as young, as they.
Hither haste, some cordial soul !
Help to my lips the brimming bowl ;
And you shall see this hoary sage
Forget at once his looks and age.
He still can chant the festive hymn,
He still can kiss the goblet's brim ;
As deeply quaff, as largely fill,
And play the fool right nobly still. 20

ODE LIV²

METHINKS, the pictur'd bull we see
Is amorous Jove—it must be he !
How fondly blest he seems to bear
That fairest of Phœnician fair !
How proud he breasts the foamy tide,
And spurns the billowy surge aside !
Could any beast of vulgar vein
Undaunted thus defy the main ?
No : he descends from climes above, 9
He looks the God, he breathes of Jove !

It may probably have been a description of one of those coins, which the Sidonians struck off in honour of Europa, representing a woman carried across the sea by a bull. Thus Natalis Comes, lib. viii. cap. 23. 'Sidonii numismata cum foeminâ tauri dorso insidente ac mare transfretante cuderunt in ejus honorem.' In the little treatise upon the goddess of Syria, attributed very falsely to Lucian, there is mention of this coin, and of a temple dedicated by the Sidonians to Astarte, whom some, it appears, confounded with Europa.

The poet Moschus has left a very beautiful idyl on the story of Europa.

ODE LV

WHILE we invoke the wreathed spring,
Resplendent rose! to thee we'll sing:¹
Whose breath perfumes th' Olympian
bowers;

Whose virgin blush, of chasten'd dye,
Enchants so much our mortal eye.
When pleasure's spring-tide season
glows,

The Graces love to wreath the rose;
And Venus, in its fresh-blown leaves,
An emblem of herself perceives.

oft hath the poet's magic tongue 10
The rose's fair luxuriance sung;
And long the Muses, heavenly maids,
Have rear'd it in their tuneful shades.

When, at the early glance of morn,
It sleeps upon the glittering thorn,
'Tis sweet to dare the tangled fence,
To cull the timid flow'ret thence,
And wipe with tender hand away
The tear that on its blushes lay!

'Tis sweet to hold the infant stems, 20
Yet dropping with Aurora's gems,
And fresh inhale the spicy sighs
That from the weeping buds arise.

When revel reigns, when mirth is high,
And Bacchus beams in every eye,
Our rosy fillets scent exhale,
And fill with balm the fainting gale.
There's nought in nature bright or gay,
Where roses do not shed their ray.
When morning paints the orient skies,
Her fingers burn with roseate dyes; 31
Young nymphs betray the rose's hue,
O'er whitest arms it kindles through.
In Cytherea's form it glows,
And mingles with the living snows.

The rose distils a healing balm,
The beating pulse of pain to calm;

¹ Resplendent rose! to thee we'll sing; I have passed over the line ὅν ἔταρει αὖτε μελῆν, which is corrupt in this original reading, and has been very little improved by the annotators. I should suppose it to be an interpolation, if it were not for a line which occurs afterwards: φερε δὲ φύσιν λεγόμεν.

² Compare with this elegant ode the verses of Uz, lib. i. "die Weinlese."—Degen.

This appears to be one of the hymns which

Preserves the cold inurned clay,
And mocks the vestige of decay:
And when at length, in pale decline, 40
Its florid beauties fade and pine,
Sweet as in youth, its balmy breath
Diffuses odour even in death!
Oh! whence could such a plant have sprung?

Listen,—for thus the tale is sung.
When, humid, from the silvery stream,
Effusing beauty's warmest beam,
Venus appear'd, in flushing hues,
Mellow'd by ocean's briny dews;
When, in the starry courts above, 50
The pregnant brain of mighty Jove
Disclos'd the nymph of azure glance,
The nymph who shakes the martial lance;—

Then, then, in strange eventful hour,
The earth produc'd an infant flower,
Which sprung, in blushing glories drest,
And wanton'd o'er its parent breast.
The gods beheld this brilliant birth,
And hail'd the Rose, the boon of earth!
With nectar drops, a ruby tide, 60
The sweetly orient buds they dyed,
And bade them bloom, the flowers divine
Of him who gave the glorious vine;
And bade them on the spangled thorn
Expand their bosoms to the morn.

ODE LVI *

HE, who instructs the youthful crew
To bathe them in the brimmer's dew,
And taste, uncloy'd by rich excesses,
All the bliss that wine possesses;
He, who inspires the youth to bound
Elastic through the dance's round,—
Bacchus, the god again is here,
And leads along the blushing year;
The blushing year with vintage teems,
Ready to shed those cordial streams, 10
Which, sparkling in the cup of mirth,
Illuminate the sons of earth!

were sung at the anniversary festival of the vintage; one of the ἐπιληννοὶ ἕμνοι, as our poet himself terms them in the fifty-ninth ode. We cannot help feeling a sort of reverence for these classic relics of the religion of antiquity. Horace may be supposed to have written the nineteenth ode of his second book, and the twenty-fifth of the third, for some bacchanalian celebration of this kind.

Then, when the ripe and vermil wine,—
 Blest infant of the pregnant vine,
 Which now in mellow clusters swells,—
 Oh ! when it bursts its roseate cells,
 Brightly the joyous stream shall flow,
 To balsam every mortal woe !
 None shall be then cast down or weak,
 For health and joy shall light each cheek ; 20
 No heart will then desponding sigh,
 For wine shall bid despondence fly
 Thus—till another autumn's glow
 Shall bid another vintage flow.

ODE LVII¹

WHOSE was the artist hand that spread
 Upon this disk the ocean's bed ?
 And, in a flight of fancy, high
 As aught on earthly wing can fly,
 Depicted thus, in semblance warm,
 The Queen of Love's voluptuous form
 Floating along the silv'ry sea
 In beauty's naked majesty !
 Oh ! he hath given th' enamour'd sight
 A witching banquet of delight, 10
 Where, gleaming through the waters
 clear,
 Glimpses of undreamt charms appear,
 And all that mystery loves to screen,
 Fancy, like Faith, adores unseen.

Light as the leaf, that on the breeze
 Of summer skims the glassy seas,
 She floats along the ocean's breast,
 Which undulates in sleepy rest ;
 While stealing on, she gently pillows
 Her bosom on the heaving billows. 20
 Her bosom, like the dew-wash'd rose,
 Her neck, like April's sparkling snows,
 Illume the liquid path she traces,
 And burn within the stream's embraces.
 Thus on she moves, in languid pride,
 Encircled by the azure tide,

¹ This ode is a very animated description of a picture of Venus on a discus, which represented the goddess in her first emergence from the waves. About two centuries after our poet wrote, the pencil of the artist Apelles embellished this subject, in his famous painting of the Venus Anadyomené, the model of which, as Pliny informs us, was the beautiful Campaspe, given to him by Alexander ; though, according to Natalis Comes, lib. vii. cap. 16, it was Phryne who sat to Apelles for the face

As some fair lily o'er a bed
 Of violets bends its graceful head.

Beneath their queen's inspiring glance,
 The dolphins o'er the green sea dance,
 Bearing in triumph young Desire, 31
 And infant Love with smiles of fire !
 While, glittering through the silver waves,
 The tenants of the briny caves
 Around the pomp their gambols play,
 And gleam along the watery way.

ODE LVIII²

WHEN Gold, as fleet as zephyr's pinion,
 Escapes like any faithless minion,
 And flies me (as he flies me ever),
 Do I pursue him ? never, never !
 No, let the false deserter go,
 For who could court his direst foe ?
 But when I feel my lighten'd mind
 No more by grovelling gold confin'd,
 Then loose I all such clinging cares,
 And cast them to the vagrant airs. 10
 Then feel I, too, the Muse's spell,
 And wake to life the dulcet shell,
 Which, rous'd once more, to beauty
 sings,
 While love dissolves along the strings !

But scarcely has my heart been taught
 How little Gold deserves a thought,
 When, lo ! the slave returns once more,
 And with him wafts delicious store
 Of racy wine, whose genial art
 In slumber seals the anxious heart. 20
 Again he tries my soul to sever
 From love and song, perhaps for ever !

Away, deceiver ! why pursuing
 Ceaseless thus my heart's undoing ?
 Sweet is the song of amorous fire,
 Sweet the sighs that thrill the lyre ;

and breast of this Venus.

There are a few blemishes in the reading of the ode before us, which have influenced Faber, Heyne, Brunck, &c. to denounce the whole poem as spurious. But, 'non ego paucis offender maculis.' I think it is quite beautiful enough to be authentic.

² I have followed Barnes's arrangement of this ode, which, though deviating somewhat from the Vatican MS., appears to me the more natural order.

Oh! sweeter far than all the gold
 Thy wings can waft, thy mines can hold.
 Well do I know thy arts, thy wiles—
 They wither'd Love's young wreathed
 smiles; 30
 And o'er his lyre such darkness shed,
 I thought its soul of song was fled!
 They dash'd the wine-cup, that, by him,
 Was fill'd with kisses to the brim.¹
 Go—fly to haunts of sordid men,
 But come not near the bard again.
 Thy glitter in the Muse's shade,
 Scares from her bower the tuneful
 maid;
 And not for worlds would I forego
 That moment of poetic glow, 40
 When my full soul, in Fancy's stream,
 Pours o'er the lyre its swelling theme.
 Away, away! to worldlings hence,
 Who feel not this diviner sense;
 Give gold to those who love that pest,—
 But leave the poet poor and blest.

ODE LIX.²

RIPEN'D by the solar beam,
 Now the ruddy clusters teem,
 In osier baskets borne along
 By all the festal vintage throng
 Of rosy youths and virgins fair,
 Ripe as the melting fruits they bear.
 Now, now they press the pregnant
 grapes,
 And now the captive stream escapes,

¹ They dash'd the wine-cup, that, by him,
 Was fill'd with kisses to the brim.] Original:—

Φιλημάτων δε κεδνον,
 Ποθων κυπελλα κερνυς.

Horace has 'Desiderique temperare poculum', not figuratively, however, like Anacreon, but importing the love-philtres of the witches. By 'cups of kisses' our poet may allude to a favourite gallantry among the ancients, of drinking when the lips of their mistresses had touched the brim:—

'Or leave a kiss within the cup,
 And I'll not ask for wine.'

As in Ben Jonson's translation from Philostratus; and Lucian has a conceit upon the same idea, "Ἰνα καὶ πίνῃς ἅμα καὶ φίλῃς," 'that you may at once both drink and kiss.'

² The title Ἐπιληπτός ὕμνος, which Barnes has given to this ode, is by no means appropriate. We have already had one of those hymns (ode 56), but this is a description of the

In fervid tide of nectar gushing, 9
 And for its bondage proudly blushing!
 While, round the vat's impurpled brim,
 The choral song, the vintage hymn
 Of rosy youths and virgins fair,
 Steals on the charm'd and echoing air.
 Mark, how they drink, with all their eyes,
 The orient tide that sparkling flies,
 The infant Bacchus, born in mirth,
 While Love stands by, to hail the birth.

When he, whose verging years decline
 As deep into the vale as mine, 20
 When he inhales the vintage-cup,
 His feet, new-wing'd from earth spring
 up,
 And as he dances, the fresh air
 Plays whispering through his silvery hair.
 Meanwhile young groups whom love invites,
 To joys ev'n rivalling wine's delights,
 Seek, arm in arm, the shadowy grove,
 And there, in words and looks of love,
 Such as fond lovers look and say, 29
 Pass the sweet moonlight hours away.

ODE LX.³

AWAKE to life, my sleeping shell,
 To Phoebus let thy numbers swell;
 And though no glorious prize be thine,
 No Pythian wreath around thee twine,
 Yet every hour is glory's hour
 To him who gathers wisdom's flower.

vintage: and the title εὖς οἶνον, which it bears in the Vatican MS., is more correct than any that have been suggested.

Degen, in the true spirit of literary scepticism, doubts that this ode is genuine, without assigning any reason for such a suspicion:—
 'non amo te, Sabidi, nec possum dicere quare.'
 But this is far from being satisfactory criticism.

³ This hymn to Apollo is supposed not to have been written by Anacreon; and it is undoubtedly rather a sublimer flight than the Teian wing is accustomed to soar. But, in a poet of whose works so small a proportion has reached us, diversity of style is by no means a safe criterion. If we knew Horace but as a satirist, should we easily believe there could dwell such animation in his lyre? Suidas says that our poet wrote hymns, and this perhaps is one of them. We can perceive in what an altered and imperfect state his works are at present, when we find a scholiast upon Horace citing an ode from the third book of Anacreon.

Then wake thee from thy voiceless
slumbers,
And to the soft and Phrygian numbers,
Which, tremblingly, my lips repeat,
Send echoes from thy chord as sweet. 10
'Tis thus the swan, with fading notes,
Down the Cayster's current floats,
While amorous breezes linger round,
And sigh responsive sound for sound.

Muse of the Lyre ! illume my dream,
Thy Phoebus is my fancy's theme ;
And hallow'd is the harp I bear,
And hallow'd is the wreath I wear,
Hallow'd by him, the god of lays,
Who modulates the choral maze. 20
I sing the love which Daphne twin'd
Around the godhead's yielding mind ;
I sing the blushing Daphne's flight
From this ethereal son of Light ;
And how the tender, timid maid
Flew trembling to the kindly shade,
Resign'd a form, alas, too fair,
And grew a verdant laurel there ;
Whose leaves, with sympathetic thrill,
In terror seem'd to tremble still ! 30
The god pursu'd, with wing'd desire ;
And when his hopes were all on fire,
And when to clasp the nymph he
thought,
A lifeless tree was all he caught ;
And, stead of sighs that pleasure heaves,
Heard but the west-wind in the leaves !

But, pause, my soul, no more, no
more—

Enthusiast, whither do I soar ?
This sweetly-mad'ning dream of soul
Hath hurried me beyond the goal. 40

¹ Here ends the last of the odes in the Vatican MS., whose authority helps to confirm the genuine antiquity of them all, though a few have stolen among the number, which we may hesitate in attributing to Anacreon. In the little essay prefixed to this translation, I observed that Barnes has quoted this manuscript incorrectly, relying upon an imperfect copy of it, which Isaac Vossius had taken. I shall just mention two or three instances of this inaccuracy—the first which occur to me. In the ode of the Dove, on the words Πτεροισι συγκαλυψω, he says, 'Vatican MS. συσκιαζων, etiam Frisciano invito : ' but the MS. reads συγκαλυψω, with συσκιαζω interlined. Degen too, on the same line, is somewhat in error. In the twenty-second ode of this series, line

Why should I sing the mighty darts
Which fly to wound celestial hearts,
When ah, the song, with sweeter tone,
Can tell the darts that wound my own ?
Still be Anacreon, still inspire
The descendant of the Teian lyre :
Still let the nectar'd numbers float,
Distilling love in every note !
And when some youth, whose glowing soul

Has felt the Paphian star's control, 50
When he the liquid lays shall hear,
His heart will flutter to his ear,
And drinking there of song divine,
Banquet on intellectual wine ! ¹

ODE LXI

YOUTH's endearing charms are fled ;
Hoary locks deform my head ;
Bloomy graces, dalliance gay,
All the flowers of life decay.
Withering age begins to trace
Sad memorials o'er my face ;
Time has shed its sweetest bloom,
All the future must be gloom.
This it is that sets me sighing ;
Dreary is the thought of dying ! 10
Lone and dismal is the road,
Down to Pluto's dark abode ;
And, when once the journey's o'er,
Ah ! we can return no more !

ODE LXII^a

FILL me, boy, as deep a draught,
As e'er was fill'd, as e'er was quaff'd ;
But let the water amply flow,
To cool the grape's intemperate glow ;

thirteenth, the MS. has ρευη with α interlined, and Barnes imputes to it the reading of ρευθ. In the fifty-seventh, line twelfth, he professes to have preserved the reading of the MS. Αλαλημενη δ' επ' αυτη, while the latter has αλαλημενος δ' επ' αυτα. Almost all the other annotators have transplanted these errors from Barnes.

² This ode consists of two fragments, which are to be found in Athenaeus, book x, and which Barnes, from the similarity of their tendency, has combined into one. I think this a very justifiable liberty, and have adopted it in some other fragments of our poet.

Degen refers us here to verses of Uz, lib. iv, 'der Trinker.'

Let not the fiery god be single,
But with the nymphs in union mingle.
For though the bowl's the grave of sadness,

Ne'er let it be the birth of madness.
No, banish from our board to-night
The revelries of rude delight ; 10
To Scythians leave these wild excesses,
Ours be the joy that soothes and blesses !
And while the temperate bowl we wreathe,

In concert let our voices breathe,
Beguiling every hour along
With harmony of soul and song.

ODE LXIII¹

To Love, the soft and blooming child,
I touch the harp in descant wild ;
To Love, the babe of Cyprian bowers,
The boy, who breathes and blushes
flowers ;
To Love, for heaven and earth adore
him,
And gods and mortals bow before him !

ODE LXIV²

HASTE thee, nymph, whose well-aim'd spear
Wounds the fleeting mountain-deer !
Dian, Jove's immortal child,
Huntress of the savage wild !
Goddess with the sun-bright hair !
Listen to a people's prayer.
Turn, to Lethe's river turn,
There thy vanquish'd people mourn !
Come to Lethe's wavy shore,
Tell them they shall mourn no more. 10
Thine their hearts, their altars thine ;
Must they, Dian—must they pine ?

¹ 'This fragment is preserved in Clemens Alexandrinus, Strom. lib. vi. and in Arsenius, Collect. Græc.—Barnes.

It appears to have been the opening of a hymn in praise of Love.

² This hymn to Diana is extant in Hephaestion. There is an anecdote of our poet, which has led some to doubt whether he ever wrote any odes of this kind. It is related by the Scholiast upon Pindar (Isthmionic. od. ii. v. 1, as cited by Barnes) that Anacreon being asked, why he addressed all his hymns to women, and none to the deities? answered, 'Because

ODE LXV³

LIKE some wanton filly sporting,
Maid of Thrace, thou fly'st my courting.
Wanton filly ! tell me why
Thou trip'st away, with scornful eye,
And seem'st to think my doating heart
Is novice in the bridling art ?
Believe me, girl, it is not so ;
Thou'lt find this skilful hand can throw
The reins around that tender form,
However wild, however warm. 10
Yes—trust me I can tame thy force,
And turn and wind thee in the course.
Though, wasting now thy careless hours,
Thou sport amid the herbs and flowers,
Soon shalt thou feel the rein's control,
And tremble at the wish'd-for goal !

ODE LXVI⁴

To thee, the Queen of nymphs divine,
Fairest of all that fairest shine ;
To thee, who rul'st with darts of fire
This world of mortals, young Desire !
And oh ! thou nuptial Power, to thee
Who bear'st of life the guardian key,
Breathing my soul in fervent praise,
And weaving wild my votive lays,
For thee, O Queen ! I wake the lyre,
For thee, thou blushing young Desire, 10
And oh ! for thee, thou nuptial Power,
Come, and illumine this genial hour.

Look on thy bride, too happy boy,
And while thy lambent glance of joy
Plays over all her blushing charms,
Delay not, snatch her to thine arms,
Before the lovely, trembling prey,
Like a young birdling, wing away !
Turn, Stratocles, too happy youth,
Dear to the Queen of amorous truth, 20

women are my deities.'

³ This ode, which is addressed to some Thracian girl, exists in Heraclides, and has been imitated very frequently by Horace, as all the annotators have remarked. Madame Dacier rejects the allegory, which runs so obviously through the poem, and supposes it to have been addressed to a young mare belonging to Polycrates.

⁴ This ode is introduced in the Romance of Theodorus Prodromus, and is that kind of epithalamium which was sung like a scolium at the nuptial banquet.

And dear to her, whose yielding zone
Will soon resign her all thine own.
Turn to Myrilla, turn thine eye,
Breathe to Myrilla, breathe thy sigh.
To those bewitching beauties turn ;
For thee they blush, for thee they burn.

Not more the rose, the queen of
flowers,
Outblushes all the bloom of bowers,
Than she unrivall'd grace discloses,
The sweetest rose, where all are roses. 30
Oh ! may the sun, benignant, shed
His blindest influence o'er thy bed ;
And foster there an infant tree,
To bloom like her, and tower like thee !

ODE LXVII

RICH in bliss, I proudly scorn
The wealth of Amalthea's horn ;
Nor should I ask to call the throne
Of the Tartessian prince my own ;¹
To totter through his train of years,
The victim of declining fears.
One little hour of joy to me
Is worth a dull eternity !

ODE LXVIII *

Now Neptune's month our sky deforms,
The angry night-cloud teems with storms ;
And savage winds, infuriate driven,
Fly howling in the face of heaven !
Now, now, my friends, the gathering gloom
With roseate rays of wine illumine :
And while our wreaths of parsley spread
Their fadeless foliage round our head,
Let's hymn th' almighty power of wine,
And shed libations on his shrine !

¹ Of the Tartessian prince my own ;] He here alludes to Arganthonius, who lived, according to Lucian, an hundred and fifty years ; and reigned, according to Herodotus, eighty. See Barnes.

² This is composed of two fragments : the seventieth and eighty-first in Barnes. They are both found in Eustathius.

³ Three fragments form this little ode, all of which are preserved in Athenæus. They are

ODE LXIX *

THEY wove the lotus band to deck
And fan with pensile wreath each neck ;
And every guest, to shade his head,
Three little fragrant chaplets spread ;
And one was of th' Egyptian leaf,
The rest were roses, fair and brief :
While from a golden vase profound,
To all on flowery beds around,
A Hebe, of celestial shape,
Pour'd the rich droppings of the grape !

ODE LXX *

A BROKEN cake, with honey sweet,
Is all my spare and simple treat :
And while a generous bowl I crown
To float my little banquet down,
I take the soft, the amorous lyre,
And sing of love's delicious fire :
In mirthful measures warm and free,
I sing, dear maid, and sing for thee !

ODE LXXI *

WITH twenty chords my lyre is hung,
And while I wake them all for thee,
Thou, O maiden, wild and young,
Disport'st in airy levity.

The nursling fawn, that in some shade
Its antler'd mother leaves behind,
Is not more wantonly afraid,
More timid of the rustling wind !

ODE LXXII *

FARE thee well, perfidious maid,
My soul, too long on earth delay'd,
Delay'd, perfidious girl, by thee,
Is on the wing for liberty.
I fly to seek a kindlier sphere,
Since thou hast ceas'd to love me here !

the eighty-second, seventy-fifth, and eighty-third in Barnes.

⁴ Compiled by Barnes from Athenæus, Hephaestion, and Arsenius. See Barnes, 80th.

⁵ This I have formed from the eighty-fourth and eighty-fifth of Barnes's edition. The two fragments are found in Athenæus.

⁶ This fragment is preserved by the scholiast upon Aristophanes, and is the eighty-seventh in Barnes.

ODE LXXIII¹

AWHILE I bloom'd, a happy flower,
Till Love approach'd one fatal hour,
And made my tender branches feel
The wounds of his avenging steel.
Then lost I fell, like some poor willow
That falls across the wintry billow !

ODE LXXIV²

MONARCH Love, resistless boy,
With whom the rosy Queen of Joy,
And nymphs, whose eyes have Heaven's hue,
Disporting tread the mountain-dew ;
Propitious, oh ! receive my sighs,
Which, glowing with entreaty, rise,
That thou wilt whisper to the breast
Of her I love thy soft behest ;
And counsel her to learn from thee
That lesson thou hast taught to me. 10
Ah ! if my heart no flattery tell,
Thou'lt own I've learn'd that lesson well !

ODE LXXV

SPIRIT of Love, whose locks unroll'd,
Stream on the breeze like floating gold ;
Come, within a fragrant cloud
Blushing with light, thy votary shroud ;
And, on those wings that sparkling play,
Waft, oh, waft me hence away !
Love ! my soul is full of thee,
Alive to all thy luxury.
But she, the nymph for whom I glow,
The lovely Lesbian mocks my woe ; 10
Smiles at the chill and hoary hues
That time upon my forehead strews.
Alas ! I fear she keeps her charms
In store for younger, happier arms !

¹ This is to be found in Hephaestion, and is the eighty-ninth of Barnes's edition.

I have omitted, from among these scraps, a very considerable fragment imputed to our poet, Ἐρωτὶ δ' Εὐφροσύνη μελεῖ, &c., which is preserved in the twelfth book of Athenaeus, and is the ninety-first in Barnes. If it was really Anacreon who wrote it, 'nil fuit unquam sic impar sibi.' It is in a style of gross satire, and abounds with expressions that never could be gracefully translated.

² A fragment preserved by Dion Chrysostom, Orat. ii. de Regno. See Barnes, 93.

³ Formed of the 124th and 119th fragments in Barnes, both of which are to be found in Scaliger's Poetics.

ODE LXXVI³

HITHER, gentle Muse of mine,
Come and teach thy votary old
Many a golden hymn divine,
For the nymph with vest of gold.
Pretty nymph, of tender age,
Fair thy silky locks unfold ;
Listen to a hoary sage,
Sweetest maid with vest of gold !

ODE LXXVII⁴

WOULD that I were a tuneful lyre,
Of burnish'd ivory fair,
Which, in the Dionysian choir,
Some blooming boy should bear !
Would that I were a golden vase,
That some bright nymph might hold
My spotless frame, with blushing grace,
Herself as pure as gold !

ODE LXXVIII⁵

WHEN Cupid sees how thickly now,
The snows of Time fall o'er my brow,
Upon his wing of golden light,
He passes with an eaglet's flight,
And fitting onward seems to say,
'Fare thee well, thou'st had thy day !'

CUPID, whose lamp has lent the ray,
That lights our life's meandering way,
That God, within this bosom stealing,
Hath waken'd a strange, mingled feeling
Which pleases, though so sadly teasing,
And teases, though so sweetly pleasing !⁶

De Pauw thinks that those detached lines and couplets, which Scaliger has adduced as examples in his Poetics, are by no means authentic, but of his own fabrication.

⁴ This is generally inserted among the remains of Alcaeus. Some, however, have attributed it to Anacreon. See our poet's twenty-second ode, and the notes.

⁵ See Barnes, 178d. This fragment, to which I have taken the liberty of adding a turn not to be found in the original, is cited by Lucian in his short essay on the Gallic Hercules.

⁶ Barnes, 125th. This is in Scaliger's Poetics. Gail has omitted it in his collection of fragments.

LET me resign this wretched breath,
 Since now remains to me
 No other balm than kindly death,
 To soothe my misery !¹

I KNOW thou lov'st a brimming measure,
 And art a kindly, cordial host ;
 But let me fill and drink at pleasure—
 Thus I enjoy the goblet most.²

I FEAR that love disturbs my rest,
 Yet feel not love's impassion'd care ;
 I think there's madness in my breast,
 Yet cannot find that madness there !³

FROM dread Leucadia's frowning steep,
 I'll plunge into the whitening deep :
 And there lie cold, to death resign'd,
 Since Love intoxicates my mind !⁴

Mix me, child, a cup divine,
 Crystal water, ruby wine :
 Weave the frontlet, richly flushing,
 O'er my wintry temples blushing.
 Mix the brimmer—Love and I
 Shall no more the contest try.
 Here—upon this holy bowl,
 I surrender all my soul !⁵

AMONG the Epigrams of the Anthologia, are found some panegyrics on Anacreon, which I had translated, and originally intended as a sort of Coronis to this work. But I found upon consideration, that they wanted variety ; and that a frequent recurrence, in them, of the same thought, would render a collection of such poems uninteresting. I shall take the liberty, however, of subjoining a few, selected from the number, that I may not appear to have totally neglected those ancient tributes to the fame of Anacreon. The four epigrams which I give are imputed to Antipater Sidonius. They are rendered, perhaps, with too much freedom ; but designing originally a translation of all that are extant on the subject, I endeavoured to enliven their uniformity by sometimes indulging in the liberties of paraphrase.

² Barnes, 72d. This fragment, which is found in Athenaeus, contains an excellent lesson for the votaries of Jupiter Hospitalis.

³ Found in Hephaestion (see Barnes, 95th).
⁴ This is also in Hephaestion, and perhaps is a fragment of some poem, in which Anacreon

AROUND the tomb, oh, bard divine !
 Where soft thy hallow'd brow reposes,
 Long may the deathless ivy twine,
 And summerspread her waste of roses !

And there shall many a fount distil,
 And many a rill refresh the flowers ;
 But wine shall be each purple rill,
 And every fount be milky showers.

Thus, shade of him, whom Nature taught
 To tune his lyre and soul to pleasure,
 Who gave to love his tenderest thought,
 Whogave to love his fondest measure,— had commemorated the fate of Sappho. It is the 123d of Barnes.

⁵ Collected by Barnes, from Demetrius Phalareus and Eustathius, and subjoined in his edition to the epigrams attributed to our poet. And here is the last of those little scattered flowers, which I thought I might venture with any grace to transplant :—happy if it could be said of the garland which they form, To δ' ὡς Ἀνακρεοντος, streaming,

¹ Antipater Sidonius, the author of this epigram, lived, according to Vossius, de Poetis Græcis, in the second year of the 169th Olympiad. He appears, from what Cicero and Quintilian have said of him, to have been a kind of improvisatore. See Institut. Orat. lib. x. cap. 7. There is nothing more known respecting this poet, except some particulars about his illness and death, which are mentioned as curious by Pliny and others;—and there remain of his works but a few epigrams in the Anthologia, among which are found these inscriptions upon Anacreon. These remain have been sometimes imputed to another poet of the same name, of whom Vossius gives us the following account:—'Antipater Thessalonicensis vixit tempore Augusti Caesaris, ut qui saltantem viderit Pyladem, sicut constat ex quodam ejus epigrammate Ἀνθολογίας, lib. iv. tit. εις ορχοστρίδας. At eum ac Bathyllum primos fuisse pantomimos ac sub Augusto claruisse, satis notum ex Dione, &c. &c.'

The reader, who thinks it worth observing, may find a strange oversight in Hoffman's quotation of this article from Vossius, Lexic. Univers. By the omission of a sentence he

Noryethas death obscur'd thy fire of love,
For still it lights thee through the Elysian grove;
Where dreams are thine, that bless th'
elect alone,
And Venus calls thee even in death her
own!

has made Vossius assert that the poet Antipater was one of the first pantomime dancers in Rome.

² Still do we catch thy lyre's luxurious breath;
Thus Simonides, speaking of our poet:—

Σιμωνιδου, Ἀνθολογ.

This is the famous Simonides, whom Plato styled 'divine,' though Le Fevre, in his Poetæ Græci, supposes that the epigrams under his name are all falsely imputed. The most considerable of his remains is a satirical poem upon women, preserved by Stobæus, ῥογος γυναικων.

We may judge from the lines I have just quoted, and the import of the epigram before us, that the works of Anacreon were perfect in the times of Simonides and Antipater. Obsopeus, the commentator here, appears to exult in their destruction, and telling us they were burned by the bishops and patriarchs, he adds, 'nec sane id necquiquam fecerunt,' attributing to this outrage an effect which it could not possibly have produced.

When Harmony pursu'd my ways,
And Bacchus wanton'd to my lays.¹
Oh ! if delight could charm no more,
If all the goblet's bliss were o'er,
When fate had once our doom decreed,
Then dying would be death indeed ;
Nor could I think, unblest by wine,
Divinity itself divine !

JUVENILE POEMS

PREFACE, BY THE EDITOR²

THE Poems which I take the liberty of publishing, were never intended by the author to pass beyond the circle of his friends. He thought, with some justice, that what are called Occasional Poems must be always insipid and uninteresting to the greater part of their readers. The particular situations in which they were written ; the character of the author and of his associates ; all these peculiarities must be known and felt before we can enter into the spirit of such compositions. This consideration would have always, I believe, prevented the author himself from submitting these trifles to the eye of dispassionate criticism : and if their posthumous introduction to the world be injustice to his memory, or intrusion on the public, the error must be imputed to the injudicious partiality of friendship.

MR. LITTLE died in his one and twentieth year ; and most of these Poems were written at so early a period that their errors may lay claim to some indulgence from the critic. Their author, as unambitious as indolent, scarce ever looked beyond the moment of composition ; but, in general, wrote as he pleased, careless whether he pleased as he wrote. It may likewise be remembered, that they were all the productions of an age when the passions very often give a colouring too

¹ And Bacchus wanton'd to my lays, &c.] The original here is corrupted, the line ὡς ὁ Διονυσίου, &c. is unintelligible.

Brunck's emendation improves the sense, but I doubt if it can be commended for elegance. He reads the line thus :—

ὡς ὁ Διωνυσιο λαλασμενος ουποτε κωμων.

See Brunck. Analecta Veter. Poet. Græc. vol. ii.

² A portion of these Poems were published originally as the works of 'the late Thomas Little,' with the Preface here given prefixed to them.

warm to the imagination ; and this may palliate, if it cannot excuse, that air of levity which pervades so many of them. The 'aurea legge, s'ei piace ei lice', he too much pursued, and too much inculcates. Few can regret this more sincerely than myself ; and if my friend had lived, the judgment of riper years would have chastened his mind, and tempered the luxuriance of his fancy.

Mr. LITTLE gave much of his time to the study of the amatory writers. If ever he expected to find in the ancients that delicacy of sentiment, and variety of fancy, which are so necessary to refine and animate the poetry of love, he was much disappointed. I know not any one of them who can be regarded as a model in that style ; Ovid made love like a rake, and Propertius like a schoolmaster. The mythological allusions of the latter are called erudition by his commentators ; but such ostentatious display, upon a subject so simple as love, would be now esteemed vague and puerile, and was even in his own times pedantic. It is astonishing that so many critics should have preferred him to the gentle and touching Tibullus ; but those defects, I believe, which a common reader condemns, have been regarded rather as beauties by those erudite men, the commentators ; who find a field for their ingenuity and research, in his Grecian learning and quaint obscurities.

Tibullus abounds with touches of fine and natural feeling. The idea of his unexpected return to Delia, 'Tunc veniam subito', &c. is imagined with all the delicate ardour of a lover ; and the sentiment of 'nec te posse carere velim', however colloquial the expression may have been, is natural, and from the heart. But the poet of Verona, in my opinion, possessed more genuine feeling than any of them. His life was, I believe, unfortunate ; his associates were wild and abandoned ; and the warmth of his nature took too much advantage of the latitude which the morals of those times so criminally allowed to the passions. All this depraved his imagination, and made it the slave of his senses. But still a native sensibility is often very warmly perceptible ; and when he touches the chord of pathos, he reaches immediately the heart. They who have felt the sweets of return to a home from which they have long been absent will confess the beauty of those simple unaffected lines :—

O quid solutis est beatius curis !
Cum mens onus reponit, ac peregrino
Labore fessi venimus Larem ad nostrum
Desideratoque acquiescimus lecto. Carm. xxix.

His sorrows on the death of his brother are the very tears of poesy ; and when he complains of the ingratitude of mankind, even the inexperienced cannot but sympathise with him. I wish I were a poet ; I should then endeavour to catch, by translation, the spirit of those beauties which I have always so warmly admired.

It seems to have been peculiarly the fate of Catullus, that the better and more valuable part of his poetry has not reached us ; for there is confessedly nothing in his extant works to authorise the epithet 'doctus', so universally bestowed upon him by the ancients. If time had suffered his other writings to escape, we perhaps should have found among them some more purely amatory ; but of those we possess, can there be a sweeter specimen of warm, yet chastened description, than his loves of Acme and Septimius ? and the few little songs of dalliance to Lesbia are distinguished by such an exquisite playfulness, that they have always been assumed as models by the most elegant modern Latinists. Still, it must be confessed, in the midst of all these beauties,

— Medio de fonte leporum
Surgit amari aliquid, quod in ipsis floribus angat

It has often been remarked, that the ancients knew nothing of gallantry; and we are sometimes told there was too much sincerity in their love to allow them to trifle thus with the semblance of passion. But I cannot perceive that they were any thing more constant than the moderns: they felt all the same dissipation of the heart, though they knew not those seductive graces by which gallantry almost teaches it to be amiable. Wotton, the learned advocate for the moderns, deserts them in considering this point of comparison, and praises the ancients for their ignorance of such refinements. But he seems to have collected his notions of gallantry from the insipid jadeurs of the French romances, which have nothing congenial with the graceful levity, the 'grata protervitas', of a Rochester or a Sedley.

As far as I can judge, the early poets of our own language were the models which Mr. LITTLE selected for imitation. To attain their simplicity ('aero rarissima nostro simplicitas') was his fondest ambition. He could not have aimed at a grace more difficult of attainment; and his life was of too short a date to allow him to perfect such a taste; but how far he was likely to have succeeded, the critic may judge from his productions.

I have found among his papers a novel, in rather an imperfect state, which, as soon as I have arranged and collected it, shall be submitted to the public eye.

Where Mr. LITTLE was born, or what is the genealogy of his parents, are points in which very few readers can be interested. His life was one of those humble streams which have scarcely a name in the map of life, and the traveller may pass it by without inquiring its source or direction. His character was well known to all who were acquainted with him; for he had too much vanity to hide its virtues, and not enough of art to conceal its defects. The lighter traits of his mind may be traced perhaps in his writings; but the few for which he was valued live only in the remembrance of his friends.

JUVENILE POEMS

FRAGMENTS OF COLLEGE EXERCISES

Nobilitas sola est atque unica virtus.—JUV.

MARK those proud boasters of a splendid line,

Like gilded ruins, mould'ring while they
shine,

How heavy sits that weight of alien show,
Like martial helm upon an infant's brow;

Those borrow'd splendours, whose contrasting light

Throws back the native shades in deeper
night.

Ask the proud train who glory's shade pursue,

Where are the arts by which that glory grew?

The genuine virtues that with eagle-gaze
Sought young Renown in all her orient blaze!

Where is the heart by chymic truth
refin'd,

Th' exploring soul, whose eye had read mankind?

Where are the links that twin'd, with heav'nly art,

His country's interest round the patriot's heart?

Justum bellum quibus necessarium, et pia arma quibus nulla nisi in armis relinquitur spes.—LIVY.

Is there no call, no consecrating cause,
Approv'd by Heav'n, ordain'd by nature's laws,

Where justice flies the herald of our way,
And truth's pure beams upon the banners play?

Yes, there's a call sweet as an angel's
breath
To slumb'ring babes, or innocence in
death;
And urgent as the tongue of Heav'n within,
When the mind's balance trembles upon sin.
Oh! 'tis our country's voice, whose claim should meet
An echo in the soul's most deep retreat;
Along the heart's responding chords
should run,
Nor let a tone there vibrate—but the one!

VARIETY

ASK what prevailing, pleasing power
Allures the sportive, wandering bee
To roam, untired, from flower to flower,
He'll tell you, 'tis variety.

Look Nature round, her features trace,
Her seasons, all her changes see;
And own, upon Creation's face,
The greatest charm's variety.

For me, ye gracious powers above!
Still let me roam, unfix'd and free;
In all things,—but the nymph I love,
I'll change, and taste variety.

But, Patty, not a world of charms Could e'er estrange my heart from
thee;—

No, let me ever seek those arms,
There still I'll find variety.

TO A BOY, WITH A WATCH

WRITTEN FOR A FRIEND

Is it not sweet, beloved youth,
To rove through Erudition's bowers,
And cull the golden fruits of truth,
And gather Fancy's brilliant flowers?

And is it not more sweet than this,
To feel thy parents' hearts approving,
And pay them back in sums of bliss
The dear, the endless debt of loving?

It must be so to thee, my youth;
With this idea toil is lighter;
This sweetens all the fruits of truth,
And makes the flower of fancy
brighter.

The little gift we send thee, boy,
May sometimes teach thy soul to ponder,

If indolence or siren joy
Should ever tempt that soul to wander.

'Twill tell thee that the winged day
Can ne'er be chain'd by man's endeavour;

That life and time shall fade away,
While heav'n and virtue bloom for ever!

SONG

If I swear by that eye, you'll allow,
Its look is so shifting and new,
That the oath I might take on it now
The very next glance would undo.

Those babies that nestle so sly
Such thousands of arrows have got,
That an oath, on the glance of an eye
Such as yours, may be off in a shot.

Should I swear by the dew on your lip,
Though each moment the treasure renews,

If my constancy wishes to trip,
I may kiss off the oath when I choose.

Or a sigh may disperse from that flow'r
Both the dew and the oath that are
there;

And I'd make a new vow every hour,
To lose them so sweetly in air.

But clear up the heav'n of your brow,
Nor fancy my faith is a feather;
On my heart I will pledge you my vow,
And they both must be broken together!

TO . . .

REMEMBER him thou leav'st behind,
Whose heart is warmly bound to thee,
Close as the tend'rest links can bind
A heart as warm as heart can be.

Oh! I had long in freedom rovd,
 Though many seem'd my soul to share;
 'Twas passion when I thought I lov'd,
 'Twas fancy when I thought them fair.

Ev'n she, my muse's early theme, 9
 Beguil'd me only while she warm'd;
 'Twas young desire that fed the dream,
 And reason broke what passion form'd

But thou—ah! better had it been
 If I had still in freedom rovd,
 If I had ne'er thy beauties seen,
 For then I never should have lov'd.

Then all the pain which lovers feel
 Had never to this heart been known;
 But then, the joys that lovers steal, 19
 Should they have ever been my own?

Oh! trust me, when I swear thee this,
 Dearest! the pain of loving thee,
 The very pain is sweeter bliss
 Than passion's wildest ecstasy.

That little cage I would not part,
 In which my soul is prison'd now,
 For the most light and winged heart
 That wantons on the passing vow.

Still, my belov'd! still keep in mind,
 However far remov'd from me, 30
 That there is one thou leav'st behind,
 Whose heart respires for only thee!

And though ungenial ties have bound
 Thy fate unto another's care,
 That arm, which clasps thy bosom round,
 Cannot confine the heart that's there.

No, no! that heart is only mine
 By ties all other ties above,
 For I have wed it at a shrine
 Where we have had no priest but Love.

SONG

WHEN Time, who steals our years away,
 Shall steal our pleasures too,
 The mem'ry of the past will stay,
 And half our joys renew.
 Then, Julia, when thy beauty's flow'r
 Shall feel the wintry air,
 Remembrance will recall the hour
 When thou alone wert fair.

Then talk no more of future gloom;
 Our joys shall always last;
 For Hope shall brighten days to come,
 And Mem'ry gild the past.

Come, Chloe, fill the genial bowl,
 I drink to Love and thee:
 Thou never canst decay in soul,
 Thou'lt still be young for me.
 And as thy lips the tear-drop chase,
 Which on my cheek they find,
 So hope shall steal away the trace
 That sorrow leaves behind.
 Then fill the bowl—away with gloom!
 Our joys shall always last;
 For Hope shall brighten days to come,
 And Mem'ry gild the past.

But mark, at thought of future years
 When love shall lose its soul,
 My Chloe drops her timid tears,
 They mingle with my bowl.
 How like this bowl of wine, my fair,
 Our loving life shall fleet;
 Though tears may sometimes mingle
 there,
 The draught will still be sweet.
 Then fill the cup—away with gloom!
 Our joys shall always last;
 For Hope will brighten days to come,
 And Mem'ry gild the past.

SONG

HAVE you not seen the timid tear,
 Steal trembling from mine eye?
 Have you not mark'd the flush of fear,
 Or caught the murmur'd sigh?
 And can you think my love is chill,
 Nor fix'd on you alone?
 And can you rend, by doubting still,
 A heart so much your own?

To you my soul's affections move,
 Devoutly, warmly true;
 My life has been a task of love,
 One long, long thought of you.
 If all your tender faith be o'er,
 If still my truth you'll try;
 Alas, I know but one proof more—
 I'll bless your name, and die!

REUBEN AND ROSE

A TALE OF ROMANCE

THE darkness that hung upon Willumberg's walls
 Had long been remember'd with awe and dismay;
 For years not a sunbeam had play'd in its halls,
 And it seem'd as shut out from the regions of day.

Though the valleys were brighten'd by many a beam,
 Yet none could the woods of that castle illume;
 And the lightning, which flash'd on the neighbouring stream,
 Flew back, as if fearing to enter the gloom!

'Oh! when shall this horrible darkness disperse!'
 Said Willumberg's lord to the Seer of the Cave;—
 'It can never dispel,' said the wizard of verse,
 'Till the bright star of chivalry sinks in the wave!'

10

And who was the bright star of chivalry then?
 Who could be but Reuben, the flow'r of the age?
 For Reuben was first in the combat of men,
 Though Youth had scarce written his name on her page.

For Willumberg's daughter his young heart had beat,—
 For Rose, who was bright as the spirit of dawn,
 When with wand dropping diamonds, and silvery feet,
 It walks o'er the flow'rs of the mountain and lawn.

20

Must Rose, then, from Reuben so fatally sever?
 Sad, sad were the words of the Seer of the Cave,
 That darkness should cover that castle for ever,
 Or Reuben be sunk in the merciless wave!

To the wizard she flew, saying, 'Tell me, oh, tell!
 Shall my Reuben no more be restor'd to my eyes?'
 'Yes, yes—when a spirit shall toll the great bell
 Of the mould'ring abbey, your Reuben shall rise!'

Twice, thrice he repeated 'Your Reuben shall rise!'
 And Rose felt a moment's release from her pain;
 And wip'd, while she listen'd, the tears from her eyes,
 And hop'd she might yet see her hero again.

30

That hero could smile at the terrors of death,
 When he felt that he died for the sire of his Rose;
 To the Oder he flew, and there, plunging beneath,
 In the depth of the billows soon found his repose.—

How strangely the order of destiny falls!—
 Not long in the waters the warrior lay,
 When a sunbeam was seen to glance over the walls,
 And the castle of Willumberg bask'd in the ray!

40

All, all but the soul of the maid was in light,
 There sorrow and terror lay gloomy and blank :
 Two days did she wander, and all the long night,
 In quest of her love, on the wide river's bank.

Oft, oft did she pause for the toll of the bell,
 And heard but the breathings of night in the air ;
 Long, long did she gaze on the watery swell,
 And saw but the foam of the white billow there.

And often as midnight its veil would undraw,
 As she look'd at the light of the moon in the stream,
 She thought 'twas his helmet of silver she saw,
 As the curl of the surge glitter'd high in the beam.

50

And now the third night was begemming the sky ;
 Poor Rose, on the cold dewy margent reclin'd,
 There wept till the tear almost froze in her eye,
 When—hark !—'twas the bell that came deep in the wind !

She startled, and saw, through the glimmering shade,
 A form o'er the waters in majesty glide ;
 She knew 'twas her love, though his cheek was decay'd,
 And his helmet of silver was wash'd by the tide.

60

Was this what the Seer of the Cave had foretold ?—
 Dim, dim through the phantom the moon shot a gleam ;
 'Twas Reuben, but, ah ! he was deathly and cold,
 And fled away like the spell of a dream !

Twice, thrice did he rise, and as often she thought
 From the bank to embrace him, but vain her endeavour !
 Then, plunging beneath, at a billow she caught,
 And sunk to repose on its bosom for ever !

DID NOT

'Twas a new feeling—something more
 Than we had dared to own before,
 Which then we hid not ;
 We saw it in each other's eye,
 And wish'd, in every half-breath'd sigh,
 To speak, but did not.

She felt my lips' impassioned touch—
 'Twas the first time I dared so much,
 And yet she chid not ;
 But whisper'd o'er my burning brow,
 'Oh ! do you doubt I love you now ?'
 Sweet soul ! I did not.

Warmly I felt her bosom thrill,
 I press'd it closer, closer still,
 Though gently bid not ;
 Till—oh ! the world hath seldom heard
 Of lovers, who so nearly err'd,
 And yet, who did not.

TO . . .

THAT wrinkle, when first I espied it
 At once put my heart out of pain ;
 Till the eye, that was glowing beside it,
 Disturb'd my ideas again.

Thou art just in the twilight at present,
When woman's declension begins;
When, fading from all that is pleasant,
She bids a good night to her sins.

Yet thou still art so lovely to me,
I would sooner, my exquisite mother!
Repose in the sunset of thee,
Than bask in the noon of another.

TO MRS. . . .

ON SOME CALUMNIES AGAINST HER CHARACTER

Is not thy mind a gentle mind?
Is not that heart a heart refin'd?
Hast thou not every gentle grace,
We love in woman's mind and face?
And, oh! art thou a shrine for Sin
To hold her hateful worship in?

No, no, be happy—dry that tear—
Though some thy heart hath harbour'd
near,

May now repay its love with blame;
Though man, who ought to shield thy fame,

Ungenerous man, be first to shun thee;
Though all the world look cold upon thee,
Yet shall thy pureness keep thee still
Unharm'd by that surrounding chill;
Like the famed drop, in crystal found,¹
Floating, while all was froz'n around,— Unchill'd, unchanging shalt thou be,
Safe in thy own sweet purity.

ANACREONTIC

— in lachrymas verterat omne merum.
TRA. lib. 1. eleg. 5.

PRESS the grape, and let it pour
Around the board its purple show'r;
And, while the drops my goblet steep,
I'll think in woe the clusters weep.

Weep on, weep on, my pouting vine!
Heav'n grant no tears, but tears of wine.
Weep on; and, as thy sorrows flow,
I'll taste the luxury of woe.

¹ This alludes to a curious gem, upon which Claudian has left us some very elaborate epigrams. It was a drop of pure water enclosed within a piece of crystal. See Claudian, Epigram. 'de Crystallo cui aqua inerat.' Addison mentions a curiosity of this kind at

TO . . .

WHEN I lov'd you, I can't but allow
I had many an exquisite minute;
But the scorn that I feel for you now
Hath even more luxury in it.

Thus, whether we're on or we're off,
Some witchery seems to await you;
To love you was pleasant enough,
And, oh! 'tis delicious to hate you!

TO JULIA

IN ALLUSION TO SOME ILLIBERAL
CRITICISMS

WHY, let the stingless critic chide
With all that fume of vacant pride
Which mantles o'er the pedant fool,
Like vapour on a stagnant pool.
Oh! if the song, to feeling true,
Can please th' elect, the sacred few,
Whose souls, by Taste and Nature taught,
Thrill with the genuine pulse of thought—
If some fond feeling maid like thee,
The warm-ey'd child of Sympathy,
Shall say, while o'er my simple theme
She languishes in Passion's dream,
'He was, indeed, a tender soul—
No critic law, no chill control,
Should ever freeze, by timid art,
The flowings of so fond a heart!
Yes, soul of Nature! soul of Love!
That, hov'ring like a snow-wing'd dove,
Breath'd o'er my cradle warblings wild,
And hail'd me Passion's warmest child,—
Grant me the tear from Beauty's eye,
From Feeling's breast the votive sigh;
Oh! let my song, my mem'ry, find
A shrine within the tender mind;
And I will smile when critics chide,
And I will scorn the fume of pride
Which mantles o'er the pedant fool,
Like vapour round some stagnant pool!

Milan; and adds, 'It is such a rarity as this that I saw at Vendôme in France, which they there pretend is a tear that our Saviour shed over Lazarus, and was gathered up by an angel, who put it into a little crystal vial, and made a present of it to Mary Magdalen.' Addison's Remarks on several Parts of Italy.

TO JULIA

Mock me no more with Love's beguiling
dream,

A dream, I find, illusory as sweet :
One smile of friendship, nay, of cold esteem,
Far dearer were than passion's bland deceit !

I've heard you oft eternal truth declare ;
Your heart was only mine, I once believ'd.

Ah ! shall I say that all your vows were
air ?

And must I say, my hopes were all deceiv'd ?

Vow, then, no longer that our souls are
twin'd,

That all our joys are felt with mutual zeal ;

Julia !—'tis pity, pity makes you kind ;
You know I love, and you would seem to feel.

But shall I still go seek within those arms
A joy in which affection takes no part ?

No, no, farewell ! you give me but your
charms,

When I had fondly thought you gave your heart.

THE SHRINE

TO . . .

My fates had destin'd me to rove
A long, long pilgrimage of love ;
And many an altar on my way
Has lur'd my pious steps to stay ;
For, if the saint was young and fair,
I turn'd and sung my vespers there.
This, from a youthful pilgrim's fire,
Is what your pretty saints require :
To pass, nor tell a single bead,
With them would be profane indeed !
But, trust me, all this young devotion
Was but to keep my zeal in motion ;
And, ev'ry humbler altar past,
I now have reach'd THE SHRINE at last !

TO A LADY,

WITH SOME MANUSCRIPT POEMS,
ON LEAVING THE COUNTRY

WHEN, casting many a look behind,
I leave the friends I cherish here—
Perchance some other friends to find,
But surely finding none so dear—

Haply the little simple page,
Which votive thus I've trac'd for thee,
May now and then a look engage,
And steal one moment's thought for
me.

But, oh ! in pity let not those Whose hearts are not of gentle mould,
Let not the eye that seldom flows
With feeling's tear, my song behold.

For, trust me, they who never melt
With pity, never melt with love ;
And such will frown at all I've felt,
And all my loving lays reprove.

But if, perhaps, some gentler mind,
Which rather loves to praise than blame,

Should in my page an interest find,
And linger kindly on my name ;

Tell him—or, oh ! if, gentler still,
By female lips my name be blest :
For, where do all affections thrill
So sweetly as in woman's breast ?—

Tell her, that he whose loving themes
Her eye indulgent wanders o'er,
Could sometimes wake from idle dreams,
And bolder flights of fancy soar ;

That Glory oft would claim the lay,
And Friendship oft his numbers move ;
But whisper then, that, 'sooth to say,
His sweetest song was giv'n to Love !'

TO JULIA

THOUGH Fate, my girl, may bid us part,
Our souls it cannot, shall not sever ;
The heart will seek its kindred heart,
And cling to it as close as ever.

But must we, must we part indeed ?
Is all our dream of rapture over ?
And does not Julia's bosom bleed
To leave so dear, so fond a lover ?

Does she too mourn ?—Perhaps she may ;
Perhaps she mourns our bliss so fleet-
ing :

But why is Julia's eye so gay,
If Julia's heart like mine is beating ?

I oft have lov'd that sunny glow
Of gladness in her blue eye gleaming—
But can the bosom bleed with woe,
While joy is in the glances beaming ?

No, no !—Yet, love, I will not chide ;
Although your heart were fond of roving,

Nor that, nor all the world beside Could keep your faithful boy from loving.

You'll soon be distant from his eye,
And, with you, all that's worth possessing.

Oh ! then it will be sweet to die,
When life has lost its only blessing !

TO . . .

SWEET lady, look not thus again :
Those bright deluding smiles recall
A maid remember'd now with pain,
Who was my love, my life, my all !

Oh ! while this heart bewilder'd took
Sweet poison from her thrilling eye,
Thus would she smile, and lisp, and look,
And I would hear, and gaze, and sigh !

Yes, I did love her—wildly love—
She was her sex's best deceiver !
And oft she swore she'd never rove—
And I was destin'd to believe her !

Then, lady, do not wear the smile
Of one whose smile could thus betray ;
Alas ! I think the lovely wile
Again could steal my heart away.

For, when those spells that charm'd my mind,
On lips so pure as thine I see,
I fear the heart which she resign'd
Will err again, and fly to thee !

NATURE'S LABELS

A FRAGMENT

In vain we fondly strive to trace
The soul's reflection in the face ;
In vain we dwell on lines and crosses,
Crooked mouth, or short proboscis ;
Boobies have look'd as wise and bright
As Plato or the Stagirite :
And many a sage and learned skull
Has peep'd through windows dark and dull.

Since then, though art do all it can,
We ne'er can reach the inward man,
Nor (howsoe'er 'learn'd Thebans' doubt)
The inward woman, from without,
Methinks 'twere well if Nature could
(And Nature could, if Nature would)
Some pithy, short descriptions write,
On tablets large, in black and white,
Which she might hang about our throattles,
Like labels upon physic-bottles ;
And where all men might read—but stay—

As dialectic sages say,
The argument most apt and ample
For common use is the example.
For instance, then, if Nature's care
Had not portray'd, in lines so fair,
The inward soul of Lucy L-and-n,
This is the label she'd have pinn'd on.

LABEL FIRST

Within this form there lies enshrin'd
The purest, brightest gem of mind.
Though Feeling's hand may sometimes throw

Upon its charms the shade of woe,
The lustre of the gem, when veil'd,
Shall be but mellow'd, not conceal'd.

Now, sirs, imagine, if you're able,
That Nature wrote a second label,
They're her own words,—at least suppose
so—
And boldly pin it on Pomposo.

LABEL SECOND

When I compos'd the fustian brain
Of this redoubt'd Captain Vain,
I had at hand but few ingredients,
And so was forc'd to use expedients.

I put therein some small discerning,
A grain of sense, a grain of learning;
And when I saw the void behind,
I fill'd it up with—froth and wind!

TO JULIA

ON HER BIRTHDAY

WHEN Time was entwining the garland
of years,
Which to crown my beloved was given,
Though some of the leaves might be
sullied with tears,
Yet the flow'rs were all gather'd in
heaven.

And long may this garland be sweet to the eye,
May its verdure for ever be new;
Young Love shall enrich it with many
a sigh,
And Sympathy nurse it with dew.

A REFLECTION AT SEA

SEE how, beneath the moonbeam's smile,
Yon little billow heaves its breast,
And foams and sparkles for awhile,—
Then murmuring subsides to rest.

Thus man, the sport of bliss and care,
Rises on time's eventful sea;
And, having swell'd a moment there,
Thus melts into eternity!

CLORIS AND FANNY

CLORIS! if I were Persia's king,
I'd make my graceful queen of thee;
While FANNY, wild and artless thing,
Should but thy humble handmaid be.

There is but one objection in it—
That, verily, I'm much afraid
I should, in some unlucky minute,
Forsake the mistress for the maid.

THE SHIELD

SAY, did you not hear a voice of death!
And did you not mark the paly form
Which rode on the silvery mist of the heath,
And sung a ghostly dirge in the storm?

Was it the wailing bird of the gloom,
That shrieks on the house of woe all
night?
Or a shiv'ring fiend that flew to a tomb,
To howl and to feed till the glance
of light?

'Twas not the death-bird's cry from the wood,
For shiv'ring fiend that hung on the blast;
'Twas the shade of Helderic—man of blood—
It screams for the guilt of days that are past.

See, how the red, red lightning strays,
And scares the gliding ghosts of the heath!
Now on the leafless yew it plays,
Where hangs the shield of this son of
death.

That shield is blushing with murd'rous
stains;
Long has it hung from the cold yew's
spray;
It is blown by storms and wash'd by rains,
But neither can take the blood away!

Off by that yew, on the blasted field,
Demons dance to the red moon's light;
While the damp boughs creak, and the swinging shield
Sings to the raving spirit of night!

TO JULIA

WEEPING

OH! if your tears are giv'n to care,
If real woe disturbs your peace,
Come to my bosom, weeping fair!
And I will bid your weeping cease.

But if with Fancy's vision'd fears,
With dreams of woe your bosom
thrill;
You look so lovely in your tears,
That I must bid you drop them still.

DREAMS

TO . . .

IN slumber, I prithee how is it
That souls are oft taking the air,
And paying each other a visit,
While bodies are heaven knows where ?

Last night, 'tis in vain to deny it,
Your Soul took a fancy to roam,
For I heard her, on tiptoe so quiet,
Come ask, whether mine was at home.

And mine let her in with delight,
And they talk'd and they laugh'd the time through ;
For, when souls come together at night,
There is no saying what they mayn't
do !

And your little Soul, heaven bless her !
Had much to complain and to say,
Of how sadly you wrong and oppress her
By keeping her prison'd all day.

' If I happen,' said she, ' but to steal
For a peep now and then to her eye,
Or, to quiet the fever I feel,
Just venture abroad on a sigh ; 20

' In an instant she frightens me in
With some phantom of prudence or terror,
For fear I should stray into sin,
Or, what is still worse, into error !

' So, instead of displaying my graces,
By daylight, in language and mien,
I am shut up in corners and places
Where truly I blush to be seen !'

Upon hearing this piteous confession,
My Soul, looking tenderly at her, 30
Declar'd, as for grace and discretion,
He did not know much of the matter ;

' But, to-morrow, sweet Spirit !' he said,
' Be at home after midnight, and then
I will come when your lady's in bed,
And we'll talk o'er the subject again.'

So she whisper'd a word in his ear,
I suppose to her door to direct him,
And, just after midnight, my dear,
Your polite little Soul may expect him.

40

WRITTEN DURING ILLNESS

THE wisest soul, by anguish torn,
Will soon unlearn the lore it knew ;
And when the shrining casket's worn,
The gem within will tarnish too.

But love's an essence of the soul,
Which sinks not with this chain of clay ;
Which throbs beyond the chill control
Of with'ring pain or pale decay.

And surely, when the touch of Death
Dissolves the spirit's earthly ties,
Love still attends th' immortal breath,
And makes it purer for the skies !

Oh Rosa, when, to seek its sphere,
My soul shall leave this orb of men,
That love which form'd its treasure here,
Shall be its best of treasures then !

And as, in fabled dreams of old,
Some air-born genius, child of time,
Presided o'er each star that roll'd,
And track'd it through its path sublime ;

So thou, fair planet, not unled,
Shalt through thy mortal orbit stray ;
Thy lover's shade, to thee still wed,
Shall linger round thy earthly way.

Let other spirits range the sky,
And play around each starry gem ;
I'll bask beneath that lucid eye,
Nor envy worlds of suns to them.

And when that heart shall cease to beat,
And when that breath at length is free
Then, Rosa, soul to soul we'll meet,
And mingle to eternity !

SONG

THE wreath you wove, the wreath you wove
Is fair—but oh, how fair,
If Pity's hand had stol'n from Love
One leaf to mingle there !

If every rose with gold were tied,
Did gems for dewdrops fall,
One faded leaf where Love had sigh'd
Were sweetly worth them all.

The wreath you wove, the wreath you
wove
Our emblem well may be ;
Its bloom is yours, but hopeless Love
Must keep its tears for me.

THE SALE OF LOVES

I DREAMT that, in the Paphian groves,
My nets by moonlight laying,
I caught a flight of wanton Loves,
Among the rose-beds playing.
Some just had left their silv'ry shell,
While some were full in feather ;
So pretty a lot of Loves to sell,
Were never yet strung together.
Come buy my Loves,
Come buy my Loves, 10
Ye dames and rose-lipp'd misses !—
They're new and bright,
The cost is light,
For the coin of this isle is kisses.

First Cloris came, with looks sedate,
Their coin on her lips was ready ;
'I buy,' quoth she, 'my Love by weight,
Full grown, if you please, and steady.'
'Let mine be light,' said Fanny, 'pray—
Such lasting toys undo one ; 20
A light little Love that will last to-day,—
To-morrow I'll sport a new one.'
Come buy my Loves,
Come buy my Loves,
Ye dames and rose-lipp'd misses !—
There's some will keep,
Some light and cheap,
At from ten to twenty kisses.

The learned Prue took a pert young thing,
To divert her virgin Muse with, 30
And pluck sometimes a quill from his wing,
To indite her billet-doux with.
Poor Cloe would give for a well-fledg'd pair
Her only eye, if you'd ask it ;
And Tabitha begg'd, old toothless fair,
For the youngest Love in the basket.
Come buy my Loves, &c. &c.

But one was left, when Susan came,
One worth them all together ;
At sight of her dear looks of shame, 40
He smil'd, and prun'd his feather.

She wish'd the boy—'twas more than whim—
Her looks, her sighs betray'd it ;
But kisses were not enough for him,
I ask'd a heart, and she paid it !
Good-by, my Loves,
Good-by, my Loves,
'Twould make you smile to've seen us
First trade for this
Sweet child of bliss, 50
And then nurse the boy between us.

TO . . .

THE world had just begun to steal
Each hope that led me lightly on ;
I felt not, as I us'd to feel,
And life grew dark and love was gone.

No eye to mingle sorrow's tear,
No lip to mingle pleasure's breath,
No circling arms to draw me near—
'Twas gloomy, and I wish'd for death.

But when I saw that gentle eye,
Oh ! something seem'd to tell me then,
That I was yet too young to die,
And hope and bliss might bloom again.

With every gentle smile that crost
Your kindling cheek, you lighted home
Some feeling, which my heart had lost,
And peace, which far had learn'd to roam.

'Twas then indeed so sweet to live,
Hope look'd so new and Love so kind,
That, though I mourn, I yet forgive
The ruin they have left behind.

I could have lov'd you—oh, so well !—
The dream, that wishing boyhood
knows,
Is but a bright, beguiling spell,
That only lives while passion glows :

But, when this early flush declines,
When the heart's sunny morning fleets,
You know not then how close it twines
Round the first kindred soul it meets.

Yes, yes, I could have lov'd, as one
Who, while his youth's enchantments
fall,
Finds something dear to rest upon,
Which pays him for the loss of all.

TO . . .

NEVER mind how the pedagogue prosed,
You want not antiquity's stamp;
A lip, that such fragrance discloses,
Oh! never should smell of the lamp.

Old Cloe, whose withering kiss
Hath long set the Loves at defiance,
Now, done with the science of bliss,
May take to the blisses of science.

But for you to be buried in books—
Ah, Fanny, they're pitiful sages,
Who could not in one of your looks
Read more than in millions of pages.

Astronomy finds in those eyes
Better light than she studies above;
And Music would borrow your sighs
As the melody fittest for Love.

Your Arithmetic only can trip
If to count your own charms you endeavour;
And Eloquence glows on your lip
When you swear, that you'll love me
for ever.

Thus you see, what a brilliant alliance
Of arts is assembled in you;—
A course of more exquisite science
Man never need wish to pursue.

And, oh!—if a Fellow like me
May confer a diploma of hearts,
With my lip thus I seal your degree,
My divine little Mistress of Arts!

ON THE DEATH OF A LADY

SWEET spirit! if thy airy sleep
Nor sees my tears nor hears my sighs,
Then will I weep, in anguish weep,
Till the last heart's drop fills mine eyes.

But if thy sainted soul can feel,
And mingles in our misery;
Then, then my breaking heart I'll seal—
Thou shalt not hear one sigh from me.

The beam of morn was on the stream,
But sullen clouds the day deform:
Like thee was that young, orient beam,
Like death, alas, that sullen storm!

Thou wert not form'd for living here,
So link'd thy soul was with the sky;
Yet, ah, we held thee all so dear,
We thought thou wert not form'd to die.

INCONSTANCY

AND do I then wonder that Julia
deceives me,
When surely there's nothing in nature
more common?
She vows to be true, and while vowing
she leaves me—
And could I expect any more from a woman?

Oh, woman! your heart is a pitiful treasure;
And Mahomet's doctrine was not too severe,
When he held that you were but materials
of pleasure,
And reason and thinking were out of your sphere.

By your heart, when the fond sighing lover can win it,
He thinks that an age of anxiety's
paid;
But, oh, while he's blest, let him die at the minute—
If he live but a day, he'll be surely betray'd.

THE NATAL GENIUS

A DREAM

TO . . . , THE MORNING OF HER BIRTHDAY

IN witching slumbers of the night,
I dreamt I was the airy sprite
That on thy natal moment smil'd;
And thought I wafted on my wing
Those flow'rs which in Elysium spring,
To crown my lovely mortal child.

With olive-branch I bound thy head,
Heart's ease along thy path I shed,
Which was to bloom through all thy
years;
Nor yet did I forget to bind
Love's roses, with his myrtle twin'd,
And dew'd by sympathetic tears.

Such was the wild but precious boon
Which Fancy, at her magic noon,
Bade me to Nona's image pay ;
And were it thus my fate to be
Thy little guardian deity,
How blest around thy steps I'd play !

Thy life should glide in peace along,
Calm as some lonely shepherd's song
That's heard at distance in the grove ;
No cloud should ever dim thy sky,
No thorns along thy pathway lie,
But all be beauty, peace, and love.

Indulgent Time should never bring
To thee one blight upon his wing,
So gently o'er thy brow he'd fly ;
And death itself should but be felt
Like that of daybeams, when they melt,
Bright to the last, in evening's sky !

ELEGIAC STANZAS

SUPPOSED TO BE WRITTEN BY JULIA,
ON THE DEATH OF HER BROTHER

THOUGH sorrow long has worn my heart ;
Though every day I've counted o'er
Hath brought a new and quick'ningsmart
To wounds that rankled fresh before ;

Though in my earliest life bereft
Of tender links by nature tied ;
Though hope deceiv'd, and pleasure left ;
Though friends betray'd and foes
belied ;

I still had hopes—for hope will stay
After the sunset of delight ; 10
So like the star which ushers day,
We scarce can think it heralds night !—

I hop'd that, after all its strife,
My weary heart at length should rest,
And, fainting from the waves of life,
Find harbour in a brother's breast.

That brother's breast was warm with truth,
Was bright with honour's purest ray ;
He was the dearest, gentlest youth—
Ah, why then was he torn away ? 20

He should have stay'd, have linger'd here
To soothe his Julia's every woe ;
He should have chas'd each bitter tear,
And not have caus'd those tears to flow.

We saw within his soul expand
The fruits of genius, nurs'd by taste ;
While Science, with a fost'ring hand,
Upon his brow her chaplet plac'd.

We saw, by bright degrees, his mind
Grow rich in all that makes men
dear ;— 30
Enlighten'd, social, and refin'd,
In friendship firm, in love sincere.

Such was the youth we lov'd so well,
And such the hopes that fate denied ;—
We lov'd, but ah ! could scarcely tell
How deep, how dearly, till he died !

Close as the fondest links could strain,
Twin'd with my very heart he grew ;
And by that fate which breaks the chain,
The heart is almost broken too. 40

TO THE LARGE AND BEAUTIFUL MISS . . . ,

IN ALLUSION TO SOME PARTNERSHIP
IN A LOTTERY SHARE

IMPROMPTU

— Ego pars — VIRG.

IN wedlock a species of lottery lies,
Where in blanks and in prizes we deal ;
But how comes it that you, such a capital prize,
Should so long have remain'd in the wheel ?

If ever, by Fortune's indulgent decree,
To me such a ticket should roll,
A sixteenth, Heav'n knows ! were sufficient for me ;
For what could I do with the whole ?

A DREAM

I THOUGHT this heart enkindled lay
On Cupid's burning shrine :
I thought he stole thy heart away,
And plac'd it near to mine.

I saw thy heart begin to melt,
Like ice before the sun ;
Till both a glow congenial felt,
And mingled into one !

TO . .

WITH all my soul, then, let us part,
 Since both are anxious to be free ;
 And I will send you home your heart,
 If you will send back mine to me.

We've had some happy hours together,
 But joy must often change its wing ;
 And spring would be but gloomy weather,
 If we had nothing else but spring.

'Tis not that I expect to find
 A more devoted, fond, and true one,
 With rosier cheek or sweeter mind—
 Enough for me that she's a new one.

Thus let us leave the bower of love,
 Where we have loiter'd long in bliss ;
 And you may down that pathway rove,
 While I shall take my way through this.

ANACREONTIC

'SHE never look'd so kind before—
 Yet why the wanton's smile recall ?
 I've seen this witchery o'er and o'er,
 'Tis hollow, vain, and heartless all !'

Thus I said and, sighing, drain'd
 The cup which she so late had tasted ;
 Upon whose rim still fresh remain'd
 The breath, so oft in falsehood wasted.

I took the harp, and would have sung
 As if 'twere not of her I sang ;
 But still the notes on Lamia hung—
 On whom but Lamia could they hang ?

Those eyes of hers, that floating shine,
 Like diamonds in some Eastern river ;
 That kiss, for which, if worlds were mine,
 A world for every kiss I'd give her.

That frame so delicate, yet warm'd
 With flushes of love's genial hue ;—
 A mould transparent, as if form'd
 To let the spirit's light shine through.

Of these I sung, and notes and words
 Were sweet, as if the very air
 From Lamia's lip hung o'er the chords,
 And Lamia's voice still warbled there !

¹ The laurel, for the common uses of the temple, for adorning the altars and sweeping the pavement, was supplied by a tree near the fountain of Castalia ; but upon all important occasions, they sent to the Tempé for their laurel. We find, in Pausanias, that this valley

But when, alas, I turn'd the theme,
 And when of vows and oaths I spoke,
 Of truth and hope's seducing dream—
 The chord beneath my finger broke.

False harp ! false woman !—such, oh, such
 Are lutes too frail and hearts too willing ;
 Any hand, whate'er its touch,
 Can set their chords or pulses thrilling.

And when that thrill is most awake,
 And when you think Heav'n's joys await you,
 The nymph will change, the chord will break—
 Oh Love, oh Music, how I hate you !

TO JULIA

I saw the peasant's hand unkind
 From yonder oak the ivy sever ;
 They seem'd in very being twin'd ;
 Yet now the oak is fresh as ever !

Not so the widow'd ivy shines :
 Torn from its dear and only stay,
 In drooping widowhood it pines,
 And scatters all its bloom away.

Thus, Julia, did our hearts entwine,
 Till Fate disturb'd their tender ties :
 Thus gay indifference blooms in thine,
 While mine, deserted, droops and dies !

HYMN OF A VIRGIN OF DELPHI,

AT THE TOMB OF HER MOTHER

Oh, lost, for ever lost—no more
 Shall Vesper light our dewy way
 Along the rocks of Crissa's shore,
 To hymn the fading fires of day ;
 No more to Tempé's distant vale
 In holy musings shall we roam,
 Through summer's glow and winter's gale,
 To bear the mystic chaplets home.¹

'Twas then my soul's expanding zeal,
 By nature warm'd and led by thee, io
 In every breeze was taught to feel
 The breathings of a Deity.

supplied the branches, of which the temple was originally constructed ; and Plutarch says, in his Dialogue on Music, 'The youth who brings the Tempic laurel to Delphi is always attended by a player on the flute.' ἄλλα μὴν καὶ τῷ κατακομίζοντι παιδί τὴν Τεμπικὴν δαφνὴν εἰς Δελφούς παρομαρτεῖ αὐλήτης.

Guide of my heart ! still hovering round,
 Thy looks, thy words are still my own—
 I see thee raising from the ground
 Some laurel, by the winds o'erthrown,
 And hear thee say, ' This humble bough
 Was planted for a doom divine ;
 And, though it droop in languor now,
 Shall flourish on the Delphic shrine !
 Thus, in the vale of earthly sense, 21
 Though sunk awhile the spirit lies,
 A viewless hand shall cull it thence,
 To bloom immortal in the skies !'

All that the young should feel and know,
 By thee was taught so sweetly well,
 Thy words fell soft as vernal snow,
 And all was brightness where they fell !
 Fond soother of my infant tear,
 Fond sharer of my infant joy, 30
 Is not thy shade still ling'ring here ?
 Am I not still thy soul's employ ?
 Oh yes—and, as in former days,
 When, meeting on the sacred mount,
 Our nymphs awak'd their choral lays,
 And danc'd around Cassotis' fount ;
 As then, 'twas all thy wish and care,
 That mine should be the simplest mien,
 My lyre and voice the sweetest there,
 My foot the lightest o'er the green : 40
 So still, each look and step to mould,
 Thy guardian care is round me spread,
 Arranging every snowy fold,
 And guiding every mazy tread.
 And, when I lead the hymning choir,
 Thy spirit still, unseen and free,
 Hovers between my lip and lyre,
 And weds them into harmony.
 Flow, Plistus, flow, thy murmuring wave
 Shall never drop its silv'ry tear 50
 Upon so pure, so blest a grave,
 To memory so entirely dear !

SYMPATHY

TO JULIA

— sine me sit nulla Venus. Sulpicia.

OUR hearts, my love, were form'd to be
 The genuine twins of Sympathy,
 They live with one sensation :
 In joy or grief, but most in love,
 Like chords in unison they move,
 And thrill with like vibration.

How oft I've heard thee fondly say,
 Thy vital pulse shall cease to play
 When mine no more is moving ;
 Since, now, to feel a joy alone
 Were worse to thee than feeling none
 So twinn'd are we in loving !

THE TEAR

On beds of snow the moonbeam slept,
 And chilly was the midnight gloom,
 When by the damp grave Ellen wept—
 Fond maid ! it was her Lindor's tomb !

A warm tear gush'd, the wintry air
 Congeal'd it as it flow'd away :
 All night it lay an ice-drop there,
 At morn it glitter'd in the ray.

An angel, wand'ring from her sphere,
 Who saw this bright, this frozen gem,
 To dew-ey'd Pity brought the tear,
 And hung it on her diadem !

THE SNAKE

My love and I, the other day,
 Within a myrtle arbour lay,
 When near us, from a rosy bed,
 A little Snake put forth its head.

'See,' said the maid with thoughtful eyes—
 'Yonder the fatal emblem lies !
 Who could expect such hidden harm
 Beneath the rose's smiling charm ?'
 Never did grave remark occur
 Less à-propos than this from her.

I rose to kill the snake, but she,
 Half-smiling, pray'd it might not be.
 'No,' said the maiden—and, alas,
 Her eyes spoke volumes, while she said it—
 'Long as the snake is in the grass,
 One may, perhaps, have cause to dread it :
 But, when its wicked eyes appear,
 And when we know for what they wink so,
 One must be very simple, dear,
 To let it wound one—don't you think so ?'

TO ROSA

Is the song of Rosa mute ?
Once such lays inspir'd her lute !
Never doth a sweeter song
Steal the breezy lyre along,
When the wind, in odours dying,
Wooes it with enamour'd sighing.

Is my Rosa's lute unstrung ?
Once a tale of peace it sung
To her lover's throbbing breast—
Then was he divinely blest !
Ah ! but Rosa loves no more,
Therefore Rosa's song is o'er ;
And her lute neglected lies ;
And her boy forgotten sighs.
Silent lute—forgotten lover—
Rosa's love and song are over !

ELEGIAC STANZAS

Sic juvat perire.

WHEN wearied wretches sink to sleep,
How heavenly soft their slumbers lie !
How sweet is death to those who weep,
To those who weep and long to die !

Saw you the soft and grassy bed,
Where flow'rets deck the green earth's breast ?

'Tis there I wish to lay my head,
'Tis there I wish to sleep at rest.

Oh, let not tears embalm my tomb,—
None but the dews at twilight given !
Oh, let not sighs disturb the gloom,— None but the whisp'ring winds of
heaven !

LOVE AND MARRIAGE

*Eque brevi verbo ferre perenne malum.
SECUNDUS, eleg. vii.*

STILL the question I must parry,
Still a wayward truant prove :
Where I love, I must not marry ;
Where I marry, cannot love.

Were she fairest of creation,
With the least presuming mind ;
Learned without affectation ;
Not deceitful, yet refin'd ;

Wise enough, but never rigid ;
Gay, but not too lightly free ;
Chaste as snow, and yet not frigid ;
Fond, yet satisfied with me :

Were she all this ten times over,
All that heav'n to earth allows,
I should be too much her lover
Ever to become her spouse.

Love will never bear enslaving ;
Summer garments suit him best ;
Bliss itself is not worth having,
If we're by compulsion blest.

ANACREONTIC

I FILL'D to thee, to thee I drank,
I nothing did but drink and fill ;
The bowl by turns was bright and blank,
'Twas drinking, filling, drinking still.

At length I bid an artist paint
Thy image in this ample cup,
That I might see the dimpled saint,
To whom I quaff'd my nectar up.

Behold, how bright that purple lip
Now blushes through the wave at me ;
Every roseate drop I sip
Is just like kissing wine from thee.

And still I drink the more for this ;
For, ever when the draught I drain,
Thy lip invites another kiss,
And—in the nectar flows again.

So, here's to thee, my gentle dear,
And may that eyelid never shine
Beneath a darker, bitterer tear
Than bathes it in this bowl of mine !

THE SURPRISE

CHLORIS, I swear, by all I ever swore,
That from this hour I shall not love thee
more.—

'What ! love no more ? Oh ! why this alter'd vow ?'
Because I cannot love thee more—than now !

TO MISS . . . ,

ON HER ASKING THE AUTHOR WHY SHE HAD SLEEPLESS NIGHTS

I'LL ask the sylph who round thee flies,
And in thy breath his pinion dips,
Who suns him in thy radiant eyes,
And faints upon thy sighing lips :

I'll ask him where's the veil of sleep
That us'd to shade thy looks of light ;
And why those eyes their vigil keep,
When other suns are sunk in night ?

And I will say—her angel breast
Has never throbb'd with guilty sting ;
Her bosom is the sweetest nest
Where Slumber could repose his wing !

And I will say—her cheeks that flush,
Like vernal roses in the sun,
Have ne'er by shame been taught to blush,
Except for what her eyes have done !

Then tell me, why, thou child of air !
Does slumber from her eyelids rove ?
What is her heart's impassion'd care ?—
Perhaps, oh sylph ! perhaps, 'tis love.

THE WONDER

COME, tell me where the maid is found,
Whose heart can love without deceit,
And I will range the world around,
To sigh one moment at her feet.

Oh ! tell me where's her sainted home,
What air receives her blessed sigh,
A pilgrimage of years I'll roam
To catch one sparkle of her eye !

And if her cheek be smooth and bright,
While truth within her bosom lies,
I'll gaze upon her morn and night,
Till my heart leave me through my
eyes.

Show me on earth a thing so rare,
I'll own all miracles are true ;
To make one maid sincere and fair,
Oh, 'tis the utmost Heav'n can do !

LYING

Che con le lor bugie pajon divini.
Mauro d'Arcano.

I do confess, in many a sigh,
My lips have breath'd you many a lie ;
And who, with such delights in view,
Would lose them, for a lie or two ?

Nay,—look not thus, with brow re-proving ;
Lies are, my dear, the soul of loving.
If half we tell the girls were true,
If half we swear to think and do,
Were aught but lying's bright illusion,
This world would be in strange confusion.
If ladies' eyes were, every one,
As lovers swear, a radiant sun,
Astronomy must leave the skies,
To learn her lore in ladies' eyes.
Oh, no—believe me, lovely girl,
When nature turns your teeth to pearl,
Your neck to snow, your eyes to fire,
Your amber locks to golden wire,
Then, only then can Heaven decree,
That you should live for only me,
Or I for you, as night and morn,
We've swearing kist, and kissing sworn.

And now, my gentle hints to clear,
For once I'll tell you truth, my dear.
Whenever you may chance to meet
Some loving youth, whose love is sweet,
Long as you're false and he believes you,
Long as you trust and he deceives you,
So long the blissful bond endures,
And while he lies, his heart is yours :
But, oh ! you've wholly lost the youth
The instant that he tells you truth.

ANACREONTIC

FRIEND of my soul, this goblet sip,
'Twill chase that pensive tear ;
'Tis not so sweet as woman's lip,
But, oh ! 'tis more sincere.
Like her delusive beam,
'Twill steal away thy mind :
But, truer than love's dream,
It leaves no sting behind.

Come, twine the wreath, thy brows to shade;

These flow'rs were cull'd at noon;—
Like woman's love the rose will fade,
But, ah! not half so soon.

For though the flower's decay'd,
Its fragrance is not o'er;
But once when love's betray'd,
Its sweet life blooms no more.

THE PHILOSOPHER ARISTIPPUS

TO A LAMP

WHICH HAD BEEN GIVEN HIM BY LAIS

Dulcis conscia lectuli lucerna.

MARTIAL, lib. xiv. epig. 39.

'OH! love the Lamp' (my Mistress said),
'The faithful Lamp that, many a night,
Beside thy Lais' lonely bed
Has kept its little watch of light.

'Full often has it seen her weep,
And fix her eye upon its flame,
Till, weary, she has sunk to sleep,
Repeating her beloved's name.

'Then love the Lamp—'twill often lead
Thy step through learning's sacred
way; 10
And when those studious eyes shall read,
At midnight, by its lonely ray,

'Of things sublime, of nature's birth,
Of all that's bright in heaven or
earth,

Oh, think that she, by whom 'twas given,
Adores thee more than earth or heaven!'

Yes—dearest Lamp, by every charm
On which thy midnight beam has hung;

The head reclin'd, the graceful arm
Across the brow of ivory flung; 20

The heaving bosom, partly hid,
The sever'd lip's unconscious sighs,
The fringe that from the half-shut lid
Adown the cheek of roses lies:

¹ Hesiod, who tells us in melancholy terms of his father's flight to the wretched village of Ascra. Εργ. και Ημερ. v. 251.

² Εννυχιαί στείχον, περικαλλέα οσσαν ιείσαι. Theog. v. 10.

³ Και μοι σκηπτρον εδον, δαφνης εριθγέα οζον. Id. v. 30.

⁴ Πεν τα όλα ποταμου δικην, as expressed

By these, by all that bloom untold,
And long as all shall charm my heart,
I'll love my little Lamp of gold—
My Lamp and I shall never part.

And often, as she smiling said,
In fancy's hour, thy gentle rays 30
Shall guide my visionary tread
Through poesy's enchanting maze.
Thy flame shall light the page refin'd,
Where still we catch the Chian's
breath,

Where still the bard, though cold in
death,

Has left his soul unquench'd behind.

Or, o'er thy humbler legend shine,

Oh man of Ascra's dreary glades! ¹

To whom the nightly warbling Nine ²

A wand of inspiration gave, ³ 40
Pluck'd from the greenest tree, that shades

The crystal of Castalia's wave.

Then, turning to a purer lore,
We'll cull the sages' deep-hid store;

From Science steal her golden clue,

And every mystic path pursue,

Where Nature, far from vulgar eyes,

Through labyrinths of wonder flies.

'Tis thus my heart shall learn to know

How fleeting is this world below, ⁵⁰

Where all that meets the morning light,

Is chang'd before the fall of night! ⁴

I'll tell thee, as I trim thy fire,

'Swift, swift the tide of being runs,

And Time, who bids thy flame expire,

Will also quench yon heaven of suns.'

Oh, then if earth's united power

Can never chain one feathery hour;

If every print we leave to-day

To-morrow's wave will sweep away; 60

Who pauses to inquire of heaven

Why were the fleeting treasures given,

The sunny days, the shady nights,

And all their brief but dear delights,

Which heaven has made for man to use,

And man should think it crime to lose?

among the dogmas of Heraclitus the Ephesian, and with the same image by Seneca, in whom we find a beautiful diffusion of the thought. 'Nemo est mane, qui fuit pridie. Corpora nostra rapiuntur fluminum more; quidquid videt currit cum tempore. Nihil ex his quae videmus manet. Ego ipse, dum loquor mutari ipsa, mutatus sum,' &c.

Who that has cull'd a fresh-blown rose
Will ask it why it breathes and glows,
Unmindful of the blushing ray,
In which it shines its soul away ; 70
Unmindful of the scented sigh,
With which it dies and loves to die.

Pleasure, thou only good on earth !¹
One precious moment giv'n to thee—
Oh ! by my Lais' lip, 'tis worth
The sage's immortality.

Then far be all the wisdom hence,
That would our joys one hour delay !
Alas, the feast of soul and sense
Love calls us to in youth's bright day,
If not soon tasted, fleets away. 81

Ne'er wert thou form'd, my Lamp, to
shed
Thy splendour on a lifeless page ;—
Whate'er my blushing Lais said
Of thoughtful lore and studies sage,
'Twas mockery all—her glance of joy
Told me thy dearest, best employ.

And, soon as night shall close the eye
Of heaven's young wanderer in the west ;

When seers are gazing on the sky, 90
To find their future orbs of rest ;
Then shall I take my trembling way,
Unseen but to those worlds above,
And, led by thy mysterious ray,
Steal to the night-bower of my love.

TO MRS. —

ON HER BEAUTIFUL TRANSLATION OF VOITURE'S KISS

*Mon âme sur ma lèvre étoit lors toute entière,
Pour savourer le miel qui sur la vôtre étoit ;
Mais en me retirant, elle resta derrière,
Tant de ce doux plaisir l'amorce là restoit.*
VOITURE.

How heav'nly was the poet's doom,
To breathe his spirit through a kiss ;
And lose within so sweet a tomb
The trembling messenger of bliss !

¹ Aristippus considered motion as the principle of happiness, in which idea he differed from the Epicureans, who looked to a state of repose as the only true voluptuousness, and

And, sure his soul return'd to feel
That it again could ravish'd be ;
For in the kiss that thou didst steal,
His life and soul have fled to thee.

RONDEAU

'Good night ! good night !'—And is it so ?
And must I from my Rosa go ?
Oh Rosa, say 'Good night !' once more,
And I'll repeat it o'er and o'er,
Till the first glance of dawning light
Shall find us saying, still, 'Good night.'

And still 'Good night,' my Rosa, say—
But whisper still, 'A minute stay ;'
And I will stay, and every minute
Shall have an age of transport in it ;
Till Time himself shall stay his flight,
To listen to our sweet 'Good night.'

'Good night !' you'll murmur with a sigh,
And tell me it is time to fly :
And I will vow, will swear to go,
While still that sweet voice murmurs
'No !'

Till slumber seal our weary sight—
And then, my love, my soul, 'Good
night !'

SONG

Why does azure deck the sky ?
'Tis to be like thy looks of blue ;
Why is red the rose's dye ?
Because it is thy blushes' hue.
All that's fair, by Love's decree,
Has been made resembling thee !

Why is falling snow so white,
But to be like thy bosom fair ?
Why are solar beams so bright ?
That they may seem thy golden hair !
All that's bright, by Love's decree,
Has been made resembling thee !

Why are nature's beauties felt ?
Oh ! 'tis thine in her we see !
Why has music power to melt ?
Oh ! because it speaks like thee.
All that's sweet, by Love's decree,
Has been made resembling thee !

avoided even the too lively agitations of pleasure, as a violent and ungraceful derangement of the senses.

TO ROSA

LIKE one who trusts to summer skies.
And puts his little bark to sea,
Is he who, lur'd by smiling eyes,
Consigns his simple heart to thee.

For fickle is the summer wind,
And sadly may the bark be tost ;
For thou art sure to change thy mind,
And then the wretched heart is lost !

WRITTEN IN A COMMONPLACE
BOOK,

CALLED 'THE BOOK OF FOLLIES;' IN WHICH EVERY ONE THAT OPENED IT WAS TO CONTRIBUTE SOMETHING

TO THE BOOK OF FOLLIES

THIS tribute's from a wretched elf,
Who hails thee, emblem of himself.
The book of life, which I have trac'd,
Has been, like thee, a motley waste

Of follies scribbled o'er and o'er,
One folly bringing hundreds more.
Some have indeed been writ so neat,
In characters so fair, so sweet,
That those who judge not too severely,
Have said they lov'd such follies dearly :
Yet still, O book ! the allusion stands ;
For these were penn'd by female hands :
The rest—alas ! I own the truth—
Have all been scribbled so uncouth
That Prudence, with a with'ring look,
Disdainful, flings away the book.
Like thine, its pages here and there
Have oft been stain'd with blots of care ;
And sometimes hours of peace, I own,
Upon some fairer leaves have shown,
White as the snowings of that heav'n
By which those hours of peace were given.
But now no longer—such, oh, such
The blast of Disappointment's touch !—
No longer now those hours appear ;
Each leaf is sullied by a tear :
Blank, blank is ev'ry page with care,
Not ev'n a folly brightens there.
Will they yet brighten ?—never, never !
Then shut the book, O God, for ever !

TO ROSA

SAY, why should the girl of my soul be in tears
At a meeting of rapture like this,
When the glooms of the past and the sorrow of years
Have been paid by one moment of bliss ?

Are they shed for that moment of blissful delight,
Which dwells on her memory yet ?
Do they flow, like the dews of the love-breathing night,
From the warmth of the sun that has set ?

Oh ! sweet is the tear on that languishing smile,
That smile, which is loveliest then ;
And if such are the drops that delight can beguile,
Thou shalt weep them again and again.

LIGHT SOUNDS THE HARP

LIGHT sounds the harp when the combat is over,
When heroes are resting, and joy is in bloom ;
When laurels hang loose from the brow of the lover,
And Cupid makes wings of the warrior's plume.
But, when the foe returns,
Again the hero burns ;

High flames the sword in his hand once more :

The clang of mingling arms

Is then the sound that charms,

And brazen notes of war, that stirring trumpets pour ;—

Then, again comes the Harp, when the combat is over—

When heroes are resting, and Joy is in bloom—

When laurels hang loose from the brow of the lover,

And Cupid makes wings of the warrior's plume.

Light went the harp when the War-God, reclining,

Lay lull'd on the white arm of Beauty to rest,

When round his rich armour the myrtle hung twining,

And flights of young doves made his helmet their nest.

But, when the battle came,

The hero's eye breath'd flame :

Soon from his neck the white arm was flung ;

While, to his wak'ning ear,

No other sounds were dear

But brazen notes of war, by thousand trumpets sung,

But then came the light harp, when danger was ended,

And Beauty once more lull'd the War-God to rest ;

When tresses of gold with his laurels lay blended,

And flights of young doves made his helmet their nest.

FROM THE GREEK OF MELEAGER¹

FILL high the cup with liquid flame,

And speak my Heliodora's name.

Repeat its magic o'er and o'er,

And let the sound my lips adore,

Live in the breeze, till every tone,

And word, and breath, speaks her alone.

Give me the wreath that withers there,

It was but last delicious night,

It circled her luxuriant hair,

And caught her eyes' reflected light.

Oh ! haste, and twine it round my brow :

'Tis all of her that's left me now.

And see—each rosebud drops a tear,

To find the nymph no longer here—

No longer, where such heavenly charms

As hers should be—within these arms.

SONG

FLY from the world, O Bessy ! to me,

Thou wilt never find any sincerer ;

I'll give up the world, O Bessy ! for thee,

I can never meet any that's dearer.

Ειπε, συν ακριτω το γλυκυ μισγ' ονομα.

Και μοι τον βρεχθειτα μυρος και χριζον εοντα,
Μναμοσυνον κεινας, αμφιτιθει στεφανον'

Then tell me no more, with a tear and
a sigh,

That our loves will be censur'd by many ;

All, all have their follies, and who will deny

That ours is the sweetest of any ?

When your lip has met mine, in communion so sweet,

Have we felt as if virtue forbid it ?—

Have we felt as if heav'n denied them
to meet ?—

No, rather 'twas heav'n that did it.

So innocent, love, is the joy we then sip,

So little of wrong is there in it,

That I wish all my errors were lodg'd on your lip,

And I'd kiss them away in a minute.

Then come to your lover, oh ! fly to his
shed,

From a world which I know thou
despisest ;

And slumber will hover as light o'er our bed

As e'er on the couch of the wisest.

Δακρυει φιλεραστον ιδου ροδον, ουνεκα κειναν
Αλλοθι κ' ου κολποις ημετεροις εσθρα.

BRUNCK. Analect. tom. i. p. 28.

And when o'er our pillow the tempest
is driven,

And thou, pretty innocent, fearest,
I'll tell thee, it is not the chiding of
heav'n,

'Tis only our lullaby, dearest.

And, oh ! while we lie on our deathbed,
my love,

Looking back on the scene of our errors,
A sigh from my Bessy shall plead then
above,

And Death be disarm'd of his terrors.
And each to the other embracing will say,

'Farewell ! let us hope we're forgiven.'

Thy last fading glance will illumine the
way,

And a kiss be our passport to heaven !

THE RESEMBLANCE

——— vo cercand' io,
Donna, quant' è possibile, in altrui
La desiata vostra forma vera.
PETRARCA, Sonnetto, 14.

Yes, if 'twere any common love,
That led my pliant heart astray,
I grant, there's not a power above,
Could wipe the faithless crime away.

But, 'twas my doom to err with one
In every look so like to thee
That, underneath yon blessed sun,
So fair there are but thou and she.

Both born of beauty, at a birth,
She held with thine a kindred sway,
And wore the only shape on earth
That could have lur'd my soul to stray.

Then blame me not, if false I be,
'Twas love that wak'd the fond excess ;
My heart had been more true to thee,
Had mine eye priz'd thy beauty less.

FANNY, DEAREST

YES ! had I leisure to sigh and mourn,
Fanny, dearest, for thee I'd sigh ;
And every smile on my cheek should turn
To tears when thou art nigh.

But, between love, and wine, and sleep,
So busy a life I live,

That even the time it would take to weep
Is more than my heart can give.

Then bid me not to despair and pine,
Fanny, dearest of all the dears !
The Love that's order'd to bathe in wine,
Would be sure to take cold in tears.

Reflected bright in this heart of mine,
Fanny, dearest, thy image lies ;
But, ah, the mirror would cease to shine,
If dimm'd too often with sighs.

They lose the half of beauty's light,
Who view it through sorrow's tear ;
And 'tis but to see thee truly bright
That I keep my eye-beam clear.

Then wait no longer till tears shall flow
Fanny, dearest—the hope is vain ;
If sunshine cannot dissolve thy snow,
I shall never attempt it with rain.

THE RING

TO . . .

No—Lady ! Lady ! keep the ring :
Oh ! think, how many a future year,
Of placid smile and downy wing,
May sleep within its holy sphere.

Do not disturb their tranquil dream,
Though love hath ne'er the myst'ry
warm'd ;

Yet heav'n will shed a soothing beam,
To bless the bond itself hath form'd.

But then, that eye, that burning eye,—
Oh ! it doth ask, with witching power,
If heaven can ever bless the tie
Where love in wreaths no genial flower ?

Away, away, bewildering look,
Or all the boast of virtue's o'er ;
Go—hie thee to the sage's book,
And learn from him to feel no more.

I cannot warn thee : every touch,
That brings my pulses close to thine,
Tells me I want thy aid as much— 19
Ev'n more, alas, than thou dost mine.

Yet, stay,—one hope, one effort yet—
A moment turn those eyes away,
And let me, if I can, forget
The light that leads my soul astray.

Thou say'st, that we were born to meet,
That our hearts bear one common seal ;—

Think, Lady, think, how man's deceit
Can seem to sigh and feign to feel.

When, o'er thy face some gleam of
thought,

Like daybeams through the morning
air, 30

Hath gradual stole, and I have caught
The feeling ere it kindled there;

The sympathy I then betray'd,

Perhaps was but the child of art,
The guile of one, who long hath play'd
With all these wily nets of heart.

Oh! thine is not my earliest vow;

Though few the years I yet have told,
Canst thou believe I've liv'd till now,
With loveless heart or senses cold? 40

No—other nymphs to joy and pain
This wild and wandering heart hath mov'd;

With some it sported, wild and vain,
While some it dearly, truly, lov'd.

The cheek to thine I fondly lay,
To theirs hath been as fondly laid;
The words to thee I warmly say,
To them have been as warmly said.

Then, scorn at once a worthless heart,
Worthless alike, or fix'd or free; 50
Think of the pure, bright soul thou art,
And—love not me, oh love not me.

Enough—now, turn thine eyes again;

What, still that look and still that sigh!

Dost thou not feel my counsel then?

Oh! no, beloved,—nor do I.

TO THE INVISIBLE GIRL

THEY try to persuade me, my dear little sprite,
That you're not a true daughter of ether and light,
Nor have any concern with those fanciful forms
That dance upon rainbows and ride upon storms;
That, in short, you're a woman; your lip and your eye
As mortal as ever drew gods from the sky.

But I will not believe them—no, Science, to you
I have long bid a last and a careless adieu:

Still flying from Nature to study her laws,
And dulling delight by exploring its cause,
You forget how superior, for mortals below, 10

Is the fiction they dream to the truth that they know.

Oh! who, that has e'er enjoyed rapture complete,
Would ask how we feel it, or why it is sweet;

How rays are confus'd, or how particles fly
Through the medium refin'd of a glance or a sigh;

Is there one, who but once would not rather have known it,
Than written, with Harvey, whole volumes upon it?

As for you, my sweet-voiced and invisible love,
You must surely be one of those spirits, that rove 20
By the bank where, at twilight, the poet reclines,
When the star of the west on his solitude shines,
And the magical fingers of fancy have hung
Every breeze with a sigh, every leaf with a tongue.

Oh! hint to him then, 'tis retirement alone
Can hallow his harp or ennoble its tone;

Like you, with a veil of seclusion between,
His song to the world let him utter unseen,
And like you, a legitimate child of the spheres,
Escape from the eye to enrapture the ears. 30

Sweet spirit of mystery ! how I should love,
In the wearisome ways I am fated to rove,
To have you thus ever invisibly nigh,
Inhaling for ever your song and your sigh !
Mid the crowds of the world and the murmurs of care,
I might sometimes converse with my nymph of the air,
And turn with distaste from the clamorous crew,
To steal in the pauses one whisper from you.

Then, come and be near me, for ever be mine,
We shall hold in the air a communion divine, 40
As sweet as, of old, was imagin'd to dwell
In the grotto of Numa, or Socrates' cell.
And oft, at those lingering moments of night,
When the heart's busy thoughts have put slumber to flight,
You shall come to my pillow and tell me of love,
Such as angel to angel might whisper above.
Sweet spirit !—and then, could you borrow the tone
Of that voice, to my ear like some fairy-song known,
The voice of the one upon earth, who has twin'd
With her being for ever my heart and my mind, 50
Though lonely and far from the light of her smile,
An exile, and weary and hopeless the while,
Could you shed for a moment her voice on my ear,
I will think, for that moment, that Cara is near ;
That she comes with consoling enchantment to speak,
And kisses my eyelid and breathes on my cheek,
And tells me, the night shall go rapidly by,
For the dawn of our hope, of our heaven is nigh.

Fair spirit ! if such be your magical power,
It will lighten the lapse of full many an hour ; 60
And, let fortune's realities frown as they will,
Hope, fancy, and Cara may smile for me still.

THE RING

A TALE

Annulus ille viri.—OVID. Amor. lib. ii. eleg. 15.

THE happy day at length arriv'd
When Rupert was to wed
The fairest maid in Saxony,
And take her to his bed.

As soon as morn was in the sky,
The feast and sports began ;
The men admir'd the happy maid,
The maids the happy man.

In many a sweet device of mirth
The day was pass'd along ; 10
And some the featly dance amus'd,
And some the dulcet song.

The younger maids with Isabel
Disported through the bowers,
And deck'd her robe, and crown'd her head
With motley bridal flowers.

The matrons all in rich attire,
Within the castle walls,
Sat listening to the choral strains
That echo'd through the halls. 20

Young Rupert and his friends repair'd
Unto a spacious court,
To strike the bounding tennis-ball
In feat and manly sport.

The bridegroom on his finger wore
The wedding-ring so bright,
Which was to grace the lily hand
Of Isabel that night.

And fearing he might break the gem,
Or lose it in the play, 30
He look'd around the court, to see
Where he the ring might lay.

Now, in the court a statue stood,
Which there full long had been
It might a Heathen goddess be,
Or else, a Heathen queen.

Upon its marble finger then
He tried the ring to fit;
And, thinking it was safest there,
Thereon he fasten'd it. 40

And now the tennis sports went on,
Till they were wearied all,
And messengers announc'd to them
Their dinner in the hall.

Young Rupert for his wedding-ring
Unto the statue went;
But, oh, how shock'd was he to find
The marble finger bent!

The hand was clos'd upon the ring
With firm and mighty clasp; 50
In vain he tried, and tried, and tried,
He could not lose the grasp!

Then sore surpris'd was Rupert's mind—
As well his mind might be;
'I'll come,' quoth he, 'at night again,
When none are here to see.'

He went unto the feast, and much
He thought upon his ring;
And marvell'd sorely what could mean
So very strange a thing! 60

The feast was o'er, and to the court
He hid without delay,
Resolv'd to break the marble hand
And force the ring away.

But, mark a stranger wonder still—
The ring was there no more,
And yet the marble hand ungrasp'd,
And open as before!

He search'd the base, and all the court,
But nothing could he find; 70
Then to the castle hied he back
With sore bewilder'd mind.

Within he found them all in mirth,
The night in dancing flew;
The youth another ring procur'd,
And none the adventure knew.

And now the priest has join'd their hands,
The hours of love advance:
Rupert almost forgets to think
Upon the morn's mischance. 80

Within the bed fair Isabel
In blushing sweetness lay,
Like flowers, half-open'd by the dawn,
And waiting for the day.

And Rupert, by her lovely side,
In youthful beauty glows,
Like Phoebus, when he bends to cast
His beams upon a rose.

And here my song would leave them both,
Nor let the rest be told, 90
If 'twere not for the horrid tale
It yet has to unfold.

Soon Rupert, 'twixt his bride and him,
A death cold carcass found;
He saw it not, but thought he felt
Its arms embrace him round.

He started up, and then return'd,
But found the phantom still;
In vain he shrunk, it clipp'd him round,
With damp and deadly chill! 100

And when he bent, the earthly lips
A kiss of horror gave;
'Twas like the smell from charnel vaults,
Or from the mould'ring grave!

Ill fated Rupert!—wild and loud
Then cried he to his wife,
'Oh! save me from this horrid fiend,
My Isabel! my life!'

But Isabel had nothing seen,
She look'd around in vain; 110
And much she mourn'd the mad conceit
That rack'd her Rupert's brain.

At length from this invisible
These words to Rupert came:
(Oh God! while he did hear the words
What terrors shook his frame!)

'Husband, husband, I've the ring
Thou gav'st to-day to me;
And thou'rt to me for ever wed,
As I am wed to thee!' 120

And all the night the demon lay
Cold-chilling by his side,
And strain'd him with such deadly grasp
He thought he should have died.

But when the dawn of day was near,
The horrid phantom fled,
And left th' affrighted youth to weep
By Isabel in bed.

And all that day a gloomy cloud
Was seen on Rupert's brows ; 130
Fair Isabel was likewise sad,
But strove to cheer her spouse.

And, as the day advanc'd, he thought
Of coming night with fear :
Alas, that he should dread to view
The bed that should be dear !

At length the second night arriv'd,
Again their couch they press'd ;
Poor Rupert hop'd that all was o'er,
And look'd for love and rest. 140

But oh ! when midnight came, again
The fiend was at his side,
And, as it strain'd him in its grasp,
With howl exulting cried :—

' Husband, husband, I've the ring,
The ring thou gav'st to me ;
And thou'rt to me for ever wed,
As I am wed to thee !'

In agony of wild despair,
He started from the bed ; 150
And thus to his bewilder'd wife
The trembling Rupert said :

' Oh Isabel ! dost thou not see
A shape of horrors here,
That strains me to its deadly kiss,
And keeps me from my dear ?'

' No, no, my love ! my Rupert, I
No shape of horrors see ;
And much I mourn the phantasy
That keeps my dear from me. 160

This night, just like the night before,
In terrors pass'd away,
Nor did the demon vanish thence
Before the dawn of day.

Said Rupert then, ' My Isabel,
Dear partner of my woe,
To Father Austin's holy cave
This instant will I go.'

Now Austin was a reverend man,
Who acted wonders maint— 170
Whom all the country round believ'd
A devil or a saint !

To Father Austin's holy cave
Then Rupert straightway went ;
And told him all, and ask'd him how
These horrors to prevent.

The Father heard the youth, and then
Retir'd awhile to pray ;
And, having pray'd for half an hour
Thus to the youth did say : 180

' There is a place where four roads meet,
Which I will tell to thee ;
Be there this eve, at fall of night,
And list what thou shalt see.

' Thou'lt see a group of figures pass
In strange disorder'd crowd,
Travelling by torchlight through the
roads,
With noises strange and loud.

' And one that's high above the rest,
Terrific towering o'er, 190
Will make thee know him at a glance,
So I need say no more.

' To him from me these tablets give,
They'll quick be understood ;
Thou need'st not fear, but give them
straight,
I've scrawl'd them with my blood !'

The night-fall came, and Rupert all
In pale amazement went
To where the cross-roads met, as he
Was by the Father sent. 200

And lo ! a group of figures came
In strange disorder'd crowd,
Travelling by torchlight through the
roads,
With noises strange and loud.

And, as the gloomy train advanc'd,
Rupert beheld from far
A female form of wanton mien
High seated on a car.

And Rupert, as he gaz'd upon
The loosely vested dame, 210
Thought of the marble statue's look,
For hers was just the same.

Behind her walk'd a hideous form,
With eyeballs flashing death ;
Whene'er he breath'd, a sulphur'd smoke
Came burning in his breath.

He seem'd the first of all the crowd,
Terrific towering o'er;
'Yes, yes,' said Rupert, 'this is he,
And I need ask no more.' 220

Then slow he went, and to this fiend
The tablets trembling gave,
Who look'd and read them with a yell
That would disturb the grave.

And when he saw the blood-scrawl'd
name,
His eyes with fury shine;
'I thought,' cries he, 'his time was out,
But he must soon be mine!'

Then darting at the youth a look
Which rent his soul with fear, 230
He went unto the female fiend,
And whisper'd in her ear.

The female fiend no sooner heard
Than, with reluctant look,
The very ring that Rupert lost
She from her finger took.

And, giving it unto the youth,
With eyes that breath'd of hell,
She said, in that tremendous voice,
Which he remember'd well: 240

'In Austin's name take back the ring,
The ring thou gav'st to me;
And thou'rt to me no longer wed,
Nor longer I to thee.'

He took the ring, the rabble pass'd,
He home return'd again;
His wife was then the happiest fair,
The happiest he of men.

TO . . .

ON SEEING HER WITH A WHITE VEIL
AND A RICH GIRDLE

Μαργαρίτα δηλονοσι δακρυων ροον.
Ap. NICEPHOR. in Onirotitico.

Put off the vestal veil, nor, oh!
Let weeping angels view it;
Your cheeks belie its virgin snow,
And blush repenting through it.

Put off the fatal zone you wear;
The shining pearls around it
Are tears, that fell from Virtue there,
The hour when Love unbound it.

WRITTEN IN THE BLANK LEAF OF

A LADY'S COMMONPLACE BOOK

HERE is one leaf reserv'd for me,
From all thy sweet memorials free;
And here my simple song might tell
The feelings thou must guess so well.
But could I thus, within thy mind,
One little vacant corner find,
Where no impression yet is seen,
Where no memorial yet hath been,
Oh! it should be my sweetest care
To write my name for ever there!

TO MRS. BL—

WRITTEN IN HER ALBUM

THEY say that Love had once a book
(The urchin likes to copy you),
Where, all who came, the pencil took,
And wrote, like us, a line or two.

'Twas Innocence, the maid divine,
Who kept this volume bright and fair,
And saw that no unhallow'd line
Or thought profane should enter
there;

And daily did the pages fill
With fond device and loving lore, 10
And every leaf she turn'd was still More bright than that she turn'd
before.

Beneath the touch of Hope, how soft,
How light the magic pencil ran!
Till Fear would come, alas, as oft,
And trembling close what Hope began.

A tear or two had dropp'd from Grief,
And Jealousy would, now and then,
Ruffle in haste some snow-white leaf,
Which Love had still to smooth again.

But, ah! there came a blooming boy,
Who often turn'd the pages o'er,
And wrote therein such words of joy,
That all who read them sigh'd for more.

And Pleasure was this spirit's name,
And though so soft his voice and look,
Yet Innocence, whene'er he came,
Would tremble for her spotless book.

For, oft a Bacchant cup he bore,
 With earth's sweet nectar sparkling
 bright ;
 And much she fear'd lest, mantling o'er,
 Some drops should on the pages light.

And so it chanc'd, one luckless night,
 The urchin let that goblet fall
 O'er the fair book, so pure, so white,
 And sullied lines and marge and all !

In vain now, touch'd with shame, he tried
 To wash those fatal stains away ;
 Deep, deep had sunk the sullying tide,
 The leaves grew darker every day. 40

And Fancy's sketches lost their hue,
 And Hope's sweet lines were all effac'd,
 And Love himself now scarcely knew
 What Love himself so lately trac'd.

At length the urchin Pleasure fled,
 (For how, alas ! could Pleasure stay?)
 And Love, while many a tear he shed,
 Reluctant flung the book away.

The index now alone remains, 49
 Of all the pages spoil'd by Pleasure,
 And though it bears some earthy stains,
 Yet Memory counts the leaf a treasure.

And oft, they say, she scans it o'er,
 And oft, by this memorial aided,
 Brings back the pages now no more,
 And thinks of lines that long have faded.

I know not if this tale be true,
 But thus the simple facts are stated ;
 And I refer their truth to you, 59
 Since Love and you are near related.

TO CARA,

AFTER AN INTERVAL OF ABSENCE

CONCEAL'D within the shady wood
 A mother left her sleeping child,
 And flew, to cull her rustic food,
 The fruitage of the forest wild.

But storms upon her pathway rise,
 The mother roams, astray and weep-
 ing ;

Far from the weak appealing cries
 Of him she left so sweetly sleeping.

O. P.

She hopes, she fears ; a light is seen,
 And gentler blows the night wind's
 breath ; 10
 Yet no—'tis gone—the storms are keen,
 The infant may be chill'd to death !

Perhaps, ev'n now, in darkness shrouded,
 His little eyes lie cold and still ;—
 And yet, perhaps, they are not clouded,
 Life and love may light them still.

Thus, Cara, at our last farewell,
 When, fearful ev'n thy hand to touch,
 I mutely ask'd those eyes to tell 19
 If parting pain'd thee half so much :

I thought,—and, oh ! forgive the
 thought,
 For none was e'er by love inspir'd
 Whom fancy had not also taught
 To hope the bliss his soul desir'd.

Yes, I did think, in Cara's mind,
 Though yet to that sweet mind unknown,

I left one infant wish behind,
 One feeling, which I call'd my own.

Oh blest ! though but in fancy blest,
 How did I ask of Pity's care, 30
 To shield and strengthen, in thy breast,
 The nursling I had cradled there.

And, many an hour, beguil'd by pleasure,
 And many an hour of sorrow num-
 b'ring,

I ne'er forgot the new-born treasure,
 I left within my bosom slumb'ring.

Perhaps, indifference has not chill'd it,
 Haply, it yet a throb may give—
 Yet, no—perhaps, a doubt has kill'd it ;
 Say, dearest—does the feeling live ? 40

TO CARA,

ON THE DAWNING OF A NEW YEAR'S DAY

WHEN midnight came to close the year,
 We sigh'd to think it thus should take
 The hours it gave us—hours as dear
 As sympathy and love could make
 Their blessed moments,—every sun
 Saw us, my love, more closely one.

D

But, Cara, when the dawn was nigh
Which came a new year's light to shed,
That smile we caught from eye to eye
Told us, those moments were not fled :
Oh, no,—we felt, some future sun
Should see us still more closely one.

Thus may we ever, side by side,
From happy years to happier glide ;
And still thus may the passing sigh
We give to hours, that vanish o'er us,
Be follow'd by the smiling eye,
That Hope shall shed on scenes before us !

TO . . . , 1801

To be the theme of every hour
The heart devotes to Fancy's power,
When her prompt magic fills the mind
With friends and joys we've left behind,
And joys return and friends are near,
And all are welcom'd with a tear :—
In the mind's purest seat to dwell,
To be remember'd oft and well
By one whose heart, though vain and
wild,
By passion led, by youth beguild,

Can proudly still aspire to be
All that may yet win smiles from thee :—
If thus to live in every part
Of a lone, weary wanderer's heart ;
If thus to be its sole employ
Can give thee one faint gleam of joy,
Believe it, Mary,—oh ! believe
A tongue that never can deceive,
Though, erring, it too oft betray Ev'n more than Love should dare to say,—

In Pleasure's dream or Sorrow's hour,
In crowded hall or lonely bower,
The business of my life shall be,
For ever to remember thee.
And though that heart be dead to mine,
Since Love is life and wakes not thine,
I'll take thy image, as the form
Of one whom Love had fail'd to warm,
Which, though it yield no answering
thrill,

Is not less dear, is worshipp'd still—
I'll take it, wheresoe'er I stray,
The bright, cold burden of my way.
To keep this semblance fresh in bloom,
My heart shall be its lasting tomb,
And Memory, with embalming care,
Shall keep it fresh and fadeless there.

THE GENIUS OF HARMONY

AN IRREGULAR ODE

Ad harmoniam canere mundum. CICERO de Nat. Deor. lib. iii.

THERE lies a shell beneath the waves,
In many a hollow winding wreath'd,
Such as of old
Echoed the breath that warbling sea-maids breath'd ;
This magic shell,
From the white bosom of a syren fell,
As once she wander'd by the tide that laves
Sicilia's sands of gold.
It bears
Upon its shining side the mystic notes
Of those entrancing airs,¹
The genii of the deep were wont to swell,

10

¹ In the Histoire Naturelle des Antilles, there is an account of some curious shells, found at Curaçoa, on the back of which were lines, filled with musical characters so distinct and perfect, that the writer assures us a very charming trio was sung from one of them. 'On le nomme musical, parce-qu'il porte sur le dos des lignes noires pleines de notes, qui ont une espèce de clé pour les mettre en chant, de sorte que l'on dirait qu'il ne manque que la lettre a cette

tablature naturelle. Ce curieux gentilhomme (M. du Montel) rapporte qu'il en a vu qui avoient cinq lignes, une clé, et des notes, qui fermoient un accord parfait. Quelqu'un y avoit ajouté la lettre, que la nature avoit oubliée, et la faisoit chanter en forme de trio, dont l'air étoit fort agréable.'—Chap. xix. art. 11. The author adds, a poet might imagine that these shells were used by the syrens at their concerts.

When heaven's eternal orbs their midnight music roll'd !

Oh ! seek it, wheresoe'er it floats ;

And, if the power

Of thrilling numbers to thy soul be dear,

Go, bring the bright shell to my bower,

And I will fold thee in such downy dreams

As lap the Spirit of the Seventh Sphere,

When Luna's distant tone falls faintly on his ear !¹

20

And thou shalt own,

That, through the circle of creation's zone,

Where matter slumbers or where spirit beams ;

From the pellucid tides,² that whirl

The planets through their maze of song,

To the small rill, that weeps along

Murmuring o'er beds of pearl ;

From the rich sigh

Of the sun's arrow through an evening sky.³

To the faint breath the tuneful osier yields

30

On Afric's burning fields ;⁴

Thou'lt wondering own this universe divine

Is mine !

That I respire in all and all in me,

One mighty mingled soul of boundless harmony.

Welcome, welcome, mystic shell !

Many a star has ceas'd to burn,⁵

Many a tear has Saturn's urn

O'er the cold bosom of the ocean wept,⁶

¹ According to Cicero, and his commentator, Macrobius, the lunar tone is the gravest and faintest on the planetary heptachord. 'Quam ob causam summus ille coeli stellifer cursus, cujus conversio est concitator, acuto et excitato movetur sono ; gravissimo autem hic lunaris atque infimus.'—Somn. Scip. Because, says Macrobius, 'spiritu ut in extremitate languesciente jam volvitur, et propter angustias quibus penultimus orbis arcatur impetu leniore convertitur.'—In Somn. Scip. lib. ii. cap. 4. In their musical arrangement of the heavenly bodies, the ancient writers are not very intelligible.—See Ptolem. lib. iii.

Leone Hebreo, in pursuing the idea of Aristotle, that the heavens are animal, attributes their harmony to perfect and reciprocal love. 'Non pero manca fra loro il perfetto et reciproco amore: la causa principale, che ne mostra il loro amore, è la lor amicitia armonica et la concordanza, che perpetuamente si trova in loro.'—Dialog. ii. di Amore, p. 58. This 'reciproco amore' of Leone is the φιλοτης of the ancient Empedocles, who seems, in his Love and Hate of the Elements, to have given a glimpse of the principles of attraction and repulsion. See the fragment to which I allude in Laertius, Ἄλλοτε μὲν φιλοτητι, συνερχομεν, κ. τ. λ., lib. viii. cap. 2, n. 12.

² Leucippus, the atomist, imagined a kind of vortices in the heavens, which he borrowed from Anaxagoras, and possibly suggested to Descartes.

⁵ Alluding to the extinction, or at least the disappearance, of some of those fixed stars, which we are taught to consider as suns, attended each by its system. Descartes thought that our earth might formerly have been a sun, which became obscured by a thick incrustation over its surface. This probably suggested the idea of a central fire.

⁶ Porphyry says, that Pythagoras held the sea to be a tear. Τὴν θαλάτταν μὲν ἑκαλεῖ εἶναι δακρυον (De Vita) ; and some one else, if I mistake not, has added the planet Saturn as the source of it. Empedocles, with similar affectation, called the sea 'the sweat of the earth' : ἰδρωτα τῆς γῆς. See Rittershusius upon Porphyry, Num. 41.

Since thy ærial spell
Hath in the waters slept.

40

Now blest I'll fly
With the bright treasure to my choral sky,
Where she, who wak'd its early swell,
The Syren of the heavenly choir,
Walks o'er the great string of my Orphic Lyre; ¹
Or guides around the burning pole
The winged chariot of some blissful soul: ²
While thou—

Oh son of earth, what dreams shall rise for thee!

50

Beneath Hispania's sun,
Thou'lt see a streamlet run,
Which I've imbued with breathing melody; ³
And there, when night-winds down the current die,
Thou'lt hear how like a harp its waters sigh:
A liquid chord is every wave that flows,
An airy plectrum every breeze that blows.⁴

There, by that wondrous stream,
Go, lay thy languid brow,
And I will send thee such a godlike dream,
As never bless'd the slumbers even of him.⁵
Who, many a night, with his primordial lyre,⁶
Sate on the chill Pangæan mount,⁷ 60

And, looking to the orient dim,
Watch'd the first flowing of that sacred fount,
From which his soul had drunk its fire.
Oh! think what visions, in that lonely hour,
Stole o'er his musing breast;

What pious ecstasy⁸
Wafted his prayer to that eternal Power,

70

² Διέλε ψυχὰς ἰσαριθμῶν τοῖς ἀστροῖς, ἐνεμε θ' ἑκάστην πρὸς ἑκάστην, καὶ ἐμβιβασας ὧς Εἰς Οὐχίμα.—Distributing the souls severally among the stars, and mounting each soul upon a star as on its chariot.—Plato, Timaueus.

³ This musical river is mentioned in the romance of Achilles Tatius. Ἐπει ποταμὸν . . ἦν δὲ ἀκουσθαι θέλης τὸν ὕδατος λαλοῦντος. The Latin version, in supplying the hiatus which is in the original, has placed the river in Hispania. 'In Hispaniâ quoque fluvius est, quem primo aspectu,' &c. &c.

⁴ These two lines are translated from the words of Achilles Tatius. Ἐὰν γὰρ ὀλίγους ἀνέμους εἰς τὰς θύνας ἐμπέσῃ, το μὲν ὕδωρ ὡς χορδὴ κρουέται. το δὲ πνεῦμα τὸν ὕδατος πληκτρον γίνεσθαι. το ἄκμα δὲ ὡς κιθάρα λαλεῖ.—Lib. II.

⁵ Orpheus.

⁶ They called his lyre ἀρχαιοτροπὸν ἑπταχορδον Ὀρφέως. See a curious work by a professor of Greek at Venice, entitled 'Hebdomades, sive septem de septenario libri.'—Lib. iv. cap. 3. p. 177.

⁷ Eratosthenes, in mentioning the extreme veneration of Orpheus for Apollo, says that he was accustomed to go to the Pangæan mountain at day-break, and there wait the rising of the sun, that he might be the first to hail its beams. Ἐπεγεφρομενος τὴς νυκτος, κατὰ τὴν ἑωθινὴν ἐπὶ το ὄρος το καλούμενον Πάγγαιον, προσεμένε τὰς ἀνατολάς, ἵνα ἴδῃ τὸν ἥλιον πρῶτον.—Καταστερισμ. 24.

⁸ There are some verses of Orpheus preserved to us, which contain sublime ideas of the unity and magnificence of the Deity. For instance, those which Justin Martyr has produced:

Οὗτος μὲν χαλκεῖον ἐς οὐρανὸν ἐστηρικται
Χρυσέω ἐνὶ θρόνῳ, κ. τ. λ.

Ad Græc. Cohortat.

It is thought by some, that these are to be reckoned amongst the fabrications, which were frequent in the early times of Christianity. Still, it appears doubtful to whom they are to be attributed, being too pious for the Pagans, and too poetical for the Fathers.

Whose seal upon this new-born world imprint¹
The various forms of bright divinity!

Or, dost thou know what dreams I wove,
'Mid the deep horror of that silent bower,²
Where the rapt Samian slept his holy slumber?
When, free

From earthly chain,
From wreaths of pleasure and from bonds of pain,
His spirit flew through fields above,
Drank at the source of nature's fontal number,³
And saw, in mystic choir, around him move
The stars of song, Heaven's burning minstrelsy!

Such dreams, so heavenly bright,

I swear

By the great diadem that twines my hair,
And by the seven gems that sparkle there,⁴

Mingling their beams

In a soft iris of harmonious light,

Oh, mortal! such shall be thy radiant dreams.

I FOUND HER NOT

I FOUND her not—the chamber seem'd
Like some divinely haunted place,
Where fairy forms had lately beam'd,
And left behind their odorous trace!

It felt, as if her lips had shed
A sigh around her, ere she fled,
Which hung, as on a melting lute,
When all the silver chords are mute,
There lingers still a trembling breath
After the note's luxurious death,
A shade of song, a spirit air
Of melodies which had been there.

I saw the veil, which, all the day,
Had floated o'er her cheek of rose;
I saw the couch, where late she lay
In languor of divine repose;

And I could trace the hallow'd print
Her limbs had left, as pure and warm
As if 'twere done in rapture's mint,
And Love himself had stamp'd the form.

Oh my sweet mistress, where wert thou?
In pity fly not thus from me;
Thou art my life, my essence now,
And my soul dies of wanting thee.

TO MRS. HENRY TIGHE, ON READING HER 'PSYCHE'

TELL me the witching tale again,
For never has my heart or ear
Hung on so sweet, so pure a strain,
So pure to feel, so sweet to hear.

¹ In one of the Hymns of Orpheus, he attributes a figured seal to Apollo, with which he imagines that deity to have stamped a variety of forms upon the universe.

² Alluding to the cave near Samos, where Pythagoras devoted the greater part of his days and nights to meditation and the mysteries of his philosophy. Iamblich. de Vit. This, as Holstenius remarks, was in imitation of the Magi.

³ The tetractys, or sacred number of the Pythagoreans, on which they solemnly swore, and which they called παγαν αἰωνου φυσικως, 'the fountain of perennial nature.' Lucian has ridiculed this religious arithmetic very cleverly in his Sale of Philosophers.

⁴ This diadem is intended to represent the analogy between the notes of music and the prismatic colours. We find in Plutarch a vague intimation of this kindred harmony in colours and sounds.—Ὀψις τε καὶ ἀκοή, μετὰ φωνῆς τε καὶ φωτός τὴν ἁρμονίαν ἐπιφαίνουσι.—De Musica.

Cassiodorus, whose idea I may be supposed to have borrowed, says, in a letter upon music to Boetius, 'Ut diadema oculis, varia luce gemmarum, sic cythara diversitate soni, blanditur auditui.' This is indeed the only tolerable thought in the letter.—Lib. ii. Varior.

Say, Love, in all thy prime of fame,
When the high heaven itself was thine;
When piety confess'd the flame,
And even thy errors were divine;

Did ever Muse's hand, so fair,
A glory round thy temples spread? 10
Did ever lip's ambrosial air
Such fragrance o'er thy altars shed?

One maid there was, who round her lyre
The mystic myrtle wildly wreath'd;—
But all her sighs were sighs of fire,
The myrtle wither'd as she breath'd.

Oh! you, that love's celestial dream,
In all its purity, would know,
Let not the senses' ardent beam
Too strongly through the vision glow.

Love safest lies, conceal'd in night, 21
Thenight where heaven has bid him lie;
Oh! shed not there unhallow'd light,
Or, Psyche knows, the boy will fly.¹

Sweet Psyche, many a charmed hour,
Through many a wild and magic waste,
To the fair fount and blissful bower²
Have I, in dreams, thy light foot trac'd!

Where'er thy joys are number'd now,
Beneath whatever shades of rest, 30
The Genius of the starry brow³
Hath bound thee to thy Cupid's breast;

Whether above the horizon dim,
Along whose verge our spirits stray,—
Half sunk beneath the shadowy rim,
Half brighten'd by the upper ray,⁴—

² Allusions to Mrs. Tighe's Poem.

³ Constancy.

⁴ By this image the Platonists expressed the middle state of the soul between sensible and intellectual existence.

⁵ This poem, as well as a few others that occur afterwards, formed part of a work which I had early projected, and even announced to the public, but which, luckily perhaps for myself, had been interrupted by my visit to America in the year 1803.

Among those impostures in which the priests of the pagan temples are known to have indulged, one of the most favourite was that of announcing to some fair votary of the shrine, that the God himself had become enamoured of her beauty, and would descend in all his

Thou dwellest in a world, all light,
Or, lingering here, dost love to be,
To other souls, the guardian bright
That Love was, through this gloom,
to thee; 40

Still be the song to Psyche dear,
The song, whose gentle voice was given
To be, on earth, to mortal ear,
An echo of her own, in heaven.

FROM THE HIGH PRIEST OF APOLLO

TO A VIRGIN OF DELPHI⁵

Cum digno digna Sulpicia.

'Who is the maid, with golden hair,
With eye of fire, and foot of air,
Whose harp around my altar swells,
The sweetest of a thousand shells?'
'Twas thus the deity, who treads
The arch of heaven, and proudly sheds
Day from his eyelids—thus he spoke,
As through my cell his glories broke.

Aphelia is the Delphic fair,⁶
With eyes of fire and golden hair, 10
Aphelia's are the airy feet,
And hers the harp divinely sweet;
For foot so light has never trod
The laurel'd caverns of the god,
Nor harp so soft hath ever given
A sigh to earth or hymn to heaven.

'Then tell the virgin to unfold,
In looser pomp, her locks of gold,
And bid those eyes more fondly shine
To welcome down a Spouse Divine; 20 glory, to pay her a visit within the recesses of the fane. An adventure of this description formed an episode in the classic romance which I had sketched out; and the short fragment, given above, belongs to an epistle by which the story was to have been introduced.

⁶ In the 9th Pythic of Pindar, where Apollo, in the same manner, requires of Chiron some information respecting the fair Cyrene, the Centaur, in obeying, very gravely apologizes for telling the God what his omniscience must know so perfectly already:

Εὐ δε γε χρὴ καὶ παρ σοφὸν ἀντιφερέσαι,
Εἴρω.

7 ΑΛΛ' εἰς δαφνῶδη γυναικα βησομαι ταδε.
EURIPID. Ion v. 76.

Since He, who lights the path of years—
Even from the fount of morning's tears
To where his setting splendours burn
Upon the western sea-maids urn—
Doth not, in all his course, behold
Such eyes of fire, such hair of gold.
Tell her, he comes, in blissful pride,
His lip yet sparkling with the tide
That mantles in Olympian bowls,—
The nectar of eternal souls ! 30
For her, for her he quits the skies,
And to her kiss from nectar flies.
Oh, he would quit his star-thron'd height,
And leave the world to pine for light,
Might he but pass the hours of shade,
Beside his peerless Delphic maid,
She, more than earthly woman blest,
He, more than god on woman's breast !'

There is a cave beneath the steep,¹
Where living rills of crystal weep 40
O'er herbage of the loveliest hue
That ever spring begemm'd with dew :
There oft the greensward's glossy tint
Is brighten'd by the recent print
Of many a faun and naiad's feet,—
Scarce touching earth, their step so fleet,—
That there, by moonlight's ray, had trod,
In light dance, o'er the verdant sod.
'There, there,' the god, impassion'd,
said,
'Soon as the twilight tinge is fled, 50
And the dim orb of lunar souls'²
Along its shadowy pathway rolls—
There shall we meet,—and not ev'n He,
The God who reigns immortally,
Where Babel's turrets paint their pride
Upon th' Euphrates' shining tide³,—
Not ev'n when to his midnight loves
In mystic majesty he moves,
Lighted by many an odorous fire,
And hymn'd by all Chaldaea's choir,—
E'er yet, o'er mortal brow, let shine 61
Such effluence of Love Divine,
As shall to-night, blest maid, o'er thine.'

¹ The Corycian Cave, which Pausanias mentions. The inhabitants of Parnassus held it sacred to the Corycian nymphs, who were children of the river Phistius.

² See a preceding note, p. 25, n. 2.

³ The temple of Jupiter Belus, at Babylon : in one of whose towers there was a large chapel

Happy the maid, whom heaven allows
To break for heaven her virgin vows !
Happy the maid !—her robe of shame
Is whiten'd by a heavenly flame,
Whose glory, with a ling'ring trace,
Shines through and deifies her race !

FRAGMENT

PITY me, love ! I'll pity thee,
If thou indeed has felt like me.
All, all my bosom's peace is o'er !
At night, which was my hour of calm,
When, from the page of classic lore,
From the pure fount of ancient lay
My soul has drawn the placid balm,
Which charm'd its every grief away,
Ah ! there I find that balm no more.
Those spells, which make us oft forget
The fleeting troubles of the day,
In deeper sorrows only whet
The stings they cannot tear away
When to my pillow rack'd I fly,
With wearied sense and wakeful eye :
While my brain maddens, where, oh,
where
Is that serene consoling pray'r,
Which once has harbinger'd my rest,
When the still soothing voice of Heaven
Hath seem'd to whisper in my breast,
'Sleep on, thy errors are forgiven !'
No, though I still in semblance pray,
My thoughts are wand'ring far away
And ev'n the name of Deity
Is murmur'd out in sighs for thee.

A NIGHT THOUGHT

How oft a cloud, with envious veil,
Obscures yon bashful light,
Which seems so modestly to steal
Along the waste of night !
'Tis thus the world's obtrusive wrongs
Obscure with malice keen
Some timid heart, which only longs
To live and die unseen.

set apart for these celestial assignments. 'No man is allowed to sleep here,' says Herodotus ; 'but the apartment is appropriated to a female, whom, if we believe the Chaldean priests, the deity selects from the women of the country, as his favourite.' Lib. i. cap. 181.

THE KISS

Grow to my lip, thou sacred kiss,
On which my soul's beloved swore
That there should come a time of bliss,
When she would mock my hopes no more.

And fancy shall thy glow renew,
In sighs at morn, and dreams at night,
And none shall steal thy holy dew
Till thou'rt absolv'd by rapture's rite.
Sweet hours that are to make me blest,
Fly, swift as breezes, to the goal,
And let my love, my more than soul
Come blushing to this ardent breast.
Then, while in every glance I drink
The rich o'erflowings of her mind,
Oh! let her all enamour'd sink
In sweet abandonment resign'd,
Blushing for all our struggles past,
And murmuring, 'I am thine at last!'

SONG

THINK on that look whose melting ray
For one sweet moment mix'd with mine,

And for that moment seem'd to say,
'I dare not, or I would be thine!'

Think on thy ev'ry smile and glance,
On all thou hast to charm and move;
And then forgive my bosom's trance,
Nor tell me it is sin to love.

Oh, not to love thee were the sin;
For sure, if Fate's decrees be done,
Thou, thou art destin'd still to win,
As I am destin'd to be won!

THE CATALOGUE

'Come, tell me,' says Rosa, as kissing and kist,
One day she reclin'd on my breast;
'Come, tell me the number, repeat me
the list
Of the nymphs you have lov'd and carest.'—

Oh Rosa! 'twas only my fancy that roved,
My heart at the moment was free;
But I'll tell thee, my girl, how many I've loved,

And the number shall finish with thee.

My tutor was Kitty; in infancy wild
She taught me the way to be blest; so
She taught me to love her, I lov'd like a child,

But Kitty could fancy the rest.

This lesson of dear and enrapturing lore

I have never forgot, I allow:

I have had it by rote very often before,

But never by heart until now.

Pretty Martha was next, and my soul
was all flame,

But my head was so full of romance

That I fancied her into some chivalry
dame,

And I was her knight of the lance. so

But Martha was not of this fanciful
school,

And she laugh'd at her poor little knight;

While I thought her a goddess, she thought me a fool,

And I'll swear she was most in the right.

My soul was now calm, till, by Cloris's
looks,

Again I was tempted to rove;

But Cloris, I found, was so learned in books

That she gave me more logic than love.

So I left this young Sappho, and hasten'd to fly

To those sweeter logicians in bliss, so

Who argue the point with a soul-telling
eye,

And convince us at once with a kiss.

Oh! Susan was then all the world unto me,
But Susan was piously given;

And the worst of it was, we could never agree

On the road that was shortest to
Heaven.

'Oh, Susan!' I've said, in the moments of mirth,

'What's devotion to thee or to me?

I devoutly believe there's a heaven on
earth,

And believe that that heaven's in thee!'

IMITATION OF CATULLUS

TO HIMSELF

Miser Catulle, desinas ineptire, &c.

CEASE the sighing fool to play ;
Cease to trifle life away ;
Nor vainly think those joys thine own,
Which all, alas, have falsely flown.
What hours, Catullus, once were thine,
How fairly seem'd thy day to shine,
When lightly thou didst fly to meet
The girl whose smile was then so sweet—
The girl thou lov'dst with fonder pain
Than e'er thy heart can feel again.

Ye met—your souls seem'd all in one,
Like tapers that commingling shone ;
Thy heart was warm enough for both,
And hers, in truth, was nothing loath.

Such were the hours that once were
thine ;

But, ah ! those hours no longer shine.
For now the nymph delights no more
In what she lov'd so much before ;
And all Catullus now can do,
Is to be proud and frigid too ;
Nor follow where the wanton flies,
Nor sue the bliss that she denies.
False maid ! he bids farewell to thee,
To love, and all love's misery ;
The heyday of his heart is o'er,
Nor will he court one favour more.

Fly, perjur'd girl !—but whither fly ?
Who now will praise thy cheek and eye ?
Who now will drink the syren tone,
Which tells him thou art all his own ?
Oh, none :—and he who lov'd before
Can never, never love thee more.

'Neither do I condemn thee ; go, and sin no more !' St. John, chap. viii.

OH woman, if through sinful wile
Thy soul hath stray'd from honour's track,

'Tis mercy only can beguile,
By gentle ways, the wand'rer back.

The stain that on thy virtue lies,
Wash'd by those tears, not long will
stay ;

As clouds that sully morning skies
May all be wept in show'rs away.

Go, go, be innocent,—and live ;
The tongues of men may wound thee
sore ;
But Heav'n in pity can forgive,
And bid thee 'go, and sin no more !'

NONSENSE

Good reader ! if you e'er have seen,
When Phoebus hastens to his pillow,
The mermaids, with their tresses green,
Dancing upon the western billow :
If you have seen, at twilight dim,
When the lone spirit's vesper hymn
Floats wild along the winding shore,
If you have seen, through mist of eve,
The fairy train their ringlets weave,
Glancing along the spangled green :—
If you have seen all this, and more,
God bless me, what a deal you've seen !

EPIGRAM,

To naughty man, for I abhor it.'
She will not give a kiss, 'tis true ;
She'll take one though, and thank you for it.

TO . . .

Moria pur quando vuol, non è bisogna mutar
ni faccia ni voce per esser un Angelo.¹

DIE when you will, you need not wear
At Heaven's Court a form more fair
Than Beauty here on earth has given ;
Keep but the lovely looks we see—
The voice we hear—and you will be
An angel ready-made for Heaven !

Cherbury to the beautiful nun at Murano.—

TO ROSA

A far conserva, e cumulo d'amanti.
Past. Fid.

AND are you then a thing of art,
Seducing all, and loving none ;
And have I strove to gain a heart
Which every coxcomb thinks his own?

Tell me at once if this be true,
And I will calm my jealous breast ;
Will learn to join the dangling crew,
And share your simpers with the rest.

But if your heart be not so free,—
Oh ! if another share that heart,
Tell not the hateful tale to me,
But mingle mercy with your art.
I'd rather think you 'false as hell',
Than find you to be all divine,—
Than know that heart could love so well,
Yet know that heart would not be mine !

TO PHILLIS

PHILLIS, you little rosy rake,
That heart of yours I long to rifle :
Come, give it me, and do not make
So much ado about a trifle !

TO A LADY,

ON HER SINGING

THY song has taught my heart to feel
Those soothing thoughts of heav'nly
love,

Which o'er the sainted spirits steal
When list'ning to the spheres above !

When, tir'd of life and misery,
I wish to sigh my latest breath,
Oh, Emma ! I will fly to thee,
And thou shalt sing me into death.

And if along thy lip and cheek
That smile of heav'nly softness play,
Which,—ah ! forgive a mind that's weak,—
So oft has stol'n my mind away ;

Thou'lt seem an angel of the sky,
That comes to charm me into bliss :
I'll gaze and die—Who would not die,
If death were half so sweet as this ?

SONG

ON THE BIRTHDAY OF MRS. —

WRITTEN IN IRELAND, 1799

OF all my happiest hours of joy,
And even I have had my measure,
When hearts were full, and ev'ry eye
Hath kindled with the light of pleasure,
An hour like this I ne'er was given,
So full of friendship's purest blisses ;
Young Love himself looks down from
heaven,

To smile on such a day as this.
Then come, my friends, this hour improve,

Let's feel as if we ne'er could
sever ;

And may the birth of her we love
Be thus with joy remember'd ever !

Oh ! banish ev'ry thought to-night,
Which could disturb our soul's communion ;

Abandon'd thus to dear delight,
We'll ev'n for once forget the Union !
On that let statesmen try their pow'rs,
And tremble o'er the rights they'd die
for ;

The union of the soul be ours,
And ev'ry union else we sigh for.
Then come, my friends, &c.

In ev'ry eye around I mark
The feelings of the heart o'erflowing ;
From ev'ry soul I catch the spark
Of sympathy, in friendship glowing.
Oh ! could such moments ever fly ;
Oh ! that we ne'er were doom'd to lose 'em ;
And all as bright as Charlotte's eye,
And all as pure as Charlotte's bosom.
Then come, my friends, &c.

For me, whate'er my span of years,
Whatever sun may light my roving ;
Whether I waste my life in tears,
Or live, as now, for mirth and loving ;
This day shall come with aspect kind,
Wherever fate may cast your rover ;
He'll think of those he left behind,
And drink a health to bliss that's over !
Then come, my friends, &c.

SONG ¹

MARY, I believ'd thee true,
 And I was blest in thus believing ;
 But now I mourn that e'er I knew
 A girl so fair and so deceiving.
 Fare thee well.

Few have ever lov'd like me,—
 Yes, I have lov'd thee too sincerely !
 And few have e'er deceiv'd like thee,—
 Alas ! deceiv'd me too severely.

Fare thee well !—yet think awhile
 On one whose bosom bleeds to doubt
 thee ;
 Who now would rather trust that smile,
 And die with thee than live without
 thee.

Fare thee well ! I'll think of thee,
 Thou leav'st me many a bitter token ;
 For see, distracting woman, see,
 My peace is gone, my heart is broken !
 Fare thee well !

MORALITY

A FAMILIAR EPISTLE

ADDRESSED TO J. AT-NS-N, ESQ. M.R.I.A.

THOUGH long at school and college dosing,
 O'er books of verse and books of prosing,
 And copying from their moral pages
 Fine recipes for making sages ;
 Though long with those divines at school,
 Who think to make us good by rule ;
 Who, in methodic forms advancing,
 Teaching morality like dancing,
 Tell us, for Heaven or money's sake, ⁹
 What steps we are through life to take :
 Though thus, my friend, so long employ'd,
 With so much midnight oil destroy'd,
 I must confess, my searches past,
 I've only learn'd to doubt at last.
 I find the doctors and the sages
 Have differ'd in all climes and ages,
 And two in fifty scarce agree
 On what is pure morality.
 'Tis like the rainbow's shifting zone,
 And every vision makes its own. ²⁰

¹ These words were written to the pathetic
 Scotch air 'Galla Water.'

The doctors of the Porch advise,
 As modes of being great and wise,
 That we should cease to own or know
 The luxuries that from feeling flow :—
 'Reason alone must claim direction,
 And Apathy's the soul's perfection.
 Like a dull lake the heart must lie ;
 Nor passion's gale nor pleasure's sigh,
 Though Heav'n the breeze, the breath,
 supplied,
 Must curl the wave or swell the tide !' ³⁰

Such was the rigid Zeno's plan
 To form his philosophic man ;
 Such were the modes he taught mankind
 To weed the garden of the mind ;
 They tore from thence some weeds, 'tis
 true,
 But all the flow'rs were ravag'd too !

Now listen to the wily strains,
 Which, on Cyrené's sandy plains,
 When Pleasure, nymph with loosen'd
 zone,
 Usurp'd the philosophic throne,— ⁴⁰
 Hear what the courtly sage's ² tongue
 To his surrounding pupils sung :—
 'Pleasure's the only noble end
 To which all human pow'rs should tend,
 And Virtue gives her heav'nly lore,
 But to make Pleasure please us more.
 Wisdom and she were both design'd
 To make the senses more refin'd,
 That man might revel, free from cloying,
 Then most a sage when most enjoying !'

Is this morality ?—Oh, no ! ⁵¹
 Ev'n I a wiser path could show.
 The flow'r within this vase confin'd,
 The pure, the unfading flow'r of mind,
 Must not throw all its sweets away
 Upon a mortal mould of clay :
 No, no,—its richest breath should rise
 In virtue's incense to the skies.

But thus it is, all sects we see
 Have watchwords of morality : ⁶⁰
 Some cry out Venus, others Jove ;
 Here 'tis Religion, there 'tis Love.
 But while they thus so widely wander,
 While mystics dream, and doctors
 ponder ;
 And some, in dialectics firm,
 Seek virtue in a middle term ;

² Aristippus.

While thus they strive, in Heaven's defiance,
To chain morality with science;
The plain good man, whose actions teach
More virtue than a sect can preach, 70
Pursues his course, unsagely blest,
His tutor whisp'ring in his breast;
Nor could he act a purer part,
Though he had Tully all by heart.
And when he drops the tear on woe,
He little knows or cares to know
That Epictetus blam'd that tear,
By Heaven approv'd, to virtue dear!

Oh! when I've seen the morning
beam
Floating within the dimpled stream; 80
While Nature, wak'ning from the night,
Has just put on her robes of light,
Have I, with cold optician's gaze,
Explor'd the doctrine of those rays?
No, pedants, I have left to you
Nicely to sep'rate hue from hue.
Go, give that moment up to art,
When Heaven and nature claim the
heart;
And, dull to all their best attraction,
Go—measure angles of refraction. 90
While I, in feeling's sweet romance,
Look on each daybeam as a glance
From the great eye of Him above,
Wak'ning his world with looks of love!

THE TELL-TALE LYRE

I've heard, there was in ancient days
A Lyre of most melodious spell;
'Twas heav'n to hear its fairy lays,
If half be true that legends tell.
'Twas play'd on by the gentlest sighs,
And to their breath it breath'd again
In such entrancing melodies
As ear had never drunk till then!
Not harmony's serenest touch
So stilly could the notes prolong; 10
They were not heavenly song so much
As they were dreams of heavenly song!
If sad the heart, whose murmur'ing air
Laid the chords in languor stole,
The numbers it awaken'd there
Were eloquence from pity's soul.

Or if the sigh, serene and light,
Was but the breath of fancied woes,
The string, that felt its airy flight,
Soon whisp'rd it to kind repose. 20

And when young lovers talk'd alone,
If, mid their bliss that Lyre was near,
It made their accents all its own,
And sent forth notes that Heaven
might hear.

There was a nymph, who long had lov'd,
But dar'd not tell the world how well;
The shades, where she at evening rov'd,
Alone could know, alone could tell.

'Twas there, at twilight time, she stole,
When the first star announc'd the
night,— 30
With him who claim'd her inmost soul,
To wander by that soothing light.

It chanc'd that, in the fairy bower
Where blest they woo'd each other's
smile,
This Lyre, of strange and magic power,
Hung whisp'ring o'er their heads the while.

And as, with eyes commingling fire,
They listen'd to each other's vow,
The youth full oft would make the Lyre
A pillow for the maiden's brow: 40

And, while the melting words she
breath'd
Were by its echoes wafted round,
Her locks had with the cords so wreath'd,
One knew not which gave forth the sound.

Alas, their hearts but little thought,
While thus they talk'd the hours
away,
That every sound the Lyre was taught
Would linger long, and long betray.

So mingled with its tuneful soul
Were all their tender murmurs grown,
That other sighs unanswer'd stole, 51
Nor words it breath'd but theirs alone.

Unhappy nymph! thy name was sung
To every breeze that wander'd by;
The secrets of thy gentle tongue
Were breath'd in song to earth and sky.

The fatal Lyre, by Envy's hand
Hung high amid the whisp'ring
groves,
To every gale by which 'twas fann'd,
Proclaim'd the myst'ry of your loves.
Nor long thus rudely was thy name 61
To earth's derisive echoes given;
Some pitying spirit downward came,
And took the Lyre and thee to heaven.
There, freed from earth's unholy wrongs,
Both happy in Love's home shall be;
Thou, uttering nought but seraph songs,
And that sweet Lyre still echoing
thee!

PEACE AND GLORY

WRITTEN ON THE APPROACH OF WAR

WHERE is now the smile, that lighten'd
Every hero's couch of rest?
Where is now the hope, that brighten'd
Honour's eye and Pity's breast?
Have we lost the wreath we braided
For our weary warrior men?
Is the faithless olive faded?
Must the bay be pluck'd again?
Passing hour of sunny weather
Lovely, in your light awhile,
Peace and Glory, wed together,
Wander'd through our blessed isle.
And the eyes of Peace would glisten,
Dewy as a morning sun,
When the timid maid would listen
To the deeds her chief had done.
Is their hour of dalliance over?
Must the maiden's trembling feet
Waft her from her warlike lover
To the desert's still retreat?
Fare you well! with sighs we banish
Nymph so fair and guests so bright;
Yet the smile, with which you vanish,
Leaves behind a soothing light;—
Soothing light, that long shall sparkle
O'er your warrior's sanguin'd way,
Through the field where horrors darkle,
Shedding hope's consoling ray.
Long the smile his heart will cherish,
To its absent idol true;
While around him myriads perish,
Glory still will sigh for you!

SONG

TAKE back the sigh, thy lips of art
In passion's moment breath'd to me
Yet, no—it must not, will not part,
'Tis now the life-breath of my heart,
And has become too pure for thee.
Take back the kiss, that faithless sigh
With all the warmth of truth impress;
Yet, no—the fatal kiss may lie,
Upon thy lip its sweets would die,
Or bloom to make a rival blest.
Take back the vows that, night and day,
My heart receiv'd, I thought, from
thine;
Yet, no—allow them still to stay,
They might some other heart betray,
As sweetly as they've ruin'd mine.

LOVE AND REASON

'Quand l'homme commence à raisonner, il
cesse de sentir.' J. J. ROUSSEAU.¹

'Twas in the summer time so sweet,
When hearts and flowers are both in season,
That—who, of all the world, should
meet,
One early dawn, but Love and Reason!
Love told his dream of yesternight,
While Reason talk'd about the weather;
The morn, in sooth, was fair and bright,
And on they took their way together.
The boy in many a gambol flew,
While Reason, like a Juno, stalk'd, 10
And from her portly figure threw
A lengthen'd shadow, as she walk'd.
No wonder Love, as on they pass'd,
Should find that sunny morning chill,
For still the shadow Reason cast
Fell o'er the boy, and cool'd him still.
In vain he tried his wings to warm,
Or find a pathway not so dim,
For still the maid's gigantic form 19
Would stalk between the sun and him.

¹ Quoted somewhere in St. Pierre's Etudes de la Nature.

'This must not be,' said little Love—
'The sun was made for more than
you.'

So, turning through a myrtle grove,
He bid the portly nymph adieu.

Now gaily roves the laughing boy
O'er many a mead, by many a stream;
In every breeze inhaling joy,
And drinking bliss in every beam.

From all the gardens, all the bowers,
He cull'd the many sweets they shaded, 30
And ate the fruits and smell'd the
flowers,
Till taste was gone and odour faded.

But now the sun, in pomp of noon,
Look'd blazing o'er the sultry plains;
Alas! the boy grew languid soon,
And fever thrill'd through all his veins.

The dew forsook his baby brow,
No more with healthy bloom he smil'd—

Oh! where was tranquil Reason now,
To cast her shadow o'er the child?

Beneath a green and aged palm, 41
His foot at length for shelter turning,
He saw the nymph reclining calm,
With brow as cool as his was burning.

'Oh! take me to that bosom cold,'
In murmurs at her feet he said,
And Reason op'd her garment's fold,
And flung it round his fever'd head.

He felt her bosom's icy touch,
And soon it lull'd his pulse to rest; 50
For, ah! the chill was quite too much.
And Love expir'd on Reason's breast!

NAY, do not weep, my Fanny dear;
While in these arms you lie,
This world hath not a wish, a fear,
That ought to cost that eye a tear,
That heart, one single sigh.

The world!—ah, Fanny, Love must shun
The paths where many rove;
One bosom to recline upon,
One heart to be his only-one,
Are quite enough for Love.

What can we wish, that is not here
Between your arms and mine?
Is there, on earth, a space so dear
As that within the happy sphere
Two loving arms entwine?

For me, there's not a look of jet
Adown your temples curl'd,
Within whose glossy, tangling net,
My soul doth not, at once, forget
All, all this worthless world.

'Tis in those eyes, so full of love,
My only worlds I see;
Let but their orbs in sunshine move,
And earth below and skies above,
May frown or smile for me.

ASPASIA

'Twas in the fair Aspasia's bower,
That Love and Learning, many an hour,
In dalliance met; and Learning smil'd
With pleasure on the playful child,
Who often stole, to find a nest
Within the folds of Learning's vest.

There, as the list'ning statesman hung
In transport on Aspasia's tongue,
The destinies of Athens took
Their colour from Aspasia's look.
Oh happy time, when laws of state,
When all that rul'd the country's fate,
Its glory, quiet, or alarms,
Was plann'd between two snow-white arms!

Blest times! they could not always last—
And yet, ev'n now, they are not past.
Though we have lost the giant mould,
In which their men were cast of old,
Woman, dear woman, still the same,
While beauty breathes through soul or
frame,
While man possesses heart or eyes,
Woman's bright empire never dies!

No, Fanny, love, they ne'er shall
say
That beauty's charm hath pass'd away;
Give but the universe a soul
Attun'd to woman's soft control,
And Fanny hath the charm, the skill,
To wield a universe at will.

THE GRECIAN GIRL'S DREAM OF THE BLESSED ISLANDS¹

TO HER LOVER

— ἦχι τε καλός

Πυθαγόρης, ὅσσοι τε χορον στήριξαν ἔρωτος.

Ἀπολλων περὶ Πλάτωνος.

Oracul. Metric. a Joan. Opsop. collecta.

Was it the moon, or was it morning's ray,
That call'd thee, dearest, from these arms away?
Scarce had'st thou left me, when a dream of night
Came o'er my spirit so distinct and bright,
That, while I yet can vividly recall
Its witching wonders, thou shalt hear them all.
Methought I saw, upon the lunar beam
Two winged boys, such as thy muse might dream,
Descending from above, at that still hour,
And gliding, with smooth step, into my bower.
Fair as the beauteous spirits that, all day,
In Amatha's warm founts imprison'd stay,²
But rise at midnight, from th' enchanted rill,
To cool their plumes upon some moonlight hill.

10

At once I knew their mission;—'twas to bear
My spirit upward, through the paths of air,
To that elysian realm, from whence stray beams
So oft, in sleep, had visited my dreams.
Swift at their touch dissolv'd the ties, that clung
All earthly round me, and aloft I sprung;
While, heav'nward guides, the little genii flew
Thro' paths of light, refresh'd by heaven's own dew,
And fann'd by airs still fragrant with the breath
Of cloudless climes and worlds that know not death.

20

Thou know'st, that, far beyond our nether sky,
And shown but dimly to man's erring eye,
A mighty ocean of blue ether rolls,³
Gemm'd with bright islands, where the chosen souls,
Who've pass'd in lore and love their earthly hours,
Repose for ever in unfading bowers.
That very moon, whose solitary light
So often guides thee to my bower at night,
Is no chill planet, but an isle of love,
Floating in splendour through those seas above,

30

¹ It was imagined by some of the ancients that there is an ethereal ocean above us, and that the sun and moon are two floating, luminous islands, in which the spirits of the blest reside. Accordingly we find that the word Ωκεανός was sometimes synonymous with αἴηρ, and death was not unfrequently called Ωκεανόιο πορὸς, or 'the passage of the ocean'.

² Eunapius, in his life of Iamblichus, tells us of two beautiful little spirits or loves, which Iamblichus raised by enchantment from the warm springs at Gadara; 'dicens astantibus says the author of the Dii Fati- dici, p. 160) illos esse loci Genios:' which words, however, are not in Eunapius.

I find from Cellarius, that Amatha, in the neighbourhood of Gadara, was also celebrated for its warm springs, and I have preferred it as a more poetical name than Gadara. Cellarius quotes Hieronymus. 'Est et alia villa in vicinia Gadarae nomine Amatha, ubi calidæ aquæ erumpunt,' Geograph. Antiq. lib. iii. cap. 13.

³ This belief of an ocean in the heavens, or 'waters above the firmament,' was one of the many physical errors in which the early fathers bewildered themselves.

And peopled with bright forms, ærial grown,
 Nor knowing aught of earth but love alone.
 Thither, I thought, we wing'd our airy way:—
 Mild o'er its valleys stream'd a silvery day,
 While, all around, on lily beds of rest,
 Reclin'd the spirits of the immortal Blest¹. 40
 Oh! there I met those few congenial maids,
 Whom love hath warm'd, in philosophic shades;
 There still Leontium,² on her sage's breast,
 Found lore and love, was tutor'd and carest;
 And there the clasp of Pythia's³ gentle arms
 Repaid the zeal which deified her charms.
 The Attic Master⁴, in Aspasia's eyes,
 Forgot the yoke of less endearing ties,
 While fair Theano⁵, innocently fair,
 Wreath'd playfully her Samian's flowing hair⁶, 50
 Whose soul now fix'd, its transmigrations past,
 Found in those arms a resting-place, at last;
 And smiling own'd, whate'er his dreamy thought
 In mystic numbers long had vainly sought,
 The One that's form'd of Two whom love hath bound,
 Is the best number gods or men e'er found.

But think, my Theon, with what joy I thrill'd,
 When near a fount, which through the valley rill'd
 My fancy's eye beheld a form recline,
 Of lunar race, but so resembling thine 60
 That, oh! 'twas but fidelity in me,
 To fly, to clasp, and worship it for thee.
 No aid of words the unbodied soul requires,
 To waft a wish or embassy desires;
 But by a power, to spirits only given,
 A deep, mute impulse, only felt in heaven,
 Swifter than meteor shaft through summer skies,
 From soul to soul the glanc'd idea flies.

Oh, my beloved, how divinely sweet
 Is the pure joy, when kindred spirits meet! 70
 Like him, the river-god⁷, whose waters flow,
 With love their only light, through caves below,

¹ There were various opinions among the ancients with respect to their lunar establishment; some made it an elysium, and others a purgatory; while some supposed it to be a kind of entrepôt between heaven and earth, where souls which had left their bodies, and those that were on their way to join them, were deposited in the valley of Hecate, and remained till further orders. Τοις περι σελήνην αερί λεγειν αυτας κατοικειν, και απ' αυτης κατα χωρειν εις την περιγειον γενεσιν.—Stob. lib. i. Eclog. Physic.

² The pupil and mistress of Epicurus.

³ Pythia was a woman whom Aristotle loved, and to whom after her death he paid divine honours, solemnizing her memory by the same sacrifices which the Athenians offered to the Goddess Ceres.

⁴ Socrates, who used to console himself in the society of Aspasia for those 'less endearing ties' which he found at home with Xantippe.

⁵ There are some sensible letters extant under the name of this fair Pythagorean. They are addressed to her female friends upon the education of children, the treatment of servants, &c.

⁶ Pythagoras was remarkable for fine hair.

⁷ The river Alpheus, which flowed by Pisa or Olympia, and into which it was customary to throw offerings of different kinds, during the celebration of the Olympic games. In the pretty romance of Chtophon and Leucippe, the river is supposed to carry these offerings as bridal gifts to the fountain Arethusa. Και επι την Αρεθυσαν ουτω τον Αλφειον νυμφοστολει, όταν ον η των ολυμπιων ιορηγ, κ. τ. λ. Lib. i.

Wafting in triumph all the flowery braids,
And festal rings, with which Olympic maids
Have deck'd his current, as an offering meet
To lay at Arethusa's shining feet.
Think, when he meets at last his fountain-bride,
What perfect love must thrill the blended tide!
Each lost in each, till, mingling into one,
Their lot the same for shadow or for sun,
A type of true love, to the deep they run.
'Twas thus—

80

But, Theon, 'tis an endless theme,
And thou grow'st weary of my half-told dream.
Oh would, my love, we were together now,
And I would woo sweet patience to thy brow,
And make thee smile at all the magic tales
Of starlight bowers and planetary vales,
Which my fond soul, inspir'd by thee and love,
In slumber's loom hath fancifully wove.
But no; no more—soon as to-morrow's ray
O'er soft Illissus shall have died away,
I'll come, and, while love's planet in the west
Shines o'er our meeting, tell thee all the rest.

TO CLOE

IMITATED FROM MARTIAL

I COULD resign that eye of blue
Howe'er its splendour used to thrill
me;
And ev'n that cheek of roseate hue,—
To lose it, Cloe, scarce would kill me.
That snowy neck I ne'er should miss,
However much I've rav'd about it;
And sweetly as that lip can kiss,
I think I could exist without it.
In short, so well I've learn'd to fast,
That, sooth my love, I know not whether
I might not bring myself at last,
To—do without you altogether.

THE WREATH AND THE CHAIN

I BRING thee, love, a golden chain,
I bring thee too a flowery wreath;
The gold shall never wear a stain,
The flow'rets long shall sweetly
breathe.
Come, tell me which the tie shall be,
To bind thy gentle heart to me.

The chain is form'd of golden threads,
Bright as Minerva's yellow hair,
When the last beam of evening sheds
Its calm and sober lustre there. 10
The Wreath's of brightest myrtle wove,
With sun-lit drops of bliss among it,
And many a rose-leaf, cull'd by Love,
To heal his lip when bees have stung it.
Come, tell me which the tie shall be,
To bind thy gentle heart to me.

Yes, yes, I read that ready eye,
Which answers when the tongue is loath,
Thou lik'st the form of either tie,
And spread'st thy playful hands for both. 20
Ah!—if there were not something
wrong,
The world would see them blended oft;
The Chain would make the Wreath so strong!
The Wreath would make the Chain
so soft!
Then might the gold, the flow'rets be
Sweet fetters for my love and me.
But, Fanny, so unblest they twine,
That (Heaven alone can tell the reason)
When mingled thus they cease to shine,
Or shine but for a transient season. 30

Whether the Chain may press too much,
Or that the Wreath is slightly braided,
Let but the gold the flow'rets touch,
And all their bloom, their glow is faded!
Oh! better to be always free,
Than thus to bind my love to me.

THE timid girl now hung her head,
And, as she turn'd an upward glance,
I saw a doubt its twilight spread

Across her brow's divine expanse. 40
Just then, the garland's brightest rose
Gave one of its love-breathing sighs—
Oh! who can ask how Fanny chose,
That ever look'd in Fanny's eyes?
'The Wreath, my life, the Wreath shall be
The tie to bind my soul to thee.'

TO . . .

AND hast thou mark'd the pensive shade,
That many a time obscures my brow,
Midst all the joys, beloved maid,
Which thou canst give, and only thou?

Oh! 'tis not that I then forget
The bright looks that before me shine;
For never throbb'd a bosom yet
Could feel their witchery, like mine.

When bashful on my bosom hid,
And blushing to have felt so blest,
Thou dost but lift thy languid lid,
Again to close it on my breast;—
Yes,—these are minutes all thine own,
Thine own to give, and mine to feel;
Yet ev'n in them, my heart has known
The sigh to rise, the tear to steal.

For I have thought of former hours,
When he who first thy soul possess'd,
Like me awak'd its witching powers,
Like me was lov'd, like me was blest.

Upon his name thy murm'ring tongue
Perhaps hath all as sweetly dwelt;
Upon his words thine ear hath hung,
With transport all as purely felt.

For him—yet why the past recall,
To damp and wither present bliss?
Thou'rt now my own, heart, spirit, all,
And Heaven could grant no more than this!

Forgive me, dearest, oh! forgive;
I would be first, be sole to thee,
Thou shouldst have but begun to live,
The hour that gave thy heart to me.

Thy book of life till then effac'd,
Love should have kept that leaf alone
On which he first so brightly trac'd
That thou wert, soul and all, my own.

TO . . . 'S PICTURE

Go then, if she, whose shade thou art,
No more will let thee soothe my pain;
Yet, tell her, it has cost this heart
Some pangs, to give thee back again.

Tell her, the smile was not so dear,
With which she made thy semblance
mine,

As bitter is the burning tear,
With which I now the gift resign.

Yet go—and could she still restore,
As some exchange for taking thee,
The tranquil look which first I wore,
When her eyes found me calm and
free;

Could she give back the careless flow,
The spirit that my heart then knew—
Yet, no, 'tis vain—go, picture, go—
Smile at me once, and then—adieu!

FRAGMENT OF A MYTHOLOGICAL HYMN TO LOVE¹

BLEST infant of eternity!
Before the day-star learn'd to move,
In pomp of fire, along his grand career,
Glancing the beamy shafts of light

¹ Love and Psyche are here considered as the active and passive principles of creation, and the universe is supposed to have received its first harmonizing impulse from the nuptial sympathy between these two powers. A marriage is generally the first step in cosmogony. Timaeus held Form to be the father, and

Matter the mother of the World; Elion and Berouth, I think, are Sanchoniatho's first spiritual lovers, and Manco-capac and his wife introduced creation amongst the Peruvians. In short, Harlequin seems to have studied cosmogony, when he said 'tutto il mondo è fatto come la nostra famiglia.'

From his rich quiver to the farthest sphere,
 Thou wert alone, oh Love!
 Nestling beneath the wings of ancient Night,
 Whose horrors seem'd to smile in shadowing thee.

No form of beauty sooth'd thine eye,
 As through the dim expanse it wander'd wide;
 No kindred spirit caught thy sigh,
 As o'er the watery waste it ling'ring died.

Unfelt the pulse, unknown the power,
 That latent in his heart was sleeping,—
 Oh Sympathy! that lonely hour
 Saw Love himself thy absence weeping.

But look, what glory through the darkness beams!
 Celestial airs along the water glide:—
 What Spirit art thou, moving o'er the tide
 So beautiful? oh, not of earth,
 But, in that glowing hour, the birth
 Of the young Godhead's own creative dreams.
 'Tis she!

Psyche, the firstborn spirit of the air.
 To thee, oh Love, she turns,
 On thee her eyebeam burns:
 Blest hour, before all worlds ordain'd to be!
 They meet—
 The blooming god—the spirit fair
 Meet in communion sweet.
 Now, Sympathy, the hour is thine;
 All nature feels the thrill divine,
 The veil of Chaos is withdrawn,
 And their first kiss is great Creation's dawn!

TO HIS SERENE HIGHNESS
 THE DUKE OF MONTPENSIER, ON HIS PORTRAIT OF THE LADY ADELAIDE FORBES

Donington Park, 1802.

To catch the thought, by painting's spell,
 Howe'er remote, howe'er refin'd,
 And o'er the kindling canvas tell
 The silent story of the mind;

O'er nature's form to glance the eye,
 And fix, by mimic light and shade,
 Her morning tinges, ere they fly,
 Her evening blushes, ere they fade;—

Yes, these are Painting's proudest powers;
 The gift, by which her art divine
 Above all others proudly towers,—
 And these, oh Prince! are richly thine.

And yet, when Friendship sees thee
 trace,

In almost living truth exprest,
 This bright memorial of a face
 On which her eye delights to rest;

While o'er the lovely look serene,
 The smile of peace, the bloom of
 youth,

The cheek, that blushes to be seen,
 The eye that tells the bosom's truth;

While o'er each line, so brightly true,
 Our eyes with ling'ring pleasure rove,
 Blessing the touch whose various hue
 Thus brings to mind the form we love

We feel the magic of thy art,
 And own it with a zest, a zeal,
 A pleasure, nearer to the heart
 Than critic taste can ever feel.

THE FALL OF HEBE

A DITHYRAMBIC ODE

'Twas on a day
When the immortals at their banquet
lay;
The bowl
Sparkled with starry dew,
The weeping of those myriad urns of
light,
Within whose orbs, the almighty
Power,
At nature's dawning hour,
Stor'd the rich fluid of ethereal soul.¹
Around,
Soft odorous clouds, that upward wing their flight 10
From eastern isles
(Where they have bath'd them in the orient ray,
And with rich fragrance all their bosoms
fill'd),
In circles flew, and, melting as they flew,
A liquid daybreak o'er the board distill'd.

All, all was luxury!
All must be luxury, where Lyæus
smiles.
His looks divine
Were crown'd
With a bright meteor-braid, 20
Which, like an ever-springing wreath of vine,
Shot into brilliant leafy shapes,
And o'er his brow in lambent tendrils
play'd:
While mid the foliage hung,
Like lucid grapes,
A thousand clustering buds of light,
Cull'd from the gardens of the galaxy.
Upon his bosom Cytherea's head
Lay lovely, as when first the Syrens sung
Her beauty's dawn, 30

And all the curtains of the deep, un-
drawn,
Reveal'd her sleeping in its azure bed.
The captive deity
Hung lingering on her eyes and lip,
With looks of ecstasy.
Now, on his arm,
In blushes she repos'd,
And, while he gaz'd on each bright charm,
To shade his burning eyes her hand in dalliance stole.

And now she rais'd her rosy mouth to sip 40
The nectar'd wave
Lyæus gave,
And from her eyelids, half-way clos'd,
Sent forth a melting gleam,
Which fell, like sun-dew, in the
bowl:
While her bright hair, in mazy flow
Of gold descending
Adown her cheek's luxurious glow,
Hung o'er the goblet's side,
And was reflected in its crystal tide,
Like a bright crocus flower, 51
Whose sunny leaves, at evening
hour
With roses of Cyrene blending,²
Hang o'er the mirror of some silvery stream.

The Olympian cup
Shone in the hands
Of dimpled Hebe, as she wind'd her feet
Up
The empyreal mount,
To drain the soul-drops at their stellar fount; 60
And still
As the resplendent rill
Gush'd forth into the cup with mantling heat,
Her watchful care
Was still to cool its liquid fire

¹ This is a Platonic fancy. The philosopher supposes, in his Timæus, that, when the Deity had formed the soul of the world, he proceeded to the composition of other souls, in which process, says Plato, he made use of the same cup, though the ingredients he mingled were not quite so pure as for the former; and having refined the mixture with a little of his own essence, he distributed it among the stars, which served as reservoirs of the fluid.—Taur.

εἶπε καὶ πάλιν ἐπὶ τὸν προτέρων κρατῆρα. ἐν ᾗ τὴν τοῦ παντός ψυχὴν κεραυνὸς ἐμίσηγε, κ. τ. λ.

² We learn from Theophrastus that the roses of Cyrene were particularly fragrant.—Εὐοσμάτα τὰ δὲ τὰ ἐν Κυρήνῃ βοῶτα.

³ Heraclitus (Physicus) held the soul to be a spark of the stellar essence—'Scintilla stellaris essentiae'.—MACROBIUS, in Somn. Scip. lib. i. cap. 14.

With snow-white sprinklings of that feathery air
The children of the Pole respire,
In those enchanted lands,¹
Where life is all a spring, and north winds never blow.

But oh ! 70
Bright Hebe, what a tear,
And what a blush were thine,
When, as the breath of every Grace
Wafted thy feet along the studded sphere,
With a bright cup for Jove himself to drink,
Somestar, that shone beneath thy tread,
Raising its amorous head
To kiss those matchless feet,
Check'd thy career too fleet ;
And all heaven's host of eyes 80
Entranc'd, but fearful all,
Saw thee, sweet Hebe, prostrate fall
Upon the bright floor of the azure
skies ;

Where, mid its stars, thy beauty
lay,
As blossom, shaken from the spray
Of a spring thorn,
Lies mid the liquid sparkles of the morn.
Or, as in temples of the Paphian shade,
The worshippers of Beauty's queen behold
An image of their rosy idol, laid 90
Upon a diamond shrine.

The wanton wind,
Which had pursu'd the flying fair,
And sported mid the tresses
unconfin'd
Of her bright hair,
Now, as she fell,—oh wanton breeze !
Ruffled the robe, whose graceful flow
Hung o'er those limbs of unsunn'd snow,
Purely as the Eleusinian veil
Hangs o'er the Mysteries ! 100
The brow of Juno flush'd—
Love bless'd the breeze !
The Muses blush'd ;

¹ The country of the Hyperboreans. These people were supposed to be placed so far north that the north wind could not affect them ; they lived longer than any other mortals ; passed their whole time in music and dancing, &c. &c. But the most extravagant fiction related of them is that to which the two lines preceding allude. It was imagined that, in-

And every cheek was hid behind a lyre,
While every eye look'd laughing through the strings.

But the bright cup? the nectar'd draught
Which Jove himself was to have quaff'd?
Alas, alas, upturn'd it lay
By the fall'n Hebe's side ;
While, in slow lingering drops, th'
ethereal tide, 110
As conscious of its own rich essence,
ebb'd away.

Who was the Spirit that remember'd
Man,
In that blest hour,
And, with a wing of love,
Brush'd off the goblet's scatter'd
tears,
As, trembling, near the edge of heaven
they ran,
And sent them floating to our orb
below ?

Essence of immortality !
The shower 119
Fell glowing through the spheres ;
While all around new tints of bliss,
New odours and new light,
Enrich'd its radiant flow.
Now, with a liquid kiss,
It stole along the thrilling wire
Of Heaven's luminous Lyre,²
Stealing the soul of music in its flight :
And now, amid the breezes bland,
That whisper from the planets as they roll, 129

The bright libation, softly fann'd
By all their sighs, meandering stole.
They who, from Atlas' height,
Beheld this rosy flame Descending through the waste of
night,
Thought 'twas some planet, whose empyreal frame
Had kindled, as it rapidly resolv'd
Around its fervid axle, and dissolv'd
Into a flood so bright !

stead of our vulgar atmosphere, the Hyperboreans breathed nothing but feathers ! According to Herodotus and Pliny, this idea was suggested by the quantity of snow which was observed to fall in those regions.

² The constellation Lyra. The astrologers attribute great virtues to this sign in ascendent.

The youthful Day,
 Within his twilight bower, 140
 Lay sweetly sleeping
 On the flush'd bosom of a lotos-flower;¹
 When round him, in profusion
 weeping,
 Dropp'd the celestial shower,
 Steeping
 The rosy clouds, that curl'd
 About his infant head,
 Like myrrh upon the locks of Cupid
 shed.
 But, when the waking boy
 Wav'd his exhaling tresses through the sky, 150
 O morn of joy!—
 The tide divine,
 All glorious with the vermil dye
 It drank beneath his orient eye,
 Distill'd, in dews, upon the world,
 And every drop was wine, was heavenly
 WINE!

Blest be the sod, and blest the flower
 On which descended first that shower,
 All fresh from Jove's nectarous springs;—
 Oh far less sweet the flower, the sod,
 O'er which the Spirit of the Rainbow flings 161
 The magic mantle of her solar God!²

RINGS AND SEALS

Ἄσπερ σφραγίδες τὰ φίληματα.
 ACHILLES TATTUS, lib. ii.

'Go!' said the angry, weeping maid,
 'The charm is broken!—once betray'd,
 Never can this wrong'd heart rely
 On word or look, on oath or sigh.
 Take back the gifts, so fondly given,
 With promis'd faith and vows to heaven;

¹ The Egyptians represented the dawn of day by a young boy seated upon a lotos. Εἰς τὸν Διὶ γυναικὶς ἀρχὴν ἀνατολῆς παιδίου νεογνὸν γραφόντας ἐπὶ λωτῷ καθέζομενον.—Plutarch. παιδίου μετὰ χρόνῳ ἐμμετῆρ. See also his Treatise de Isid. et Osir. Observing that the lotos showed its head above water at sunrise, and sank again at his setting, they conceived the idea of consecrating this flower to Osiris, or the sun.

This symbol of a youth sitting upon a lotos is very frequent on the Abraxases, or Basilidian stones. See Montfaucon, tom. ii. planche 158, and the 'Supplement,' &c. tom. ii. lib. vi. chap. 5.

² The ancients esteemed those flowers and trees the sweetest upon which the rainbow had appeared to rest; and the wood they chiefly burned in sacrifices, was that which the smile

That little ring which, night and morn,
 With wedded truth my hand hath worn;
 That seal which oft, in moments blest,
 Thou hast upon my lips imprest,
 And sworn its sacred spring should be
 A fountain seal'd³ for only thee:
 Take, take them back, the gift and vow,
 All sullied, lost and hateful now!

I took the ring—the seal I took,
 While, oh, her every tear and look
 Were such as angels look and shed,
 When man is by the world misled.
 Gently I whisper'd, 'Fanny, dear!
 Not half thy lover's gifts are here:
 Say, where are all the kisses given,
 From morn to noon, from noon to even,
 Those signets of true love, worth more
 Than Solomon's own seal of yore,—
 Where are those gifts, so sweet, so many?
 Come, dearest,—give back all, if any.'

While thus I whisper'd, trembling too,
 Lest all the nymph had sworn was true,
 I saw a smile relenting rise
 'Mid the moist azure of her eyes,
 Like daylight o'er a sea of blue,
 While yet in mid-air hangs the dew.
 She let her cheek repose on mine,
 She let my arms around her twine;
 One kiss was half allowed, and then—
 The ring and seal were hers again.

TO MISS SUSAN B—CKF—D⁴

ON HER SINGING

I MORE than once have heard, at night,
 A song, like those thy lip hath given,
 And it was sung by shapes of light,
 Who look'd and breath'd, like thee, of
 heaven.

of Iris had consecrated. Plutarch. Sympos. lib. iv. cap. 2, where (as Vossius remarks) καίονσι, instead of καλῶνσι, is undoubtedly the genuine reading. See Vossius, for some curious particularities of the rainbow, De Origin. et Progress. Idolorum. lib. iii. cap. 13.

³ 'There are gardens, supposed to be those of King Solomon, in the neighbourhood of Bethlehem. The friars show a fountain which, they say, is the 'sealed fountain' to which the holy spouse in the Canticles is compared; and they pretend a tradition, that Solomon shut up these springs and put his signet upon the door, to keep them for his own drinking.'—Mauvrel's Travels. See also the notes to Mr. Good's Translation of the Song of Solomon.

⁴ The present Duchess of Hamilton.

But this was all a dream of sleep,
And I have said, when morning shone,
'Why should the night-witch, Fancy,
keep
These wonders for herself alone?'

I knew not then that fate had lent
Such tones to one of mortal birth;
I knew not then that Heaven had sent
A voice, a form like thine on earth.

And yet, in all that flowery maze
Through which my path of life has led,

When I have heard the sweetest lays
From lips of rosiest lustre shed;

When I have felt the warbled word
From Beauty's lip, in sweetness vying
With music's own melodious bird,
When on the rose's bosom lying;

Though form and song at once combin'd
Their loveliest bloom and softest thrill,
My heart hath sigh'd, my ear hath pin'd
For something lovelier, softer still:—

Oh, I have found it all, at last,
In thee, thou sweetest living lyre,
Through which the soul of song e'er
pass'd,
Or feeling breath'd its sacred fire.

All that I e'er, in wildest flight
Of fancy's dreams, could hear or see
Of music's sigh or beauty's light
Is realiz'd, at once, in thee!

IMPROMPTU,

ON LEAVING SOME FRIENDS

O dulces comitum valet coetus! CATULLUS.

No, never shall my soul forget
Ther friends I found so cordial-hearted;
Dear shall be the day we met,
And dear shall be the night we parted.

If fond regrets, however sweet,
Must with the lapse of time decay,
Yet still, when thus in mirth you meet,
Fill high to him that's far away!

Long be the light of memory found
Alive within your social glass;
Let that be still the magic round,
O'er which Oblivion dares not pass.

A WARNING

TO . . .

OH fair as heaven and chaste as light!
Did nature mould thee all so bright,
That thou shouldst e'er be brought to weep
O'er languid virtue's fatal sleep,
O'er shame extinguish'd, honour fled,
Peace lost, heart wither'd, feeling dead?

No, no! a star was born with thee,
Which sheds eternal purity.
Thou hast, within those sainted eyes,
So fair a transcript of the skies,
In lines of light such heavenly lore,
That man should read them and adore.
Yet have I known a gentle maid
Whose mind and form were both array'd
In nature's purest light, like thine;—
Who wore that clear, celestial sign,
Which seems to mark the brow that's fair
For destiny's peculiar care:
Whose bosom too, like Dian's own,
Was guarded by a sacred zone,
Where the bright gem of virtue shone;
Whose eyes had, in their light, a charm
Against all wrong, and guile, and harm.
Yet, hapless maid, in one sad hour,
These spells have lost their guardian
power;

The gem has been beguil'd away;
Her eyes have lost their chast'ning ray;
The modest pride, the guiltless shame,
The smiles that from reflection came,
All, all have fled, and left her mind
A faded monument behind;
The ruins of a once pure shrine,
No longer fit for guest divine.
Oh! 'twas a sight I wept to see—Heaven keep the lost one's fate from thee!

TO . . .

'Tis time, I feel, to leave thee now,
While yet my soul is something free;
While yet those dangerous eyes allow
One minute's thought to stray from
thee.

Oh! thou becom'st each moment dearer;
Every chance that brings me nigh thee,
Brings my ruin nearer, nearer,—
I am lost, unless I fly thee.

Nay, if thou dost not scorn and hate me,
Doom me not thus so soon to fall ;
Duties, fame, and hopes await me,—
But that eye would blast them all !

For, thou hast heart as false and cold
As ever yet allur'd or sway'd,
And couldst, without a sigh, behold
The ruin which thyself had made.

Yet,—could I think that, truly fond,
That eye but once would smile on me,
Ev'n as thou art, how far beyond Fame, duty, wealth, that smile would
be !

Oh ! but to win it, night and day,
Inglorious at thy feet reclin'd,
I'd sigh my dreams of fame away,
The world for thee forgot, resign'd.

But no, 'tis o'er, and—thus we part,
Never to meet again,—no, never.
False woman, what a mind and heart
Thy treach'ry has undone for ever !

WOMAN

AWAY, away—you're all the same,
A smiling, flutt'ring, jilting throng ;
And, wise too late, I burn with shame,
To think I've been your slave so long.

Slow to be won, and quick to rove,
From folly kind, from cunning loath,
Too cold for bliss, too weak for love,
Yet feigning all that's best in both ;

Still panting o'er a crowd to reign,—
More joy it gives to woman's breast
To make ten frigid coxcombs vain,
Than one true, manly lover blest.

Away, away—your smile's a curse—
Oh ! blot me from the race of men,
Kind pitying Heaven, by death or worse,
If e'er I love such things again.

TO . . .

Νοσσεῖ τα φίλτατα. EURIPIDES.

COME, take thy harp—'tis vain to muse
Upon the gathering ills we see ;
Oh ! take thy harp and let me lose
All thoughts of ill in hearing thee.

Sing to me, love !—though death were
near,
Thy song could make my soul forget—
Nay, nay, in pity, dry that tear,
All may be well, be happy yet.

Let me but see that snowy arm
Once more upon the dear harp lie,
And I will cease to dream of harm,
Will smile at fate, while thou art nigh.

Give me that strain of mournful touch,
We us'd to love long, long ago,
Before our hearts had known as much
As now, alas ! they bleed to know.

Sweet notes ! they tell of former peace,
Of all that look'd so smiling then,
Now vanish'd, lost—oh pray thee,
cease,
I cannot bear those sounds again.

Art thou, too, wretched ? yes, thou art ;
I see thy tears flow fast with mine—
Come, come to this devoted heart,
'Tis breaking, but it still is thine !

A VISION OF PHILOSOPHY

'Twas on the Red Sea coast, at morn, we met
The venerable man¹ ; a healthy bloom
Mingled its softness with the vigorous thought
That tower'd upon his brow ; and, when he spoke,
'Twas language sweeten'd into song—such holy sounds
As oft, they say, the wise and virtuous hear,

¹ In Plutarch's Essay on the Decline of the Oracles, Cleombrotus, one of the interlocutors, describes an extraordinary man whom he had met with, after long research, upon the banks of the Red Sea. Once in every year this supernatural personage appeared to mortals, and conversed with them ; the rest of his time he passed among the Genii and the Nymphs. Περι την ερυθραν θαλασσαν εἶρον, ἀνθρώποις ἀνα παντος ἀπαξ ἐντυγχανοντα, τάλλα δὲ συνταῖς νυμφαῖς, νομασί καὶ δαιμοσὶ, ὡς ἐφασκε. He spoke in a tone not far removed from singing, and whenever he opened his lips, a fragrance filled the place : φθεγγόμενον δὲ τὸν τόπον εὐωδία κατεῖχε, τοῦ στοματός ἡδίστον ἀποπνεύοντος. From him Cleombrotus learned the doctrine of a plurality of worlds.

Prelude to the harmony of heaven,
 When death is nigh¹; and still, as he unclos'd
 His sacred lips, an odour, all as bland
 As ocean-breezes gather from the flowers
 That blossom in elysium², breath'd around.
 With silent awe we listen'd, while he told
 Of the dark veil which many an age had hung
 O'er Nature's form, till, long explored by man,
 The mystic shroud grew thin and luminous,
 And glimpses of that heavenly form shone thro':—
 Of magic wonders, that were known and taught
 By him (or Cham or Zoroaster nam'd)
 Who mus'd amid the mighty cataclysm,
 O'er his rude tablets of primeval lore³;
 And gath'ring round him, in the sacred ar,
 The mighty secrets of that former globe,
 Let not the living star of science⁴ sink
 Beneath the waters, which ingulph'd a world!—
 Of visions, by Calliope reveal'd
 To him⁵, who trac'd upon his typic lyre
 The diapason of man's mingled frame,
 And the grand Doric heptachord of heaven.
 With all of pure, of wondrous and arcane,
 Which the grave sons of Mochus, many a night,
 Told to the young and bright-hair'd visitant
 Of Carmel's sacred mount⁶.—Then, in a flow
 Of calmer converse, he beguil'd us on Through many a maze of Garden and of Porch,
 Through many a system, where the scatter'd light
 Of heavenly truth lay, like a broken beam
 From the pure sun, which, though refracted all
 Into a thousand hues, is sunshine still⁷.

³ Cham, the son of Noah, is supposed to have taken with him into the ark the principal doctrines of magical, or rather of natural, science, which he had inscribed upon some very durable substances, in order that they might resist the ravages of the deluge, and transmit the secrets of antediluvian knowledge to his posterity. See the extracts made by Bayle, in his article, Cham. The identity of Cham and Zoroaster depends upon the authority of Berossus (or rather the impostor Annianus), and a few more such respectable testimonies. See Naudé's Apologie pour les Grands Hommes, &c., chap. viii, where he takes more trouble than is necessary in refuting this gratuitous supposition.

⁴ Chamum à posteris hujus artis admiratori-

⁵ Orpheus.—Paulinus, in his Hebdomades, cap. 2. lib. iii, has endeavoured to show, after the Platonists, that man is a diapason, or octave, made up of a diatesseron, which is his soul, and a diapente, which is his body.

⁷ Lactantius asserts that all the truths of Christianity may be found dispersed through the ancient philosophical sects, and that any one who would collect these scattered fragments of orthodoxy might form a code in no respect differing from that of the Christian. 'Si extitisset aliquis, qui veritatem sparsam per singulos per sectasque diffusam colligeret in unum, ac redigeret in corpus, is profecto non dissentiret a nobis.'—Inst. lib. vi. c. 7.

And bright through every change!—he spoke of Him,
 The lone¹, eternal One, who dwells above,
 And of the soul's untraceable descent
 From that high fount of spirit, through the grades
 Of intellectual being, till it mix
 With atoms vague, corruptible, and dark;
 Nor yet even then, though sunk in earthly dross,
 Corrupted all, nor its ethereal touch
 Quite lost, but tasting of the fountain still.
 As some bright river, which has roll'd along
 Through meads of flowery light and mines of gold,
 When pour'd at length into the dusky deep,
 Disdains to take at once its briny taint,
 But keeps unchanged awhile the lustrous tinge,
 Or balmy freshness, of the scenes it left².

And here the old man ceas'd—a winged train
 Of nymphs and genii bore him from our eyes.
 The fair illusion fled! and, as I wak'd,
 'Twas clear that my rapt soul had roam'd the while,
 To that bright realm of dreams, that spirit-world,
 Which mortals know by its long track of light
 O'er midnight's sky, and call the Galaxy³.

TO MRS. . . .

To see thee every day that came,
 And find thee still each day the same;
 In pleasure's smile, or sorrow's tear
 To me still ever kind and dear;—
 To meet thee early, leave thee late,
 Has been so long my bliss, my fate,
 That life, without this cheering ray,
 Which came, like sunshine, every day,
 And all my pain, my sorrow chas'd,
 Is now a lone and loveless waste.

Where are the chords she us'd to touch?

The airs, the songs she lov'd so much?
 Those songs are hush'd, those chords are still,

And so, perhaps, will every thrill
 Of feeling soon be lull'd to rest,
 Which late I wak'd in Anna's breast.
 Yet, no—the simple notes I play'd
 From memory's tablet soon may fade;
 The songs, which Anna lov'd to hear,
 May vanish from her heart and ear;

² This bold Platonic image I have taken from a passage in Father Bouchet's letter upon the Metempsychosis, inserted in Picart's Céram. Relig. tom. iv.

But friendship's voice shall ever find
 An echo in that gentle mind,
 Nor memory lose nor time impair
 The sympathies that tremble there.

TO LADY HEATHCOTE,
ON AN OLD RING FOUND AT TUNBRIDGE-WELLS

'Tunnebridge est à la même distance de Londres, que Fontainebleau l'est de Paris. Ce qu'il y a de beau et de galant dans l'un et dans l'autre sexe s'y rassemble au tems des eaux. La compagnie, &c. &c.

See Mémoires de Grammont, Second Part, chap. iii.

Tunbridge Wells.

WHEN Grammont grac'd these happy
 springs,
 And Tunbridge saw, upon her Pantiles,
 The merriest wight of all the kings
 That ever rul'd these gay, gallant isles;

Like us, by day, they rode, they walk'd,
 At eve, they did as we may do,
 And Grammont just like Spencer talk'd,
 And lovely Stewart smil'd like you.

³ According to Pythagoras, the people of Dreams are souls collected together in the Galaxy.—Δημος δε ονειρων, κατα Πυθαγοραν, αι ψυχαι ας συναγασθαι φησιν εις τον γαλαξιν.—Porphy. de Astro Nymph.

The only different trait is this,
That woman then, if man beset her,
Was rather given to saying 'yes,' 11
Because,—as yet, she knew no better.

Each night they held a coterie,
Where, every fear to slumber charm'd,
Lovers were all they ought to be,
And husbands not the least alarm'd.

Then call'd they up their school-day
pranks,
Nor thought it much their sense
beneath
To play at riddles, quips, and cranks,
And lords show'd wit, and ladies teeth. 20

As—'Why are husbands like the mint?'
Because, forsooth, a husband's duty
Is but to set the name and print
That give a currency to beauty.

'Why is a rose in nettles hid
Like a young widow, fresh and fair?'
Because 'tis sighing to be rid
Of weeds, that 'have no business
there!'

And thus they miss'd and thus they hit,
And now they struck and now they parried; 30

And some laid in of full grown wit,
While others of a pun miscarried.

'Twas one of those facetious nights
That Grammont gave this forfeit ring
For breaking grave conundrum-rites.
Or punning ill, or—some such thing:—

From whence it can be fairly trac'd,
Through many a branch and many a bough,

From twig to twig, until it grac'd
The snowy hand that wears it now. 40

All this I'll prove, and then, to you,
Oh Tunbridge! and your springs
ironical,

I swear by Heathcote's eye of blue
To dedicate the important chronicle.

¹ Mamurra, a dogmatic philosopher, who never doubted about any thing, except who was his father.—'Nulla de re unquam praeterquam de patre dubitavit.'—In Vit.

And Charles's loves in Heathcote live,
And Charles's bards revive in Rogers.

For ever be those fops abolish'd, 50
With heads as wooden as thy ware,
And, Heaven knows! not half so polish'd.

But still receive the young, the gay,
The few who know the rare delight
Of reading Grammont every day,
And acting Grammont every night.

THE DEVIL AMONG THE SCHOLARS

A FRAGMENT

Τι κακὸν ὁ γέλως;
CHRYSOST. Homil. in Epist. ad Hebraeos.

BUT, whither have these gentle ones,
These rosy nymphs and black-eyed nuns,
With all of Cupid's wild romancing,
Led my truant brains a dancing?
Instead of studying tomes scholastic,
Ecclesiastic, or monastic,
Off I fly, careering far
In chase of Pollys, prettier far
Than any of their namesakes are,—
The Polymaths and Polyhistor, 10
Polyglots and all their sisters.
So have I known a hopeful youth
Sit down in quest of lore and truth,
With tomes sufficient to confound him,
Like Tohu Bohu, heap'd around him,—
Mamurra¹ stuck to Theophrastus,
And Galen tumbling o'er Bombastus.²
When lo! while all that's learn'd and wise

Absorbs the boy, he lifts his eyes,
And through the window of his study 20
Beholds some damsel fair and ruddy,
With eyes, as brightly turn'd upon him as
The angel's³ were on Hieronymus.

Aureoli Theophrasti Paracelsi,' says Stadelius de circumforanei Literatorum vanitate.

³ The angel, who scolded St. Jerom for reading Cicero, as Gratian tells the story in his 'Concordantia discordantium Canonum,' and says, that for this reason bishops were not allowed to read the Classics: 'Episcopus Gentilium libros non legat.'—Distinct. 37.

Quick fly the folios, widely scatter'd,
 Old Homer's laurel'd brow is batter'd,
 And Sappho, headlong sent, flies just in
 The reverend eye of St. Augustin.
 Raptur'd he quits each dozing sage,
 Oh woman, for thy lovelier page :
 Sweet book !—unlike the books of art,—
 Whose errors are thy fairest part ; 31
 In whom the dear errata column
 Is the best page in all the volume !

But to begin my subject rhyme—
 'Twas just about this devilish time,
 When scarce there happen'd any frolics
 That were not done by Diabolics,
 A cold and loveless son of Lucifer,
 Who woman scorn'd, nor saw the use of her,

A branch of Dagon's family, 40
 (Which Dagon, whether He or She,
 Is a dispute that vastly better is Referr'd to Scaliger et cæteris.)
 Finding that, in this cage of fools,
 The wisest sots adorn the schools,
 Took it at once his head Satanic in,
 To grow a great scholastic manikin,—
 A doctor, quite as learn'd and fine as Scotus John or Tom Aquinas,¹
 Lully, Hales Irrefragabilis, 50
 Or any doctor of the rabble is.
 In languages, the Polyglots,
 Compar'd to him, were Babel sots ;
 He chatter'd more than ever Jew did,
 Sanhedrim and Priest included ;—
 Priest and holy Sanhedrim
 Were one-and-seventy fools to him.
 But chief the learned demon felt a
 Zeal so strong for gamma, delta,
 That, all for Greek and learning's glory,
 He nightly tipp'd 'Graeco moré,' 61
 And never paid a bill or balance
 Except upon the Grecian Kalends :— From whence your scholars, when they want tick,
 Say, to be Attic's to be on tick,
 In logics he was quite Ho Panu ;
 Knew as much as ever man knew

¹ I wish it were known with any degree of certainty whether the Commentary on Boethius attributed to Thomas Aquinas be really the work of this Angelic Doctor. There are some bold assertions hazarded in it : for instance, he says that Plato kept school in a town called Academia, and that Alcibiades was a very beautiful woman whom some of Aristotle's pupils fell in love with :—'Alcibiades mulier

He fought the combat syllogistic
 With so much skill and art eristic,
 That though you were the learn'd
 Stagirite, 70

At once upon the hip he had you right.
 In music, though he had no ears
 Except for that amongst the spheres,
 (Which most of all, as he averr'd it,
 He dearly lov'd, 'cause no one heard it,)
 Yet aptly he, at sight, could read
 Each tuneeful diagram in Bede,
 And find, by Euclid's corollaria,
 The ratios of a jig or aria.
 But, as for all your warbling Delias, 80
 Orpheuses and Saint Cecilias,
 He own'd he thought them much sur-
 pass'd

By that redoubt'd Hyaloclast²
 Who still contriv'd by dint of throttle,
 Where'er he went to crack a bottle.

Likewise to show his mighty knowledge, he,
 On things unknown in physiology,
 Wrote many a chapter to divert us,
 (Like that great little man Albertus,)
 Wherein he show'd the reason why, 90
 When children first are heard to cry,
 If boy the baby chance to be,
 He cries O A !—if girl, O E !—
 Which are, quoth he, exceeding fair hints
 Respecting their first sinful parents ;
 'Oh Eve !' exclaimeth little madam,
 While little master cries 'Oh Adam !' ³

But 'twas in Optics and Dioptrics,
 Our daemon play'd his first and top tricks. 99
 He held that sunshine passes quicker
 Through wine than any other liquor ;
 And though he saw no great objection
 To steady light and clear reflection,
 He thought the aberrating rays,
 Which play about a bumper's blaze,
 Were by the doctors look'd, in common,
 on,
 As a more rare and rich phenomenon.

³ Translated almost literally from a passage in Albertus de Secretis, &c.

He wisely said that the sensorium
Is for the eyes a great emporium, 109
To which these noted picture-stealers
Send all they can and meet with dealers.
In many an optical proceeding
The brain, he said, show'd great good-breeding

For instance, when we ogle women
(A trick which Barbara tutor'd him in),
Although the dears are apt to get in a Strange position on the retina
Yet instantly the modest brain
Doth set them on their legs again !¹

Our doctor thus, with 'stuff'd sufficiency' 120

Of all omnigenous omniscieny,
Began (as who would not begin
That had, like him, so much within ?)
To let it out in books of all sorts,
Folios, quartos, large and small sorts ;
Poems, so very deep and sensible
That they were quite incomprehensible,

Prose, which had been at learning's
Fair,

And bought up all the trumpery there,
The tatter'd rags of every vest, 130
In which the Greeks and Romans drest,
And o'er her figure swoll'n and antic
Scatter'd them all with airs so frantic,
That those, who saw what fits she had,
Declar'd unhappy Prose was mad !
Epics he wrote and scores of rebuses,
All as neat as old Turnebus's ;
Eggs and altars, cyclopaedias,
Grammars, prayer-books—oh ! 'twere tedious,

Did I but tell the half, to follow me : 140
Not the scribbling bard of Ptolemy,
No—nor the hoary Trismegistus, (Whose writings all, thank heaven !
have miss'd us,)
E'er fill'd with lumber such a wareroom
As this great 'porcus literarum !'

POEMS RELATING TO AMERICA

TO FRANCIS, EARL OF MOIRA

GENERAL IN HIS MAJESTY'S FORCES, MASTER-GENERAL OF THE ORDNANCE, CONSTABLE OF THE TOWER, ETC.

MY LORD,

It is impossible to think of addressing a Dedication to your Lordship without calling to mind the well-known reply of the Spartan to a rhetorician, who proposed to pronounce an eulogium on Hercules. 'On Hercules !' said the honest Spartan, 'who ever thought of blaming Hercules ?' In a similar manner the concurrence of public opinion has left to the panegyrist of your Lordship a very superfluous task. I shall, therefore, be silent on the subject, and merely entreat your indulgence to the very humble tribute of gratitude which I have here the honour to present.

I am, my Lord,

With every feeling of attachment and respect,
Your Lordship's very devoted Servant,

THOMAS MOORE

27, Bury Street, St. James's,

April 10, 1806.

¹ Alluding to that habitual act of the judge- of the image upon the retina, a correct impresment, by which, notwithstanding the inversion | sion of the object is conveyed to the sensorium.

PREFACE¹

THE principal poems in the following collection were written during an absence of fourteen months from Europe. Though curiosity was certainly not the motive of my voyage to America, yet it happened that the gratification of curiosity was the only advantage which I derived from it. Finding myself in the country of a new people, whose infancy had promised so much, and whose progress to maturity has been an object of such interesting speculation, I determined to employ the short period of time, which my plan of return to Europe afforded me, in travelling through a few of the States, and acquiring some knowledge of the inhabitants.

The impression which my mind received from the character and manners of these republicans, suggested the Epistles which are written from the city of Washington and Lake Erie.² How far I was right, in thus assuming the tone of a satirist against a people whom I viewed but as a stranger and a visitor, is a doubt which my feelings did not allow me time to investigate. All I presume to answer for is the fidelity of the picture which I have given; and though prudence might have dictated gentler language, truth, I think, would have justified severer.

I went to America with prepossessions by no means unfavourable, and indeed rather indulged in many of those illusive ideas, with respect to the purity of the government and the primitive happiness of the people, which I had early imbibed in my native country, where, unfortunately, discontent at home enhances every distant temptation, and the western world has long been looked to as a retreat from real or imaginary oppression; as, in short, the elysian Atlantis, where persecuted patriots might find their visions realised, and be welcomed by kindred spirits to liberty and repose. In all these flattering expectations I found myself completely disappointed, and felt inclined to say to America, as Horace says to his mistress, 'intentata nites.' Brissot, in the preface to his travels, observes, that 'freedom in that country is carried to so high a degree as to border upon a state of nature;' and there certainly is a close approximation to savage life, not only in the liberty which they enjoy, but in the violence of party spirit and of private animosity which results from it. This illiberal zeal imbitters all social intercourse; and, though I scarcely could hesitate in selecting the party, whose views appeared to me the more pure and rational, yet I was sorry to observe that, in asserting their opinions, they both assume an equal share of intolerance; the Democrats, consistently with their principles, exhibiting a vulgarity of rancour, which the Federalists too often are so forgetful of their cause as to imitate.

The rude familiarity of the lower orders, and indeed the unpolished state of society in general, would neither surprise nor disgust if they seemed to flow from that simplicity of character, that honest ignorance of the gloss of refinement which may be looked for in a new and inexperienced people. But, when we find them arrived at maturity in most of the vices, and all the pride of civilisation, while they are still so far removed from its higher and better characteristics, it is impossible not to feel that this youthful decay, this crude anticipation of the natural period of corruption, must repress every sanguine hope of the future energy and greatness of America.

I am conscious that, in venturing these few remarks, I have said just enough to offend, and by no means sufficient to convince; for the limits of a preface

¹ This Preface, as well as the Dedication which precedes it, were prefixed originally to the miscellaneous volume entitled 'Odes and Epistles,' of which, hitherto, the poems relating to my American tour have formed a part.

² Epistles VI, VII, and VIII.

prevent me from entering into a justification of my opinions, and I am committed on the subject as effectually as if I had written volumes in their defence. My reader, however, is apprised of the very cursory observation upon which these opinions are founded, and can easily decide for himself upon the degree of attention or confidence which they merit.

With respect to the poems in general, which occupy the following pages, I know not in what manner to apologise to the public for intruding upon their notice such a mass of unconnected trifles, such a world of epicurean atoms as I have here brought in conflict together. To say that I have been tempted by the liberal offers of my bookseller, is an excuse which can hope for but little indulgence from the critic; yet I own that, without this seasonable inducement, these poems very possibly would never have been submitted to the world. The glare of publication is too strong for such imperfect productions: they should be shown but to the eye of friendship, in that dim light of privacy which is as favourable to poetical as to female beauty, and serves as a veil for faults, while it enhances every charm which it displays. Besides, this is not a period for the idle occupations of poetry, and times like the present require talents more active and more useful. Few have now the leisure to read such trifles, and I most sincerely regret that I have had the leisure to write them.

POEMS RELATING TO AMERICA

TO LORD VISCOUNT
STRANGFORD

ABOARD THE PHAETON FRIGATE, OFF THE AZORES, BY MOONLIGHT

SWEET Moon! if, like Crotona's sage,¹
By any spell my hand could dare
To make thy disk its ample page,
And write my thoughts, my wishes
there;

How many a friend, whose careless eye
Now wanders o'er that starry sky,
Should smile, upon thy orb to meet
The recollection, kind and sweet,
The reveries of fond regret,
The promise, never to forget,¹⁰
And all my heart and soul would send
To many a dear-lov'd, distant friend.

How little, when we parted last,
I thought those pleasant times were past,
For ever past, when brilliant joy
Was all my vacant heart's employ:
When, fresh from mirth to mirth again,
We thought the rapid hours too few;
Our only use for knowledge then
To gather bliss from all we knew. 20

¹ Pythagoras; who was supposed to have a power of writing upon the Moon by the means of a magic mirror.—See BAYLE, art. Pythag.

Delicious days of whim and soul!
When, mingling lore and laugh
together,
We lean'd the book on Pleasure's bowl,
And turn'd the leaf with Folly's feather.

Little I thought 'hat all were fled,
That, ere that summer's bloom was shed,
My eye should see the sail unfurl'd
That wafts me to the western world.

And yet, 'twas time;—in youth's sweet days,
To cool that season's glowing rays, 30
The heart awhile, with wanton wing,
May dip and dive in Pleasure's spring;
But, if it wait for winter's breeze,
The spring will chill, the heart will freeze.

And then, that Hope, that fairy Hope,—
Oh! she awak'd such happy dreams,
And gave my soul such tempting scope
For all its dearest, fondest schemes,
That not Verona's child of song, 39
When flying from the Phrygian shore,
With lighter heart could bound along,
Or pant to be a wand'rer more!²

² Alluding to these animated lines in the 44th Carmen of Catullus:—

*Jam mens praetrepidans avet vagari,
Jam laeti studio pedes vigescunt!*

Even now delusive hope will steal
Amid the dark regrets I feel,
Soothing, as yonder placid beam
Pursues the murmurers of the deep,
And lights them with consoling gleam,
And smiles them into tranquil sleep.
Oh ! such a blessed night as this,
I often think, if friends were near, 50
How we should feel, and gaze with
bliss

Upon the moon-bright scenery here !
The sea is like a silvery lake,
And, o'er its calm the vessel glides
Gently, as if it fear'd to wake
The slumber of the silent tides.
The only envious cloud that lowers
Hath hung its shade on Pico's height,¹
Where dimly, mid the dusk, he towers,
And scowling at this heav'n of light,
Exults to see the infant storm 61
Cling darkly round his giant form !

Now, could I range those verdant
isles,
Invisible at this soft hour,
And see the looks, the beaming smiles,
That brighten many an orange bower ;

And could I lift each pious veil,
And see the blushing cheek it shades,
Oh ! I should have full many a tale,
To tell of young Azorian maids.² 70
Yes, Strangford, at this hour, perhaps,
Some lover (not too idly blest,
Like those, who in their ladies' laps
May cradle every wish to rest,)
Warbles, to touch his dear one's soul,
Those madrigals, of breath divine,
Which Camoens' harp from Rapture stole
And gave, all glowing warm, to thine.³
Oh ! could the lover learn from thee,
And breathe them with thy graceful
tone, 80
Such sweet, beguiling minstrelsy
Would make the coldest nymph his
own.
But, hark !—the boatswain's pipings
tell
'Tis time to bid my dream farewell :
Eight bells :—the middle watch is set ;
Good night, my Strangford !—ne'er
forget
That, far beyond the western sea
Is one, whose heart remembers thee.

Τίνωσκε τανθρώπεια μὴ σέβειν αἶαν. AEsCHYL. Fragment.

A BEAM of tranquillity smil'd in the west,
The storms of the morning pursued us no more ;
And the wave, while it welcom'd the moment of rest,
Still heav'd, as remembering ills that were o'er.

Serenely my heart took the hue of the hour,
Its passions were sleeping, were mute as the dead ;
And the spirit becalm'd but remember'd their power,
As the billow the force of the gale that was fled.

I thought of those days, when to pleasure alone
My heart ever granted a wish or a sigh ;
When the saddest emotion my bosom had known,
Was pity for those who were wiser than I.

I reflected, how soon in the cup of Desire
The pearl of the soul may be melted away ;
How quickly, alas, the pure sparkle of fire
We inherit from heav'n, may be quench'd in the clay ;

¹ A very high mountain on one of the Azores, from which the island derives its name. It is said by some to be as high as the Peak of Teneriffe.

² I believe it is Guthrie who says, that the inhabitants of the Azores are much addicted to gallantry. This is an assertion in which even Guthrie may be credited.

³ These islands belong to the Portuguese.

And I pray'd of that Spirit who lighted the flame,
That Pleasure no more might its purity dim ;
So that, sullied but little, or brightly the same,
I might give back the boon I had borrow'd from him.

How blest was the thought ! it appear'd as if Heaven
Had already an opening to Paradise shown ;
As if, passion all chasten'd and error forgiven,
My heart then began to be purely its own.

I look'd to the west, and the beautiful sky,
Which morning had clouded, was clouded no more :
' Oh ! thus,' I exclaimed, ' may a heavenly eye
Shed light on the soul that was darken'd before.'

TO THE FLYING FISH¹

WHEN I have seen thy snow-white wing
From the blue wave at evening spring,
And show those scales of silvery white,
So gaily to the eye of light,
As if thy frame were form'd to rise,
And live amid the glorious skies ;
Oh ! it has made me proudly feel,
How like thy wing's impatient zeal
Is the pure soul, that rests not, pent
Within this world's gross element,
But takes the wing that God has given,
And rises into light and heaven !

But, when I see that wing, so bright,
Grow languid with a moment's flight,
Attempt the paths of air in vain,
And sink into the waves again ;
Alas ! the flattering pride is o'er ;
Like thee, awhile, the soul may soar,
But erring man must blush to think,
Like thee, again the soul may sink.

Oh Virtue ! when thy clime I seek,
Let not my spirit's flight be weak :
Let me not, like this feeble thing,
With brine still dropping from its wing,
Just sparkle in the solar glow
And plunge again to depths below ;
But, when I leave the grosser throng
With whom my soul hath dwelt so long,

Let me, in that aspiring day,
Cast every lingering stain away,
And, panting for thy purer air,
Fly up at once and fix me there.

TO MISS MOORE

FROM NORFOLK, IN VIRGINIA,
NOVEMBER, 1803

In days, my Kate, when life was new,
When, lull'd with innocence and you,
I heard, in home's beloved shade,
The din the world at distance made ;
When, every night my weary head
Sunk on its own unthorned bed,
And, mild as evening's matron hour,
Looks on the faintly shutting flower,
A mother saw our eyelids close,
And bless'd them into pure repose ; 10
Then, haply if a week, a day,
I linger'd from that home away,
How long the little absence seem'd !
How bright the look of welcome beam'd,
As mute you heard, with eager smile,
My tales of all that pass'd the while !

Yet now, my Kate, a gloomy sea
Rolls wide between that home and me ;
The moon may thrice be born and die,
Ere ev'n that seal can reach mine eye, 20

¹ It is the opinion of St. Austin upon Genesis, and I believe of nearly all the Fathers, that birds, like fish, were originally produced from the waters ; in defence of which idea they have collected every fanciful circumstance which can tend to prove a kindred similitude between them ; συγγενειαν τοις πεποιμενοις προς τα ψηκτα. With this thought in our minds, when we first see the Flying-Fish, we could almost fancy, that we are present at the moment of creation, and witness the birth of the first bird from the waves.

Which used so oft, so quick to come,
Still breathing all the breath of home,—
As if, still fresh, the cordial air
From lips belov'd were lingering there.
But now, alas,—far different fate !
It comes o'er ocean, slow and late,
When the dear hand that fill'd its fold
With words of sweetness may lie cold.

But hence that gloomy thought ! at
last,

Beloved Kate, the waves are past : 30
I tread on earth securely now,
And the green cedar's living bough
Breathes more refreshment to my eyes
Than could a Claude's divinest dyes.
At length I touch the happy sphere
To liberty and virtue dear,
Where man looks up, and, proud to claim
His rank within the social frame,
Sees a grand system round him roll,
Himself its centre, sun, and soul ! 40
Far from the shocks of Europe—far
From every wild, elliptic star
That, shooting with a devious fire,
Kindled by heaven's avenging ire,
So oft hath into chaos hurl'd
The systems of the ancient world.

The warrior here, in arms no more,
Thinks of the toil, the conflict o'er,
And glorying in the freedom won
For hearth and shrine, for sire and son,
Smiles on the dusky webs that hide 51
His sleeping sword's remember'd pride.
While Peace, with sunny cheeks of toil,
Walks o'er the free, unlorded soil,
Effacing with her splendid share
The drops that war had sprinkled there.
Thrice happy land ! where he who flies
From the dark ills of other skies,
From scorn, or want's unnerving woes,
May shelter him in proud repose : 60
Hope sings along the yellow sand
His welcome to a patriot land ;

¹ Such romantic works as The American Farmer's Letters, and the account of Kentucky by Imlay, would seduce us into a belief, that innocence, peace and freedom had deserted the rest of the world for Martha's Vineyard and the banks of the Ohio. The French travellers, too, almost all from revolutionary motives, have contributed their share to the diffusion of this flattering misconception. A visit to the country is, however, quite sufficient to correct even the most enthusiastic prepossession.

The mighty wood, with pomp, receives
The stranger in its world of leaves,
Which soon their barren glory yield
To the warm shed and cultur'd field ;
And he, who came, of all bereft,
To whom malignant fate had left
Nor home nor friends nor country dear,
Finds home and friends and country
here. 70

Such is the picture, warmly such,
That Fancy long, with florid touch,
Had painted to my sanguine eye
Of man's new world of liberty.
Oh ! ask me not, if Truth have yet
Her seal on Fancy's promise set ;
If ev'n a glimpse my eyes behold
Of that imagin'd age of gold ;—
Alas, not yet one gleaming trace !¹
Never did youth, who lov'd a face 80
As sketch'd by some fond pencil's skill,
And made by fancy lovelier still,
Shrink back with more of sad surprise,
When the live model met his eyes,
Than I have felt, in sorrow felt,
To find a dream on which I've dwelt
From boyhood's hour, thus fade and flee
At touch of stern reality ! 88

But, courage, yet, my wavering heart !
Blame not the temple's meanest part,²
Till thou hast trac'd the fabric o'er :—
As yet, we have beheld no more
Than just the porch to Freedom's fane ;
And, though a sable spot may stain
The vestibule, 'tis wrong, 'tis sin
To doubt the godhead reigns within !
So here I pause—and now, my Kate,
To you, and those dear friends, whose fate
Touches more near this home-sick soul
Than all the Powers from pole to pole,
One word at parting—in the tone 101
Most sweet to you, and most my own.
The simple strain I send you here,³
Wild though it be, would charm your ear,

² Norfolk, it must be owned, presents an unfavourable specimen of America. The characteristics of Virginia in general are not such as can delight either the politician or the moralist, and at Norfolk they are exhibited in their least attractive form. At the time when we arrived the yellow fever had not yet disappeared, and every odour that assailed us in the streets very strongly accounted for its visitation.

³ A trifling attempt at musical composition accompanied this Epistle.

Did you but know the trance of thought
 In which my mind its numbers caught.
 'Twas one of those half-waking dreams,
 That haunt me oft, when music seems
 To bear my soul in sound along,
 And turn its feelings all to song. 110
 I thought of home, the according lays
 Came full of dreams of other days;
 Freshly in each succeeding note
 I found some young remembrance float,
 Till following, as a clue, that strain,
 I wander'd back to home again.

Oh! love the song, and let it oft
 Live on your lip, in accents soft.
 Say that it tells you, simply well,
 All I have bid its wild notes tell,— 120
 Of Memory's dream, of thoughts that yet
 Glow with the light of joy that's set,
 And all the fond heart keeps in store
 Of friends and scenes beheld no more.
 And now, adieu!—this artless air,
 With a few rhymes, in transcript fair,
 Are all the gifts I yet can boast
 To send you from Columbia's coast;
 But when the sun, with warmer smile,
 Shall light me to my destin'd isle,¹ 130
 You shall have many a cowslip-bell,
 Where Ariel slept, and many a shell,
 In which that gentle spirit drew
 From honey flowers the morning dew.

A BALLAD

THE LAKE OF THE DISMAL SWAMP

WRITTEN AT NORFOLK, IN VIRGINIA

'They tell of a young man, who lost his mind upon the death of a girl he loved, and who, suddenly disappearing from his friends, was never afterwards heard of. As he had frequently said, in his ravings, that the girl was not dead, but gone to the Dismal Swamp, it is supposed he had wandered into that dreary wilderness, and had died of hunger, or been lost in some of its dreadful morasses.'—Anon.

'La Poésie a ses monstres comme la nature.'
 D'ALEMBERT.

'THEY made her a grave, too cold and damp
 For a soul so warm and true;
 And she's gone to the Lake of the Dismal Swamp,²
 Where, all night long, by a fire-fly lamp,
 She paddles her white canoe.

¹ Bermuda.² The Great Dismal Swamp is ten or twelve

'And her fire-fly lamp I soon shall see,
 And her paddle I soon shall hear;
 Long and loving our life shall be,
 And I'll hide the maid in a cypress tree, 9
 When the footstep of death is near.'

Away to the Dismal Swamp he speeds—
 His path was rugged and sore,
 Through tangled juniper, beds of reeds,
 Through many a fen, where the serpent
 feeds,
 And man never trod before.

And, when on the earth he sunk to sleep,
 If slumber his eyelids knew,
 He lay, where the deadly vine doth
 weep
 Its venomous tear and nightly steep
 The flesh with blistering dew! 20

And near him the she-wolf stirr'd the brake,
 And the copper-snake breath'd in his ear,
 Till he starting cried, from his dream
 awake,
 'Oh! when shall I see the dusky Lake,
 And the white canoe of my dear?'

He saw the Lake, and a meteor bright
 Quick over its surface play'd—
 'Welcome,' he said, 'my dear one's
 light!'
 And the dim shore echoed, for many a
 night,
 The name of the death-cold maid. 30

Till he hollow'd a boat of the birchen
 bark,
 Which carried him off from shore;
 Far, far he follow'd the meteor spark,
 The wind was high and the clouds were
 dark,
 And the boat return'd no more.

But oft, from the Indian hunter's camp,
 This lover and maid so true
 Are seen at the hour of midnight damp
 To cross the Lake by a fire-fly lamp,
 And paddle their white canoe! 40 miles distant from Norfolk, and the Lake in the middle of it (about seven miles long) is called Drummond's Pond.

TO THE MARCHIONESS DOWAGER OF DONEGALL

FROM BERMUDA, JANUARY, 1804

LADY! where'er you roam, whatever land
 Woos the bright touches of that artist hand;
 Whether you sketch the valley's golden meads,
 Where mazy Linth his lingering current leads;¹
 Enamour'd catch the mellow hues that sleep,
 At eve, on Meillerie's immortal steep;
 Or musing o'er the Lake, at day's decline,
 Mark the last shadow on that holy shrine,²
 Where, many a night, the shade of Tell complains
 Of Gallia's triumph and Helvetia's chains;
 Oh! lay the pencil for a moment by,
 Turn from the canvas that creative eye,
 And let its splendour, like the morning ray
 Upon a shepherd's harp, illume my lay.

10

Yet, Lady, no—for song so rude as mine,
 Chase not the wonders of your art divine;
 Still, radiant eye, upon the canvas dwell;
 Still, magic finger, weave your potent spell;
 And, while I sing the animated smiles
 Of fairy nature in these sun-born isles,
 Oh, might the song awake some bright design,
 Inspire a touch, or prompt one happy line,
 Proud were my soul, to see its humble thought
 On painting's mirror so divinely caught;
 While wondering Genius, as he lean'd to trace
 The faint conception kindling into grace,
 Might love my numbers for the spark they threw,
 And bless the lay that lent a charm to you.

20

Say, have you ne'er, in nightly vision, stray'd
 To those pure isles of ever-blooming shade,
 Which bards of old, with kindly fancy, plac'd
 For happy spirits in th' Atlantic waste?³
 There listening, while, from earth, each breeze that came Brought echoes of their own undying fame,
 In eloquence of eye, and dreams of song,
 They charm'd their lapse of nightless hours along:—
 Nor yet in song, that mortal ear might suit,
 For every spirit was itself a lute,
 Where Virtue waken'd, with elysian breeze,
 Pure tones of thought and mental harmonies.

30

¹ Lady Donegall, I had reason to suppose, was at this time still in Switzerland, where the well-known powers of her pencil must have been frequently awakened.

² The chapel of William Tell on the Lake of Lucerne.

³ M. Gebelin says, in his Monde Primitif,

'Lorsque Strabon crût que les anciens théologiens et poètes plaçoient les champs élysées dans les îles de l'Océan Atlantique, il n'entendit rien à leur doctrine.' M. Gebelin's supposition, I have no doubt, is the more correct; but that of Strabo is, in the present instance, most to my purpose.

Believe me, Lady, when the zephyrs bland
 Floated our bark to this enchanted land,—
 These leafy isles upon the ocean thrown,
 Like studs of emerald o'er a silver zone,—
 Not all the charm, that ethnic fancy gave
 To blessed harbours o'er the western wave,
 Could wake a dream, more soothing or sublime,
 Of bowers ethereal, and the Spirit's clime.

Bright rose the morning, every wave was still,
 When the first perfume of a cedar hill 50
 Sweetly awak'd us, and, with smiling charms,
 The fairy harbour woo'd us to its arms.¹
 Gently we stole, before the whisp'ring wind,
 Through plantain shades, that round, like awnings, twin'd
 And kiss'd on either side the wanton sails,
 Breathing our welcome to these vernal vales;
 While, far reflected o'er the wave serene,
 Each wooded island shed so soft a green
 That the enamour'd keel, with whisp'ring play,
 Through liquid herbage seem'd to steal its way. 60

Never did weary bark more gladly glide,
 Or rest its anchor in a lovelier tide!
 Along the margin, many a shining dome,
 White as the palace of a Lapland gnome,
 Brighten'd the wave;—in every myrtle grove
 Secluded bashful, like a shrine of love,
 Some elfin mansion sparkled through the shade;
 And, while the foliage interposing play'd,
 Lending the scene an ever-changing grace,
 Fancy would love, in glimpses vague, to trace 70
 The flowery capital, the shaft, the porch,²
 And dream of temples, till her kindling torch
 Lighted me back to all the glorious days
 Of Attic genius; and I seem'd to gaze
 On marble, from the rich Pentelic mount,
 Gracing the umbrage of some Naiad's fount.

Then thought I, too, of thee, most sweet of all
 The spirit race that come at poet's call,
 Delicate Ariel! who, in brighter hours,
 Liv'd on the perfume of these honied bowers, 80

¹ Nothing can be more romantic than the little harbour of St. George's. The number of beautiful islets, the singular clearness of the water, and the animated play of the graceful little boats, gliding for ever between the islands, and seeming to sail from one cedar-grove into another, formed altogether as lovely a miniature of nature's beauties as can well be imagined.

² This is an allusion which, to the few who are fanciful enough to indulge in it, renders the scenery of Bermuda particularly interesting. In the short but beautiful twilight of their spring evenings, the white cottages, scattered over the islands, and but partially seen through the trees that surround them, assume often the appearance of little Grecian temples; and a vivid fancy may embellish the poor fisherman's hut with columns such as the pencil of a Claude might imitate. I had one favourite object of this kind in my walks, which the hospitality of its owner robbed me of, by asking me to visit him. He was a plain good man, and received me well and warmly, but I could never turn his house into a Grecian temple again.

In velvet buds, at evening, lov'd to lie,
 And win with music every rose's sigh.
 Though weak the magic of my humble strain
 To charm your spirit from its orb again,
 Yet, oh, for her, beneath whose smile I sing,
 For her (whose pencil, if your rainbow wing
 Were dimm'd or ruffled by a wintry sky,
 Could smooth its feather and relume its dye.)
 Descend a moment from your starry sphere,
 And, if the lime-tree grove that once was dear,
 The sunny wave, the bower, the breezy hill,
 The sparkling grotto can delight you still,
 Oh cull their choicest tints, their softest light,
 Weave all these spells into one dream of night,
 And, while the lovely artist slumbering lies,
 Shed the warm picture o'er her mental eyes;
 Take for the task her own creative spells,
 And brightly show what song but faintly tells.

TO GEORGE MORGAN, ESQ.

OF NORFOLK, VIRGINIA ¹

FROM BERMUDA, JANUARY, 1804

Κεῖνη δ' ημεροεσσα καὶ ἀπρὸς, οἱ αὖ ἄλιπλῆς,
 Αἰθιγὴς καὶ μάλλον ἐπιδρομὸς ἥπερ ἵπποις,
 Ποντῶν ἐνεστῆραυται.

CALLIMACH. Hymn in Del. v. 11.

OH, what a sea of storm we've pass'd!—

High mountain waves and foamy
 showers,

And battling winds whose savage blast
 But ill agrees with one whose hours

Have pass'd in old Anacreon's bowers.

Yet think not poesy's bright charm
 Forsook me in this rude alarm:—²

When close they reef'd the timid sail,
 When, every plank complaining loud,

¹ This gentleman is attached to the British consulate at Norfolk. His talents are worthy of a much higher sphere; but the excellent dispositions of the family with whom he resides, and the cordial repose he enjoys amongst some of the kindest hearts in the world, should be almost enough to atone to him for the worst caprices of fortune. The consul himself, Colonel Hamilton, is one among the very few instances of a man, ardently loyal to his king, and yet beloved by the Americans. His house is the very temple of hospitality, and I sincerely pity the heart of that stranger who, warm from the welcome of such a board, could sit down to write a libel on his host, in the true spirit of a modern philosophist. See the Travels of the Duke de la Rochefoucault d'Anjou, vol. ii.

We labour'd in the midnight gale, 10
 And ev'n our haughty main-mast
 bow'd,

Even then, in that unlovely hour,
 The Muse still brought her soothing
 power,

And, midst the war of waves and wind,
 In song's Elysium lapp'd my mind.

Nay, when no numbers of my own
 Responded to her wakening tone,
 She open'd, with her golden key,

The casket where my memory lays,
 Those gems of classic poesy, 20
 Which time has sav'd from ancient days.

Take one of these, to Lais sung,—
 I wrote it while my hammock swung,
 As one might write a dissertation
 Upon 'Suspended Animation!'

² We were seven days on our passage from Norfolk to Bermuda, during three of which we were forced to lay-to in a gale of wind. The Driver sloop of war, in which I went, was built at Bermuda of cedar, and is accounted an excellent sea-boat. She was then commanded by my very much regretted friend Captain Compton, who in July last was killed aboard the Lilly in an action with a French privateer. Poor Compton! he fell a victim to the strange impolicy of allowing such a miserable thing as the Lilly to remain in the service; so small, crank, and unmanageable, that a well-manned merchantman was at any time a match for her.

Sweet ¹ is your kiss, my Lais dear,
But, with that kiss I feel a tear
Gush from your eyelids, such as start
When those who've dearly lov'd must part.

Sadly you lean your head to mine, 30
And mute those arms around me twine,
Your hair adown my bosom spread,
All glittering with the tears you shed.
In vain I've kiss'd those lids of snow,
For still, like ceaseless founts they
flow,

Bathing our cheeks, where'er they meet.
Why is it thus ? do tell me, sweet !
Ah, Lais ! are my bodings right ?
Am I to lose you ? is to-night
Our last—go, false to heaven and me !
Your very tears are treachery. 41

SUCH, while in air I floating hung,
Such was the strain, Morgante mio !
The muse and I together sung,
With Boreas to make out the trio.
But, bless the little fairy isle !
How sweetly after all our ills,
We saw the sunny morning smile
Serenely o'er its fragrant hills ;
And felt the pure, delicious flow 50
Of airs, that round this Eden blow
Freshly as ev'n the gales that come
O'er our own healthy hills at home.

¹ This epigram is by Paul the Silentiary, and may be found in the Analecta of Brunck, vol. iii. p. 72. As the reading there is somewhat different from what I have followed in this translation, I shall give it as I had it in my memory at the time, and as it is in Heinsius, who, I believe, first produced the epigram. See his Poemata.

Ἦδὺ μὲν ἐστὶ φίλημα τοῦ Λαίδου· ἦδὺ δὲ αὐτῶν
Ἡπιοδίντων δακρυ χεεῖς βλεφαρῶν,
Καὶ πολὺ κυχλίζοντα σοβεῖς εὐδοστρυχὸν αἰγλήν,
Ἡμετέρα κεφαλὴν ἥδρον εἰς αἰσινεῖν.
Μυρομένην δ' ἐφίλησα· τὰ δ' ὦ δροσέρης ἀπο πηγῆς,
Δακρυά μινυμέναν πῦττε κατὰ στομάτων·
Εἶπε δ' ἀνερρομένη, τίνος οὐδένα δακρυά λείβεις ;
Δειδία μὴ με λήψης· ἐστὶ γὰρ ὄρκαπατα.

² The water is so clear around the island, that the rocks are seen beneath to a very great depth ; and, as we entered the harbour, they appeared to us so near the surface that it seemed impossible we should not strike on them. There is no necessity, of course, for heaving the lead ; and the negro pilot, looking down at the rocks from the bow of the ship, takes her through this difficult navigation, with a

Could you but view the scenery fair,
That now beneath my window lies,
You'd think, that nature lavish'd there
Her purest wave, her softest skies,
To make a heaven for love to sigh in,
For bards to live and saints to die in.
Close to my wooded bank below, 60
In glassy calm the waters sleep,
And to the sunbeam proudly show
The coral rocks they love to steep.³
The fainting breeze of morning fails ;
The drowsy boat moves slowly past,
And I can almost touch its sails
As loose they flap around the mast.
The noontide sun a splendour pours
That lights up all these leafy shores ;
While his own heav'n, its clouds and
beams, 70

So pictur'd in the waters lie,
That each small bark, in passing, seems
To float along a burning sky.

Oh for the pinnace lent to thee,³
Blest dreamer, who, in vision bright,
Didst sail o'er heaven's solar sea
And touch at all its isles of light.
Sweet Venus, what a clime he found
Within thy orb's ambrosial round ! — ⁴
There spring the breezes, rich and warm, 80
That sigh around thy vesper car ;
And angels dwell, so pure of form
That each appears a living star.⁵

skill and confidence which seem to astonish some of the oldest sailors.

³ In Kircher's Ecstatic Journey to Heaven, Cosmiel, the genius of the world, gives Theodidactus a boat of asbestos, with which he embarks into the regions of the sun. 'Vides (says Cosmiel) hanc asbestinam naviculum commoditati tue praeparatam.'—Itinerar. I. Dial. i. cap. 5. This work of Kircher abounds with strange fancies.

⁴ When the Genius of the world and his fellow-traveller arrive at the planet Venus, they find an island of loveliness, full of odours and intelligences, where angels preside, who shed the cosmetic influence of this planet over the earth ; such being, according to astrologers, the vis influentia of Venus. When they are in this part of the heavens, a casuistical question occurs to Theodidactus, and he asks, 'Whether baptism may be performed with the waters of Venus ?'—'An aquis globi Veneris baptismus institui possit ?' to which the Genius answers, 'Certainly.'

⁵ This idea is Father Kircher's. 'Tot animatos soles dixisses.'—Itinerar. I. Dial. i. cap. 5.

These are the sprites, celestial queen !
 Thou sendest nightly to the bed
 Of her I love, with touch unseen
 Thy planet's bright'ning tints to shed ;
 To lend that eye a light still clearer,
 To give that cheek one rose-blush
 more,
 And bid that blushing lip be dearer, 90
 Which had been all too dear before.

But, whither means the muse to roam ?
 'Tis time to call the wand'rer home.
 Who could have thought the nymph would perch her
 Up in the clouds with Father Kircher ?
 So, health and love to all your mansion !
 Long may the bowl that pleasures
 bloom in,
 The flow of heart, the soul's expansion,
 Mirth and song, your board illumine.
 At all your feasts, remember too, 100
 When cups are sparkling to the brim,
 That here is one who drinks to you,
 And, oh ! as warmly drink to him.

LINES,

WRITTEN IN A STORM AT SEA

THAT sky of clouds is not the sky
 To light a lover to the pillow
 Of her he loves—
 The swell of yonder foaming billow
 Resembles not the happy sigh
 That rapture moves.
 Yet do I feel more tranquil far
 Amid the gloomy wilds of ocean,
 In this dark hour,
 Than when, in passion's young emotion,
 I've stolen, beneath the evening star,
 To Julia's bower.
 Oh ! there's a holy calm profound
 In awe like this, that ne'er was given To pleasure's thrill ;
 'Tis as a solemn voice from heaven,
 And the soul, listening to the sound,
 Lies mute and still.
 'Tis true, it talks of danger nigh,
 Of slumb'ring with the dead to-morrow
 In the cold deep,
 Where pleasure's throb or tears of sorrow
 No more shall wake the heart or eye,
 But all must sleep.

Well !—there are some, thou stormy bed,
 To whom thy sleep would be a treasure ;
 Oh ! most to him,
 Whose lip hath drain'd life's cup of pleasure,
 Nor left one honey drop to shed
 Round sorrow's brim.

Yes—he can smile serene at death :
 Kind heaven, do thou but chase the weeping
 Of friends who love him ;
 Tell them that he lies calmly sleeping
 Where sorrow's sting or envy's breath
 No more shall move him.

ODES TO NEA

WRITTEN AT BERMUDA

NEA rupavel.—EURIPID. Medea, v. 967.

NAY, tempt me not to love again,
 There was a time when love was
 sweet ;
 Dear Nea ! had I known thee then,
 Our souls had not been slow to meet.
 But, oh, this weary heart hath run,
 So many a time, the rounds of pain,
 Not ev'n for thee, thou lovely one,
 Would I endure such pangs again.

If there be climes, where never yet
 The print of beauty's foot was set, 10
 Where man may pass his loveless nights,
 Unfever'd by her false delights,
 Thither my wounded soul would fly,
 Where rosy cheek or radiant eye
 Should bring no more their bliss, or pain,
 Nor fetter me to earth again.
 Dear absent girl ! whose eyes of light,
 Though little priz'd when all my own,
 Now float before me, soft and bright 19
 As when they first enamouringshone,—
 What hours and days have I seen glide,
 While fix'd, enchanted, by thy side,
 Unmindful of the fleeting day,
 I've let life's dream dissolve away.
 O bloom of youth profusely shed !
 O moments ! simply, vainly sped,
 Yet sweetly too—for Love perfum'd
 The flame which thus my life consum'd ;
 And brilliant was the chain of flowers
 In which he led my victim-hours. 30

Say, Nea, say, couldst thou, like her,
When warm to feel and quick to err,
Of loving fond, of roving fonder,
This thoughtless soul might wish to wander,—

Couldst thou, like her, the wish reclaim,
Endearing still, reproaching never,
Till ev'n this heart should burn with
shame,

And be thy own more fix'd than ever ?
No, no—on earth there's only one
Could bind such faithless folly fast ;
And sure on earth but one alone ⁴¹
Could make such virtue false at last !

Nea, the heart which she forsook,
For thee were but a worthless shrine—
Go, lovely girl, that angel look
Must thrill a soul more pure than mine.
Oh ! thou shalt be all else to me,
That heart can feel or tongue can feign ;
I'll praise, admire, and worship thee,
But must not, dare not, love again. 50

— Tale iter omne cave.
PROPERT. lib iv. eleg. 8.

I PRAY you, let us roam no more
Along that wild and lonely shore,
Where late we thoughtless stray'd ;
'Twas not for us, whom heaven intends
To be no more than simple friends,
Such lonely walks were made.

That little Bay, where turning in
From ocean's rude and angry din,
As lovers steal to bliss,
The billows kiss the shore, and then 10
Flow back into the deep again,
As though they did not kiss.

Remember, o'er its circling flood
In what a dangerous dream we stood—
The silent sea before us,
Around us, all the gloom of grove,
That ever lent its shade to love,
No eye but heaven's o'er us !

I saw you blush, you felt me tremble,
In vain would formal art dissemble 20
All we then look'd and thought ;
'Twas more than tongue could dare reveal,
'Twas ev'ry thing that young hearts feel,
By Love and Nature taught.

I stoop'd to cull, with faltering hand,
A shell that, on the golden sand,
Before us faintly gleam'd ;
I trembling rais'd it, and when you
Had kist the shell, I kist it too—
How sweet, how wrong it seem'd ! 30

Oh, trust me, 'twas a place, an hour,
The worst that e'er the tempter's power
Could tangle me or you in ;
Sweet Nea, let us roam no more
Along that wild and lonely shore,
Such walks may be our ruin.

You read it in these spell-bound eyes,
And there alone should love be read ;
You hear me say it all in sighs,
And thus alone should love be said.

Then dread no more ; I will not speak ;
Although my heart to anguish thrill,
I'll spare the burning of your cheek,
And look it all in silence still.

Heard you the wish I dar'd to name,
To murmur on that luckless night, 10
When passion broke the bonds of shame,
And love grew madness in your sight ?

Divinely through the graceful dance,
You seem'd to float in silent song,
Bending to earth that sunny glance,
As if to light your steps along.

Oh ! how could others dare to touch
That hallow'd form with hand so free,
When but to look was bliss too much,
Too rare for all but Love and me ! 20

With smiling eyes, that little thought
How fatal were the beams they threw,
My trembling hands you lightly caught,
And round me, like a spirit, flew.

Heedless of all, but you alone,—
And you, at least, should not condemn,
If, when such eyes before me shone,
My soul forgot all eyes but them,—

I dar'd to whisper passion's vow,—
For love had ev'n of thought bereft me,— ³⁰
Nay, half-way bent to kiss that brow,
But, with a bound, you blushing left
me.

Forget, forget that night's offence,
 Forgive it, if, alas! you can;
 'Twas love, 'twas passion—soul and sense—

'Twas all that's best and worst in man.

That moment, did th' assembled eyes
 Of heaven and earth my madness view,
 I should have seen, through earth and
 skies,

But you alone—but only you. 40

Did not a frown from you reprove,
 Myriads of eyes to me were none;
 Enough for me to win your love,
 And die upon the spot when won.

A DREAM OF ANTIQUITY

I JUST had turn'd the classic page,
 And trac'd that happy period over,
 When blest alike were youth and age,
 And love inspir'd the wisest sage,
 And wisdom grac'd the tenderest lover.

Before I laid me down to sleep,
 Awhile I from the lattice gaz'd
 Upon that still and moonlight deep,
 With isles like floating gardens rais'd
 For Ariel there his sports to keep; 10
 While, gliding 'twixt their leafy shores,
 The lone night-fisher plied his oars.
 I felt,—so strongly fancy's power
 Came o'er me in that witching hour,—
 As if the whole bright scenery there
 Were lighted by a Grecian sky.
 And I then breath'd the blissful air
 That late had thrill'd to Sappho's sigh.

Thus, waking, dreamt I,—and when
 Sleep

Came o'er my sense, the dream went
 on; 20

Nor, through her curtain dim and deep,
 Hath ever lovelier vision shone.

I thought that, all enrapt, I stray'd
 Through that serene, luxurious shade,¹

¹ Gassendi thinks that the gardens, which Pausanias mentions, in his first book, were those of Epicurus; and Stuart says, in his Antiquities of Athens, 'Near this convent (the convent of Hagios Asomatos) is the place called at present Kepoi, or the Gardens; and Ampepos Kepos, or the Vineyard Garden; these were probably the gardens which Pausanias visited.' Vol. i. chap. 2.

Where Epicurus taught the Loves
 To polish virtue's native brightness,
 As pearls, we're told, that fondling doves

Have play'd with, wear a smother
 whiteness.²

'Twas one of those delicious nights
 So common in the climes of Greece, 30
 When day withdraws but half its lights,
 And all is moonshine, balm, and peace.
 And thou wert there, my own belov'd,
 And by thy side I fondly rov'd
 Through many a temple's reverend
 gloom,

And many a bower's seductive bloom,
 Where Beauty learn'd what Wisdom taught,
 And sages sigh'd and lovers thought;
 Where schoolmen conn'd no maxims
 stern,

But all was form'd to soothe or move,
 To make the dullest love to learn, 41
 To make the coldest learn to love.

And now the fairy pathway seem'd
 To lead us through enchanted ground,
 Where all that bard has ever dream'd
 Of love or luxury bloom'd around.
 Oh! 'twas a bright, bewild'ring scene—
 Along the alley's deep'ning green
 Soft lamps, that hung like burning
 flowers,

And scented and illum'd the bowers, 50
 Seem'd, as to him, who darkling roves
 Amid the lone Hercynian groves,
 Appear those countless birds of light,
 That sparkle in the leaves at night,
 And from their wings diffuse a ray
 Along the traveller's weary way.³

'Twas light of that mysterious kind,
 Through which the soul perchance
 may roam,

When it has left this world behind,
 And gone to seek its heavenly home.
 And, Nea, thou wert by my side, 61
 Through all this heav'n-ward path my guide.

² This method of polishing pearls, by leaving them awhile to be played with by doves, is mentioned by the fanciful Cardanus, de Rerum Varietat. lib. vii. cap. 34.

³ In Hercynio Germaniae saltu inusitata genera altum accipimus, quarum plumae, ignium modo, colluceant noctibus.—Plin. lib. x. cap. 47.

But, lo, as wand'ring thus we rang'd
That upward path, the vision chang'd ;
And now, methought, we stole along
Through halls of more voluptuous
glory

Than ever liv'd in Teian song,
Or wanton'd in Milesian story.¹
And nymphs were there, whose very eyes Seem'd soften'd o'er with breath of
sighs ; 70

Whose ev'ry ringlet, as it wreath'd,
A mute appeal to passion breath'd.
Some flew, with amber cups, around,
Pouring the flowery wines of Crete ;²
And, as they pass'd with youthful bound,
The onyx shone beneath their feet.³

While others, waving arms of snow
Entwin'd by snakes of burnish'd gold⁴
And showing charms, as loth to show,
Through many a thin Tarentian fold,⁵
Glided among the festal throng 81
Bearing rich urns of flowers along.
Where roses lay, in languor breathing,
And the young beegrape,⁶ round them
wreathing,

Hung on their blushes warm and meek,
Like curls upon a rosy cheek.

Oh, Nea ! why did morning break
Thespell that thus divinely bound me ?
Why did I wake ? how could I wake
With thee my own and heaven around
me ! 90

¹ The Milesiacs, or Milesian fables, had their origin in Miletus, a luxurious town of Ionia. Aristides was the most celebrated author of these licentious fictions. See Plutarch (in Crasso), who calls them ακολαστα βιβλία.

⁷ I had, at this time, some idea of paying a visit to the West Indies.

WELL—peace to thy heart, though another's it be,
And health to that cheek, though it bloom not for me !

To-morrow I sail for those cinnamon groves,⁷

Where nightly the ghost of the Carribee
roves,

And, far from the light of those eyes,
I may yet

Their allurements forgive and their splendour forget.

Farewell to Bermuda,⁸ and long may the bloom

Of the lemon and myrtle its valleys perfume ;

May spring to eternity hallow the shade,
Where Ariel has warbled and Waller⁹ has stray'd.

And thou—when, at dawn, thou shalt happen to roam

Through the lime-covered alley that leads to thy home,

Where oft, when the dance and the revel
were done,

And the stars were beginning to fade
in the sun,

I have led thee along, and have told by the way

What my heart all the night had been burning to say—

Oh ! think of the past—give a sigh to those times,

And a blessing for me to that alley of limes.

⁸ The inhabitants pronounce the name as if it were spelt Bermooda. See the commentators on the words 'still-vex'd Bermoothes,' in The Tempest.—I wonder it did not occur to some of those all-reading gentlemen that, possibly, the discoverer of this 'island of hogs and devils' might have been no less a personage than the great John Bermudez, who, about the same period (the beginning of the sixteenth century), was sent Patriarch of the Latin church to Ethiopia, and has left us most wonderful stories of the Amazons and the Griffins which he encountered.—Travels of the Jesuits, vol. i. I am afraid, however, it would take the Patriarch rather too much out of his way.

⁹ Johnson does not think that Waller was ever at Bermuda ; but the Account of the European Settlements in America affirms it confidently. (Vol. ii.) I mention this work, however, less for its authority than for the pleasure I feel in quoting an unacknowledged production of the great Edmund Burke.

If I were yonder wave, my dear,
And thou the isle it clasps around,
I would not let a foot come near
My land of bliss, my fairy ground.

If I were yonder conch of gold,
And thou the pearl within it plac'd,
I would not let an eye behold
The sacred gem my arms embrac'd.

If I were yonder orange-tree,
And thou the blossom blooming there,
I would not yield a breath of thee 11
To scent the most imploring air.

Oh! bend not o'er the water's brink,
Give not the wave that odorless sigh,
Nor let its burning mirror drink
The soft reflection of thine eye.

That glossy hair, that glowing cheek,
So pictur'd in the waters seem,
That I could gladly plunge to seek
Thy image in the glassy stream. 20

Blest fate! at once my chilly grave
And nuptial bed that stream might be;
I'll wed thee in its mimic wave,
And die upon the shade of thee.

Behold the leafy mangrove, bending
O'er the waters blue and bright,
Like Nea's silky lashes, lending
Shadow to her eyes of light.

Oh, my beloved! where'er I turn,
Some trace of thee enchants mine eyes;
In every star thy glances burn; 31
Thy blush on every flow'ret lies.

Nor find I in creation aught
Of bright, or beautiful, or rare,
Sweet to the sense, or pure to thought,
But thou art found reflected there.

THE SNOW SPIRIT

No, ne'er did the wave in its element steep

An island of lovelier charms;
It blooms in the giant embrace of the deep,

Like Hebe in Hercules' arms.
The blush of your bowers is light to the
eye,

And their melody balm to the ear;
But the fiery planet of day is too nigh,
And the Snow Spirit never comes here.

The down from his wing is as white as the pearl

That shines through thy lips when they part,

And it falls on the green earth as melting,
my girl,

As a murmur of thine on the heart.
Oh! fly to the clime, where he pillows
the death,

As he cradles the birth of the year;
Bright are your bowers and balmy their
breath,

But the Snow Spirit cannot come here.

How sweet to behold him, when born on the gale,

And brightening the bosom of morn,
He flings, like the priest of Diana, a veil
O'er the brow of each virginal thorn.

Yet think not the veil he so chillingly casts

Is the veil of a vestal severe;
No, no, thou wilt see, what a moment it lasts,

Should the Snow Spirit ever come here.

But fly to his region—lay open thy zone,
And he'll weep all his brilliancy dim,
To think that a bosom, as white as his
own,

Should not melt in the daybeam like
him.

Oh! lovely the print of those delicate feet
O'er his luminous path will appear—
Fly, fly, my beloved! this island is sweet,
But the Snow Spirit cannot come here.

Ενταυθα δε καθωρμισται ημιν, και ο, τι μεν ονομα τη νησι, ουκ οίδα' χρυση δ' αν προς γε εμου ονομαζοιτο—PHILOSTRAT. Icon. 17. lib. ii.

I stole along the flowery bank,
While many a bending seagrape¹ drank
The sprinkle of the feathery oar
That wing'd me round this fairy shore.

'Twas noon; and every orange bud
Hung languid o'er the crystal flood,
Faint as the lids of maiden's eyes
When love-thoughts in her bosom rise.
Oh, for a naiad's sparry bower,
To shade me in that glowing hour! 10

¹ The seaside or mangrove grape, a native of the West Indies.

A little dove, of milky hue,
Before me from a plantain flew,
And, light along the water's brim,
I steer'd my gentle bark by him ;
For fancy told me, Love had sent
This gentle bird with kind intent
To lead my steps, where I should meet—
I knew not what, but something sweet.

And—bless the little pilot dove !
He had indeed been sent by Love, 20
To guide me to a scene so dear
As fate allows but seldom here ;
One of those rare and brilliant hours,
That, like the aloe's¹ lingering flowers,
May blossom to the eye of man
But once in all his weary span.

Just where the margin's op'ning shade
A vista from the waters made,
My bird repos'd his silver plume
Upon a rich banana's bloom. 30
Oh vision bright ! oh spirit fair !
What spell, what magic rais'd her there ?
'Twas Nea ! slumb'ring calm and mild,
And bloomy as the dimpled child,
Whose spirit in elysium keeps
Its playful sabbath, while he sleeps.

The broad banana's green embrace
Hung shadowy round each tranquil grace ;
One little beam alone could win
The leaves to let it wander in, 40
And, stealing over all her charms,
From lip to cheek, from neck to arms,
New lustre to each beauty lent,—
Itself all trembling as it went !

Dark lay her eyelid's jetty fringe
Upon that cheek whose roseate tinge
Mix'd with its shade, like evening's light
Just touching on the verge of night.
Her eyes, though thus in slumber hid,
Seem'd glowing through the ivory lid, 50
And, as I thought, a lustre threw
Upon her lip's reflecting dew,—
Such as a night-lamp, left to shine
Alone on some secluded shrine,
May shed upon the votive wreath,
Which pious hands have hung beneath.

¹ The Agave. This, I am aware, is an erroneous notion, but it is quite true enough for poetry. Plato, I think, allows a poet to be 'three removes from truth ;' τριτατος απο της αληθειας.

² Somewhat like the symplegma of Cupid and Psyche at Florence, in which the position of

Was ever vision half so sweet !
Think, think how quick my heart-pulse beat,
As o'er the rustling bank I stole ;—
Oh ! ye, that know the lover's soul, 60
It is for you alone to guess,
That moment's trembling happiness.

A STUDY FROM THE ANTIQUE

BEHOLD, my love, the curious gem
Within this simple ring of gold ;
'Tis hallow'd by the touch of them
Who liv'd in classic hours of old.

Some fair Athenian girl, perhaps,
Upon her hand this gem display'd,
Nor thought that time's succeeding lapse
Should see it grace a lovelier maid.

Look, dearest, what a sweet design !
The more we gaze, it charms the more ;
Come—closer bring that cheek to mine,
And trace with me its beauties o'er.

Thou seest, it is a simple youth
By some enamour'd nymph embrac'd—
Look, as she leans, and say in sooth,
Is not that hand most fondly plac'd ?

Upon his curled head behind
It seems in careless play to lie,²
Yet presses gently, half inclin'd
To bring the truant's lip more nigh.

Oh happy maid ! too happy boy !
The one so fond and little loath,
The other yielding slow to joy—
Oh rare, indeed, but blissful both.

Imagine, love, that I am he,
And just as warm as he is chilling ;
Imagine, too, that thou art she,
But quite as coy as she is willing :

So may we try the graceful way
In which their gentle arms are twin'd
And thus, like her, my hand I lay
Upon thy wreathed locks behind :

Psyche's hand is finely and delicately expressive of affection. See the Museum Florentinum, tom. ii. tab. 43, 44. There are few subjects on which poetry could be more interestingly employed than in illustrating some of these ancient statues and gems.

And thus I feel thee breathing sweet,
As slow to mine thy head I move ;
And thus our lips together meet,
And thus,—and thus,—I kiss thee,
love.

— λιβανιστω ευκασεν, οτι απολλυμενον ευφραίνει.
ARISTOT. Rhetor. lib. iii. cap. 4.

THERE'S not a look, a word of thine,
My soul hath e'er forgot ;
Thou ne'er hast bid a ringlet shine,
Nor giv'n thy locks one graceful twine
Which I remember not.

There never yet a murmur fell
From that beguiling tongue,
Which did not, with a ling'ring spell,
Upon my charmed senses dwell,
Like songs from Eden sung.

Ah ! that I could, at once, forget
All, all that haunts me so—
And yet, thou witching girl,—and yet,
To die were sweeter than to let
The lov'd remembrance go.

No ; if this slighted heart must see
Its faithful pulse decay,
Oh let it die, rememb'ring thee,
And, like the burnt aroma, be
Consum'd in sweets away.

TO JOSEPH ATKINSON, ESQ.

FROM BERMUDA

'THE daylight is gone—but, before we depart,
One cup shall go round to the friend of my heart,
The kindest, the dearest—oh ! judge by the tear
I now shed while I name him, how kind and how dear.'

'Twas thus in the shade of the Calabash-Tree,
With a few, who could feel and remember like me,
The charm that, to sweeten my goblet, I threw
Was a sigh to the past and a blessing on you.

Oh ! say, is it thus, in the mirth-bringing hour,
When friends are assembled, when wit, in full flower,
Shoots forth from the lip, under Bacchus's dew,
In blossoms of thought ever springing and new—
Do you sometimes remember, and hallow the brim
Of your cup with a sigh, as you crown it to him
Who is lonely and sad in these valleys so fair,
And would pine in elysium, if friends were not there

10

Last night, when we came from the Calabash-Tree,
When my limbs were at rest and my spirit was free,
The glow of the grape and the dreams of the day
Set the magical springs of my fancy in play,
And oh,—such a vision has haunted me then
I would slumber for ages to witness again.
The many I like and the few I adore,
The friends who were dear and beloved before,
But never till now so beloved and dear,
At the call of my fancy, surrounded me here ;
And soon,—oh, at once, did the light of their smiles
To a paradise brighten this region of isles ;
More lucid the wave, as they look'd on it, flow'd,
And brighter the rose, as they gather'd it, glow'd,

20

Not the valleys Heraean (though water'd by rills
Of the pearliest flow, from those pastoral hills,¹
Where the Song of the Shepherd, primeval and wild,
Was taught to the nymphs by their mystical child,)
Could boast such a lustre o'er land and o'er wave
As the magic of love to this paradise gave.

Oh magic of love! unembellished by you,
Hath the garden a blush or the landscape a hue?
Or shines there a vista in nature or art,
Like that which Love opes thro' the eye to the heart? 40

Alas, that a vision so happy should fade!
That, when morning around me in brilliancy play'd,
The rose and the stream I had thought of at night
Should still be before me, unfadingly bright;
While the friends, who had seem'd to hang over the stream,
And to gather the roses, had fled with my dream.

But look, where, all ready, in sailing array,
The bark that's to carry these pages away,²
Impatiently flutters her wing to the wind,
And will soon leave these islets of Ariel behind. 50
What billows, what gales is she fated to prove,
Ere she sleep in the lee of the land that I love!
Yet pleasant the swell of the billows would be,
And the roar of those gales would be music to me.
Not the tranquillest air that the winds ever blew,
Not the sunniest tears of the summer-eve dew,
Were as sweet as the storm, or as bright as the foam
Of the surge, that would hurry your wanderer home.

THE STEERSMAN'S SONG,

WRITTEN ABOARD THE BOSTON FRIGATE
28TH APRIL.³

WHEN freshly blows the northern gale,
And under courses snug we fly;
Or when light breezes swell the sail,
And royals proudly sweep the sky;
Longside the wheel, unwearied still
I stand, and, as my watchful eye
Doth mark the needle's faithful thrill,
I think of her I love, and cry,
Port, my boy! port.

When calms delay, or breezes blow
Right from the point we wish to steer;
When by the wind close-haul'd we go,
And strive in vain the port to near;

² A ship, ready to sail for England.

I think 'tis thus the fates defer
My bliss with one that's far away,
And while remembrance springs to her,
I watch the sails and sighing say,
Thus, my boy! thus.

But see the wind draws kindly aft,
All hands are up the yards to square,
And now the floating stu'n-sails waft
Our stately ship through waves and air.

Oh! then I think that yet for me
Some breeze of fortune thus may spring

Some breeze to waft me, love, to thee—
And in that hope I smiling sing,
Steady, boy! so.

middle of April, in company with the Cambrian and Leander, aboard the latter of which was the Admiral, Sir Andrew Mitchell, who divides his year between Halifax and Bermuda, and is the very soul of society and good-fellowship to both. We separated in a few days, and the Boston, after a short cruise, proceeded to New York.

TO THE FIRE-FLY ¹

At morning, when the earth and sky
Are glowing with the light of spring,
We see thee not, thou humble fly!
Nor think upon thy gleaming wing.

But when the skies have lost their hue,
And sunny lights no longer play,
Oh then we see and bless thee too
For sparkling o'er the dreary way.

Thus let me hope, when lost to me
The lights that now my life illumine,
Some milder joys may come, like thee,
To cheer, if not to warm, the gloom!

TO THE LORD VISCOUNT FORBES

FROM THE CITY OF WASHINGTON

If former times had never left a trace
Of human frailty in their onward race,
Nor o'er their pathway written, as they ran,
One dark memorial of the crimes of man;
If every age, in new unconscious prime,
Rose like a phoenix, from the fires of time,
To wing its way unguided and alone,
The future smiling and the past unknown;
Then ardent man would to himself be new,
Earth at his foot and heaven within his view: 10
Well might the novice hope, the sanguine scheme
Of full perfection prompt his daring dream,
Ere cold experience, with her veteran lore,
Could tell him, fools had dreamt as much before.
But, tracing as we do, through age and clime,
The plans of virtue midst the deeds of crime,
The thinking follies and the reasoning rage
Of man, at once the idiot and the sage;
When still we see, through every varying frame
Of arts and polity, his course the same, 20
And know that ancient fools but died, to make
A space on earth for modern fools to take;
Tis strange, how quickly we the past forget;
That Wisdom's self should not be tutor'd yet,
Nor tire of watching for the monstrous birth
Of pure perfection midst the sons of earth!

¹ The lively and varying illumination, with which these fire-flies light up the woods at night, gives quite an idea of enchantment. 'Puis ces mouches se développant de l'obscurité de ces arbres et s'approchant de nous, nous

les voyions sur les orangers voisins, qu'ils mettoient tout en feu, nous rendant la vue de leurs beaux fruits dorés que la nuit avoit ravie,' &c. &c.—See L'Histoire des Antilles, art. 2. chap. 4. liv. i.

Oh! nothing but that soul which God has given,
 Could lead us thus to look on earth for heaven;
 O'er dross without to shed the light within,
 And dream of virtue while we see but sin.

30

Even here, beside the proud Potowmac's stream,
 Might sages still pursue the flatt'ring theme
 Of days to come, when man shall conquer fate,
 Rise o'er the level of his mortal state,
 Belie the monuments of frailty past,
 And plant perfection in this world at last!
 'Here,' might they say, 'shall power's divided reign
 Evince that patriots have not bled in vain.

Here godlike liberty's herculean youth,
 Cradled in peace, and nurtur'd up by truth
 To full maturity of nerve and mind,
 Shall crush the giants that bestride mankind.¹
 Here shall religion's pure and balmy draught
 In form no more from cups of state be quaff'd,
 But flow for all, through nation, rank, and sect,
 Free as that heaven its tranquil waves reflect.

40

round the columns of the public shrine
 Shall growing arts their gradual wreath intwine,
 Nor breathe corruption from the flow'ring braid,
 Nor mine that fabric which they bloom to shade.
 No longer here shall justice bound her view,
 Or wrong the many, while she rights the few;
 But take her range through all the social frame,
 Pure and pervading as that vital flame
 Which warms at once our best and meanest part,
 And thrills a hair while it expands a heart!

50

Oh golden dream! what soul that loves to scan
 The bright disk rather than the dark of man,
 That owns the good, while smarting with the ill,
 And loves the world with all its frailty still,—
 What ardent bosom does not spring to meet
 The generous hope, with all that heavenly heat,
 Which makes the soul unwilling to resign
 The thoughts of growing, even on earth, divine!
 Yes, dearest friend, I see thee glow to think
 The chain of ages yet may boast a link
 Of purer texture than the world has known,
 And fit to bind us to a Godhead's throne.

60

But, is it thus? doth even the glorious dream
 Borrow from truth that dim, uncertain gleam,
 Which tempts us still to give such fancies scope,
 As shock not reason, while they nourish hope?

70

¹ Thus Morse. 'Here the sciences and the arts of civilised life are to receive their highest improvements: here civil and religious liberty are to flourish, unchecked by the cruel hand of civil or ecclesiastical tyranny: here genius,

aided by all the improvements of former ages, is to be exerted in humanising mankind, in expanding and enriching their minds with religious and philosophical knowledge, &c. &c.—P. 569.

No, no, believe me, 'tis not so—ev'n now,
 While yet upon Columbia's rising brow
 The showy smile of young presumption plays,
 Her bloom is poison'd and her heart decays.
 Even now, in dawn of life, her sickly breath
 Burns with the taint of empires near their death
 And, like the nymphs of her own with'ring clime,
 She's old in youth, she's blasted in her prime.¹

80

Already has the child of Gallia's school
 The foul Philosophy that sins by rule,
 With all her train of reasoning, damning arts,
 Begot by brilliant heads on worthless hearts,
 Like things that quicken after Nilus' flood,
 The venom'd birth of sunshine and of mud,—
 Already has she pour'd her poison here
 O'er every charm that makes existence dear;
 Already blighted, with her black'ning trace,
 The op'ning bloom of every social grace,
 And all those courtesies, that love to shoot
 Round virtue's stem, the flow'rets of her fruit.

90

And were these errors but the wanton tide
 Of young luxuriance or unchasten'd pride;
 The fervid follies and the faults of such
 As wrongly feel, because they feel too much;
 Then might experience make the fever less,
 Nay, graft a virtue on each warm excess.
 But no; 'tis heartless, speculative ill,
 All youth's transgression with all age's chill;
 The apathy of wrong, the bosom's ice,
 A slow and cold stagnation into vice.

100

Long has the love of gold, that meanest rage,
 And latest folly of man's sinking age,
 Which, rarely venturing in the van of life,
 While nobler passions wage their heated strife,
 Comes skulking last, with selfishness and fear,
 And dies, collecting lumber in the rear,—
 Long has it palsied every grasping hand
 And greedy spirit through this bartering land;
 Turn'd life to traffic, set the demon gold
 So loose abroad that virtue's self is sold,
 And conscience, truth, and honesty are made
 To rise and fall, like other wares of trade.²

¹ 'What will be the old age of this government, if it is thus early decrepit!' Such was the remark of Fauchet, the French minister at Philadelphia, in that famous despatch to his government, which was intercepted by one of our cruisers in the year 1794. This curious memorial may be found in Porcupine's Works, vol. I. p. 279. It remains a striking monument of republican intrigue on one side, and republican profligacy on the other; and I would recommend the perusal of it to every honest politician, who may labour under a moment's delusion with respect to the purity of American patriotism.

² 'Nous voyons que, dans les pays où l'on n'est affecté que de l'esprit de commerce, on trafique de toutes les actions humaines et de toutes les vertus morales.'—Montesquieu, de l'Esprit des Loix, liv. xx. chap. 2.

Already in this free, this virtuous state,
 Which, Frenchmen tell us, was ordain'd by fate,
 To show the world, what high perfection springs
 From rabble senators, and merchant kings,—
 Even here already patriots learn to steal
 Their private perquisites from public weal, 120
 And, guardians of the country's sacred fire,
 Like Afric's priests, let out the flame for hire.
 Those vaunted demagogues, who nobly rose
 From England's debtors to be England's foes,¹
 Who could their monarch in their purse forget,
 And break allegiance, but to cancel debt,²
 Have prov'd at length, the mineral's tempting hue,
 Which makes a patriot, can unmake him too.³
 Oh! Freedom, Freedom, how I hate thy cant!
 Not Eastern bombast, not the savage rant 130
 Of purpled madmen, were they number'd all
 From Roman Nero down to Russian Paul,
 Could grate upon my ear so mean, so base,
 As the rank jargon of that factious race,
 Who, poor of heart and prodigal of words,
 Formed to be slaves, yet struggling to be lords,
 Strut forth, as patriots, from their negro-marts,
 And shout for rights, with rapine in their hearts.

Who can, with patience, for a moment see
 The medley mass of pride and misery, 140
 Of whips and charters, manacles and rights,
 Of slaving blacks and democratic whites,⁴
 And all the piebald polity that reigns
 In free confusion o'er Columbia's plains?
 To think that man, thou just and gentle God!
 Should stand before thee with a tyrant's rod
 O'er creatures like himself, with souls from thee,
 Yet dare to boast of perfect liberty;
 Away, away—I'd rather hold my neck
 By doubtful tenure from a sultan's beck, 150
 In climes, where liberty has scarce been nam'd,
 Nor any right but that of ruling claim'd,

¹ I trust I shall not be suspected of a wish to justify those arbitrary steps of the English government which the colonies found it so necessary to resist; my only object here is to expose the selfish motive of some of the leading American demagogues.

² The most persevering enemy to the interests of this country, amongst the politicians of the western world, has been a Virginian merchant, who, finding it easier to settle his conscience than his debts, was one of the first to raise the standard against Great Britain, and has ever since endeavoured to revenge upon the whole country the obligations which he lies under to a few of its merchants.

³ See Porcupine's account of the Pennsylvania Insurrection in 1794. In short, see Porcupine's works throughout, for ample corroboration of every sentiment which I have ventured to express. In saying this, I refer less to the comments of that writer than to the occurrences which he has related and the documents which he has preserved. Opinion may be suspected of bias, but facts speak for themselves.

⁴ In Virginia the effects of this system begin to be felt rather seriously. While the master raves of liberty, the slave cannot but catch the contagion, and accordingly there seldom elapses a month without some alarm of insurrection amongst the negroes. The accession of Louisiana, it is feared, will increase this embarrassment; as the numerous emigrations, which are expected to take place, from the southern states to this newly acquired territory, will considerably diminish the white population, and thus strengthen the proportion of negroes, to a degree which must ultimately be ruinous.

Than thus to live, where bastard Freedom waves
 Her fustian flag in mockery over slaves;
 Where—motley laws admitting no degree
 Betwixt the vilely slav'd and madly free—
 Alike the bondage and the licence suit,
 The brute made ruler and the man made brute.

But, while I thus, my friend, in flowerless song,
 So feebly paint, what yet I feel so strong, 160
 The ills, the vices of the land, where first
 Those rebel fiends, that rack the world, were nurst,
 Where treason's arm by royalty was nerv'd,
 And Frenchmen learn'd to crush the throne they serv'd—
 Thou, calmly lull'd in dreams of classic thought,
 By bards illumin'd and by sages taught,
 Pant'st to be all, upon this mortal scene,
 That bard hath fancied or that sage hath been.
 Why should I wake thee? why severely chase
 The lovely forms of virtue and of grace, 170
 That dwell before thee, like the pictures spread
 By Spartan matrons round the genial bed,
 Moulding thy fancy, and with gradual art
 Bright'ning the young conceptions of thy heart?

Forgive me, Forbes—and should the song destroy
 One generous hope, one throb of social joy,
 One high pulsation of the zeal for man,
 Which few can feel, and bless that few who can,—
 Oh! turn to him, beneath whose kindred eyes
 Thy talents open and thy virtues rise, 180
 Forget where nature has been dark or dim,
 And proudly study all her lights in him.
 Yes, yes, in him the erring world forget,
 And feel that man may reach perfection yet.

TO THOMAS HUME, ESQ., M.D.

FROM THE CITY OF WASHINGTON

Διηγρησμαι διηγηματα ισως απιστα. κοινωνα ὡν πεπονηα ουκ εχω.

XENOPHONT. EPHES. Ephesiæc. lib. v.

'Tis evening now; beneath the western star
 Soft sighs the lover through his sweet segar,
 And fills the ears of some consenting she
 With puffs and vows, with smoke and constancy.
 The patriot, fresh from Freedom's councils come,
 Now pleas'd retires to lash his slaves at home;
 Or woo, perhaps, some black Aspasia's charms,
 And dream of freedom in his bondsmaid's arms.¹

¹ The 'black Aspasia' of the present . . . of the United States, inter Avernales haud ignotissima nymphas, has given rise to much | pleasantry among the anti-democrat wits in America.

In fancy now, beneath the twilight gloom,
 Come, let me lead thee o'er this 'second Rome!' ¹ 10
 Where tribunes rule, where dusky Davi bow,
 And what was Goose-Creek once is Tiber now:—²
 This embryo capital, where Fancy sees
 Squares in morasses, obelisks in trees;
 Which second-sighted seers, ev'n now, adorn
 With shrines unbuilt and heroes yet unborn,
 Though nought but woods ³ and J——n they see,
 Where streets should run and sages ought to be.

And look, how calmly in yon radiant wave,
 The dying sun prepares his golden grave. 20
 Oh mighty river! oh ye banks of shade!
 Ye matchless scenes, in nature's morning made,
 While still, in all th' exuberance of prime,
 She pour'd her wonders, lavishly sublime,
 Nor yet had learn'd to stoop, with humbler care,
 From grand to soft, from wonderful to fair:—
 Say, were your towering hills, your boundless floods,
 Your rich savannas and majestic woods,
 Where bards should meditate and heroes rove,
 And woman charm, and man deserve her love,— 30
 Oh say, was world so bright, but born to grace
 Its own half-organised, half-minded race
 Of weak barbarians, swarming o'er its breast,
 Like vermin gender'd on the lion's crest?
 Were none but brutes to call that soil their home,
 Where none but demigods should dare to roam?
 Or worse, thou wondrous world! oh! doubly worse,
 Did heaven design thy lordly land to nurse
 The motley dregs of every distant clime,
 Each blast of anarchy and taint of crime 40
 Which Europe shakes from her perturbed sphere,
 In full malignity to rankle here?

¹ 'On the original location of the ground now allotted for the seat of the Federal City (says Mr. Weld), the identical spot on which the capitol now stands was called Rome. This anecdote is related by many as a certain prognostic of the future magnificence of this city, which is to be, as it were, a second Rome.'—Weld's Travels, letter iv.

² A little stream runs through the city, which, with intolerable affectation, they have styled the Tiber. It was originally called Goose-Creek.

³ 'To be under the necessity of going through a deep wood for one or two miles, perhaps, in order to see a next-door neighbour, and in the same city, is a curious and, I believe, a novel circumstance.'—Weld, letter iv.

The Federal City (if it must be called a city) has not been much increased since Mr. Weld visited it. Most of the public buildings, which were then in some degree of forwardness, have been since utterly suspended. The hotel is already a ruin; a great part of its roof has fallen in, and the rooms are left to be occupied gratuitously by the miserable Scotch and Irish emigrants. The President's house, a very noble structure, is by no means suited to the philosophical humility of its present possessor, who inhabits but a corner of the mansion itself, and abandons the rest to a state of uncleanly desolation, which those who are not philosophers cannot look at without regret. This grand edifice is encircled by a very rude paling, through which a common rustic stile introduces the visitors of the first man in America. With respect to all that is within the house, I shall imitate the prudent forbearance of Herodotus, and say, τα δε εν αροῖσιν.

The private buildings exhibit the same characteristic display of arrogant speculation and premature ruin; and the few ranges of houses which were begun some years ago have remained so long waste and unfinished, that they are now for the most part dilapidated.

But hold,—observe yon little mount of pines,
 Where the breeze murmurs and the fire-fly shines.
 There let thy fancy raise, in bold relief,
 The sculptur'd image of that veteran chief¹
 Who lost the rebel's in the hero's name,
 And climb'd o'er prostrate loyalty to fame;
 Beneath whose sword Columbia's patriot train
 Cast off their monarch, that their mob might reign.

50

How shall we rank thee upon glory's page?
 Thou more than soldier and just less than sage!
 Of peace too fond to act the conqueror's part,
 Too long in camps to learn a statesman's art,
 Nature design'd thee for a hero's mould,
 But, ere she cast thee, let the stuff grow cold.

While loftier souls command, nay, make their fate,
 Thy fate made thee and forc'd thee to be great.
 Yet Fortune, who so oft, so blindly sheds
 Her brightest halo round the weakest heads,
 Found thee undazzled, tranquil as before,
 Proud to be useful, scorning to be more;
 Less mov'd by glory's than by duty's claim,
 Renown the meed, but self-applause the aim;
 All that thou wert reflects less fame on thee,
 Far less, than all thou didst forebear to be.
 Nor yet the patriot of one land alone,—
 For, thine's a name all nations claim their own;
 And every shore, where breath'd the good and brave,
 Echo'd the plaudits thy own country gave.

60

70

Now look, my friend, where faint the moonlight falls
 On yonder dome, and, in those princely halls,—
 If thou canst hate, as sure that soul must hate,
 Which loves the virtuous, and reveres the great,—
 If thou canst loathe and execrate with me
 The poisonous drug of French philosophy,
 That nauseous slaver of these frantic times,
 With which false liberty dilutes her crimes,—
 If thou hast got, within thy freeborn breast,
 One pulse that beats more proudly than the rest,
 With honest scorn for that inglorious soul,
 Which creeps and winds beneath a mob's control,
 Which courts the rabble's smile, the rabble's nod,
 And makes, like Egypt, every beast its god,
 There, in those walls—but, burning tongue, forbear!
 Rank must be reverenc'd, even the rank that's there:
 So here I pause—and now, dear Hume, we part:
 But oft again, in frank exchange of heart,
 Thus let us meet, and mingle converse dear
 By Thames at home, or by Potowmac here.
 O'er lake and marsh, through fevers and through fogs,
 Midst bears and yankees, democrats and frogs,

80

¹ On a small hill near the capitol there is to be an equestrian statue of General Washington.

Thy foot shall follow me, thy heart and eyes
 With me shall wonder, and with me despise.
 While I, as oft, in fancy's dream shall rove,
 With thee conversing, through that land I love,
 Where, like the air that fans her fields of green,
 Her freedom spreads, unfever'd and serene;
 And sovereign man can condescend to see
 The throne and laws more sovereign still than he.

WRITTEN ON LEAVING PHILADELPHIA

— Τηνδε την πολιν φίλωσ
 Εἰπων' ἐπαξία γαρ. SOPHOCLES Oedip. Colon. v. 768.

ALONE by the Schuylkill a wanderer rov'd,
 And bright were its flowery banks to his eye;
 But far, very far were the friends that he lov'd,
 And he gaz'd on its flowery banks with a sigh.

Oh Nature, though blessed and bright are thy rays,
 O'er the brow of creation enchantingly thrown,
 Yet faint are they all to the lustre that plays
 In a smile from the heart that is fondly our own.

Nor long did the soul of the stranger remain
 Unblest by the smile he had languish'd to meet;
 Though scarce did he hope it would soothe him again,
 Till the threshold of home had been prest by his feet.

But the lays of his boyhood had stol'n to their ear,
 And they lov'd what they knew of so humble a name;
 And they told him, with flattery welcome and dear,
 That they found in his heart something better than fame.

Nor did woman—oh woman! whose form and whose soul
 Are the spell and the light of each path we pursue;
 Whether sunn'd in the tropics or chill'd at the pole,
 If woman be there, there is happiness too:—

Nor did she her enamouring magic deny,—
 That magic his heart had relinquish'd so long,—
 Like eyes he had lov'd was her eloquent eye,
 Like them did it soften and weep at his song.

Oh, blest be the tear, and in memory oft
 May its sparkle be shed o'er the wand'rer's dream;
 Thrice blest be that eye, and may passion as soft,
 As free from a pang, ever mellow its beam!

The stranger is gone—but he will not forget,
 When at home he shall talk of the toils he has known,
 To tell, with a sigh, what endearments he met,
 As he stray'd by the wave of the Schuylkill alone.

THE MOHAWK RIVER¹

FROM rise of morn till set of sun
I've seen the mighty Mohawk run ;
And as I mark'd the woods of pine
Along his mirror darkly shine,
Like tall and gloomy forms that pass
Before the wizard's midnight glass ;
And as I view'd the hurrying pace
With which he ran his turbid race,
Rushing, alike untir'd and wild,
Through shades that frown'd and flowers that smil'd,
Flying by every green recess
That woo'd him to its calm caress,
Yet, sometimes turning with the wind,
As if to leave one look behind,—
Oft have I thought, and thinking sigh'd,
How like to thee, thou restless tide,
May be the lot, the life of him
Who roams along thy water's brim ;
Through what alternate wastes of woe
And flowers of joy my path may go ;
How many a shelter'd, calm retreat
May woo the while my weary feet,
While still pursuing, still unblest,
I wander on, nor dare to rest ;
But, urgent as the doom that calls
Thy water to its destin'd falls,
I feel the world's bewild'ring force
Hurry my heart's devoted course

¹ There is a dreary and savage character in the country immediately about these Falls, which is much more in harmony with the wildness of such a scene than the cultivated lands in the neighbourhood of Niagara. See the drawing of them in Mr. Weld's book. According to him, the perpendicular height of the Cohos Fall is fifty feet ; but the Marquis de Chastellux makes it seventy-six.

The fine rainbow, which is continually forming and dissolving, as the spray rises into the light of the sun, is perhaps the most interesting beauty which these wonderful cataracts exhibit.

² The idea of this poem occurred to me in passing through the very dreary wilderness between Batavia, a new settlement in the midst of the woods, and the little village of Buffalo upon Lake Erie. This is the most fatiguing part of the route, in travelling through the Genesee country to Niagara.

³ The Five Confederated Nations (of Indians)

From lapse to lapse, till life be done,
And the spent current cease to run.

One only prayer I dare to make,
As onward thus my course I take ;—
Oh, be my falls as bright as thine !
May heaven's relenting rainbow shine
Upon the mist that circles me,
As soft as now it hangs o'er thee !

SONG OF THE EVIL SPIRIT OF
THE WOODS²

Qua via difficilis, quaque est via nulla.
OVID. Métam. lib. iii. v. 227.

Now the vapour, hot and damp,
Shed by day's expiring lamp,
Through the misty ether spreads
Every ill the white man dreads ;
Fiery fever's thirsty thrill.
Fitful ague's shivering chill !

Hark ! I hear the traveller's song,
As he winds the woods along ;—
Christian, 'tis the song of fear ;
Wolves are round thee, night is near, io
And the wild thou dar'st to roam—
Think, 'twas once the Indian's home !³

Hither, sprites, who love to harm,
Wheresoe'er you work your charm,
By the creeks, or by the brakes,
Where the pale witch feeds her snakes,
And the cayman⁴ loves to creep,
Torpid, to his wintry sleep :
Where the bird of carrion flits,
And the shudd'ring murderer sits⁵ 20

were settled along the banks of the Susquehannah and the adjacent country until the year 1779, when General Sullivan, with an army of 4000 men, drove them from their country to Niagara, where, being obliged to live on salted provisions, to which they were unaccustomed, great numbers of them died. Two hundred of them, it is said, were buried in one grave, where they had encamped.—Morse's American Geography.

⁴ The alligator, who is supposed to lie in a torpid state all the winter, in the bank of some creek or pond, having previously swallowed a large number of pine-knots, which are his only sustenance during the time.

⁵ This was the mode of punishment for murder (as Charlevoix tells us) among the Hurons. 'They laid the dead body upon poles at the top of a cabin, and the murderer was obliged to remain several days together, and to receive all that dropped from the carcass, not only on himself but on his food.'

Lone beneath a roof of blood ;
While upon his poison'd food,
From the corpse of him he slew
Drops the chill and gory dew.

Hither bend ye, turn ye hither,
Eyes that blast and wings that wither !
Cross the wand'ring Christian's way,
Lead him, ere the glimpse of day,
Many a mile of madd'ning error,
Through the maze of night and terror,
Till the morn behold him lying 31
On the damp earth, pale and dying.
Mock him, when his eager sight
Seeks the cordial cottage-light ;
Gleam then, like the lightning-bug,
Tempt him to the den that's dug
For the foul and famish'd brood
Of the she-wolf, gaunt for blood ;

Or, unto the dangerous pass
O'er the deep and dark morass, 40
Where the trembling Indian brings
Belts of porcelain, pipes, and rings,
Tributes, to be hung in air,
To the Fiend presiding there !¹

Then, when night's long labour past,
Wilder'd, faint, he falls at last,
Sinking where the causeway's edge
Moulders in the slimy sedge,
There let every noxious thing 50
Trail its filth and fix its sting ;
Let the bull-toad taint him over,
Round him let mosquitoes hover,
In his ears and eyeballs tingling,
With his blood their poison mingling,
Till, beneath the solar fires,
Ranking all, the wretch expires !

TO THE HONOURABLE W. R. SPENCER

FROM BUFFALO, UPON LAKE ERIE

Nec venit ad duros musa vocata Getas. OVID, ex Ponto, lib. i. ep. 5.

THOU oft hast told me of the happy hours
Enjoy'd by thee in fair Italia's bowers,
Where, ling'ring yet, the ghost of ancient wit
Midst modern monks profanely dares to flit,
And pagan spirits, by the pope unlaid,
Haunt every stream and sing through every shade.
There still the bard who (if his numbers be His tongue's light echo) must have talk'd like thee,—
The courtly bard, from whom thy mind has caught 10
Those playful, sunshine holidays of thought,
In which the spirit baskingly reclines,
Bright without effort, resting while it shines,—
There still he roves, and laughing loves to see
How modern priests with ancient rakes agree ;
How, 'neath the cowl, the festal garland shines,
And Love still finds a niche in Christian shrines.

There still, too, roam those other souls of song,
With whom thy spirit hath commun'd so long,
That, quick as light, their rarest gems of thought,
By Memory's magic to thy lip are brought. 20
But here, alas ! by Erie's stormy lake,
As, far from such bright haunts my course I take,
No proud remembrance o'er the fancy plays,
No classic dream, no star of other days

¹ ' We find also collars of porcelain, tobacco, ears of maize, skins, &c. by the side of difficult and dangerous ways, on rocks, or by the side of the falls ; and these are so many offerings made to the spirits which preside in these places.'—See Charlevoix's Letter on the Traditions and the Religion of the Savages of Canada.

Father Hennepin too mentions this ceremony ; he also says, ' We took notice of one barbarian, who made a kind of sacrifice upon an oak at the Cascade of St. Antony of Padua, upon the river Mississippi.'—See Hennepin's Voyage into North America.

Hath left that visionary light behind,
That ling'ring radiance of immortal mind,
Which gilds and hallows even the rudest scene,
The humblest shed, where genius once has been!

All that creation's varying mass assumes
Of grand or lovely, here aspires and blooms; 30
Bold rise the mountains, rich the gardens glow,
Bright lakes expand, and conquering¹ rivers flow;
But mind, immortal mind, without whose ray,
This world's a wilderness and man but clay,
Mind, mind alone, in barren, still repose,
Nor blooms, nor rises, nor expands, nor flows.
Take Christians, Mohawks, democrats, and all
From the rude wig-wam to the congress-hall,
From man the savage, whether slav'd or free,
To man the civiliz'd, less tame than he,— 40
'Tis one dull chaos, one unfertile strife
Betwixt half-polish'd and half barbarous life;
Where every ill the ancient world could brew
Is mix'd with every grossness of the new;
Where all corrupts, though little can entice,
And nought is known of luxury, but its vice!

Is this the region then, is this the clime
For soaring fancies? for those dreams sublime,
Which all their miracles of light reveal
To heads that meditate and hearts that feel? 50
Alas! not so—the Muse of Nature lights
Her glories round; she scales the mountain heights,
And roams the forests; every wondrous spot
Burns with her step, yet man regards it not.
She whispers round, her words are in the air,
But lost, unheard, they linger freezing there,²
Without one breath of soul, divinely strong,
One ray of mind to thaw them into song.

Yet, yet forgive me, oh ye sacred few,
Whom late by Delaware's green banks I knew; 60
Whom, known and lov'd through many a social eve,
'Twas bliss to live with, and 'twas pain to leave.³
Not with more joy the lonely exile scan'd
The writing trac'd upon the desert's sand,

¹ This epithet was suggested by Charlevoix's striking description of the confluence of the Missouri with the Mississippi. 'I believe this is the finest confluence in the world. The two rivers are much of the same breadth, each about half a league; but the Missouri is by far the most rapid, and seems to enter the Mississippi like a conqueror, through which it carries its white waves to the opposite shore, without mixing them: afterwards it gives its colour to the Mississippi, which it never loses again, but carries quite down to the sea.'—Letter xxvii.

² Alluding to the fanciful notion of 'words congealed in northern air.'

³ In the society of Mr. Dennie and his friends, at Philadelphia, I passed the few agreeable moments which my tour through the States afforded me. Mr. Dennie has succeeded in diffusing through this cultivated little circle that love for good literature and sound politics, which he feels so zealously himself, and which is so very rarely the characteristic of his countrymen. They will not, I trust, accuse me of illiberality for the picture which I have given of the ignorance and corruption that surround them. If I did not hate, as I ought, the rabble to which they are opposed, I could not value, as I do, the spirit with which they defy it; and in learning from them what Americans can be, I but see with the more indignation what Americans are.

Where his lone heart but little hop'd to find
 One trace of life, one stamp of human kind,
 Than did I hail the pure, th' enlighten'd zeal,
 The strength to reason and the warmth to feel,
 The manly polish and the illumin'd taste,
 Which,—'mid the melancholy, heartless waste
 My foot has travers'd,—oh, you sacred few!
 I found by Delaware's green banks with you.

70

Long may you loathe the Gallic dross that runs
 Through your fair country and corrupts its sons;
 Long love the arts, the glories which adorn
 Those fields of freedom, where your sires were born.
 Oh! if America can yet be great,
 If neither chain'd by choice, nor doom'd by fate
 To the mob-mania which imbrutes her now,
 She yet can raise the crown'd, yet civic brow
 Of single majesty,—can add the grace
 Of Rank's rich capital to Freedom's base,
 Nor fear the mighty shaft will feebler prove
 For the fair ornament that flowers above;—
 If yet releas'd from all that pedant throng,
 So vain of error and so pledg'd to wrong,
 Who hourly teach her, like themselves, to hide
 Weakness in vaunt, and barrenness in pride,
 She yet can rise, can wreath the Attic charms
 Of soft refinement round the pomp of arms,
 And see her poets flash the fires of song,
 To light her warriors' thunderbolts along;—
 It is to you, to souls that favouring heaven
 Has made like yours, the glorious task is given:—
 Oh! but for such, Columbia's days were done;
 Rank without ripeness, quicken'd without sun,
 Crude at the surface, rotten at the core,
 Her fruits would fall, before her spring were o'er.

Believe me, Spencer, while I wing'd the hours
 Where Schuylkill winds his way through banks of flowers,
 Though few the days, the happy evenings few,
 So warm with heart, so rich with mind they flew,
 That my charm'd soul forgot its wish to roam,
 And rested there, as in a dream of home.
 And looks I met, like looks I'd lov'd before,
 And voices too, which, as they trembled o'er
 The chord of memory, found full many a tone
 Of kindness there in concord with their own.
 Yes,—we had nights of that communion free,
 That flow of heart, which I have known with thee
 So oft, so warmly; nights of mirth and mind,
 Of whims that taught, and follies that refin'd.
 When shall we both renew them? when, restor'd
 To the gay feast and intellectual board,
 Shall I once more enjoy with thee and thine
 Those whims that teach, those follies that refine?

Even now, as wand'ring upon Erie's shore,
I hear Niagara's distant cataract roar,
I sigh for home,—alas! these weary feet
Have many a mile to journey, ere we meet,

BALLAD STANZAS

I KNEW by the smoke, that so gracefully curl'd
Above the green elms, that a cottage was near,
And I said, 'If there's peace to be found in the world,
A heart that was humble might hope for it here!'

It was noon, and on flowers that languish'd around
In silence repos'd the voluptuous bee;
Every leaf was at rest, and I heard not a sound
But the woodpecker tapping the hollow beech-tree.

And, 'Here in this lone little wood,' I exclaim'd
With a maid who was lovely to soul and to eye,
'Who would blush when I prais'd her, and weep if I blam'd,
How blest could I live, and how calm could I die!

'By the shade of yon sumach, whose red berry dips
In the gush of the fountain, how sweet to recline,
And to know that I sigh'd upon innocent lips,
Which had never been sigh'd on by any but mine!'

A CANADIAN BOAT SONG

WRITTEN ON THE RIVER ST. LAWRENCE¹

Et remigem cantus hortatur.—QUINTILLIAN.

FAINTLY as tolls the evening chime
Our voices keep tune and our oars keep time.
Soon as the woods on shore look dim,
We'll sing at St. Ann's our parting hymn.²

¹ I wrote these words to an air which our boatmen sung to us frequently. The wind was so unfavourable that they were obliged to row all the way, and we were five days in descending the river from Kingston to Montreal, exposed to an intense sun during the day, and at night forced to take shelter from the dews in any miserable hut upon the banks that would receive us. But the magnificent scenery of the St. Lawrence repays all such difficulties.

Our voyageurs had good voices, and sung perfectly in tune together. The original words of the air, to which I adapted these stanzas, appeared to be a long, incoherent story, of which I could understand but little, from the barbarous pronunciation of the Canadians. It begins

Dans mon chemin j'ai rencontré
Deux cavaliers très-bien montés;

And the refrain to every verse was,
A l'ombre d'un bois je m'en vais jouer,
A l'ombre d'un bois je m'en vais danser.

I ventured to harmonize this air, and have published it. Without that charm which association gives to every little memorial of scenes or feelings that are past, the melody may, perhaps, be thought common and trifling; but I remember when we have entered, at sunset, upon one of those beautiful lakes, into which the St. Lawrence so grandly and unexpectedly opens, I have heard this simple air with a pleasure which the finest compositions of the first masters have never given me; and now there is not a note of it which does not recall to my memory the dip of our oars in the St. Lawrence, the flight of our boat down the Rapids, and all those new and fanciful impressions to which my heart was alive during the whole of this very interesting voyage.

The above stanzas are supposed to be sung by those voyageurs who go to the Grand Portage by the Utawas River. For an account of this wonderful undertaking, see Sir Alexander Mackenzie's General History of the Fur Trade, prefixed to his Journal.

² At the Rapid of St. Ann they are obliged to take out part, if not the whole, of their

Row, brothers, row, the stream runs fast,
The Rapids are near and the daylight's past.

Why should we yet our sail unfurl?
There is not a breath the blue wave to curl;
But, when the wind blows off the shore,
Oh! sweetly we'll rest our weary oar.
Blow, breezes, blow, the stream runs fast,
The Rapids are near and the daylight's past.

Utas' tide! this trembling moon
Shall see us float over thy surges soon.
Saint of this green isle! hear our prayers,
Oh, grant us cool heavens and favouring airs.
Blow, breezes, blow, the stream runs fast,
The Rapids are near and the daylight's past.

TO THE LADY CHARLOTTE RAWDON

FROM THE BANKS OF THE ST. LAWRENCE

Not many months have now been dream'd away
Since yonder sun, beneath whose evening ray
Our boat glides swiftly past these wooded shores,
Saw me where Trent his mazy current pours,
And Donington's old oaks, to every breeze,
Whisper the tale of by-gone centuries;—
Those oaks, to me as sacred as the groves,
Beneath whose shade the pious Persian roves,
And hears the spirit-voice of sire, or chief,
Or loved mistress, sigh in every leaf.¹
There, oft, dear Lady, while thy lip hath sung
My own unpolish'd lays, how proud I've hung
On every tuneful accent! proud to feel
That notes like mine should have the fate to steal,
As o'er thy hallowing lip they sigh'd along,
Such breath of passion and such soul of song.
Yes,—I have wonder'd, like some peasant boy
Who sings, on Sabbath-eve, his strains of joy,
And when he hears the wild, untutor'd note
Back to his ear on softening echoes float,
Believes it still some answering spirit's tone,
And thinks it all too sweet to be his own!

20

I dreamt not then that, e'er the rolling year
Had fill'd its circle, I should wander here
In musing awe; should tread this wondrous world,
See all its store of inland waters hurl'd
In one vast volume down Niagara's steep,
Or calm behold them, in transparent sleep,
Where the blue hills of old Toronto shed
Their evening shadows o'er Ontario's bed;

lading. It is from this spot the Canadians consider they take their departure, as it possesses the last church on the island, which is dedicated to the tutelar saint of voyagers.'—Mackenzie, General History of the Fur Trade.

¹ 'Avendo essi per costume di avere in venerazione gli alberi grandi et antichi, quasi che siano spesso ricettacoli di anime beate.'—Pietro della Valle, parte seconda, lettera 16 dai giardini di Sciraz.

Should trace the grand Cadaraqui, and glide
 Down the white rapids of his lordly tide
 Through massy woods, mid islets flowering fair,
 And blooming glades, where the first sinful pair
 For consolation might have weeping trod,
 When banish'd from the garden of their God.
 Oh, Lady! these are miracles, which man,
 Cag'd in the bounds of Europe's pigmy span,
 Can scarcely dream of,—which his eye must see
 To know how wonderful this world can be!

40

But lo,—the last tints of the west decline,
 And night falls dewy o'er these banks of pine.
 Among the reeds, in which our idle boat
 Is rock'd to rest, the wind's complaining note
 Dies like a half-breath'd whispering of flutes;
 Along the wave the gleaming porpoise shoots,
 And I can trace him, like a watery star,¹
 Down the steep current, till he fades afar
 Amid the foaming breakers' silvery light,
 Where yon rough rapids sparkle through the night,
 Here, as along this shadowy bank I stray,
 And the smooth glass-snake,² gliding o'er my way,
 Shows the dim moonlight through his scaly form,
 Fancy, with all the scene's enchantment warm,
 Hears in the murmur of the nightly breeze
 Some Indian Spirit warble words like these:—

50

From the land beyond the sea,
 Whither happy spirits flee;
 Where, transform'd to sacred doves,³
 Many a blessed Indian roves
 Through the air on wing, as white
 As those wondrous stones of light,⁴
 Which the eye of morning counts
 On the Apalachian mounts,— Hither off my flight I take Over Huron's lucid lake,
 Where the wave, as clear as dew,
 Sleeps beneath the light canoe,
 Which, reflected, floating there,
 Looks as if it hung in air.⁵

60

70

¹ Anburey, in his Travels, has noticed this shooting illumination which porpoises diffuse at night through the river St. Lawrence.—Vol. i. p. 29.

² The glass-snake is brittle and transparent.

³ 'The departed spirit goes into the Country of Souls, where, according to some, it is transformed into a dove.'—Charlevoix, Upon the Traditions and the Religion of the Savages of Canada. See the curious fable of the American Orpheus in Lafitau, tom. i. p. 402.

⁴ 'The mountains appeared to be sprinkled with white stones, which glistened in the sun, and were called by the Indians manetoe aseniah or spirit-stones.'—Mackenzie's Journal.

⁵ These lines were suggested by Carver's description of one of the American lakes. 'When it was calm,' he says, 'and the sun shone bright, I could sit in my canoe, where the depth was upwards of six fathoms, and plainly see huge piles of stone at the bottom, of different shapes, some of which appeared as if they had been hewn; the water was at this time as pure and transparent as air, and my canoe seemed as if it hung suspended in that element. It was impossible to look attentively through this limpid medium, at the rocks below, without finding, before many minutes were elapsed, your head swim and your eyes no longer able to behold the dazzling scene.'

Then, when I have stray'd a while
Through the Manataulin isle,¹
Breathing all its holy bloom,
Swift I mount me on the plume
Of my Wakon-Bird,² and fly
Where, beneath a burning sky,
O'er the bed of Erie's lake
Slumbers many a water-snake,
Wrapt within the web of leaves,
Which the water-lily weaves.³
Next I chase the flow'et-king
Through his rosy realm of spring;
See him now, while diamond hues
Soft his neck and wings suffuse,
In the leafy chalice sink,
Thirsting for his balmy drink;
Now behold him all on fire,
Lovely in his looks of ire,
Breaking every infant stem,
Scatt'ring every velvet gem,
Where his little tyrant lip
Had not found enough to sip.

Then my playful hand I steep
Where the gold-thread⁴ loves to creep,
Cull from thence a tangled wreath,
Words of magic round it breathe,
And the sunny chaplet spread
O'er the sleeping fly-bird's head,⁵
Till, with dreams of honey blest,
Haunted, in his downy nest,
By the garden's fairest spells,

Dewy buds and fragrant bells,
Fancy all his soul embowers
In the fly-bird's heaven of flowers.

Of, when hoar and silvery flakes
Melt along the ruffled lakes,
When the gray moose sheds his horns,
When the track, at evening, warns
Weary hunters of the way
To the wig-wam's cheering ray,
Then, aloft through freezing air,
With the snow-bird⁶ soft and fair
As the fleece that heaven flings
O'er his little pearly wings,
Light above the rocks I play,
Where Niagara's starry spray,
Frozen on the cliff, appears
Like a giant's starting tears.
There, amid the island-sedge,
Just upon the cataract's edge,
Where the foot of living man
Never trod since time began,
Lone I sit, at close of day,
While, beneath the golden ray,
Icy columns gleam below,
Feather'd round with falling snow,
And an arch of glory springs,
Sparkling as the chain of rings
Round the neck of virgins hung,— Virgins,⁷ who have wander'd young
O'er the waters of the west
To the land where spirits rest!

Thus have I charm'd, with visionary lay,
The lonely moments of the night away;
And now, fresh daylight o'er the water beams!
Once more embark'd upon the glittering streams,

² 'The Wakon-Bird, which probably is of the same species with the Bird of Paradise, receives its name from the ideas the Indians have of its superior excellence; the Wakon-Bird being, in their language, the Bird of the Great Spirit.'—Morse.

Our boat flies light along the leafy shore,
 Shooting the falls, without a dip of oar
 Or breath of zephyr, like the mystic bark
 The poet saw, in dreams divinely dark,
 Borne, without sails, along the dusky flood,¹
 While on its deck a pilot angel stood,
 And, with his wings of living light unfurl'd,
 Coasted the dim shores of another world !

140

Yet, oh ! believe me, mid this mingled maze
 Of nature's beauties, where the fancy strays
 From charm to charm, where every flow'ret's hue
 Hath something strange, and every leaf is new,—
 I never feel a joy so pure and still,
 So inly felt, as when some brook or hill,
 Or veteran oak, like those remember'd well,
 Some mountain echo or some wild-flower's smell,
 (For, who can say by what small fairy ties
 The mem'ry clings to pleasure as it flies ?)
 Reminds my heart of many a silvan dream
 I once indulg'd by Trent's inspiring stream ;
 Of all my sunny morns and moonlight nights
 On Donnington's green lawns and breezy heights.

150

Whether I trace the tranquil moments o'er
 When I have seen thee cull the fruits of lore,
 With him, the polish'd warrior, by thy side,
 A sister's idol and a nation's pride !
 When thou hast read of heroes, trophied high
 In ancient fame, and I have seen thine eye
 Turn to the living hero, while it read,
 For pure and bright'ning comments on the dead ;—
 Or whether memory to my mind recalls
 The festal grandeur of those lordly halls,
 When guests have met around the sparkling board,
 And welcome warm'd the cup that luxury pour'd ;
 When the bright future star of England's throne,
 With magic smile, hath o'er the banquet shone,
 Winning respect, nor claiming what he won,
 But tempering greatness, like an evening sun
 Whose light the eye can tranquilly admire,
 Radiant, but mild, all softness, yet all fire ;—
 Whatever hue my recollections take,
 Even the regret, the very pain they wake
 Is mix'd with happiness ;—but, ah ! no more—
 Lady ! adieu—my heart has linger'd o'er
 Those vanish'd times, till all that once was mine lies,
 Stream, banks, and bowers have faded from my eyes !

IMPROMPTU

AFTER A VISIT TO MRS. —, OF MONTREAL

'Twas but for a moment—and yet in that time
 She crowded th' impressions of many an hour:
 Her eye had a glow, like the sun of her clime,
 Which wak'd every feeling at once into flower.

Oh! could we have borrow'd from Time but a day,
 To renew such impressions again and again,
 The things we should look and imagine and say
 Would be worth all the life we had wasted till then.

What we had not the leisure or language to speak,
 We should find some more spiritual mode of revealing,
 And, between us, should feel just as much in a week
 As others would take a millennium in feeling.

WRITTEN ON PASSING DEADMAN'S ISLAND ¹

IN THE GULF OF ST. LAWRENCE, LATE IN THE EVENING, SEPTEMBER, 1804

SEE you, beneath yon cloud so dark,
 Fast gliding along a gloomy bark?
 Her sails are full,—though the wind is still,
 And there blows not a breath her sails to fill!

Say what doth that vessel of darkness bear?
 The silent calm of the grave is there,
 Save now and again a death-knell rung,
 And the flap of the sails with night-fog hung.

There lieth a wreck on the dismal shore
 Of cold and pitiless Labrador;
 Where, under the moon, upon mounts of frost,
 Full many a mariner's bones are tost.

Yon shadowy bark hath been to that wreck,
 And the dim blue fire, that lights her deck,
 Doth play on as pale and livid a crew
 As ever yet drank the churchyard dew.

To Deadman's Isle, in the eye of the blast,
 To Deadman's Isle, she speeds her fast;
 By skeleton shapes her sails are fur'd,
 And the hand that steers is not of this world!

Oh! hurry thee on—oh! hurry thee on,
 Thou terrible bark, ere the night be gone,
 Nor let morning look on so foul a sight
 As would blanch for ever her rosy light!

¹ This is one of the Magdalen Islands, and, singularly enough, is the property of Sir Isaac Coffin. The above lines were suggested by a superstition very common among sailors, who call this ghost-ship, I think, 'the flying Dutchman.'

We were thirteen days on our passage from Quebec to Halifax, and I had been so spoiled by the truly splendid hospitality of my friends of the Phaeton and Boston, that I was but ill prepared for the miseries of a Canadian vessel. The weather, however, was pleasant; and the scenery along the river delightful. Our passage through the Gut of Canso, with a bright sky and a fair wind, was particularly striking and romantic.

TO THE BOSTON FRIGATE¹

ON LEAVING HALIFAX FOR ENGLAND, OCTOBER, 1804

Νοστού προφασις γλυκεροῦ. PINDAR, Pyth. 4.

WITH triumph this morning, oh Boston! I hail
 The stir of thy deck and the spread of thy sail,
 For they tell me I soon shall be wafted, in thee,
 To the flourishing isle of the brave and the free,
 And that chill Nova-Scotia's unpromising strand²
 Is the last I shall tread of American land.
 Well—peace to the land! may her sons know, at length,
 That in high-minded honour lies liberty's strength,
 That though man be as free as the fetterless wind,
 As the wantonest air that the north can unbind, 10
 Yet, if health do not temper and sweeten the blast,
 If no harvest of mind ever sprung where it pass'd,
 Then unblest is such freedom, and baleful its might,—
 Free only to ruin, and strong but to blight!

Farewell to the few I have left with regret;
 May they sometimes recall, what I cannot forget,
 The delight of those evenings,—too brief a delight!
 When in converse and song we have stol'n on the night;
 When they've ask'd me the manners, the mind, or the mien
 Of some bard I had known or some chief I had seen, 20
 Whose glory, though distant, they long had ador'd,
 Whose name had oft hallow'd the wine-cup they pour'd
 And still as, with sympathy humble but true,
 I have told of each bright son of fame all I knew,
 They have listen'd, and sigh'd that the powerful stream
 Of America's empire should pass, like a dream,
 Without leaving one relic of genius, to say
 How sublime was the tide which had vanish'd away:
 Farewell to the few—though we never may meet
 On this planet again, it is soothing and sweet 30
 To think that, whenever my song or my name
 Shall recur to their ear, they'll recall me the same
 I have been to them now, young, unthoughtful, and blest,
 Ere hope had deceiv'd me or sorrow deprest.

But, Douglas! while thus I recall to my mind
 The elect of the land we shall soon leave behind,
 I can read in the weather-wise glance of thine eye,
 As it follows the rack fitting over the sky,

¹ Commanded by Captain J. E. Douglas, with whom I returned to England, and to whom I am indebted for many, many kindnesses. In truth, I should but offend the delicacy of my friend Douglas, and, at the same time, do injustice to my own feelings of gratitude, did I attempt to say how much I owe to him.

² Sir John Wentworth, the Governor of Nova Scotia, very kindly allowed me to accompany him on his visit to the College, which they have lately established at Windsor, about forty miles from Halifax, and I was indeed most pleasantly surprised by the beauty and fertility of the country which opened upon us after the bleak and rocky wilderness by which Halifax is surrounded.—I was told that, in travelling onwards, we should find the soil and the scenery improve, and it gave me much pleasure to know that the worthy Governor has by no means such an inamabile regnum as I was, at first sight, inclined to believe.

That the faint coming breeze will be fair for our flight,
 And shall steal us away, ere the falling of night. 40
 Dear Douglas! thou knowest, with thee by my side,
 With thy friendship to soothe me, thy courage to guide,
 There is not a bleak isle in those summerless seas,
 Where the day comes in darkness, or shines but to freeze,
 Not a tract of the line, not a barbarous shore,
 That I could not with patience, with pleasure explore!
 Oh think then how gladly I follow thee now,
 When Hope smooths the billowy path of our prow,
 And each prosperous sigh of the west-springing wind
 Takes me nearer the home where my heart is inshrined; 50
 Where the smile of a father shall meet me again,
 And the tears of a mother turn bliss into pain;
 Where the kind voice of sisters shall steal to my heart,
 And ask it, in sighs, how we ever could part?—

But see!—the bent top-sails are ready to swell—
 To the boat—I am with thee—Columbia, farewell!

CORRUPTION AND INTOLERANCE

TWO POEMS

ADDRESSED TO AN ENGLISHMAN BY AN IRISHMAN

PREFACE

In the first of the two following Poems, I have ventured to speak of the Revolution of 1688, in language which has sometimes been employed by Tory writers, and which is therefore neither very new nor popular. But however an Englishman might be reproached with ingratitude, for depreciating the merits and results of a measure, which he is taught to regard as the source of his liberties—however ungrateful it might appear in Alderman B—reh to question for a moment the purity of that glorious era, to which he is indebted for the seasoning of so many orations—yet an Irishman, who has none of these obligations to acknowledge; to whose country the Revolution brought nothing but injury and insult, and who recollects that the book of Molyneux was burned, by order of William's Whig Parliament, for daring to extend to unfortunate Ireland those principles on which the Revolution was professedly founded—an Irishman may be allowed to criticise freely the measures of that period, without exposing himself either to the imputation of ingratitude, or to the suspicion of being influenced by any Popish remains of Jacobitism. No nation, it is true, was ever blessed with a more golden opportunity of establishing and securing its liberties for ever than the conjuncture of Eighty-eight presented to the people of Great Britain. But the disgraceful reigns of Charles and James had weakened and degraded the national character. The bold notions of popular right, which had arisen out of the struggles between Charles the First and his Parliament, were gradually supplanted by those slavish doctrines for which Lord H—kesb—ry eulogises the churchmen of that period; and as the Reformation had happened too soon for the purity of religion, so the Revolution came too late for the spirit of liberty. Its advantages accordingly were for the most part specious and transitory, while the evils which it entailed are still felt and still increasing. By rendering unnecessary the frequent exercise of Prerogative,—that unwieldy power which cannot move a step without alarm,—it diminished the only interference of the Crown, which is singly and independently exposed before the people, and whose abuses therefore are obvious to their senses and capacities. Like the myrtle over a celebrated statue in Minerva's temple at Athens, it skilfully veiled from the public eye the only obtrusive feature of royalty. At the same time, however, that the Revolution abridged this unpopular attribute, it amply compensated by the substitution of a new power, as much more potent in its effect as it is more secret in its operations. In the disposal of an immense revenue and the extensive patronage annexed to it, the first foundations of this power of the Crown were laid; the innovation of a standing army at once increased and strengthened it, and the few slight barriers which the Act of Settlement opposed to its progress have all been gradually removed during the whiggish reigns that succeeded; till at length this spirit of influence has become the vital principle of the state,—an agency, subtle and unseen, which pervades every part of the Constitution, lurks under all its forms and regulates all its movements, and, like the invisible sylph or grace which presides over the motions of beauty,

*Illam, quicquid agit, quoquo vestigia flectit,
Componit furtim subsequiturque.*

The cause of Liberty and the Revolution are so habitually associated in the minds of Englishmen, that probably in objecting to the latter I may be thought hostile or indifferent to the former. But assuredly nothing could be more unjust than such a suspicion. The very object, indeed, which my humble animadversions would attain is, that in the crisis to which I think England is now hastening, and between which and foreign subjugation she may soon be compelled to choose, the errors and omissions of 1688 should be remedied; and, as it was then her fate to experience a Revolution without Reform, so she may now endeavour to accomplish a Reform without Revolution.

In speaking of the parties which have so long agitated England, it will be observed that I lean as little to the Whigs as to their adversaries. Both factions have been equally cruel to Ireland, and perhaps equally insincere in their efforts for the liberties of England. There is one name, indeed, connected with whiggism of which I can never think but with veneration and tenderness. As justly, however, might the light of the sun be claimed by any particular nation, as the sanction of that name be monopolised by any party whatsoever. Mr. Fox belonged to mankind, and they have lost in him their ablest friend.

With respect to the few lines upon Intolerance, which I have subjoined, they are but the imperfect beginning of a long series of Essays, with which I here menace my readers, upon the same important subject. I shall look to no higher merit in the task, than that of giving a new form to claims and remonstrances, which have often been much more eloquently urged, and which would long ere now have produced their effect, but that the minds of some of our statesmen, like the pupil of the human eye, contract themselves the more, the stronger light there is shed upon them.

CORRUPTION; AN EPISTLE

Νυν δ' ἀπανθ' ὡσπερ ἐξ αγορᾶς εκπεπραταί ταυτὰ ἀντιστηκαί τε ἀντὶ τούτων, ὅφ' ὦν ἀπολώλε καὶ

DEMOSTH. Philipp. iii.

Boast on, my friend—though stript of all beside,
Thy struggling nation still retains her pride :¹
That pride, which once in genuine glory woke
When Marlborough fought, and brilliant St. John spoke ;
That pride which still, by time and shame unstung,
Outlives even Wh—tel—cke's sword and H—wk—sb'ry's tongue !
Boast on, my friend, while in this humbled isle
Where Honour mourns and Freedom fears to smile,
Where the bright light of England's fame is known
But by the shadow o'er our fortunes thrown ;
Where, doom'd ourselves to nought but wrongs and slights,
We hear you boast of Britain's glorious rights,
As wretched slaves, that under hatches lie,
Hear those on deck extol the sun and sky !
Boast on, while wandering through my native haunts,
I coldly listen to thy patriot vaunts ;
And feel, though close our wedded countries twine,
More sorrow for my own than pride from thine.

Yet pause a moment—and if truths severe
Can find an inlet to that courtly ear,
Which hears no news but W—rd's gazetted lies,
And loves no politics in rhyme but Pye's,—
If aught can please thee but the good old saws
Of 'Church and State,' and 'William's matchless laws,'
And 'Acts and Rights of glorious Eighty-eight,'—
Things, which though now a century out of date,
Still serve to ballast, with convenient words,
A few crank arguments for speeching lords,—
Turn, while I tell how England's freedom found,
Where most she look'd for life, her deadliest wound ;
How brave she struggled, while her foe was seen,
How faint since Influence lent that foe a screen ;
How strong o'er James and Popery she prevail'd,
How weakly fell, when Whigs and gold assail'd.

While kings were poor, and all those schemes unknown
Which drain the people, to enrich the throne ;
Ere yet a yielding Commons had supplied
Those chains of gold by which themselves are tied ;
Then proud Prerogative, untaught to creep
With bribery's silent foot on Freedom's sleep,

¹ 'By the total reduction of the kingdom of Ireland in 1691 (says Burke), the ruin of the native Irish, and in a great measure, too, of the first races of the English, was completely accomplished. The new English interest was settled with as solid a stability as any thing in human affairs can look for. All the penal laws of that unparalleled code of oppression, which were made after the last event, were manifestly the effects of national hatred and scorn towards a conquered people, whom the victors delighted to trample upon, and were not at all afraid to provoke.' Yet this is the era to which the wise Common Council of Dublin refers us for 'invaluable blessings,' &c.

Frankly avow'd his bold enslaving plan,
 And claim'd a right from God to trample man!
 But Luther's schism had too much rous'd mankind
 For Hampden's truths to linger long behind;
 Nor then, when king-like popes had fallen so low,
 Could pope-like kings escape the levelling blow.
 That ponderous sceptre (in whose place we bow
 To the light talisman of influence now),
 Too gross, too visible to work the spell
 Which modern power performs, in fragments fell :
 In fragments lay, till, patch'd and painted o'er
 With fleur-de-lys, it shone and scourg'd once more.

50

'Twas then, my friend, thy kneeling nation quaff'd
 Long, long and deep, the churchman's opiate draught
 Of passive, prone obedience—then took flight
 All sense of man's true dignity and right;
 And Britons slept so sluggish in their chain,
 That Freedom's watch-voice call'd almost in vain.
 Oh England! England! what a chance was thine,
 When the last tyrant of that ill-starr'd line
 Flew from his sullied crown, and left thee free
 To found thy own eternal liberty!
 How nobly high, in that propitious hour,
 Might patriot hands have rais'd the triple tower
 Of British freedom, on a rock divine
 Which neither force could storm nor treachery mine!
 But, no—the luminous, the lofty plan,
 Like mighty Babel, seem'd too bold for man;
 The curse of jarring tongues again was given
 To thwart a work which rais'd men nearer heaven.
 While Tories marr'd what Whigs had scarce begun,
 While Whigs undid what Whigs themselves had done,
 The hour was lost, and William, with a smile,
 Saw Freedom weeping o'er the unfinish'd pile!

60

70

Hence all the ills you suffer,—hence remain
 Such galling fragments of that feudal chain,
 Whose links, around you by the Norman flung,
 Though loos'd and broke so often, still have clung.
 Hence sly Prerogative, like Jove of old,
 Has turn'd his thunder into showers of gold,
 Whose silent courtship wins securer joys,
 Taints by degrees, and ruins without noise.
 While parliaments, no more those sacred things
 Which make and rule the destiny of kings,
 Like loaded dice by ministers are thrown,
 And each new set of sharpeners cog their own.
 Hence the rich oil, that from the Treasury steals,
 Drips smooth o'er all the Constitution's wheels,
 Giving the old machine such pliant play,
 That Court and Commons jog one joltless way,
 While Wisdom trembles for the crazy car,
 So gilt, so rotten, carrying fools so far;

80

90

And the dup'd people, hourly doom'd to pay
 The sums that bribe their liberties away,—
 Like a young eagle, who has lent his plume
 To fledge the shaft by which he meets his doom,
 See their own feathers pluck'd, to wing the dart
 Which rank corruption destines for their heart !
 But soft ! methinks I hear thee proudly say
 'What ! shall I listen to the impious lay,
 That dares, with Tory licence, to profane
 The bright bequests of William's glorious reign ?
 Shall the great wisdom of our patriot sires,
 Whom H—wks—b—y quotes and savoury B—rch admires,
 Be slander'd thus ? Shall honest St—le agree
 With virtuous R—se to call us pure and free,
 Yet fail to prove it ? Shall our patent pair
 Of wise state-poets waste their words in air,
 And P—e unheeded breathe his prosperous strain,
 And C—nn—ng take the people's sense in vain ?'

100

110

The people !—ah, that Freedom's form should stay
 Where Freedom's spirit long hath pass'd away !
 That a false smile should play around the dead,
 And flush the features when the soul hath fled !
 When Rome had lost her virtue with her rights,
 When her foul tyrant sat on Capreae's heights
 Amid his ruffian spies, and doom'd to death
 Each noble name they blasted with their breath,—
 Even then, (in mockery of that golden time,
 When the Republic rose revered, sublime,
 And her proud sons, diffus'd from zone to zone,
 Gave kings to every nation but their own,)
 Even then the senate and the tribunes stood,
 Insulting marks, to show how high the flood
 Of Freedom flow'd, in glory's by-gone day,
 And how it ebb'd,—for ever ebb'd away !

120

Look but around—though yet a tyrant's sword
 Nor haunts our sleep nor glitters o'er our board,
 Though blood be better drawn, by modern quacks,
 With Treasury leeches than with sword or axe ;
 Yet say, could even a prostrate tribune's power,
 Or a mock senate, in Rome's servile hour,
 Insult so much the claims, the rights of man,
 As doth that fetter'd mob, that free divan,
 Of noble tools and honourable knaves,
 Of pension'd patriots and privileg'd slaves ;—
 That party-colour'd mass, which nought can warm
 But rank corruption's heat—whose quicken'd swarm
 Spread their light wings in Bribery's golden sky,
 Buzz for a period, lay their eggs, and die ;—
 That greedy vampire, which from freedom's tomb
 Comes forth, with all the mimicry of bloom
 Upon its lifeless cheek, and sucks and drains
 A people's blood to feed its putrid veins !

130

140

Thou start'st, my friend, at picture drawn so dark—
 'Is there no light?' thou ask'st—'no ling'ring spark
 Of ancient fire to warm us? Lives there none,
 To act a Marvell's part?'¹—alas! not one.
 To place and power all public spirit tends,
 In place and power all public spirit ends;
 Like hardy plants, that love the air and sky,
 When out, 'twill thrive—but taken in, 'twill die!

150

Not bolder truths of sacred Freedom hung
 From Sidney's pen or burn'd on Fox's tongue,
 Than upstart Whigs produce each market night,
 While yet their conscience, as their purse, is light;
 While debts at home excite their care for those
 Which, dire to tell, their much-lov'd country owes,
 And loud and upright, till their prize be known,
 They thwart the King's supplies to raise their own.
 But bees, on flowers alighting, cease their hum—
 So, settling upon places, Whigs grow dumb.
 And, though most base is he who, 'neath the shade
 Of Freedom's ensign plies corruption's trade,
 And makes the sacred flag he dares to show
 His passport to the market of her foe,
 Yet, yet, I own, so venerably dear
 Are Freedom's grave old anthems to my ear,
 That I enjoy them, though by traitors sung,
 And reverence Scripture even from Satan's tongue.
 Nay, when the constitution has expir'd,
 I'll have such men, like Irish wakers, hir'd
 To chant old 'Habeas Corpus' by its side,
 And ask, in purchas'd ditties, why it died?

160

See yon smooth lord, whom nature's plastic pains
 Would seem to've fashion'd for those Eastern reigns
 When eunuchs flourish'd, and such nerveless things
 As men rejected were the chosen of Kings;—
 Even he, forsooth, (oh fraud, of all the worst!)
 Dar'd to assume the patriot's name at first—
 Thus Pitt began, and thus begin his apes;
 Thus devils, when first rais'd, take pleasing shapes.
 But oh, poor Ireland! if revenge be sweet
 For centuries of wrong, for dark deceit
 And with'ring insult—for the Union thrown Into thy bitter cup,² when that alone
 Of slavery's draught was wanting—if for this
 Revenge be sweet, thou hast that daemon's bliss;
 For, sure, 'tis more than hell's revenge to see
 That England trusts the men who've ruin'd thee;—
 That, in these awful days, when every hour
 Creates some new or blasts some ancient power,

 Whose light compell'd each wond'ring foe to yield,
 With baleful lustre blinds the brave and free,
 And dazzles Europe into slavery,—

 When Mind should rule, and—Fox should not have died,
 All that devoted England can oppose
 To enemies made fiends and friends made foes, 200
 Is the rank refuse, the despis'd remains
 Of that un pitying power, whose whips and chains
 Drove Ireland first to turn, with harlot glance,
 Tow' rds other shores, and woo th' embrace of France;—
 Those hack'd and tainted tools, so foully fit
 For the grand artizan of mischief, P—tt,
 So useless ever but in vile employ,
 So weak to save, so vigorous to destroy—
 Such are the men that guard thy threaten'd shore,
 Oh England! sinking England! boast no more. 210

INTOLERANCE; A SATIRE

'This clamour, which pretends to be raised for the safety of religion, has almost worn out the very appearance of it, and rendered us not only the most divided but the most immoral people upon the face of the earth.'—ADDISON, Freeholder, No. 37.

START not, my friend, nor think the muse will stain
 Her classic fingers with the dust profane
 Of Bulls, Decrees, and all those thund'ring scrolls,
 Which took such freedom once with royal souls,
 When heaven was yet the pope's exclusive trade,
 And kings were damn'd as fast as now they're made.
 No, no—let D—gen—n search the papal chair²
 For fragrant treasures long forgotten there;
 And, as the witch of sunless Lapland thinks
 That little swarthy gnomes delight in stinks, 10
 Let sallow P—rc—v—I snuff up the gale
 Which wizard D—gen—n's gather'd sweets exhale.
 Enough for me, whose heart has learn'd to scorn
 Bigots alike in Rome or England born,
 Who loathe the venom, whencesoe'er it springs,
 From popes or lawyers, pastry-cooks or kings,—
 Enough for me to laugh and weep by turns,
 As mirth provokes, or indignation burns,
 As C—nn—ng vapours, or as France succeeds,
 As H—wk—sb'ry prosers, or as Ireland bleeds! 20

And thou, my friend, if, in these headlong days,
 When bigot Zeal her drunken antics plays
 So near a precipice, that men the while
 Look breathless on and shudder while they smile—

If, in such fearful days, thou'lt dare to look
 To hapless Ireland, to this rankling nook
 Which Heaven hath freed from poisonous things in vain,
 While G—ff—rd's tongue and M—sgr—ve's pen remain—
 If thou hast yet no golden blinkers got
 To shade thine eyes from this devoted spot, 30
 Whose wrongs, though blazon'd o'er the world they be,
 Placemen alone are privileged not to see—
 Oh! turn awhile, and, though the shamrock wreathes
 My homely harp, yet shall the song it breathes
 Of Ireland's slavery, and of Ireland's woes,
 Live, when the memory of her tyrant foes
 Shall but exist, all future knaves to warn,
 Embalm'd in hate and canonised by scorn.
 When C—stl—r—gh, in sleep still more profound
 Than his own opiate tongue now deals around, 40
 Shall wait th' impeachment of that awful day
 Which even his practis'd hand can't bribe away.

Yes, my dear friend, wert thou but near me now,
 To see how Spring lights up on Erin's brow
 Smiles that shine out, unconquerably fair,
 Even through the blood-marks left by C—md—n there,— Could'st thou but see what verdure paints the sod
 Which none but tyrants and their slaves have trod,
 And didst thou know the spirit, kind and brave,
 That warms the soul of each insulted slave, 50
 Who, tir'd with struggling, sinks beneath his lot,
 And seems by all but watchful France forgot—
 Thy heart would burn—yes, even thy Pittite heart
 Would burn, to think that such a blooming part
 Of the world's garden, rich in nature's charms,
 And fill'd with social souls and vigorous arms,
 Should be the victim of that canting crew,
 So smooth, so godly,—yet so devilish too;
 Who, arm'd at once with prayer-books and with whips,
 Blood on their hands, and Scripture on their lips, 60
 Tyrants by creed, and torturers by text,
 Make this life hell, in honour of the next!
 Your R—desd—les, P—rc—v—ls,—great, glorious Heaven,
 If I'm presumptuous, be my tongue forgiven,
 When here I swear, by my soul's hope of rest,
 I'd rather have been born, ere man was blest
 With the pure dawn of Revelation's light,
 Yes,—rather plunge me back in Pagan night,
 And take my chance with Socrates for bliss,
 Than be the Christian of a faith like this, 70
 Which builds on heavenly cant its earthly sway,
 And in a convert mourns to lose a prey;
 Which grasping human hearts with double hold,—
 Like Danæ's lover mixing god and gold,—
 Corrupts both state and church, and makes an oath
 The knave and atheist's passport into both;
 Which, while it dooms dissenting souls to know

Nor bliss above nor liberty below,
 Adds the slave's suffering to the sinner's fear,
 And, lest he 'scape hereafter, racks him here ! 80
 But no—far other faith, far milder beams
 Of heavenly justice warm the Christian's dreams ;
His creed is writ on Mercy's page above,
 By the pure hands of all-atoning Love ;
He weeps to see abus'd Religion twine
 Round Tyranny's coarse brow her wreath divine ;
 And he, while round him sects and nations raise
 To the one God their varying notes of praise,
 Blesses each voice, whate'er its tone may be,
 That serves to swell the general harmony. 90

Such was the spirit, gently, grandly bright,
 That fill'd, oh Fox ! thy peaceful soul with light ;
 While free and spacious as that ambient air
 Which folds our planet in its circling care,
 The mighty sphere of thy transparent mind
 Embrac'd the world, and breath'd for all mankind.
 Last of the great, farewell !—yet not the last—
 Though Britain's sunshine hour with thee be past,
 Ierne still one ray of glory gives,
 And feels but half thy loss while Grattan lives. 100

APPENDIX

To the foregoing Poem, as first published, were subjoined, in the shape of a Note, or Appendix, the following remarks on the History and Music of Ireland. This fragment was originally intended to form part of a Preface to the Irish Melodies ; but afterwards, for some reason which I do not now recollect, was thrown aside.

Our history, for many centuries past, is creditable neither to our neighbours nor ourselves, and ought not to be read by any Irishman who wishes either to love England or to feel proud of Ireland. The loss of independence very early debased our character ; and our feuds and rebellions, though frequent and ferocious, but seldom displayed that generous spirit of enterprise with which the pride of an independent monarchy so long dignified the struggles of Scotland. It is true this island has given birth to heroes who, under more favourable circumstances, might have left in the hearts of their countrymen recollections as dear as those of a Bruce or a Wallace ; but success was wanting to consecrate resistance, their cause was branded with the disheartening name of treason, and their oppressed country was such a blank among nations, that, like the adventures of those woods which Rinaldo wished to explore, the fame of their actions was lost in the obscurity of the place where they achieved them.

——— Errando in quelli boschi
 Trovar potria strane avventure e molte,
 Ma come i luoghi i fatti ancor son foschi,
 Che non se n' ha notizia le più volte.

Hence is it that the annals of Ireland, through a lapse of six hundred years, exhibit not one of those shining names, not one of those themes of national pride, from which poetry borrows her noblest inspiration ; and that history, which ought to be the richest garden of the Muse, yields no growth to her in this hapless island but cypress and weeds. In truth, the poet who would embellish his song with allusions to Irish names and events, must be contented to seek them in those early periods when our character was yet unalloyed and original, before the impolitic craft of our conquerors had divided, weakened, and disgraced us. The sole traits of heroism, indeed, which he can venture at this day to commemorate, either with safety to himself, or honour to his country, are to be looked for in those ancient times when the native monarchs of Ireland displayed and fostered virtues worthy of a better age; when our Malachies wore around their necks collars of gold which they had won in single combat from the invader,¹ and our Briens deserved and won the warm affections of a people by exhibiting all the most estimable qualities of a king. It may be said that the magic of tradition has shed a charm over this remote period, to which it is in reality but little entitled, and that most of the pictures, which we dwell on so fondly, of days when this island was distinguished amidst the gloom of Europe, by the sanctity of her morals, the spirit of her knighthood, and the polish of her schools, are little more than the inventions of national partiality,—that bright but spurious offspring which vanity engenders upon ignorance, and with which the first records of every people abound. But the sceptic is scarcely to be envied who would pause for stronger proofs than we already possess of the early glories of Ireland; and were even the veracity of all these proofs surrendered, yet who would not fly to such flattering fictions from the sad degrading truths which the history of later times presents to us?

The language of sorrow, however, is, in general, best suited to our Music, and with themes of this nature the poet may be amply supplied. There is scarcely a page of our annals that will not furnish him a subject, and while the national Muse of other countries adorns her temple proudly with trophies of the past, in Ireland her melancholy altar, like the shrine of Pity at Athens, is to be known only by the tears that are shed upon it; 'lacrymis altaria sudant.'²

There is a well-known story, related of the Antiochians under the reign of Theodosius, which is not only honourable to the powers of music in general, but which applies so peculiarly to the mournful melodies of Ireland, that I cannot resist the temptation of introducing it here.—The piety of Theodosius would have been admirable, had it not been stained with intolerance; but under his reign was, I believe, first set the example of a disqualifying penal code enacted by Christians against Christians. Whether his interference with the religion of the Antiochians had any share in the alienation of their loyalty is not expressly ascertained by historians; but severe edicts, heavy taxation, and the rapacity and insolence of the men whom he sent to govern them, sufficiently account for the discontents of a warm and susceptible people. Repentance soon followed the crimes into which their impatience had hurried them; but the vengeance of the Emperor was implacable, and punishments of the most dreadful nature hung over the city of Antioch, whose devoted inhabitants, totally resigned to despondence, wandered through the streets and public assemblies, giving utterance to their grief in dirges of the most touching lamentation. At length, Flavianus, their bishop, whom they had sent to intercede with Theodosius, finding all his entreaties coldly rejected, adopted the expedient of teaching these songs of sorrow which he had heard from the lips of his unfortunate countrymen to the minstrels who performed for the Emperor at table. The heart of Theodosius could not resist this appeal; tears fell fast into his cup while he listened, and the Antiochians were forgiven.—Surely, if music ever spoke the misfortunes of a people, or could ever conciliate forgiveness for their errors, the music of Ireland ought to possess those powers.

THE SCEPTIC

A PHILOSOPHICAL SATIRE

Νόμον πάντων βασιλεα. PINDAR, ap. Herodot. lib. iii.

PREFACE

THE Sceptical Philosophy of the Ancients has been no less misrepresented than the Epicurean. Pyrrho may perhaps have carried it to rather an irrational excess;—but we must not believe, with Beattie, all the absurdities imputed to this philosopher; and it appears to me that the doctrines of the school, as explained by Sextus Empiricus, are far more suited to the wants and infirmities of human reason, as well as more conducive to the mild virtues of humility and patience, than any of those systems of philosophy which preceded the introduction of Christianity. The Sceptics may be said to have held a middle path between the Dogmatists and Academicians; the former of whom boasted that they had attained the truth, while the latter denied that any attainable truth existed. The Sceptics, however, without either asserting or denying its existence, professed to be modestly and anxiously in search of it; or, as St. Augustine expresses it, in his liberal tract against the Manichaeans, ‘nemo nostrum dicat jam se invenisse veritatem; sic eam quaeramus quasi ab utrisque nesciatur.’¹ From this habit of impartial investigation, and the necessity which it imposed upon them, of studying not only every system of philosophy, but every art and science, which professed to lay its basis in truth, they necessarily took a wider range of erudition, and were far more travelled in the regions of philosophy than those whom conviction or bigotry had domesticated in any particular system. It required all the learning of dogmatism to overthrow the dogmatism of learning; and the Sceptics may be said to resemble in this respect, that ancient incendiary, who stole from the altar the fire with which he destroyed the temple. This advantage over all the other sects is allowed to them even by Lipsius, whose treatise on the miracles of the Virgo Hallensis will sufficiently save him from all suspicion of scepticism. ‘Labore, ingenio, memoria,’ he says, ‘supra omnes pene philosophos fuisse.—Quid nonne omnia aliorum secta tenere debuerunt et inquirere, si poterunt refellere? res dicit. Nonne orationes varias, raras, subtiles invenire ad tam receptas, claras, certas (ut videbatur) sententias evertendas?’ &c., &c.—Manuduct. ad Philosoph. Stoic. Dissert. 4.

Between the scepticism of the ancients and the moderns the great difference is, that the former doubted for the purpose of investigating, as may be exemplified by the third book of Aristotle’s Metaphysics,² while the latter investigate for the purpose of doubting, as may be seen through most of the philosophical works of Hume.³ Indeed, the Pyrrhonism of latter days is not only more subtle than that of antiquity, but, it must be confessed, more dangerous in its tendency. The happiness of a Christian depends so essentially upon his belief, that it is but natural he should feel alarm at the progress of doubt, lest it should steal by to be judged by the misrepresentations of Beattie, whose book, however amiably intended, puts forth a most unphilosophical appeal to popular feelings and prejudices, and is a continued petitio principii throughout.

degrees into that region from which he is most interested in excluding it, and poison at last the very spring of his consolation and hope. Still, however, the abuses of doubting ought not to deter a philosophical mind from indulging mildly and rationally in its use; and there is nothing, surely, more consistent with the meek spirit of Christianity, than that humble scepticism which professes not to extend its distrust beyond the circle of human pursuits, and the pretensions of human knowledge. A follower of this school may be among the readiest to admit the claims of a superintending Intelligence upon his faith and adoration: it is only to the wisdom of this weak world that he refuses, or at least delays, his assent;—it is only in passing through the shadow of earth that his mind undergoes the eclipse of scepticism. No follower of Pyrrho has ever spoken more strongly against the dogmatists than St. Paul himself, in the First Epistle to the Corinthians; and there are passages in Ecclesiastes and other parts of Scripture, which justify our utmost diffidence in all that human reason originates. Even the Sceptics of antiquity refrained carefully from the mysteries of theology, and, in entering the temples of religion, laid aside their philosophy at the porch. Sextus Empiricus thus declares the acquiescence of his sect in the general belief of a divine and fore-knowing Power: *Τῷ μὲν βίῃ κατακολουθουντες ἀδοξαστως φαιμεν εἶναι θεους, καὶ σεβομεν θεους καὶ προνοεῖν αὐτους φαιμεν.*¹ In short, it appears to me, that this rational and well regulated scepticism is the only daughter of the Schools that can safely be selected as a handmaid for Piety. He who distrusts the light of reason, will be the first to follow a more luminous guide; and if, with an ardent love for truth, he has sought her in vain through the ways of this life, he will but turn with the more hope to that better world, where all is simple, true, and everlasting: for, there is no parallax at the zenith;—it is only near our troubled horizon that objects deceive us into vague and erroneous calculations.

THE SCEPTIC

As the gay tint, that decks the vernal rose,
Not in the flower, but in our vision glows;
As the ripe flavour of Falernian tides
Not in the wine, but in our taste resides;
So when, with heartfelt tribute, we declare
That Marco's honest and that Susan's fair,
'Tis in our minds, and not in Susan's eyes
Or Marco's life, the worth or beauty lies:
For she, in flat-nos'd China, would appear
As plain a thing as Lady Anne is here;
And one light joke at rich Loretto's dome
Would rank good Marco with the damn'd at Rome.

10

There's no deformity so vile, so base,
That 'tis not somewhere thought a charm, a grace;
No foul reproach, that may not steal a beam
From other suns, to bleach it to esteem.
Ask, who is wise?—you'll find the self-same man
A sage in France, a madman in Japan;
And here some head beneath a mitre swells,
Which there had tingled to a cap and bells:

20

Nay, there may yet some monstrous region be,
Unknown to Cook, and from Napoleon free,
Where C—stl—r—gh would for a patriot pass,
And mouthing M——ve scarce be deem'd an ass !

' List not to reason (Epicurus cries),
But trust the senses, there conviction lies' :
Alas ! they judge not by a purer light.
Nor keep their fountains more unting'd and bright :
Habit so mars them, that the Russian swain
Will sigh for train-oil, while he sips champagne ; 30
And health so rules them, that a fever's heat
Would make even Sh—r—d—n think water sweet.

Just as the mind the erring sense believes,
The erring mind, in turn, the sense deceives ;
And cold disgust can find but wrinkles there,
Where passion fancies all that's smooth and fair.
P * * * *, who sees, upon his pillow laid,
A face for which ten thousand pounds were paid,
Can tell, how quick before a jury flies
The spell that mock'd the warm seducer's eyes. 40

Self is the medium through which Judgment's ray
Can seldom pass without being turn'd astray.
The smith of Ephesus thought Dian's shrine,
By which his craft most throve, the most divine ;
And ev'n the true faith seems not half so true,
When link'd with one good living as with two.
Had W—lc—t first been pensioned by the throne,
Kings would have suffer'd by his praise alone ;
And P—ine perhaps, for something snug per ann.,
Had laugh'd, like W—ll—sley, at all Rights of Man. 50

But 'tis not only individual minds,—
Whole nations, too, the same delusion blinds.
Thus England, hot from Denmark's smoking meads,
Turns up her eyes at Gallia's guilty deeds ;
Thus, self-pleas'd still, the same dishonouring chain
She binds in Ireland, she would break in Spain ;
While prais'd at distance, but at home forbid,
Rebels in Cork are patriots at Madrid.

If Grotius be thy guide, shut, shut the book,—
In force alone for Laws of Nations look. 60
Let shipless Danes and whining yankees dwell
On naval rights, with Grotius and Vattel,
While C—bb—t's pirate code alone appears
Sound moral sense to England and Algiers.

Woe to the Sceptic, in these party days,
Who wafts to neither shrine his puffs of praise !
For him no pension pours its annual fruits,
No fertile sinecure spontaneous shoots ;
Not his the meed that crown'd Don H—kh—m's rhyme,
Nor sees he e'er, in dreams of future time, 70

Those shadowy forms of sleek reversions rise,
 So dear to Scotchmen's second-sighted eyes.
 Yet who, that looks to History's damning leaf,
 Where Whig and Tory, thief oppos'd to thief,
 On either side in lofty shame are seen,
 While Freedom's form hangs crucified between—
 Who, B—rd—tt, who such rival rogues can see,
 But flies from both to Honesty and thee?

If, weary of the world's bewild'ring maze,
 Hopeless of finding, through its weedy ways, 80
 One flower of truth, the busy crowd we shun,
 And to the shades of tranquil learning run,
 How many a doubt pursues! how oft we sigh,
 When histories charm, to think that histories lie!
 That all are grave romances, at the best,
 And M—sgr—ve's¹ but more clumsy than the rest
 By Tory Hume's² seductive page beguil'd,
 We fancy Charles was just and Strafford mild;
 And Fox himself, with party pencil, draws 90
 Monmouth a hero, 'for the good old cause!'
 Then, rights are wrongs, and victories are defeats,
 As French or English pride the tale repeats;
 And, when they tell Corunna's story o'er,
 They'll disagree in all, but honouring Moore:
 Nay, future pens, to flatter future courts,
 May cite perhaps the Park-guns' gay reports,
 To prove that England triumph'd on the morn
 Which found her Junot's jest and Europe's scorn.

In Science, too—how many a system, rais'd
 Like Neva's icy domes, awhile hath blaz'd 100
 With lights of fancy and with forms of pride,
 Then, melting, mingled with the oblivious tide!
 Now Earth usurps the centre of the sky,
 Now Newton puts the paltry planet by;
 Now whims revive beneath Descartes's pen,
 Which now, assail'd by Locke's, expire again.
 And when, perhaps, in pride of chemic powers,
 We think the keys of Nature's kingdom ours,
 Some Davy's magic touch the dream unsettles,
 And turns at once our alkalis to metals. 110
 Or, should we roam, in metaphysic maze,
 Through fair-built theories of former days,
 Some Dr—mm—d³ from the north, more ably skill'd,
 Like other Goths, to ruin than to build,
 Tramples triumphant through our fanes o'erthrown,
 Nor leaves one grace, one glory of his own.

¹ This historian of the Irish rebellions has outrun even his predecessor in the same task, Sir John Temple, for whose character with respect to veracity the reader may consult Carte's Collection of Ormond's Original Papers, p. 207. See also Dr. Nalson's account of him, in the introduction to the second volume of his Historic. Collect.

² He defends Strafford's conduct as 'innocent and even laudable.'

³ See this gentleman's Academic Questions.

Oh Learning, whatsoe'er thy pomp and boast,
 Unletter'd minds have taught and charm'd men most.
 The rude, unread Columbus was our guide
 To worlds, which learn'd Lactantius had denied;
 And one wild Shakespeare, following Nature's lights,
 Is worth whole planets, fill'd with Stagyrates. 120

See grave Theology, when once she strays
 From Revelation's path, what tricks she plays;
 What various heav'ns,—all fit for bards to sing,—
 Have churchmen dream'd, from Papias¹ down to King!
 While hell itself, in India nought but smoke,²
 In Spain's a furnace, and in France—a joke.

Hail, modest Ignorance, thou goal and prize,
 Thou last, best knowledge of the simply wise!
 Hail, humble Doubt, when error's waves are past,
 How sweet to reach thy shelter'd port⁴ at last,
 And, there, by changing skies nor lur'd nor awed,
 Smile at the battling winds that roar abroad.
 There gentle Charity, who knows how frail
 The bark of Virtue, even in summer's gale,
 Sits by the nightly fire, whose beacon glows
 For all who wander, whether friends or foes. 130

There Faith retires, and keeps her white sail fur'd,
 Till call'd to spread it for a better world;
 While Patience, watching on the weedy shore,
 And mutely waiting till the storm be o'er,
 Oft turns to Hope, who still directs her eye
 To some blue spot, just breaking in the sky! 140

Such are the mild, the blest associates given
 To him who doubts,—and trusts in nought but Heaven:

¹ Papias lived about the time of the apostles, and is supposed to have given birth to the heresy of the Chilliastae, whose heaven was by no means of a spiritual nature, but rather an anticipation of the Prophet of Hera's elysium. See Eusebius, Hist. Ecclesiast. lib. iii. cap. 33, and Hieronym. de Scriptor. Ecclesiast.—From all I can find in these authors concerning Papias, it seems hardly fair to impute to him those gross imaginations in which the believers of the sensual millennium indulged.

² King, in his Morsels of Criticism, vol. i, supposes the sun to be the receptacle of blessed spirits.

³ The Indians call hell 'the House of Smoke.'

TWOPENNY POST-BAG

BY THOMAS BROWN, THE YOUNGER

Elapsae manibus cecidere tabellae. OVID.

TO STEPHEN WOOLRICHE, ESQ.

MY DEAR WOOLRICHE,

It is now about seven years since I promised (and I grieve to think it is almost as long since we met) to dedicate to you the very first Book, of whatever size or kind, I should publish. Who could have thought that so many years would elapse, without my giving the least signs of life upon the subject of this important promise? Who could have imagined that a volume of doggerel, after all, would be the first offering that Gratitude would lay upon the shrine of Friendship?

If you continue, however, to be as much interested about me and my pursuits as formerly, you will be happy to hear that doggerel is not my only occupation; but that I am preparing to throw my name to the Swans of the Temple of Immortality,¹ leaving it, of course, to the said Swans to determine, whether they ever will take the trouble of picking it from the stream.

In the mean time, my dear Woolriche, like an orthodox Lutheran, you must judge of me rather by my faith than my works; and however trifling the tribute which I here offer, never doubt the fidelity with which I am, and always shall be,

Your sincere and attached Friend,

March 4, 1813.

PREFACE

THE Bag, from which the following Letters are selected, was dropped by a Twopenny Postman about two months since, and picked up by an emissary of the Society for the Suppression of Vice, who, supposing it might materially assist the private researches of that Institution, immediately took it to his employers, and was rewarded handsomely for his trouble. Such a treasury of secrets was worth a whole host of informers; and accordingly, like the Cupids of the poet (if I may use so profane a simile) who 'fell at odds about the sweet-bag of a bee,'² those venerable Suppressors almost fought with each other for the honour and delight of first ransacking the Post-Bag. Unluckily, however, it turned out, upon examination, that the discoveries of profligacy which it enabled them to make, lay chiefly in those upper regions of society, which their well-bred regulations forbid them to molest or meddle with.—In consequence, they gained but very few victims by their prize, and, after lying for a week or two under Mr. Hatchard's counter, the Bag, with its violated contents, was sold for a trifle to a friend of mine.

It happened that I had been just then seized with an ambition (having never tried the strength of my wing but in a Newspaper) to publish something or other in the shape of a Book; and it occurred to me that, the present being such a letter-writing era, a few of these Twopenny-Post Epistles, turned into easy verse, would be as light and popular a task as I could possibly select for a commencement. I did not, however, think it prudent to give too many Letters at first, and, accordingly have been obliged (in order to eke out a sufficient number of pages) to reprint some of those trifles, which had already appeared in the public journals. As in the battles of ancient times, the shades of the departed were sometimes seen among the combatants, so I thought I might manage to remedy the thinness of my ranks by conjuring up a few dead and forgotten ephemerons to fill them.

Such are the motives and accidents that led to the present publication; and as this is the first time my Muse has ever ventured out of the go-cart of a Newspaper, though I feel all a parent's delight at seeing little Miss go alone, I am also not without a parent's anxiety, lest an unlucky fall should be the consequence of the experiment; and I need not point out how many living instances might be found, of Muses that have suffered very severely in their heads, from taking rather too early and rashly to their feet. Besides, a Book is so very different a thing from a Newspaper!—in the former, your doggerel, without either company or shelter, must stand shivering in the middle of a bleak page by itself; whereas, in the latter, it is comfortably backed by advertisements, and has sometimes even a Speech of Mr. St—ph—n's, or something equally warm, for a chauffe-pied—so that, in general, the very reverse of 'laudatur et alget' is its destiny.

Ambition, however, must run some risks, and I shall be very well satisfied if the reception of these few Letters should have the effect of sending me to the Post-Bag for more.

PREFACE TO THE FOURTEENTH EDITION

BY A FRIEND OF THE AUTHOR

IN the absence of Mr. Brown, who is at present on a tour through ———, I feel myself called upon, as his friend, to notice certain misconceptions and misrepresentations, to which this little volume of Trifles has given rise.

In the first place, it is not true that Mr. Brown has had any accomplices in the work. A note, indeed, which has hitherto accompanied his Preface, may very naturally have been the origin of such a supposition; but that note, which was merely the coquetry of an author, I have, in the present edition, taken upon myself to remove, and Mr. Brown must therefore be considered (like the mother of that unique production, the Centaur, *μονα και μονον*¹) as alone responsible for the whole contents of the volume.

In the next place it has been said, that in consequence of this graceless little book, a certain distinguished Personage prevailed upon another distinguished Personage to withdraw from the author that notice and kindness with which he had so long and so liberally honoured him. In this story there is not one syllable of truth. For the magnanimity of the former of these persons I would, indeed, in no case answer too rashly: but of the conduct of the latter towards my friend, I have a proud gratification in declaring, that it has never ceased to be such as he must remember with indelible gratitude;—a gratitude the more cheerfully and warmly paid, from its not being a debt incurred solely on his own account, but for kindness shared with those nearest and dearest to him.

To the charge of being an Irishman, poor Mr. Brown pleads guilty; and I believe it must also be acknowledged that he comes of a Roman Catholic family: an avowal which I am aware is decisive of his utter reprobation, in the eyes of those exclusive patentees of Christianity, so worthy to have been the followers of a certain enlightened Bishop, Donatus,¹ who held 'that God is in Africa and not elsewhere.' But from all this it does not necessarily follow that Mr. Brown is a Papist; and, indeed, I have the strongest reasons for suspecting that they, who say so, are somewhat mistaken. Not that I presume to have ascertained his opinions upon such subjects. All I profess to know of his orthodoxy is, that he has a Protestant wife and two or three little Protestant children, and that he has been seen at church every Sunday, for a whole year together, listening to the sermons of his truly reverend and amiable friend, Dr. ———, and behaving there as well and as orderly as most people.

There are yet a few other mistakes and falsehoods about Mr. Brown, to which I had intended, with all becoming gravity, to advert; but I begin to think the task is quite as useless as it is tiresome. Misrepresentations and calumnies of this sort are, like the arguments and statements of Dr. Duigenan,—not at all the less vivacious or less serviceable to their fabricators, for having been refuted and disproved a thousand times over. They are brought forward again, as good as new, whenever malice or stupidity may be in want of them; and are quite as useful as the old broken lantern, in Fielding's Amelia, which the watchman always keeps ready by him, to produce, in proof of riotous conduct, against his victims. I shall therefore give up the fruitless toil of vindication, and would even draw my pen over what I have already written, had I not promised to furnish my publisher with a Preface, and know not how else I could contrive to eke it out.

I have added two or three more trifles to this edition, which I found in the Morning Chronicle, and knew to be from the pen of my friend. The rest of the volume remains² in its original state.

INTERCEPTED LETTERS, ETC.

LETTER I

FROM THE PR—NC—SS CH—RL—E OF W—L—S TO THE LADY B—RB—A ASHL—Y³

My dear Lady Bab, you'll be shock'd, I'm afraid,
When you hear the sad rumpus your Ponies have made;
Since the time of horse-consuls (now long out of date),
No nags ever made such a stir in the state.
Lord Eld—n first heard—and as instantly pray'd he
To 'God and his King'—that a Popish young Lady
(For though you've bright eyes and twelve thousand a year,
It is still but too true you're a Papist, my dear),
Had insidiously sent, by a tall Irish groom,
Two priest-ridden Ponies, just landed from Rome,
And so full, little rogues, of pontifical tricks,
That the dome of St. Paul's was scarce safe from their kicks.

¹ Bishop of Casae Nigræ, in the fourth century.

² A new reading has been suggested in the original of the Ode of Horace, freely translated by Lord Eld—n, page 166. In the line 'Sive per Syrteis iter aestuosas,' it is proposed, by a very trifling alteration, to read 'Surtees,' instead 'Syrteis,' which brings the Ode, it is said, more home to the noble translator, and gives a peculiar force and aptness to the epithet 'aestuosas.' I merely throw out this emendation for the learned, being unable myself to decide upon its merits.

³ This young Lady, who is a Roman Catholic, had lately made a present of some beautiful Ponies to the Pr—nc—ss.

Off at once to Papa, in a flurry he flies—
 For Papa always does what these statesmen advise,
 On condition that they'll be, in turn, so polite
 As in no case whate'er to advise him too right—
 'Pretty doings are here, Sir,' (he angrily cries, While by dint of dark eyebrows he strives to look wise)—
 "'Tis a scheme of the Romanists, so help me God!
 To ride over your most Royal Highness rough-shod— 20
 Excuse, Sir, my tears—they're from loyalty's source—
 Bad enough 'twas for Troy to be sack'd by a Horse,
 But for us to be ruin'd by Ponies still worse!
 Quick a Council is call'd—the whole Cabinet sits—
 The Archbishops declare, frighten'd out of their wits,
 That if once Popish Ponies should eat at my manger,
 From that awful moment the Church is in danger!
 As, give them but stabling, and shortly no stalls
 Will suit their proud stomachs but those at St. Paul's.

The Doctor,¹ and he, the devout man of Leather,² 30
 V—ns—tt—t, now laying their Saint-heads together,
 Declare that these skittish young a-bominations
 Are clearly foretold in Chap. vi. Revelations—
 Nay, they verily think they could point out the one
 Which the Doctor's friend Death was to canter upon.
 Lord H—rr—by, hoping that no one imputes
 To the Court any fancy to persecute brutes,
 Protests, on the word of himself and his cronies,
 That had these said creatures been Asses, not Ponies,
 The Court would have started no sort of objection, 40
 As Asses were, there, always sure of protection.

'If the Pr—no—ss will keep them (says Lord C—stl—r—gh),
 To make them quite harmless, the only true way
 Is (as certain Chief Justices do with their wives)
 To flog them within half an inch of their lives.
 If they've any bad Irish blood lurking about,
 This (he knew by experience) would soon draw it out.'
 Should this be thought cruel, his Lordship proposes
 The new Veto snaffle³ to bind down their noses—
 A pretty contrivance, made out of old chains, 50
 Which appears to indulge, while it doubly restrains;
 Which, however high-mettled, their gamesomeness checks
 (Adds his Lordship humanely, or else breaks their necks!')

This proposal receiv'd pretty general applause
 From the statesmen around—and the neck-breaking clause
 Had a vigour about it, which soon reconcil'd
 Even Eld—n himself to a measure so mild.
 So the snaffles, my dear, were agreed to, nem. con.,
 And my Lord C—stl—r—gh, having so often shone
 In the fettering line, is to buckle them on. 60

¹ Mr. Addington, so nicknamed.

² Alluding to a tax lately laid upon leather

³ The question whether a Veto was to be allowed to the Crown in the appointment of Irish Catholic Bishops was, at this time, very generally and actively agitated.

I shall drive to your door in these Vetos some day,
But, at present, adieu!—I must hurry away
To go see my Mamma, as I'm suffer'd to meet her
For just half an hour by the Qu—n's best repeater.

CH—RL—TTE.

LETTER II

FROM COLONEL M'M—H—N TO G—LD
FR—NC—S L—CKIE, ESQ.

DEAR Sir, I've just had time to look
Into your very learned Book,¹
Wherein—as plain as man can speak,
Whose English is half modern Greek—
You prove that we can ne'er intrench
Our happy isles against the French,
Till Royalty in England's made
A much more independent trade;—
In short, until the House of Guelf
Lays Lords and Commons on the shelf,
And boldly sets up for itself.

All, that can well be understood
In this said Book, is vastly good;
And, as to what's incomprehensible,
I dare be sworn 'tis full as sensible.

But, to your work's immortal credit,
The Pr—n—e, good Sir, the Pr—n—e has read it
(The only Book, himself remarks,
Which he has read since Mrs. Clarke's).
Last levee-morn he look'd it through, 20
During that awful hour or two
Of grave tonsorial preparation,
Which, to a fond, admiring nation,
Sends forth, announc'd by trump and drum,
The best-wigg'd Pr—n—e in Christendom.

He thinks with you, th' imagination
Of partnership in legislation
Could only enter in the noddles
Of dull and ledger-keeping twaddles,
Whose heads on firms are running so, 30
They ev'n must have a King and Co.,
And hence, most eloquently show forth
On checks and balances, and so forth.

¹ For an account of this extraordinary work of Mr. Leckie, see the Edinburgh Review, vol. xx.

² 'The truth indeed seems to be, that having lived so long abroad as evidently to have lost,

But now, he trusts, we're coming near a
Far more royal, loyal era;
When England's monarch need but say,
'Whipmethosescoundrels, C—stl—r—!'
Or, 'Hang me up those Papists, Eld—n,'
And 'twill be done—ay, faith, and well done.

With view to which, I've his command 40
To beg, Sir, from your travell'd hand,
(Round which the foreign graces swarm)³
A Plan of radical Reform;
Compil'd and chos'n as best you can,
In Turkey or at Ispahan,
And quite upturning, branch and root,
Lords, Commons, and Burdett to boot.

But, pray, whate'er you may impart,
write
Somewhat more brief than Major
C—rtwr—ght:
Else, though the Pr—e be long in rigging, 50
'Twould take, at least, a fortnight's wiggling,—
Two wigs to every paragraph—
Before he well could get through half.

You'll send it also speedily—
As, truth to say, 'twixt you and me,
His Highness, heated by your work,
Already thinks himself Grand Turk!
And you'd have laugh'd, had you seen how
He scar'd the Ch—nc—ll—r just now,
When (on his Lordship's entering puff'd) 60
he
Slapp'd his back and call'd him 'Mufti!'

The tailors too have got commands,
To put directly into hands

in a great degree, the use of his native language, Mr. Leckie has gradually come not only to speak, but to feel, like a foreigner.' Edinburgh Review.

All sorts of Dulimans and Pouches,
With Sashes, Turbans, and Paboutches,
(While Y—rm—th's sketching out a plan
Of new Moustaches à l'Ottomane)
And all things fitting and expedient
To turkify our gracious R—g—nt !

You, therefore, have no time to waste—
So, send your System.— 71

Yours, in haste.

POSTSCRIPT

BEFORE I send this scrawl away,
I seize a moment, just to say,
There's some parts of the Turkish system
So vulgar, 'twere as well you miss'd 'em.
For instance—in Seraglio matters—
Your Turk, whom girlish fondness flatters,

Would fill his Haram (tasteless fool !)
With tittering, red-cheek'd things from school.

But here (as in that fairy land, 80
Where Love and Age went hand in hand ;¹

Where lips, till sixty, shed no honey,
And Grandams were worth any money,)
Our Sultan has much riper notions—
So, let your list of she-promotions
Include those only, plump and sage,
Who've reach'd the regulation-age ;
That is, (as near as one can fix
From Peerage dates) full fifty-six.

This rule's for fav'rites—nothing more—
For, as to wives, a Grand Signor, 91
Though not decidedly without them,
Need never care one curse about them.

LETTER III

FROM G—GE, PR—CE R—G—T, TO THE E— OF Y—TH²

We miss'd you last night at the 'hoary old sinner's,'
Who gave us, as usual, the cream of good dinners ;
His soups scientific—his fishes quite prime—
His pâtés superb—and his cutlets sublime !
In short, 'twas the snug sort of dinner to stir a Stomachic orgasm in my Lord El—b—gh,
Who set to, to be sure, with miraculous force,
And exclaim'd, between mouthfuls, 'a He-Cook of course !—
While you live—(what's there under that cover ? pray, look)—
While you live—(I'll just taste it) ne'er keep a She-Cook. 10
'Tis a sound Salic Law—(a small bit of that toast)—
Which ordains that a female shall ne'er rule the roast ;
For Cookery's a secret—(this turtle's uncommon)—
Like Masonry, never found out by a woman !'

The dinner, you know, was in gay celebration
Of my brilliant triumph and H—nt's condemnation ;
A compliment, too, to his Lordship the Judge
For his Speech to the Jury—and zounds ! who would grudge
Turtle soup, though it came to five guineas a bowl,
To reward such a loyal and complaisant soul ? 20
We were all in high gig—Roman Punch and Tokay
Travell'd round, till our heads travell'd just the same way ;
And we car'd not for Juries or Libels—no—damme ! nor Ev'n for the threats of last Sunday's Examiner !

¹ The learned Colonel must allude here to a description of the Mysterious Isle, in the History of Abdalla, Son of Hanif, where such inversions of the order of nature are said to have taken place.—'A score of old women and the same number of old men played here and there in the court, some at chuck-farthing, others at tip-cat or at cockles.'—And again, 'There is nothing, believe me, more engaging than those lovely wrinkles,' &c. &c.—See Tales of the East, vol. iii. pp. 607-8.

² This letter, as the reader will perceive, was written the day after a dinner given by the M—rq—s of H—d—t.

More good things were eaten than said—but Tom T—rrh—t
 In quoting Joe Miller, you know, has some merit ;
 And, hearing the sturdy Justiciary Chief
 Say—sated with turtle—‘I’ll now try the beef’—
 Tommy whisper’d him (giving his Lordship a sly hit)
 ‘I fear ’twill be hung-beef, my Lord, if you try it!’

30

And C—md—n was there, who, that morning, had gone
 To fit his new Marquis’s coronet on ;
 And the dish set before him—oh dish well-devis’d !—
 Was, what old Mother Glasce calls, ‘a calf’s head surpris’d !’
 The brains were near Sh—ry, and once had been fine,
 But, of late, they had lain so long soaking in wine,
 That, though we, from courtesy, still chose to call
 These brains very fine, they were no brains at all.

When the dinner was over, we drank every one
 In a bumper, ‘the venial delights of Crim. Con. ;
 At which H—df—t with warm reminiscences gloated,
 And E—b’r—h chuckled to hear himself quoted.

40

Our next round of toasts was a fancy quite new,
 For we drank—and you’ll own ’twas benevolent too—
 To those well-meaning husbands, cits, parsons, or peers,
 Whom we’ve, any time, honour’d by courting their dears :
 This museum of wittols was comical rather ;
 Old H—df—t gave M—ss—y, and I gave your f—th—r.

In short, not a soul till this morning would budge—
 We were all fun and frolic,—and even the J—e
 Laid aside, for the time, his juridical fashion,
 And through the whole night wasn’t once in a passion !

50

I write this in bed, while my whiskers are airing,
 And M—c¹ has a sly dose of jalap preparing
 For poor T—mmy T—rr—t at breakfast to quaff—
 As I feel I want something to give me a laugh,
 And there’s nothing so good as old T—mmy, kept close
 To his Cornwall accounts, after taking a dose.

LETTER IV

FROM THE RIGHT HON. P—TR—CK D—GEN—N TO THE RIGHT HON.

SIR J—HN N—CH—L

Dublin.²

LAST week, dear N—ch—l, making merry
 At dinner with our Secretary,
 When all were drunk, or pretty near
 (The time for doing business here),
 Says he to me, ‘Sweet Bully Bottom !
 These Papist dogs—hiccup—’od rot ’em !—

¹ Colonel M^cMahon.² This letter, which contained some very heavy enclosures, seems to have been sent to London by a private hand, and then put into the Twopenny Post-Office, to save trouble. See the Appendix.

Deserve to be bespatter'd—hiccup—
 With all the dirt ev'n you can pick up.
 But, as the Pr—ce (here's to him—fill—Hip, hip, hurra!)—is trying still 10
 To humbug them with kind professions,
 And, as you deal in strong expressions—
 “Rogue”—“traitor” hiccup—and all that—
 You must be muzzled, Doctor Pat!—
 You must indeed—hiccup—that's flat.'—

Yes—‘muzzled’ was the word, Sir
 John—

These fools have clapp'd a muzzle on
 The boldest mouth that e'er ran o'er
 With slaver of the times of yore! 1—
 Was it for this that back I went 20
 As far as Lateran and Trent,
 To prove that they, who damn'd us
 then,

Ought now, in turn, be damn'd again?—
 The silent victim still to sit
 Of Gr—tt—n's fire and C—nn—g's wit,
 To hear ev'n noisy M—th—w gabble on,
 Nor mention once the W—e of Babylon!
 Oh! 'tis too much—who now will be
 The Nightman of No-Popery?
 What Courtier, Saint, or even Bishop,
 Such learned filth will ever fish up? 31
 If there among our ranks be one
 To take my place, 'tis thou, Sir John;
 Thou, who, like me, art dubb'd Right
 Hon.

Like me too, art a Lawyer Civil
 That wishes Papists at the devil.

To whom then but to thee, my friend,
 Should Patrick's his Port-folio send?
 Take it—'tis thine—his learn'd Portfolio,

With all its theologic olio 40
 Of Bulls, half Irish and half Roman—
 Of Doctrines, now believ'd by no man—
 Of Councils, held for men's salvation,

¹ In sending this sheet to the Press, however, I learn that the ‘muzzle’ has been taken off, and the Right Hon. Doctor again let loose!

² A bad name for poetry; but D-gen-n is still worse.—As Prudentius says upon a very different subject—

Torquetur Apollo
 Nomine percussus.

Yet always ending in damnation—(Which shows that, since the world's creation,
 Your Priests, what'er their gentle
 shamming,
 Have always had a taste for damning,)
 And many more such pious scraps,
 To prove (what we've long prov'd,
 perhaps,) 50
 That, mad as Christians us'd to be
 About the Thirteenth Century,
 There still are Christians to be had
 In this, the Nineteenth, just as mad!

Farewell—I send with this, dear
 N—ch—l,
 A rod or two I've had in pickle
 Wherewith to trim old Gr—tt—n's jacket.—
 The rest shall go by Monday's packet.

P. D.

*Among the Enclosures in the foregoing
 Letter was the following ‘Unanswerable
 Argument against the Papists.’*

WE'RE told the ancient Roman nation
 Made use of spittle in lustration;³ (Vide Lactantium ap. Gallaeum—⁴ 60
i.e. you need not read but see 'em;)
 Now, Irish Papists, fact surprising,
 Make use of spittle in baptizing;
 Which proves them all, O'Finns,
 O'Fagans,
 Connors, and Toolles, all downright Pagans.

This fact's enough;—let no one tell us
 To free such sad, salivous fellows.—
 No, no—the man, baptiz'd with spittle,
 Hath no truth in him—not a tittle!

³ ——— Lustralibus antè salivis
 Expiat. Pers. sat. 2.

⁴ I have taken the trouble of examining the Doctor's reference here, and find him, for once, correct. The following are the words of his indignant referee, Gallaeus:—‘Asserere non veremur sacrum baptismum a Papistis profanari, et sputi usum in peccatorum expiatione
 a Paganis non a Christianis mutasse.’

LETTER V

FROM THE COUNTESS DOWAGER OF C—RK TO LADY ———

My dear Lady ——— ! I've been just sending out
 About five hundred cards for a snug little Rout—
 (By the bye, you've seen Rokeby ?—this moment got mine—
 The Mail-Coach Edition ¹—prodigiously fine ;)
 But I can't conceive how, in this very cold weather,
 I'm ever to bring my five hundred together ;
 As, unless the thermometer's near boiling heat,
 One can never get half of one's hundreds to meet.
 (Apropos—you'd have laugh'd to see Townsend last night,
 Escort to their chairs, with his staff, so polite,
 The 'three maiden Miseries,' all in a fright ;
 Poor Townsend, like Mercury, filling two posts, Supervisor of thieves, and chief-usher of ghosts !)

10

But, my dear Lady ———, can't you hit on some notion,
 At least for one night to set London in motion ?—
 As to having the R—g—nt, that show is gone by—
 Besides, I've remark'd that (between you and I)
 The Marchesa and he, inconvenient in more ways,
 Have taken much lately to whispering in doorways ;
 Which—consid'ring, you know, dear, the size of the two—
 Makes a block that one's company cannot get through ;
 And a house such as mine is, with doorways so small,
 Has no room for such cumbersome love-work at all.—
 (Apropos, though, of love-work—you've heard it, I hope,
 That Napoleon's old mother's to marry the Pope,—
 What a comical pair !)—but, to stick to my Rout,
 'Twill be hard if some novelty can't be struck out.
 Is there no Algerine, no Kamchatkan arriv'd ?
 No Plenipo Pacha, three-tail'd and ten-wiv'd ?
 No Russian, whose dissonant consonant name
 Almost rattles to fragments the trumpet of fame ?

20

I remember the time, three or four winters back,
 When—provided their wigs were but decently black—
 A few Patriot monsters, from Spain, were a sight
 That would people one's house for one, night after night.
 But—whether the Ministers paw'd them too much—
 (And you know how they spoil whatsoever they touch)
 Or, whether Lord G—rge (the young man about town)
 Has, by dint of bad poetry, written them down,
 One has certainly lost one's peninsular rage ;
 And the only stray Patriot seen for an age
 Has been at such places (think, how the fit cools !)
 As old Mrs. V—gh—n's or Lord L—v—rp—l's.

40

But, in short, my dear, names like Wintztschitstopshinzoudhoff
 Are the only things now make an ev'ning go smooth off :

So, get me a Russian—till death I'm your debtor—
If he brings the whole Alphabet, so much the better.
And—Lord! if he would but, in character, sup
Off his fish-oil and candles, he'd quite set me up!

Au revoir, my sweet girl—I must leave you in haste—
Little Gunter has brought me the Liqueurs to taste.

50

POSTSCRIPT

By the bye, have you found any friend that can construe
That Latin account, t'other day, of a Monster? ¹
If we can't get a Russian, and that thing in Latin
Be not too improper, I think I'll bring that in.

LETTER VI

FROM ABDALLAH,² IN LONDON, TO MOHASSAN, IN ISPAHAN

WHILST thou, Mohassan, (happy thou!)
Dost daily bend thy loyal brow
Before our King—our Asia's treasure!
Nutmeg of Comfort; Rose of Pleasure!
And bear'st as many kicks and bruises
As the said Rose and Nutmeg chooses;
Thy head still near the bowstring's
borders,
And but left on till further orders—
Through London streets with turban
fair,
And caftan, floating to the air, 10
I saunter on, the admiration
Of this short-coated population—
This sew'd up race—this button'd nation—
Who, while they boast their laws so free,
Leave not one limb at liberty,

But live, with all their lordly speeches,
The slaves of buttons and tight breeches.

Yet, though they thus their knee-pans
fetter (They're Christians, and they know no better ³)

In some things they're a thinking nation;
And, on Religious Toleration, 21
I own I like their notions quite,
They are so Persian and so right!
You know our Sunnites,⁴—hateful dogs!
Whom every pious Shiite flogs
Or longs to flog ⁵—'tis true, they pray
To God, but in an ill-bred way;
With neither arms, nor legs, nor faces
Stuck in their right, canonic places.⁶
'Tis true, they worship Ali's name ⁷— 30
Their Heav'n and ours are just the same—

(A Persian's Heav'n is easily made,
'Tis but black eyes and lemonade.)

¹ Alluding, I suppose, to the Latin Advertisement of a Lusus Naturae in the Newspapers lately.

² I have made many inquiries about this Persian gentleman, but cannot satisfactorily ascertain who he is. From his notions of Religious Liberty, however, I conclude that he is an importation of Ministers; and he has arrived just in time to assist the P—e and Mr. L—ck—e in their new Oriental Plan of Reform.—See the second of these Letters. How Abdallah's epistle to Ispahan found its way into the Twopenny Post-Bag is more than I can pretend to account for.

³ 'C'est un honnête homme,' said a Turkish governor of De Ruyter; 'c'est grand dommage qu'il soit Chrétien.'

⁴ Sunnites and Shiites are the two leading sects into which the Mahometan world is divided; and they have gone on cursing and persecuting each other, without any intermission, for about eleven hundred years. The Sunni is the established sect in Turkey, and the Shia in Persia; and the differences between them turn chiefly upon those important points, which our pious friend Abdallah, in the true spirit of Shiite Ascendancy, reprobates in this Letter.

⁵ 'Les Sunnites, qui étoient comme les Catholiques de Musulmanisme.'—D'Herbelot.

⁶ In contradistinction to the Sunnis, who in their prayers cross their hands on the lower part of their breast, the Schiahs drop their arms in straight lines; and as the Sunnis, at certain periods of the prayer, press their foreheads on the ground or carpet, the Schiahs, &c. &c.—Forster's Voyage.

⁷ 'Les Turcs ne détestent pas Ali réciproquement; au contraire, ils le reconnaissent,' &c. &c.—Chardin.

Yet, though we've tried for centuries
back—

We can't persuade this stubborn pack,
By bastinadoes, screws, or nippers,
To wear th' establish'd pea-green slippers.¹

Then, only think, the libertines !
They wash their toes—they comb their chins,²

With many more such deadly sins ; 40
And what's the worst (though last I rank it),

Believe the Chapter of the Blanket !

Yet, spite of tenets so flagitious,
(Which must, at bottom, be seditious ;
Since no man living would refuse
Green slippers, but from treasonous views ;

Nor wash his toes, but with intent
To overturn the government,)—
Such is our mild and tolerant way,
We only curse them twice a day 50
(According to a Form that's set),
And, far from torturing, only let
All orthodox believers beat 'em,
And twitch their beards, where'er they meet 'em.

As to the rest, they're free to do
Whate'er their fancy prompts them to,
Provided they make nothing of it
Tow'rds rank or honour, power or profit ;

Which things, we nat'rally expect,
Belong to us, the Establish'd sect, 60
Who disbelieve (the Lord be thanked !)
Th' aforesaid Chapter of the Blanket.
The same mild views of Toleration
Inspire, I find, this button'd nation,
Whose Papists (full as giv'n to rogue,
And only Sunnites with a brogue)
Fare just as well, with all their fuss,
As rascal Sunnites do with us.

The tender Gazel I enclose
Is for my love, my Syrian Rose— 70
Take it when night begins to fall,
And throw it o'er her mother's wall.

GAZEL

REMEMBEREST thou the hour we past,—
That hour the happiest and the last ?
Oh ! not so sweet the Siha thorn
To summer bees, at break of morn,
Not half so sweet, through dale and dell,
To Camels' ears the tinkling bell,
As is the soothing memory
Of that one precious hour to me. 80

How can we live, so far apart ?
Oh ! why not rather, heart to heart,
United live and die—
Like those sweet birds, that fly together,
With feather always touching feather,
Link'd by a hook and eye !³

LETTER VII

FROM MESSRS. L—CK—GT—N AND CO. TO ———, ESQ.⁴

PER Post, Sir, we send your MS.—look'd it thro'—
Very sorry—but can't undertake—'twouldn't do.
Clever work, Sir !—would get up prodigiously well—
Its only defect is—it never would sell.
And though Statesmen may glory in being unbought,
In an Author 'tis not so desirable thought.

¹ The Shiites wear green slippers, which the Sunnites consider as a great abomination.—Martini.

² For these points of difference, as well as for the Chapter of the Blanket, I must refer the reader (not having the book by me) to Picart's Account of the Mahometan Sects.

³ This will appear strange to an English reader, but it is literally translated from Abdallah's Persian, and the curious bird to which he alludes is the Juftak, of which I find the following account in Richardson :—'A sort of bird, that is said to have but one wing ; on the opposite side to which the male has a hook and the female a ring, so that, when they fly, they are fastened together.'

⁴ From motives of delicacy, and, indeed, of fellow-feeling, I suppress the name of the Author, whose rejected manuscript was enclosed in this letter.—See the Appendix.

Hard times, Sir,—most books are too dear to be read—
 Though the gold of Good-sense and Wit's small-change are fled,
 Yet the paper we Publishers pass, in their stead,
 Rises higher each day, and ('tis frightful to think it)
 Not even such names as F—t—z—g—r—d's can sink it!

10

However, Sir—if you're for trying again,
 And at somewhat that's vendible—we are your men.

Since the Chevalier C—rr¹ took to marrying lately
 The Trade is in want of a Traveller greatly—
 No job, Sir, more easy—your Country once plann'd,
 A month aboard ship and a fortnight on land
 Puts your Quarto of Travels, Sir, clean out of hand.

An East-India pamphlet's a thing that would tell—
 And a lick at the Papists is sure to sell well.
 Or—supposing you've nothing original in you—
 Write Parodies, Sir, and such fame it will win you,
 You'll get to the Blue-stocking Routs of Albinia!² (Mind—not to her dinners—a second-hand Muse
 Mustn't think of aspiring to mess with the Blues.
 Or—in case nothing else in this world you can do—
 The deuce is in't, Sir, if you cannot review!

20

Should you feel any touch of poetical glow,
 We've a Scheme to suggest—Mr. Sc—tt, you must know,
 (Who, we're sorry to say it, now works for the Row,³)
 Having quitted the Borders, to seek new renown,
 Is coming, by long Quarto stages, to Town;
 And beginning with Rokeby (the job's sure to pay)
 Means to do all the Gentlemen's Seats on the way.
 Now, the Scheme is (though none of our hackneys can beat him)
 To start a fresh Poet through Highgate to meet him;
 Who, by means of quick proofs—no revises—long coaches—
 May do a few Villas, before Sc—tt approaches.
 Indeed, if our Pegasus be not curst shabby,
 He'll reach, without found'ring, at least Woburn-Abbey.
 Such, Sir, is our plan—if you're up to the freak,
 'Tis a match! and we'll put you in training next week.
 At present, no more—in reply to this Letter, a Line will oblige very much 30 40

Yours, et cetera.

Temple of the Muses.

² This alludes, I believe, to a curious correspondence, which is said to have passed lately between Alb-n-a, Countess of B-ck-gh-ms-e, and a certain ingenious Parodist.

LETTER VIII

FROM COLONEL TH—M—S TO —
SK—FF—NGT—N, ESQ.

COME to our Fête,¹ and bring with thee
Thy newest, best embroidery.
Come to our Fête, and show again
That pea-green coat, thou pink of men,
Which charm'd all eyes, that last survey'd it;
When Br—mm—I's self inquir'd 'who made it?'—
When Cits came wond'ring, from the East,
And thought thee Poet Pye at least!

Oh! come, (if haply 'tis thy week
For looking pale,) with paly cheek; 10
Though more we love thy roseate days,
When the rich rouge-pot pours its blaze
Full o'er thy face, and, amply spread,
Tips even thy whisker-tops with red—
Like the last tints of dying Day
That o'er some darkling grove delay.

Bring thy best lace, thou gay
Philander,
(That lace, like H—rry Al—x—nd—r,
Too precious to be wash'd,)—thy rings,
Thy seals—in short, thy prettiest things!
Put all thy wardrobe's glories on, 21
And yield in frogs and fringe, to none
But the great R—g—t's self alone;
Who—by particular desire—
For that night only, means to hire
A dress from Romeo C—tes, Esquire.²
Hail, first of Actors!³ best of R—g—t's!
Born for each other's fond allegiance!

¹ This Letter enclosed a Card for the Grand Fête on the 5th of February.

² An amateur actor of much risible renown.

³ Quem tu, Melpomene, semel
Nascentem placido lumine videris, &c.
HORAT.

The Man, upon whom thou hast deign'd to look funny,
Oh, Tragedy's Muse! at the hour of his birth—
Let them say what they will, that's the Man
for my money,
Give others thy tears, but let me have thy mirth!

⁴ The crest of Mr. C—tes, the very amusing

Both gay Lotharios—both good dressers—
Of serious Farce both learn'd Professors—
Both circled round, for use or show, 31
With cock's combs, wheresoe'er they go!⁴

Thou know'st the time, thou man of lore!
It takes to chalk a ball-room floor—
Thou know'st the time, too, well-a-day!
It takes to dance that chalk away.⁵
The Ball-room opens—far and high
Comets and suns beneath us lie;
O'er snow-white moons and stars we walk,
And the floor seems one sky of chalk! 40
But soon shall fade that bright deceit,
When many a maid, with busy feet,
That sparkle in the lustre's ray,
O'er the white path shall bound and play
Like Nymphs along the Milky Way:—
With every step a star hath fled,
And suns grow dim beneath their tread!
So passeth life—(thus Sc—tt would write,
And spinsters read him with delight,)—
Hours are not feet, yet hours trip on, 50
Time is not chalk, yet time's soon gone!⁶

But, hang this long digressive flight!—
I meant to say, thou'lt see, that night,
What falsehood rankles in their hearts,
Who say the Pr—e neglects the arts—
Neglects the arts?—no, Str—hl—g,⁷ no;
Thy Cupids answer 'tis not so;
And every floor, that night, shall tell
How quick thou daubest, and how well
Shine as thou may'st in French vermilion, 60
Thou'rt best, beneath a French cotillion;
And still com'st off, whate'er thy faults,
With flying colours in a Waltz.

amateur tragedian here alluded to, was a cock;
and most profusely wore his liveries, harness,
&c. covered with this ornament.

⁵ To those, who neither go to balls nor read the Morning Post, it may be necessary to mention, that the floors of Ball-rooms, in general, are chalked, for safety and for ornament, with various fanciful devices.

⁶ Hearts are not flint, yet flints are rent.
Hearts are not steel, yet steel is bent.

After all, however, Mr. Sc—tt may well say to the Colonel, (and, indeed, to much better wags than the Colonel,) παον μωμεισθαι η μμεισθαι.

⁷ A foreign artist much patronized by the Prince Regent.

Nor need'st thou mourn the transient
date
To thy best works assign'd by fate.
While some chef-d'œuvres live to weary
one,
Thine boast a short life and a merry one;
Their hour of glory past and gone
With 'Molly put the kettle on!' ¹

But, bless my soul! I've scarce a leaf
Of paper left—so, must be brief. 71

This festive Fête, in fact, will be
The former Fête's fac-simile; ²
The same long Masquerade of Rooms,
All trick'd up in such odd costumes,
(These, P—rt—r, ³are thy glorious works!)
You'd swear Egyptians, Moors, and Turks,
Bearing Good-Taste some deadly malice,
Had clubb'd to raise a Pic-Nic Palace;

And each to make the olio pleasant 80
Had sent a State-Room as a present.
The same fauteuils and girandoles—
The same gold Asses, ⁴pretty souls!
That, in this rich and classic dome,
Appear so perfectly at home.
The same bright river 'mong the dishes,
But not—ah! not the same dear fishes—
Late hours and claret kill'd the old ones—

So 'stead of silver and of gold ones,
(It being rather hard to raise 90
Fish of that specie now-a-days)
Some sprats have been by Y—rm—th's wish,

Promoted into Silver Fish,
And Gudgeons (so V—ns—tt—t told
The R—g—t) are as good as Gold!

So, prithee, come—our Fête will be
But half a Fête if wanting thee.

APPENDIX

LETTER IV. PAGE 152

AMONG the papers, enclosed in Dr. D—g—n—n's Letter, was found an Heroic Epistle in Latin verse, from Pope Joan to her Lover, of which, as it is rather a curious document, I shall venture to give some account. This female Pontiff was a native of England, (or, according to others, of Germany,) who, at an early age, disguised herself in male attire, and followed her lover, a young ecclesiastic, to Athens, where she studied with such effect, that upon her arrival at Rome, she was thought worthy of being raised to the Pontificate. This Epistle is addressed to her Lover (whom she had elevated to the dignity of Cardinal), soon after the fatal accouchement, by which her Fallibility was betrayed.

She begins by reminding him tenderly of the time, when they were together at Athens—when, as she says,

—' by Ilissus' stream

We whisp'ring walk'd along, and learn'd to speak
The tenderest feelings in the purest Greek;—
Ah, then how little did we think or hope,
Dearest of men, that I should e'er be Pope! ⁵
That I, the humble Joan, whose house-wife art
Seem'd just enough to keep thy house and heart,
(And those, alas, at sixes and at sevens,)
Should soon keep all the keys of all the heavens! ⁶

² 'C—rit—n H—é will exhibit a complete fac-simile, in respect to interior ornament, to what it did at the last Fête. The same splendid draperies,' &c. &c.—Morning Post.

³ Mr. Walsh Porter, to whose taste was left the furnishing of the rooms of Carlton House.

⁴ The salt-cellar on the Pr—e's own table were in the form of an Ass with panniers.

⁵ Spanheim attributes this unanimity, with which Joan was elected, to that innate and irresistible charm, by which her sex, though latent, operated upon the instinct of the Cardinals.—'Non vi aliqua, sed concorditer, omnium in se converso desiderio, quae sunt blandientis sexus artes, latentes in hac quantquam!'

Still less (she continues to say) could they have foreseen, that such a catastrophe as had happened in Council would befall them—that she ‘Should thus surprise the Conclave’s grave decorum,

And let a little Pope pop out before ’em—
Pope Innocent ! alas, the only one
That name could e’er be justly fix’d upon.’

She then very pathetically laments the downfall of her greatness, and enumerates the various treasures to which she is doomed to bid farewell for ever :—

‘But oh, more dear, more precious ten times over—
Farewell my Lord, my Cardinal, my Lover !
I made thee Cardinal—thou mad’st me—ah !
Thou mad’st the Papa of the world Mamma !’

I have not time at present to translate any more of this Epistle ; but I presume the argument which the Right Hon. Doctor and his friends mean to deduce from it, is (in their usual convincing strain) that Romanists must be unworthy of Emancipation now, because they had a Petticoat Pope in the Ninth Century. Nothing can be more logically clear, and I find that Horace had exactly the same views upon the subject.

Romanus (eheu posteri negabitis !)
Emancipatus FOEMINÆ
Fert vallum !

LETTER VII. PAGE 155.

THE Manuscript, found enclosed in the Bookseller’s Letter, turns out to be a Melo-Drama, in two Acts, entitled ‘The Book,’¹ of which the Theatres, of course, had had the refusal, before it was presented to Messrs. L—ck—ngt—n and Co. This rejected Drama, however, possesses considerable merit, and I shall take the liberty of laying a sketch of it before my Readers.

The first Act opens in a very awful manner—Time, three o’clock in the morning—Scene, the Bourbon Chamber² in C—rlt—n House—Enter the P—e R—g—t solus—After a few broken sentences, he thus exclaims :—

Away—Away—

Thou haunt’st my fancy so, thou devilish Book,
I meet thee—trace thee, wheresoe’er I look.
I see thy damned ink in Eld—n’s brows—
I see thy foolscap on my H—rtf—d’s Spouse—
V—ns—tt—t’s head recalls thy leathern case,
And all thy black-leaves stare from R—d—r’s face !
While turning here (laying his hand on his heart), I find, ah wretched elf,
Thy List of dire Errata in myself.

(Walks the stage in considerable agitation.)

¹ There was, in like manner, a mysterious Book, in the 18th Century, which employed all the anxious curiosity of the Learned of that time. Every one spoke of it ; many wrote against it ; though it does not appear that any body had ever seen it ; and Grotius is of opinion that no such Book ever existed. It was entitled ‘Liber de tribus impostoribus.’ (See Morhof, Cap. de Libris damnatis.)—Our more modern mystery of ‘the Book’ resembles this in many particulars ; and, if the number of Lawyers employed in drawing it up be stated correctly, a slight alteration of the title into ‘a tribus impostoribus’ would produce a coincidence altogether very remarkable.

² The same Chamber, doubtless, that was prepared for the reception of the Bourbons at the first Grand Fête, and which was ornamented (all ‘for the deliverance of Europe’) with fleurs-de-lys.

Oh Roman Punch! oh potent Curaçoa!
Oh Mareschino! Mareschino oh!
Delicious drams! why have you not the art
To kill this gnawing Book-worm in my heart?

He is here interrupted in his Soliloquy by perceiving on the ground some scribbled fragments of paper, which he instantly collects, and 'by the light of two magnificent candelabras' discovers the following unconnected words, 'Wife neglected,'—'the Book'—'Wrong Measures'—'the Queen'—'Mr. Lambert'—'the R—g—t.'

Ha! treason in my house!—Curs'd words, that wither
My princely soul, (shaking the papers violently) what Demon brought you hither?
'My Wife;'—'the Book' too!—stay—a nearer look—(holding the fragments closer to the Candelabras)
Alas! too plain, B, double O, K, Book—
Death and destruction!

He here rings all the bells, and a whole legion of valets enter. A scene of cursing and swearing (very much in the German style) ensues, in the course of which messengers are dispatched in different directions, for the L-rd Ch—nc—ll—r, the D—e of C—b—l—d, &c. &c. The intermediate time is filled up by another Soliloquy, at the conclusion of which the aforesaid Personages rush on alarmed; the D—ke with his stays only half-laced, and the Ch—nc—ll—r with his wig thrown hastily over an old red night-cap, 'to maintain the becoming splendour of his office.'¹ The R—g—t produces the appalling fragments, upon which the Ch—nc—ll—r breaks out into exclamations of loyalty and tenderness, and relates the following portentous dream:

'Tis scarcely two hours since
I had a fearful dream of thee, my P——e!—
Methought I heard thee, midst a courtly crowd,
Say from thy throne of gold, in mandate loud,
'Worship my whiskers!'—(weeps) not a knee was there
But bent and worshipp'd the Illustrious Pair,
Which cur'd in conscious majesty! (pulls out his handkerchief)—while cries
Of 'Whiskers, whiskers!' shook the echoing skies.—
Just in that glorious hour, methought, there came,
With looks of injur'd pride, a Princely Dame,
And a young maiden, clinging by her side,
As if she fear'd some tyrant would divide
Two hearts that nature and affection tied!
The Matron came—within her right hand glow'd
A radiant torch; while from her left a load
Of Papers hung—(wipes his eyes) collected in her veil—
The venal evidence, the slanderous tale,
The wounding hint, the current lies that pass
From Post to Courier, form'd the motley mass;
Which, with disdain, before the Throne she throws,
And lights the Pile beneath thy princely nose. (Weeps.)

¹ 'To enable the individual, who holds the office of Chancellor, to maintain it in becoming splendour.' (A loud laugh.)—Lord Castlereagh's Speech upon the Vice-Chancellor's Bill.

Heav'ns, how it blaz'd!—I'd ask no livelier fire
 (With animation) To roast a Papist by, my gracious Sire!—
 But, ah! the Evidence—(weeps again) I mourn'd to see—
 Cast, as it burn'd, a deadly light on thee:
 And Tales and Hints their random sparkle flung,
 And hiss'd and crackled, like an old maid's tongue;
 While Post and Courier, faithful to their fame,
 Made up in stink for what they lack'd in flame.
 When, lo, ye Gods! the fire ascending brisker,
 Now sings one, now lights the other whisker.
 Ah! where was then the Sylphid, that unfurls
 Her fairy standard in defence of curls?
 Throne, Whiskers, Wig, soon vanish'd into smoke,
 The watchman cried 'Past One,' and—I awoke.

Here his Lordship weeps more profusely than ever, and the R—g—t (who has been very much agitated during the recital of the Dream) by a movement as characteristic as that of Charles XII when he was shot, claps his hands to his whiskers to feel if all be really safe. A Privy Council is held—all the Servants, &c., are examined, and it appears that a Tailor, who had come to measure the R—g—t for a dress (which takes three whole pages of the best superfine cliquant in describing) was the only person who had been in the Bourbon Chamber during the day. It is, accordingly, determined to seize the Tailor, and the Council breaks up with a unanimous resolution to be vigorous.

The commencement of the Second Act turns chiefly upon the Trial and Imprisonment of two Brothers¹—but as this forms the under plot of the Drama, I shall content myself with extracting from it the following speech, which is addressed to the two Brothers, as they 'exeunt severally' to Prison:—

Go to your prisons—though the air of Spring
 No mountain coolness to your cheeks shall bring;
 Though Summer flowers shall pass unseen away,
 And all your portion of the glorious day
 May be some solitary beam that falls,
 At morn or eve, upon your dreary walls—
 Some beam that enters, trembling as if aw'd,
 To tell how gay the young world laughs abroad!
 Yet go—for thoughts as blessed as the air
 Of Spring or Summer flowers await you there;
 Thoughts, such as He, who feasts his courtly crew
 In rich conservatories, never knew;
 Pure self-esteem—the smiles that light within—
 The Zeal, whose circling charities begin
 With the few lov'd ones Heaven has plac'd it near,
 And spread, till all Mankind are in its sphere;
 The Pride, that suffers without vaunt or plea,
 And the fresh Spirit, that can warble free,
 Through prison-bars, its hymn to Liberty!

The Scene next changes to a Tailor's Work-shop, and a fancifully-arranged group of these Artists is discovered upon the Shop-board—Their task evidently of a royal nature, from the profusion of gold-lace, frogs, &c., that lie about—They all rise and come forward, while one of them sings the following Stanzas to the tune of 'Derry Down.'

My brave brother Tailors, come, straighten your knees,
For a moment, like gentlemen, stand up at ease,
While I sing of our P——e (and a fig for his railers)
The Shop-board's delight! the Maecenas of Tailors!
Derry down, down, down derry down.

Some monarchs take roundabout ways into note,
While His short cut to fame is—the cut of his coat;
Philip's Son thought the World was too small for his Soul,
But our R—g—t's finds room in a lac'd button-hole.
Derry down, &c.

Look through all Europe's Kings—those, at least, who go loose—
Not a King of them all's such a friend to the Goose,
So, God keep him increasing in size and renown,
Still the fattest and best fitted P——e about town!
Derry down, &c.

During the 'Derry down' of this last verse, a messenger from the S—c—t—y of S——e's Office rushes on, and the singer (who, luckily for the effect of the scene, is the very Tailor suspected of the mysterious fragments) is interrupted in the midst of his laudatory exertions, and hurried away, to the no small surprise and consternation of his comrades. The Plot now hastens rapidly in its development—the management of the Tailor's examination is highly skilful, and the alarm, which he is made to betray, is natural without being ludicrous. The explanation, too, which he finally gives is not more simple than satisfactory. It appears that the said fragments formed part of a self-exculpatory note, which he had intended to send to Colonel M'M——n upon subjects purely professional, and the corresponding bits (which still lie luckily in his pocket) being produced, and skilfully laid beside the others, the following billet-doux is the satisfactory result of their juxtaposition.

Honour'd Colonel—my Wife, who's the Queen of all slatterns,
Neglected to put up the Book of new Patterns.
She sent the wrong Measures too—shamefully wrong—
They're the same us'd for poor Mr. Lambert, when young;
But, bless you! they wouldn't go half round the R—g—t—
So, hope you'll excuse yours till death, most obedient.

This fully explains the whole mystery—the R—g—t resumes his wonted smiles, and the Drama terminates as usual, to the satisfaction of all parties.

ΞΟΑΑΖΟΝΤΟΞ ΑΞΧΟΑΙΑ

THE INSURRECTION OF THE PAPERS

A DREAM

'It would be impossible for his Royal Highness to disengage his person from the accumulating pile of papers that encompassed it.'—Lord Castlereagh's Speech upon Colonel M^r Mahon's Appointment, April 14, 1812.

LAST night I toss'd and turn'd in bed,
But could not sleep—at length I said,
'I'll think of Viscount C—stl—r—gh,
And of his speeches—that's the way.'
And so it was, for instantly
I slept as sound as sound could be.
And then I dreamt—so dread a dream !
Fuseli has no such theme ;
Lewis never wrote or borrow'd
Any horror, half so horrid ! 10

Methought the Pr—e, in whisker'd
state,
Before me at his breakfast sate ;
On one side lay unread Petitions,
On t'other, Hints from five Physicians ;
Here tradesmen's bills,—official papers,
Notes from my Lady, drams for vapours—
There plans of saddles, tea and toast,
Death-warrants and the Morning Post.

When lo ! the Papers, one and all,
As if at some magician's call, 20
Began to flutter of themselves
From desk and table, floor and shelves,

And, cutting each some different capers,
Advanc'd, oh jacobinic papers !
As though they said, ' Our sole design is
To suffocate his Royal Highness !'
The Leader of this vile sedition
Was a huge Catholic Petition,
With grievances so full and heavy,
It threaten'd worst of all the bevy. 30
Then Common-Hall Addresses came
In swaggering sheets, and took their aim
Right at the R—g—t's well-dress'd head,
As if determin'd to be read.
Next Tradesmen's Bills began to fly,
And Tradesmen's Bills, we know, mount
high ;
Nay, ev'n Death-warrants thought they'd best
Be lively too, and join the rest.

But, oh the basest of defections !
His letter about ' predilections '— 40
His own dear Letter, void of grace,
Now flew up in its parent's face !
Shock'd with his breach of filial duty,
He just could murmur 'et Tu Brute ?'
Then sunk, subdued upon the floor
At Fox's bust, to rise no more !

I wak'd—and pray'd, with lifted hand,
' Oh ! never may this Dream prove
true ;
Though paper overwhelms the land,
Let it not crush the Sovereign too !'

PARODY

OF A CELEBRATED LETTER ¹

At length, dearest Freddy, the moment is nigh,
When, with P—rc—v—l's leave, I may throw my chains by ;
And, as time now is precious, the first thing I do,
Is to sit down and write a wise letter to you.

¹ Letter from his Royal Highness the Prince Regent to the Duke of York, February 13, 1812.

I meant before now to have sent you this Letter,
 But Y—rm—th and I thought perhaps 'twould be better
 To wait till the Irish affairs were decided—(That is, till both Houses had prosed and divided,
 With all due appearance of thought and digestion)—
 For, though H—rtf—rd House had long settled the question,
 I thought it but decent, between me and you,
 That the two other Houses should settle it too.

I need not remind you how cursedly bad
 Our affairs were all looking, when Father went mad;¹
 A straight waistcoat on him and restrictions on me,
 A more limited Monarchy could not well be.
 I was call'd upon then, in that moment of puzzle,
 To choose my own Minister—just as they muzzle
 A playful young bear, and then mock his disaster,
 By bidding him choose out his own dancing-master.

20

I thought the best way, as a dutiful son,
 Was to do as Old Royalty's self would have done.²
 So I sent word to say, I would keep the whole batch in,
 The same chest of tools, without cleansing or patching;
 For tools of this kind, like Martinus's sconce,³
 Would lose all their beauty, if purified once;
 And think—only think—if our Father should find,
 Upon graciously coming again to his mind,⁴
 That improvement had spoil'd any favourite adviser—
 That R—se was grown honest, or W—stm—rel—nd wiser—
 That R—d—r was, ev'n by one twinkle, the brighter—
 Or L—v—rp—l's speeches but half a pound lighter—
 What a shock to his old royal heart it would be!
 No!—far were such dreams of improvement from me:
 And it pleas'd me to find, at the House, where, you know,⁵
 There's such good mutton outlets, and strong curaçoa,⁶
 That the Marchioness call'd me a duteous old boy,
 And my Y—rm—th's red whiskers grew redder for joy.

30

40

You know, my dear Freddy, how oft, if I would,
 By the law of last Sessions I might have done good.
 I might have withheld these political noodles
 From knocking their heads against hot Yankee Doodles;
 I might have told Ireland I pitied her lot,
 Might have sooth'd her with hope—but you know I did not.
 And my wish is, in truth, that the best of old fellows
 Should not, on recovering, have cause to be jealous,
 But find that, while he has been laid on the shelf,
 We've been all of us nearly as mad as himself.

50

¹ 'I think it hardly necessary to call your recollection to the recent circumstances under which I assumed the authority delegated to me by Parliament.'—Prince's Letter.

² 'My sense of duty to our Royal father solely decided that choice.'—Ibid.

³ The antique shield of Martinus Scriblerus, which, upon scouring, turned out to be only an old sconce.

⁴ 'I waived any personal gratification, in order that his Majesty might resume, on his restoration to health, every power and prerogative,' &c.—Prince's Letter.

⁵ 'And I have the satisfaction of knowing that such was the opinion of persons for whose judgement,' &c. &c.—Ibid.

⁶ The letter-writer's favourite luncheon.

You smile at my hopes—but the Doctors and I,
Are the last that can think the K—ng ever will die.¹

A new era's arriv'd,²—though you'd hardly believe it—
And all things, of course, must be new to receive it.
New villas, new fêtes (which ev'n Waithman attends)—
New saddles, new helmets, and—why not new friends ?

60

I repeat it, 'New Friends'—for I cannot describe
The delight I am in with this P—re—v—l tribe.
Such capering !—Such vapouring !—Such rigour !—Such vigour !
North, South, East, and West, they have cut such a figure,
That soon they will bring the whole world round our ears,
And leave us no friends—but Old Nick and Algiers.

When I think of the glory they've beam'd on my chains,
'Tis enough quite to turn my illustrious brains.
It is true we are bankrupts in commerce and riches,
But think how we find our Allies in new breeches !
We've lost the warm hearts of the Irish, 'tis granted,
But then we've got Java, an island much wanted,
To put the last lingering few who remain,
Of the Walcheren warriors, out of their pain.
Then how Wellington fights ! and how squabbles his brother !
For Papists the one, and with Papists the other ;
One crushing Napoleon by taking a city,
While t'other lays waste a whole Cath'lic Committee.
Oh deeds of renown !—shall I boggle or flinch,
With such prospects before me ? by Jove, not an inch.
No—let England's affairs go to rack, if they will,
We'll look after th' affairs of the Continent still ;
And, with nothing at home but starvation and riot,
Find Lisbon in bread, and keep Sicily quiet.

70

80

I am proud to declare I have no predilections,³
My heart is a sieve, where some scatter'd affections
Are just danc'd about for a moment or two,
And the finer they are, the more sure to run through :
Neither feel I resentments, nor wish there should come ill
To mortal—except (now I think on't) Beau Br—mm—l
Who threaten'd last year, in a superfine passion,
To cut me, and bring the old K—ng into fashion.
This is all I can lay to my conscience at present ;
When such is my temper, so neutral, so pleasant,
So royally free from all troublesome feelings,
So little encumber'd by faith in my dealings
(And that I'm consistent the world will allow,
What I was at Newmarket the same I am now).

90

¹ 'I certainly am the last person in the kingdom to whom it can be permitted to despair of our royal father's recovery.'—Prince's Letter.

² 'A new era is now arrived, and I cannot but reflect with satisfaction,' &c.—Ibid.

³ 'I have no predilections to indulge, no resentments to gratify.'—Ibid.

When such are my merits (you know I hate cracking),
I hope, like the Vendor of Best Patent Blacking,
'To meet with the gen'rous and kind approbation
Of a candid, enlighten'd, and liberal nation.'

By the bye, ere I close this magnificent Letter,
(No man, except Pole, could have writ you a better,)
'Twould please me if those, whom I've humbug'd so long¹
With the notion (good men!) that I knew right from wrong,
Would a few of them join me—mind, only a few—
To let too much light in on me never would do; 110
But even Grey's brightness shan't make me afraid,
While I've C—md—n and Eld—n to fly to for shade;
Nor will Holland's clear intellect do us much harm,
While there's W—stm—rel—nd near him to weaken the charm.
As for Moira's high spirit, if aught can subdue it,
Sure joining with H—rtf—rd and Y—rm—th will do it!
Between R—d—r and Wh—rt—n let Sheridan sit,
And the fogs will soon quench even Sheridan's wit:
And against all the pure public feeling that glows
Ev'n in Whitbread himself we've a Host in G—rge R—se! 120
So, in short, if they wish to have Places, they may,
And I'll thank you to tell all these matters to Grey;²
Who, I doubt not, will write (as there's no time to lose)
By the twopenny post to tell Grenville the news;
And now, dearest Fred (though I've no predilection),
Believe me yours always with truest affection.

P.S. A copy of this is to P—rc—I going;³
Good Lord, how St. Stephen's will ring with his crowing!

ANACREONTIC

TO A PLUMASSIER

FINE and feathery artisan,
Best of Plumists (if you can
With your art so far presume)
Make for me a Pr—ce's Plume—
Feathers soft and feathers rare,
Such as suits a Pr—ce to wear.

First, thou downiest of men,
Seek me out a fine Pea-hen;
Such a Hen, so tall and grand,
As by Juno's side might stand,
If there were no cocks at hand.
Seek her feathers, soft as down,
Fit to shine on Pr—ce's crown;

If thou canst not find them, stupid!
Ask the way of Prior's Cupid.⁴

Ranging these in order due,
Pluck me next an old Cuckoo;
Emblem of the happy fates
Of easy, kind, cornuted mates.
Pluck him well—be sure you do— 20
Who wouldn't be an old Cuckoo,
Thus to have his plumage blest,
Beaming on a R—y—I crest?

Bravo, Plumist!—now what bird
Shall we find for Plume the third?
You must get a learned Owl,
Bleakest of black-letter fowl,— 10

¹ 'I cannot conclude without expressing the gratification I should feel if some of those persons with whom the early habits of my public life were formed would strengthen my hands, and constitute a part of my government.—Ibid.

² 'You are authorized to communicate these sentiments to Lord Grey, who, I have no doubt, will make them known to Lord Grenville.'—Ibid.

³ 'I shall send a copy of this letter immediately to Mr. Perceval.'—Prince's Letter.

⁴ See Prior's poem, entitled 'The Dove.'

Bigot bird, that hates the light,¹
 Foe to all that's fair and bright.
 Seize his quills, (so form'd to pen 30
 Books,² that shun the search of men ;
 Books, that, far from every eye,
 In 'swelter'd venom sleeping' lie,)
 Stick them in between the two,
 Proud Pea-hen and old Cuckoo.
 Now you have the triple feather,
 Bind the kindred stems together

With a silken tie, whose hue
 Once was brilliant Buff and Blue ;
 Sullied now—alas, how much ! 40
 Only fit for Y—rm—th's touch.

There—enough—thy task is done ;
 Present, worthy G—ge's Son ;
 Now, beneath, in letters neat,
 Write ' I SERVE,' and all's complete.

EXTRACTS FROM THE DIARY OF A POLITICIAN

Wednesday.

THROUGH M—nch—st—r Square took a canter just now—
 Met the old yellow chariot,³ and made a low bow.
 This I did, of course, thinking 'twas loyal and civil,
 But got such a look—oh 'twas black as the devil !
 How unlucky !—incog. he was travelling about,
 And I, like a noodle, must go find him out.

Mem.—when next by the old yellow chariot I ride,
 To remember there is nothing princely inside.

Thursday.

At Levee to-day made another sad blunder—
 What can be come over me lately, I wonder ?
 The Pr—ce was as cheerful, as if, all his life,
 He had never been troubled with Friends or a Wife—
 'Fine weather,' says he—to which I, who must prate,
 Answered, 'Yes, Sir, but changeable rather, of late.'
 He took it, I fear, for he look'd somewhat gruff,
 And handled his new pair of whiskers so rough,
 That before all the courtiers I fear'd they'd come off,
 And then, Lord, how Geramb⁴ would triumphantly scoff !

Mem.—to buy for son Dicky some unguent or lotion
 To nourish his whiskers—sure road to promotion !⁵

Saturday.

Last night a Concert—vastly gay—
 Given by Lady C—stl—r—gh.
 My Lord loves music, and, we know,
 Has 'two strings always to his bow,'⁶
 In choosing songs, the R—g—t nam'd
 'Had I a heart for falsehood fram'd,'
 While gentle H—rtf—d begg'd and pray'd
 For 'Young I am, and sore afraid.'

'I remember,' says Tavernier, 'to have seen one of the King of Persia's porters, whose mustaches were so long that he could tie them behind his neck, for which reason he had a double pension.'

KING CRACK² AND HIS IDOLS

WRITTEN AFTER THE LATE NEGOTIATION FOR A NEW M—N—STRY

KING CRACK was the best of all possible Kings,
 (At least, so his Courtiers would swear to you gladly,)
 But Crack now and then would do het'rodox things,
 And, at last, took to worshipping Images sadly.

Some broken-down Idols, that long had been plac'd
 In his father's old Cabinet, pleas'd him so much,
 That he knelt down and worshipp'd, though—such was his taste !—
 They were monstrous to look at, and rotten to touch.

And these were the beautiful Gods of King Crack !—
 But his People, disdaining to worship such things,
 Cried aloud, one and all, 'Come, your Godships must pack—
 You'll not do for us, though you may do for Kings.'

Then, trampling these images under their feet,
 They sent Crack a petition, beginning 'Great Caesar !
 We're willing to worship ; but only entreat
 That you'll find us some decenter Godheads than these are.'

'I'll try,' says King Crack—so they furnish'd him models
 Of better shap'd Gods, but he sent them all back ;
 Some were chisell'd too fine, some had heads 'stead of noddles,
 In short, they were all much too godlike for Crack.

So he took to his darling old Idols again,
 And, just mending their legs and new bronzing their faces,
 In open defiance of Gods and of man,
 Set the monsters up grinning once more in their places.

WHAT'S MY THOUGHT LIKE ?

Quest. WHY is a Pump like V—sc—nt C—stl—r—gh ?

Ans. Because it is a slender thing of wood,
 That up and down its awkward arm doth sway,
 And oooly spout and spout and spout away,
 In one weak, washy, everlasting flood !

² One of those antediluvian Princes, with whom Manetho and Whiston seem so intimately acquainted. If we had the Memoirs of Thoth, from which Manetho compiled his History, we should find, I dare say, that Crack was only a Regent, and that he, perhaps, succeeded Typhon, who (as Whiston says) was the last King of the Antediluvian Dynasty.

DIALOGUE BETWEEN A CATHOLIC DELEGATE AND HIS R—Y—L H—GHN—SS
THE D—E OF C—B—L—D

SAID his Highness to Ned,¹ with that grim face of his,
'Why refuse us the Veto, dear Catholic Neddy?'
'Because, Sir,' said Ned, looking full in his phiz,
'You're forbidding enough, in all conscience, already!'

WREATHS FOR THE MINISTERS

AN ANACREONTIC

HITHER, Flora, Queen of Flowers!
Haste thee from Old Brompton's
bowers—
Or, (if sweeter that abode)
From the King's well-odour'd Road,
Where each little nursery bud
Breathes the dust and quaffs the mud.
Hither come and gaily twine
Brightest herbs and flowers of thine
Into wreaths for those, who rule us,
Those, who rule and (some say) fool
us— 10

Flora, sure, will love to please
England's Household Deities!²

First you must then, willy-nilly,
Fetch me many an orange lily—
Orange of the darkest dye
Irish G—ff—rd can supply;—
Choose me out the longest sprig,
And stick it in old Eld—n's wig.

Find me next a Poppy posy,
Type of his harangues so dozy, 20
Garland gaudy, dull and cool,
To crown the head of L—v—rp—l.
'Twill console his brilliant brows
For that loss of laurel boughs,
Which they suffer'd (what a pity!)
On the road to Paris City.

Next, our C—stl—r—gh to crown,
Bring me from the County Down

Wither'd Shamrocks, which have been Gilded o'er, to hide the green— 30
(Such as H—df—t brought away
From Pall-Mall last Patrick's day³)—
Stitch the garland through and through
With shabby threads of every hue;—
And as, Goddess!—entre nous—
His lordship loves (though best of men)
A little torture, now and then,
Crimp the leaves, thou first of Syrens,
Crimp them with thy curling-irons.

That's enough—away, away— 40
Had I leisure, I could say
How the oldest rose that grows
Must be pluck'd to deck old Rose—
How the Doctor's⁴ brow should smile
Crown'd with wreaths of camomile.
But time presses—to thy taste
I leave the rest, so, prithee, haste!

DIALOGUE BETWEEN A DOWAGER AND HER MAID ON THE NIGHT OF LORD Y—RM—TH'S FÊTE

'I WANT the Court Guide,' said my lady,
'to look
If the House, Seymour Place, be at 30
or 20.'—
'We've lost the Court Guide, Ma'am, but here's the Red Book,
Where you'll find, I dare say, Seymour Places in plenty!'

² The ancients, in like manner, crowned their Lares, or Household Gods. See Juvenal, Sat. 9, v. 138.—Plutarch, too, tells us that Household Gods were then, as they are now, 'much given to War and penal Statutes.'—ἐριννωδεις και ποιμικους δαιμονας.

³ Certain tinsel imitations of the Shamrock which are distributed by the Servants of C—n House every Patrick's Day.

מחנה חינוכי למחנכים

HORACE, ODE XXII. LIB. I

FREELY TRANSLATED BY LORD ELD—N

- 1 THE man who keeps a conscience pure,
(If not his own, at least his Prince's,) Through toil and danger walks secure,
Looks big and black, and never winces.
- 2 No want has he of sword or dagger,
Cock'd hat or ringlets of Geramb;
Though Peers may laugh, and Papists swagger,
He doesn't care one single d-mn.
- 3 Whether midst Irish chairmen going,
Or through St. Giles's alleys dim,
'Mid drunken Sheelahs, blasting, blowing,
No matter, 'tis all one to him.
- 4 For instance, I, one evening late,
Upon a gay vacation sally,
Singing the praise of Church and State,
Got (Gods knows how) to Cranbourne Alley.

- 1 Integer vitæ scelerisque purus.
- 2 Non eget Mauri jaculis, neque arcu,
Nec venenatis gravida sagittis,
Fusce, pharetra.
- 3 Sive per Syrtis iter aestuosas,
Sive facturas per inhospitalem
Caucasum, vel quae loca fabulosus
Lambit Hydaspes.

The Noble Translator had, at first, laid the scene of these imagined dangers of his Man of Conscience among the Papists of Spain, and had translated the words 'quae loca fabulosus lambit Hydaspes' thus—'The fabling Spaniard licks the French;' but, recollecting that it is our interest just now to be respectful to Spanish Catholics (though there is certainly no earthly reason for our being even commonly civil to Irish ones), he altered the passage as it stands at present.

- 4 Namque me silvâ lupus in Sabina
Dum meam canto Lalagen, et ultra
Terminum curis vagor expeditis,
Fugit inermem.

I cannot help calling the reader's attention to the peculiar ingenuity with which these lines are paraphrased. Not to mention the happy conversion of the Wolf into a Papist, (seeing that Romulus was suckled by a wolf, that Rome was founded by Romulus, and that the Pope has always reigned at Rome), there is something particularly neat in supposing 'ultra terminum' to mean vacation-time. and

When lo! an Irish Papist darted
Across my path, gaunt, grim, and big—

I did but frown, and off he started,
Scard at me, even without my wig.

- 5 Yet a more fierce and raw-bon'd dog
Goes not to mass in Dublin City,
Nor shakes his brogue o'er Allen's Bog,
Nor spouts in Catholic Committee.

- 6 Oh! place me midst O'Rourke's, O'Tooles,
The ragged royal-blood of Tara;
Or place me where Dick M—rt—n rules
The houseless wilds of Connemara;

- 7 Of Church and State I'll warble still Though ev'n Dick M—rt—n's self should grumble;
Sweet Church and State, like Jack and Jill,

- 8 So lovingly upon a hill—
Ah! ne'er like Jack and Jill to tumble!

then the modest consciousness with which the Noble and Learned Translator has avoided touching upon the words 'curis expeditis,' (or, as it has been otherwise read, 'causis expeditis,') and the felicitous idea of his being 'inermis,' when 'without his wig,' are altogether the most delectable specimens of paraphrase in our language.

- 5 Quale portentum neque militaris
Daunias latis alit aesculetis,
Nec Jubae tellus generat leonum
Arida nutrit.
- 6 Pone me pigris ubi nulla campis
Arbor aestiva recreatur aura:
Quod latus mundi, nebulae malusque
Jupiter urget.

I must here remark, that the said Dick M—rt—n being a very good fellow, it was not at all fair to make a 'malus Jupiter' of him.

- 7 Dulce ridentem Lalagen amabo,
Dulce loquentem.

* There cannot be imagined a more happy illustration of the inseparability of Church and State, and their (what is called) 'standing and falling together,' than this ancient apologue of Jack and Jill. Jack, of course, represents the State in this ingenious little allegory.

Jack fell down,
And broke his Crown,
And Jill came tumbling after.

THE NEW COSTUME OF THE MINISTERS

— Nova monstra creavit. OVID. Metamorph. l. i. v. 437.

HAVING sent off the troops of brave Major Camac,
 With a swinging horse-tail at each valorous back,
 And such helmets, God bless us! as never deck'd any Male creature before, except Signor Giovanni—
 'Let's see,' said the R—g—t (like Titus, perplex'd
 With the duties of empire,) 'whom shall I dress next?'

He looks in the glass—but perfection is there,
 Wig, whiskers, and chin-tufts all right to a hair;¹
 Not a single ex-curl on his forehead he traces—
 For curls are like Ministers, strange as the case is,
 The *false*r they are, the more firm in their places.
 His coat he next views—but the coat who could doubt?
 For his Y—rm—th's own Frenchified hand cut it out;
 Every pucker and seam were made matters of state,
 And a Grand Household Council was held on each plait.

Then whom shall he dress? shall he new-rig his brother,
 Great C—mb—rl—d's Duke, with some kickshaw or other?
 And kindly invent him more Christian-like shapes
 For his feather-bed neckcloths and pillory capes.
 Ah! no—here his ardour would meet with delays,
 For the Duke had been lately pack'd up in new Stays,
 So complete for the winter, he saw very plain
 'Twould be devilish hard work to unpack him again.

So, what's to be done?—there's the Ministers, bless 'em!—
 As he made the puppets, why shouldn't he dress 'em?
 'An excellent thought!—call the tailors—be nimble—
 Let Cum bring his spy-glass, and H—rtf—d her thimble;
 While Y—rm—th shall give us, in spite of all quizzers,
 The last Paris cut with his true Gallic scissors.'

So saying, he calls C—stl—r—gh, and the rest
 Of his heaven-born statesmen, to come and be drest.
 While Y—rm—th, with snip-like and brisk expedition,
 Cuts up, all at once, a large Cath'lic Petition
 In long tailors' measures, (the P—e crying 'Well-done!'
 And first puts in hand my Lord Chancellor Eld—n.

¹ That model of Princes, the Emperor Commodus, was particularly luxurious in the dressing and ornamenting of his hair. His conscience, however, would not suffer him to trust himself with a barber, and he used, accordingly, to burn off his beard—'timore tonsoris,' says Lampridius. (Hist. August.

Scriptor.) The dissolute Aelius Verus, too, was equally attentive to the decoration of his wig. (See Jul. Capitolin.)—Indeed, this was not the only princely trait in the character of Verus, as he had likewise a most hearty and dignified contempt for his Wife.—See his insulting answer to her in Spartianus.

CORRESPONDENCE BETWEEN A LADY AND GENTLEMAN
UPON THE ADVANTAGE OF (WHAT IS CALLED) 'HAVING LAW¹ ON ONE'S SIDE'

The Gentleman's Proposal

'Legge aurea,
S'ei piace, ei lice.'

COME, fly to these arms, nor let beauties so bloomy
To one frigid owner be tied;
Your prudes may revile, and your old ones look gloomy,
But, dearest, we've Law on our side.

Oh! think the delight of two lovers congenial,
Whom no dull decorums divide;
Their error how sweet, and their raptures how venial,
When once they've got Law on their side.

'Tis a thing, that in every King's reign has been done, too:
Then why should it now be decried?
If the Father has done it, why shouldn't the Son, too?
For so argues Law on our side.

And, ev'n should our sweet violation of duty
By cold-blooded jurors be tried,
They can but bring it in 'a misfortune,' my beauty,
As long as we've Law on our side.

The Lady's Answer

HOLD, hold, my good sir, go a little more slowly;
For, grant me so faithless a bride,
Such sinners as we, are a little too lowly,
To hope to have Law on our side.

Had you been a great Prince, to whose star shining o'er 'em
The people should look for their guide,
Then your Highness (and welcome!) might kick down decorum—
You'd always have Law on your side.

Were you ev'n an old Marquis, in mischief grown hoary,
Whose heart, though it long ago died
To the pleasures of vice, is alive to its glory—
You still would have Law on your side.

But for you, Sir, Crim. Con. is a path full of troubles;
By my advice therefore abide,
And leave the pursuit to those Princes and Nobles
Who have such a Law on their side.

OCCASIONAL ADDRESS

FOR THE OPENING OF THE NEW THEATRE OF ST. ST—PH—N
INTENDED TO HAVE BEEN SPOKEN BY THE PROPRIETOR IN FULL COSTUME,
ON THE 24TH OF NOVEMBER, 1812.

THIS day a New House, for your edification,
We open, most thinking and right-headed nation !
Excuse the materials—though rotten and bad,
They're the best that for money just now could be had ;
And, if echo the charm of such houses should be
You will find it shall echo my speech to a T.

As for actors, we've got the old Company yet,
The same motley, odd, tragi-comical set ;
And consid'ring they all were but clerks t'other day,
It is truly surprising how well they can play. 10
Our Manager,¹ (he, who in Ulster was nurst,
And sung Erin go Brah for the galleries first,
But, on finding Pitt-interest a much better thing, Chang'd his note of a sudden, to God save the King,)
Still wise as he's blooming, and fat as he's clever,
Himself and his speeches as lengthy as ever,
Here offers you still the full use of his breath,
Your devoted and long-winded proser till death.

You remember last season, when things went perverse on,
We had to engage (as a block to rehearse on) 20
One Mr. V—ns—tt—t, a good sort of person,
Who's also employ'd for this season to play,
In 'Raising the Wind,' and the 'Devil to Pay.'²
We expect too—at least we've been plotting and planning—
To get that great actor from Liverpool, C—nn—g ;
And, as at the Circus there's nothing attracts
Like a good single combat brought in 'twixt the acts,
If the Manager should, with the help of Sir P—ph—m,
Get up new diversions, and C—nn—g should stop 'em,
Who knows but we'll have to announce in the papers, 30
'Grand fight—second time—with additional capers.'

Be your taste for the ludicrous, humdrum, or sad,
There is plenty of each in this House to be had.
Where our Manager ruleth, there weeping will be,
For a dead hand at tragedy always was he ;
And there never was dealer in dagger and cup,
Who so smilingly got all his tragedies up.
His powers poor Ireland will never forget,
And the widows of Walcheren weep o'er them yet.

So much for the actors ;—for secret machinery, 40
Traps, and deceptions, and shifting of scenery,
Y—rm—th and Cum are the best we can find,
To transact all that trickery business behind.

² He had recently been appointed Chancellor of the Exchequer.

The former's employ'd too to teach us French jigs,
Keep the whiskers in curl, and look after the wigs.

In taking my leave now, I've only to say,
A few Seats in the House, not as yet sold away,
May be had of the Manager, Pat C—stl—r—gh.

THE SALE OF THE TOOLS

Instrumenta regni.—TACTUS.

HERE'S a choice set of Tools for you, Ge'mmen and Ladies,
They'll fit you quite handy, whatever your trade is ;
(Except it be Cabinet-making ;—no doubt,
In that delicate service they're rather worn out,
Though their owner, bright youth ! if he'd had his own will,
Would have bungled away with them joyously still.)
You can see they've been pretty well hack'd—and alack !
What tool is there job after job will not hack ?
Their edge is but dullish, it must be confess'd,
And their temper, like E—nb'r—h's, none of the best ;
But you'll find them good hard-working Tools, upon trying,
Wer't but for their brass, they are well worth the buying ;
They're famous for making blinds, sliders, and screens,
And are, some of them, excellent turning machines.

10

The first Tool I'll put up (they call it a Chancellor)
Heavy concern to both purchaser and seller.
Though made of pig iron, yet worthy of note 'tis,
'Tis ready to melt at a half minute's notice.¹
Who bids ? Gentle buyer ! 'twill turn as thou shapest ;
'Twill make a good thumb-screw to torture a Papist ;
Or else a cramp-iron, to stick in the wall
Of some church that old women are fearful will fall ;
Or better, perhaps, (for I'm guessing at random,)
A heavy drag-chain for some Lawyer's old Tandem.
Will nobody bid ? It is cheap, I am sure, Sir—
Once, twice,—going, going,—thrice, gone !—it is yours, Sir.
To pay ready money you sha'n't be distrest,
As a bill at long date suits the Chancellor best.

20

Come, where's the next Tool ?—Oh ! 'tis here in a trice—
This implement, Ge'mmen, at first was a Vice ;
(A tenacious and close sort of tool, that will let Nothing out of its grasp it once happens to get ;)
But it since has receiv'd a new coating of Tin,
Bright enough for a Prince to behold himself in.
Come, what shall we say for it ? briskly ! bid on,
We'll the sooner get rid of it—going—quite gone.
God be with it, such tools, if not quickly knock'd down,
Might at last cost their owner—how much ? why, a Crown !

30

The next Tool I'll set up has hardly had handsel or Trial as yet, and is also a Chancellor—
Such dull things as these should be sold by the gross ;
Yet, dull as it is, 'twill be found to shave close,

IMMEDIATE AND ULTIMATE DORMS

REINFORCEMENTS FOR LORD WELLINGTON

Suosque tibi commendat Troja Penates,
Hos cape fatorum comites. VIRGIL.

1813.

As recruits in these times are not easily got,
And the Marshal must have them—pray, why should we not,
As the last and, I grant it, the worst of our loans to him,
Ship off the Ministry, body and bones to him?
There's not in all England, I'd venture to swear,
Any men we could half so conveniently spare;
And, though they've been helping the French for years past,
We may thus make them useful to England at last.
C—stl—r—gh in our sieges might save some disgraces,
Being us'd to the taking and keeping of places;
And Volunteer C—nn—g, still ready for joining,
Might show off his talent for sly undermining.
Could the Household but spare us its glory and pride,
Old H—df—t at horn-works again might be tried,
And the Ch—f J—st—e make a bold charge at his side:
While V—ns—tt—t could victual the troops upon tick,
And the Doctor look after the baggage and sick.

Nay, I do not see why the great R—g—t himself
Should, in times such as these, stay at home on the shelf:
Though through narrow defiles he's not fitted to pass,
Yet who could resist, if he bore down en masse?
And though oft, of an evening, perhaps he might prove,
Like our Spanish confed'rates, 'unable to move,'¹
Yet there's one thing in war of advantage unbounded,
Which is, that he could not with ease be surrounded.

In my next I shall sing of their arms and equipment;
At present no more, but—good luck to the shipment!

HORACE, ODE I. LIB. III

A FRAGMENT

Odi profanum vulgus et arceo
Favete linguis: carmina non prius
Audita Musarum sacerdos
Virginitus puerisque canto.
Regum timendorum in proprios greges,
Reges in ipsos imperium est Jovis.

1813.

I HATE thee, oh, Mob, as my Lady hates delf;
To Sir Francis I'll give up thy claps and thy hisses,
Leave old Magna Charta to shift for itself,
And, like G—dw—n, write books for young masters and misses.
Oh! it is not high rank that can make the heart merry,
Even monarchs themselves are not free from mishap:
Though the Lords of Westphalia must quake before Jerry,
Poor Jerry himself has to quake before Nap.

HORACE, ODE XXXVIII. LIB. I

A FRAGMENT

Persicos odi, puer, adparatus;
 Displicent nexae philyra coronae;
Mille sectari, Rosa quo locorum Særa morietur.

TRANSLATED BY A TREASURY CLERK, WHILE WAITING DINNER FOR THE RIGHT HON.

G—RGE R—SE

Boy, tell the Cook that I hate all nick-nackeries,
 Fricassees, vol-au-vents, puffs, and gim-crackeries—
 Six by the Horse-Guards!—old Georgy is late—
 But come—lay the table-cloth—zounds! do not wait,
 Nor stop to inquire, while the dinner is staying,
 At which of his places Old R—e is delaying! ¹

IMPROMPTU

UPON BEING OBLIGED TO LEAVE A PLEASANT PARTY, FROM THE WANT OF A PAIR OF BREECHES TO DRESS FOR DINNER IN 1810.

BETWEEN Adam and me the great difference is,
 Though a paradise each has been forc'd to resign,
 That he never wore breeches, till turn'd out of his,
 While, for want of my breeches, I'm banish'd from mine.

LORD WELLINGTON AND THE MINISTERS

1813.

So gently in peace Alcibiades smi'd,
 While in battle he shone forth so terribly grand,
 That the emblem they grav'd on his seal, was a child
 With a thunderbolt plac'd in its innocent hand.

Oh Wellington, long as such Ministers wield
 Your magnificent arm, the same emblem will do;
 For while they're in the Council and you in the Field,
 We've the babies in them, and the thunder in you!

¹ The literal closeness of the version here cannot but be admired. The Translator has added a long, erudite, and flowery note upon Roses, of which I can merely give a specimen at present. In the first place, he ransacks the Rosarium Politicum of the Persian Poet Sadi, with the hope of finding some Political Roses, to match the gentleman in the text—but in vain: he then tells us that Cicero accused Verres of reposing upon a cushion 'Melitensi rosa fartum,' which, from the odd mixture of words, he supposes to be a kind of Irish Bed of Roses, like Lord Castlereagh's. The learned Clerk next favours us with some remarks upon a well-known punning epitaph on fair Rosamond, and expresses a most loyal hope, that, if 'Rosa munda' mean 'a Rose with clean hands' it may be found applicable to the Right Honourable Rose in question. He then dwells at some length upon the 'Rosa aurea,' which, though descriptive, in one sense, of the old Treasury Statesman, yet, as being consecrated and worn by the Pope, must, of course, not be brought into the same atmosphere with him. Lastly, in reference to the words 'old Rose,' he winds up with the pathetic lamentation of the Poet 'consenuisse Rosas.' The whole note, indeed, shows a knowledge of Roses, that is quite edifying.

IRISH MELODIES

TO

THE MARCHIONESS DOWAGER OF DONEGAL

It is now many years since, in a Letter prefixed to the Third Number of the Irish Melodies, I had the pleasure of inscribing the Poems of that work to your Ladyship, as to one whose character reflected honour on the country to which they relate, and whose friendship had long been the pride and happiness of their Author. With the same feelings of affection and respect, confirmed if not increased by the experience of every succeeding year, I now place those Poems in their present new form under your protection, and am,

With perfect sincerity,

Your Ladyship's ever attached Friend,

THOMAS MOORE.

PREFACE

THOUGH an edition of the Poetry of the Irish Melodies, separate from the Music, has long been called for, yet, having, for many reasons, a strong objection to this sort of divorce, I should with difficulty have consented to a disunion of the words from the airs, had it depended solely upon me to keep them quietly and indissolubly together. But, besides the various shapes in which these, as well as my other lyrical writings, have been published throughout America, they are included, of course, in all the editions of my works printed on the Continent, and have also appeared, in a volume full of typographical errors, in Dublin. I have therefore readily acceded to the wish expressed by the Proprietor of the Irish Melodies, for a revised and complete edition of the poetry of the Work, though well aware that my verses must lose even more than the animæ dimidium, in being detached from the beautiful airs to which it was their good fortune to be associated.

IRISH MELODIES

GO WHERE GLORY WAITS THEE

Go where glory waits thee,
But, while fame elates thee,
Oh! still remember me.
When the praise thou meetest
To thine ear is sweetest,
Oh! then remember me.
Other arms may press thee,
Dearer friends caress thee,
All the joys that bless thee,
Sweeter far may be;
But when friends are nearest,
And when joys are dearest,
Oh! then remember me!

When, at eve, thou rovest
By the star thou lovest,
Oh! then remember me.
Think, when home returning,
Bright we've seen it burning,
Oh! thus remember me.

Of as summer closes,
When thine eye reposes
On its ling'ring roses,
Once so lov'd by thee,
Think of her who wove them,
Her who made thee love them,
Oh! then remember me.

When, around thee dying,
Autumn leaves are lying,
Oh! then remember me.
And, at night, when gazing
On the gay hearth blazing,
Oh! still remember me.
Then should music, stealing
All the soul of feeling,
To thy heart appealing,
Draw one tear from thee;
Then let memory bring thee
Strains I us'd to sing thee,—
Oh! then remember me.

WAR SONG

REMEMBER THE GLORIES OF BRIEN THE BRAVE¹

REMEMBER the glories of Brien the
brave,

Tho' the days of the hero are o'er ;
Tho' lost to Mononia,² and cold in the grave,

He returns to Kinkora³ no more.
That star of the field, which so often hath pour'd

Its beam on the battle, is set ;
But enough of its glory remains on each sword,

To light us to victory yet.

Mononia ! when Nature embellish'd the tint

Of thy fields, and thy mountains so
fair,

Did she ever intend that a tyrant should print

The footstep of slavery there ?
No ! Freedom, whose smile we shall never resign,

Go, tell our invaders, the Danes,
That 'tis sweeter to bleed for an age at thy shrine,

Than to sleep but a moment in chains.

Forget not our wounded companions,
who stood⁴

In the day of distress by our side ;
While the moss of the valley grew red with their blood,

They stirr'd not, but conquer'd and died.

That sun which now blesses our arms
with his light,

Saw them fall upon Ossory's plain ;— Oh ! let him not blush, when he leaves us to-night,

To find that they fell there in vain.

ERIN ! THE TEAR AND THE SMILE IN THINE EYES

ERIN, the tear and the smile in thine eyes, Blend like the rainbow that hangs in thy
skies !

Shining through sorrow's stream,
Saddening through pleasure's beam,
Thy suns with doubtful gleam,
Weep while they rise.

Erin, thy silent tear never shall cease,
Erin, thy languid smile ne'er shall increase,

Till, like the rainbow's light,
Thy various tints unite,
And form in heaven's sight
One arch of peace !

OH ! BREATHE NOT HIS NAME

OH ! breathe not his name, let it sleep in the shade,
Where cold and unhonour'd his relics are laid :
Sad, silent, and dark, be the tears that we shed,
As the night-dew that falls on the grass o'er his head.

But the night-dew that falls, though in silence it weeps,
Shall brighten with verdure the grave where he sleeps ;
And the tear that we shed, though in secret it rolls,
Shall long keep his memory green in our souls.

¹ Brien Boromhe, the great monarch of Ireland, who was killed at the battle of Clontarf, in the beginning of the 11th century, after having defeated the Danes in twenty-five engagements.

² Munster.

³ The palace of Brien.

⁴ This alludes to an interesting circumstance related of the Daigais, the favourite troops of Brien, when they were interrupted in their return from the battle of Clontarf, by Fitzpatrick, prince of Ossory. The wounded men entreated that they might be allowed to fight with the rest.—'Let stakes (they said) be stuck in the ground, and suffer each of us, tied to and supported by one of these stakes, to be placed in his rank by the side of a sound man.' 'Between seven and eight hundred wounded men (adds O'Halloran) pale, emaciated, and supported in this manner, appeared mixed with the foremost of the troops ;—never was such another sight exhibited.'—History of Ireland, book xii, chap. 1.

WHEN HE, WHO ADORES THEE

WHEN he, who adores thee, has left but the name
 Of his fault and his sorrows behind,
 Oh! say wilt thou weep, when they darken the fame
 Of a life that for thee was resign'd?
 Yes, weep, and however my foes may condemn,
 Thy tears shall efface their decree;
 For Heaven can witness, though guilty to them,
 I have been but too faithful to thee.

With thee were the dreams of my earliest love.
 Every thought of my reason was thine;
 In my last humble prayer to the Spirit above,
 Thy name shall be mingled with mine.
 Oh! blest are the lovers and friends who shall live
 The days of thy glory to see;
 But the next dearest blessing that Heaven can give
 Is the pride of thus dying for thee.

THE HARP THAT ONCE THROUGH TARA'S HALLS

THE harp that once through Tara's halls The soul of music shed, Now hangs as mute on Tara's walls, As if that soul were fled.— So sleeps the pride of former days, So glory's thrill is o'er, And hearts, that once beat high for praise, Now feel that pulse no more.	No more to chiefs and ladies bright The harp of Tara swells; The chord alone, that breaks at night, Its tale of ruin tells. Thus Freedom now so seldom wakes, The only throb she gives, Is when some heart indignant breaks, To show that still she lives.
---	---

FLY NOT YET

FLY not yet, 'tis just the hour, When pleasure, like the midnight flower That scorns the eye of vulgar light, Begins to bloom for sons of night, And maids who love the moon. 'Twas but to bless these hours of shade That beauty and the moon were made; 'Tis then their soft attractions glowing Set the tides and goblets flowing. Oh! stay,—Oh! stay,— Joy so seldom weaves a chain Like this to-night, that oh! 'tis pain To break its links so soon.	Fly not yet, the fount that play'd In times of old through Ammon's shade, ¹ Though icy cold by day it ran, Yet still, like souls of mirth, began To burn when night was near. And thus should woman's heart and looks At noon be cold as winter brooks, Nor kindle till the night, returning, Brings their genial hour for burning. Oh! stay,—Oh! stay,— When did morning ever break, And find such beaming eyes awake As those that sparkle here?
--	---

¹ Solis Fons, near the Temple of Ammon.

OH! THINK NOT MY SPIRITS ARE ALWAYS AS LIGHT

OH! think not my spirits are always as light,
 And as free from a pang as they seem to you now;
 Nor expect that the heart beaming smile of to-night
 Will return with to-morrow to brighten my brow.
 No:—life is a waste of wearisome hours,
 Which seldom the rose of enjoyment adorns;
 And the heart that is soonest awake to the flowers,
 Is always the first to be touch'd by the thorns.
 But send round the bowl, and be happy awhile—
 May we never meet worse, in our pilgrimage here,
 Than the tear that enjoyment may gild with a smile,
 And the smile that compassion can turn to a tear.

The thread of our life would be dark, Heaven knows!
 If it were not with friendship and love interwin'd;
 And I care not how soon I may sink to repose,
 When these blessings shall cease to be dear to my mind.
 But they who have lov'd the fondest, the purest,
 Too often have wept o'er the dream they believ'd;
 And the heart that has slumber'd in friendship securest,
 Is happy indeed if 'twas never deceiv'd.
 But send round the bowl; while a relic of truth
 Is in man or in woman, this prayer shall be mine,—
 That the sunshine of love may illumine our youth,
 And the moonlight of friendship console our decline.

THO' THE LAST GLIMPSE OF ERIN WITH SORROW I SEE

THO' the last glimpse of Erin with sorrow I see,
 Yet wherever thou art shall seem Erin to me;
 In exile thy bosom shall still be my home,
 And thine eyes make my climate wherever we roam.

To the gloom of some desert or cold rocky shore,
 Where the eye of the stranger can haunt us no more,
 I will fly with my Coulin, and think the rough wind
 Less rude than the foes we leave frowning behind.

And I'll gaze on thy gold hair as graceful it wreathes,
 And hang o'er thy soft harp, as wildly it breathes;
 Nor dread that the cold-hearted Saxon will tear
 One chord from that harp, or one lock from that hair.

¹ 'In the twenty-eighth year of the reign of Henry VIII, an Act was made respecting the habits and dress in general, of the Irish, whereby all persons were restrained from being shorn or shaven above the ears, or from wearing Gibbes, or Coulins (long locks), on their heads, or hair on their upper lip, called Crommeal. On this occasion a song was written by one of our bards, in which an Irish virgin is made to give the preference to her dear Coulin (or the youth with the flowing locks) to all strangers (by which the English were meant), or those who wore their habits. Of this song, the air alone has reached us, and is universally admired.'—Walker's Historical Memoirs of Irish Bards, p. 134. Mr. Walker informs us also, that, about the same period, there were some harsh measures taken against the Irish Minstrels.

RICH AND RARE WERE THE GEMS SHE WORE¹

RICH and rare were the gems she wore,
And a bright gold ring on her wand she bore;
But oh! her beauty was far beyond
Her sparkling gems, or snow-white wand.

'Lady! dost thou not fear to stray,
So lone and lovely through this bleak way?
Are Erin's sons so good or so cold,
As not to be tempted by woman or gold?'

'Sir Knight! I feel not the least alarm,
No son of Erin will offer me harm:—
For though they love woman and golden store,
Sir Knight! they love honour and virtue more!'

On she went, and her maiden smile
In safety lighted her round the Green Isle;
And blest for ever is she who relied Upon Erin's honour and Erin's pride.

AS A BEAM O'ER THE FACE OF THE WATERS MAY GLOW

As a beam o'er the face of the waters may glow
While the tide runs in darkness and coldness below,
So the cheek may be ting'd with a warm sunny smile,
Though the cold heart to ruin runs darkly the while.

One fatal remembrance, one sorrow that throws
Its bleak shade alike o'er our joys and our woes,
To which life nothing darker or brighter can bring,
For which joy has no balm and affliction no sting—

Oh! this thought in the midst of enjoyment will stay,
Like a dead, leafless branch in the summer's bright ray;
The beams of the warm sun play round it in vain,
It may smile in his light, but it blooms not again.

THE MEETING OF THE WATERS²

THERE is not in the wide world a valley so sweet
As that vale in whose bosom the bright waters meet;³
Oh! the last rays of feeling and life must depart,
Ere the bloom of that valley shall fade from my heart.

Yet it was not that Nature had shed o'er the scene
Her purest of crystal and brightest of green;
'Twas not her soft magic of streamlet or hill,
Oh! no,—it was something more exquisite still.

¹ This ballad is founded upon the following anecdote:—'The people were inspired with such a spirit of honour, virtue, and religion, by the great example of Brien, and by his excellent administration, that, as a proof of it, we are informed that a young lady of great beauty, adorned with jewels and a costly dress, undertook a journey alone, from one end of the kingdom to the other, with a wand only in her hand, at the top of which was a ring of exceeding great value; and such an impression had the laws and government of this Monarch made on the minds of all the people, that no attempt was made upon her honour, nor was she robbed of her clothes or jewels.'—Warner's History of Ireland, vol. i. book x.

² 'The Meeting of the Waters' forms a part of that beautiful scenery which lies between Rathdrum and Arklow, in the county of Wicklow, and these lines were suggested by a visit to this romantic spot, in the summer of the year 1807.

³ The rivers Avon and Avoca.

'Twas that friends, the belov'd of my bosom, were near,
Who made every dear scene of enchantment more dear,
And who felt how the best charms of nature improve,
When we see them reflected from looks that we love.

Sweet vale of Avoca! how calm could I rest
In thy bosom of shade, with the friends I love best,
Where the storms that we feel in this cold world should cease,
And our hearts, like thy waters, be mingled in peace.

HOW DEAR TO ME THE HOUR

How dear to me the hour when daylight dies,
And sunbeams melt along the silent sea;
For then sweet dreams of other days arise,
And memory breathes her vesper sigh to thee.

And, as I watch the line of light, that plays
Along the smooth wave tow'rd the burning west,
I long to tread that golden path of rays,
And think 'twould lead to some bright isle of rest.

TAKE BACK THE VIRGIN PAGE

WRITTEN ON RETURNING A BLANK
BOOK

TAKE back the virgin page,
White and unwritten still;
Some hand, more calm and sage,
The leaf must fill.
Thoughts come, as pure as light,
Pure as even you require:
But, oh! each word I write
Love turns to fire.

Yet let me keep the book:
Oft shall my heart renew,
When on its leaves I look,
Dear thoughts of you.
Like you, 'tis fair and bright;
Like you, too bright and fair
To let wild passion write
One wrong wish there.

Haply, when from those eyes
Far, far away I roam,
Should calmer thoughts arise
Tow'rds you and home;
Fancy may trace some line,
Worthy those eyes to meet,
Thoughts that not burn, but shine,
Pure, calm, and sweet.

And as, o'er ocean far,
Seamen their records keep,
Led by some hidden star
Through the cold deep;
So may the words I write
Tell thro' what storms I stray—
You still the unseen light,
Guiding my way.

THE LEGACY

WHEN in death I shall calmly recline,
O bear my heart to my mistress dear;
Tell her it liv'd upon smiles and wine
Of the brightest hue, while it linger'd
here.

Bid her not shed one tear of sorrow
To sully a heart so brilliant and light;
But balmy drops of the red grape borrow,
To bathe the relic from morn till night.

When the light of my song is o'er,
Then take my harp to your ancient
hall;

Hang it up at that friendly door,
Where weary travellers love to call.¹
Then if some bard, who roams forsaken,
Revive its soft note in passing along,
Oh! let one thought of its master waken
Your warmest smile for the child of
song.

¹ 'In every house was one or two harps, free to all travellers, who were the more caressed, the more they excelled in music.'—O'Halloran.

Keep this cup, which is now o'erflowing,
To grace your revel, when I'm at rest ;
Never, oh ! never its balm bestowing
On lips that beauty hath seldom blest.
But when some warm devoted lover
To her he adores shall bathe its brim,
Then, then my spirit around shall hover,
And hallow each drop that foams for him.

HOW OFT HAS THE BENSHEE CRIED

How oft has the Benshee cried,
How oft has death untied
Bright links that Glory wove,
Sweet bonds entwined by Love !
Peace to each manly soul that sleepeth ;
Rest to each faithful eye that weepeth ;

Long may the fair and brave
Sigh o'er the hero's grave.

We're fall'n upon gloomy days !¹
Star after star decays,
Every bright name, that shed
Light o'er the land, is fled.

Dark falls the tear of him who mourneth
Lost joy, or hope that ne'er returneth ;
But brightly flows the tear,
Wept o'er a hero's bier.

Quench'd are our beacon lights—
Thou, of the Hundred Fights !²
Thou, on whose burning tongue
Truth, peace, and freedom hung !³
Both mute,—but long as valour shineth,
Or mercy's soul at war repineth,
So long shall Erin's pride
Tell how they liv'd and died.

WE MAY ROAM THROUGH THIS WORLD

We may roam through this world, like a child at a feast,
Who but sips of a sweet, and then flies to the rest ;
And, when pleasure begins to grow dull in the east,
We may order our wings, and be off to the west ;
But if hearts that feel, and eyes that smile,
Are the dearest gifts that heaven supplies,
We never need leave our own green isle,
For sensitive hearts, and for sun-bright eyes.
Then remember, wherever your goblet is crown'd,
Thro' this world, whether eastward or westward you roam,
When a cup to the smile of dear woman goes round,
Oh ! remember the smile which adorns her at home.

In England, the garden of Beauty is kept
By a dragon of prudery placed within call ;
But so oft this unamiable dragon has slept,
That the garden's but carelessly watch'd after all.
Oh ! they want the wild sweet-briery fence,
Which round the flowers of Erin dwells ;
Which warns the touch, while winning the sense,
Nor charms us least when it most repels.
Then remember, wherever your goblet is crown'd,
Thro' this world, whether eastward or westward you roam,
When a cup to the smile of dear woman goes round,
Oh ! remember the smile that adorns her at home.

¹ I have endeavoured here, without losing that Irish character, which it is my object to preserve throughout this work, to allude to the sad and ominous fatality, by which England has been deprived of so many great and good men, at a moment when she most requires all the aids of talent and integrity.

² This designation, which has been before applied to Lord Nelson, is the title given to a celebrated Irish Hero, in a Poem by O'Guive, the bard of O'Niel, which is quoted in the Philosophical Survey of the South of Ireland, page 433. 'Con, of the Hundred Fights, sleep in thy grass-grown tomb, and upbraid not our defeats with thy victories.'

³ Fox, Romanorum ultimus.

In France, when the heart of a woman sets sail,
 On the ocean of wedlock its fortune to try,
 Love seldom goes far in a vessel so frail,
 But just pilots her off, and then bids her good-bye.
 While the daughters of Erin keep the boy,
 Ever smiling beside his faithful oar,
 Through billows of woe, and beams of joy,
 The same as he look'd when he left the shore.
 Then remember, wherever your goblet is crown'd,
 Thro' this world, whether eastward or westward you roam,
 When a cup to the smile of dear woman goes round,
 Oh! remember the smile that adorns her at home.

EVELEEN'S BOWER

Oh! weep for the hour,
 When to Eveleen's bower
 The Lord of the Valley with false vows
 came;
 The moon hid her light
 From the heavens that night,
 And wept behind her clouds o'er the maiden's shame.

The clouds pass'd soon
 From the chaste cold moon,
 And heaven smil'd again with her vestal
 flame;
 But none will see the day,
 When the clouds shall pass away,
 Which that dark hour left upon Eve-leen's fame.

The white snow lay
 On the narrow path-way,
 When the Lord of the Valley crost over the moor;
 And many a deep print
 On the white snow's tint
 Show'd the track of his footstep to Eveleen's door.

The next sun's ray
 Soon melted away

Every trace on the path where the false
 Lord came;
 But there's a light above,
 Which alone can remove
 That stain upon the snow of fair Eve-
 leen's fame.

LET ERIN REMEMBER THE DAYS OF OLD

LET Erin remember the days of old,
 Ere her faithless sons betray'd her;
 When Malachi wore the collar of gold,¹
 Which he won from her proud invader,
 When her kings, with standard of green
 unfurl'd,
 Led the Red-Branch Knights to danger;—²
 Ere the emerald gem of the western world
 Was set in the crown of a stranger.
 On Lough Neagh's bank, as the fisherman strays,
 When the clear cold eve's declining,
 He sees the round towers of other days
 In the wave beneath him shining;

¹ 'This brought on an encounter between Malachi (the Monarch of Ireland in the tenth century) and the Danes, in which Malachi defeated two of their champions, whom he encountered successively, hand to hand, taking a collar of gold from the neck of one, and carrying off the sword of the other, as trophies of his victory'—Warner's History of Ireland, vol. i, book ix.

² 'Military orders of knights were very early established in Ireland; long before the birth of Christ we find an hereditary order of Chivalry in Ulster, called Curaidhe na Cravobhe ruadh, or the Knights of the Red Branch, from their chief seat in Emania, adjoining to the palace of the Ulster kings, called Teagh na Cravobhe ruadh, or the Academy of the Red Branch; and contiguous to which was a large hospital, founded for the sick knights and soldiers, called Bronbhearg, or the House of the Sorrowful Soldier.'—O'Halloran's Introduction, &c., part i, chap. 5.

Thus shall memory often, in dreams
sublime,
Catch a glimpse of the days that are over;
Thus, sighing, look through the waves of
time
For the long faded glories they cover.¹

THE SONG OF FIONNUALA²

SILENT, oh Moyle, be the roar of thy water,
Break not, ye breezes, your chain of repose,
While, murmuring mournfully, Lir's lonely daughter
Tells to the night-star her tale of woes.

When shall the swan, her death-note
singing,
Sleep, with wings in darkness furl'd?
When will heaven, its sweet bell ringing,
Call my spirit from this stormy world?

Sadly, oh Moyle, to thy winter-wave
weeping,
Fate bids me languish long ages
away;
Yet still in her darkness doth Erin lie
sleeping,
Still doth the pure light its dawning
delay.
When will that day-star, mildly spring-
ing,
Warm our isle with peace and love?
When will heaven, its sweet bell ringing,
Call my spirit to the fields above?

COME, SEND ROUND THE WINE

COME, send round the wine, and leave points of belief
To simpleton sages, and reasoning fools;
This moment's a flower too fair and brief,
To be wither'd and stain'd by the dust of the schools.
Your glass may be purple, and mine may be blue,
But, while they are fill'd from the same bright bowl,
The fool, who would quarrel for difference of hue,
Deserves not the comfort they shed o'er the soul.

Shall I ask the brave soldier, who fights by my side
In the cause of mankind, if our creeds agree?
Shall I give up the friend I have valued and tried,
If he kneel not before the same altar with me?
From the heretic girl of my soul should I fly,
To seek somewhere else a more orthodox kiss?
No: perish the hearts, and the laws that try
Truth, valour, or love, by a standard like this!

¹ It was an old tradition, in the time of Giraldu, that Lough Neagh had been originally a fountain, by whose sudden overflowing the country was inundated, and a whole region, like the Atlantis of Plato, overwhelmed. He says that the fishermen, in clear weather, used to point out to strangers the tall ecclesiastical towers under the water. Piscatores aquae illius turres ecclesiasticas, quae more patriae archae sunt et alne, necnon et rotundae, sub undis manifeste sereno tempore conspiciunt, et extraneis transcurrentibus, relique causas admirantibus, frequenter ostendunt.—Topogr. Hib. dist. 2. c. 9.

² To make this story intelligible in a song would require a much greater number of verses than any one is authorized to inflict upon an audience at once; the reader must therefore be content to learn, in a note, that Fionnuala, the daughter of Lir, was, by some supernatural power, transformed into a swan, and condemned to wander, for many hundred years, over certain lakes and rivers in Ireland, till the coming of Christianity, when the first sound of the mass-bell was to be the signal of her release.—I found this fanciful fiction among some manuscript translations from the Irish, which were begun under the direction of that enlightened friend of Ireland, the late Countess of Moira.

SUBLIME WAS THE WARNING

SUBLIME was the warning that Liberty spoke,
And grand was the moment when Spaniards awoke
Into life and revenge from the conqueror's chain.
Oh, Liberty! let not this spirit have rest,
Till it move, like a breeze, o'er the waves of the west—
Give the light of your look to each sorrowing spot,
Nor, oh, be the shamrock of Erin forgot

While you add to your garland the Olive of Spain!

If the fame of our fathers, bequeath'd with their rights
Give to country its charm, and to home its delights,

If deceit be a wound, and suspicion a stain,
Then, ye men of Iberia, our cause is the same!
And oh! may his tomb want a bier and a name,
Who would ask for a nobler, a holier death,
Than to turn his last sigh into victory's breath,

For the Shamrock of Erin and Olive of Spain!

Ye Blakes and O'Donnells, whose fathers resign'd
The green hills of their youth, among strangers to find

That repose which, at home, they had sigh'd for in vain,
Join, join in our hope that the flame, which you light,
May be felt yet in Erin, as calm, and as bright,
And forgive even Albion while blushing she draws,
Like a truant, her sword, in the long-slighted cause

Of the Shamrock of Erin and Olive of Spain!

God prosper the cause!—oh, it cannot but thrive,
While the pulse of one patriot heart is alive,

Its devotion to feel, and its rights to maintain;
Then, how sainted by sorrow, its martyrs will die
The finger of glory shall point where they lie;
While, far from the footstep of coward or slave,
The young spirit of Freedom shall shelter their grave

Beneath Shamrocks of Erin and Olives of Spain!

BELIEVE ME, IF ALL THOSE ENDEARING YOUNG CHARMS

BELIEVE me, if all those endearing young charms,

Which I gaze on so fondly to-day,

Were to change by to-morrow, and fleet in my arms,

Like fairy-gifts fading away,

Thou wouldst still be ador'd, as this moment thou art,

Let thy loveliness fade as it will,

And around the dear ruin each wish of my heart

Would entwine itself verdantly still.

It is not while beauty and youth are thine own,

And thy cheeks unprofan'd by a tear

That the fervour and faith of a soul can be known,

To which time will but make thee more dear;

No, the heart that has truly lov'd never forgets,

But as truly loves on to the close,

As the sun-flower turns on her god, when he sets,

The same look which she turn'd when he rose.

ERIN, OH ERIN

LIKE the bright lamp, that shone in Kildare's holy fane,¹
 And burn'd thro' long ages of darkness and storm,
 Is the heart that sorrows have frown'd on in vain,
 Whose spirit outlives them, unfading and warm.
 Erin, oh Erin, thus bright thro' the tears
 Of a long night of bondage, thy spirit appears.
 The nations have fallen, and thou still art young,
 Thy sun is but rising, when others are set;
 And tho' slavery's cloud o'er thy morning hath hung
 The full noon of freedom shall beam round thee yet.
 Erin, oh Erin, tho' long in the shade,
 Thy star will shine out when the proudest shall fade.
 Unchill'd by the rain, and unwak'd by the wind,
 The lily lies sleeping thro' winter's cold hour,
 Till Spring's light touch her fetters unbind,
 And daylight and liberty bless the young flower.
 Thus Erin, oh Erin, thy winter is past,
 And the hope that liv'd thro' it shall blossom at last.

DRINK TO HER

DRINK to her, who long
 Hath wak'd the poet's sigh,
 The girl, who gave to song
 What gold could never buy.
 Oh! woman's heart was made
 For minstrel hands alone;
 By other fingers play'd,
 It yields not half the tone.
 There here's to her, who long
 Hath wak'd the poet's sigh,
 The girl who gave to song
 What gold could never buy.
 At Beauty's door of glass,
 When Wealth and Wit once stood,
 They ask'd her, 'which might pass?'
 She answer'd, 'he, who could.'
 With golden key Wealth thought
 To pass—but 'twould not do:

While Wit a diamond brought,
 Which cut his bright way through.
 So here's to her, who long
 Hath wak'd the poet's sigh,
 The girl, who gave to song
 What gold could never buy.
 The love that seeks a home
 Where wealth or grandeur shines,
 Is like the gloomy gnome,
 That dwells in dark gold mines.
 But oh! the poet's love
 Can boast a brighter sphere;
 Its native home's above,
 Tho' woman keeps it here.
 Then drink to her, who long
 Hath wak'd the poet's sigh,
 The girl, who gave to song
 What gold could never buy.

OH! BLAME NOT THE BARD

OH! blame not the bard, if he fly to the bowers,
 Where Pleasure lies, carelessly smiling at Fame;
 He was born for much more, and in happier hours
 His soul might have burn'd with a holier flame.

¹ The inextinguishable fire of St. Bridget, at Kildare, which Giraldus mentions:—'Apud Kildarium occurrit ignis Sanctae Brigidae, quem inextinguibilem vocant; non quod extinguere non possit, sed quod tam sollicitè moniales et sanctae mulieres ignem, suppetente materia, fovent et nutriunt, ut a tempore virginis per tot annorum curricula semper mansit inextinctus.'—Girald. Camb. de Mirabil. Hibern. dist. 2, c. 34.

The string, that now languishes loose o'er the lyre,
Might have bent a proud bow to the warrior's dart;¹
And the lip, which now breathes but the song of desire,
Might have pour'd the full tide of a patriot's heart.

But alas for his country!—her pride is gone by,
And that spirit is broken, which never would bend;
O'er the ruin her children in secret must sigh,
For 'tis treason to love her, and death to defend.
Unpriz'd are her sons, till they've learn'd to betray;
Undistinguish'd they live, if they shame not their sires;
And the torch, that would light them thro' dignity's way,
Must be caught from the pile, where their country expires.

Then blame not the bard, if in pleasure's soft dream,
He should try to forget, what he never can heal:
Oh! give but a hope—let a vista but gleam
Through the gloom of his country, and mark how he'll feel!
That instant, his heart at her shrine would lay down
Every passion it nurs'd, every bliss it ador'd;
While the myrtle, now idly entwin'd with his crown,
Like the wreath of Harmodius, should cover his sword.²

But tho' glory be gone, and tho' hope fade away,
Thy name, lov'd Erin, shall live in his songs;
Not ev'n in the hour, when his heart is most gay,
Will he lose the remembrance of thee and thy wrongs.
The stranger shall hear thy lament on his plains;
The sigh of thy harp shall be sent o'er the deep,
Till thy masters themselves, as they rivet thy chains,
Shall pause at the song of their captive, and weep.

WHILE GAZING ON THE MOON'S LIGHT

WHILE gazing on the moon's light,
A moment from her smile I turn'd,
To look at orbs, that, more bright,
In lone and distant glory burn'd.
But too far
Each proud star,
For me to feel its warming flame;
Much more dear
That mild sphere,
Which near our planet smiling came;³

Thus, Mary, be but thou my own;
While brighter eyes unheeded play,
I'll love those moonlight looks alone,
That bless my home and guide my way.

The day had sunk in dim showers,
But midnight now, with lustre meet,
Illumin'd all the pale flowers,
Like hope upon a mourner's cheek.

¹ It is conjectured by Wormius, that the name of Ireland is derived from Yr, the Runic for a bow, in the use of which weapon the Irish were once very expert. This derivation is certainly more creditable to us than the following: 'So that Ireland, called the land of Ire, from the constant broils therein for 400 years, was now become the land of concord.'—Lloyd's State Worthies, art. The Lord Grandison.

² See the Hymn, attributed to Alcaeus, Εν μυρτον κλαδί το ξίφος φέρω—'I will carry my sword, hidden in myrtles, like Harmodius, and Aristogiton,' &c.

³ 'Of such celestial bodies as are visible, the sun excepted, the single moon, as despicable as it is in comparison to most of the others, is much more beneficial than they all put together.'—Whiston's Theory, &c.

In the Entretiens d'Ariste, among other ingenious emblems, we find a starry sky without a moon, with these words, Non mille, quod absens.

I said (while
The moon's smile
Play'd o'er a stream, in dimpling bliss,)
'The moon looks
On many brooks

The brook can see no moon but this;¹
And thus, I thought, our fortunes run,
For many a lover looks to thee,
While oh! I feel there is but one,
One Mary in the world for me.

ILL OMENS

WHEN daylight was yet sleeping under the billow,
And stars in the heavens still lingering shone,
Young Kitty, all blushing, rose up from her pillow,
The last time she e'er was to press it alone.
For the youth whom she treasur'd her heart and her soul in,
Had promised to link the last tie before noon;
And, when once the young heart of a maiden is stolen,
The maiden herself will steal after it soon.

As she look'd in the glass, which a woman ne'er misses,
Nor ever wants time for a sly glance or two,
A butterfly,² fresh from the night-flower's kisses,
Flew over the mirror, and shaded her view.
Enrag'd with the insect for hiding her graces,
She brush'd him—he fell, alas! never to rise:
'Ah! such,' said the girl, 'is the pride of our faces,
For which the soul's innocence too often dies.'

While she stole thro' the garden, where heart's-ease was growing,
She cull'd some, and kiss'd off its night-fall'n dew;
And a rose, farther on, look'd so tempting and glowing,
That, spite of her haste, she must gather it too:
But while o'er the roses too carelessly leaning,
Her zone flew in two, and the heart's-ease was lost:
'Ah! this means,' said the girl (and she sigh'd at its meaning),
'That love is scarce worth the repose it will cost!'

BEFORE THE BATTLE

By the hope within us springing,
Herald of to-morrow's strife;
By that sun, whose light is bringing Chains or freedom, death or life—
Oh! remember life can be
No charm for him, who lives not free!
Like the day-star in the wave,
Sinks a hero in his grave,
Midst the dew-fall of a nation's tears.
Happy is he o'er whose decline
The smiles of home may soothing
shine,

And light him down the steep of years:
But oh, how blest they sink to rest,
Who close their eyes on Victory's
breast!

O'er his watch-fire's fading embers
Now the foeman's cheek turns white,
When his heart that field remembers,
Where we tam'd his tyrant might.
Never let him bind again
A chain, like that we broke from then.
Hark! the horn of combat calls—
Ere the golden evening falls,
May we pledge that horn in triumph
round!³

¹ This image was suggested by the following thought, which occurs somewhere in Sir William Jones's works: 'The moon looks upon many night-flowers, the night-flower sees but one moon.'

² An emblem of the soul.

³ 'The Irish Corna was not entirely devoted to martial purposes. In the heroic ages, our ancestors quaffed Meadh out of them, as the Danish hunters do their beverage to this day.'—Walker.

Many a heart that now beats high,
In slumber cold at night shall lie,
Nor waken even at victory's sound :—
But oh, how blest that hero's sleep,
O'er whom a wond'ring world shall
weep !

AFTER THE BATTLE

NIGHT clos'd around the conqueror's
way,
And lightnings show'd the distant hill,
Where those who lost that dreadful day,
Stood few and faint, but fearless still.

The soldier's hope, the patriot's zeal,
For ever dimm'd, for ever crost—
Oh ! who shall say what heroes feel,
When all but life and honour's lost ?

The last sad hour of freedom's dream,
And valour's task, mov'd slowly by,
While mute they watch'd, till morning's
beam

Should rise and give them light to die.
There's yet a world, where souls are free,
Where tyrants taint not nature's
bliss ;—

If death that world's bright opening be,
Oh ! who would live a slave in this ?

'TIS SWEET TO THINK

'Tis sweet to think, that, where'er we rove,
We are sure to find something blissful and dear,
And that, when we're far from the lips we love,
We've but to make love to the lips we are near.
The heart, like a tendril, accustom'd to cling,
Let it grow where it will, cannot flourish alone,
But will lean to the nearest, and loveliest thing,
It can twine with itself, and make closely its own.
Then oh ! what pleasure, where'er we rove,
To be sure to find something, still, that is dear,
And to know, when far from the lips we love,
We've but to make love to the lips we are near.

'Twere a shame, when flowers around us rise,
To make light of the rest, if the rose isn't there ;
And the world's so rich in resplendent eyes,
'Twere a pity to limit one's love to a pair.
Love's wing and the peacock's are nearly alike,
They are both of them bright, but they're changeable too,
And, wherever a new beam of beauty can strike,
It will tincture Love's plume with a different hue.
Then oh ! what pleasure, where'er we rove,
To be sure to find something, still, that is dear,
And to know, when far from the lips we love,
We've but to make love to the lips we are near.

THE IRISH PEASANT TO HIS MISTRESS ¹

THROUGH grief and through danger thy smile hath cheer'd my way,
Till hope seem'd to bud from each thorn that round me lay ;
The darker our fortune, the brighter our pure love burn'd,
Till shame into glory, till fear into zeal was turn'd ;
Yes, slave as I was, in thy arms my spirit felt free,
And bless'd even the sorrows that made me more dear to thee.

¹ Meaning, allegorically, the ancient Church of Ireland.

Thy rival was honour'd, while thou wert wrong'd and scorn'd,
 Thy crown was of briers, while gold her brows adorn'd;
 She woo'd me to temples, whilst thou lay'st hid in caves,
 Her friends were all masters, while thine, alas! were slaves;
 Yet cold in the earth, at thy feet, I would rather be,
 Than wed what I lov'd not, or turn one thought from thee.

They slander thee sorely, who say thy vows are frail—
 Hadst thou been a false one, thy cheek had look'd less pale.
 They say, too, so long thou hast worn those lingering chains,
 That deep in thy heart they have printed their servile stains—
 Oh! foul is the slander,—no chain could that soul subdue—
 Where shineth thy spirit, there liberty shineth too!¹

ON MUSIC

WHEN thro' life unblest we rove,
 Losing all that made life dear,
 Should some notes we used to love,
 In days of boyhood, meet our ear,
 Oh! how welcome breathes the strain!
 Wakening thoughts that long have slept;
 Kindling former smiles again
 In faded eyes that long have wept.

Like the gale, that sighs along
 Beds of oriental flowers,
 Is the grateful breath of song,
 That once was heard in happier hours;

Fill'd with balm, the gale sighs on,
 Though the flowers have sunk in death;
 So, when pleasure's dream is gone,
 Its memory lives in Music's breath.

Music, oh how faint, how weak,
 Language fades before thy spell!
 Why should Feeling ever speak,
 When thou canst breathe her soul so
 well?

Friendship's balmy words may feign,
 Love's are ev'n more false than they;
 Oh! 'tis only music's strain
 Can sweetly soothe and not betray.

IT IS NOT THE TEAR AT THIS MOMENT SHED *

It is not the tear at this moment shed,
 When the cold turf has just been laid o'er him,
 That can tell how belov'd was the friend that's fled,
 Or how deep in our hearts we deplore him.
 'Tis the tear, thro' many a long day wept,
 'Tis life's whole path o'er-shaded;
 'Tis the one remembrance, fondly kept,
 When all lighter griefs have faded.

Thus his memory, like some holy light,
 Kept alive in our hearts, will improve them,
 For worth shall look fairer, and truth more bright,
 When we think how he liv'd but to love them.
 And, as fresher flowers the sod perfume
 Where buried saints are lying,
 So our hearts shall borrow a sweet'ning bloom
 From the image he left there in dying!

¹ 'Where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty.'—St. Paul, 2 Cor. iii. 17.

² These lines were occasioned by the loss of a very near and dear relative, who had died lately at Madeira.

THE ORIGIN OF THE HARP

'Tis believ'd that this Harp, which I wake now for thee,
Was a Syren of old, who sung under the sea ;
And who often, at eve, thro' the bright waters rov'd,
To meet, on the green shore, a youth whom she lov'd.

But she lov'd him in vain, for he left her to weep,
And in tears, all the night, her gold tresses to steep ;
Till heav'n look'd with pity on true love so warm,
And chang'd to this soft Harp the sea-maiden's form.

Still her bosom rose fair—still her cheeks smil'd the same—
While her sea-beauties gracefully form'd the light frame ;
And her hair, as, let loose, o'er her white arm it fell,
Was chang'd to bright chords utt'ring melody's spell.

Hence it came, that this soft Harp so long hath been known
To mingle love's language with sorrow's sad tone ;
Till thou didst divide them, and teach the fond lay
To speak love when I'm near thee, and grief when away.

LOVE'S YOUNG DREAM

Oh ! the days are gone, when Beauty
 bright
 My heart's chain wove ;
When my dream of life, from morn till
 night,
 Was love, still love.
 New hope may bloom,
 And days may come,
 Of milder, calmer beam,
But there's nothing half so sweet in life
 As love's young dream :
No, there's nothing half so sweet in life
 As love's young dream.
Though the bard to purer fame may soar,
 When wild youth's past ;
Though he win the wise, who frown'd
 before,
 To smile at last ;

He'll never meet
 A joy so sweet,
 In all his noon of fame,
As when first he sung to woman's ear
 His soul-felt flame,
And at every close, she blush'd to hear
 The one lov'd name.
No,—that hallow'd form is ne'er forgot
 Which first love trac'd ;
Still it lingering haunts the greenest spot
 On memory's waste.
 'Twas odour fled
 As soon as shed ;
 'Twas morning's winged dream ;
 'Twas a light, that ne'er can shine again
On life's dull stream :
Oh ! 'twas light that ne'er can shine again
On life's dull stream.

THE PRINCE'S DAY ¹

Tho' dark are our sorrows, to-day we'll forget them,
And smile through our tears, like a sunbeam in showers :
There never were hearts, if our rulers would let them,
More form'd to be grateful and blest than ours.
 But just when the chain
 Has ceased to pain,
And hope has enwreath'd it round with flowers,

¹ This song was written for a fête in honour of friend, Major Bryan, at his seat in the county of the Prince of Wales's birthday, given by my friend, Major Bryan, at his seat in the county of Kilkenny.

There comes a new link

Our spirits to sink—

Oh! the joy that we taste, like the light of the poles,
Is a flash amid darkness, too brilliant to stay;
But, though 'twere the last little spark in our souls,
We must light it up now, on our Prince's Day.

Contempt on the minion, who calls you disloyal!
Tho' fierce to your foe, to your friends you are true;
And the tribute most high to a head that is royal,
Is love from a heart that loves liberty too.

While cowards, who blight

Your fame, your right,

Would shrink from the blaze of the battle array,

The Standard of Green

In front would be seen,—

Oh, my life on your faith! were you summon'd this minute,
You'd cast every bitter remembrance away,
And show what the arm of old Erin has in it,
When rous'd by the foe, on her Prince's Day.

He loves the Green Isle, and his love is recorded
In hearts, which have suffer'd too much to forget;
And hope shall be crown'd, and attachment rewarded,
And Erin's gay jubilee shine out yet.

The gem may be broke

By many a stroke,

But nothing can cloud its native ray;

Each fragment will cast

A light, to the last,—

And thus, Erin, my country, tho' broken thou art,
There's a lustre within thee, that ne'er will decay;
A spirit, which beams through each suffering part,
And now smiles at all pain on the Prince's Day.

WEEP ON, WEEP ON

WEEP on, weep on, your hour is past;
Your dreams of pride are o'er;
The fatal chain is round you cast,
And you are men no more.
In vain the hero's heart hath bled;
The sage's tongue hath warn'd in vain;
Oh, Freedom! once thy flame hath fled,
It never lights again.

Weep on—perhaps in after days,
They'll learn to love your name;
When many a deed may wake in praise
That long hath slept in blame.
And when they tread the ruin'd Isle,
Where rest, at length, the lord and slave,
They'll wond'ring ask, how hands so vile
Could conquer hearts so brave?

'Twas fate, they'll say, 'a wayward fate
Your web of discord wove;
And while your tyrants join'd in hate,
You never join'd in love.
But hearts fell off, that ought to twine,
And man profan'd what God had given;
Till some were heard to curse the shrine,
Where others knelt to heaven!

LESBIA HATH A BEAMING EYE

LESBIA hath a beaming eye,
But no one knows for whom it beameth;
Right and left its arrows fly,
But what they aim at no one dreameth.
Sweeter 'tis to gaze upon
My Nora's lid that seldom rises;
Few its looks, but every one,
Like unexpected light, surprises!

Oh, my Nora Creina, dear,
My gentle, bashful Nora Creina,
Beauty lies
In many eyes,
But Love in yours, my Nora Creina.

Lesbia wears a robe of gold,
But all so close the nymph hath lac'd it,
Not a charm of beauty's mould
Presumes to stay where nature plac'd it.
Oh! my Nora's gown for me,
That floats as wild as mountain breezes,
Leaving every beauty free
To sink or swell as Heaven pleases.
Yes, my Nora Creina, dear,
My simple, graceful Nora Creina,
Nature's dress
Is loveliness—
The dress you wear, my Nora Creina.

Lesbia hath a wit refin'd,
But, when its points are gleaming round us,
Who can tell if they're design'd
To dazzle merely, or to wound us?
Pillow'd on my Nora's heart,
In safer slumber Love reposes—
Bed of peace! whose roughest part
Is but the crumpling of the roses.
Oh! my Nora Creina, dear,
My mild, my artless Nora Creina!
Wit, though bright,
Hath no such light,
As warms your eyes, my Nora Creina.

I SAW THY FORM IN YOUTHFUL PRIME

I saw thy form in youthful prime,
Nor thought that pale decay
Would steal before the steps of Time,
And waste its bloom away, Mary!
Yet still thy features wore that light,
Which fleets not with the breath;
And life ne'er look'd more truly bright
Than in thy smile of death, Mary!

¹ I have here made a feeble effort to imitate that exquisite inscription of Shenstone's, 'Heu! quanto minus est cum reliquis versari quam meminisse!'

² This ballad is founded upon one of the many stories related of St. Kevin, whose bed in the

As streams that run o'er golden mines,
Yet humbly, calmly glide,
Nor seem to know the wealth that shines
Within their gentle tide, Mary!
So veil'd beneath the simplest guise,
Thy radiant genius shone,
And that, which charm'd all other eyes,
Seem'd worthless in thy own, Mary!

If souls could always dwell above,
Thou ne'er hadst left that sphere;
Or could we keep the souls we love,
We ne'er had lost thee here, Mary!
Though many a gifted mind we meet,
Though fairest forms we see,
To live with them is far less sweet,
Than to remember thee, Mary!¹

BY THAT LAKE, WHOSE GLOOMY SHORE²

By that Lake, whose gloomy shore
Sky-lark never warbles o'er,³
Where the cliff hangs high and steep
Young Saint Kevin stole to sleep.
'Here, at least,' he calmly said,
'Woman ne'er shall find my bed.'
Ah! the good Saint little knew
What that wily sex can do.

'Twas from Kathleen's eyes he flew,—
Eyes of most unholy blue!
She had lov'd him well and long,
Wish'd him hers, nor thought it wrong.
Wheresoe'er the Saint would fly,
Still he heard her light foot nigh;
East or west, where'er he turn'd,
Still her eyes before him burn'd.

On the bold cliff's bosom cast,
Tranquil now he sleeps at last;
Dreams of heav'n, nor thinks that e'er
Woman's smile can haunt him there.
But nor earth nor heaven is free
From her power, if fond she be:
Even now, while calm he sleeps,
Kathleen o'er him leans and weeps.

rock is to be seen at Glendalough, a most gloomy and romantic spot in the county of Wicklow.

³ There are many other curious traditions concerning this Lake, which may be found in Gualdus, Colgan, &c.

Fearless she had track'd his feet
To this rocky, wild retreat ;
And when morning met his view,
Her mild glances met it too.
Ah, your Saints have cruel hearts !
Sternly from his bed he starts,
And with rude repulsive shock,
Hurls her from the beetling rock.

Glendalough, thy gloomy wave
Soon was gentle Kathleen's grave !
Soon the Saint (yet ah ! too late,)
Felt her love, and mourn'd her fate.
When he said, ' Heaven rest her soul !'
Round the Lake light music stole ;
And her ghost was seen to glide,
Smiling o'er the fatal tide.

SHE IS FAR FROM THE LAND

SHE is far from the land where her young hero sleeps,
And lovers are round her, sighing :
But coldly she turns from their gaze, and weeps,
For her heart in his grave is lying.

She sings the wild song of her dear native plains,
Every note which he lov'd awaking ;—
Ah ! little they think who delight in her strains,
How the heart of the Minstrel is breaking.

He had liv'd for his love, for his country he died,
They were all that to life had entwin'd him ;
Nor soon shall the tears of his country be dried,
Nor long will his love stay behind him.

Oh ! make her a grave where the sunbeams rest,
When they promise a glorious morrow ;
They'll shine o'er her sleep, like a smile from the West,
From her own lov'd island of sorrow.

NAY, TELL ME NOT, DEAR

NAY, tell me not, dear, that the goblet drowns
One charm of feeling, one fond regret ;
Believe me, a few of thy angry frowns
Are all I've sunk in its bright wave yet.

Ne'er hath a beam
Been lost in the stream
That ever was shed from thy form or soul ;
The spell of those eyes,
The balm of thy sighs,

Still float on the surface, and hallow my bowl.
Then fancy not, dearest, that wine can steal
One blissful dream of the heart from me ;
Like founts that awaken the pilgrim's zeal,
The bowl but brightens my love for thee.

They tell us that Love in his fairy bower
Had two blush-roses, of birth divine ;
He sprinkled the one with a rainbow's shower,
But bath'd the other with mantling wine.

Soon did the buds
That drank of the floods
Distill'd by the rainbow, decline and fade ;
While those which the tide
Of ruby had dy'd

All blush'd into beauty, like thee, sweet maid !

Then fancy not, dearest, that wine can steal
One blissful dream of the heart from me;
Like founts, that awaken the pilgrim's zeal,
The bowl but brightens my love for thee.

AVENGING AND BRIGHT

AVENGING and bright fall the swift sword of Erin¹
On him who the brave sons of Usna betray'd!—
For every fond eye he hath waken'd a tear in,
A drop from his heart-wounds shall weep o'er her blade.

By the red cloud that hung over Conor's dark dwelling,²
When Ulad's³ three champions lay sleeping in gore—
By the billows of war, which so often, high swelling,
Have wafted these heroes to victory's shore—

We swear to revenge them!—no joy shall be tasted,
The harp shall be silent, the maiden unwed,
Our halls shall be mute, and our fields shall lie wasted,
Till vengeance is wreak'd on the murderer's head.

Yes, monarch! tho' sweet are our home recollections,
Though sweet are the tears that from tenderness fall;
Though sweet are our friendships, our hopes, our affections,
Revenge on a tyrant is sweetest of all!

WHAT THE BEE IS TO THE FLOWERET

He.—What the bee is to the flow'ret,
When he looks for honey-dew,
Through the leaves that close em-
bower it,
That, my love, I'll be to you.

She.—What the bank, with verdure
glowing,
Is to waves that wander near Whisp'ring kisses, while they're going,
That I'll be to you, my dear.

She.—But they say, the bee's a rover,
Who will fly, when sweets are
gone;
And, when once the kiss is over,
Faithless brooks will wander on.

He.—Nay, if flowers will lose their looks,
If sunny banks will wear away,
'Tis but right, that bees and brooks
Should sip and kiss them while they may.

¹ The words of this song were suggested by the very ancient Irish story called 'Deirdri, or the Lamentable Fate of the Sons of Usnach,' which has been translated literally from the Gaelic, by Mr. O'Flanagan (see vol. i. of Transactions of the Gaelic Society of Dublin), and upon which it appears that the 'Darthula of Macpherson' is founded. The treachery of Conor, King of Ulster, in putting to death the three sons of Usna, was the cause of a desolating war against Ulster, which terminated in the destruction of Eman. 'This story (says Mr. O'Flanagan) has been, from time immemorial, held in high repute as one of the three tragic stories of the Irish. These are, "The death of the children of Touran;" "The death of the children of Lear" (both regarding Tuatha de Danans), and this, "The death of the children of Usnach," which is a Milesian story.' It will be recollected that, in the Second Number of these Melodies, there is a ballad upon the story of the children of Lear or Lir; 'Silent, oh Moyle!' &c.

Whatever may be thought of those sanguine claims to antiquity, which Mr. O'Flanagan and others advance for the literature of Ireland, it would be a lasting reproach upon our nationality, if the Gaelic researches of this gentleman did not meet with all the liberal encouragement they so well merit.

² 'Oh Nisi! view that cloud that I here see in the sky! I see over Eman-green a chilling cloud of blood-tinged red.'—Deirdri's Song.

LOVE AND THE NOVICE

'HERE we dwell, in holiest bowers,
 Where angels of light o'er our orisons bend ;
 Where sighs of devotion and breathings of flowers
 To heaven in mingled odour ascend.
 Do not disturb our calm, oh Love !
 So like is thy form to the cherubs above,
 It well might deceive such hearts as ours.'

Love stood near the Novice and listen'd,
 And Love is no novice in taking a hint ;
 His laughing blue eyes soon with piety glisten'd ;
 His rosy wing turn'd to heaven's own tint.
 'Who would have thought,' the urchin cries,
 'That Love could so well, so gravely disguise
 His wandering wings and wounding eyes ?'

Love now warms thee, waking and sleeping,
 Young Novice, to him all thy orisons rise.
 He tinges the heavenly fount with his weeping,
 He brightens the censer's flame with his sighs.
 Love is the Saint enshrin'd in thy breast,
 And angels themselves would admit such a guest,
 If he came to them cloth'd in Piety's vest.

THIS LIFE IS ALL CHEQUER'D WITH PLEASURES AND WOES

THIS life is all chequer'd with pleasures and woes,
 That chase one another like waves of the deep,—
 Each brightly or darkly, as onward it flows,
 Reflecting our eyes, as they sparkle or weep.
 So closely our whims on our miseries tread,
 That the laugh is awak'd ere the tear can be dried ;
 And, as fast as the rain-drop of Pity is shed,
 The goose-plumage of Folly can turn it aside.
 But pledge me the cup—if existence would cloy,
 With hearts ever happy, and heads ever wise,
 Be ours the light Sorrow, half-sister to Joy,
 And the light, brilliant Folly that flashes and dies.

When Hylas was sent with his urn to the fount,
 Through fields full of light, and with heart full of play,
 Light rambled the boy, over meadow and mount,
 And neglected his task for the flowers on the way.¹
 Thus many, like me, who in youth should have tasted
 The fountain that runs by Philosophy's shrine,
 Their time with the flowers on the margin have wasted,
 And left their light urns all as empty as mine.
 But pledge me the goblet ;—while Idleness weaves
 These flow'rets together, should Wisdom but see
 One bright drop or two that has fall'n on the leaves,
 From her fountain divine, 'tis sufficient for me.

OH THE SHAMROCK

THROUGH Erin's Isle,
 To sport awhile,
 As Love and valour wander'd,
 With Wit, the sprite,
 Whose quiver bright
 A thousand arrows squander'd.
 Where'er they pass,
 A triple grass¹
 Shoots up, with dew-drops stream-
 ing,
 As softly green
 As emeralds seen
 Through purest crystal gleaming.
 Oh the Shamrock, the green, immortal
 Shamrock !
 Chosen leaf,
 Of Bard and Chief,
 Old Erin's native Shamrock !

 Says Valour, ' See,
 They spring for me,
 Those leafy gems of morning ! '—
 Says Love, ' No, no,
 For me they grow,
 My fragrant path adorning.'

But Wit perceives
 The triple leaves,
 And cries, ' Oh ! do not sever
 A type, that blends
 Three godlike friends,
 Love, Valour, Wit, for ever ! '

Oh the Shamrock, the green, immortal
 Shamrock !
 Chosen leaf
 Of Bard and Chief,
 Old Erin's native Shamrock !

 So firmly fond
 May last the bond
 They wove that morn together,
 And ne'er may fall
 One drop of gall
 On Wit's celestial feather.
 May Love, as twine
 His flowers divine,
 Of thorny falsehood weed 'em ;
 May valour ne'er
 His standard rear
 Against the cause of Freedom !

Oh the Shamrock, the green, immortal
 Shamrock !
 Chosen leaf
 Of Bard and Chief,
 Old Erin's native Shamrock !

AT THE MID HOUR OF NIGHT

At the mid hour of night, when stars are weeping, I fly
 To the lone vale we lov'd, when life shone warm in thine eye ;
 And I think oft, if spirits can steal from the regions of air,
 To revisit past scenes of delight, thou wilt come to me there,
 And tell me our love is remember'd, even in the sky.

Then I sing the wild song 'twas once such pleasure to hear !
 When our voices commingling breath'd, like one, on the ear ;
 And, as Echo far off through the vale my sad orison rolls,
 I think, oh my love ! 'tis thy voice from the Kingdom of Souls,² Faintly answering still the notes that once were so dear.

¹ It is said that St. Patrick, when preaching the Trinity to the Pagan Irish, used to illustrate his subject by reference to that species of trefoil called in Ireland by the name of the Shamrock ; and hence, perhaps, the Island of Saints adopted this plant as her national emblem. Hope, among the ancients, was sometimes represented as a beautiful child, standing upon tiptoes, and a trefoil of three-coloured grass in her hand.

² 'There are countries,' says Montaigne, 'where they believe the souls of the happy live in all manner of liberty, in delightful fields ; and that it is those souls, repeating the words we utter, which we call Echo.'

ONE BUMPER AT PARTING

ONE bumper at parting !—though many
Have circled the board since we met,
The fullest, the saddest of any,
Remains to be crown'd by us yet.
The sweetness that pleasure hath in it,
Is always so slow to come forth,
That seldom, alas, till the minute
It dies, do we know half its worth.
But come,—may our life's happy measure

Be all of such moments made up ;
They're born on the bosom of Pleasure,
They die 'midst the tears of the cup.

As onward we journey, how pleasant
To pause and inhabit awhile
Those few sunny spots, like the present,
That 'mid the dull wilderness smile !
But Time, like a pitiless master,
Cries 'Onward !' and spurs the gay
hours—

Ah, never doth Time travel faster,
Than when his way lies among flowers.
But come,—may our life's happy measure
Be all of such moments made up ;
They're born on the bosom of Pleasure,
They die 'midst the tears of the cup.

We saw how the sun look'd in sinking,
The waters beneath him how bright ;
And now, let our farewell of drinking
Resemble that farewell of light.
You saw how he finish'd, by darting
His beam o'er a deep billow's brim—
So, fill up, let's shine at our parting,
In full liquid glory, like him.
And oh ! may our life's happy measure
Of moments like this be made up,
'Twas born on the bosom of Pleasure,
It dies 'mid the tears of the cup.

'TIS THE LAST ROSE OF SUMMER

'Tis the last rose of summer
Left blooming alone ;
All her lovely companions
Are faded and gone ;

¹ 'Steals silently to Morna's grove.'—See, in Mr. Bunting's collection, a poem translated from the Irish, by the late John Brown, one of my earliest college companions and friends,

No flower of her kindred,
No rose-bud is nigh,
To reflect back her blushes,
Or give sigh for sigh.

I'll not leave thee, thou lone one !
To pine on the stem ;
Since the lovely are sleeping,
Go, sleep thou with them.
Thus kindly I scatter
Thy leaves o'er the bed,
Where thy mates of the garden
Lie scentless and dead.

So soon may I follow,
When friendships decay,
And from Love's shining circle
The gems drop away.
When true hearts lie wither'd,
And fond ones are flown,
Oh ! who would inhabit
This bleak world alone ?

THE YOUNG MAY MOON

THE young May moon is beaming, love,
The glow-worm's lamp is gleaming, love,
How sweet to rove
Through Morna's grove,¹
When the drowsy world is dreaming,
love !

Then awake !—the heavens look bright,
my dear,
'Tis never too late for delight, my dear,
And the best of all ways
To lengthen our days,
Is to steal a few hours from the night,
my dear !

Now all the world is sleeping, love,
But the Sage, his star-watch keeping,
love,
And I, whose star,
More glorious far,
Is the eye from that casement peeping,
love.

Then awake !—till rise of sun, my dear,
The Sage's glass we'll shun, my dear,
Or, in watching the flight
Of bodies of light,
He might happen to take thee for one,
my dear.

whose death was as singularly melancholy and unfortunate as his life had been amiable, honourable, and exemplary.

THE MINSTREL BOY

THE Minstrel Boy to the war is gone,
In the ranks of death you'll find him;
His father's sword he has girded on,
And his wild harp slung behind him.—
'Land of song!' said the warrior-bard,
'Though all the world betrays thee,
One sword, at least, thy rights shall guard,

One faithful harp shall praise thee!'

The Minstrel fell!—but the foeman's chain

Could not bring his proud soul under;
The harp he lov'd ne'er spoke again,
For he tore its chords asunder;
And said, 'No chains shall sully thee,
Thou soul of love and bravery!
Thy songs were made for the pure and
free,
They shall never sound in slavery.'

THE SONG OF O'RUARK,

PRINCE OF BREFFNI¹

THE valley lay smiling before me,
Where lately I left her behind;
Yet I trembled, and something hung o'er me,
That sadden'd the joy of my mind.

I look'd for the lamp which, she told me,
Should shine, when her Pilgrim
return'd;

But, though darkness began to infold me,
No lamp from the battlements burn'd!

I flew to her chamber—'twas lonely,
As if the lov'd tenant lay dead;—

Ah, would it were death, and death only!
But no, the young false one had fled.

And there hung the lute that could soften
My very worst pains into bliss;

While the hand, that had wak'd it so often,

Now throbb'd to a proud rival's kiss.

There was a time, falsest of women,
When Breffni's good sword would have sought

That man, thro' a million of foemen,
Whodard'd but to wrong thee in thought!

While now—oh degenerate daughter
Of Erin, how fall'n is thy fame!

And through ages of bondage and slaughter,

Our country shall bleed for thy shame,

Already, the curse is upon her,

And strangers her valleys profane;

They come to divide, to dishonour,

And tyrants they long will remain.

But onward!—the green banner rearing,

Go, flesh every sword to the hilt;

On our side is Virtue and Erin,

On theirs is the Saxon and guilt.

OH! HAD WE SOME BRIGHT LITTLE ISLE OF OUR OWN

OH! had we some bright little isle of our own,

In a blue summer ocean, far off and alone,

Where a leaf never dies in the still blooming bowers,

And the bee banquets on through a whole year of flowers;

¹ These stanzas are founded upon an event of most melancholy importance to Ireland; if, as we are told by our Irish historians, it gave England the first opportunity of probing by our divisions and subduing us. The following are the circumstances, as related by O'Halloran:—'The king of Leinster had long conceived a violent affection for Dearbhorgil, daughter to the king of Meath, and though she had been for some time married to O'Ruark, prince of Breffni, yet it could not restrain his passion. They carried on a private correspondence, and she informed him that O'Ruark intended soon to go on a pilgrimage (an act of piety frequent in those days), and conjured him to embrace that opportunity of conveying her from a husband she detested to a lover she adored. MacMurchad too punctually obeyed the summons, and had the lady conveyed to his capital of Ferns.'—The monarch Roderick espoused the cause of O'Ruark, while MacMurchad fled to England, and obtained the assistance of Henry II.

'Such,' adds Giraldus Cambrensis (as I find him in an old translation), 'is the variable and fickle nature of woman, by whom all mischief in the world (for the most part) do happen and come, as may appear by Marcus Antonius, and by the destruction of Troy.'

Where the sun loves to pause
 With so fond a delay,
 That the night only draws
 A thin veil o'er the day;
 Where simply to feel that we breathe, that we live,
 Is worth the best joy that life elsewhere can give.

There, with souls ever ardent and pure as the clime,
 We should love, as they lov'd in the first golden time;
 The glow of the sunshine, the balm of the air,
 Would steal to our hearts, and make all summer there.

With affection as free
 From decline as the bowers,
 And, with hope, like the bee,
 Living always on flowers,
 Our life should resemble a long day of light,
 And our death come on, holy and calm as the night.

FAREWELL!—BUT WHENEVER YOU WELCOME THE HOUR

FAREWELL!—but whenever you welcome the hour,
 That awakens the night-song of mirth in your bower,
 Then think of the friend who once welcom'd it too,
 And forgot his own griefs to be happy with you.
 His griefs may return, not a hope may remain
 Of the few that have brighten'd his pathway of pain,
 But he ne'er will forget the short vision, that threw
 Its enchantment around him, while ling'ring with you.

And still on that evening, when pleasure fills up
 To the highest top sparkle each heart and each cup,
 Where'er my path lies, be it gloomy or bright,
 My soul, happy friends, shall be with you that night;
 Shall join in your revels, your sports, and your wiles,
 And return to me, beaming all o'er with your smiles—
 Too blest, if it tells me that, 'mid the gay cheer,
 Some kind voice had murmur'd, 'I wish he were here!'

Let Fate do her worst, there are relics of joy,
 Bright dreams of the past, which she cannot destroy;
 Which come in the night-time of sorrow and care,
 And bring back the features that joy used to wear.
 Long, long be my heart with such memories fill'd!
 Like the vase, in which roses have once been distill'd—
 You may break, you may shatter the vase, if you will,
 But the scent of the roses will hang round it still.

OH! DOUBT ME NOT

Oh! doubt me not—the season
 Is o'er, when Folly made me rove,
 And now the vestal, Reason,
 Shall watch the fire awak'd by
 Love.
 Although this heart was early blown,

And fairest hands disturb'd the tree,
 They only shook some blossoms down,
 Its fruit has all been kept for thee.
 Then doubt me not—the season
 Is o'er, when Folly made me rove,
 And now the vestal, Reason,
 Shall watch the fire awak'd by
 Love.

And though my lute no longer
 Maysing of Passion'sardentspell,
 Yet, trust me, all the stronger
 I feel the bliss I do not tell.
 The bee through many a garden roves,
 And hums his lay of courtship o'er,
 But when he finds the flower he loves,
 He settles there, and hums no more.
 Then doubt me not—the season
 Is o'er, when Folly kept me free,
 And now the vestal, Reason,
 Shall guard the flame awak'd by thee.

YOU REMEMBER ELLEN¹

You remember Ellen, our hamlet's pride,
 How meekly she blessed her humble lot,
 When the stranger, William, had made her his bride,
 And love was the light of their lowly cot.
 Together they toil'd through winds and rains,
 Till William, at length, in sadness said,
 'We must seek our fortune on other plains;—
 Then, sighing, she left her lowly shed.
 They roam'd a long and a weary way,
 Nor much was the maiden's heart at ease,
 When now, at close of one stormy day,
 They see a proud castle among the trees.
 'To-night,' said the youth, 'we'll shelter there;
 The wind blows cold, the hour is late.'
 So he blew the horn with a chieftain's sair,
 And the Porter bow'd, as they pass'd the gate.
 'Now, welcome, Lady,' exclaim'd the youth,—
 'This castle is thine, and these dark woods all!'
 She believ'd him crazed, but his words were truth,
 For Ellen is Lady of Rosna Hall!

¹ This ballad was suggested by a well-known and interesting story told of a certain noble family in England.

And dearly the Lord of Rosna loves
 What William, the stranger, woo'd and wed;
 And the light of bliss, in these lordly groves,
 Shines pure as it did in the lowly shed.

I'D MOURN THE HOPES

I'd mourn the hopes that leave me,
 If thy smiles had left me too;
 I'd weep when friends deceive me,
 If thou wert, like them, untrue.
 But while I've thee before me,
 With heart so warm and eyes so bright,
 No clouds can linger o'er me,
 That smile turns them all to light.

'Tis not in fate to harm me,
 While fate leaves thy love to me;
 'Tis not in joy to charm me,
 Unless joy be shar'd with thee.
 One minute's dream about thee
 Were worth a long, an endless year
 Of waking bliss without thee,
 My own love, my only dear!

And though the hope be gone, love,
 That long sparkled o'er our way,
 Oh! we shall journey on, love,
 More safely, without its ray.
 Far better lights shall win me
 Along the path I've yet to roam:—
 The mind that burns within me,
 And pure smiles from thee at home.

Thus when the lamp that lighted
 The traveller at first goes out,
 He feels awhile benighted,
 And looks round in fear and doubt.
 But soon, the prospect clearing,
 By cloudless starlight on he treads,
 And thinks no lamp so cheering
 As that light which Heaven sheds.

COME O'ER THE SEA

COME o'er the sea,
 Maiden, with me,
 Mine through sunshine, storm, and snows;
 Seasons may roll,
 But the true soul
 Burns the same, where'er it goes.

Let fate frown on, so we love and part
not ;

'Tis life where thou art, 'tis death where thou'rt not.

Then come o'er the sea,
Maiden, with me,
Come wherever the wild wind blows ;
Seasons may roll,
But the true soul
Burns the same, where'er it goes.

Was not the sea
Made for the Free,
Land for courts and chains alone ?
Here we are slaves,
But, on the waves,
Love and Liberty's all our own.
No eye to watch, and no tongue to wound us,
All earth forgot, and all heaven around us—

Then come o'er the sea,
Maiden, with me,
Mine through sunshine, storm, and snows ;
Seasons may roll,
But the true soul
Burns the same, where'er it goes.

HAS SORROW THY YOUNG DAYS SHADED

HAS sorrow thy young days shaded,
As clouds o'er the morning fleet ?
Too fast have those young days faded,
That, even in sorrow, were sweet !
Does Time with his cold wing wither
Each feeling that once was dear ?—
Then, child of misfortune, come hither,
I'll weep with thee, tear for tear.

Has love to that soul, so tender,
Been like our Lagenian mine,¹
Where sparkles of golden splendour
All over the surface shine—
But, if in pursuit we go deeper,
Allur'd by the gleam that shone,
Ah ! false as the dream of the sleeper,
Like Love, the bright ore is gone.

¹ Our Wicklow Gold Mines, to which this verse alludes, deserves, I fear, but too well the character here given of them.

² The bird, having got its prize, settled not

Has Hope, like the bird in the story,²
That fitted from tree to tree
With the talisman's glitt'ring glory—
Has Hope been that bird to thee ?
On branch after branch alighting,
The gem did she still display,
And, when nearest and most inviting,
Then waft the fair gem away ?
If thus the young hours have fled, ead,
When sorrow itself looked bright ;
If thus the fair hope hath cheated,
That led thee along so light ;
If thus the cold world now wither
Each feeling that once was dear :—
Come, child of misfortune, come hither,
I'll weep with thee, tear for tear.

NO, NOT MORE WELCOME

No, not more welcome the fairy numbers
Of music fall on the sleeper's ear,
When half-awaking from fearful slumbers,
He thinks the full quire of heaven is
near,—
Than came that voice, when, all forsaken,
This heart long had sleeping lain,
Nor thought its cold pulse would ever waken
To such benign, blessed sounds again.
Sweet voice of comfort ! 'twas like the stealing
Of summer wind thro' some wreathed shell—
Each secret winding, each inmost feeling
Of all my soul echoed to its spell.
'Twas whisper'd balm—'twas sunshine
spoken !—
I'd live years of grief and pain
To have my long sleep of sorrow broken
By such benign, blessed sounds again.

WHEN FIRST I MET THEE

WHEN first I met thee, warm and young,
There shone such truth about thee,
And on thy lip such promise hung,
I did not dare to doubt thee.

far off, with the talisman in his mouth. The prince drew near it, hoping it would drop it ; but, as he approached, the bird took wing, and settled again, &c.—Arabian Nights.

I saw thee change, yet still relied,
Still clung with hope the fonder,
And thought, though false to all beside,
From me thou couldst not wander.

But go, deceiver ! go,
The heart, whose hopes could make it
Trust one so false, so low,
Deserves that thou shouldst break it.

When every tongue thy follies nam'd,
I fled the unwelcome story ;
Or found, in even the faults they blam'd,

Some gleams of future glory.
I still was true, when nearer friends
Conspired to wrong, to slight thee ;
The heart that now thy falsehood
rends

Would then have bled to right thee.
But go, deceiver ! go,—

Some day, perhaps, thou'lt
waken

From pleasure's dream, to know
The grief of hearts forsaken.

Even now, though youth its bloom has
shed,

No lights of age adorn thee :
The few, who lov'd thee once, have fled,
And they, who flatter, scorn thee.

Thy midnight cup is pledg'd to slaves,
No genial ties enwreath it ;
The smiling there, like light on graves,
Has rank cold hearts beneath it.

Go—go—though worlds were thine,
I would not now surrender

One taintless tear of mine
For all thy guilty splendour !

And days may come, thou false one ! yet,
When even those ties shall sever ;

When thou wilt call, with vain regret,
On her thou'st lost for ever ;

On her who, in thy fortune's fall,
With smiles had still receiv'd thee,

And gladly died to prove thee all
Her fancy first believ'd thee.

Go—go—'tis vain to curse,
'Tis weakness to upbraid thee ;

Hate cannot wish thee worse
Than guilt and shame have made thee.

WHILE HISTORY'S MUSE

WHILE History's Muse the memorial was keeping

Of all that the dark hand of Destiny weaves,
Beside her the Genius of Erin stood weeping,
For her's was the story that blotted the leaves.
But oh ! how the tear in her eyelids grew bright,
When, after whole pages of sorrow and shame,

She saw History write,
With a pencil of light

That illum'd the whole volume, her Wellington's name.

'Hail, Star of my Isle !' said the Spirit, all sparkling
With beams, such as break from her own dewy skies—

'Through ages of sorrow, deserted and darkling,
I've watch'd for some glory like thine to arise.

For, though Heroes I've number'd, unbless was their lot,
And unhallow'd they sleep in the crossways of Fame ;—

But oh ! there is not
One dishonouring blot

On the wreath that encircles my Wellington's name.

'Yet still the last crown of thy toils is remaining,

The grandest, the purest, ev'n thou hast yet known ;
Though proud was thy task, other nations unchaining,
Far prouder to heal the deep wounds of thy own.

At the foot of that throne for whose weal thou hast stood,
 Go, plead for the land that first cradled thy fame,
 And, bright o'er the flood
 Of her tears and her blood,
 Let the rainbow of Hope be her Wellington's name !'

THE TIME I'VE LOST IN WOOING

The time I've lost in wooing,
 In watching and pursuing
 The light, that lies
 In woman's eyes,
 Has been my heart's undoing.
 Though Wisdom oft has sought me,
 I scorn'd the lore she brought me,
 My only books
 Were woman's looks,
 And folly's all they've taught me.
 Her smile when Beauty granted,
 I hung with gaze enchanted,
 Like him, the sprite,¹
 Whom maids by night
 Oft meet in glen that's haunted.

Like him, too, Beauty won me,
 But while her eyes were on me,
 If once their ray
 Was turn'd away,
 O ! winds could not outrun me.
 And are those follies going ?
 And is my proud heart growing
 Too cold or wise
 For brilliant eyes
 Again to set it glowing ?
 No, vain, alas ! th' endeavour
 From bonds so sweet to sever ;
 Poor Wisdom's chance
 Against a glance
 Is now as weak as ever.

WHERE IS THE SLAVE

Oh, where's the slave so lowly,
 Condemn'd to chains unholy,
 Who, could he burst
 His bonds at first,
 Would pine beneath them slowly ?
 What soul, whose wrongs degrade it,
 Would wait till time decay'd it,
 When thus its wing
 At once may spring
 To the throne of Him who made it ?
 Farewell, Erin,—farewell, all,
 Who live to weep our fall !

Less dear the laurel growing,
 Alive, untouch'd and blowing,
 Than that, whose braid
 Is pluck'd to shade
 The brows with victory glowing.
 We tread the land that bore us
 Her green flag glitters o'er us,
 The friends we've tried
 Are by our side,
 And the foe we hate before us.
 Farewell, Erin,—farewell, all,
 Who live to weep our fall !

COME, REST IN THIS BOSOM

COME, rest in this bosom, my own stricken deer,
 Though the herd have fled from thee, thy home is still here ;
 Here still is the smile, that no cloud can o'ercast,
 And a heart and a hand all thy own to the last.

¹ This alludes to a kind of Irish fairy, which is to be met with, they say, in the fields at dusk. As long as you keep your eyes upon him, he is fixed, and in your power ;—but the moment you look away (and he is ingenious in furnishing some inducement) he vanishes. I had thought that this was the sprite which we call the Leprechaun ; but a high authority upon such subjects, Lady Morgan, (in a note upon her national and interesting novel, O'Donnel,) has given a very different account of that goblin.

Oh ! what was love made for, if 'tis not the same
Through joy and through torment, through glory and shame ?
I know not, I ask not, if guilt's in that heart,
I but know that I love thee, whatever thou art.

Thou hast call'd me thy Angel in moments of bliss,
And thy Angel I'll be, 'mid the horrors of this,—
Through the furnace, unshrinking, thy steps to pursue,
And shield thee, and save thee,—or perish there too !

'TIS GONE, AND FOR EVER

'Tis gone, and for ever, the light we saw breaking,
Like Heaven's first dawn o'er the sleep of the dead—
When Man, from the slumber of ages awaking,
Look'd upward, and bless'd the pure ray, ere it fled.
'Tis gone, and the gleams it has left of its burning
But deepen the long night of bondage and mourning,
That dark o'er the kingdoms of earth is returning,
And darkest of all, hapless Erin, o'er thee.

For high was thy hope, when those glories were darting
Around thee, through all the gross clouds of the world ;
When Truth, from her fetters indignantly starting,
At once, like a Sun-burst, her banner unfurl'd.¹
Oh ! never shall earth see a moment so splendid !
Then, then—had one Hymn of Deliverance blended
The tongues of all nations—how sweet had ascended
The first note of Liberty, Erin, from thee !

But, shame on those tyrants, who envied the blessing !
And shame on the light race, unworthy its good,
Who, at Death's reeking altar, like furies, caressing
The young hope of Freedom, baptiz'd it in blood,
Then vanish'd for ever that fair, sunny vision.
Which, spite of the slavish, the cold heart's derision,
Shall long be remember'd, pure, bright, and elysian
As first it arose, my lost Erin, on thee.

I SAW FROM THE BEACH

I saw from the beach, when the morning was shining,
A bark o'er the waters move gloriously on ;
I came when the sun o'er that beach was declining,
The bark was still there, but the waters were gone.
And such is the fate of our life's early promise,
So passing the spring-tide of joy we have known ;
Each wave, that we danc'd on at morning, ebbs from us,
And leaves us, at eve, on the bleak shore alone.

Ne'er tell me of glories, serenely adorning
The close of our day, the calm eve of our night ;—
Give me back, give me back the wild freshness of Morning,
Her clouds and her tears are worth Evening's best light.

¹ 'The Sun-burst' was the fanciful name given by the ancient Irish to the Royal Banner.

Oh, who would not welcome that moment's returning,
 When passion first wak'd a new life through his frame,
 And his soul, like the wood, that grows precious in burning,
 Gave out all its sweets to love's exquisite flame.

FILL THE BUMPER FAIR

FILL the bumper fair !
 Every drop we sprinkle
 O'er the brow of Care
 Smooths away a wrinkle.
 Wit's electric flame
 Ne'er so swiftly passes,
 As when through the frame
 It shoots from brimming glasses.
 Fill the bumper fair !
 Every drop we sprinkle
 O'er the brow of Care
 Smooths away a wrinkle.

Sages can, they say,
 Grasp the lightning's pinions,
 And bring down its ray
 From the starr'd dominions :—
 So we, Sages, sit,
 And, 'mid bumpers bright'ning,
 From the Heaven of Wit
 Draw down all its lightning.

Wouldst thou know what first
 Made our souls inherit
 This ennobling thirst
 For wine's celestial spirit ?

It chanc'd upon that day,
 When, as bards inform us,
 Prometheus stole away
 The living fires that warm us :

The careless Youth, when up
 To Glory's fount aspiring,
 Took nor urn nor cup
 To hide the pilfer'd fire in.—
 But oh his joy, when, round
 The halls of Heaven spying,
 Among the stars he found
 A bowl of Bacchus lying !

Some drops were in that bowl,
 Remains of last night's pleasure,
 With which the Sparks of Soul
 Mix'd their burning treasure.
 Hence the goblet's shower
 Hath such spells to win us ;
 Hence its mighty power
 O'er that flame within us.
 Fill the bumper fair !
 Every drop we sprinkle
 O'er the brow of Care
 Smooths away a wrinkle.

DEAR HARP OF MY COUNTRY

DEAR Harp of my Country ! in darkness I found thee,
 The cold chain of silence had hung o'er thee long,¹
 When proudly, my own Island Harp, I unbound thee,
 And gave all thy chords to light, freedom, and song !
 The warm lay of love and the light note of gladness
 Have waken'd thy fondest, thy liveliest thrill ;
 But, so oft hast thou echo'd the deep sigh of sadness,
 That ev'n in thy mirth it will steal from thee still.

¹ In that rebellious but beautiful song, 'When Erin first rose,' there is, if I recollect right, the following line :—

'The dark chain of Silence was thrown o'er the deep.'

The chain of Silence was a sort of practical figure of rhetoric among the ancient Irish.

Walker tells us of 'a celebrated contention for precedence between Finn and Gaul, near Finn's palace at Almhann, where the attending Bards, anxious, if possible, to produce a cessation of hostilities, shook the chain of Silence, and flung themselves among the ranks.' See also the Ode to Gaul, the Son of Morni, in Miss Brooke's Reliques of Irish Poetry.

Dear Harp of my Country ! farewell to thy numbers,
 This sweet wreath of song is the last we shall twine !
 Go, sleep with the sunshine of Fame on thy slumbers,
 Till touch'd by some hand less unworthy than mine ;
 If the pulse of the patriot, soldier, or lover,
 Have throbb'd at our lay, 'tis thy glory alone ;
 I was but as the wind, passing heedlessly over,
 And all the wild sweetness I wak'd was thy own.

MY GENTLE HARP

My gentle Harp, once more I waken The sweetness of thy slumb'ring strain ; In tears our last farewell was taken, And now in tears we meet again. No light of joy hath o'er thee broken, But, like those Harps whose heav'nly skill Of slavery, dark as thine, hath spoken, Thou hang'st upon the willows still. And yet, since last thy chord resounded, An hour of peace and triumph came, And many an ardent bosom bounded With hopes—that now are turn'd to shame. Yet even then, while Peace was sing- ing Her halcyon song o'er land and sea, Though joy and hope to others bring- ing, She only brought new tears to thee.	Then, who can ask for notes of pleasure, My drooping Harp, from chords like thine ? Alas, the lark's gay morning measure As ill would suit the swan's decline ! Or how shall I, who love, who bless thee, Invoke thy breath for Freedom's strains. When ev'n the wreaths in which I dress thee, Are sadly mix'd—half flow'rs, half chains ? But come—if yet thy frame can borrow One breath of joy, oh, breathe for me, And show the world, in chains and sorrow, How sweet thy music still can be ; How gaily, ev'n mid gloom surrounding, Thou yet canst wake at pleasure's thrill— Like Memnon's broken image sounding, 'Mid desolation tuneful still !¹

IN THE MORNING OF LIFE

In the morning of life, when its cares are unknown,
 And its pleasures in all their new lustre begin,
 When we live in a bright-beaming world of our own,
 And the light that surrounds us is all from within ;
 Oh 'tis not, believe me, in that happy time
 We can love, as in hours of less transport we may ;—
 Of our smiles, of our hopes, 'tis the gay sunny prime,
 But affection is truest when these fade away.

When we see the first glory of youth pass us by,
 Like a leaf on the stream that will never return ;
 When our cup, which had sparkled with pleasure so high,
 First tastes of the other, the dark-flowing urn ;
 Then, then is the time when affection holds sway
 With a depth and a tenderness joy never knew ;
 Love, nurs'd among pleasures, is faithless as they,
 But the love born of Sorrow, like Sorrow, is true.

In climes full of sunshine, though splendid the flowers,
 Their sighs have no freshness, their odour no worth ;
 'Tis the cloud and the mist of our own Isle of showers,
 That call the rich spirit of fragrancy forth.
 So it is not mid splendour, prosperity, mirth,
 That the depth of Love's generous spirit appears ;
 To the sunshine of smiles it may first owe its birth,
 But the soul of its sweetness is drawn out by tears.

AS SLOW OUR SHIP

As slow our ship her foamy track
 Against the wind was cleaving,
 Her trembling pennant still look'd back
 To that dear Isle 'twas leaving.
 So loath we part from all we love,
 From all the links that bind us ;
 So turn our hearts as on we rove,
 To those we've left behind us.

When, round the bowl, of vanish'd years
 We talk, with joyous seeming,—
 With smiles that might as well be tears,
 So faint, so sad their beaming ;
 While mem'ry brings us back again
 Each early tie that twined us,
 Oh, sweet's the cup that circles then
 To those we've left behind us.

And when, in other climes, we meet
 Some isle, or vale enchanting,
 Where all looks flow'ry, wild, and sweet,
 And nought but love is wanting ;
 We think how great had been our bliss,
 If Heav'n had but assign'd us
 To live and die in scenes like this,
 With some we've left behind us !

As trav'lers oft look back at eve,
 When eastward darkly going,
 To gaze upon that light they leave
 Still faint behind them glowing,—
 So, when the close of pleasure's day
 To gloom hath near consign'd us,
 We turn to catch one fading ray
 Of joy that's left behind us.

WHEN COLD IN THE EARTH

WHEN cold in the earth lies the friend thou hast lov'd,
 Be his faults and his follies forgot by thee then ;
 Or, if from their slumber the veil be remov'd,
 Weep o'er them in silence, and close it again.
 And oh ! if 'tis pain to remember how far
 From the pathways of light he was tempted to roam,
 Be it bliss to remember that thou wert the star
 That arose on his darkness, and guided him home.

From thee and thy innocent beauty first came
 The revealings, that taught him true love to adore,
 To feel the bright presence, and turn him with shame
 From the idols he blindly had knelt to before.
 O'er the waves of a life, long benighted and wild,
 Thou camest, like a soft golden calm o'er the sea ;
 And if happiness purely and glowingly smil'd
 On his ev'ning horizon, the light was from thee.

And though, sometimes, the shades of past folly might rise,
 And though falsehood again would allure him to stray,
 He but turn'd to the glory that dwelt in those eyes,
 And the folly, the falsehood, soon vanish'd away.

As the Priests of the Sun, when their altar grew dim,
 At the day-beam alone could its lustre repair,
 So, if virtue a moment grew languid in him,
 He but flew to that smile, and rekindled it there.

REMEMBER THEE

REMEMBER thee ? yes, while there's life in this heart,
 It shall never forget thee, all lorn as thou art ;
 More dear in thy sorrow, thy gloom, and thy showers,
 Than the rest of the world in their sunniest hours.

Wert thou all that I wish thee, great, glorious, and free,
 First flower of the earth, and first gem of the sea,
 I might hail thee with prouder, with happier brow,
 But oh ! could I love thee more deeply than now ?

No, thy chains as they rankle, thy blood as it runs,
 But make thee more painfully dear to thy sons—
 Whose hearts, like the young of the desert-bird's nest,
 Drink love in each life-drop that flows from thy breast.

WREATH THE BOWL

WREATH the bowl
 With flowers of soul,
 The brightest Wit can find us ;
 We'll take a flight
 Tow'rs heaven to-night,
 And leave dull earth behind us.
 Should Love amid
 The wreaths be hid,
 That Joy, th' enchanter, brings us,
 No danger fear,
 While wine is near,
 We'll drown him if he stings us ;
 Then, wreath the bowl
 With flowers of soul,
 The brightest Wit can find us ;
 We'll take a flight
 Tow'rs heaven to-night,
 And leave dull earth behind us.

'Twas nectar fed
 Of old, 'tis said,
 Their Junos, Joves, Apollos ;
 And man may brew
 His nectar too,
 The rich receipt's as follows :
 Take wine like this,
 Let looks of bliss

Around it well be blended,
 Then bring Wit's beam
 To warm the stream,
 And there's your nectar, splendid !
 So wreath the bowl
 With flowers of soul,
 The brightest Wit can find us ;
 We'll take a flight
 Tow'rs heaven to-night,
 And leave dull earth behind us.

Say, why did Time,
 His glass sublime,
 Fill up with sands unsightly,
 When wine, he knew,
 Runs brisker through
 And sparkles far more brightly ?
 Oh, lend it us,
 And, smiling thus,
 The glass in two we'll sever,
 Make pleasure glide
 In double tide,
 And fill both ends for ever !
 Then wreath the bowl
 With flowers of soul,
 The brightest Wit can find us ;
 We'll take a flight
 Tow'rs heaven to-night,
 And leave dull earth behind us.

WHENE’ER I SEE THOSE SMILING EYES

WHENE’ER I see those smiling eyes,
So full of hope, and joy, and light,
As if no cloud could ever rise,
To dim a heav’n so purely bright—
I sigh to think how soon that brow
In grief may lose its every ray,
And that light heart, so joyous now,
Almost forget it once was gay.

For time will come with all its blights,
The ruin’d hope, the friend unkind,
And love, that leaves, where’er it lights,
A chill’d or burning heart behind :—
While youth, that now like snow appears,
Ere sullied by the dark’ning rain,
When once ’tis touch’d by sorrow’s tears
Can never shine so bright again.

IF THOU’LT BE MINE

If thou’lt be mine, the treasures of
air,
Of earth, and sea, shall lie at thy feet ;
Whatever in Fancy’s eye looks fair,
Or in Hope’s sweet music sounds
most sweet,
Shall be ours—if thou wilt be mine,
love !

Bright flowers shall bloom wherever we
rove,

A voice divine shall talk in each
stream ;
The stars shall look like worlds of love,
And this earth be all one beautiful
dream

In our eyes—if thou wilt be mine,
love !

And thoughts, whose source is hidden
and high,

Like streams, that come from heaven-
ward hills,
Shall keep our hearts, like meads, that lie

To be bathed by those eternal rills,
Ever green, if thou wilt be mine,
love !

All this and more the Spirit of Love
Can breathe o’er them, who feel his spells ;
That heaven, which forms his home
above,
He can make on earth, wherever he dwells,
As thou’lt own,—if thou wilt be mine, love !

TO LADIES’ EYES

To Ladies’ eyes a round, boy,
We can’t refuse, we can’t refuse,
Though bright eyes so abound, boy,
’Tis hard to choose, ’tis hard to choose.
For thick as stars that lighten
Yon airy bow’rs, yon airy bow’rs,
The countless eyes that brighten
This earth of ours, this earth of ours.
But fill the cup—where’er, boy,
Our choice may fall, our choice may
fall,
We’re sure to find Love there, boy,
So drink them all ! so drink them all !

Some looks there are so holy,
They seem but giv’n, they seem but
giv’n,
As shining beacons, solely,
To light to heav’n, to light to heav’n.
While some—oh ! ne’er believe them—
With tempting ray, with tempting ray,
Would lead us (God forgive them !)
The other way, the other way.
But fill the cup—where’er, boy,
Our choice may fall, our choice may
fall,

We’re sure to find Love there, boy,
So drink them all ! so drink them all !

In some, as in a mirror,
Love seems portray’d, Love seems portray’d,

But shun the flatt’ring error,
’Tis but his shade, ’tis but his shade.
Himself has fix’d his dwelling

In eyes we know, in eyes we know,
And lips—but this is telling—
So here they go ! so here they go !

Fill up, fill up—where’er, boy,
Our choice may fall, our choice may
fall,

We’re sure to find Love there, boy,
So drink them all ! so drink them all !

FORGET NOT THE FIELD

FORGET not the field where they perish'd,
The truest, the last of the brave,
All gone—and the bright hope we cherish'd
Gone with them, and quench'd in their grave!

Oh! could we from death but recover
Those hearts as they bounded before,
In the face of high heav'n to fight over
That combat for freedom once more;—

Could the chain for an instant be riven
Which Tyranny flung round us then,
No, 'tis not in Man, nor in Heaven,
To let Tyranny bind it again!

But 'tis past—and, tho' blazon'd in story
The name of our Victor may be,
Accurst is the march of that glory
Which treads o'er the hearts of the free.

Far dearer the grave or the prison,
Illumed by one patriot name,
Than the trophies of all, who have risen
On Liberty's ruins to fame.

THEY MAY RAIL AT THIS LIFE

THEY may rail at this life—from the hour I began it,
I found it a life full of kindness and bliss;
And, until they can show me some happier planet,
More social and bright, I'll content me with this.
As long as the world has such lips and such eyes,
As before me this moment enraptur'd I see,
They may say what they will of their orbs in the skies,
But this earth is the planet for you, love, and me.

In Mercury's star, where each moment can bring them
New sunshine and wit from the fountain on high,
Though the nymphs may have livelier poets to sing them,¹
They've none, even there, more enamour'd than I.
And, as long as this harp can be waken'd to love,
And that eye its divine inspiration shall be,
They may talk as they will of their Edens above,
But this earth is the planet for you, love, and me.

In that star of the west, by whose shadowy splendour,
At twilight so often we've roam'd through the dew,
There are maidens, perhaps, who have bosoms as tender,
And look, in their twilights, as lovely as you.²
But tho' they were even more bright than the queen
Of that isle they inhabit in heaven's blue sea,
As I never those fair young celestials have seen,
Why—this earth is the planet for you, love, and me.

As for those chilly orbs on the verge of creation,
Where sunshine and smiles must be equally rare,
Did they want a supply of cold hearts for that station,
Heav'n knows we have plenty on earth we could spare.
Oh! think what a world we should have of it here,
If the haters of peace, of affection, and glee,
Were to fly up to Saturn's comfortless sphere,
And leave earth to such spirits as you, love, and me.

OH FOR THE SWORDS OF FORMER
TIME !

Oh for the swords of former time !
 Oh for the men who bore them,
 When arm'd for Right, they stood sub-
 lime,
 And tyrants crouch'd before them :
 When free yet, ere courts began
 With honours to enslave him,
 The best honours worn by Man
 Were those which Virtue gave him.
 Oh for the swords, &c. &c.

Oh for the Kings who flourish'd then !
 Oh for the pomp that crown'd them,
 When hearts and hands of freeborn men
 Were all the ramparts round them.
 When, safe built on bosoms true,
 The throne was but the centre,
 Round which Love a circle drew,
 That Treason durst not enter.
 Oh for the Kings who flourish'd then !
 Oh for the pomp that crown'd them,
 When hearts and hands of freeborn men
 Were all the ramparts round them !

ST. SENANUS AND THE LADY

ST. SENANUS ¹

' Oh ! haste and leave this sacred isle,
 Unholy bark, ere morning smile ;
 For on thy deck, though dark it be,
 A female form I see ;
 And I have sworn this sainted sod
 Shall ne'er by woman's feet be trod.'

THE LADY

' Oh ! Father, send not hence my bark,
 Through wintry winds and billows dark :

¹ In a metrical life of St. Senanus, which is taken from an old Kilkenny MS., and may be found among the Acta Sanctorum Hiberniae, we are told of his flight to the island of Scatterry, and his resolution not to admit any woman of the party ; and that he refused to receive even a sister saint, St. Cannara, whom an angel had taken to the island for the express purpose of introducing her to him. The following was the ungracious answer of Senanus, according to his poetical biographer :

I come with humble heart to share
 Thy morn and evening prayer ;
 Nor mine the feet, oh ! holy Saint,
 The brightness of thy sod to taint.'

The Lady's prayer Senanus spurn'd ;
 The winds blew fresh, the bark return'd ;
 But legends hint, that had the maid
 Till morning's light delay'd,
 And giv'n the saint one rosy smile,
 She ne'er had left his lonely isle.

NE'ER ASK THE HOUR

NE'ER ask the hour—what is it to us
 How Time deals out his treasures ?
 The golden moments lent us thus,
 Are not his coin, but Pleasure's.
 If counting them o'er could add to their blisses,
 I'd number each glorious second :
 But moments of joy are, like Lesbia's
 kisses,
 Too quick and sweet to be reckon'd.
 Then fill the cup—what is it to us
 How Time his circle measures ?
 The fairy hours we call up thus,
 Obey no wand, but Pleasure's.

Young Joy ne'er thought of counting
 hours,
 Till Care, one summer's morning,
 Set up, among his smiling flowers,
 A dial, by way of warning.
 But Joy loved better to gaze on the sun,
 As long as its light was glowing,
 Than to watch with old Care how the shadow stole on,
 And how fast that light was going.
 So fill the cup—what is it to us
 How Time his circle measures ?
 The fairy hours we call up thus,
 Obey no wand, but Pleasure's.

Cui Praesul, quid foeminis
 Commune est cum monachis ?
 Nec te nec ullam aliam
 Admittemus in insulam.

See the Acta Sancti Hib., page 610.

According to Dr. Ledwich, St. Senanus was no less a personage than the river Shannon, but O'Connor and other antiquarians deny the metamorphose indignantly.

SAIL ON, SAIL ON,

SAIL on, sail on, thou fearless bark—
Wherever blows the welcome wind,
It cannot lead to scenes more dark,
More sad than those we leave behind.
Each wave that passes seems to say,
'Though death beneath our smile
may be,
Less cold we are, less false than they,
Whose smiling wreck'd thy hopes and
thee.'

Sail on, sailon,—through endless space—
Through calm—through tempest—
stop no more :
The stormiest sea's a resting place
To him who leaves such hearts on shore.
Or—if some desert land we meet,
Where never yet false-hearted men
Profan'd a world, that else were sweet,—
Then rest thee, bark, but not till then.

THE PARALLEL

YES, sad one of Sion,¹ if closely resembling,
In shame and in sorrow, thy wither'd-up heart—
If drinking deep, deep, of the same 'cup of trembling'
Could make us thy children, our parent thou art.

Like thee doth our nation lie conquer'd and broken,
And fall'n from her head is the once royal crown ;
In her streets, in her halls, Desolation hath spoken,
And 'while it is day yet, her sun hath gone down.'²

Like thine doth her exile, 'mid dreams of returning,
Die far from the home it were life to behold ;
Like thine do her sons, in the day of their mourning,
Remember the bright things that bless'd them of old.

Ah, well may we call her, like thee, 'the Forsaken,'³
Her boldest are vanquish'd, her proudest are slaves ;
And the harps of her minstrels, when gayest they waken,
Have tones 'mid their mirth like the wind over graves !

Yet hadst thou thy vengeance—yet came there the morrow,
That shines out, at last, on the longest dark night,
When the sceptre, that smote thee with slavery and sorrow,
Was shiver'd at once, like a reed, in thy sight.

When that cup, which for others the proud Golden City⁴
Had brimm'd full of bitterness, drench'd her own lips ;
And the world she had trampled on heard, without pity,
The howl in her halls, and the cry from her ships.

When the curse Heaven keeps for the haughty came over
Her merchants rapacious, her rulers unjust,
And, a ruin, at last, for the earthworm to cover,⁵
The Lady of Kingdoms⁶ lay low in the dust.

¹ These verses were written after the perusal of a treatise by Mr. Hamilton, professing to prove that the Irish were originally Jews.

² 'Her sun is gone down while it was yet day.'—Jer. xv. 9.

³ 'Thou shalt no more be termed Forsaken.'—Isa. lxii. 4.

⁴ How hath the oppressor ceased ! the golden city ceased !—Isa. xiv. 4.

⁵ 'Thy pomp is brought down to the grave . . . and the worms cover thee.'—Isa. xiv. 11.

⁶ 'Thou shalt no more be called the Lady of Kingdoms.'—Isa. xlvii. 5.

DRINK OF THIS CUP

DRINK of this cup; you'll find there's a spell in
 Its every drop 'gainst the ills of mortality;
 Talk of the cordial that sparkled for Helen!
 Her cup was a fiction, but this is reality.
 Would you forget the dark world we are in,
 Just taste of the bubble that gleams on the top of it;
 But would you rise above earth, till akin
 To Immortals themselves, you must drain every drop of it;
 Send round the cup—for oh, there's a spell in
 Its every drop 'gainst the ills of mortality;
 Talk of the cordial that sparkled for Helen!
 Her cup was a fiction, but this is reality.

Never was philter form'd with such power
 To charm and bewilder as this we are quaffing;
 Its magic began when, in Autumn's rich hour,
 A harvest of gold in the fields it stood laughing.
 There having, by Nature's enchantment, been fill'd
 With the balm and the bloom of her kindest weather,
 This wonderful juice from its core was distill'd
 To enliven such hearts as are here brought together.
 Then drink of the cup—you'll find there's a spell in
 Its every drop 'gainst the ills of mortality;
 Talk of the cordial that sparkled for Helen!
 Her cup was a fiction, but this is reality.

And though, perhaps—but breathe it to no one—
 Like liquor the witch brews at midnight so awful,
 This philter in secret was first taught to flow on,
 Yet 'tis n't less potent for being unlawful.
 And, ev'n though it taste of the smoke of that flame,
 Which in silence extracted its virtue forbidden—
 Fill up—there's a fire in some hearts I could name,
 Which may work too its charm, though as lawless and hidden.
 So drink of the cup—for oh there's a spell in
 Its every drop 'gainst the ills of mortality;
 Talk of the cordial that sparkled for Helen!
 Her cup was a fiction, but this is reality.

THE FORTUNE-TELLER

Dows in the valley come meet me to- night, And I'll tell you your fortune truly As ever was told, by the new-moon's light, To a young maiden, shining as newly. But, for the world, let no one be nigh, Lest haply the stars should deceive me; Such secrets between you and me and the sky Should never go farther, believe me.	If at that hour the heav'ns be not dim, My science shall call up before you A male apparition,—the image of him Whose destiny 'tis to adore you. And if to that phantom you'll be kind, So fondly around you he'll hover, You'll hardly, my dear, any difference find 'Twixt him and a true living lover.
---	--

Down at your feet, in the pale moonlight,
He'll kneel, with a warmth of devotion—

An ardour, of which such an innocent
sprite

You'd scarcely believe had a notion.

What other thoughts and events may arise,

As in destiny's book I've not seen
them,

Must only be left to the stars and your
eyes

To settle, ere morning, between them.

OH, YE DEAD !

Oh, ye Dead ! oh, ye Dead !¹ whom we know by the light you give

From your cold gleaming eyes, though you move like men who live,

Why leave you thus your graves,

In far off fields and waves,

Where the worm and the sea-bird only know your bed,

To haunt this spot where all

Those eyes that wept your fall,

And the hearts that wail'd you, like your own, lie dead ?

It is true, it is true, we are shadows cold
and wan ;

And the fair and the brave whom we lov'd on earth are gone ;

But still thus ev'n in death,

So sweet the living breath

Of the fields and the flow'rs in our youth
we wander'd o'er,

That ere, condemn'd, we go

To freeze 'mid Hecla's snow,

We would taste it awhile, and think we live once more !

¹ Paul Zealand mentions that there is a mountain in some part of Iceland, where the ghosts of persons who have died in foreign lands walk about and converse with those they meet, like living people. If asked why they do not return to their homes, they say they are obliged to go to Mount Hecla, and disappear immediately.

² The particulars of the tradition respecting O'Donohue and his White Horse, may be found in Mr. Weld's Account of Killarney, or more fully detailed in Derrick's Letters. For many years after his death, the spirit of this hero is supposed to have been seen on the morning of May-day, gliding over the lake on his favourite

O'DONOHUE'S MISTRESS

Of all the fair months, that round the sun
In light-link'd dance their circles run,

Sweet May, shine thou for me ;

For still, when thy earliest beams arise,
That youth, who beneath the blue lake

lies,

Sweet May, returns to me.

Of all the bright haunts, where daylight
leaves

Its lingering smile on golden eves,

Fair Lake, thou'rt dearest to me ;

For when the last April sun grows dim,

Thy Naiads prepare his steed² for him

Who dwells, bright Lake, in thee.

Of all the proud steeds, that ever bore

Young plumed Chiefs on sea or shore,

White Steed, most joy to thee ;

Who still, with the first young glance of spring,

From under that glorious lake dost bring

My love, my chief, to me.

While, white as the sail some bark unfurls,

When newly launch'd, thy long mane^{*}
curls,

Fair Steed, as white and free ;

And spirits, from all the lake's deep
bowers,

Glide o'er the blue waves scattering flowers,
Around my love and thee.

Of all the sweet deaths that maidens die,

Whose lovers beneath the cold wave lie,

Most sweet that death will be,

Which, under the next May evening's
light,

When thou and thy steed are lost to sight,

Dear love, I'll die for thee.

white horse, to the sound of sweet unearthly music, and preceded by groups of youths and maidens, who flung wreaths of delicate spring flowers in his path.

Among other stories, connected with this Legend of the Lakes, it is said that there was a young and beautiful girl whose imagination was so impressed with the idea of this visionary chieftain, that she fancied herself in love with him, and at last, in a fit of insanity, on a May-morning threw herself into the lake.

² The boatmen at Killarney call those waves which come on a windy day, crested with foam, 'O'Donohue's white horses.'

ECHO

How sweet the answer Echo makes
To music at night,
When, rous'd by lute or horn, she wakes,
And far away, o'er lawns and lakes,
Goes answering light.

Yet Love hath echoes truer far,
And far more sweet,
Than e'er beneath the moonlight's star,
(Of horn, or lute, or soft guitar,
The songs repeat.

'Tis when the sigh, in youth sincere,
And only then,—
The sigh that's breath'd for one to hear,
Is by that one, that only dear,
Breath'd back again!

OH BANQUET NOT

Oh banquet not in those shining bowers,
Where Youth resorts, but come to
me:

For mine's a garden of faded flowers,
More fit for sorrow, for age, and thee.
And there we shall have our feast of
tears,

And many a cup in silence pour;
Our guests, the shades of former years,
Our toasts, to lips that bloom no more.

There, while the myrtle's withering boughs
Their lifeless leaves around us shed,
We'll brim the bowl to broken vows,
To friends long lost, the changed, the dead.

Or, while some blighted laurel waves
Its branches o'er the dreary spot,
We'll drink to those neglected graves,
Where valour sleeps, unnam'd, forgot.

THEE, THEE, ONLY THEE

THE dawning of morn, the daylight's sinking,
The night's long hours still find me thinking

Of thee, thee, only thee.
When friends are met, and goblets
crown'd,

And smiles are near, that once enchanted,

Unreach'd by all that sunshine round,
Mysoul, like some dark spot, is haunted
By thee, thee, only thee.

Whatever in fame's high path could waken
My spirit once, is now forsaken

For thee, thee, only thee.
Like shores, by which some headlong bark
To th' ocean hurries, resting never,
Life's scenes go by me, bright or dark,
I know not, heed not, hastening ever
To thee, thee, only thee.

I have not a joy but of thy bringing,
And pain itself seems sweet when springing

From thee, thee, only thee.
Like spells, that nought on earth can
break,

Till lips, that know the charm, have spoken,

This heart, howe'er the world may wake
Its grief, its scorn, can but be broken
By thee, thee, only thee.

SHALL THE HARP, THEN, BE SILENT

SHALL the Harp, then, be silent, when he who first gave
To our country a name, is withdrawn from all eyes?
Shall a Minstrel of Erin stand mute by the grave,
Where the first—where the last of her Patriots lies?

No—faint tho' the death-song may fall from his lips,
Tho' his Harp, like his soul, may with shadows be crost,
Yet, yet shall it sound, 'mid a nation's eclipse,
And proclaim to the world what a star hath been lost;—¹

¹ These lines were written on the death of [is only the two first verses that are either in-our great patriot, Grattan, in the year 1820. It tended or fitted to be sung.

What a union of all the affections and powers
By which life is exalted, embellish'd, refin'd,
Was embraced in that spirit—whose centre was ours,
While its mighty circumference circled mankind.

Oh, who that loves Erin, or who that can see,
Through the waste of her annals, that epoch sublime—
Like a pyramid rais'd in the desert—where he
And his glory stand out to the eyes of all time ;

That one lucid interval, snatch'd from the gloom
And the madness of ages, when fill'd with his soul,
A Nation o'erleap'd the dark bounds of her doom,
And for one sacred instant, touch'd Liberty's goal ?

Who, that ever hath heard him—hath drank at the source
Of that wonderful eloquence, all Erin's own,
In whose high-thoughted daring, the fire, and the force,
And the yet untam'd spring of her spirit are shown ?

An eloquence rich, wheresoever its wave
Wander'd free and triumphant, with thoughts that shone through,
As clear as the brook's 'stone of lustre,' and gave,
With the flash of the gem, its solidity too.

Who, that ever approach'd him, when free from the crowd,
In a home full of love, he delighted to tread
'Mong the trees which a nation had giv'n, and which bow'd,
As if each brought a new civic crown for his head—

Is there one, who hath thus, through his orbit of life
But at distance observ'd him—through glory, through blame,
In the calm of retreat, in the grandeur of strife,
Whether shining or clouded, still high and the same,—

Oh no, not a heart, that e'er knew him, but mourns
Deep, deep o'er the grave, where such glory is shrin'd—
O'er a monument Fame will preserve, 'mong the urns
Of the wisest, the bravest, the best of mankind !

OH, THE SIGHT ENTRANCING

Oh, the sight entrancing,
When morning's beam is glancing
O'er files array'd
With helm and blade,
And plumes, in the gay wind dancing !
When hearts are all high beating,
And the trumpet's voice repeating
That song, whose breath
May lead to death,
But never to retreating.
Oh the sight entrancing,
When morning's beam is glancing
O'er files array'd,
With helm and blade,
And plumes, in the gay wind dancing.

Yet, 'tis not helm or feather—
For ask yon despot, whether
His plumed bands
Could bring such hands
And hearts as ours together.
Leave pomps to those who need 'em—
Give man but heart and freedom,
And proud he braves
The gaudiest slaves
That crawl where monarchs lead 'em.
The sword may pierce the beaver,
Stone walls in time may sever,
'Tis mind alone,
Worth steel and stone,
That keeps men free for ever.

Oh that sight entrancing,
When the morning's beam is glancing,
O'er files array'd
With helm and blade,
And in Freedom's cause advancing !

SWEET INNISFALLEN

SWEET Innisfallen, fare thee well,
May calm and sunshine long be thine !
How fair thou art let others tell,—
To feel how fair shall long be mine.

Sweet Innisfallen, long shall dwell
In memory's dream that sunny smile,
Which o'er thee on that evening fell,
When first I saw thy fairy isle.

'Twas light, indeed, too blest for one,
Who had to turn to paths of care—
Through crowded haunts again to run,
And leave thee bright and silent there ;

No more unto thy shores to come,
But, on the world's rude ocean tost,
Dream of thee sometimes, as a home
Of sunshine he had seen and lost.

Far better in thy weeping hours
To part from thee, as I do now,
When mist is o'er thy blooming bowers,
Like sorrow's veil on beauty's brow.

For, though unrivall'd still thy grace,
Thou dost not look, as then, too blest,
But thus in shadow, seem'st a place
Where erring man might hope to rest—

Might hope to rest, and find in thee
A gloom like Eden's, on the day
He left its shade, when every tree,
Like thine, hung weeping o'er his way.

Weeping or smiling, lovely isle !
And all the lovelier for thy tears—
For though but rare thy sunny smile,
'Tis heav'n's own glance when it appears.

Like feeling hearts, whose joys are few,
But, when indeed they come, divine—
The brightest light the sun e'er threw
Is lifeless to one gleam of thine !

'T WAS ONE OF THOSE DREAMS¹

'Twas one of those dreams, that by music are brought,
Like a bright summer haze, o'er the poet's warm thought—
When, lost in the future, his soul wanders on,
And all of this life, but its sweetness, is gone,

The wild notes he heard o'er the water were those
He had taught to sing Erin's dark bondage and woes,
And the breath of the bugle now wafted them o'er
From Dinis' green isle, to Glenà's wooded shore.

He listen'd—while, high o'er the eagle's rude nest,
The lingering sounds on their way lov'd to rest ;
And the echoes sung back from their full mountain quire,
As if loth to let song so enchanting expire.

It seem'd as if ev'ry sweet note, that died here,
Was again brought to life in some airier sphere,
Some heav'n in those hills, where the soul of the strain
That had ceas'd upon earth was awaking again !

Oh forgive, if, while list'ning to music, whose breath
Seem'd to circle his name with a charm against death,
He should feel a proud Spirit within him proclaim,
' Even so shalt thou live in the echoes of Fame :

Even so, tho' thy mem'ry should now die away,
'Twill be caught up again in some happier day,
And the hearts and the voices of Erin prolong,
Through the answering Future, thy name and thy song.'

FAIREST ! PUT ON AWHILE

FAIREST ! put on awhile
These pinions of light I bring thee,
And o'er thy own Green Isle
In fancy let me wing thee.
Never did Ariel's plume,
At golden sunset hover
O'er scenes so full of bloom,
As I shall waft thee over.

Fields, where the Spring delays,
And fearlessly meets the ardour
Of the warm Summer's gaze,
With only her tears to guard her.
Rocks, through myrtle boughs
In grace majestic frowning ;
Like some bold warrior's brows
That Love hath just been crowning.

Islets, so freshly fair,
That never hath bird come nigh them,
But from his course through air
He hath been won down by them ;—¹

Types, sweet maid, of thee,
Whose look, whose blush inviting,
Never did Love yet see
From Heav'n, without alighting.

Lakes, where the pearl lies hid,²
And caves, where the gem is sleeping,
Bright as the tears thy lid
Lets fall in lonely weeping.
Glens,³ where Ocean comes,
To 'scape the wild wind's rancour,
And Harbours, worthiest homes
Where Freedom's fleet can anchor.

Then, if, while scenes so grand,
So beautiful, shine before thee,
Pride for thy own dear land
Should haply be stealing o'er thee,
Oh, let grief come first,
O'er pride itself victorious—
Thinking how man hath curst
What Heaven had made so glorious !

QUICK ! WE HAVE BUT A SECOND

QUICK ! we have but a second,
Fill round the cup, while you may ;
For Time, the churl, hath beckon'd,
And we must away, away !
Grasp the pleasure that's flying,
For oh, not Orpheus' strain
Could keep sweet hours from dying,
Or charm them to life again.
Then, quick ! we have but a second,
Fill round the cup, while you
may ;
For Time, the churl, hath beckon'd,
And we must away, away !

See the glass, how it flushes,
Like some young Hebe's lip,
And half meets thine, and blushes
That thou shouldst delay to sip.
Shame, oh shame unto thee,
If ever thou see'st that day,
When a cup or lip shall woo thee,
And turn untouch'd away !
Then, quick ! we have but a second,
Fill round, fill round, while you
may ;
For Time, the churl, hath beckon'd,
And we must away, away !

¹ In describing the Skeligs (islands of the Barony of Forth), Dr. Keating says, 'There is a certain attractive virtue in the soil which draws down all the birds that attempt to fly over it, and obliges them to light upon the rock.'

² 'Nennius, a British writer of the ninth century, mentions the abundance of pearls in Ireland. Their princes, he says, hung them behind their ears : and this we find confirmed by a present made A. D. 1094, by Gilbert, Bishop of Limerick, to Anselm, Archbishop of Canterbury, of a considerable quantity of Irish pearls.'—O'Halloran.

AND DOTH NOT A MEETING LIKE THIS

AND doth not a meeting like this make amends,
 For all the long years I've been wand'ring away—
 To see thus around me my youth's early friends,
 As smiling and kind as in that happy day ?
 Though haply o'er some of your brows, as o'er mine,
 The snow-fall of time may be stealing—what then ?
 Like Alps in the sunset, thus lighted by wine,
 We'll wear the gay tinge of youth's roses again.

What soften'd remembrances come o'er the heart,
 In gazing on those we've been lost to so long !
 The sorrows, the joys, of which once they were part,
 Still round them, like visions of yesterday, throng,
 As letters some hand hath invisibly trac'd,
 When held to the flame will steal out on the sight,
 So many a feeling, that long seem'd effac'd,
 The warmth of a moment like this brings to light.

And thus, as in memory's bark we shall glide,
 To visit the scenes of our boyhood anew,
 Though oft we may see, looking down on the tide,
 The wreck of full many a hope shining through ;
 Yet still, as in fancy we point to the flowers,
 That once made a garden of all the gay shore,
 Deceiv'd for a moment, we'll think them still ours,
 And breathe the fresh air of life's morning once more.¹

So brief our existence, a glimpse, at the most,
 Is all we can have of the few we hold dear ;
 And oft even joy is unheeded and lost,
 For want of some heart, that could echo it, near.
 Ah, well may we hope, when this short life is gone,
 To meet in some world of more permanent bliss,
 For a smile, or a grasp of the hand, hast'ning on,
 Is all we enjoy of each other in this.

But, come, the more rare such delights to the heart,
 The more we should welcome and bless them the more ;
 They're ours, when we meet,—they are lost when we part,
 Like birds that bring summer, and fly when 'tis o'er.
 Thus circling the cup, hand in hand, ere we drink,
 Let Sympathy pledge us, thro' pleasure, thro' pain,
 That, fast as a feeling but touches one link,
 Her magic shall send it direct thro' the chain.

THE MOUNTAIN SPRITE

In yonder valley there dwelt, alone,
 A youth, whose moments had calmly flown,
 Till spells came o'er him, and, day and night,
 He was haunted and watch'd by a Mountain Sprite.

¹ Jours charmans, quand je songe à vos heureux instans,
 Je pense remonter le fleuve de mes ans ;

Et mon cœur, enchanté sur sa rive fleurie
 Respire encore l'air pur du matin de la vie.

As once, by moonlight, he wander'd o'er
The golden sands of that island shore,
A foot-print sparkled before his sight—
'Twas the fairy foot of the Mountain Sprite !

Beside a fountain, one sunny day,
As bending over the stream he lay,
There peep'd down o'er him two eyes of light,
And he saw in that mirror the Mountain Sprite.

He turn'd, but, lo, like a startled bird,
That spirit fled !—and the youth but heard
Sweet music, such as marks the flight
Of some bird of song, from the Mountain Sprite.

One night, still haunted by that bright look,
The boy, bewilder'd, his pencil took,
And, guided only by memory's light,
Drew the once-seen form of the Mountain Sprite.

'Oh thou, who lovest the shadow,' cried
A voice, low whispering by his side,
'Now turn and see,'—here the youth's delight
Seal'd the rosy lips of the Mountain Sprite.

'Of all the Spirits of land and sea,'
Then rapt he murmured, 'there's none like thee,
And oft, oh oft, may thy foot thus light
In this lonely bower, sweet Mountain Sprite !'

AS VANQUISH'D ERIN

As vanquish'd Erin wept beside
The Boyne's ill-fated river,
She saw where Discord, in the tide,
Had dropp'd his loaded quiver.
'Lie hid,' she cried, 'ye venom'd darts,
Where mortal eye may shun you ;
Lie hid—the stain of manly hearts,
That bled for me, is on you.'

But vain her wish, her weeping vain,—
As Time too well hath taught her—
Each year the Fiend returns again,
And dives into that water ;
And brings, triumphant, from beneath
His shafts of desolation,
And sends them, wing'd with worse than
death,
Through all her madd'ning nation.

¹ 'Thomas, the heir of the Desmond family, had accidentally been so engaged in the chase, that he was benighted near Tralee, and obliged to take shelter at the Abbey of Feal, in the house of one of his dependents, called MacCormac. Catherine, a beautiful daughter of his host, instantly inspired the Earl with a violent

Alas for her who sits and mourns,
Ev'n now, beside that river—
Unwearied still the Fiend returns,
And stor'd is still his quiver.
'When will this end, ye Powers of Good ?'
She weeping asks for ever ;
But only hears, from out that flood,
The Demon answer, 'Never !'

DESMOND'S SONG ¹

By the Feal's wave benighted,
No star in the skies,
To thy door by Love lighted,
I first saw those eyes.
Some voice whisper'd o'er me,
As the threshold I crost,
There was ruin before me,
If I lov'd, I was lost.

passion, which he could not subdue. He married her, and by this inferior alliance alienated his followers, whose brutal pride regarded this indulgence of his love as an unpardonable degradation of his family.'—Leland, vol. ii.

Love came, and brought sorrow
 Too soon in his train ;
 Yet so sweet, that to-morrow
 'Twere welcome again.
 Though misery's full measure
 My portion should be,
 I would drain it with pleasure,
 If pour'd out by thee.
 You, who call it dishonour
 To bow to this flame,
 If you've eyes, look but on her,
 And blush while you blame.

Hath the pearl less whiteness
 Because of its birth ?
 Hath the violet less brightness
 For growing near earth ?
 No—Man for his glory
 To ancestry flies ;
 But Woman's bright story
 Is told in her eyes.
 While the Monarch but traces
 Through mortals his line,
 Beauty, born of the Graces,
 Ranks next to Divine !

THEY KNOW NOT MY HEART

THEY know not my heart, who believe there can be
 One stain of this earth in its feelings for thee ;
 Who think, while I see thee in beauty's young hour,
 As pure as the morning's first dew on the flow'r,
 I could harm what I love,—as the sun's wanton ray
 But smiles on the dew-drop to waste it away.

No—beaming with light as those young features are,
 There's a light round thy heart which is lovelier far :
 It is not that cheek—'tis the soul dawning clear
 Thro' its innocent blush makes thy beauty so dear ;
 As the sky we look up to, though glorious and fair,
 Is look'd up to the more, because Heaven lies there !

I WISH I WAS BY THAT DIM LAKE

I WISH I was by that dim Lake,¹
 Where sinful souls their farewell take
 Of this vain world, and half-way lie
 In death's cold shadow, ere they die.
 There, there, far from thee,
 Deceitful world, my home should be ;
 Where, come what might of gloom and
 pain,
 False hope should ne'er deceive again.
 The lifeless sky, the mournful sound
 Of unseen waters falling round ;
 The dry leaves, quiv'ring o'er my head,
 Like man, unquiet ev'n when dead !

These, ay, these shall wean,
 My soul from life's deluding scene,
 And turn each thought, o'ercharg'd
 with gloom,
 Like willows, downward tow'rd's the tomb.

As they, who to their couch at night
 Would win repose, first quench the light,
 So must the hopes, that keep this breast
 Awake, be quench'd, ere it can rest.
 Cold, cold, this heart must grow,
 Unmov'd by either joy or woe,
 Like freezing founts, where all that's thrown
 Within their current turns to stone.

¹ These verses are meant to allude to that ancient haunt of superstition, called Patrick's Purgatory. 'In the midst of these gloomy regions of Donegal (says Dr. Campbell) lay a lake, which was to become the mystic theatre of this fabled and intermediate state. In the lake were several islands ; but one of them was dignified with that called the Mouth of Purgatory, which, during the dark ages, attracted the notice of all Christendom, and was the resort of penitents and pilgrims from almost every country in Europe.'

'It was,' as the same writer tells us, 'one of the most dismal and dreary spots in the North, almost inaccessible, through deep glens and rugged mountains, frightful with impending rocks, and the hollow murmurs of the western winds in dark caverns, peopled only with such fantastic beings as the mind, however gay, is, from strange association, wont to appropriate to such gloomy scenes.'—Strictures on the Ecclesiastical and Literary History of Ireland,

SHE SUNG OF LOVE

SHE sung of Love, while o'er her lyre
 The rosy rays of evening fell,
 As if to feed, with their soft fire,
 The soul within that trembling shell.
 The same rich light hung o'er her cheek,
 And play'd around those lips that sung
 And spoke, as flowers would sing and speak,
 If Love could lend their leaves a tongue.

But soon the West no longer burn'd,
 Each rosy ray from heav'n withdrew ;
 And, when to gaze again I turn'd,
 The minstrel's form seem'd fading too.

As if her light and heav'n's were one,
 The glory all had left that frame ;
 And from her glimmering lips the tone,
 As from a parting spirit, came.¹

Who ever lov'd, but had the thought
 That he and all he lov'd must part ?
 Fill'd with this fear, I flew and caught
 The fading image to my heart—
 And cried, 'Oh Love ! is this thy doom ?
 Oh light of youth's resplendent day !
 Must ye then lose your golden bloom,
 And thus, like sunshine, die away ?'

SING—SING—MUSIC WAS GIVEN

SING—sing—Music was given,
 To brighten the gay, and kindle the loving ;
 Souls here, like planets in Heaven,
 By harmony's laws alone are kept moving.
 Beauty may boast of her eyes and her cheeks,
 But Love from the lips his true archery wings ;
 And she, who but feathers the dart when she speaks,
 At once sends it home to the heart when she sings.
 Then sing—sing—Music was given,
 To brighten the gay, and kindle the loving ;
 Souls here, like planets in Heaven,
 By harmony's laws alone are kept moving.

When Love, rock'd by his mother,
 Lay sleeping as calm as slumber could make him,
 'Hush, hush,' said Venus, 'no other
 Sweet voice but his own is worthy to wake him.'
 Dreaming of music he slumber'd the while
 Till faint from his lip a soft melody broke,
 And Venus, enchanted, look'd on with a smile,
 While Love to his own sweet singing awoke.
 Then sing—sing—Music was given,
 To brighten the gay, and kindle the loving ;
 Souls here, like planets in Heaven,
 By harmony's laws alone are kept moving.

¹ The thought here was suggested by some beautiful lines in Mr. Rogers's Poem of Human Life, beginning—

'Now in the glimmering, dying light she grows
 Less and less earthly.'

I would quote the entire passage, did I not fear to put my own humble imitation of it out of countenance.

THOUGH HUMBLE THE BANQUET

THOUGH humble the banquet to which I invite thee,
 Thou'lt find there the best a poor bard can command :
 Eyes, beaming with welcome, shall throng round, to light thee,
 And Love serve the feast with his own willing hand.

And though Fortune may seem to have turn'd from the dwelling
 Of him thou regardest her favouring ray,
 Thou wilt find there a gift, all her treasures excelling,
 Which, proudly he feels, hath ennobled his way.

'Tis that freedom of mind, which no vulgar dominion
 Can turn from the path a pure conscience approves ;
 Which, with hope in the heart, and no chain on the pinion,
 Holds upwards its course to the light which it loves.

'Tis this makes the pride of his humble retreat,
 And, with this, though of all other treasures bereav'd,
 The breeze of his garden to him is more sweet
 Than the costliest incense that Pomp e'er receiv'd.

Then, come,—if a board so untempting hath power
 To win thee from grandeur, its best shall be thine ;
 And there's one, long the light of the bard's happy bower,
 Who, smiling, will blend her bright welcome with mine.

SING, SWEET HARP

SING, sweet Harp. oh sing to me
 Some song of ancient days,
 Whose sounds, in this sad memory,
 Long buried dreams shall raise ;—
 Some lay that tells of vanish'd fame,
 Whose light once round us shone ;
 Of noble pride, now turn'd to shame,
 And hopes for ever gone.—
 Sing, sad Harp, thus sing to me ;
 Alike our doom is cast,
 Both lost to all but memory,
 We live but in the past.

How mournfully the midnight air
 Among thy chords doth sigh,
 As if it sought some echo there
 Of voices long gone by ;—
 Of Chieftains, now forgot, who seem'd
 The foremost then in fame ;
 Of Bards who, once immortal deem'd,
 Now sleep without a name.—
 In vain, sad Harp, the midnight air
 Among thy chords doth sigh ;
 In vain it seeks an echo there
 Of voices long gone by.

Couldst thou but call those spirits round,
 Who once, in bower and hall,
 Sat listening to thy magic sound,
 Now mute and mould'ring all ;—
 But, no ; they would but wake to weep
 Their children's slavery ;
 Then leave them in their dreamless
 sleep.
 The dead, at least, are free !—
 Hush, hush, sad Harp, that dreary tone,
 That knell of Freedom's day ;
 Or, listening to its death-like moan,
 Let me, too, die away.

SONG OF THE BATTLE EVE

TIME—THE NINTH CENTURY

TO-MORROW, comrade, we
 On the battle-plain must be,
 There to conquer, or both lie low !
 The morning star is up,—
 But there's wine still in the cup,
 And we'll take another quaff, ere we go, boy, go ;
 We'll take another quaff, ere we go.

'Tis true, in manliest eyes
A passing tear will rise,
When we think of the friends we leave
alone ;

But what can wailing do ?
See, our goblet's weeping too !
With its tears we'll chase away our
own, boy, our own ;
With its tears we'll chase away our
own.

But daylight's stealing on ;—
The last that o'er us shone
Saw our children around us play ;
The next—ah ! where shall we
And those rosy urchins be ?
But—no matter—grasp thy sword
and away, boy, away ;
No matter—grasp thy sword and away !

Let those, who brook the chain
Of Saxon or of Dane,
Ignobly by their firesides stay ; •
One sigh to home be given,
One heartfelt prayer to heaven,
Then, for Erin and her cause, boy,
hurra ! hurra ! hurra !
Then, for Erin and her cause, hurra !

THE WANDERING BARD

WHAT life like that of the bard can be,—
The wandering bard, who roams as free
As the mountain lark that o'er him sings,
And, like that lark, a music brings
Within him, where'er he comes or goes,
A fount that for ever flows !
The world's to him like some play-ground,
Where fairies dance their moonlight
round ;—
If dimm'd the turf where late they trod,
The elves but seek some greener sod ;
So, when less bright his scene of glee,
To another away flies he !

Oh, what would have been young
Beauty's doom,
Without a bard to fix her bloom ?
They tell us, in the moon's bright round,
Things lost in this dark world are found ;
So charms, on earth long pass'd and gone,
In the poet's lay live on.—
Would ye have smiles that ne'er grow
dim ?
You've only to give them all to him,

Who, with but a touch of Fancy's wand,
Can lend them life, this life beyond,
And fix them high, in Poesy's sky,—
Young stars that never die !

Then, welcome the bard where'er he comes,—
For, though he hath countless airy homes,
To which his wing excursive roves,
Yet still, from time to time, he loves
To light upon earth and find such cheer
As brightens our banquet here.
No matter how far, how fleet he flies,
You've only to light up kind young eyes,
Such signal-fires as here are given,—
And down he'll drop from Fancy's
heaven,
The minute such call to love or mirth
Proclaims he's wanting on earth !

ALONE IN CROWDS TO WANDER ON

ALONE in crowds to wander on,
And feel that all the charm is gone
Which voices dear and eyes below'd
Shed round us once, where'er we rovd—
This, this the doom must be
Of all who've lov'd, and liv'd to see
The few bright things they thought would stay
For ever near them, die away.

Tho' fairer forms around us throng,
Their smiles to others all belong,
And want that charm which dwells alone
Round those the fond heart calls its own.
Where, where the sunny brow ?
The long-known voice—where are they
now ?
Thus ask I still, nor ask in vain,
The silence answers all too plain.

Oh, what is Fancy's magic worth,
If all her art cannot call forth
One bliss like those we felt of old
From lips now mute, and eyes now cold ?
No, no,—her spell is vain,—
As soon could she bring back again
Those eyes themselves from out the
grave,
As wake again one bliss they gave.

I'VE A SECRET TO TELL THEE

I'VE a secret to tell thee, but hush ! not here,—

Oh ! not where the world its vigil keeps :
I'll seek, to whisper it in thine ear,
Some shore where the Spirit of Silence
sleeps ;

Wheresummer's wave unmurm'ring dies,
Nor fay can hear the fountain's gush ;

Where, if but a note her night-bird sighs,
The rose saith, chidingly, 'Hush,
sweet, hush !'

There, amid the deep silence of that
hour,

When stars can be heard in ocean dip,
Thyself shall, under some rosy bower,
Sit mute, with thy finger on thy lip :
Like him, the boy,¹ who born among
The flowers that on the Nile-stream
blush,

Sits ever thus,—his only song
To earth and heaven, 'Hush, all, hush !'

SONG OF INNISFAIL

THEY came from a land beyond the sea,
And now o'er the western main
Set sail, in their good ships, gallantly,
From the sunny land of Spain.

'Oh, where's the Isle we've seen in
dreams,

Our destin'd home or grave ?'²
Thus sung they as, by the morning's
beams,
They swept the Atlantic wave.

And, lo, where afar o'er ocean shines
A sparkle of radiant green,
As though in that deep lay emerald
mines,
Whose light through the wave was seen.

'Tis Innisfail³—'tis Innisfail !'
Rings o'er the echoing sea ;
While, bending to heav'n, the warriors
hail
That home of the brave and free.

Then turn'd they unto the Eastern
wave,
Where now their Day-God's eye
A look of such sunny omen gave
As lighted up sea and sky.
Nor frown was seen through sky or sea,
Nor tear o'er leaf or sod,
When first on their Isle of Destiny
Our great forefathers trod.

THE NIGHT DANCE

STRIKE the gay harp ! see the moon is on high,
And, as true to her beam as the tides of the ocean,
Young hearts, when they feel the soft light of her eye,
Obey the mute call, and heave into motion.
Then, sound notes—the gayest, the lightest,
That ever took wing, when heav'n look'd brightest !
Again ! Again !

Oh ! could such heart-stirring music be heard
In that City of Statues described by romancers,
So wak'ning its spell, even stone would be stirr'd,
And statues themselves all start into dancers !

And the flower of Beauty's own garden before us,—
While stars overhead leave the song of their spheres,

LAY HIS SWORD BY HIS SIDE

LAY his sword by his side,¹ it hath serv'd him too well

Not to rest near his pillow below;
To the last moment true, from his hand ere it fell,
Its point was still turn'd to a flying foe.
Fellow-lab'ers in life, let them slumber in death,
Side by side, as becomes the reposing brave,—
That sword which he loved still unbroke in its sheath,
And himself unsubdued in his grave.

Yet pause—for, in fancy, a still voice I hear,
As if breath'd from his brave heart's remains;—
Faint echo of that which, in Slavery's ear,
Once sounded the war-word, 'Burst your chains!'
And it cries, from the grave where the hero lies deep,
'Tho' the day of your Chieftain for ever hath set,
O leave not his sword thus inglorious to sleep,—
It hath victory's life in it yet!

'Should some alien, unworthy such weapon to wield,
Dare to touch thee, my own gallant sword,
Then rest in thy sheath, like a talisman seal'd,
Or return to the grave of thy chainless lord.
But, if grasp'd by a hand that hath learn'd the proud use
Of a falchion, like thee, on the battle-plain,—
Then, at Liberty's summons, like lightning let loose,
Leap forth from thy dark sheath again!

OH, COULD WE DO WITH THIS WORLD OF OURS

OH, could we do with this world of ours
As thou dost with thy garden bowers,
Reject the weeds and keep the flowers,
What a heaven on earth we'd make it!
So bright a dwelling should be our own,
So warranted free from sigh or frown,
That angels soon would be coming down,
By the week or month to take it.

Like those gay flies that wing through air,
And in themselves a lustre bear,
A stock of light, still ready there,
Whenever they wish to use it;
So, in this world I'd make for thee,
Our hearts should all like fire-flies be,
And the flash of wit or poesy
Break forth whenever we choose it.

¹ It was the custom of the ancient Irish, in the manner of the Scythians, to bury the favourite swords of their heroes along with them.

While ev'ry joy that glads our sphere
Hath still some shadow hov'ring near,
In this new world of ours, my dear,
Such shadows will all be omitted:—
Unless they're like that graceful one,
Which, when thou'rt dancing in the sun,
Still near thee, leaves a charm upon
Each spot where it hath flitted!

THE WINE-CUP IS CIRCLING

THE wine-cup is circling in Almhín's hall;²
And its Chief, 'mid his heroes reclin-
ing,
Looks up, with a sigh, to the trophied
wall,
Where his sword hangs idly shining.

thence the name of the Hill of Allen, in the county of Kildare. The Finians, or Fentil, were the celebrated National Militia of Ireland, which this Chief commanded. The introduction of the Danes in the above song is an anachronism common to most of the Finian and Ossianic legends.

When, hark ! that shout
From the vale without,— ‘ Arm ye quick, the Dane, the Dane is nigh !’
Ev’ry Chief starts up
From his foaming cup,
And ‘ To battle, to battle !’ is the Finian’s cry.

The minstrels have seized their harps of
gold,
And they sing such thrilling numbers,—
’Tis like the voice of the Brave, of old, Breaking forth from their place of slumbers !
Spear to buckler rang,
As the minstrels sang,
And the Sun-burst ¹ o’er them floated
wide ;

While rememb’ring the yoke
Which their fathers broke,
‘ On for liberty, for liberty !’ the Finians cried.

Like clouds of the night the Northmen
came,
O’er the valley of Almhin lowering ;
While onward mov’d, in the light of its
fame,
That banner of Erin, towering.
With the mingling shock
Rung cliff and rock,
While, rank on rank, the invaders
die :
And the shout, that last
O’er the dying pass’d,
Was ‘ Victory ! victory !’—the Finian’s cry.

THE DREAM OF THOSE DAYS

THE dream of those days when first I sung thee is o’er,
Thy triumph hath stain’d the charm thy sorrows then wore ;
And ev’n of the light which Hope once shed o’er thy chains,
Alas, not a gleam to grace thy freedom remains.

Say, is it that slavery sunk so deep in thy heart,
That still the dark brand is there, though chainless thou art ;
And Freedom’s sweet fruit, for which thy spirit long burn’d,
Now, reaching at last thy lip, to ashes hath turn’d ?

Up Liberty’s steep by Truth and Eloquence led,
With eyes on her temple fix’d, how proud was thy tread !
Ah, better thou ne’er had’s’t liv’d that summit to gain,
Or died in the porch, than thus dishonour the fane.

FROM THIS HOUR THE PLEDGE IS GIVEN

From this hour the pledge is given,
From this hour my soul is thine :
Come what will, from earth or heaven,
Weal or woe, thy fate be mine.
When the proud and great stood by thee,
None dar’d thy rights to spurn ;
And if now they’re false and fly thee,
Shall I, too, basely turn ?
No ;—whate’er the fires that try thee,
In the same this heart shall burn.

Though the sea, where thou embarkest,
Offers now a friendly shore,
Light may come where all looks darkest,
Hope hath life, when life seems o’er.
And, of those past ages dreaming,
When glory deck’d thy brow,
Oft I fondly think, though seeming
So fall’n and clouded now,
Thou’lt again break forth, all beaming,
None so bright, so blest as thou !

SILENCE IS IN OUR FESTAL HALLS¹

SILENCE is in our festal halls,—
 Sweet Son of Song! thy course is o'er;
 In vain on thee sad Erin calls,
 Her minstrel's voice responds no
 more;—

All silent as th' Eolian shell
 Sleeps at the close of some bright day,
 When the sweet breeze, that wak'd its swell

At sunny morn, hath died away.

Yet, at our feasts, thy spirit long,
 Awak'd by music's spell, shall rise;
 For, name so link'd with deathless song
 Partakes its charm and never dies:
 And ev'n within the holy fane,
 When music wafts the soul to heaven,
 One thought to him, whose earliest strain
 Was echoed there, shall long be given.

But, where is now the cheerful day,
 The social night, when, by thy side,
 He, who now weaves this parting lay,
 His skillless voice with thine allied;
 And sung those songs whose every
 tone,
 When bard and minstrel long have
 past,

Shall still, in sweetness all their own,
 Embalm'd by fame, undying last.

Yes, Erin, thine alone the fame,—
 Or, if thy bard have shar'd the crown,
 From thee the borrow'd glory came,
 And at thy feet is now laid down.
 Enough, if Freedom still inspire
 His latest song, and still there be,
 As evening closes round his lyre,
 One ray upon its chords from thee.

NATIONAL AIRS

ADVERTISEMENT

It is Cicero, I believe, who says, 'naturá ad modos ducimur'; and the abundance of wild, indigenous airs, which almost every country, except England, possesses, sufficiently proves the truth of his assertion. The lovers of this simple, but interesting kind of music, are here presented with the first number of a collection, which, I trust, their contributions will enable us to continue. A pretty air without words resembles one of those half creatures of Plato, which are described as wandering in search of the remainder of themselves through the world. To supply this other half, by uniting with congenial words the many fugitive melodies which have hitherto had none,—or only such as are unintelligible to the generality of their hearers,—is the object and ambition of the present work. Neither is it our intention to confine ourselves to what are strictly called National Melodies, but, wherever we meet with any wandering and beautiful air, to which poetry has not yet assigned a worthy home, we shall venture to claim it as an estray swan, and enrich our humble Hippocrene with its song.

A TEMPLE TO FRIENDSHIP²

(SPANISH AIR)

'A TEMPLE to Friendship,' said Laura, enchanted,
 'I'll build in this garden,—the thought is divine!'
 Her temple was built, and she now only wanted
 An image of Friendship to place on the shrine.

¹ It is hardly necessary, perhaps, to inform the reader, that those lines are meant as a tribute of sincere friendship to the memory of an old and valued colleague in this work, Sir John Stevenson.

² The thought is taken from a song by Le Prieur, called 'La Statue de l'Amitié.'

She flew to a sculptor, who set down before her
 A Friendship, the fairest his art could invent;
 But so cold and so dull, that the youthful adorer
 Saw plainly this was not the idol she meant.

'Oh! never,' she cried, 'could I think of enshrining
 An image, whose looks are so joyless and dim;—
 But yon little god, upon roses reclining,
 We'll make, if you please, Sir, a Friendship of him.'
 So the bargain was struck; with the little god laden
 She joyfully flew to her shrine in the grove:
 'Farewell,' said the sculptor, 'you're not the first maiden
 Who came but for Friendship and took away Love.'

FLOW ON, THOU SHINING RIVER

(PORTUGUESE AIR)

Flow on, thou shining river;
 But, ere thou reach the sea,
 Seek Ella's bower, and give her
 The wreaths I fling o'er thee.
 And tell her thus, if she'll be mine,
 The current of our lives shall be,
 With joys along their course to shine,
 Like those sweet flowers on thee.

But if, in wand'ring thither,
 Thou find'st she mocks my prayer,
 Then leave those wreathes to wither
 Upon the cold bank there;
 And tell her thus, when youth is o'er,
 Her lone and loveless charms shall be Thrown by upon life's weedy shore,
 Like those sweet flowers from thee.

ALL THAT'S BRIGHT MUST FADE

(INDIAN AIR)

ALL that's bright must fade,—
 The brightest still the fleetest;
 All that's sweet was made,
 But to be lost when sweetest.
 Stars that shine and fall;—
 The flower that drops in springing;—
 These, alas! are types of all
 To which our hearts are clinging.
 All that's bright must fade,—
 The brightest still the fleetest;
 All that's sweet was made
 But to be lost when sweetest!

Who would seek or prize
 Delights that end in aching?
 Who would trust to ties
 That every hour are breaking?
 Better far to be
 In utter darkness lying,
 Than to be bless'd with light and see
 That light for ever flying.
 All that's bright must fade,—
 The brightest still the fleetest;
 All that's sweet was made
 But to be lost when sweetest!

SO WARMLY WE MET

(HUNGARIAN AIR)

So warmly we met and so fondly we parted,
 That which was the sweeter ev'n I could not tell,—
 That first look of welcome her sunny eyes darted,
 Or that tear of passion, which bless'd our farewell.
 To meet was a heaven, and to part thus another,—
 Our joy and our sorrow seem'd rivals in bliss;
 Oh! Cupid's two eyes are not liker each other
 In smiles and in tears, than that moment to this.

The first was like day-break, new, sudden, delicious,—
 The dawn of a pleasure scarce kindled up yet ;
 The last like the farewell of daylight, more precious,
 More glowing and deep, as 'tis nearer its set.
 Our meeting, though happy, was ting'd by a sorrow
 To think that such happiness could not remain ;
 While our parting, though sad, gave a hope that to-morrow
 Would bring back the bless'd hour of meeting again.

THOSE EVENING BELLS

(AIR.—THE BELLS OF ST. PETERS-BURG)

THOSE evening bells ! those evening
 bells !

How many a tale their music tells,
 Of youth, and home, and that sweet time,
 When last I heard their soothing chime.

Those joyous hours are pass'd away ;
 And many a heart, that then was gay,
 Within the tomb now darkly dwells,
 And hears no more those evening bells.

And so 'twill be when I am gone ;
 That tuneful peal will still ring on,
 While other bards shall walk these dells,
 And sing your praise, sweet evening bells !

SHOULD THOSE FOND HOPES

(PORTUGUESE AIR)

SHOULD those fond hopes e'er forsake thee,¹

Which now so sweetly thy heart employ ;

Should the cold world come to wake thee
 From all thy visions of youth and
 joy ;

Should the gay friends, for whom thou wouldst banish

Him who once thought thy young heart his own,

All, like spring birds, falsely vanish,
 And leave thy winter unheeded and lone ;—

Oh ! 'tis then that he thou hast slighted
 Would come to cheer thee, when all seem'd o'er ;

¹ This is one of the many instances among my lyrical poems,—though the above, it must be owned, is an extreme case,—where the metre

Then the truant, lost and blighted,

Would to his bosom be taken once
 more.

Like that dear bird we both can remember,

Who left us while summer shone
 round,

But, when chill'd by bleak December,
 On our threshold a welcome still found.

REASON, FOLLY, AND BEAUTY

(ITALIAN AIR)

REASON, and Folly, and Beauty, they say,
 Went on a party of pleasure one day :

Folly play'd

Around the maid,

The bells of his cap rung merrily out ;
 While Reason took

To his sermon-book—

Oh ! which was the pleasanter no one need doubt,

Which was the pleasanter no one need
 doubt.

Beauty, who likes to be thought very sage,

Turn'd for a moment to Reason's dull
 page,

Till Folly said,

'Look here, sweet maid !'—

The sight of his cap brought her back to herself ;

While Reason read

His leaves of lead,

With no one to mind him, poor sensible
 elf !

No,—no one to mind him, poor sensible
 elf !

has been necessarily sacrificed to the structure of the air.

Then Reason grew jealous of Folly's gay
cap;
Had he that on, he her heart might entrap—
‘There it is,’
Quoth Folly, ‘old quiz!’
(Folly was always good-natured, ’tis said.)
‘Under the sun
There's no such fun,
As Reason with my cap and bells on his
head,
Reason with my cap and bells on his head!’
But Reason the head-dress so awkwardly wore,
That Beauty now lik'd him still less than before;
While Folly took
Old Reason's book,
And twisted the leaves in a cap of such ton,
That Beauty vow'd
(Though not aloud),
She lik'd him still better in that than his
own.
Yes,—lik'd him still better in that than his own.

FARE THEE WELL, THOU
LOVELY ONE!
(SICILIAN AIR)

FARE thee well, thou lovely one!
Lovely still, but dear no more;
Once his soul of truth is gone,
Love's sweet life is o'er.
Thy words, whate'er their flatt'ring spell,
Could scarce have thus deceived;
But eyes that acted truth so well
Were sure to be believed.
Then, fare thee well, thou lovely one!
Lovely still, but dear no more;
Once his soul of truth is gone,
Love's sweet life is o'er.
Yet those eyes look constant still,
True as stars they keep their light;
Still those cheeks their pledge fulfil
Of blushing always bright.
'Tis only on thy changeable heart
The blame of falsehood lies;
Love lives in every other part,
But there, alas! he dies.
Then, fare thee well, thou lovely one!
Lovely still, but dear no more;
Once his soul of truth is gone,
Love's sweet life is o'er.

DOST THOU REMEMBER
(PORTUGUESE AIR)

Dost thou remember that place so lonely,
A place for lovers, and lovers only,
Where first I told thee all my secret sighs?
When, as the moonbeam, that trembled o'er thee,
Illum'd thy blushes, I knelt before thee,
And read my hope's sweet triumph in those eyes?
Then, then, while closely heart was drawn to heart,
Love bound us—never, never more to part!

And when I call'd thee by names the dearest¹
That love could fancy, the fondest, nearest,—
‘My life, my only life!’ among the rest;
In those sweet accents that still enthrall me,
Thou saidst, ‘Ah! wherefore thy life thus call me?’
Thy soul, thy soul's the name that I love best;
For life soon passes,—but how bless'd to be
That Soul which never, never parts from thee!

OH, COME TO ME WHEN DAY- LIGHT SETS

(VENETIAN AIR)

OH, come to me when daylight sets ;
Sweet ! then come to me,
When smoothly go our gondolets
O'er the moonlight sea.
When Mirth's awake, and Love begins,
Beneath that glancing ray,
With sound of lutes and mandolins,
To steal young hearts away.
Then, come to me when daylight sets ;
Sweet ! then come to me,
When smoothly go our gondolets
O'er the moonlight sea.
Oh, then's the hour for those who love,
Sweet ! like thee and me ;
When all's so calm below, above,
In heav'n and o'er the sea.
When maidens sing sweet barcarolles¹
And Echo sings again
So sweet, that all with ears and souls
Should love and listen then.
So, come to me when daylight sets ;
Sweet ! then come to me,
When smoothly go our gondolets
O'er the moonlight sea.

OFT, IN THE STILLY NIGHT

(SCOTCH AIR)

OFT, in the stilly night,
Ere Slumber's chain has bound me,
Fond Memory brings the light
Of other days around me ;
The smiles, the tears,
Of boyhood's years,
The words of love then spoken ;
The eyes that shone,
Now dimm'd and gone,
The cheerful hearts now broken !
Thus, in the stilly night,
Ere Slumber's chain hath bound me,
Sad Memory brings the light
Of other days around me.

When I remember all
The friends, so link'd together,
I've seen around me fall,
Like leaves in wintry weather ;

I feel like one,
Who treads alone
Some banquet-hall deserted,
Whose lights are fled,
Whose garlands dead,
And all but he departed !
Thus, in the stilly night,
Ere Slumber's chain has bound me,
Sad Memory brings the light
Of other days around me.

HARK ! THE VESPER HYMN IS STEALING

(RUSSIAN AIR)

HARK ! the vesper hymn is stealing
O'er the waters soft and clear ;
Nearer yet and nearer pealing,
And now bursts upon the ear :
Jubilate, Amen.
Farther now, now farther stealing,
Soft it fades upon the ear :
Jubilate, Amen.
Now, like moonlight waves retreating
To the shore, it dies along ;
Now, like angry surges meeting,
Breaks the mingled tide of song :
Jubilate, Amen.
Hush ! again, like waves, retreating
To the shore, it dies along :
Jubilate, Amen.

LOVE AND HOPE

(SWISS AIR)

At morn, beside yon summer sea,
Young Hope and Love reclin'd ;
But scarce had noon-tide come, when he
Into his bark leap'd smilingly,
And left poor Hope behind.

' I go,' said Love, ' to sail awhile
Across this sunny main ;'
And then so sweet his parting smile,
That Hope, who never dreamt of guile,
Believ'd he'd come again.

She linger'd there till evening's beam
Along the waters lay ;
And o'er the sands, in thoughtful dream,
Oft trac'd his name, which still the stream
As often wash'd away.

At length a sail appears in sight,
And tow'rd the maiden moves !
'Tis Wealth that comes, and gay and
bright,
His golden bark reflects the light,
But ah ! it is not Love's.

Another sail—'twas Friendship show'd
Her night-lamp o'er the sea ;
And calm the light that lamp bestow'd ;
But Love had lights that warmer glow'd,
And where, alas ! was he ?

Now fast around the sea and shore
Night threw her darkling chain ;
The sunny sails were seen no more,
Hope's morning dreams of bliss were o'er,—
Love never came again.

THERE COMES A TIME

(GERMAN AIR)

THERE comes a time, a dreary time,
To him whose heart hath flown
O'er all the fields of youth's sweet prime,
And made each flower its own.
'Tis when his soul must first renounce
Those dreams so bright, so fond ;
Oh ! then's the time to die at once,
For life has nought beyond.

When sets the sun on Afric's shore,
That instant all is night ;
And so should life at once be o'er,
When Love withdraws his light ;—
Nor, like our northern day, gleam on Through twilight's dim delay,
The cold remains of lustre gone,
Of fire long pass'd away.

MY HARP HAS ONE UNCHANGING
THEME

(SWEDISH AIR)

My harp has one unchanging theme,
One strain that still comes o'er
Its languid chord, as 'twere a dream
Of joy that's now no more.
In vain I try, with livelier air,
To wake the breathing string ;
That voice of other times is there,
And saddens all I sing.

Breathe on, breathe on, thou languid
strain,

Henceforth be all my own ;
Though thou art oft so full of pain
Few hearts can bear thy tone.
Yet oft thou'rt sweet, as if the sigh,
The breath that Pleasure's wings
Gave out, when last they wanton'd by,
Were still upon thy strings.

OH, NO—NOT EV'N WHEN FIRST
WE LOV'D

(CASHMERIAN AIR)

Oh, no—not ev'n when first we lov'd,
Wert thou as dear as now thou art ;
Thy beauty then my senses mov'd,
But now thy virtues bind my heart.
What was but Passion's sigh before,
Has since been turn'd to Reason's
vow ;
And, though I then might love thee
more
Trust me, I love thee better now.

Although my heart in earlier youth
Might kindle with more wild desire,
Believe me, it has gain'd in truth
Much more than it has lost in fire.
The flame now warms my inmost core,
That then but sparkled o'er my brow,
And, though I seem'd to love thee
more,
Yet, oh, I love thee better now.

PEACE BE AROUND THEE

(SCOTCH AIR)

PEACE be around thee, wherever thou
rov'st ;
May life be for thee one summer's
day,
And all that thou wishest, and all that thou lov'st,
Come smiling around thy sunny way !
If sorrow e'er this calm should break,
May even thy tears pass off so lightly,
Like spring-showers, they'll only make
The smiles that follow shine more brightly.

May Time, who sheds his blight o'er all,
 And daily dooms some joy to death,
 O'er thee let years so gently fall,
 They shall not crush one flower
 beneath.
 As half in shade and half in sun
 This world along its path advances,
 May that side the sun's upon
 Be all that e'er shall meet thy glances !

COMMON SENSE AND GENIUS

(FRENCH AIR)

WHILE I touch the string,
 Wreath my brows with laurel,
 For the tale I sing
 Has, for once, a moral.
 Common Sense, one night,
 Though not used to gambols,
 Went out by moonlight,
 With Genius, on his rambles.
 While I touch the string, &c.

Common Sense went on,
 Many wise things saying ;
 While the light that shone
 Soon set Genius straying.
 One his eye ne'er rais'd
 From the path before him ;
 T' other idly gaz'd
 On each night-cloud o'er him.
 While I touch the string, &c.

So they came, at last,
 To a shady river ;
 Common Sense soon pass'd,
 Safe, as he doth ever ;
 While the boy, whose look
 Was in Heaven that minute,
 Never saw the brook
 But tumbled headlong in it !
 While I touch the string, &c.

How the Wise One smil'd,
 When safe o'er the torrent,
 At that youth, so wild,
 Dripping from the current !
 Sense went home to bed ;
 Genius, left to shiver
 On the bank, 'tis said,
 Died of that cold river !
 While I touch the string, &c.

THEN, FARE THEE WELL

(OLD ENGLISH AIR)

THEN, fare thee well, my own dear love,
 This world has now for us
 No greater grief, no pain above
 The pain of parting thus,
 Dear love !
 The pain of parting thus.

Had we but known, since first we met,
 Some few short hours of bliss,
 We might, in numb'ring them, forget
 The deep, deep pain of this,
 Dear love !
 The deep, deep pain of this.

But no, alas, we've never seen
 One glimpse of pleasure's ray,
 But still there came some cloud between,
 And chas'd it all away,
 Dear love !
 And chas'd it all away.

Yet, ev'n could those sad moments last,
 Far dearer to my heart
 Were hours of grief, together past,
 Than years of mirth apart,
 Dear love !
 Than years of mirth apart.

Farewell ! our hope was born in fears,
 And nurs'd 'mid vain regrets ;
 Like winter suns, it rose in tears,
 Like them in tears it sets,
 Dear love !
 Like them in tears it sets.

GAILY SOUNDS THE CASTANET

(MALTESE AIR)

GAILY sounds the castanet,
 Beating time to bounding feet,
 When, after daylight's golden set,
 Maids and youths by moonlight meet.
 Oh, then, how sweet to move
 Through all that maze of mirth,
 Led by light from eyes we love
 Beyond all eyes on earth.

Then, the joyous banquet spread
 On the cool and fragrant ground,
 With heav'n's bright sparklers overhead,
 And still brighter sparkling round.

Oh, then, how sweet to say
 Into some lov'd one's ear,
 Thoughts reserv'd through many a day
 To be thus whisper'd here.

When the dance and feast are done,
 Arm in arm as home we stray,
 How sweet to see the dawning sun
 O'er her cheek's warm blushes play!
 Then, too, the farewell kiss—
 The words, whose parting tone
 Lingers still in dreams of bliss,
 That haunt young hearts alone.

LOVE IS A HUNTER-BOY

(LANGUEDOCIAN AIR)

LOVE is a hunter-boy,
 Who makes young hearts his prey;
 And, in his nets of joy,
 Ensnares them night and day.
 In vain conceal'd they lie—
 Love tracks them every where;
 In vain aloft they fly—
 Love shoots them flying there.

But 'tis his joy most sweet,
 At early dawn to trace
 The print of Beauty's feet,
 And give the trembler chase.
 And if, through virgin snow,
 He tracks her footsteps fair,
 How sweet for Love to know
 None went before him there.

COME, CHASE THAT STARTING TEAR AWAY

(FRENCH AIR)

COME, chase that starting tear away,
 Ere mine to meet it springs;
 To-night, at least, to-night be gay,
 Whate'er to-morrow brings.
 Like sun-set gleams, that linger late
 When all is dark'ning fast,
 Are hours like these we snatch from Fate—
 The brightest, and the last.
 Then, chase that starting tear, &c.

To gild the deep'ning gloom, if Heaven
 But one bright hour allow,
 Oh, think that one bright hour is given,
 In all its splendour, now.
 Let's live it out—then sink in night,
 Like waves that from the shore
 One minute swell, are touch'd with light,
 Then lost for evermore!
 Come, chase that starting tear, &c.

JOYS OF YOUTH, HOW FLEETING

(PORTUGUESE AIR)

WHISP'RINGS, heard by wakeful maids,
 To whom the night-stars guide us;
 Stolen walks through moonlight shades,
 With those we love beside us,
 Hearts beating,
 At meeting;
 Tears starting,
 At parting;
 Oh, sweet youth, how soon it fades!
 Sweet joys of youth, how fleeting!

Wand'rings far away from home,
 With life all new before us;
 Greetings warm, when home we come,
 From hearts whose prayers watch'd o'er us.
 Tears starting,
 At parting;
 Hearts beating,
 At meeting;
 Oh, sweet youth, how lost on some!
 To some, how bright and fleeting!

HEAR ME BUT ONCE

(FRENCH AIR)

HEAR me but once, while o'er the grave,
 In which our Love lies cold and dead,
 I count each flatt'ring hope he gave
 Of joys, now lost, and charms now fled.

Who could have thought the smile he wore,
 When first we met, would fade away?
 Or that a chill would e'er come o'er
 Those eyes so bright through many a day?

Hear me but once, &c.

WHEN LOVE WAS A CHILD

(SWEDISH AIR)

WHEN Love was a child, and went idling
round,

'Mong flowers, the whole summer's day,
One morn in the valley a bower he found,
So sweet, it allur'd him to stay.

O'erhead, from the trees, hung a garland
fair,

A fountain ran darkly beneath ;—
'Twas Pleasure had hung up the flow'rets
there ;

Love knew it, and jump'd at the wreath.

But Love didn't know—and, at his weak
years,

What urchin was likely to know ?—
That Sorrow had made of her own salt
tears

The fountain that murmur'd below.

He caught at the wreath—but with too much haste,

As boys when impatient will do—
It fell in those waters of briny taste,
And the flowers were all wet through.

This garland he now wears night and day ;
And, though it all sunny appears

With Pleasure's own light, each leaf,
they say,

Still tastes of the Fountain of Tears.

SAY, WHAT SHALL BE OUR SPORT
TO-DAY ?

(SICILIAN AIR)

SAY, what shall be our sport to-day ?

There's nothing on earth, in sea, or air,
Too bright, too high, too wild, too gay,
For spirits like mine to dare !

'Tis like the returning bloom

Of those days, alas, gone by,
When I lov'd, each hour—I scarce knew whom—

And was bless'd—I scarce knew why.

Ay—those were days when life had
wings,

And flew, oh, flew so wild a height,
That, like the lark which sunward springs,
'Twas giddy with too much light.

And, though of some plumes bereft,
With that sun, too, nearly set,
I've enough of light and wing still left
For a few gay soarings yet.

BRIGHT BE THY DREAMS

(WELSH AIR)

BRIGHT be thy dreams—may all thy weeping

Turn into smiles while thou art sleeping.

May those by death or seas remov'd,
The friends, who in thy spring-time
knew thee,

All, thou hast ever priz'd or lov'd,
In dreams come smiling to thee !

There may the child, whose love lay deepest,

Dearest of all, come while thou sleepest ;

Still as she was—no charm forgot—

No lustre lost that life had given ;

Or, if chang'd, but changed to what
Thou'lt find her yet in Heaven !

GO, THEN—'TIS VAIN

(SICILIAN AIR)

Go, then—'tis vain to hover

Thus round a hope that's dead ;

At length my dream is over ;

'Twas sweet—'twas false—'tis fled !

Farewell ! since nought it moves thee,

Such truth as mine to see—

Some one, who far less loves thee,

Perhaps more bless'd will be.

Farewell, sweet eyes, whose brightness

New life around me shed ;

Farewell, false heart, whose lightness

Now leaves me death instead.

Go, now, those charms surrender

To some new lover's sigh—

One who, though far less tender,

May be more bless'd than I.

THE CRYSTAL-HUNTERS

(SWISS AIR)

O'ER mountains bright

With snow and light,

We Crystal Hunters speed along ;

While rocks and caves,

And icy waves,

Each instant echo to our song ;

And, when we meet with store of gems,
We grudge not kings their diadems.

O'er mountains bright
With snow and light,
We Crystal-Hunters speed along ;
While grotts and caves,
And icy waves,
Each instant echo to our song.

Not half so oft the lover dreams
Of sparkles from his lady's eyes,
As we of those refreshing gleams
That tell where deep the crystal lies ;
Though, next to crystal, we too grant,
That ladies' eyes may most enchant.
O'er mountains bright, &c.

Sometimes, when on the Alpine rose
The golden sunset leaves its ray,
So like a gem the flow'et glows,
We thither bend our headlong way ;
And, though we find no treasure there,
We bless the rose that shines so fair.
O'er mountains bright
With snow and light,
We Crystal-Hunters speed along ;
While rocks and caves,
And icy waves,
Each instant echo to our song.

ROW GENTLY HERE

(VENETIAN AIR)

Row gently here,
My gondolier,
So softly wake the tide,
That not an ear,
On earth, may hear,
But hers to whom we glide.

Had Heaven but tongues to speak, as well
As starry eyes to see,
Oh, think what tales 'twould have to tell
Of wandering youths like me !

Now rest thee here,
My gondolier ;
Hush, hush, for up I go,
To climb yon light
Balcony's height,
While thou keep'st watch below.
Ah ! did we take for Heaven above
But half such pains as we Take, day and night, for woman's love,
What Angels we should be !

OH, DAYS OF YOUTH

(FRENCH AIR)

OH, days of youth and joy, long clouded,
Why thus for ever haunt my view ?
When in the grave your light lay
shrouded,
Why did not Memory die there too ?
Vainly doth Hope her strain now sing me,
Telling of joys that yet remain—
No; never more can this life bring me
One joy that equals youth's sweet pain.

Dim lies the way to death before me,
Cold winds of Time blow round my
brow ;
Sunshine of youth ! that once fell o'er me,
Where is your warmth, your glory now ?
'Tis not that then no pain could sting me;
'Tis not that now no joys remain ;
Oh, 'tis that life no more can bring me
One joy so sweet as that worst pain.

WHEN FIRST THAT SMILE

(VENETIAN AIR)

WHEN first that smile, like sunshine, bless'd my sight,
Oh what a vision then came o'er me !
Long years of love, of calm and pure delight,
Seem'd in that smile to pass before me.
Ne'er did the peasant dream of summer skies,
Of golden fruit, and harvests springing,
With fonder hope than I of those sweet eyes,
And of the joy their light was bringing.

Where now are all those fondly promis'd hours ?
 Ah ! woman's faith is like her brightness—
 Fading as fast as rainbows, or day-flowers,
 Or aught that's known for grace and lightness.
 Short as the Persian's prayer, at close of day,
 Should be each vow of Love's repeating ;
 Quick let him worship Beauty's precious ray—
 Even while he kneels, that ray is fleeting !

PEACE TO THE SLUMB'RERS !

(CATALONIAN AIR)

PEACE to the slumb'ers !
 They lie on the battle-plain,
 With no shroud to cover them ;
 The dew and the summer rain
 Are all that weep over them.
 Peace to the slumb'ers !

Vain was their brav'ry !—
 The fallen oak lies where it lay
 Across the wintry river ;
 But brave hearts, once swept away,
 Are gone, alas ! for ever.
 Vain was their brav'ry !

Woe to the cong'ror !
 Our limbs shall lie as cold as theirs
 Of whom his sword bereft us,
 Ere we forget the deep arrears
 Of vengeance they have left us !
 Woe to the cong'ror !

WHEN THOU SHALT WANDER

(SICILIAN AIR)

WHEN thou shalt wander by that sweet
 light
 We used to gaze on so many an eve,
 When love was new and hope was bright,
 Ere I could doubt or thou deceive—
 Oh, then, rememb'ring how swift went by Those hours of transport, even thou mayst sigh.

Yes, proud one ! even thy heart may own
 That love like ours was far too sweet
 To be, like summer garments, thrown Aside, when pass'd the summer's heat ;
 And wish in vain to know again
 Such days, such nights, as bless'd thee
 then.

WHO'LL BUY MY LOVE-KNOTS ?

(PORTUGUESE AIR)

HYMEN, late, his love-knots selling,
 Call'd at many a maiden's dwelling.
 None could doubt, who saw or knew
 them,
 Hymen's call was welcome to them.
 'Who'll buy my love-knots ?
 Who'll buy my love-knots ?'
 Soon as that sweet cry resounded,
 How his baskets were surrounded !

Maids, who now first dreamt of trying
 These gay knots of Hymen's tying ;
 Dames, who long had sat to watch him
 Passing by, but ne'er could catch him ;—
 'Who'll buy my love-knots ?
 Who'll buy my love-knots ?'
 All at that sweet cry assembled ;
 Some laugh'd, some blush'd, and some trembled.

'Here are knots,' said Hymen, taking
 Some loose flowers, 'of Love's own making ;
 Here are gold ones—you may trust
 'em'—

(These, of course, found ready custom).
 'Come, buy my love-knots !
 Come, buy my love-knots !
 Some are labell'd "Knots to tie men—
 Love the maker—Bought of Hymen."'

Scarce their bargains were completed,
 When the nymphs all cried, 'We're cheated !

See these flowers—they're drooping
 sadly ;
 This gold-knot, too, ties but badly—
 Who'd buy such love-knots ?
 Who'd buy such love-knots ?
 Even this tie, with Love's name round it
 All a sham—He never bound it.'

Love, who saw the whole proceeding,
Would have laugh'd, but for good-
breeding;

While Old Hymen, who was used to Cries like that these dames gave loose
to—

‘Take back our love-knots !

Take back our love-knots !’

Coolly said, ‘There’s no returning Wares on Hymen’s hands—Good morn-
ing !’

SEE, THE DAWN FROM HEAVEN

(TO AN AIR SUNG AT ROME, ON CHRISTMAS EVE)

SEE, the dawn from Heaven is breaking
O’er our sight,
And Earth, from sin awaking,
Hails the light !

See those groups of angels, winging
From the realms above,
On their brows, from Eden, bringing Wreaths of Hope and Love.

Hark, their hymns of glory pealing
Through the air,
To mortal ears revealing
Who lies there !

In that dwelling, dark and lowly,
Sleeps the Heavenly Son,
He, whose home’s above,—the Holy,
Ever Holy One !

NETS AND CAGES ¹

(SWEDISH AIR)

COME, listen to my story, while
Your needle’s task you ply ;
At what I sing some maids will smile,
While some, perhaps, may sigh.
Though Love’s the theme, and Wisdom blames

Such florid songs as ours,
Yet Truth sometimes, like eastern dames,
Can speak her thoughts by flowers.
Then listen, maids, come listen, while
Your needle’s task you ply ;
At what I sing there’s some may smile,
While some, perhaps, will sigh.

¹ Suggested by the following remark of Swift :—‘The reason why so few marriages are happy, is, because young ladies spend their time in making nets, not in making cages.’

Young Cloe, bent on catching Loves,
Such nets had learn’d to frame,
That none, in all our vales and groves,
E’er caught so much small game :
But gentle Sue, less giv’n to roam,
While Cloe’s nets were taking
Such lots of Loves, sat still at home,
One little Love-cage making.
Come, listen, maids, &c.

Much Cloe laugh’d at Susan’s task ;
But mark how things went on :
These light-caught Loves, ere you could ask

Their name and age, were gone !
So weak poor Cloe’s nets were wove,
That, though she charm’d into them
New game each hour, the youngest Love
Was able to break through them.
Come, listen, maids, &c.

Meanwhile, young Sue, whose cage was wrought

Of bars too strong to sever,
One Love with golden pinions caught,
And caged him there for ever ;
Instructing, thereby, all coquettes,
Whate’er their looks or ages,
That, though ’tis pleasant weaving Nets
’Tis wiser to make Cages.

Thus, maidens, thus do I beguile
The task your fingers ply.—
May all who hear like Susan smile,
And not, like Cloe, sigh !

WHEN THROUGH THE PIAZZETTA

(VENETIAN AIR)

WHEN through the Piazzetta
Night breathes her cool air,
Then, dearest Ninetta,
I’ll come to thee there.
Beneath thy mask shrouded,
I’ll know thee afar,
As Love knows, though clouded,
His own Evening Star.

In garb, then, resembling
Some gay gondolier,
I’ll whisper thee, trembling,
‘Our bark, love, is near :
Now, now, while there hover
Those clouds o’er the moon,
’Twill waft thee safe over
Yon silent Lagoon.’

GO, NOW, AND DREAM

(SICILIAN AIR)

Go, now, and dream o'er that joy in thy slumber—
 Moments so sweet again ne'er shalt thou number.
 Of Pain's bitter draught the flavour ne'er flies,
 While Pleasure's scarce touches the lip ere it dies.
 Go, then, and dream, &c.

That moon, which hung o'er your parting, so splendid,
 Often will shine again, bright as she then did—
 But never more will the beam she saw burn
 In those happy eyes, at your meeting, return.
 Go, then, and dream, &c.

TAKE HENCE THE BOWL

(NEAPOLITAN AIR)

TAKE hence the bowl ;—though beaming
 Brightly as bowl e'er shone,
 Oh, it but sets me dreaming
 Of happy days now gone.
 There, in its clear reflection,
 As in a wizard's glass,
 Lost hopes and dead affection,
 Like shades, before me pass.

Each cup I drain brings hither
 Some scene of bliss gone by ;—
 Bright lips, too bright to wither,
 Warm hearts, too warm to die.
 Till, as the dream comes o'er me
 Of those long vanish'd years,
 Alas, the wine before me
 Seems turning all to tears !

FAREWELL, THERESA !

(VENETIAN AIR)

FAREWELL, Theresa ! yon cloud that over
 Heaven's pale night-star gath'ring we see,
 Will scarce from that pure orb have pass'd, ere thy lover
 Swift o'er the wide wave shall wander from thee.
 Long, like that dim cloud, I've hung around thee,
 Dark'ning thy prospects, sadd'ning thy brow ;
 With gay heart, Theresa, and bright cheek I found thee ;
 Oh, think how chang'd, love, how chang'd art thou now !
 But here I free thee : like one awaking
 From fearful slumber, thou break'st the spell ;
 'Tis over—the moon, too, her bondage is breaking—
 Past are the dark clouds ; Theresa, farewell !

HOW OFT, WHEN WATCHING STARS

(SAVOYARD AIR)

OFT, when the watching stars grow pale,
 And round me sleeps the moonlight scene,
 To hear a flute through yonder vale
 I from my casement lean.
 'Come, come, my love !' each note then seems to say,
 'Oh, come, my love ! the night wears fast away !'

Never to mortal ear
 Could words though warm they be,
 Speak Passion's language half so clear
 As do those notes to me!

Then quick my own light lute I seek,
 And strike the chords with loudest swell;
 And, though they nought to others speak,
He knows their language well.
 'I come, my love!' each note then seems to say,
 'I come, my love!—thine, thine till break of day.'
 Oh, weak the power of words,
 The hues of painting dim,
 Compar'd to what those simple chords
 Then say and pain to him!

WHEN THE FIRST SUMMER BEE

(GERMAN AIR)

WHEN the first summer bee
 O'er the young rose shall hover,
 Then, like that gay rover,
 I'll come to thee.
 He to flowers, I to lips, of sweets to the brim—
 What a meeting, what a meeting for me and for him!
 When the first summer bee, &c.
 Then, to every bright tree
 In the garden he'll wander;
 While I, oh, much fonder,
 Will stay with thee.
 In search of new sweetness through thousands he'll run.
 While I find the sweetness of thousands in one.
 Then, to every bright tree, &c.

THOUGH 'TIS ALL BUT A DREAM

(FRENCH AIR)

THOUGH 'tis all but a dream at the best, And still, when happiest, soonest o'er, Yet, even in a dream, to be bless'd Is so sweet, that I ask for no more. The bosom that opes With earliest hopes, The soonest finds those hopes untrue; As flowers that first In spring-time burst The earliest wither too! Ay—'tis all but a dream, &c.	Though by Friendship we oft are de- ceiv'd, And find Love's sunshine soon o'er cast; Yet Friendship will still be believ'd, And Love trusted on to the last. The web 'mong the leaves The spider weaves Is like the charm Hope hangs o'er men; Though often she sees 'Tis broke by the breeze, She spins the bright tissue again. Ay—'tis all but a dream, &c.

WHEN THE WINE-CUP IS SMILING

(ITALIAN AIR)

WHEN the wine-cup is smiling before us,
And we pledge round to hearts that are true, boy, true,
Then the sky of this life opens o'er us,
And Heaven gives a glimpse of its blue.

Talk of Adam in Eden reclining,
We are better, far better off thus, boy,
thus ;

For him but two bright eyes were shin-
ing—
See, what numbers are sparkling for us!

When on one side the grape-juice is dancing,

While on t'other a blue eye beams,
boy, beams,

'Tis enough, 'twixt the wine and the
glancing,

To disturb ev'n a saint from his dreams.

Yet, though life like a river is flowing,
I care not how fast it goes on, boy, on.

So the grape on its bank is still growing,
And Love lights the waves as they run.

WHERE SHALL WE BURY OUR SHAME ?

(NEAPOLITAN AIR)

WHERE shall we bury our shame ?

Where, in what desolate place,
Hide the last wreck of a name
Broken and stain'd by disgrace ?

Death may dis sever the chain,
Oppression will cease when we're
gone ;

But the dishonour, the stain,
Die as we may, will live on.

Was it for this we sent out

Liberty's cry from our shore ?

Was it for this that her shout

Thrill'd to the world's very core ?

Thus to live cowards and slaves !—

Oh, ye free hearts that lie dead,

Do you not, ev'n in your graves,

Shudder, as o'er you we tread ?

NE'ER TALK OF WISDOM'S GLOOMY SCHOOLS

(MAHRATTA AIR)

NE'ER talk of Wisdom's gloomy schools ;

Give me the sage who's able

To draw his moral thoughts and rules

From the study of the table ;—

Who learns how lightly, fleetly pass

This world and all that's in it,

From the bumper that but crowns his glass,

And is gone again next minute !

The diamond sleeps within the mine

The pearl beneath the water ;

While Truth, more precious, dwells in
wine,

The grape's own rosy daughter.

And none can prize her charms like
him,

Oh, none like him obtain her,

Who thus can, like Leander, swim

Through sparkling floods to gain her!

HERE SLEEPS THE BARD

(HIGHLAND AIR)

HERE sleeps the Bard who knew so well

All the sweet windings of Apollo's shell ;

Whether its music roll'd like torrents
near,

Or died, like distant streamlets, on the
ear.

Sleep, sleep, mute bard ; alike unheeded
now

The storm and zephyr sweep thy lifeless
brow ;—

That storm, whose rush is like thy martial lay ;

That breeze which, like thy love-song,
dies away !

DO NOT SAY THAT LIFE IS WANING

Do not say that life is waning,

Or that Hope's sweet day is set ;

While I've thee and love remaining,

Life is in th' horizon yet.

Do not think those charms are flying,
 Though thy roses fade and fall ;
 Beauty hath a grace undying,
 Which in thee survives them all.

Not for charms, the newest, brightest,
 That on other cheeks may shine,
 Would I change the least, the slightest
 That is ling'ring now o'er thine.

THE GAZELLE

Dost thou not hear the silver bell,
 Through yonder lime-trees ringing ?
 'Tis my lady's light gazelle,
 To me her love thoughts bringing,—
 All the while that silver bell
 Around his dark neck ringing.

See, in his mouth he bears a wreath,
 My love hath kiss'd in tying ;
 Oh, what tender thoughts beneath
 Those silent flowers are lying,— Hid within the mystic wreath,
 My love hath kiss'd in tying !

Welcome, dear gazelle, to thee,
 And joy to her, the fairest,
 Who thus hath breath'd her soul to me
 In every leaf thou bearest ;
 Welcome, dear gazelle, to thee,
 And joy to her, the fairest !

Hail ye living, speaking flowers,
 That breathe of her who bound ye ;
 Oh, 'twas not in fields, or bowers,
 'Twas on her lips, she found ye ;—
 Yes, ye blushing, speaking flowers,
 'Twas on her lips she found ye.

NO—LEAVE MY HEART TO REST

No—leave my heart to rest, if rest it may,
 When youth, and love, and hope, have pass'd away.
 Could'st thou, when summer hours are fled,
 To some poor leaf that's fall'n and dead,
 Bring back the hue it wore, the scent it shed ?
 No—leave this heart to rest, if rest it may,
 When youth, and love, and hope, have pass'd away.

Oh, had I met thee then, when life was bright,
 Thy smile might still have fed its tranquil light ;
 But now thou com'st like sunny skies,
 Too late to cheer the seaman's eyes,
 When wreck'd and lost his bark before him lies !
 No—leave this heart to rest, if rest it may,
 Since youth, and love, and hope, have pass'd away.

WHERE ARE THE VISIONS

'WHERE are the visions that round me once hover'd,
 Forms that shed grace from their shadows alone ;
 Looks fresh as light from a star just discover'd,
 And voices that Music might take for her own ?'

Time, while I spoke, with his wings resting o'er me.
 Heard me say, 'Where are those visions, oh where ?'
 And pointing his wand to the sunset before me,
 Said, with a voice like the hollow wind, 'There.'

Fondly I look'd, when the wizard had spoken,
 And there, mid the dim shining ruins of day,
 Saw, by their light, like a talisman broken,
 The last golden fragments of hope melt away.

WIND THY HORN, MY HUNTER BOY

WIND thy horn, my hunter boy,
 And leave thy lute's inglorious sighs ;
 Hunting is the hero's joy,
 Till war his nobler game supplies.
 Hark ! the hound-bells ringing sweet,
 While hunters shout, and the woods repeat,
 Hilli-ho ! Hilli-ho !

Wind again thy cheerful horn,
 Till echo, faint with answer, dies :
 Burn, bright torches, burn till morn,
 And lead us where the wild boar lies.
 Hark ! the cry, 'He's found, he's found,'
 While hill and valley our shouts resound,
 Hilli-ho ! Hilli-ho !

OH, GUARD OUR AFFECTION

Oh, guard our affection, nor e'er let it feel
 The blight that this world o'er the warmest will steal :
 While the faith of all round us is fading or past,
 Let ours, ever green, keep its bloom to the last.

Far safer for Love 'tis to wake and to weep,
 As he used in his prime, than go smiling to sleep ;
 For death on his slumber, cold death follows fast,
 While the love that is wakeful lives on to the last.

And though, as Time gathers his clouds o'er our head,
 A shade somewhat darker o'er life they may spread,
 Transparent, at least, be the shadow they cast,
 So that Love's soften'd light may shine through to the last.

SLUMBER, OH SLUMBER

"SLUMBER, oh slumber ; if sleeping thou mak'st
 'My heart beat so wildly, I'm lost if thou wak'st.'

Thus sung I to a maiden,
 Who slept one summer's day,
 And, like a flower o'erladen
 With too much sunshine, lay.
 Slumber, oh slumber, &c.

'Breathe not, oh breathe not, ye winds,
 o'er her cheeks ;
 If mute thus she charm me, I'm lost
 when she speaks.'

Thus sing I, while, awaking,
 She murmurs words that seem
 As if her lips were taking
 Farewell of some sweet dream.
 Breathe not, oh breathe not, &c.

BRING THE BRIGHT GARLANDS
HITHER

BRING the bright garlands hither,
 Ere yet a leaf is dying ;
 If so soon they must wither,
 Ours be their last sweet sighing.
 Hark, that low dismal chime !
 'Tis the dreary voice of Time.

Oh, bring beauty, bring roses,
 Bring all that yet is ours ;
 Let life's day, as it closes,
 Shine to the last through flowers.

Haste, ere the bowl's declining,
 Drink of it now or never ;
 Now, while Beauty is shining,
 Love, or she's lost for ever.
 Hark ! again that dull chime,
 'Tis the dreary voice of Time.

Oh, if life be a torrent,
 Down to oblivion going,
 Like this cup be its current,
 Bright to the last drop flowing !

IF IN LOVING, SINGING

If in loving, singing, night and day
 We could trifle merrily life away,
 Like atoms dancing in the beam,
 Like day-flies skimming o'er the stream,
 Or summer blossoms, born to sigh
 Their sweetness out, and die—
 How brilliant, thoughtless, side by side,
 Thou and I could make our minutes glide !
 No atoms ever glanc'd so bright,
 No day-flies ever danc'd so light,
 Nor summer blossoms mix'd their sigh,
 So close, as thou and I !

THOU LOV'ST NO MORE

Too plain, alas, my doom is spoken,
Nor canst thou veil the sad truth o'er;
Thy heart is chang'd, thy vow is broken,
Thou lov'st no more—thou lov'st no more.

Though kindly still those eyes behold me,
The smile is gone, which once they wore;

Though fondly still those arms enfold me,
'Tis not the same—thou lov'st no more.

Too long my dream of bliss believing,
I've thought thee all thou wert before;
But now—alas! there's no deceiving,
'Tis all too plain, thou lov'st no more.

Oh, thou as soon the dead couldst waken,
As lost affection's life restore,
Give peace to her that is forsaken,
Or bring back him who loves no more.

WHEN ABROAD IN THE WORLD

WHEN abroad in the world thou appearest,
And the young and the lovely are there,

To my heart while of all thou'rt the dearest,

To my eyes thou'rt of all the most fair.

They pass, one by one,
Like waves of the sea,

That say to the Sun,
'See, how fair we can be.'

But where's the light like thine,
In sun or shade to shine?
No—no, 'mong them all, there is nothing like thee,
Nothing like thee.

Oft, of old, without farewell or warning,
Beauty's self used to steal from the skies;

Fling a mist round her head, some fine morning,

And post down to earth in disguise;
But, no matter what shroud
Around her might be,
Men peep'd through the cloud,
And whisper'd, 'Tis She.'

So thou, where thousands are,
Shin'st forth the only star,—
Yes, yes, 'mong them all, there is nothing like thee,
Nothing like thee.

KEEP THOSE EYES STILL
PURELY MINE

KEEP those eyes still purely mine,
Though far off I be:
When on others most they shine,
Then think they're turn'd on me.

Should those lips as now respond
To sweet minstrelsy,
When their accents seem most fond,
Then think they're breath'd for me.

Make what hearts thou wilt thy own,
If when all on thee
Fix their charmed thoughts alone,
Thou think'st the while on me.

HOPE COMES AGAIN

HOPE comes again, to this heart long a stranger,
Once more she sings me her flattering strain;
But hush, gentle syren—for, ah, there's less danger
In still suffering on, than in hoping again.

Long, long, in sorrow, too deep for repining,
Gloomy, but tranquil, this bosom hath lain;
And joy coming now, like a sudden light shining
O'er eyelids long darken'd, would bring me but pain.

Fly then, ye visions, that Hope would shed o'er me;
Lost to the future, my sole chance of rest
Now lies not in dreaming of bliss that's before me,
But, ah—in forgetting how once I was blest.

O SAY, THOU BEST AND BRIGHTEST

O SAY, thou best and brightest,
My first love and my last,
When he, whom now thou slightest,
From life's dark scene hath past,
Will kinder thoughts then move thee ?
Will pity wake one thrill
For him who liv'd to love thee,
And dying, lov'd thee still ?

If, when that hour recalling
From which he dates his woes,
Thou feel'st a tear-drop falling,
Ah, blush not while it flows :
But, all the past forgiving,
Bend gently o'er his shrine,
And say, 'This heart, when living,
With all its faults, was mine.'

WHEN NIGHT BRINGS THE HOUR

WHEN night brings the hour
Of starlight and joy,
There comes to my bower
A fairy-wing'd boy ;
With eyes so bright,
So full of wild arts,
Like nets of light,
To tangle young hearts ;
With lips, in whose keeping
Love's secret may dwell,
Like Zephyr asleep in
Some rosy sea-shell.
Guess who he is,
Name but his name,
And his best kiss,
For reward, you may claim.
Where'er o'er the ground
He prints his light feet,
The flow'rs there are found
Most shining and sweet :
His looks, as soft
As lightning in May,
Though dangerous oft,
Ne'er wound but in play :
And oh, when his wings
Have brush'd o'er my lyre,
You'd fancy its strings
Were turning to fire.
Guess who he is,
Name but his name,
And his best kiss,
For reward, you may claim.

LIKE ONE WHO, DOOM'D

LIKE one who, doom'd o'er distant seas
His weary path to measure,
When home at length, with fav'ring
breeze,
He brings the far-sought treasure ;
His ship, in sight of shore, goes down,
That shore to which he hasted ;
And all the wealth he thought his own
Is o'er the waters wasted.

Like him, this heart, thro' many a track
Of toil and sorrow straying,
One hope alone brought fondly back,
Its toil and grief repaying.

Like him, alas, I see that ray
Of hope before me perish,
And one dark minute sweep away
What years were given to cherish.

FEAR NOT THAT, WHILE AROUND THEE

FEAR not that, while around thee
Life's varied blessings pour,
One sigh of hers shall wound thee,
Whose smile thou seek'st no more.
No, dead and cold for ever
Let our past love remain ;
Once gone, its spirit never
Shall haunt thy rest again.

May the new ties that bind thee
Far sweeter, happier prove,
Nor e'er of me remind thee,
But by their truth and love.
Think how, asleep or waking,
Thy image haunts me yet ;
But, how this heart is breaking
For thy own peace forget.

WHEN LOVE IS KIND

WHEN Love is kind,
Cheerful and free,
Love's sure to find
Welcome from me.

But when Love brings
Heartache or pang,
Tears, and such things—
Love may go hang !

If Love can sigh
For one alone,
Well pleas'd am I
To be that one.

But should I see
Love giv'n to rove
To two or three,
Then—good-by, Love !

Love must, in short,
Keep fond and true,
Through good report,
And evil too.

Else, here I swear,
Young Love may go,
For aught I care—
To Jericho.

THE GARLAND I SEND THEE

THE Garland I send thee was cull'd from those bowers
Where thou and I wander'd in long vanish'd hours ;
Not a leaf or a blossom its bloom here displays,
But bears some remembrance of those happy days.

The roses were gather'd by that garden gate,
Where our meetings, though early, seem'd always too late ;
Where ling'ring full oft through a summer-night's moon,
Our partings, though late, appear'd always too soon.

The rest were all cull'd from the banks of that glade,
Where, watching the sunset, so often we've stray'd,
And mourn'd, as the time went, that Love had no power
To bind in his chain even one happy hour.

HOW SHALL I WOO ?

If I speak to thee in Friendship's name,
Thou think'st I speak too coldly ;
If I mention Love's devoted flame,
Thou say'st I speak too boldly.
Between these two unequal fires,
Why doom me thus to hover ?
I'm a friend, if such thy heart requires,
If more thou seek'st, a lover.
Which shall it be ? How shall I woo ?
Fair one, choose between the two.

Tho' the wings of Love will brightly play,
When first he comes to woo thee,
There's a chance that he may fly away
As fast as he flies to thee.
While Friendship, though on foot she
come,
No flights of fancy trying,
Will, therefore, oft be found at home,
When Love abroad is flying.
Which shall it be ? How shall I woo ?
Dear one, choose between the two.

If neither feeling suits thy heart,
Let's see, to please thee, whether
We may not learn some precious art
To mix their charms together ;

One feeling, still more sweet, to form
From two so sweet already—
A friendship that like love is warm,
A love like friendship steady.
Thus let it be, thus let me woo,
Dearest, thus we'll join the two.

SPRING AND AUTUMN

Ev'ry season hath its pleasures ;
Spring may boast her flow'ry prime,
Yet the vineyard's ruby treasures
Brighten Autumn's sob'rer time.
So Life's year begins and closes ;
Days, though short'ning, still can
shine ;
What though youth gave love and
roses,
Age still leaves us friends and wine.
Phillis, when she might have caught me,
All the Spring look'd coy and shy,
Yet herself in Autumn sought me,
When the flowers were all gone by.
Ah, too late ;—she found her lover
Calm and free beneath his vine,
Drinking to the Spring-time over
In his best autumnal wine.

Thus may we, as years are flying,
To their flight our pleasures suit,
Nor regret the blossoms dying,
While we still may taste the fruit.

Oh, while days like this are ours,
Where's the lip that dares repine ?
Spring may take our loves and flow'rs,
So Autumn leaves us friends and wine.

LOVE ALONE

If thou wouldst have thy charms enchant our eyes,
First win our hearts, for there thy empire lies :
Beauty in vain would mount a heartless throne,
Her Right Divine is given by Love alone.

What would the rose with all her pride be worth,
Were there no sun to call her brightness forth ?
Maidens, unlov'd, like flowers in darkness thrown,
Wait but that light, which comes from Love alone.

Fair as thy charms in yonder glass appear,
Trust not their bloom, they'll fade from year to year :
Wouldst thou they still should shine as first they shone,
Go, fix thy mirror in Love's eyes alone.

SACRED SONGS

TO

EDWARD TUTTE DALTON, ESQ.

THIS FIRST NUMBER OF SACRED SONGS IS INSCRIBED,
BY HIS SINCERE AND AFFECTIONATE FRIEND,

THOMAS MOORE.

Mayfield Cottage, Ashbourne, May, 1816.

THOU ART, OH GOD

(AIR.—UNKNOWN ¹)

'The day is thine, the night also is thine :
thou hast prepared the light and the sun.
'Thou hast set all the borders of the earth :
thou hast made summer and winter.'—Ps.
lxxiv. 16, 17.

Thou art, O God, the life and light
Of all this wondrous world we see ;
Its glow by day, its smile by night,
Are but reflections caught from Thee.
Where'er we turn, thy glories shine,
And all things fair and bright are Thine !

When Day, with farewell beam, delays
Among the op'ning clouds of Even,

¹ I have heard that this air is by the late Mrs. Sheridan. It is sung to the beautiful old words, 'I do confess thou'rt smooth and fair.'

And we can almost think we gaze
Through golden vistas into Heaven—
Those hues that make the Sun's decline
So soft, so radiant, LORD ! are Thine.

When Night, with wings of starry gloom,
O'ershadows all the earth and skies,
Like some dark, beauteous bird, whose plume

Is sparkling with unnumber'd eyes—
That sacred gloom, those fires divine,
So grand, so countless, LORD ! are Thine.

When youthful Spring around us
breathes,

Thy Spirit warms her fragrant sigh ;
And every flower the Summer wreathes
Is born beneath that kindling eye.
Where'er we turn, thy glories shine,
And all things fair and bright are Thine !

THE BIRD, LET LOOSE

(AIR.—BEETHOVEN)

THE bird, let loose in eastern skies,¹
 When hast'ning fondly home,
 Ne'er stoops to earth her wing, nor flies
 Where idle warblers roam.
 But high she shoots through air and light,
 Above all low delay,
 Where nothing earthly bounds her flight,
 Nor shadow dims her way,

So grant me, GOD, from every care
 And stain of passion free,
 Aloft, through Virtue's purer air,
 To hold my course to Thee !
 No sin to cloud, no lure to stay
 My Soul, as home she springs ;—
 Thy Sunshine on her joyful way,
 Thy Freedom in her wings !

FALLEN IS THY THRONE

(AIR.—MARTINI)

FALL'N is thy Throne, oh Israel !
 Silence is o'er thy plains ;
 Thy dwellings all lie desolate,
 Thy children weep in chains.
 Where are the dews that fed thee
 On Etham's barren shore ?
 That fire from Heaven which led thee,
 Now lights thy path no more.

LORD ! thou didst love Jerusalem—
 Once she was all thy own ;
 Her love thy fairest heritage,²
 Her power thy glory's throne.³
 Till evil came, and blighted
 Thy long-lov'd olive tree ;—⁴
 And Salem's shrines were lighted
 For other gods than Thee.

¹ The carrier-pigeon, it is well-known, flies at an elevated pitch, in order to surmount every obstacle between her and the place to which she is destined.

² 'I have left mine heritage ; I have given the dearly beloved of my soul into the hands of her enemies.'—Jer. xii. 7.

³ 'Do not disgrace the throne of thy glory.'—Jer. xiv. 21.

⁴ 'The Lord called thy name a green olive-tree ; fair, and of goodly fruit,' &c.—Jer. xi. 16.

⁵ 'For he shall be like the heath in the desert.'—Jer. xvii. 6.

⁶ 'Take away her battlements ; for they are not the Lord's.'—Jer. v. 10.

⁷ 'Therefore, behold, the days come, saith

Then sunk the star of Solyma—

Then pass'd her glory's day,
 Like heath that, in the wilderness,⁵

The wild wind whirls away.
 Silent and waste her bowers,
 Where once the mighty trod,
 And sunk those guilty towers,
 While Baal reign'd as God.

'Go'—said the LORD—'Ye Conquerors !
 Steep in her blood your swords,
 And raze to earth her battlements,⁶
 For they are not the LORD's.
 Till Zion's mournful daughter
 O'er kindred bones shall tread,
 And Hinnom's vale of slaughter⁷
 Shall hide but half her dead !'

WHO IS THE MAID ?

ST. JEROME'S LOVE⁸

(AIR.—BEETHOVEN)

Who is the Maid my spirit seeks,
 Through cold reproof and slander's
 blight ?
 Has she Love's roses on her cheeks ?
 Is hers an eye of this world's light ?
 No—wan and sunk with midnight prayer
 Are the pale looks of her I love ;
 Or if, at times, a light be there,
 Its beam is kindled from above.

I chose not her, my heart's elect,
 From those who seek their Maker's
 shrine
 In gems and garlands proudly deck'd,
 As if themselves were things divine.
 No—Heaven but faintly warms the breast
 That beats beneath a broider'd veil ;
 And she who comes in glitt'ring vest
 To mourn her frailty, still is frail.⁹

the Lord, that it shall no more be called Tophet, nor the Valley of the Son of Hinnom, but the Valley of Slaughter ; for they shall bury in Tophet till there be no place.'—Jer. vii. 32.

⁸ These lines were suggested by a passage in one of St. Jerome's Letters, replying to some calumnious remarks that had been circulated respecting his intimacy with the matron Paula :—'Numquid me vestes sericeae, nitentes gemmae, picta facies, aut auri rapuit ambitio ? Nulla fuit alia Romae matronarum, quae meam possit edomare mentem, nisi liguens atque jejuniens, fletu pene caecata.'—Epist. 'Si tibi putem.'

⁹ Οὐ γὰρ χρυσοφορεῖν τὴν δακρυνοῦσαν δεῖ.—Chrysost. Homil. 8. in Epist. ad Tim.

Not so the faded form I prize
 And love, because its bloom is gone ;
 The glory in those sainted eyes
 Is all the grace her brow puts on.
 And ne'er was Beauty's dawn so bright,
 So touching as that form's decay,
 Which, like the altar's trembling light,
 In holy lustre wastes away.

THIS WORLD IS ALL A FLEETING SHOW

(AIR.—STEVENSON)

THIS world is all a fleeting show,
 For man's illusion given ;
 The smiles of Joy, the tears of Woe,
 Deceitful shine, deceitful flow—
 There's nothing true, but Heaven !
 And false the light on Glory's plume,
 As fading hues of Even ;
 And Love and Hope, and Beauty's
 bloom,
 Are blossoms gather'd for the tomb—
 There's nothing bright, but Heaven !
 Poor wand'ers of a stormy day !
 From wave to wave we're driven,
 And Fancy's flash, and Reason's ray,
 Serve but to light the troubled way—
 There's nothing calm, but Heaven !

OH, THOU ! WHO DRY'ST THE MOURNER'S TEAR

(AIR.—HAYDN)

'He healeth the broken in heart, and bindeth
 up their wounds.'—Ps. cxlvii. 3.

OH, Thou ! who dry'st the mourner's tear,
 How dark this world would be,
 If, when deceiv'd and wounded here,
 We could not fly to Thee !
 The friends, who in our sunshine live,
 When winter comes, are flown ;
 And he who has but tears to give,
 Must weep those tears alone.
 But thou wilt heal that broken heart,
 Which, like the plants that throw
 Their fragrance from the wounded part,
 Breathes sweetness out of woe.

When joy no longer soothes or cheers,
 And even the hope that threw
 A moment's sparkle o'er our tears,
 Is dimm'd and vanish'd too,
 Oh, who would bear life's stormy doom,
 Did not thy Wing of Love
 Come, brightly wafting through the gloom
 Our Peace-branch from above ?
 Then sorrow, touch'd by Thee, grows
 bright
 With more than rapture's ray ;
 As darkness shows us worlds of light
 We never saw by day !

WEEP NOT FOR THOSE

(AIR.—AVISON)

WEEP not for those whom the veil of the tomb,
 In life's happy morning, hath hid from our eyes,
 Ere sin threw a blight o'er the spirit's young bloom,
 Or earth had profan'd what was born for the skies.
 Death chill'd the fair fountain, ere sorrow had stain'd it ;
 'Twas frozen in all the pure light of its course,
 And but sleeps till the sunshine of Heaven has unchain'd it,
 To water that Eden where first was its source.
 Weep not for those whom the veil of the tomb,
 In life's happy morning, hath hid from our eyes,
 Ere sin threw a blight o'er the spirit's young bloom,
 Or earth had profan'd what was born for the skies.

Mourn not for her, the young Bride of the Vale,¹
 Our gayest and loveliest, lost to us now,

¹ This second verse, which I wrote long after the first, alludes to the fate of a very lovely and amiable girl, the daughter of the late Colonel Bainbrigg, who was married in Ashbourne Church, October 31, 1815, and died of a fever in a few weeks after : the sound of her marriage-bells seemed scarcely out of our ears when we heard of her death. During her last

Ere life's early lustre had time to grow pale,
 And the garland of Love was yet fresh on her brow.
 Oh, then was her moment, dear spirit, for flying
 From this gloomy world, while its gloom was unknown—
 And the wild hymns she warbled so sweetly, in dying,
 Were echoed in Heaven by lips like her own.
 Weep not for her—in her spring-time she flew
 To that land where the wings of the soul are unfur'd;
 And now, like a star beyond evening's cold dew,
 Looks radiantly down on the tears of this world.

THE TURF SHALL BE MY FRAGRANT SHRINE

(AIR.—STEVENSON)

THE turf shall be my fragrant shrine ; My temple, LORD ! that Arch of thine ; My censer's breath the mountain airs, And silent thoughts my only prayers. ¹ My choir shall be the moonlight waves, When murm'ring homeward to their caves, Or when the stillness of the sea, Even more than music, breathes of Thee ! I'll seek, by day, some glade unknown, All light and silence, like thy Throne ; And the pale stars shall be, at night, The only eyes that watch my rite. Thy Heaven, on which 'tis bliss to look, Shall be my pure and shining book,	Where I shall read, in words of flame, The glories of thy wondrous name. I'll read thy anger in the rack That clouds awhile the day-beam's track ; Thy mercy in the azure hue Of sunny brightness, breaking through. There's nothing bright, above, below, From flowers that bloom to stars that glow, But in its light my soul can see Some feature of thy Deity There's nothing dark, below, above, But in its gloom I trace thy Love, And meekly wait that moment, when Thy touch shall turn all bright again !

SOUND THE LOUD TIMBREL

MIRIAM'S SONG

(AIR.—AVISON²)

'And Miriam, the Prophetess, the sister of Aaron, took a timbrel in her hand ; and all the women went out after her with timbrels and with dances.'—Exod. xv. 20.

SOUND the loud Timbrel o'er Egypt's dark sea !
 JEHOVAH has triumph'd—his people are free.
 Sing—for the pride of the Tyrant is broken,
 His chariots, his horsemen, all splendid and brave—
 How vain was their boast, for the LORD hath but spoken,
 And chariots and horsemen are sunk in the wave.
 Sound the loud Timbrel o'er Egypt's dark sea ;
 JEHOVAH has triumph'd—his people are free.

delirium she sung several hymns, in a voice even clearer and sweeter than usual, and among them were some from the present collection, (particularly, 'There's nothing bright but Heaven,') which this very interesting girl had often heard me sing during the summer.

² I have so much altered the character of this air, which is from the beginning of one of Avison's old-fashioned concertos, that, without this acknowledgment, it could hardly, I think, be recognized.

Praise to the Conqueror, praise to the LORD !
 His word was our arrow, his breath was our sword.—
 Who shall return to tell Egypt the story
 Of those she sent forth in the hour of her pride ?
 For the LORD hath look'd out from his pillar of glory,¹
 And all her brave thousands are dash'd in the tide.
 Sound the loud Timbrel o'er Egypt's dark sea ;
 JEHOVAH has triumph'd—his people are free !

GO, LET ME WEEP

(AIR.—STEVENS ON)

Go, let me weep—there's bliss in tears, When he who sheds them inly feels Some ling'ring stain of early years Effac'd by every drop that steals. The fruitless showers of worldly woe Fall dark to earth and never rise ; While tears that from repentance flow, In bright exhalament reach the skies. Go, let me weep.	Leave me to sigh o'er hours that flew More idly than the summer's wind, And, while they pass'd, a fragrance threw, But left no trace of sweets behind.— The warmest sigh that pleasure heaves Is cold, is faint to those that swell The heart, where pure repentance grieves O'er hours of pleasure, lov'd too well. Leave me to sigh.

COME NOT, OH LORD

(AIR.—HAYDN)

COME not, oh LORD, in the dread robe of splendour
 Thou wor'st on the Mount, in the day of thine ire ;
 Come veil'd in those shadows, deep, awful, but tender,
 Which Mercy flings over thy features of fire !
 LORD, thou rememb'rest the night, when thy Nation²
 Stood fronting her Foe by the red-rolling stream ;
 O'er Egypt thy pillar shed dark desolation,
 While Israel bask'd all the night in its beam.
 So, when the dread clouds of anger enfold Thee,
 From us, in thy mercy, the dark side remove ;
 While shrouded in terrors the guilty behold Thee,
 Oh, turn upon us the mild light of thy Love !

WERE NOT THE SINFUL MARY'S TEARS

(AIR.—STEVENS ON)

WERE not the sinful Mary's tears An offering worthy Heaven, When, o'er the faults of former years, She wept—and was forgiven ? When, bringing every balmy sweet Her day of luxury stor'd, She o'er her Saviour's hallow'd feet The precious odours pour'd ;—	And wip'd them with that golden hair, Where once the diamond shone ; Though now those gems of grief were there Which shine for GOD alone ! Were not those sweets, so humbly shed— That hair—those weeping eyes— And the sunk heart, that inly bled— Heaven's noblest sacrifice ?
--	---

¹ 'And it came to pass, that, in the morning watch, the Lord looked unto the host of the Egyptians, through the pillar of fire and of the cloud, and troubled the host of the Egyptians.'—Exod. xiv. 24.

² 'And it came between the camp of the Egyptians and the camp of Israel ; and it was a cloud and darkness to them, but it gave light by night to these.'—Exod. xiv. 20.

Thou, that hast slept in error's sleep,
Oh, wouldest thou wake in Heaven,
Like Mary kneel, like Mary weep,
'Love much'¹ and be forgiven!

AS DOWN IN THE SUNLESS RETREATS

(AIR.—HAYDN)

As down in the sunless retreats of the Ocean,
Sweet flowers are springing no mortal
can see,
So, deep in my soul the still prayer of devotion,
Unheard by the world, rises silent to
Thee,
My God! silent, to Thee—
Pure, warm, silent, to Thee.

As still to the star of its worship, though clouded,
The needle points faithfully o'er the dim sea,
So, dark as I roam, in this wintry world
shrouded,
The hope of my spirit turns trembling
to Thee,
My God! trembling, to Thee—
True, fond, trembling, to Thee.

BUT WHO SHALL SEE

(AIR.—STEVENSON)

But who shall see the glorious day
When, thron'd on Zion's brow,
The LORD shall rend that veil away
Which hides the nations now?²

¹ 'Her sins, which are many, are forgiven; for she loved much.'—Luke vii. 47.

² 'And he will destroy, in this mountain, the face of the covering cast over all people, and the veil that is spread over all nations.'—Is. xxv. 7.

³ 'The rebuke of his people shall he take away from off all the earth.'—Is. xxv. 8.

⁴ 'And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; . . . neither shall there be any more pain.'—Rev. xxi. 4.

⁵ 'And he that sat upon the throne said, Behold, I make all things new.'—Rev. xxi. 4.

⁶ 'And whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely.'—Rev. xxii. 17.

⁷ 'The Scriptures having declared that the Temple of Jerusalem was a type of the Messiah, it is natural to conclude that the Palms, which

When earth no more beneath the fear
Of his rebuke shall lie;³
When pain shall cease, and every tear
Be wip'd from ev'ry eye.⁴

Then, Judah, thou no more shalt mourn
Beneath the heathen's chain;
Thy days of splendour shall return,
And all be new again.⁵
The Fount of Life shall then be quaff'd
In peace, by all who come;⁶
And every wind that blows shall waft
Some long-lost exile home.

ALMIGHTY GOD!

CHORUS OF PRIESTS

(AIR.—MOZART)

ALMIGHTY GOD! when round thy shrine
The Palm-tree's heavenly branch we twine,⁷

(Emblem of Life's eternal ray,
And Love that 'fadeth not away,')
We bless the flowers, expanded all,⁸
We bless the leaves that never fall,
And trembling say,—'In Eden thus
The Tree of Life may flower for us!'

When round thy Cherubs—smiling calm,
Without their flames⁹—we wreath the Palm.

Oh GOD! we feel the emblem true—
Thy Mercy is eternal too.
Those Cherubs, with their smiling eyes,
That crown of Palm which never dies,
Are but the types of Thee above—
Eternal Life, and Peace, and Love!

made so conspicuous a figure in that structure, represented that Life and Immortality which were brought to light by the Gospel.—Observations on the Palm, as a Sacred Emblem, by W. Tighe.

⁸ 'And he carved all the walls of the house round about with carved figures of cherubims, and palm-trees, and open flowers.'—1 Kings vi. 29.

⁹ 'When the passover of the tabernacles was revealed to the great lawgiver in the mount, then the cherubic images which appeared in that structure were no longer surrounded by flames; for the tabernacle was a type of the dispensation of mercy, by which JEROVAH confirmed his gracious covenant to redeem mankind.'—Observations on the Palm.

OH FAIR! OH PUREST!

SAINT AUGUSTINE TO HIS SISTER¹

(AIR.—MOORE)

OH fair! oh purest! be thou the dove
That flies alone to some sunny grove,
And lives unseen, and bathes her wing,
All vestal white, in the limpid spring.
There, if the hov'ring hawk be near,
That limpid spring in its mirror clear,
Reflects him, ere he reach his prey,
And warns the timorous bird away.

Be thou this dove;

Fairest, purest, be thou this dove.

The sacred pages of God's own book
Shall be the spring, the eternal brook,
In whose holy mirror, night and day,
Thou'lt study Heaven's reflected ray;—
And should the foes of virtue dare,
With gloomy wing, to seek thee there,
Thou wilt see how dark their shadows lie
Between Heaven and thee, and trembling fly!

Be thou that dove;

Fairest, purest, be thou that dove.

ANGEL OF CHARITY

(AIR.—HANDEL)

ANGEL of Charity, who, from above,
Comest to dwell a pilgrim here,
Thy voice is music, thy smile is love,
And Pity's soul is in thy tear.

When on the shrine of God were laid
First-fruits of all most good and fair,
That ever bloom'd in Eden's shade,
Thine was the holiest offering there.

Hope and her sister, Faith, were given
But as our guides to yonder sky;
Soon as they reach the verge of heaven,
There, lost in perfect bliss, they die.*
But, long as Love, Almighty Love,
Shall on his throne of thrones abide,
Thou, Charity, shall dwell above,
Smiling for ever by His side!

BEHOLD THE SUN

(AIR.—LORD MORNINGTON)

BEHOLD the Sun, how bright
From yonder East he springs,
As if the soul of life and light
Were breathing from his wings.

So bright the Gospel broke
Upon the souls of men;
So fresh the dreaming world awoke
In Truth's full radiance then.

Before yon Sun arose,
Stars cluster'd through the sky—
But oh, how dim! how pale were those,
To His one burning eye!

So Truth lent many a ray,
To bless the Pagan's night—
But, LORD, how weak, how cold were they
To Thy One glorious Light!

LORD, WHO SHALL BEAR THAT DAY

(AIR.—DR. BOYCE)

LORD, who shall bear that day, so dread, so splendid,

When we shall see thy Angel, hov'ring o'er
This sinful world, with hand to heav'n extended,
And hear him swear by Thee that Time's no more?²
When Earth shall feel thy fast consuming ray—
Who, Mighty God, oh who shall bear that day?

¹ In St. Augustine's Treatise upon the advantages of a solitary life, addressed to his sister, there is the following fanciful passage, from which, the reader will perceive, the thought of this song was taken:—'Te, soror, nunquam nolo esse securam, sed timere semperque tuam fragilitatem habere suspectam, ad instar pavidæ columbæ frequentare rivos aquarum et quasi in speculo accipitris cernere supervolantis effigiem et cavere. Rivaquarum sententiae sunt scripturarum, quae de limpissimo sapientiae fonte profluentes,' &c. &c.—De Vit. Eremit. ad Sororem.

² 'Then Faith shall fail, and holy Hope shall die,

One lost in certainty, and one in joy.'—

Prior.

³ 'And the angel which I saw stand upon the sea and upon the earth, lifted up his hand to heaven, and swore by Him that liveth for ever and ever, . . . that there should be time no longer.'—Rev. x. 5, 6.

When through the world thy awful call hath sounded—
 'Wake, all ye Dead, to judgment wake, ye Dead!' ¹
 And from the clouds, by seraph eyes surrounded,
 The Saviour shall put forth his radiant head; ²
 While Earth and Heav'n before Him pass away— ³
 Who, Mighty God, oh who shall bear that day?

When, with a glance, th' Eternal Judge shall sever
 Earth's evil spirits from the pure and bright,
 And say to those, 'Depart from me for ever!' ⁴
 To these, 'Come, dwell with me in endless light!' ⁵
 When each and all in silence take their way—
 Who, Mighty God, oh who shall bear that day?

OH, TEACH ME TO LOVE THEE

(AIR.—HAYDN)

OH, teach me to love Thee, to feel what thou art,
 Till, fill'd with the one sacred image, my heart
 Shall all other passions disown;
 Like some pure temple, that shines apart,
 Reserv'd for Thy worship alone.

In joy and in sorrow, through praise and through blame,
 Thus still let me, living and dying the same,
 In Thy service bloom and decay—
 Like some lone altar, whose votive flame
 In holiness wasteth away.

Though born in this desert, and doom'd by my birth
 To pain and affliction, to darkness and dearth,
 On Thee let my spirit rely—
 Like some rude dial, that, fix'd on earth,
 Still looks for its light from the sky.

WEEP, CHILDREN OF ISRAEL

(AIR.—STEVENSON)

WEEP, weep for him, the Man of God— ⁵
 In yonder vale he sunk to rest;
 But none of earth can point the sod ⁶
 That flowers above his sacred breast.
 Weep, children of Israel, weep!

His doctrine fell like Heaven's rain, ⁷
 His words refresh'd like Heaven's dew—
 Oh, ne'er shall Israel see again
 A Chief, to God and her so true.
 Weep, children of Israel, weep!

¹ 'Awake, ye Dead, and come to judgment.'

² 'They shall see the Son of Man coming in the clouds of heaven—and all the angels with him.'—Matt. xxiv. 30, and xxv. 31.

³ 'From whose face the earth and the heaven fled away.'—Rev. xx. 11.

⁴ 'And before Him shall be gathered all nations, and He shall separate them one from another....'

⁵ 'Then shall the King say unto them on his right hand, Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you, &c.'

⁶ 'Then shall He say also unto them on the left hand, Depart from me, ye cursed, &c.'

⁷ 'And these shall go away into everlasting punishment; but the righteous into life eternal.'—Matt. xxv. 32, et seq.

⁸ 'And the children of Israel wept for Moses in the plains of Moab.'—Deut. xxxiv. 8.

⁹ 'And he buried him in a valley in the land of Moab; . . . but no man knoweth of his sepulchre unto this day.'—Ib. ver. 6.

¹⁰ 'My doctrine shall drop as the rain, my speech shall distil as the dew.'—Moses' Song, Deut. xxxii. 2.

Remember ye his parting gaze,
His farewell song by Jordan's tide,
When, full of glory and of days,
He saw the promis'd land—and died.¹
Weep, children of Israel, weep !

Yet died he not as men who sink,
Before our eyes, to soulless clay ;
But, chang'd to spirit, like a wink
Of summer lightning, pass'd away.²
Weep, children of Israel, weep !

LIKE MORNING, WHEN HER EARLY BREEZE

(AIR.—BEETHOVEN)

LIKE morning, when her early breeze
Breaks up the surface of the seas,
That, in those furrows, dark with night,
Her hand may sow the seeds of light—
Thy Grace can send its breathings o'er
The Spirit, dark and lost before,
And, fresh'ning all its depths, prepare
For Truth divine to enter there.

Till David touch'd his sacred lyre,
In silence lay th' unbreathing wire ;
But when he swept its chords along,
Ev'n Angels stoop'd to hear that song.
So sleeps the soul, till Thou, oh LORD,
Shalt deign to touch its lifeless chord—
Till, wak'd by Thee, its breath shall rise
In music, worthy of the skies !

COME, YE DISCONSOLATE

(AIR.—GERMAN)

COME, ye disconsolate, where'er you languish,
Come, at God's altar fervently kneel ;
Here bring your wounded hearts, here tell your anguish—
Earth has no sorrow that Heaven cannot heal.

Joy of the desolate, Light of the straying,
Hope, when all others die, fadeless and pure,
Here speaks the Comforter, in God's name saying—
'Earth has no sorrow that Heaven cannot cure.'

Go, ask the infidel, what boon he brings us,
What charm for aching hearts he can reveal,
Sweet as that heavenly promise Hope sings us—
'Earth has no sorrow that God cannot heal.'

AWAKE, ARISE, THY LIGHT IS COME

(AIR.—STEVENSON)

AWAKE, arise, thy light is come ;³
The nations, that before outshone
thee
Now at thy feet lie dark and dumb—
The glory of the Lord is on thee !
Arise—the Gentiles to thy ray,
From ev'ry nook of earth shall cluster ;

And kings and princes haste to pay
Their homage to thy rising lustre.⁴
Lift up thine eyes around, and see,
O'er foreign fields, o'er farthest waters,
Thy exil'd sons return to thee,
To thee return thy home-sick daughters.⁵

¹ 'I have caused thee to see it with thine eyes, but thou shalt not go over thither.'—Deut. xxxiv. 4.

² 'As he was going to embrace Eleazer and Joshua, and was still discoursing with them, a cloud stood over him on the sudden, and he disappeared in a certain valley, although he wrote in the Holy Books that he died, which was done out of fear, lest they should venture to say that, because of his extraordinary virtue,

he went to God.'—Josephus, book iv. chap. viii.

³ 'Arise, shine ; for thy light is come, and the glory of the LORD is risen upon thee.'—Is. lx.

⁴ 'And the Gentiles shall come to thy light, and kings to the brightness of thy rising'—Ib.

⁵ 'Lift up thine eyes round about, and see ; all they gather themselves together, they come to thee : thy sons shall come from afar, and thy daughters shall be nursed at thy side.'—Ib.

And camels rich, from Midian's tents,
Shall lay their treasures down before
thee ;

And Saba bring her gold and scents,
To fill thy air and sparkle o'er thee.¹

See, who are these that, like a cloud,²
Are gathering from all earth's dominions,

Like doves, long absent, when allow'd
Homeward to shoot their trembling pinions.

Surely the isles shall wait for me,³
The ships of Tarshish round will hover,
To bring thy sons across the sea,
And waft their gold and silver over.

And Lebanon thy pomp shall grace—⁴
The fir, the pine, the palm victorious
Shall beautify our Holy Place,
And make the ground I tread on glorious.

No more shall Discord haunt thy ways,⁵

Nor ruin waste thy cheerless nation,
But thou shalt call thy portals, Praise ;
And thou shalt name thy walls, Salvation.

The sun no more shall make thee bright,⁶ Nor moon shall lend her lustre to
thee ;

But GOD, Himself, shall be thy Light,
And flash eternal glory through thee.

Thy sun shall never more go down ;
A ray, from Heav'n itself descended,
Shall light thy everlasting crown—
Thy days of mourning all are ended.⁷

My own, elect, and righteous Land !
The Branch, for ever green and vernal,
Which I have planted with this hand—
Live thou shalt in Life Eternal.⁸

THERE IS A BLEAK DESERT

(AIR.—CRESCENTINI)

THERE is a bleak Desert, where daylight grows weary
Of wasting its smile on a region so dreary—

What may that desert be ?

'Tis Life, cheerless Life, where the few joys that come
Are lost like that daylight, for 'tis not their home.

There is a lone Pilgrim, before whose faint eyes
The water he pants for but sparkles and flies—

Who may that Pilgrim be ?

'Tis Man, hapless Man, through this life tempted on
By fair shining hopes, that in shining are gone.

There is a bright Fountain, through that Desert stealing
To pure lips alone its refreshment revealing—

What may that Fountain be ?

'Tis Truth, holy Truth, that, like springs under ground,
By the gifted of Heaven alone can be found.⁹

¹ 'The multitude of camels shall cover thee ; the dromedaries of Midian and Ephah ; all they from Sheba shall come ; they shall bring gold and incense.'—Is. lx.

² 'Who are these that fly as a cloud, and as the doves to their windows ?'—Ib.

³ 'Surely the isles shall wait for me, and the ships of Tarshish first, to bring thy sons from far, their silver and their gold with them.'—Ib.

⁴ 'The glory of Lebanon shall come unto thee ; the fir-tree, the pine-tree, and the box together, to beautify the place of my sanctuary ; and I will make the place of my feet glorious.'—Ib.

⁵ 'Violence shall no more be heard in thy land, wasting nor destruction within thy borders ; but thou shalt call thy walls, Salvation, and thy gates, Praise.'—Ib.

⁶ 'Thy sun shall be no more thy light by day ; neither for brightness shall the moon give light unto thee ; but the Lord shall be unto thee an everlasting light, and thy God thy glory.'—Ib.

⁷ 'Thy sun shall no more go down ; . . . for the Lord shall be thine everlasting light, and the days of thy mourning shall be ended.'—Ib.

⁸ 'Thy people also shall be all righteous ; they shall inherit the land for ever, the branch of my planting, the work of my hands.'—Ib.

⁹ In singing, the following line had better be adopted,—

'Can but by the gifted of Heaven be found.'

There is a fair Spirit, whose wand hath the spell
To point where those waters in secrecy dwell—

Who may that Spirit be ?

'Tis Faith, humble Faith, who hath learn'd that, where'er
Her wand bends to worship, the Truth must be there !

SINCE FIRST THY WORD

(AIR—NICHOLAS FREEMAN)

SINCE first Thy Word awak'd my heart,
Like new life dawning o'er me,
Where'er I turn mine eyes, Thou art,
All light and love before me.
Nought else I feel, or hear or see—
All bonds of earth I sever—
Thee, O God, and only Thee
I live for, now and ever.

Like him whose fetters dropp'd away
When light shone o'er his prison,¹
My spirit, touch'd by Mercy's ray,
Hath from her chains arisen.
And shall a soul Thou bidst be free,
Return to bondage ?—never !
Thee, O God, and only Thee
I live for, now and ever.

HARK ! 'TIS THE BREEZE

(AIR.—ROUSSEAU.)

Hark ! 'tis the breeze of twilight calling
Earth's weary children to repose ;
While, round the couch of Nature fall-
ing,

Gently the night's soft curtains close.
Soon o'er a world, in sleep reclining,
Numberless stars, through yonder
dark,

Shall look, like eyes of Cherubs shining
From out the veils that hid the Ark.

Guard us, oh Thou, who never sleepest,
Thou who, in silence thron'd above,
Throughout all time, unwearied, keepest
Thy watch of Glory, Pow'r, and Love.
Grant that, beneath thine eye, securely,
Our souls, awhile from life withdrawn,

May, in their darkness, stilly, purely,
Like 'sealed fountains,' rest till dawn.

¹ 'And, behold, the angel of the Lord came upon him, and a light shined in the prison, . . . and his chains fell off from his hands.'—Acts xii. 7.

WHERE IS YOUR DWELLING, YE SAINTED ?

(AIR.—HASSE)

WHERE is your dwelling, ye Sainted ?
Through what Elysium more bright
Than fancy or hope ever painted,
Walk ye in glory and light ?
Who the same kingdom inherits ?
Breathes there a soul that may dare
Look to that world of Spirits,
Or hope to dwell with you there ?

Sages ! who, ev'n in exploring
Nature through all her bright ways,
Went, like the Seraphs, adoring,
And veil'd your eyes in the blaze—
Martyrs ! who left for our reaping
Truths you had sown in your blood—
Sinners ! whom long years of weeping
Chasten'd from evil to good—

Maidens ! who, like the young Crescent,
Turning away your pale brows
From earth, and the light of the Present,
Look'd to your Heavenly Spouse—
Say, through what region enchanted,
Walk ye, in Heaven's sweet air ?
Say, to what spirits 'tis granted,
Bright souls, to dwell with you there ?

HOW LIGHTLY MOUNTS THE MUSE'S WING

(AIR.—ANONYMOUS)

How lightly mounts the Muse's wing,
Whose theme is in the skies—
Like morning larks, that sweeter siag
The nearer Heav'n they rise.

Though Love his magic lyre may tune,
Yet ah, the flow'rs he round it wreathes
Were pluck'd beneath pale Passion's
moon,

Whose madness in their odour breathes.

How purer far the sacred lute,
Round which Devotion ties
Sweet flow'rs that turn to heav'nly fruit,
And palm that never dies.

Though War's high-sounding harp may be Most welcome to the hero's ears, Alas, his chords of victory Are wet, all o'er, with human tears.	How far more sweet their numbers run, Who hymn, like Saints above, No victor, but th' Eternal One, No trophies but of Love !

GO FORTH TO THE MOUNT

(AIR.—STEVENSON)

Go forth to the Mount—bring the olive-branch home,¹
And rejoice, for the day of our Freedom is come !
From that time,² when the moon upon Ajalon's vale,
Looking motionless down,³ saw the kings of the earth,
In the presence of God's mighty Champion, grow pale—
Oh, never had Judah an hour of such mirth !
Go forth to the Mount—bring the olive-branch home,
And rejoice, for the day of our Freedom is come !

Bring myrtle and palm—bring the boughs of each tree
That's worthy to wave o'er the tents of the Free.⁴
From that day, when the footsteps of Israel shone,
With a light not their own, through the Jordan's deep tide,
Whose waters shrunk back as the Ark glided on—⁵
Oh, never had Judah an hour of such pride !
Go forth to the Mount—bring the olive-branch home,
And rejoice, for the day of our Freedom is come !

IS IT NOT SWEET TO THINK, HEREAFTER

(AIR.—HAYDN)

Is it not sweet to think, hereafter, When the Spirit leaves this sphere, Love, with deathless wing, shall waft her To those she long hath mourn'd for here ?	Hope still lifts her radiant finger Pointing to th' eternal Home, Upon whose portal yet they linger, Looking back for us to come.
Hearts, from which 'twas death to sever, Eyes, this world can ne'er restore, There, as warm, as bright as ever, Shall meet us and be lost no more.	Alas, alas—doth Hope deceive us ? Shall friendship—love—shall all those ties That bind a moment, and then leave us, Be found again where nothing dies ?
When wearily we wander, asking Of earth and heav'n, where are they, Beneath whose smile we once lay bask- ing, Blest, and thinking bliss would stay ?	Oh, if no other boon were given, To keep our hearts from wrong and stain, Who would not try to win a Heaven Where all we love shall live again ?

¹ 'And that they should publish and proclaim in all their cities, and in Jerusalem, saying,
Go forth unto the mount, and fetch olive-branches,' &c. &c.—Neh. viii. 15.

² 'For since the days of Jeshua the son of Nun unto that day had not the children of Israel done so : and there was very great gladness.'—Neh. viii. 17.

³ 'Sun, stand thou still upon Gibeon ; and thou, Moon, in the valley of Ajalon.'—Josh. x. 12.

⁴ 'Fetch olive-branches, and pine-branches, and myrtle-branches, and palm-branches, and branches of thick trees, to make booths.'—Neh.
viii. 15.

⁵ 'And the priests that bare the ark of the covenant of the Lord stood firm on dry ground in the midst of Jordan, and all the Israelites passed over on dry ground.'—Josh. iii. 17.

WAR AGAINST BABYLON

(AIR.—NOVELLO)

'WAR against Babylon!' shout we around,¹ Be our banner through earth unfurl'd; Rise up, ye nations, ye kings, at the sound—² 'War against Babylon!' shout through the world! Oh thou, that dwellest on many waters,³ Thy day of pride is ended now; And the dark curse of Israel's daughters Breaks, like a thunder-cloud, over thy brow! War, war, war against Babylon!	Make bright the arrows, and gather the shields,⁴ Set the standard of God on high; Swarm we, like locusts, o'er all her fields, 'Zion' our watchword, and 'ven- geance' our cry! Woe! woe!—the time of thy visitation⁵ Is come, proud Land, thy doom is cast— And the black surge of desolation Sweeps o'er thy guilty head, at last! War, war, war against Babylon!

THE SUMMER FÊTE

TO THE

HONOURABLE MRS. NORTON

FOR the groundwork of the following Poem I am indebted to a memorable Fête, given some years since, at Boyle Farm, the seat of the late Lord Henry Fitzgerald. In commemoration of that evening—of which the lady to whom these pages are inscribed was, I well recollect, one of the most distinguished ornaments—I was induced at the time to write some verses, which were afterwards, however, thrown aside unfinished, on my discovering that the same task had been undertaken by a noble poet,⁶ whose playful and happy jeu-d'esprit on the subject has since been published. It was but lately, that, on finding the fragments of my own sketch among my papers, I thought of founding on them such a description of an imaginary Fête as might furnish me with situations for the introduction of music.

Such is the origin and object of the following Poem, and to Mrs. NORTON it is, with every feeling of admiration and regard, inscribed by her father's warmly attached friend, Sloperton Cottage, November, 1831.

THOMAS MOORE.

THE SUMMER FÊTE

'WHERE are ye now, ye summer days, That once inspir'd the poet's lays? Blest time! ere England's nymphs and swains, For lack of sunbeams, took to coals— Summers of light, undimm'd by rains, Whose only mocking trace remains In watering-pots and parasols.'	Thus spoke a young Patrician maid, As, on the morning of that Fête Which bards unborn shall celebrate, ¹⁰ She backward drew her curtain's shade, And, closing one half-dazzled eye, Peep'd with the other at the sky— Th' important sky, whose light or gloom Was to decide, this day, the doom

² 'Set ye up a standard in the land, blow the trumpet among the nations, prepare the nations against her, call together against her the kingdoms,' &c. &c.—Jer. li. 27.

³ 'Oh thou that dwellest upon many waters,

... thine end is come.'—Jer. li. 13.

⁴ 'Make bright the arrows; gather the shields ... set up the standard upon the walls of Babylon.'—Jer. li. 11, 12.

⁵ 'Woe unto them! for their day is come, the time of their visitation!'—Jer. l. 27.

⁶ Lord Francis Egerton.

Of some few hundred beauties, wits,
Blues, Dandies, Swains, and Exquisites.

Faint were her hopes ; for June had now
Set in with all his usual rigour !
Young Zephyr yet scarce knowing how
To nurse a bud, or fan a bough, 21

But Eurys in perpetual vigour ;
And, such the biting summer air,
That she, thenymph now nestling there—
Snug as her own bright gems recline,
At night, within their cotton shrine—
Had, more than once, been caught of late

Kneeling before her blazing grate,
Like a young worshipper of fire,
With hands uplifted to the flame, 30
Whose glow, as if to woo them nigher,
Through the white fingers flushing
came.

But oh ! the light, th' unhop'd-for light'
That now illum'd this morning's
heaven !

Up sprung Iânthe at the sight,
Though—hark !—the clocks but strike
eleven,

And rarely did the nymph surprise
Mankind so early with her eyes.

Who now will say that England's sun (Like England's self, these spend-thrif days) 40

His stock of wealth hath near outrun,
And must retrench his golden rays—
Pay for the pride of sunbeams past,
And to mere moonshine come at last ?

' Calumnious thought ! ' Iânthe cries,
While coming mirth lit up each glance,
And, prescient of the ball, her eyes
Already had begun to dance :

For brighter sun than that which now
Sparkled o'er London's spires and towers, 50

Had never bent from heaven his brow
To kiss Firenze's City of Flowers.
What must it be—if thus so fair
Mid the smok'd groves of Grosvenor
Square—

What must it be where Thames is seen
Gliding between his banks of green,
While rival villas, on each side,
Peep from their bowers to woo his tide,
And, like a Turk between two rows
Of Harem beauties, on he goes— 60

A lover, lov'd for ev'n the grace
With which he slides from their embrace.

In one of those enchanted domes,
One, the most flow'ry, cool, and bright
Of all by which that river roams,
The Fête is to be held to-night—
That Fête already link'd to fame,

Whose cards, in many a fair one's sight
(When look'd for long, at last they came,) Seem'd circled with a fairy light ;— 70
That Fête to which the cull, the flower
Of England's beauty, rank and power,
From the young spinster just come out,
To the old Premier, too long in—

From legs of far-descended gout,
To the last new-mustachio'd chin—
All were convoked by Fashion's spells
To the small circle where she dwells,
Collecting nightly, to allure us,
Live atoms, which, together hurl'd, 80
She, like another Epicurus,
Sets dancing thus, and calls ' the World.'

Behold how busy in those bowers
(Like May-flies, in and out of flowers,)
The countless menials swarming run,
To furnish forth, ere set of sun,
The banquet-table richly laid
Beneath yon awning's lengthen'd shade,
Where fruits shall tempt, and wines
entice, 89

And Luxury's self, at Gunter's call,
Breathe from her summer-throne of ice
A spirit of coolness over all.

And now th' important hour drew nigh,
When, 'neath the flush of evening's sky,
The west end ' world ' for mirth left loose,
And mov'd, as he of Syracuse¹
Ne'er dreamt of moving worlds, by force
Of four-horse power, had all combin'd
Through Grosvenor Gate to speed their course,

Leaving that portion of mankind, 100
Whom they call ' Nobody,' behind ;—
No star for London's feasts to-day,
No moon of beauty, new this May,
To lend the night her crescent ray ;—
Nothing, in short, for ear or eye,
But veteran belles, and wits gone by,
The relics of a past beau-monde,
A world, like Cuvier's, long dethron'd !

¹ Archimedes.

Ev'n Parliament this evening nods
Beneath th' harangues of minor gods,

On half its usual opiate's share ; 111
The great dispensers of repose,
The first-rate furnishers of prose
Being all call'd to—prose elsewhere.

Soon as through Grosvenor's lordly square—¹

That last impregnable redoubt,
Where, guarded with Patrician care,
Primeval Error still holds out—
Where never gleam of gas must dare
'Gainst ancient Darkness to revolt,
Nor smooth Macadam hope to spare 121

The dowagers one single jolt ;—
Where, far too stately and sublime
To profit by the lights of time,
Let Intellect march how it will,
They stick to oil and watchmen still :—
Soon as through that illustrious square

The first epistolary bell,
Sounding by fits upon the air,
Of parting pennies rung the knell ; 130

Warn'd by that telltale of the hours,
And by the daylight's westering beam,
The young Iânthe, who, with flowers
Half-crown'd, had sat in idle dream
Before her glass, scarce knowing where
Her fingers ro' d through that brighthead,
While, all capriciously, she now
Dislodg'd some curl from her white
brow,

And now again replac'd it there ;—
As though her task was meant to be 140
One endless change of ministry—
A routing-up of Loves and Graces,
But to plant others in their places.

Meanwhile—what strain is that which floats

Through the small boudoir near—like notes

Of some young bird, its task repeating
For the next linnet music-meeting ?
A voice it was, whose gentle sounds
Still kept a modest octave's bounds,
Nor yet had ventur'd to exalt 150
Its rash ambition to B alt,

¹ I am not certain whether the Dowagers of this Square have yet yielded to the innovations of Gas and Police, but, at the time when the above lines were written, they still obstinately persevered in their old régime ; and would not suffer themselves to be either well guarded or well lighted.

That point towards which when ladies
rise,

The wise man takes his hat and—flies.
Tones of a harp, too, gently play'd,
Came with this youthful voice communing,

Tones true, for once, without the aid
Of that infictive process, tuning—
A process which must oft have given
Poor Milton's ears a deadly wound ;
So pleas'd, among the joys of Heav'n,
He specifies 'harps ever tun'd.' ² 161
She who now sung this gentle strain
Was our young nymph's still younger sister—

Scarce ready yet for Fashion's train
In their light legions to enlist her,
But counted on, as sure to bring
Her force into the field next spring.

The song she thus, like Jubal's shell,
Gave forth 'so sweetly and so well,'
Was one in Morning Post much fam'd,
From a divine collection, nam'd, 171

'Songs of the toilet'—every Lay
Taking for subject of its Muse,

Some branch of feminine array,
Some item, with full scope, to choose,
From diamonds down to dancing shoes ;
From the last hat that Herbault's hands

Bequeath'd to an admiring world,
Down to the latest flounce that stands
Like Jacob's Ladder—or expands 180
Far forth, tempestuously unfurl'd.

Speaking of one of these new Lays,
The Morning Post thus sweetly says :—
'Not all that breathes from Bishop's lyre,

That Barnett dreams, or Cooke conceives,

Can match for sweetness, strength, or fire,
This fine Cantata upon Sleeves.

The very notes themselves reveal
The cut of each new sleeve so well ;

A flat betrays the Imbécilles,³ 190
Light fugues the flying lappets tell ;
While rich cathedral chords awake

Our homage for the Manches d'Evêque.'

² ——— 'their golden harps they took—
Harps ever tun'd.' Paradise Lost, book iii.

³ The name given to those large sleeves that hang loosely.

'Twas the first op'ning song—the Lay
Of all least deep in toilet-lore,
That the young nymph, to while away
The tiring-hour, thus warbled o'er :—

SONG

ARRAY thee, love, array thee, love,
In all thy best array thee ;
The sun's below—the moon's above—
And Night and Bliss obey thee. 201
Put on thee all that's bright and rare,
The zone, the wreath, the gem,
Not so much gracing charms so fair,
As borrowing grace from them.
Array thee, love, array thee, love,
In all that's bright array thee ;
The sun's below—the moon's above—
And Night and Bliss obey thee.

Put on the plumes thy lover gave, 210
The plumes, that, proudly dancing,
Proclaim to all, where'er they wave,
Victorious eyes advancing.
Bring forth the robe, whose hue of
heaven
From thee derives such light,
That Iris would give all her seven
To boast but one so bright.
Array thee, love, array thee, love, 218
&c. &c. &c.

Now hie thee, love, now hie thee, love,
Through Pleasure's circles hie thee,
And hearts, where'er thy footsteps move,
Will beat, when they come nigh thee.
Thy every word shall be a spell,
Thy every look a ray,
And tracks of wond'ring eyes shall tell,
The glory of thy way !
Now hie thee, love, now hie thee, love,
Through Pleasure's circles hie thee,
And hearts, where'er thy footsteps move,
Shall beat when they come nigh thee.

Now in his Palace of the West, 232
Sinking to slumber, the bright Day,
Like a tir'd monarch fann'd to rest,
Mid the cool airs of Evening lay ;
While round his couch's golden rim
The gaudy clouds, like courtiers, crept—
Struggling each other's light to dim,
And catch his last smile e'er he slept.

How gay, as o'er the gliding Thames 240
The golden eve its lustre pour'd, Shone out the high-born knights and dames

Now group'd around that festal board;
A living mass of plumes and flowers,
As though they'd robb'd both birds and
bowers—

A peopled rainbow, swarming through
With habitants of every hue ;
While, as the sparkling juice of France
High in the crystal brimmers flow'd,
Each sunset ray that mix'd by chance
With the wine's sparkles, show'd 251
How sunbeams may be taught to dance.

If not in written form exprest,
'Twas known, at least, to every guest,
That, though not bidden to parade
Their scenic powers in masquerade,
(A pastime little found to thrive
In the bleak fog of England's skies,
Where wit's the thing we best contrive,
As masqueraders, to disguise.) 260
It yet was hop'd—and well that hope
Was answer'd by the young and gay—
That, in the toilet's task to-day,
Fancy should take her wildest scope ;—
That the rapt milliner should be
Let loose through fields of poesy,
The tailor, in inventive trance,
Up to the heights of Epic clamber,
And all the regions of Romance
Be ransack'd by the femme-de-chambre.

Accordingly, with gay Sultanias, 271
Rebeccas, Sapphos, Roxalanas—
Circassian slaves whom Love would pay
Half his maternal realm's ransom ;—
Young nuns, whose chief religion lay
In looking most profanely handsome ;—
Muses in muslin—pastoral maids
With hats from the Arcade-ian shades,
And fortune-tellers, rich, 'twas plain,
As fortune-hunters form'd their train. 280
With these, and more such female groups,
Were mix'd no less fantastic troops
Of male exhibitors—all willing
To look, ev'n more than usual, killing ;—
Beau tyrants, smock-fac'd braggadocios,
And brigands, charmingly ferocious ;—

M.P.'s turn'd Turks, good Moslems then,
Who, last night, voted for the Greeks ;
And Friars, staunch No-Popery men,
In close confab with Whig Caciques.

But where is she—the nymph, whom
late 291

We left before her glass delaying,
Like Eve, when by the lake she sate,
In the clear wave her charmssurveying,
And saw in that first glassy mirror
The first fair face that lur'd to error.
'Where is she,' ask'st thou ?—watch all
looks

As cent'ring to one point they bear,
Like sun-flowers by the sides of brooks,
Turn'd to the sun—and she is there.

Ev'n in disguise, oh never doubt 301
By her own light you'd track her out :
As when the moon, close shawl'd in fog,
Steals as she thinks, through heaven
incog,

Though hid herself, some sidelong ray,
At every step, detects her way.

But not in dark disguise to-night
Hath our young heroine veil'd her
light ;—

For see, she walks the earth, Love's own,
His wedded bride, by holiest vow 310
Pledg'd in Olympus, and made known

To mortals by the type which now
Hangs glitt'ring on her snowy brow,
That butterfly, mysterious trinket,
Which means the Soul (tho' few would think it),

And sparkling thus on brow so white,
Tells us we've Psyche here to-night !

But hark ! some song hath caught her ears—

And, lo, how pleas'd, as though she'd ne'er 319

Heard the Grand Opera of the Spheres,
Her goddess-ship approves the air ;

And to a mere terrestrial strain,
Inspir'd by nought but pink champagne,
Her butterfly as gaily nods

As though she sat with all her train
At some great Concert of the Gods,
With Phœbus, leader—Jove, director,
And half the audience drunk with nectar.

From a male group the carol came—

A few gay youths, whom round the board 330

The last-tried flask's superior fame

Had lur'd to taste the tide it pour'd ;
And one, who, from his youth and lyre,

Seem'd grandson to the Teian sire,
Thus gaily sung, while, to his song,
Replied in chorus the gay throng :—

SONG

SOME mortals there may be, so wise, or so fine,

As in evenings like this no enjoyment to see ;

But, as I'm not particular—wit, love, and wine,

Are for one night's amusement sufficient for me. 340

Nay—humble and strange as my tastes may appear—

If driv'n to the worst, I could manage, thank Heaven,

To put up with eyes such as beam round me here,

And such wine as we're sipping, six days out of seven.

So pledge me a bumper—your sages profound

May be blest, if they will, on their own patent plan :

But as we are not sages, why—send the cup round—

We must only be happy the best way we can.

A reward by some king was once offer'd, we're told,

To whoever could invent a new bliss for mankind ; 350

But talk of new pleasures !—give me but the old,

And I'll leave your inventors all new ones they find.

Or should I, in quest of fresh realms of bliss,

Set sail in the pinnacle of Fancy some day,

Let the rich rosy sea I embark on be this,

And such eyes as we've here be the stars of my way !

In the meantime, a bumper—your Angels, on high,
 May have pleasures unknown to life's limited span;
 But, as we are not Angels, why—let the flask fly—
 We must only be happy all ways that we can.

360

Now nearly fled was sunset's light,
 Leaving but so much of its beam
 As gave to objects, late so bright,
 The colouring of a shadowy dream ;
 And there was still where Day had set
 A flush that spoke him loth to die—
 A last link of his glory yet,
 Binding together earth and sky.
 Say, why is it that twilight best
 Becomes even brows the loveliest ? 370
 That dimness, with its soft'ning touch,
 Can bring out grace, unfelt before,
 And charms we ne'er can see too much,
 When seen but half enchant the more?
 Alas, it is that every joy
 In fulness finds its worst alloy,
 And half a bliss, but hop'd or guess'd,
 Is sweeter than the whole possess'd ;—
 That Beauty, when least shone upon,
 A creature most ideal grows ; 380
 And there's no light from moon or sun
 Like that Imagination throes ;—
 It is, alas, that Fancy shrinks
 Ev'n from a bright reality,
 And turning inly, feels and thinks
 Far heav'nlier things than e'er will be.
 Such was th' effect of twilight's hour
 On the fair groups that, round and
 round,
 From glade to grot, from bank to bow'r,
 Now wander'd through this fairy ground ; 390
 And thus did Fancy—and champagne—
 Work on the sight their dazzling spells,
 Till nymphs that look'd, at noon-day,
 plain,
 Now brighten'd, in the gloom, to belles ;
 And the brief interval of time,
 'Twixt after dinner and before,
 To dowagers brought back their prime,
 And shed a halo round two-score.
 Meanwhile, new pastimes for the eye,
 The ear, the fancy, quick succeed ;
 And now along the waters fly 401
 Light gondoles, of Venetian breed,
 With knights and dames, who, calm
 reel'd,

Lisp out love-sonnets as they glide—
 Astonishing old Thames to find
 Such doings on his moral tide.

So bright was still that tranquil river,
 With the last shaft from Daylight's
 quiver,
 That many a group, in turn, were seen
 Embarking on its wave serene ; 410
 And, 'mong the rest, in chorus gay,
 A band of mariners, from th' isles
 Of sunny Greece, all song and smiles,
 As smooth they floated, to the play
 Of their oar's cadence, sung this lay :—

TRIO

OUR home is on the sea, boy,
 Our home is on the sea ;
 When Nature gave
 The ocean-wave,
 She mark'd it for the Free. 420
 Whatever storms befall, boy,
 Whatever storms befall,
 The island bark
 Is Freedom's ark,
 And floats her safe through all.

Behold yon sea of isles, boy,
 Behold yon sea of isles,
 Where ev'ry shore
 Is sparkling o'er
 With Beauty's richest smiles. 430
 For us hath Freedom claim'd, boy,
 For us hath Freedom claim'd
 Those ocean-nests
 Where Valour rests
 His eagle wing untam'd.

And shall the Moslem dare, boy,
 And shall the Moslem dare,
 While Grecian hand
 Can wield a brand,
 To plant his Crescent there ? 440
 No—by our fathers, no, boy,
 No, by the Cross we show—
 From Maina's rills
 To Thracia's hills
 All Greece re-echoes 'No !'

Like pleasant thoughts that o'er the
mind —

A minute come, and go again,
Ev'n so, by snatches, in the wind,
Was caught and lost that choral strain,
Now full, now faint upon the ear, 450
As the bark floated far or near.
At length when, lost, the closing note
Had down the waters died along,
Forth from another fairy boat,
Freighted with music, came this
song :—

SONG

SMOOTHLY flowing through verdant vales
Gentle river, thy current runs,
Shelter'd safe from winter gales,
Shaded cool from summer suns. 459
Thus our Youth's sweet moments glide,
Fenc'd with flow'ry shelter round ;
No rude tempest wakes the tide,
All its path is fairy ground.

But, fair river, the day will come,
When, woo'd by whisp'ring groves in vain,
Thou'lt leave those banks, thy shaded home,
To mingle with the stormy main.
And thou, sweet Youth, too soon wilt pass
Into the world's unshelter'd sea,
Where, once thy wave hath mix'd, alas,
All hope of peace is lost for thee. 471

Next turn we to the gay saloon
Resplendent as a summer noon,
Where, 'neath a pendent wreath of
lights,
A Zodiac of flowers and tapers—
(Such as in Russian ball-rooms sheds
Its glory o'er young dancers' heads)—
Quadrille performs her mazy rites,
And reigns supreme o'er slides and capers ;—
Working to death each opera strain, 480
As, with a foot that ne'er reposes,
She jigs through sacred and profane,
From 'Maid and Magpie' up to 'Moses ;'—

¹ In England the partition of this opera of Rossini was transferred to the story of Peter the Hermit ; by which means the indecorum of

Wearing out tunes as fast as shoes,
Till fagg'd Rossini scarce respire ;
Till Mayerbeer for mercy sues,
And Weber at her feet expires.

And now the set hath ceas'd—the bows
Of fiddlers taste a brief repose,
While light along the painted floor, 490
Arm within arm, the couples stray,
Talking their stock of nothings o'er,
Till—nothing's left, at last, to say.
When, lo !—most opportunely sent—
Two Exquisites, a he and she,
Just brought from Dandyland, and meant

For Fashion's grand Menagerie,
Enter'd the room—and scarce were there
When all flock'd round them, glad to stare
At any monsters, any where. 500

Some thought them perfect, to their tastes ;

While others hinted that the waists
(That in particular of the he thing)
Left far too ample room for breathing :
Whereas, to meet these critics' wishes,
The isthmus there should be so small,
That Exquisites, at last, like fishes,
Must manage not to breathe at all.
The female (these same critics said),
Though orthodox from toe to chin,
Yet lack'd that spacious width of head
To hat of toadstool much akin— 512
That build of bonnet, whose extent
Should, like a doctrine of dissent,
Puzzle church-doors to let it in.

However—sad as 'twas, no doubt,
That nymph so smart should go about,
With head unconscious of the place
It ought to fill in Infinite Space—
Yet all allow'd that, of her kind, 520
A prettier show 'twas hard to find ;
While of that doubtful genus, 'dressy
men,'
The male was thought a first-rate speci-
men.

Such Savans, too, as wish'd to trace
The manners, habits, of this race—
To know what rank (if rank at all)
'Mong real'sning things to them should
fall—

giving such names as 'Moise,' 'Pharaon,' &c. to the dances selected from it (as was done in Paris) has been avoided.

What sort of notions heaven imparts
To high-built heads and tight-lac'd hearts, 529

And how far Soul, which, Plato says,
Abhors restraint, can act in stays—
Might now, if gifted with discerning,
Find opportunities of learning :
As these two creatures—from their pout
And frown, 'twas plain—had just fall'n
out ;

And all their little thoughts, of course,
Were stirring in full fret and force ;—
Like mites, through microscope espied,
A world of nothings magnified.

But mild the vent such beings seek, 540
The tempest of their souls to speak :
As Opera swains to fiddles sigh,
To fiddles fight, to fiddles die,
Even so this tender couple set
Their well-bred woes to a Duet.

WALTZ DUET ¹

HE

Long as I waltz'd with only thee,
Each blissful Wednesday that went by,
Nor stylish Stultz, nor neat Nugee
Adorn'd a youth so blest as I.

Oh ! ah ! ah ! oh ! 550
Those happy days are gone—
heigho !

SHE

Long as with thee I skimm'd the ground,
Nor yet was scorn'd for Lady Jane,
No blither nymph tetotum'd round
To Collinet's immortal strain.

Oh ! ah ! &c. 561
Those happy days are gone—
heigho !

HE

With Lady Jane now whirl'd about,
I know no bounds of time or breath ;
And, should the charmer's head hold out,
My heart and heels are hers till death.

Oh ! ah ! &c. 561
Still round and round through life
we'll go.

SHE

To Lord Fitznoodle's eldest son,
A youth renown'd for waistcoats
smart,

I now have given (excuse the pun)
A vested interest in my heart.
Oh ! ah ! &c.
Still round and round with him
I'll go.

HE

What if, by fond remembrance led
Again to wear our mutual chain, 570
For me thou cut'st Fitznoodle dead,
And I levant from Lady Jane.

Oh ! ah ! &c.
Still round and round again we'll go.

SHE

Though he the Noodle honours give,
And thine, dear youth, are not so high,
With thee in endless waltz I'd live,
With thee, to Weber's Stop-Waltz,
die !

Oh ! ah ! &c.
Thus round and round through life
we'll go. 580

[Exeunt waltzing.]

While thus, like motes that dance away
Existence in a summer ray,
These gay things, born but to quadrille,
The circle of their doom fulfil—
(That dancing doom, whose law decrees
That they should live, on the alert toe,
A life of ups-and-downs, like keys
Of Broadwood's in a long concerto :—)
While thus the fiddle's spell, within, 589
Calls up its realm of restless sprites,
Without, as if some Mandarin
Were holding there his Feast of Lights, Lamps of all hues, from walks and
bowers,
Broke on the eye, like kindling flowers,
Till, budding into light, each tree
Bore its full fruit of brilliancy.

Here shone a garden—lamps all o'er,
As though the Spirits of the Air
Had tak'n it in their heads to pour
A shower of summer meteors there ;—
While here a lighted shrubb'ry led 601
To a small lake that sleeping lay,
Cradled in foliage, but, o'er-head,
Open to heaven's sweet breath and
ray ;

¹ It is hardly necessary to remind the reader that this Duet is a parody of the often-translated and parodied ode of Horace, 'Donec gratus eram tibi,' &c.

While round its rim there burning stood Lamps, with young flowers beside them bedded,
That shrunk from such warm neighbourhood ;
And, looking bashful in the flood,
Blush'd to behold themselves so wedded.

Hither, to this embower'd retreat, 610
Fit but for nights so still and sweet ;
Nights, such as Eden's calm recall
In its first lonely hour, when all
So silent is, below, on high,
That if a star falls down the sky,
You almost think you hear it fall—
Hither, to this recess, a few,
To shun the dancers' wild'ring noise,
And give an hour, ere night-time flew,
To Music's more ethereal joys, 620
Came with their voices—ready all
As Echo, waiting for a call—
In hymn or ballad, dirge or glee,
To weave their mingling minstrelsy.

And, first, a dark-ey'd nymph, array'd—
Like her, whom Art hath deathless made,
Bright Mona Lisa ¹—with that braid
Of hair across the brow, and one
Small gem that in the centre shone—
With face, too, in its form resembling
Da Vinci's Beauties—the dark eyes,
Now lucid, as through crystal trembling,
Now soft, as if suffus'd with sighs—
Her lute, that hung beside her, took,
And, bending o'er it with shy look,
More beautiful, in shadow thus,
Than when with life most luminous,
Pass'd her light finger o'er the chords,
And sung to them these mournful words :—

SONG

Bring hither, bring thy lute, while day is dying— 640
Here will I lay me, and list to thy song ;
Should tones of other days mix with its sighing,
Tones of a light heart, now banish'd
so long,
Chase them away—they bring but pain,
And let thy theme be woe again.

¹ The celebrated portrait by Leonardo da Vinci, which he is said to have occupied four years in painting.—Vasari, vol. vii.

Sing on, thou mournful lute—day is fast
going,
Soon will its light from thy chords die
away ;
One little gleam in the west is still
glowing,
When that hath vanish'd, farewell to thy lay.
Mark, how it fades !—see, it is fled ! 650
Now, sweet lute, be thou, too, dead.

The group, that late, in garb of Greeks,
Sung their light chorus o'er the tide—
Forms, such as up the wooded creeks
Of Helle's shore at noon-day glide,
Or, nightly, on her glist'ning sea,
Woo the bright waves with melody—
Now link'd their triple league again
Of voices sweet, and sung a strain,
Such as, had Sappho's tuneful ear 660
But caught it, on the fatal steep,
She would have paus'd, entranc'd, to hear,
And, for that day, deferr'd her leap.

SONG AND TRIO

Ox one of those sweet nights that oft
Their lustre o'er th' Aegean fing,
Beneath my casement, low and soft,
I heard a Lesbian lover sing ;
And, list'ning both with ear and thought
These sounds upon the night-breeze caught—
' Oh, happy as the gods is he, 670
Who gazes at this hour on thee ! '

The song was one by Sappho sung,
In the first love-dreams of her lyre,
When words of passion from her tongue
Fell like a shower of living fire.
And still, at close of ev'ry strain,
I heard these burning words again—
' Oh, happy as the gods is he,
Who listens at this hour to thee ! '

Once more to Mona Lisa turn'd 680
Each asking eye—nor turn'd in vain ;
Though the quick, transient blush that burn'd
Bright o'er her cheek, and died again,
Show'd with what inly shame and fear
Was utter'd what all lov'd to hear.

Yet not to sorrow's languid lay
 Did she her lute-song now devote;
 But thus, with voice that, like a ray
 Of southern sunshine, seem'd to float—
 So rich with climate was each note—
 Call'd up in every heart a dream 691
 Of Italy, with this soft theme:—

SONG

OÏ, where art thou dreaming,
 On land, or on sea?
 In my lattice is gleaming
 The watch-light for thee;
 And this fond heart is glowing
 To welcome thee home,
 And the night is fast going,
 But thou art not come: 700
 No, thou com'st not!
 'Tis the time when night-flowers
 Should wake from their rest;
 'Tis the hour of all hours,
 When the lute singeth best.
 But the flowers are half sleeping
 Till thy glance they see!
 And the hush'd lute is keeping
 Its music for thee.

Yet, thou com'st not! 710

Scarce had the last word left her lip,
 When a light, boyish form, with trip
 Fantastic, up the green walk came,
 Frank'd in gay vest, to which the flame
 Of every lamp he pass'd, or blue,
 Or green, or crimson, lent its hue;
 As though a liveameleon's skin
 He had despoil'd to robe him in.
 A zone he wore of clatt'ring shells, 719
 And from his lofty cap, where shone
 A peacock's plume, there dangled bells
 That rung as he came dancing on.
 Close after him, a page—in dress
 And shape, his miniature express—
 An ample basket, fill'd with store
 Of toys and trinkets, laughing bore;
 Till, having reach'd this verdant seat,
 He laid it at his master's feet,
 Who, half in speech and half in song,
 Chaunted this invoice to the throng:—

SONG

WHO'LL buy?—'tis Folly's shop, who'll
 buy?— 731
 We've toys to suit all ranks and ages;

Besides our usual fools' supply,
 We've lots of playthings, too, for sages.
 For reasoners, here's a juggler's cup,
 That fullest seems when nothing's
 in it;
 And nine-pins set, like systems, up,
 To be knock'd down the following minute.
 Who'll buy?—'tis Folly's shop,
 who'll buy?

Gay caps we here of foolscap make, 740
 For bards to wear in dog-day weather;
 Or bards the bells alone may take,
 And leave to wits the cap and feather.
 Teetotums we've for patriots got,
 Whocourt the mob with antics humble;
 Like theirs the patriot's dizzy lot,
 A glorious spin, and then—a tumble.
 Who'll buy, &c. &c.

Here, wealthy misers to inter, 749
 We've shrouds of neat post-obit paper;
 While, for their heirs, we've quicksilver,
 That, fast as they can wish, will caper.
 For aldermen we've dials true,
 That tell no hour but that of dinner;
 For courtly parsons sermons new,
 That suit alike both saint and sinner.
 Who'll buy, &c. &c.

No time we've now to name our terms,
 But, whatsoe'er the whims that seize
 you,
 This oldest of all mortal firms, 760
 Folly and Co., will try to please you.
 Or, should you wish a darker hue
 Of goods than we can recommend you,
 Why then (as we with lawyers do)
 To Knavery's shop next door we'll send you.

Who'll buy, &c. &c.

While thus the blissful moments roll'd,
 Moments of rare and fleeting light,
 That show themselves, like grains of
 gold
 In the mine's refuse, few and bright;
 Behold where, opening far away, 771
 The long Conservatory's range,
 Stripp'd of the flowers it wore all day,
 But gaining lovelier in exchange,
 Presents, on Dresden's costliest ware,
 A supper such as Gods might share.

Ah much-lov'd Supper !—blithe repast
 Of other times, now dwindling fast,
 Since Dinner far into the night
 Advanc'd the march of appetite ; 780
 Deploy'd his never-ending forces
 Of various vintage and three courses,
 And, like those Goths who play'd the dickens
 With Rome and all her sacred chickens,
 Put Supper and her fowls so white,
 Legs, wings, and drumsticks, all to flight.
 Now wak'd once more by wine—whose tide
 Is the true Hippocrene, where glide
 The Muse's swans with happiest wing,
 Dipping their bills, before they sing—
 The minstrels of the table greet 791
 The list'ning ear with descant sweet :—

SONG AND TRIO

THE LEVÉE AND COUCHÉE

CALL the Loves around,
 Let the whisp'ring sound
 Of their wings be heard alone,
 Till soft to rest
 My Lady blest
 At this bright hour hath gone.
 Let Fancy's beams
 Play o'er her dreams, 800
 Till, touch'd with light all through,
 Her spirit be
 Like a summer sea,
 Shining and slumb'ring too.
 And, while thus hush'd she lies,
 Let the whisper'd chorus rise—
 'Good evening, good evening, to our Lady's bright eyes.'
 But the day-beam breaks,
 See, our Lady wakes !
 Call the Loves around once more,
 Like stars that wait 811
 At Morning's gate,
 Her first steps to adore.
 Let the veil of night
 From her dawning sight
 All gently pass away,
 Like mists that flee
 From a summer sea,
 Leaving it full of day.
 And, while her last dream flies, 820
 Let the whisper'd chorus rise—
 'Good morning, good morning, to our Lady's bright eyes.'

SONG

If to see thee be to love thee,
 If to love thee be to prize
 Nought of earth or heav'n above thee,
 Nor to live but for those eyes :
 If such love to mortal given
 Be wrong to earth, be wrong to heav'n,
 'Tis not for thee the fault to blame, 829
 For from those eyes the madness came.
 Forgive but thou the crime of loving,
 In this heart more pride 'twill raise
 To be thus wrong, with thee approving,
 Than right, with all a world to praise !

But say, while light these songs resound,
 What means that buz of whisp'ring
 round,

From lip to lip—as if the Power
 Of Mystery, in this gay hour,
 Had thrown some secret (as we fling
 Nuts among children) to that ring 840
 Of rosy, restless lips, to be
 Thus scrambled for so wantonly ?
 And, mark ye, still as each reveals
 The mystic news, her hearer steals
 A look tow'rds yon enchanted chair,
 Where, like the Lady of the Masque,
 A nymph, as exquisitely fair
 As Love himself for bride could ask,
 Sits blushing deep, as if aware
 Of the wing'd secret circling there. 850
 Who is this nymph ? and what, oh
 Muse,

What, in the name of all odd things
 That woman's restless brain pursues,
 What mean these mystic whisperings?

Thus runs the tale :—yon blushing maid,
 Who sits in beauty's light array'd,
 While o'er her leans a tall young Dervise,
 (Who from her eyes, as all observe, is Learning by heart the Marriage Service,) 860
 Is the bright heroine of our song,—
 The Love-wed Psyche, whom so long
 We've miss'd among this mortal train,
 We thought her wing'd to heaven again.

But no—earth still demands her smile ;
 Her friends, the Gods, must wait awhile.
 And if, for maid of heavenly birth,

A young Duke's proffer'd heart and hand
 Be things worth waiting for on earth,
 Both are, this hour, at her command.

To-night, in yonder half-lit shade, 870
 For love concerns expressly meant,
 The fond proposal first was made,
 And love and silence blush'd consent.
 Parents and friends (all here, as Jews,
 Enchanters, housemaids, Turks, Hindoos,)

Have heard, approv'd, and blest the tie ;
 And now, hadst thou a poet's eye,
 Thou might'st behold, in th' air, above
 That brilliant brow, triumphant Love,
 Holding, as if to drop it down 880
 Gently upon her curls, a crown
 Of Ducal shape—but, oh, such gems !
 Pilfer'd from Peri diadems,
 And set in gold like that which shines
 To deck the Fairy of the Mines :
 In short, a crown all glorious—such as
 Love orders when he makes a Duchess.

But see, 'tis morn in heaven ; the Sun
 Up the bright orient hath begun
 To canter his immortal team ; 890
 And, though not yet arriv'd in sight,

His leader's nostrils send a steam
 Of radiance forth, so rosy bright
 As makes their onward path all light.
 What's to be done ? if Sol will be
 So deuced early, so must we ;
 And when the day thus shines outright,
 Ev'n dearest friends must bid good
 night.

So, farewell, scene of mirth and masking,
 Now almost a by-gone tale ; 900
 Beauties, late in lamp-light basking,
 Now, by daylight, dim and pale ;
 Harpers, yawning o'er your harps,
 Scarcely knowing flats from sharps ;
 Mothers who, while bor'd you keep
 Time by nodding, nod to sleep ;
 Heads of air, that stood last night
Crépé, crispy, and upright,
 But have now, alas, one sees, a
 Leaning like the tower of Pisa ; 910
 Fare ye well—thus sinks away
 All that's mighty, all that's bright ;
 Tyre and Sidon had their day,
 And ev'n a Ball—has but its night !

EVENINGS IN GREECE

IN thus connecting together a series of Songs by a thread of poetical narrative, my chief object has been to combine Recitation with Music, so as to enable a greater number of persons to join in the performance, by enlisting, as readers, those who may not feel willing or competent to take a part as singers.

The Island of Zea, where the scene is laid, was called by the ancients Ceos, and was the birthplace of Simonides, Bacchylides, and other eminent persons. An account of its present state may be found in the Travels of Dr. Clarke, who says that 'it appeared to him to be the best cultivated of any of the Grecian Isles'—
 Vol. vi. p. 174.

T. M.

FIRST EVENING

'THE sky is bright—the breeze is fair,
 And the mainsail flowing, full and
 free—

Our farewell word is woman's pray'r,
 And the hope before us—Liberty !
 Farewell, farewell.

To Greece we give our shining blades,
 And our hearts to you, young Zean
 Maids !

'The moon is in the heavens above,
 And the wind is on the foaming sea—

Thus shines the star of woman's love 10
 On the glorious strife of Liberty !
 Farewell, farewell.

To Greece we give our shining blades,
 And our hearts to you, young Zean
 Maids !'

Thus sung they from the bark, that
 now

Turn'd to the sea its gallant prow,
 Bearing within it hearts as brave,
 As e'er sought Freedom o'er the wave ;

And leaving on that islet's shore, 19
Where still the farewell beacons burn,
Friends, that shall many a day look o'er
The long, dim sea for their return.

Virgin of Heaven! speed their way—
Oh, speed their way,—the chosen
flow'r

Of Zea's youth, the hope and stay
Of parents in their wintry hour,
The love of maidens, and the pride
Of the young, happy, blushing bride,
Whose nuptial wreath has not yet died—
All, all are in that precious bark, 30
Which now, alas, no more is seen—
Though every eye still turns to mark
The moonlight spot where it had been.

Vainly you look, ye maidens, sires,
And mothers, your belov'd are gone!—
Now may you quench those signal fires,
Whose light they long look'd back upon

From their dark deck—watching the
flame

As fast it faded from their view,
With thoughts, that, but for manly
shame, 40
Had made them droop and weep like
you.

Home to your chambers! home, and pray
For the bright coming of that day,
When, bless'd by heaven, the Cross shall sweep

The Crescent from the Aegean deep,
And your brave warriors, hast'ning back
Will bring such glories in their track,
As shall, for many an age to come,
Shed light around their name and home.

There is a Fount on Zea's isle, 50
Round which, in soft luxuriance, smile
All the sweet flowers, of every kind,
On which the sun of Greece looks
down,

Pleas'd as a lover on the crown
His mistress for her brow hath twin'd,
When he beholds each flow'r set there,
Himself had wish'd her most to wear;

² Id.
³ Lonicera Caprifolium, used by the girls of Patmos for garlands.

Here bloom'd the laurel-rose,¹ whose wreath

Hangs radiant round the Cypriot
shrines,

And here those bramble-flowers, that breathe 60

Their odour into Zante's wines:—²

The splendid woodbine, that, at eve,
To grace their floral diadems,

The lovely maids of Patmos weave:—³
And that fair plant, whose tangled stems

Shine like a Nereid's hair,⁴ when spread,
Dishevell'd, o'er her azure bed;—

All these bright children of the clime,
(Each at its own most genial time,

The summer, or the year's sweet prime,)
Like beautiful earth-stars, adorn 71

The Valley, where that Fount is born:
While round, to grace its cradle green,

Groups of Velani oaks are seen,
Tow'ring on every verdant height—

Tall, shadowy, in the evening light,
Like Genii, set to watch the birth

Of some enchanted child of earth—
Fair oaks, that over Zea's vales,

Stand with their leafy pride unfur'd;
While Commerce, from her thousandsails,

Scatters their fruit throughout the
world! 82

'Twas here—as soon as prayer and sleep
(Those truest friends to all who weep)

Had lighten'd every heart, and made
Ev'n sorrow wear a softer shade—

'Twas here, in this secluded spot,

Amid whose breathings calm and sweet
Grief might be sooth'd, if not forgot,

The Zean nymphs resolv'd to meet 90
Each evening now, by the same light

That saw their farewell tears that night;
And try, if sound of lute and song,

If wand'ring 'mid the moonlight
flowers

In various talk, could charm along

With lighter step, the ling'ring hours,
Till tidings of that Bark should come,

Or Victory waft their warriors home!

⁴ Cuscuta europaea. 'From the twisting and twining of the stems, it is compared by the Greeks to the dishevelled hair of the Nereids.'—Walpole's Turkey.

⁵ 'The produce of the island in these acorns alone amounts annually to fifteen thousand quintals.'—Clarke's Travels.

When first they met—the wonted smile
Of greeting having gleam'd awhile— 100
'Twould touch ev'n Moslem heart to see
The sadness that came suddenly O'er their young brows, when they look'd
round

Upon that bright, enchanted ground ;
And thought, how many a time, with those

Who now were gone to the rude wars
They there had met, at evening's close,
And danc'd till morn outshone the stars ! 108

But seldom long doth hang th' eclipse
Of sorrow o'er such youthful breasts—
The breath from her own blushing lips,

That on the maiden's mirror rests,
Not swifter, lighter from the glass,
Than sadness from her brow doth pass.
Soon did they now, as round the Well

They sat, beneath the rising moon—
And some, with voice of awe, would tell
Of midnight fays, and nymphs who dwell
In holyfounts—while somewould tune

Their idle lutes, that now had lain, 120
For days, without a single strain ;—
And others, from the rest apart,

With laugh that told the lighten'd heart,
Sat, whispering in each other's ear
Secrets, that all in turn would hear ;—
Soon did they find this thoughtless play

So swiftly steal their griefs away,
That many a nymph, though pleas'd
the while,

Reproach'd her own forgetful smile,
And sigh'd to think she could be gay. 130

Among these maidens there was one,
Who to Leucadia¹ late had been—
Had stood, beneath the evening sun,

On its white tow'ring cliffs, and seen
The very spot where Sappho sung
Her swan-like music, ere she sprung (Still holding, in that fearful leap,
By her lov'd lyre,) into the deep.
And dying quench'd the fatal fire,
At once, of both her heart and lyre. 140

² 'The precipice, which is fearfully dizzy, is about one hundred and fourteen feet from the water, which is of a profound depth, as appears from the dark-blue colour and the eddy that plays round the pointed and projecting rocks.'
—Goodisson's Ionian Isles.

Mutely they listen'd all—and well
Did the young travell'd maiden tell
Of the dread height to which that steep
Beetles above the eddying deep—²
Of the lone sea-birds, wheeling round
The dizzy edge with mournful sound—
And of those scented lilies³ found
Still blooming on that fearful place—
As if call'd up by Love, to grace 149
Th' immortal spot, o'er which the last
Bright footsteps of his martyr pass'd !

While fresh to ev'ry listener's thought
These legends of Leucadia brought
All that of Sappho's hapless flame
Is kept alive, still watch'd by Fame—
The maiden, tuning her soft lute,
While all the rest stood round her, mute,
Thus sketch'd the languishment of soul,
That o'er the tender Lesbian stole ;
And, in a voice, whose thrilling tone 160
Fancy might deem the Lesbian's own,
One of those fervid fragments gave,
Which still,—like sparkles of Greek
Fire,

Undying, ev'n beneath the wave,—
Burn on through Time, and ne'er expire.

SONG

As o'er her loom the Lesbian Maid
In love-sick languor hung her head,
Unknowing where her fingers stray'd,
She weeping turn'd away, and said,
'Oh, my sweet Mother—'tis in vain—
I cannot weave, as once I wove—
So wilder'd is my heart and brain 172
With thinking of that youth I love !'⁴

Again the web she tried to trace,
But tears fell o'er each tangled thread ;

While, looking in her mother's face,
Who watchful o'er her lean'd, she said
'Oh, my sweet Mother—'tis in vain—
I cannot weave, as once I wove—
So wilder'd is my heart and brain 180
With thinking of that youth I love !'

³ See Mr. Goodisson's very interesting description of all these circumstances.

⁴ I have attempted, in these four lines, to give some idea of that beautiful fragment of Sappho, beginning Ἰλκεῖα μήτερ, which represents so truly (as Warton remarks) 'the languor and listlessness of a person deeply in love.'

A silence follow'd this sweet air,
 As each in tender musing stood,
 Thinking, with lips that mov'd in pray'r,
 Of Sappho and that fearful flood :
 While some, who ne'er till now had
 known
 How much their hearts resembled hers,
 Felt as they made her griefs their own,
 That they, too, were Love's worshippers.

At length a murmur, all but mute, 190
 So faint it was, came from the lute
 Of a young melancholy maid,
 Whose fingers, all uncertain play'd
 From chord to chord, as if in chase
 Of some lost melody, some strain
 Of other times, whose faded trace
 She sought among those chords again.
 Slowly the half-forgotten theme
 (Though horn in feelings ne'er forgot)
 Came to her memory—as a beam 200
 Falls broken o'er some shaded spot ;—
 And while her lute's sad symphony
 Fill'd up each sighing pause between ;
 And Love himself might weep to see
 What ruin comes where he hath been
 As wither'd still the grass is found
 Where fays have danc'd their merry
 round—
 Thus simply to the list'ning throng
 She breath'd her melancholy song :—

SONG

WEeping for thee, my love, through the long day, 210
 Lonely and wearily life wears away.
 Weeping for thee, my love, through the long night—
 No rest in darkness, no joy in light !
 Nought left but Memory, whose dreary
 tread
 Sounds through this ruin'd heart, where all lies dead—
 Wakening the echoes of joy long fled !

Of many a stanza, this alone
 Had scaped oblivion—like the one
 Stray fragment of a wreck, which thrown,

² 'I saw above thirty parties engaged in

With the lost vessel's name, ashore, 220
 Tells who they were that live no more.

When thus the heart is in a vein
 Of tender thought, the simplest strain
 Can touch it with peculiar power,
 As when the air is warm, the scent
 Of the most wild and rustic flower
 Can fill the whole rich element—
 And, in such moods, the homeliest tone That's link'd with feelings, once our
 own—
 With friends or joys gone by—will be Worth choirs of loftiest harmony ! 231

But some there were, among the group
 Of damsels there, too light of heart
 To let their spirits longer droop,
 Ev'n under music's melting art ;
 And one upspringing, with a bound,
 From a low bank of flowers, look'd
 round
 With eyes that, though so full of light,
 Had still a trembling tear within ;
 And, while her fingers, in swift flight, 240
 Flew o'er a fairy mandolin,
 Thus sung the song her lover late
 Had sung to her—the eve before
 That joyous night, when, as of yore,
 All Zea met, to celebrate
 The Feast of May, on the sea-shore.

SONG

WHEN the Balaika ¹
 Is heard o'er the sea,
 I'll dance the Romaika
 By moonlight with thee. 250
 If waves then, advancing,
 Should steal on our play,
 Thy white feet, in dancing,
 Shall chase them away.²
 When the Balaika
 Is heard o'er the sea,
 Thou'lt dance the Romaika,
 My own love, with me.
 Then, at the closing
 Of each merry lay, 260
 How sweet 'tis, reposing,
 Beneath the night ray !

dancing the Romaika upon the sand ; in some of those groups, the girl who led them chased the retreating wave.—Douglas on the Modern Greeks.

Or if, declining,
The moon leave the skies,
We'll talk by the shining
Of each other's eyes.

Oh then, how fealtly
The dance we'll renew,
Treading so fleetly
Its light mazes through : ¹ 270
Till stars, looking o'er us
From heaven's high bow'rs,
Would change their bright chorus
For one dance of ours
When the Balaika
Is heard o'er the sea,
Thou'lt dance the Romaika,
My own love, with me.

How changingly for ever veers
The heart of youth, 'twixt smiles and
tears ! 280

Ev'n as in April, the light vane
Now points to sunshine, now to rain.
Instant this lively lay dispell'd
The shadow from each blooming brow
And Dancing, joyous Dancing, held
Full empire o'er each fancy now.

But say—what shall the measure be ?
' Shall we the old Romaika tread,
(Some eager ask'd) as anciently
'Twas by the maids of Delos led, 290
When, slow at first, then circling fast,
As the gay spirits rose—at last,
With hand in hand, like links, enlock'd,
Through the light air they seem'd to flit
In labyrinthine maze, that mock'd
The dazzled eye that follow'd it ?
Some call'd aloud 'the Fountain
Dance !'—

While one young, dark-ey'd Amazon,
Whose step was air-like, and whose glance
Flash'd, like a sabre in the sun, 300
Sportively said, 'Shame on these soft
And languid strains we hear so oft.

¹ 'In dancing the Romaika (says Mr. Douglas) they begin in slow and solemn step till they have gained the time, but by degrees the air becomes more sprightly; the conductress of the dance sometimes setting to her partner, sometimes darting before the rest, and leading them through the most rapid revolutions; sometimes crossing under the hands, which are held up to let her pass, and giving as much liveliness and intricacy as she can to the figures, into which she conducts her companions, while their business is to follow her in all her move-

Daughters of Freedom ! have not we Learn'd from our lovers and our sires
The Dance of Greece, while Greece was free—

That Dance, where neither flutes nor lyres,
But sword and shield clash on the ear
A music tyrants quake to hear ? ²
Heroines of Zea, arm with me,
And dance the dance of Victory !' 310

Thus saying, she, with playful grace,
Loos'd the wide hat, that o'er her face
(From Anatolia ³ came the maid)

Hung, shadowing each sunny charm ;
And, with a fair young armourer's aid,
Fixing it on her rounded arm,
A mimic shield with pride display'd ;
Then, springing towards a grove that spread

Its canopy of foliage near, 319
Pluck'd off a lance-like twig, and said,
'To arms, to arms !' while o'er her head
She wav'd the light branch, as a spear.

Promptly the laughing maidens all
Obey'd their Chief's heroic call ;—
Round the shield-arm of each was tied
Hat, turban, shawl, as chance might be ;
The grove, their verdant armoury,
Falcon and lance ⁴ alike supplied ;
And as their glossy locks, let free,
Fell down their shoulders carelessly,
You might have dream'd you saw a throng 331

Of youthful Thyads, by the beam
Of a May moon, bounding along
Peneus' silver-eddied ⁵ stream !

And now they stepp'd, with measur'd
tread,

Martially, o'er the shining field ;
Now, to the mimic combat led
(A heroine at each squadron's head), Struck lance to lance and sword to shield :

ments, without breaking the chain, or losing the measure.'

² For a description of the Pyrrhic Dance, see De Guys, &c.—It appears from Apuleius (lib. x) that this war-dance was, among the ancients, sometimes performed by females.

³ See the costume of the Greek women of Natolia in Castellan's Mœurs des Othomans.

⁴ The sword was the weapon chiefly used in this dance.

⁵ Homer, Il. ii. 758.

While still, through every varying feat,
Their voices, heard in contrast sweet 341
With some, of deep but soften'd sound,
From lips of aged sires around,
Who smiling watch'd their children's play—

Thus sung the ancient Pyrrhic lay :—

SONG

' RAISE the buckler—poise the lance—
Now here—now there—retreat—advance !'

Such were the sounds, to which the warrior boy

Danc'd in those happy days, when
Greece was free ;

When Sparta's youth, ev'n in the hour
of joy, 350

Thus train'd their steps to war and victory.

' Raise the buckler—poise the lance—
Now here—now there—retreat—advance !'

Such was the Spartan warriors' dance.
' Grasp the falchion—gird the shield—
Attack—defend—do all, but yield.'

Thus did thy sons, oh Greece, one glorious night,

Dance by a moon like this, till o'er the
sea

That morning dawn'd by whose immortal light 359

They nobly died for thee and liberty !¹

' Raise the buckler—poise the lance—
Now here—now there—retreat—advance !'

Such was the Spartan heroes' dance.

Scarce had they clos'd this martial
lay

When, flinging their light spears away,
The combatants, in broken ranks,

All breathless from the war-field fly ;

And down, upon the velvet banks
And flow'ry slopes, exhausted lie,

Like rosy huntresses of Thrace, 370
Resting at sunset from the chase.

' Fond girls !' an aged Zean said—
One who, himself, had fought and bled,

¹ It is said that Leonidas and his companions employed themselves, on the eve of the battle,

And now, with feelings, half delight,
Half sadness, watch'd their mimic fight—
' Fond maids ! who thus with War can jest—

Like Love, in Mars's helmet drest,
When, in his childish innocence,
Pleas'd with the shade that helmet
flings,

He thinks not of the blood, that thence
Is dropping o'er his snowy wings. 381

Ay—true it is, young patriot maids,

If Honour's arm still won the fray,
If luck but shone on righteous blades,

War were a game for gods to play !

But, no, alas !—hear one, who well

Hath track'd the fortunes of the brave—

Hear me, in mournful ditty, tell

What glory waits the patriot's grave :—

SONG

As by the shore, at break of day, 390
A vanquish'd Chief expiring lay,

Upon the sands, with broken sword,

He trac'd his farewell to the Free ;

And, there, the last unfinish'd word

He dying wrote was ' Liberty !'

At night a Sea-bird shriek'd the knell

Of him who thus for Freedom fell ;

The words he wrote, ere evening came,

Were cover'd by the sounding sea ;—

So pass away the cause and name 400
Of him who dies for Liberty !

That tribute of subdued applause

A charm'd, but timid, audience pays,

That murmur, which a minstrel draws

From hearts, that feel, but fear to praise,

Follow'd this song, and left a pause

Of silence after it, that hung

Like a fix'd spoil on every tongue.

At length, a low and tremulous sound

Was heard from midst a group, that
round 410

A bashful maiden stood, to hide

Her blushes, while the lute she tried—

Like roses, gath'ring round to veil

The song of some young nightingale, in music and the gymnastic exercises of their country.

Whose trembling notes steal out between
The cluster'd leaves, herself unseen.
And, while that voice, in tones that
more

Through feeling than through weakness err'd,
Came, with a stronger sweetness, o'er
Th' attentive ear, this strain was heard :— 420

SONG

I SAW, from yonder silent cave,¹
Two Fountains running, side by side,
The one was Mem'ry's limpid wave,
The other cold Oblivion's tide.
'Oh Love!' said I, in thoughtless mood,
As deep I drank of Lethe's stream,
'Be all my sorrows in this flood
Forgotten like a vanish'd dream!'

But who could bear that gloomy blank,
Where joy was lost as well as pain?
Quickly of Mem'ry's fount I drank, 431
And brought the past all back again;
And said, 'Oh Love! whate'er my lot,
Still let this soul to thee be true—
Rather than have one bliss forgot,
Be all my pains remember'd too!'

The group that stood around, to shade
The blushes of that bashful maid,
Had, by degrees, as came the lay
More strongly forth, retir'd away, 440
Like a fair shell, whose valves divide,
To show the fairer pearl inside:
For such she was—a creature, bright
And delicate as those day-flow'rs,
Which, while they last, make up, in
light

And sweetness, what they want in hours.

So rich upon the ear had grown
Her voice's melody—its tone
Gath'ring new courage, as it found
An echo in each bosom round— 450
That, ere the nymph, with downcast eye
Still on the chords, her lute laid by,
'Another Song,' all lips exclaim'd,
And each some matchless fav'r itenam'd;

¹ 'This morning we paid our visit to the Cave of Trophonius, and the Fountains of Memory and Oblivion, just upon the water of Hecyna, which flows through stupendous rocks.'—Williams's Travels in Greece.

² This superstitious custom of the Thessalians

While blushing, as her fingers ran
O'er the sweet chords, she thus began :—

SONG

OH, Memory, how coldly
Thou paintest joy gone by :
Like rainbows, thy pictures
But mournfully shine and die. 460
Or, if some tints thou keepest,
That former days recall,
As o'er each line thou weapest,
Thy tears efface them all.
But, Memory, too truly
Thou paintest grief that's past ;
Joy's colours are fleeting,
But those of Sorrow last.
And, while thou bring'st before us
Dark pictures of past ill, 470
Life's evening, closing o'er us,
But makes them darker still.

So went the moonlight hours along,
In this sweet glade ; and so, with song
And witching sounds—not such as they,
The cymbalists of Ossa, play'd,
To chase the moon's eclipse away,²
But soft and holy—did each maid
Lighten her heart's eclipse awhile,
And win back Sorrow to a smile. 480

Not far from this secluded place,
On the sea-shore a ruin stood ;—
A relic of th' extinguish'd race,
Who once look'd o'er that foamy flood
When fair Ioulis,³ by the light
Of golden sunset, on the sight
Of mariners who sail'd that sea,
Rose, like a city of chrysolite,
Call'd from the wave by witchery.
This ruin—now by barb'rous hands 490
Debas'd into a motley shed,
Where the once splendid column stands
Inverted on its leafy head—
Form'd, as they tell, in times of old,
The dwelling of that bard, whose lay
Could melt to tears the stern and cold,
And sadden, 'mid their mirth, the gay—

exists also, as Pietro della Valle tells us, among the Persians.

² An ancient city of Zea, the walls of which were of marble. Its remains (says Clarke) 'extend from the shore, quite into a valley watered by the streams of a fountain, whence Ioulis received its name.'

Simonides,¹ whose fame, through years
And ages past, still bright appears—
Like Hesperus, a star of tears! 500

'Twas hither now—to catch a view
Of the white waters, as they play'd
Silently in the light—a few
Of the more restless damsels stray'd ;
And some would linger 'mid the scent
Of hanging foliage, that perfum'd
The ruin'd walls ; while others went,
Culling whatever flow'ret bloom'd
In the lone leafy space between, 509
Where gilded chambers once had been ;
Or, turning sadly to the sea,
Sent o'er the wave a sigh unblest
To some brave champion of the Free—
Thinking, alas, how cold might be,
At that still hour, his place of rest !

Meanwhile there came a sound of song
From the dark ruins—a faint strain,
As if some echo, that among Those minstrel halls had slumber'd
long,

Were murm'ring into life again. 520

But, no—the nymphs knew well the tone—

A maiden of their train, who lov'd,
Like the night-bird, to sing alone,
Had deep into those ruins rov'd,
And there, all other thoughts forgot,
Was warbling o'er, in lone delight,
A lay that, on that very spot,
Her lovers sung one moonlight night:—

SONG

AH ! where are they, who heard, in former hours,
The voice of Song in these neglected
bow'rs ? 530
They are gone—all gone !

¹ Zea was the birthplace of this poet, whose verses are by Catullus called 'tears.'

² These 'Songs of the Well,' as they were called among the ancients, still exist in Greece. De Guy tells us that he has seen 'the young women in Prince's Island, assembled in the evening at a public well, suddenly strike up a dance, while others sung in concert to them.'

³ 'The inhabitants of Syra, both ancient and modern, may be considered as the worshippers of water. The old fountain, at which the

The youth, who told his pain in such sweet tone,
That all, who heard him, wish'd his pain
their own—

He is gone—he is gone !

And she, who, while he sung, sat list'ning
by,

And thought, to strains like these 'twere
sweet to die—

She is gone—she too is gone !

'Tis thus, in future hours, some bard will
say

Of her, who hears, and him, who sings
this lay— 539

They are gone—they both are gone!

The moon was now, from Heaven's steep
Bending to dip her silv'ry urn
Into the bright and silent deep—

And the young nymphs, on their return
From those romantic ruins, found
Their other playmates, rang'd around
The sacred Spring, prepar'd to tune
Their parting hymn,² ere sunk the moon,
To that fair Fountain, by whose stream
Their hearts had form'd so many a
dream. 550

Who has not read the tales, that tell
Of old Eleusis' sacred Well,
Or heard what legend-songs recount
Of Syra, and its holy Fount,³
Gushing, at once, from the hard rock
Into the laps of living flowers—

Where village maidens lov'd to flock,
On summer-nights, and, like the hours,
Link'd in harmonious dance and song,
Charm'd the unconscious night along ;
While holy pilgrims, on their way 561
To Delos' isle, stood looking on,
Enchanted with a scene so gay,
Nor sought their boats, till morning
shone ?

nymphs of the island assembled in the earliest ages, exists in its original state ; the same rendezvous as it was formerly, whether of love and gallantry, or of gossiping and tale-telling. It is near to the town, and the most limpid water gushes continually from the solid rock. It is regarded by the inhabitants with a degree of religious veneration ; and they preserve a tradition, that the pilgrims of old time, in their way to Delos, resorted hither for purification.' —Clarke.

Such was the scene this lovely glade
And its fair inmates now display'd,
As round the Fount, in linked ring,
They went, in cadence slow and light,
And thus to that enchanted Spring 569
Warbled their Farewell for the night:—

SONG

HERE, while the moonlight dim
Falls on that mossy brim,
Sing we our Fountain Hymn,
Maidens of Zea!
Nothing but Music's strain,
When Lovers part in pain,
Soothes, till they meet again,
Oh, Maids of Zea!

Bright Fount, so clear and cold,
Round which the nymphs of old 580
Stood, with their locks of gold,
Fountain of Zea!
Not even Castaly,
Fam'd though its streamlet be,
Murmurs or shines like thee,
Oh, Fount of Zea!

Thou, while our hymn we sing,
Thy silver voice shall bring,
Answering, answering,
Sweet Fount of Zea! 590
For, of all rills that run,
Sparkling by moon or sun,
Thou art the fairest one,
Bright Fount of Zea!

Now, by those stars that glance
Over heaven's still expanse,
Weave we our mirthful dance,
Daughters of Zea!
Such as, in former days,
Danc'd they, by Dian's rays, 600
Where the Eurotas strays,¹
Oh, Maids of Zea!

But when to merry feet
Hearts with no echo beat,
Say, can the dance be sweet?
Maidens of Zea!
No, nought but Music's strain,
When lovers part in pain,
Soothes, till they meet again,
Oh, Maids of Zea! 610

Exercet Diana choros.'—Virgil.

SECOND EVENING

SONG

WHEN evening shades are falling
O'er Ocean's sunny sleep,
To pilgrims' heart recalling
Their home beyond the deep;
When, rest o'er all descending,
The shores with gladness smile,
And lutes, their echoes blending,
Are heard from isle to isle,
Then, Mary, Star of the Sea,²
We pray, we pray, to thee! 10

The noon-day tempest over,
Now Ocean toils no more,
And wings of halcyons hover,
Where all was strife before.
Oh thus may life, in closing
Its short tempestuous day,
Beneath heaven's smile reposing,
Shine all its storms away:
Thus, Mary, Star of the Sea,
We pray, we pray, to thee! 20

On Helle's sea the light grew dim,
As the last sounds of that sweet hymn
Floated along its azure tide—
Floated in light, as if the lay
Had mix'd with sunset's fading ray,
And light and song together died.
So soft through evening's air had
breath'd

That choir of youthful voice, wreath'd
In many-linked harmony,
That boats, then hurrying o'er the sea,
Paus'd, when they reach'd this fairy
shore, 31
And linger'd till the strain was o'er.

Of those young maids who've met to fleet
Insong and dancethis evening's hours,
Far happier now the bosoms beat,
Than when they last adorn'd these
bowers;
For tidings of glad sound had come,
At break of day, from the far isles—
Tidings like breath of life to some—
That Zea's sons would soon wing home,
Crown'd with the light of Vict'ry's
smiles 41

² One of the titles of the Virgin:—'Maria illuminatrix, sive Stella Maris.'—Isidor.

To meet that brightest of all meeds
That wait on high, heroic deeds,
When gentle eyes that scarce, for tears,
Could trace the warrior's parting
track,

Shall, like a misty morn that clears,
When the long-absent sun appears,
Shine out, all bliss, to hail him back.

How fickle still the youthful breast !—
More fond of change than a young
moon, 50

No joy so new was e'er possess'd
But Youth would leave for newer soon.
These Zean nymphs, though bright the spot,

Where first they held their evening
play,

As ever fell to fairy's lot
To wanton o'er by midnight's ray,
Had now exchang'd that shelter'd scene
For a wide glade beside the sea—
A lawn, whose soft expanse of green
Turn'd to the west sun smilingly, 60
As though, in conscious beauty bright,
It joy'd to give him light for light.

And ne'er did evening more serene
Look down from heav'n on lovelier scene
Calm lay the flood around, while fleet,
O'er the blue shining element,
Light barks, as if with fairy feet
That stirr'd not the hush'd waters,
went ;

Some that, ere rosy eve fell o'er
The blushing wave, with mainsail free,
Had put forth from the Attic shore, 71
Or the near Isle of Ebony ;—

Some, Hydriot barks, that deep in caves
Beneath Colonna's pillar'd cliffs,
Had all day lurk'd, and o'er the waves
Now shot their long and dart-like skiffs.

Woe to the craft, however fleet,
These sea-hawks in their course shall
meet,

Laden with juice of Lesbian vines,
Or rich from Naxos' emery mines ; 80
For not more sure, when owlets flee
O'er the dark crags of Pendelea,
Doth the night-falcon mark his prey,
Or pounce on it more fleet than they.

And what a moon now lights the glade
Where these young island nymphs are met !

Full-orb'd, yet pure, as if no shade
Had touch'd its virgin lustre yet ;
And freshly bright, as if just made
By Love's own hands, of new-born light
Stol'n from his mother's star to-night. 91

On a bold rock, that o'er the flood
Jutted from that soft glade, there stood
A Chapel, fronting tow'rs the sea,—
Built in some by-gone century,—
Where, nightly, as the seaman's mark,
When waves rose high or clouds were
dark,

A lamp, bequeath'd by some kind Saint,
Shed o'er the wave its glimmer faint,
Waking in way-worn men a sigh 100
And pray'r to heav'n, as they went by.
'Twas there, around that rock-built
shrine,

A group of maidens and their sires
Had stood to watch the day's decline,
And, as the light fell o'er their lyres,
Sung to the Queen-Star of the Sea
That soft and holy melody.

But lighter thoughts and lighter song
Now woo the coming hours along :
For, mark, where smooth the herbage
lies, 110

Yon gay pavilion, curtain'd deep
With silken folds, through which, bright
eyes,

From time to time, are seen to peep ;
While twinkling lights that, to and fro,
Beneath those veils, like meteors, go,

Tell of some spells at work, and keep
Young fancies chain'd in mute suspense,
Watching what next may shine from thence.

Nor long the pause, ere hands unseen
That mystic curtain backward drew
And all, that late but shone between,
In half-caught gleams, now burst to view. 122

A picture 'twas of the early days
Of glorious Greece, ere yet those rays
Of rich, immortal Mind were hers
That made mankind her worshippers ;
While, yet unsung, her landscapes shone
With glory lent by Heaven alone ;
Nor temples crown'd her nameless hills,
Nor Muse immortalis'd her rills ; 130
Nor aught but the mute poesy
Of sun, and stars, and shining sea
Illum'd that land of bards to be.

While, prescient of the gifted race
That yet would realm so blest adorn,
Nature took pains to deck the place
Where glorious Art was to be born.

Such was the scene that mimic stage
Of Athens and her hills portray'd ;
Athens, in her first, youthful age, 140
Ere yet the simple violet braid,¹
Which then adorn'd her, had shone down
The glory of earth's loftiest crown.
While yet undream'd, her seeds of Art
Lay sleeping in the marble mine—
Sleeping till Genius bade them start
To all but life, in shapes divine ;
Till deified the quarry shone
And all Olympus stood in stone !

There, in the foreground of that scene,
On a soft bank of living green, 151
Sat a young nymph, with her lap full
Of newly gather'd flowers, o'er which
She graceful lean'd, intent to cull
All that was there of hue most rich,
To form a wreath, such as the eye
Of her young lover, who stood by,
With pallet mingled fresh, might choose
To fix by Painting's rainbow hues.

The wreath was form'd ; the maiden
rais'd 160

Her speaking eyes to his, while he—
Oh not upon the flowers now gaz'd,
But on that bright look's witchery.
While, quick as if but then the thought,
Like light, had reach'd his soul, he caught
His pencil up, and, warm and true
As life itself, that love-look drew :
And, as his raptur'd task went on,
And forth each kindling feature shone,
Sweet voices, through the moonlight air,
From lips as moonlight fresh and pure,
Thus hail'd the bright dream passing
there,

And sung the Birth of Portraiture.*

SONG

As once a Grecian maiden wove
Her garland mid the summer bow'rs,
There stood a youth, with eyes of love,
To watch her while she wreath'd the flow'rs.

² The whole of this scene was suggested by

The youth was skill'd in Painting's art,
But ne'er had studied woman's brow,
Nor knew what magic hues the heart 180
Canshed o'er Nature's charms, till now.

CHORUS

Blest be Love, to whom we owe
All that's fair and bright below.

His hand had pictur'd many a rose,
And sketch'd the rays that light the brook ;
But what were these, or what were those,
To woman's blush, to woman's look ?
'Oh, if such magic pow'r there be,
This, this,' he cried, 'is all my prayer,
To paint that living light I see, 190
And fix the soul that sparkles there.'

His prayer, as soon as breath'd, was heard ;
His pallet, touch'd by Love, grew
warm,
And Painting saw her hues transferr'd
From lifeless flow'rs to woman's form.
Still as from tint to tint he stole,
The fair design shone out the more,
And there was now a life, a soul, 198
Where only colours glow'd before.

Then first carnations learn'd to speak,
And lilies into life were brought ;
While, mantling on the maiden's cheek,
Young roses kindled into thought.
Then hyacinths their darkest dyes
Upon the locks of Beauty threw ;
And violets, transform'd to eyes,
Inshrin'd a soul within their blue.

CHORUS

Blest be Love, to whom we owe
All that's fair and bright below.
Song was cold and Painting dim 210
Till song and Painting learn'd from him.

Soon as the scene had clos'd, a cheer
Of gentle voices, old and young,
Rose from the groups that stood to hear
This tale of yore so aptly sung ;
And while some nymphs, in haste to tell
The workers of that fairy spell
How crown'd with praise their task had been,
Stole in behind the curtain'd scene, 219

Pliny's account of the artist Pausias and his mistress Glycera, lib. xxxv. c. 40.

The rest, in happy converse stray'd—
Talking that ancient love-tale o'er—
Some, to the groves that skirt the glade,
Some, to the chapel by the shore,
To look what lights were on the sea,
And think of th' absent silently.

But soon that summons, known so well
Through bow'r and hall, in Eastern lands,

Whose sound, more sure than gong or bell, 228

Lovers and slaves alike commands,—
The clapping of young female hands,
Calls back the groups from rock and field
To see some new-form'd scene reveal'd;—
And fleet and eager, down the slopes
Of the green glade, like antelopes,
When, in their thirst, they hear the sound

Of distant rills, the light nymphs bound.

Far different now the scene—a waste
Of Libyan sands, by moonlight's ray;
An ancient well, whereon were trac'd

The warning words, for such as stray
Unarmed there, 'Drink and away!' ¹
While, near it, from the night-ray screen'd, 242

And like his bells, in hush'd repose,
A camel slept—young as if wean'd
When last the star, Canopus, rose. ²

Such was the background's silent scene;—

While nearer lay, fast slumb'ring too,
In a rude tent, with brow serene,

A youth whose cheeks of way-worn hue
And pilgrim-bonnet, told the tale 250
That he had been to Mecca's Vale:

Haply in pleasant dreams, ev'n now
Thinking the long wish'd hour is come When, o'er the well-known porch at
home,

¹ The traveller Shaw mentions a beautiful rill in Barbary, which is received into a large bason called Shrub wa krib, 'Drink and away,'—there being great danger of meeting with thieves and assassins in such places.

² The Arabian shepherd has a peculiar ceremony in weaning the young camel: when the proper time arrives, he turns the camel towards the rising star, Canopus, and says, 'Do you see Canopus? from this moment you taste not another drop of milk.'—Richardson.

³ 'Whoever returns from a pilgrimage to Mecca hangs this plant (the mitre-shaped Aloe) over his street-door, as a token of his having performed this holy journey.'—Hasselquist.

His hand shall hang the aloe bough—
Trophy of his accomplish'd vow. ³

But brief his dream—for now the call
Of the camp-chiefs from rear to van,
'Bind on your burdens,' ⁴ wakes up all
The widely slumb'ring caravan; 260
And thus meanwhile, to greet the ear
Of the young pilgrim as he wakes,
The song of one who, ling'ring near,
Had watch'd his slumber, cheerly breaks.

SONG

Up and march! the timbrel's sound
Wakes the slumb'ring camp around;
Fleet thy hour of rest hath gone,
Armed sleeper, up, and on!
Long and weary is our way
O'er the burning sands to-day; 270
But to pilgrim's homeward feet
Ev'n the desert's path is sweet.

When we lie at dead of night,
Looking up to heaven's light,
Hearing but the watchman's tone
Faintly chaunting 'God is one,' ⁵
Oh what thoughts then o'er us come
Of our distant village home,
Where that chaunt, when ev'ning sets,
Sounds from all the minarets. 280

Cheer thee!—soon shall signal lights,
Kindling o'er the Red Sea heights,
Kindling quick from man to man,
Hail our coming caravan: ⁶
Think what bliss that hour will be!
Looks of home again to see,
And our names again to hear
Murmur'd out by voices dear.

So pass'd the desert dream away,
Fleeting as his who heard this lay. 290

⁴ This form of notice to the caravans to prepare for marching was applied by Hafiz to the necessity of relinquishing the pleasures of this world, and preparing for death:—'For me what room is there for pleasure in the bower of Beauty, when every moment the bell makes proclamation, "Bind on your burdens?"'

⁵ The watchmen, in the camp of the caravans, go their rounds, crying one after another, 'God is one,' &c. &c.

⁶ 'It was customary,' says Irwin, 'to light up fires on the mountains, within view of Cosseir, to give notice of the approach of the caravans that came from the Nile.'

Nor long the pause between, nor mov'd
The spell-bound audience from that
spot ;

While still, as usual, Fancy rov'd
On to the joy that yet was not ;—
Fancy, who hath no present home,
But builds her bower in scenes to come,
Walking for ever in a light
That flows from regions out of sight.

But see, by gradual dawn descried,
A mountain realm—rugged as e'er 300
Uprais'd to heav'n its summits bare,
Or told to earth, with frown of pride,
That Freedom's falcon nest was there,
Too high for hand of lord or king
Too hood her brow, or chain her wing.

'Tis Maina's land—her ancient hills,
The abode of nymphs¹—her countless rills

And torrents, in their downward dash,
Shining, like silver, through the shade
Of the sea-pine and flow'ring ash— 310

All with a truth so fresh portray'd
As wants but touch of life to be
A world of warm reality.

And now, light bounding forth, a band
Of mountaineers, all smiles, advance—
Nymphs with their lovers, hand in hand,
Link'd in the Ariadne dance ;²

And while, apart from that gay throng,
A minstrel youth, in varied song,
Tells of the loves, the joys, the ills 320

Of these wild children of the hills,
The rest by turns, or fierce or gay,
As war or sport inspires the lay,

Follow each change that wakes the strings,

And act what thus the lyrist sings :—

SONG

No life is like the mountaineer's,

His home is near the sky,
Where, thron'd above this world, he hears

Its strife at distance die.
Or, should the sound of hostile drum 330
Proclaim below, ' We come—we come,'
Each crag that tow'rs in air

Gives answer, ' Come who dare !'

¹ ——— virginibus bacchata Lacænis
Taygeta. Virg.

While, like bees, from dell and dingle,
Swift the swarming warriors mingle,
And their cry ' Hurra !' will be,
' Hurra, to victory !'

Then, when battle's hour is over,
See the happy mountain lover,
With the nymph, who'll soon be bride,
Seated blushing by his side,— 341
Every shadow of his lot
In her sunny smile forgot.

Oh, no life is like the mountaineer's,
His home is near the sky,
Where, thron'd above this world, he hears

Its strife at distance die.
Nor only thus through summer suns
His blithe existence cheerly runs—

Ev'n winter, bleak and dim, 350
Brings joyous hours to him ;

When, his rifle behind him flinging,
He watches the roe-buck springing,
And away, o'er the hills away
Re-echoes his glad ' hurra.'

Then how blest, when night is closing,
By the kindled hearth reposing,
To his rebeck's drowsy song,

He beguiles the hour along ;
Or, provok'd by merry glances, 360

To a brisker movement dances,
Till, weary at last, in slumber's chain,
He dreams o'er chase and dance again,

Dreams, dreams them o'er again.

As slow that minstrel, at the close,
Sunk, while he sung, to feign'd repose,
Aptly did they, whose mimic art

Follow'd the changes of his lay,
Portray the lull, the nod, the start, 369

Through which, as faintly died away
His lute and voice, the minstrel pass'd,
Till voice and lute lay hush'd at last.

But now far other song came o'er
Their startled ears—song that, at first,
As solemnly the night-wind bore

Across the wave its mournful burst,
Seem'd to the fancy, like a dirge

Of some lone Spirit of the Sea,
Singing o'er Helle's ancient surge 379

The requiem of her Brave and Free.

² See, for an account of this dance, De Guy's Travels.

Sudden, amid their pastime, pause
The wond'ring nymphs; and, as the sound

Of that strange music nearer draws,
With mute enquiring eye look round,
Asking each other what can be
The source of this sad minstrelsy?
Nor longer can they doubt, the song Comes from some island-bark, which
now 388

Courses the bright waves swift along,
And soon, perhaps, beneath the brow
Of the Saint's Rock will shoot its prow.

Instantly all, with hearts that sigh'd
'Twixt fear's and fancy's influence,
Flew to the rock, and saw from thence
A red-sail'd pinnacle tow'rd's them glide,
Whose shadow, as it swept the spray,
Scatter'd the moonlight's smiles away.
Soon as the mariners saw that throng
From the cliff gazing, young and old,
Sudden they slack'd their sail and song,
And, while their pinnacle idly roll'd
On the light surge, these tidings told:—

'Twas from an isle of mournful name,
From Missolonghi, last they came— 404
Sad Missolonghi, sorrowing yet
O'er him, the noblest Star of Fame
That e'er in life's young glory set!—
And now were on their mournful way,
Wafting the news through Helle's
isles;—

News that would cloud ev'n Freedom's
ray, 410

And sadden Vict'ry 'mid her smiles.
Their tale thus told, and heard, with pain,
Out spread the galliot's wings again;
And, as she sped her swift career,
Again that Hymn rose on the ear—
'Thou art not dead—thou art not dead!'
As oft 'twas sung, in ages flown,
Of him, the Athenian, who, to shed
A tyrant's blood, pour'd out his own.

SONG

'Thou art not dead—thou art not dead!'¹
No, dearest Harmodius, no. 421

Thy soul, to realms above us fled,
Though, like a star, it dwells o'er head,
Still lights this world below.

Thou art not dead—thou art not dead!
No, dearest Harmodius, no.

¹ Φιλαδ' Ἀρμόδι' οὐπω τεθνηκας.

Through isles of light, where heroes tread
And flow'rs ethereal blow,
Thy god-like Spirit now is led,
Thy lip, with life ambrosial fed, 430
Forgets all taste of woe.
Thou art not dead—thou art not dead!
No, dearest Harmodius, no.

The myrtle, round that falchion spread
Which struck the immortal blow,
Throughout all time, with leaves un-
shed—

The patriot's hope, the tyrant's dread—
Round Freedom's shrine shall grow.
Thou art not dead—thou art not dead!
No, dearest Harmodius, no. 440

Where hearts like thine have broke or
bled,

Though quench'd the vital glow,
Their mem'ry lights a flame, instead,
Which, ev'n from out the narrow bed
Of death its beams shall throw.
Thou art not dead—thou art not dead!
No, dearest Harmodius, no.

Thy name, by myriads sung and said,
From age to age shall go,
Long as the oak and ivy wed, 450
As bees shall haunt Hymettus' head,
Or Helle's waters flow.
Thou art not dead—thou art not dead!
No dearest Harmodius, no.

'Mong those who linger'd list'ning
there,—

List'ning, with ear and eye, as long
As breath of night could tow'rd's them
bear

A murmur of that mournful song,—
A few there were, in whom the lay
Had call'd up feelings far too sad 460

To pass with the brief strain away,
Or turn at once to theme more glad;
And who, in mood untun'd to meet

The light laugh of the happier train,
Wander'd to seek some moonlight seat
Where they might rest, in converse
sweet,

Till vanish'd smiles should come again.

And seldom e'er hath noon of night
To sadness lent more soothing light.
On one side, in the dark blue sky, 470
Lonely and radiant, was the eye

Of Jove himself, while, on the other,
 'Mong tiny stars that round her
 gleam'd,
 The young moon, like the Roman mother
 Among her living 'jewels,' beam'd.
 Touch'd by the lovely scenes around,
 A pensive maid—one who, though young,
 Had known what 'twas to see un-wound
 The ties by which her heart had clung—
 Waken'd her soft tamboura's sound, 480
 And to its faint accords thus sung:—

SONG

CALM as, beneath its mother's eyes,
 In sleep the smiling infant lies,
 So, watch'd by all the stars of night,
 Yon landscape sleeps in light.
 And while the night-breeze dies away,
 Like relics of some faded strain,
 Lov'd voices, lost for many a day,
 Seem whisp'ring round again.
 Oh youth! oh Love! ye dreams, that
 shed 490
 Such glory once—where are ye fled?
 Pure ray of light that, down the sky,
 Art pointing, like an angel's wand,
 As if to guide to realms that lie
 In that bright sea beyond:
 Who knows but, in some brighter
 deep
 Than ev'n that tranquil, moon-lit main,
 Some land may lie, where those who
 weep
 Shall wake to smile again!

With cheeks that had regain'd their
 power 500
 And play of smiles,—and each bright
 eye,
 Like violets after morning's shower,
 The brighter for the tears gone by,
 Back to the scene such smiles should
 grace
 These wand'ring nymphs their path
 retrace,
 And reach the spot, with rapture new,
 Just as the veils asunder flew,
 And a fresh vision burst to view.

There, by her own bright Attic flood,
 The blue-ey'd Queen of Wisdom stood;—
 Not as she haunts the sage's dreams,
 With brow unvail'd, divine, severe;
 But soften'd, as on bards she beams,
 When fresh from Poesy's high sphere,
 A music, not her own, she brings,
 And, through the veil which Fancy flings
 O'er her stern features, gently sings.

But who is he—that urchin nigh,
 With quiver on the rose-trees hung,
 Who seems just dropp'd from yonder
 sky, 520
 And stands to watch that maid, with
 eye

So full of thought, for one so young?—
 That child—but, silence! lend thine ear,
 And thus in song the tale thou'lt hear:—

SONG

As Love, one summer eve, was straying,
 Who should he see, at that soft hour,
 But young Minerva, gravely playing
 Her flute within an olive bow'r.
 I need not say, 'tis Love's opinion
 That, grave or merry, good or ill, 530
 The sex all bow to his dominion.
 As woman will be woman still.

Though seldom yet the boy hath giv'n
 To learned dames his smiles or sighs,
 So handsome Pallas look'd, that ev'n,
 Love quite forgot the maid was wise.
 Besides, a youth of his discerning
 Knew well that, by a shady rill,
 At sunset hour, whate'er her learning,
 A woman will be woman still. 540

Her flute he prais'd in terms ecstatic,—
 Wishing it dumb, nor car'd how soon;—
 For Wisdom's notes, howe'er chromatic,
 To Love seem always out of tune.
 But long as he found face to flatter,
 The nymph found breath to shake and
 thrill;

As, weak or wise—it doesn't matter—
 Woman, at heart, is woman still.

Love chang'd his plan, with warmth exclaiming,
 'How rosy was her lip's soft dye!'
 And much that flute, the flatt'rer, blaming, 551
 For twisting lips so sweet awry.

The nymph look'd down, beheld her features

Reflected in the passing rill,
And started, shock'd—for, ah, ye creatures!

Ev'n when divine, you're women still,

Quick from the lips it made so odious,
That graceless flute the Goddess took,
And, while yet fill'd with breath melodious,

Flung it into the glassy brook; 560

Where, as its vocal life was fleeting
Adown the current, faint and shrill,
'Twas heard in plaintive tone repeating,
'Woman, alas, vain woman still!'

An interval of dark repose—

Such as the summer lightning knows,
'Twixt flash and flash, as still more bright

The quick revelation comes and goes,
Op'ning each time the veils of night,
To show, within, a world of light— 570

Such pause, so brief, now pass'd between
This last gay vision and the scene,

Which now its depth of light disclos'd.

A bow'r it seem'd, an Indian bow'r,
Within whose shade a nymph repos'd,

Sleeping away noon's sunny hour—
Lovely as she, the Sprite, who weaves
Her mansion of sweet Durva leaves,
And there, as Indian legends say,
Dreams the long summer hours away.
And mark, how charm'd this sleeper seems 581

With some hid fancy—she, too, dreams!
Oh for a wizard's art to tell

The wonders that now bless her sight!
'Tis done—a truer, holier spell

Than e'er from wizard's lip yet fell
Thus brings her vision all to light:—

SONG

'Who comes so gracefully

Gliding along,
While the blue rivulet 590

Sleeps to her song;

Song, richly vying

With the faint sighing

Which swans, in dying,

Sweetly prolong?'

So sung the shepherd-boy

By the stream's side,

Watching that fairy boat

Down the flood glide,

Like a bird winging, 600

Through the waves bringing

That Syren, singing

To the hush'd tide.

'Stay,' said the shepherd-boy,

'Fairy-boat, stay,

Linger, sweet minstrelsy,

Linger, a day.'

But vain his pleading,

Past him, unheeding,

Song and boat, speeding, 610

Glided away.

So to our youthful eyes

Joy and hope shone;

So, while we gaz'd on them,

Fast they flew on;—

Like flow'rs, declining

Ev'n in the twining,

One moment shining,

And, the next, gone!

Soon as the imagin'd dream went by,
Uprose the nymph, with anxious eye

Turn'd to the clouds, as though some boon 622

Shewaited from that sun-brightdome,

And marvell'd that it came not soon

As her young thoughts would have it come.

But joy is in her glance!—the wing

Of a white bird is seen above;

And oh, if round his neck he bring

The long-wish'd tidings from her love,

Not half so precious in her eyes 630

Ev'n that high-omen'd bird¹ would be,

Who dooms the brow o'er which he flies

To wear a crown of Royalty.

She had, herself, last evening, sent

A winged messenger, whose flight

Through the clear, roseate element,

She watch'd till, less'ning out of sight,

Far to the golden West it went,

Waiting to him, her distant love,

A missive in that language wrought

Which flow'rs can speak, when aptly

wove, 641

Each hue a word, each leaf a thought.

¹ The Huma.

And now—oh speed of pinion, known
To Love's light messengers alone!—
Ere yet another ev'ning takes
Its farewell of the golden lakes,
She sees another envoy fly,
With the wish'd answer, through the sky.

SONG

WELCOME, sweet bird, through the sunny air winging,
Swift hast thou come o'er the far-shining sea, 650
Like Seba's dove, on thy snowy neck bringing Love's written vows from my lover
to me.
Oh, in thy absence, what hours did I number!—
Saying oft, 'Idle bird, how could he
rest?'
But thou art come at last, take now thy slumber,
And lull thee in dreams of all thou lov'st best.
Yet dost thou droop—even now while
I utter
Love's happy welcome, thy pulse dies
away;
Cheer thee, my bird—were it life's ebbing flutter,
This fondling bosom should woo it to
stay. 660
But no—thou'rt dying—thy last task is over—
Farewell, sweet martyr to Love and to
me!
The smiles thou hast waken'd by news
from my lover,
Will now all be turn'd into weeping
for thee.

While thus the scene of song (their last
For the sweet summer season) pass'd,
A few presiding nymphs, whose care
Watch'd over all, invisibly,
As do those guardian sprites of air, 669
Whose watch we feel, but cannot see,
Had from the circle—scarcely miss'd,
Ere they were sparkling there again—
Clided, like fairies, to assist
Their handmaids on the moonlight
plain,

Where, hid by intercepting shade
From the stray glance of curious eyes,
A feast of fruits and wines was laid—
Soon to shine out, a glad surprise!

And now the moon, her ark of light
Steering through Heav'n, as though she bore 680
In safety through that deep of night,
Spirits of earth, the good, the bright,
To some remote immortal shore,
Had half-way sped her glorious way,
When, round reclin'd on hillocks green,
In groups, beneath that tranquil ray,
The Zeans at their feast were seen.
Gay was the picture—ev'ry maid
Whom late the lighted scene display'd,
Still in her fancy garb array'd;— 690
The Arabian pilgrim, smiling here
Beside the nymph of India's sky;
While there the Mainiote mountaineer
Whisper'd in young Minerva's ear,
And urchin Love stood laughing by.

Meantime the elders round the board,
By mirth and wit themselves made
young,
High cups of juice Zacynthian pour'd,
And, while the flask went round, thus sung:—

SONG

Up with the sparkling brimmer, 700
Up to the crystal rim;
Let not a moon-beam glimmer
'Twixt the flood and brim.
When hath the world set eyes on
Aught to match this light,
Which, o'er our cup's horizon,
Dawns in bumpers bright?

Truth in a deep well lieth—
So the wise aver:
But Truth the fact denieth— 710
Water suits not her.
No, her abode's in brimmers,
Like this mighty cup—
Waiting till we, good swimmers,
Dive to bring her up.

Thus circled round the song of glee,
And all was tuneful mirth the while,
Save on the cheeks of some, whose
smile,
As fix'd they gaze upon the sea,

Turns into paleness suddenly ! 720
What see they there ? a bright blue
light

That, like a meteor, gliding o'er
The distant wave, grows on the sight,
As though 'twere wing'd to Zea's shore.

To some, 'mong those who came to gaze,
It seem'd the night-light, far away,
Of some lone fisher, by the blaze
Of pine torch, luring on his prey ;

While others, as, 'twixt awe and mirth,
They breath'd the bless'd Panaya's¹
name, 730

Vow'd that such light was not of earth,
But of that drear, ill-omen'd flame,

Which mariners see on sail or mast,
When Death is coming in the blast.

While marv'ling thus they stood, a maid,
Who sat apart, with downcast eye,

Nor yet had, like the rest, survey'd
That coming light which now was nigh,

Soon as it met her sight, with cry 739
Of pain-like joy, 'Tis he ! 'tis he !

Loud she exclaim'd, and, hurrying by
The assembled throng, rush'd tow'rds
the sea.

At burst so wild, alarm'd, amaz'd,
All stood, like statues, mute, and gaz'd
Into each other's eyes, to seek
What meant such mood, in maid so meek ?

Till now, the tale was known to few,
But now from lip to lip it flew :—

A youth, the flower of all the band, 749
Who late had left this sunny shore,

When last he kiss'd that maiden's hand,
Ling'ring, to kiss it o'er and o'er,

By his sad brow too plainly told
Th' ill-omen'd thought which cross'd him then,

That once those hands should lose their hold,

They ne'er would meet on earth again !
In vain his mistress, sad as he,

But with a heart from Self as free
As gen'rous woman's only is,

Veil'd her own fears to banish his :— 760
With frank rebuke, but still more vain,

Did a rough warrior, who stood by
Call to his mind this martial strain,

¹ The name which the Greeks give to the Virgin Mary.

His favourite once, ere Beauty's eye
Had taught his soldier-heart to sigh :—

SONG

MARCH ! nor heed those arms that hold
thee,

Though so fondly close they come ;
Closer still will they enfold thee,

When thou bring'st fresh laurels
home.

Dost thou dote on woman's brow ? 770
Dost thou live but in her breath ?

March !—one hour of victory now
Wins thee woman's smile till death.

Oh what bliss, when war is over,
Beauty's long-miss'd smile to meet,

And, when wreaths our temples cover,
Lay them shining at her feet !

Who would not, that hour to reach,
Breathe out life's expiring sigh,—

Proud as waves that on the beach 780
Lay their war-crests down, and die ?

There ! I see thy soul is burning—
She herself, who clasps thee so,

Paints, ev'n now, thy glad returning,
And, while clasping, bids thee go.

One deep sigh, to passion given,
One last glowing tear and then—

March !—nor rest thy sword, till Heaven
Brings thee to those arms again.

Even then, e'er loth their hands could
part, 790

A promise the youth gave, which bore
Some balm unto the maiden's heart,

That, soon as the fierce fight was o'er,
To home he'd speed, if safe and free—

Nay, ev'n if dying, still would come,
So the blest word of 'Victory !'

Might be the last he'd breathe at
home.

'By day,' he cried, 'thou'lt know my
bark ;

But, should I come through midnight
dark,

A blue light on the prow shall tell 800
That Greece hath won, and all is well !'

Fondly the maiden, every night,
Had stolen to seek that promis'd light ;

Nor long her eyes had now been turn'd
From watching, when the signal burn'd.

Signal of joy—for her, for all—

Fleetly the boat now nears the land,
While voices, from the shore-edge, call
For tidings of the long-wish'd band.

Oh the blest hour, when those who've
been 810

Through peril's paths by land or sea,
Lock'd in our arms again are seen

Smiling in glad security;
When heart to heart we fondly strain,

Questioning quickly o'er and o'er—
Then hold them off, to gaze again,
And ask, though answer'd oft before,
If they, indeed, are ours once more ?

Such is the scene, so full of joy,
Which welcomes now this warrior-boy,
As fathers, sisters, friends all run 821
Bounding to meet him—all but one,
Who, slowest on his neck to fall,
Is yet the happiest of them all.

And now behold him, circled round
With beaming faces, at that board,
While cups, with laurel foliage crown'd,
Are to the coming warriors pour'd,—
Coming, as he, their herald, told, 829
With blades from vict'ry scarce yet cold,
With hearts untouch'd by Moslem steel,
And wounds that home's sweet breath will heal.

'Ere morn,' said he,—and, while he spoke,
Turn'd to the east, where, clear, and
pale,
The star of dawn already broke—
'We'll greet, on yonder wave, their sail !

Then, wherefore part ? all, all agree
To wait them here, beneath this bower ;
And thus, while ev'n amidst their glee,
Each eye is turn'd to watch the sea, 840
With song they cheer the anxious hour.

SONG

'Tis the Vine ! 'tis the Vine !' said the cup-loving boy,
As he saw it spring bright from the earth
And call'd the young Genii of Wit, Love,
and Joy,
To witness and hallow its birth.

The fruit was full grown, like a ruby it flam'd

Till the sun-beam that kiss'd it look'd
pale :

'Tis the Vine ! 'tis the Vine !' ev'ry
Spirit exclaim'd,
'Hail, hail to the Wine-tree, all
hail !'

First, fleet as a bird, to the summons
Wit flew, 850

While a light on the vine-leaves there broke,

In flashes so quick and so brilliant, all knew

'Twas the light from his lips as he spoke.

'Bright tree ! let thy nectar but cheer
me,' he cried,
'And the fount of Wit never can fail !'

'Tis the Vine ! 'tis the Vine !' hills and valleys reply,
Hail, hail to the Wine-tree, all hail !'

Next, Love, as he lean'd o'er the plant to admire

Each tendril and cluster it wore,
From his rosy mouth sent such a breath of desire, 860

As made the tree tremble all o'er.
Oh, never did flow'r of the earth, sea, or
sky,

Such a soul-giving odour inhale :

'Tis the Vine ! 'tis the Vine !' all re-echo the cry,
Hail, hail to the Wine-tree, all
hail !'

Last, Joy, without whom even Love and
Wit die,

Came to crown the bright hour with his ray ;

And scarce had that mirth-waking tree
met his eye,

When a laugh spoke what Joy could not say ;—

A laugh of the heart, which was echoed
around 870

Till, like music, it swell'd on the gale ;

'Tis the Vine ! 'tis the Vine !' laughing
myriads resound,

'Hail, hail to the Wine-tree, all hail !'

LEGENDARY BALLADS

TO

THE MISS FEILDINGS

THIS VOLUME IS INSCRIBED

BY THEIR FAITHFUL FRIEND AND SERVANT

THOMAS MOORE.

THE VOICE

It came o'er her sleep, like a voice of those days,
When love, only love, was the light of her ways;
And, soft as in moments of bliss long ago,
It whisper'd her name from the garden below.

'Alas,' sigh'd the maiden, 'how fancy can cheat!
The world once had lips that could whisper thus sweet;
But cold now they slumber in yon fatal deep,
Where, oh that beside them this heart too could sleep!'

She sunk on her pillow—but no, 'twas in vain
To chase the illusion, that Voice came again!
She flew to the casement—but, hush'd as the grave,
In moonlight lay slumbering woodland and wave.

'Oh sleep, come and shield me,' in anguish she said,
'From that call of the buried, that cry of the Dead!'
And sleep came around her—but, starting, she woke,
For still from the garden that spirit Voice spoke!

'I come,' she exclaim'd, 'be thy home where it may,
On earth or in heaven, that call I obey;'
Then forth through the moonlight, with heart beating fast
And loud as a death-watch, the pale maiden past.

Still round her the scene all in loneliness shone;
And still, in the distance, that Voice led her on;
But whither she wander'd, by wave or by shore,
None ever could tell, for she came back no more.

No, ne'er came she back,—but the watchman who stood,
That night in the tow'r which o'er shadows the flood,
Saw dimly, 'tis said, o'er the moon-lighted spray,
A youth on a steed bear the maiden away.

CUPID AND PSYCHE

THEY told her that he, to whose vows she had listen'd
Through night's fleeting hours, was a Spirit unblest;—
Unholy the eyes, that beside her had glisten'd,
And evil the lips she in darkness had prest.

'When next in thy chamber the bridegroom reclineth,
Bring near him thy lamp, when in slumber he lies;
And there, as the light o'er his dark features shineth,
Thou'lt see what a demon hath won all thy sighs!'

Too fond to believe them, yet doubting, yet fearing,
When calm lay the sleeper she stole with her light;
And saw—such a vision!—no image, appearing
To bards in their day-dreams, was ever so bright.

A youth, but just passing from childhood's sweet morning,
While round him still linger'd its innocent ray;
Though gleams, from beneath his shut eyelids gave warning
Of summer-noon lightnings that under them lay.

His brow had a grace more than mortal around it,
While, glossy as gold from a fairy-land mine,
His sunny hair hung, and the flowers that crown'd it
Seem'd fresh from the breeze of some garden divine.

Entranc'd stood the bride, on that miracle gazing,
What late was but love is idolatry now;
But, ah—in her tremor the fatal lamp raising—
A sparkle flew from it and dropp'd on his brow.

All's lost—with a start from his rosy sleep waking,
The Spirit flash'd o'er her his glances of fire;
Then, slow from the clasp of her snowy arms breaking,
Thus said, in a voice more of sorrow than ire:

'Farewell—what a dream thy suspicion hath broken!
Thus ever Affection's fond vision is crost;
Dissolv'd are her spells when a doubt is but spoken,
And love, once distrusted, for ever is lost!'

HERO AND LEANDER

'THE night-wind is moaning with mournful sigh,
There gleameth no moon in the misty sky,
No star over Helle's sea;
Yet, yet, there is shining one holy light,
One love-kindled star through the deep of night,
To lead me, sweet Hero, to thee!'

Thus saying, he plung'd in the foamy stream
Still fixing his gaze on that distant beam
No eye but a lover's could see;
And still, as the surge swept over his head,
'To-night,' he said tenderly, 'living or dead,
Sweet Hero, I'll rest with thee!'

But fiercer around him the wild waves speed;
Oh, Love! in that hour of thy votary's need,
Where, where could thy Spirit be?
He struggles—he sinks—while the hurricane's breath
Bears rudely away his last farewell in death—
'Sweet Hero, I die for thee!' —

THE LEAF AND THE FOUNTAIN

'TELL me, kind Seer, I pray thee,
So may the stars obey thee,
So may each airy
Moon-elf and fairy
Nightly their homage pay thee !
Say, by what spell, above, below,
In stars that wink or flow'rs that blow,

I may discover,
Ere night is over,
Whether my love loves me or no,
Whether my love loves me.'

'Maiden, the dark tree nigh thee
Hath charms no gold could buy thee ;
Its stem enchanted,
By moon-elves planted,
Will all thou seek'st supply thee.
Climb to yon boughs that highest grow,

Bring thence their fairest leaf below ;
And thou'lt discover,
Ere night is over,
Whether thy love loves thee or no,
Whether thy love loves thee.'

'See, up the dark tree going,
With blossoms round me blowing,
From thence, oh Father,
This leaf I gather,
Fairest that there is growing.
Say, by what sign I now shall know
If in this leaf lie bliss or woe ;
And thus discover,
Ere night is over,
Whether my love loves me or no,
Whether my love loves me.'

'Fly to yon fount that's welling,
Where moonbeam ne'er had dwelling,
Dip in its water
That leaf, oh Daughter,
And mark the tale 'tis telling ;¹
Watch thou if pale or bright it grow,
List thou, the while, that fountain's
flow,

¹ The ancients had a mode of divination somewhat similar to this ; and we find the Emperor Adrian, when he went to consult the Fountain of Castalia, plucking a bay-leaf and dipping it into the sacred water.

And thou'lt discover
Whether thy lover,
Lov'd as he is, loves thee or no,
Lov'd as he is, loves thee.'

Forth flew the nymph, delighted,
To seek that fount benighted ;
But, scarce a minute
The leaf lay in it,
When, lo, its bloom was blighted !
And as she ask'd, with voice of woe—
List'ning, the while, that fountain's
flow—

'Shall I recover
My truant lover ?'
The fountain seem'd to answer, 'No ;'
The fountain answer'd, 'No.'

CEPHALUS AND PROCRIS

A HUNTER once in that grove reclin'd,
To shun the noon's bright eye,
And oft he woo'd the wandering wind,
To cool his brow with its sigh.
While mute lay ev'n the wild bee's
hum,
Nor breath could stir the aspen's
hair,
His song was still 'Sweet air, oh
come !'
While Echo answer'd, 'Come, sweet
Air !'

But, hark, what sounds from the thicket
rise !

What meaneth that rustling spray ?
'Tis the white-horn'd doe,' the Hunter
cries,
'I have sought since break of day.'
Quick o'er the sunny glade he springs,
The arrow flies from his sounding bow,

'Hilliho—hilliho !' he gaily sings,
While Echo sighs forth 'Hilliho !'

Alas, 'twas not the white-horned doe
He saw in the rustling grove,
But the bridal veil, as pure as snow,
Of his own young wedded love.
And, ah, too sure that arrow sped,
For pale at his feet he sees her lie ;—
'I die, I die,' was all she said,
While Echo murmur'd, 'I die, I die !'

YOUTH AND AGE¹

'TELL me, what's Love?' said Youth,
 one day,
 To drooping Age, who crost his way.—
 'It is a sunny hour of play,
 For which repentance dear doth pay;
 Repentance! Repentance!
 And this is Love, as wise men say.'
 'Tell me, what's Love?' said Youth
 once more,
 Fearful, yet fond, of Age's lore.—
 'Soft as a passing summer's wind:
 Would'st know the blight it leaves behind?
 Repentance! Repentance!
 And this is Love—when love is o'er.'
 'Tell me, what's Love?' said Youth again,
 Trusting the bliss, but not the pain.
 'Sweet as a May tree's scented air—
 Mark ye what bitter fruit 'twill bear,
 Repentance! Repentance!
 This, this is Love—sweet Youth, beware.'
 Just then, young Love himself came by,
 And cast on Youth a smiling eye;
 Who could resist that glance's ray?
 In vain did Age his warning say,
 'Repentance! Repentance!'
 Youth laughing went with Love away.

THE DYING WARRIOR

A WOUNDED Chieftain, lying
 By the Danube's leafy side,
 Thus faintly said, in dying,
 'Oh! bear, thou foaming tide,
 This gift to my lady-bride.'
 'Twas then, in life's last quiver,
 He flung the scarf he wore
 Into the foaming river,
 Which, ah too quickly, bore
 That pledge of one no more!
 With fond impatience burning,
 The Chieftain's lady stood,
 To watch her love returning
 In triumph down the flood,
 From that day's field of blood.
 But, field, alas, ill-fated!
 The lady saw, instead
 Of the bark whose speed she waited,
 Her hero's scarf, all red
 With the drops his heart had shed.
 One shriek—and all was over—
 Her life-pulse ceas'd to beat;
 The gloomy waves now cover
 That bridal-flower so sweet,
 And the scarf is her winding sheet!

THE MAGIC MIRROR

'COME, if thy magic Glass have pow'r
 To call up forms we sigh to see;
 Show me my love, in that rosy bow'r,
 Where last she pledg'd her truth to me.'
 The Wizard show'd him his Lady bright,
 Where lone and pale in her bow'r she lay;
 'True-hearted maid,' said the happy Knight,
 'She's thinking of one, who is far away.'
 But, lo! a page, with looks of joy,
 Brings tidings to the Lady's ear;
 "'Tis," said the Knight, 'the same bright boy,
 Who used to guide me to my dear.'
 The Lady now, from her fav'rite tree,
 Hath, smiling, pluck'd a rosy flow'r;
 'Such,' he exclaim'd, 'was the gift that she
 Each morning sent me from that bow'r!'

¹ The air, to which I have adapted these words, was composed by Mrs. Arkwright to some old verses, 'Tell me what's love, kind shepherd, pray?' and it has been my object to retain as much of the structure and phraseology of the original words as possible.

She gives her page the blooming rose,
 With looks that say, 'Like lightning, fly!'
 'Thus,' thought the Knight, 'she soothes her woes,
 By fancying, still, her true-love nigh.'

But the page returns, and—oh, what a sight,
 For trusting lover's eyes to see!—
 Leads to that bow'r another Knight,
 As young and, alas, as lov'd as he!

'Such,' quoth the Youth, 'is Woman's love!'
 Then, darting forth, with furious bound,
 Dash'd at the Mirror his iron glove,
 And strew'd it all in fragments round.

MORAL

Such ills would never have come to pass,
 Had he ne'er sought that fatal view;
 The Wizard would still have kept his Glass,
 And the Knight still thought his Lady true.

THE PILGRIM

STILL thus, when twilight gleam'd,
 Far off his Castle seem'd,
 Trac'd on the sky;
 And still, as fancy bore him
 To those dim tow'rs before him,
 He gaz'd, with wishful eye,
 And thought his home was nigh.

'Hall of my Sires!' he said,
 'How long, with weary tread,
 Must I toil on?
 Each eve, as thus I wander,
 Thy tow'rs seem rising yonder,
 But, scarce hath daylight shone,
 When, like a dream, thou'rt gone!'

So went the Pilgrim still,
 Down dale and over hill,
 Day after day;
 That glimpse of home, so cheering,
 At twilight still appearing,
 But still, with morning's ray,
 Melting, like mist, away!

Where rests the Pilgrim now?
 Here, by this cypress bough,
 Clos'd his career;
 That dream, of Fancy's weaving,
 No more his steps deceiving,
 Alike past hope and fear,
 The Pilgrim's home is here.

THE HIGH-BORN LADYE

IN vain all the Knights of the Underwald woo'd her,
 Though brightest of maidens, the proudest was she;
 Brave chieftains they sought, and young minstrels they sued her,
 But worthy were none of the high-born Ladye.

'Whomsoever I wed,' said this maid, so excelling,
 'That Knight must the conqueror of conquerors be;
 He must place me in halls fit for monarchs to dwell in;—
 None else shall be Lord of the high-born Ladye!'

Thus spoke the proud damsel, with scorn looking round her
 On Knights and on Nobles of highest degree;
 Who humbly and hopelessly left as they found her,
 And worshipp'd at distance the high-born Ladye.

At length came a Knight, from a far land to woo her,
With plumes on his helm like the foam of the sea;
His vizor was down—but, with voice that thrill'd through her,
He whisper'd his vows to the high-born Ladye.

'Proud maiden! I come with high spousals to grace thee,
In me the great conqueror of conquerors see;
Enthron'd in a hall fit for monarchs I'll place thee,
And mine thou'rt for ever, thou high-born Ladye!'

The maiden she smil'd, and in jewels array'd her,
Of thrones and tiaras already dreamt she;
And proud was the step, as her bridegroom convey'd her
In pomp to his home, of that high-born Ladye.

'But whither,' she, starting, exclaims, 'have you led me?
Here's nought but a tomb and a dark cypress tree;
Is this the bright palace in which thou wouldst wed me?'
With scorn in her glance, said the high-born Ladye.

'Tis the home,' he replied, 'of earth's loftiest creatures'
Then lifted his helm for the fair one to see;
But she sunk on the ground—'twas a skeleton's features,
And Death was the Lord of the high-born Ladye!

THE INDIAN BOAT

'Twas midnight dark,
The seaman's bark,
Swift o'er the waters bore him,
When, through the night,
He spied a light
Shoot o'er the wave before him.
'A sail! a sail!' he cries;
'She comes from the Indian shore,
And to-night shall be our prize,
With her freight of golden ore:
Sail on! sail on!'
When morning shone
He saw the gold still clearer;
But, though so fast
The waves he pass'd,
That boat seem'd never the nearer.

Bright daylight came,
And still the same
Rich bark before him floated;
While on the prize
His wishful eyes
Like any young lover's doated:
'More sail! more sail!' he cries,
While the waves o'ertop the mast;

And his bounding galley flies,
Like an arrow before the blast.
Thus on, and on,
Till day was gone,
And the moon through heav'n did hieher,
He swept the main,
But all in vain,
That boat seem'd never the nigher.

And many a day
To night gave way,
And many a morn succeeded:
While still his flight,
Through day and night,
That restless mariner speeded.
Who knows—who knows what seas
He is now careering o'er?
Behind, the eternal breeze,
And that mocking bark, before!
For, oh, till sky
And earth shall die,
And their death leave none to rue it,
That boat must flee
O'er the boundless sea,
And that ship in vain pursue it.

THE STRANGER

COME list, while I tell of the heart-wounded Stranger
Who sleeps her last slumber in this haunted ground ;
Where often, at midnight, the lonely wood-ranger
Hears soft fairy music re-echo around.

None e'er knew the name of that heart-stricken lady,
Her language, though sweet, none could e'er understand ;
But her features so sunn'd, and her eyelash so shady,
Bespoke her a child of some far Eastern land.

'Twas one summer night, when the village lay sleeping,
A soft strain of melody came o'er our ears ;
So sweet, but so mournful, half song and half weeping,
Like music that Sorrow had steep'd in her tears.

We thought 'twas an anthem some angel had sung us ;—
But, soon as the day-beams had gush'd from on high,
With wonder we saw this bright stranger among us,
All lovely and lone, as if stray'd from the sky.

Nor long did her life for this sphere seem intended,
For pale was her cheek, with that spirit-like hue,
Which comes when the day of this world is nigh ended,
And light from another already shines through.

Then her eyes, when she sung—oh, but once to have seen them—
Left thoughts in the soul that can never depart ;
While her looks and her voice made a language between them,
That spoke more than holiest words to the heart.

But she pass'd like a day-dream, no skill could restore her—
Whate'er was her sorrow, its ruin came fast ;
She died with the same spell of mystery o'er her,
That song of past days on her lips to the last.

Nor ev'n in the grave is her sad heart reposing—
Still hovers the spirit of grief round her tomb ;
For oft, when the shadows of midnight are closing,
The same strain of music is heard through the gloom.

A MELOLOGUE UPON NATIONAL MUSIC

ADVERTISEMENT

THESE verses were written for a Benefit at the Dublin Theatre, and were spoken by Miss Smith, with a degree of success, which they owed solely to her admirable manner of reciting them. I wrote them in haste; and it very rarely happens that poetry, which has cost but little labour to the writer, is productive of any great pleasure to the reader. Under this impression, I certainly should not have published them if they had not found their way into some of the newspapers, with such an addition of errors to their own original stock, that I thought it but fair to limit their responsibility to those faults alone which really belong to them.

With respect to the title which I have invented for this Poem, I feel even more than the scruples of the Emperor Tiberius, when he humbly asked pardon of the Roman Senate for using 'the outlandish term, monopoly.' But the truth is, having written the Poem with the sole view of serving a Benefit, I thought that an unintelligible word of this kind would not be without its attraction for the multitude, with whom, 'If 'tis not sense, at least 'tis Greek.' To some of my readers, however, it may not be superfluous to say, that by 'Melologue,' I mean that mixture of recitation and music, which is frequently adopted in the performance of Collins's Ode on the Passions, and of which the most striking example I can remember is the prophetic speech of Joad in the Athalie of Racine.

MELOLOGUE

A SHORT STRAIN OF MUSIC FROM THE ORCHESTRA

There breathes a language, known and felt
Far as the pure air spreads its living zone;
Wherever rage can rouse, or pity melt,
That language of the soul is felt and known.
From those meridian plains,
Where oft, of old, on some high tow'r,
The soft Peruvian pour'd his midnight strains,
And call'd his distant love with such sweet pow'r,
That, when she heard the lonely lay,
Not worlds could keep her from his arms away.¹
To the bleak climes of polar night,
Where blithe, beneath a sunless sky,
The Lapland lover bids his rein-deer fly,
And sings along the length'ning waste of snow,
Gaily as if the blessed light
Of vernal Phoebus burn'd upon his brow;

10

¹ 'A certain Spaniard, one night late, met an Indian woman in the streets of Cozco, and would have taken her to his home, but she cried out, "For God's sake, Sir, let me go; for that pipe, which you hear in yonder tower, calls me with great passion, and I cannot refuse the summons; for love constrains me to go, that I may be his wife, and he my husband."—Garcilasso de la Vega, in Sir Paul Rycaut's translation.

Oh Music ! thy celestial claim
 Is still resistless, still the same ;
 And, faithful as the mighty sea
 To the pale star that o'er its realm presides,
 The spell-bound tides
 Of human passion rise and fall for thee !

20

GREEK AIR

List ! 'tis a Grecian maid that sings,
 While, from Ilissus' silv'ry springs,
 She draws the cool lymph in her graceful urn ;
 And by her side, in Music's charm dissolving,
 Some patriot youth, the glorious past revolving,
 Dreams of bright days that never can return ;
 When Athens nurs'd her olive bough,
 With hands by tyrant pow'r unchain'd ;
 And braided for the muse's brow
 A wreath by tyrant touch unstain'd.
 When heroes trod each classic field
 Where coward feet now faintly falter ;
 When ev'ry arm was Freedom's shield,
 And ev'ry heart was Freedom's altar !

30

FLOURISH OF TRUMPETS

Hark, 'tis the sound that charms
 The war-steed's wak'ning ears !—
 Oh ! many a mother folds her arms
 Round her boy-soldier when that call she hears ;
 And, though her fond heart sink with fears,
 Is proud to feel his young pulse bound
 With valour's fever at the sound.
 See, from his native hills afar
 The rude Helvetian flies to war ;
 Careless for what, for whom he fights,
 For slave or despot, wrongs or rights ;
 A conqueror oft—a hero never—
 Yet lavish of his life-blood still,
 As if 'twere like his mountain rill,
 And gush'd for ever !

40

50

Yes, Music, here, even here,
 Amid this thoughtless, vague career,
 Thy soul-felt charm asserts its wondrous pow'r.—
 There's a wild air which oft, among the rocks
 Of his own loved land, at ev'ning hour,
 Is heard, when shepherds homeward pipe their flocks,
 Whose every note hath power to thrill his mind
 With tend'rest thoughts ; to bring around his knees
 The rosy children whom he left behind,
 And fill each little angel eye
 With speaking tears, that ask him why
 He wander'd from his hut for scenes like these.

60

Vain, vain is then the trumpet's brazen roar ;
 Sweet notes of home, of love, are all he hears ;
 And the stern eyes, that look'd for blood before,
 Now melting, mournful, lose themselves in tears.

SWISS AIR.—' RANZ DES VACHES '

But, wake the trumpet's blast again,
 And rouse the ranks of warrior-men !
 Oh War, when Truth thy arm employs,
 And Freedom's spirit guides the labouring storm,
 'Tis then thy vengeance takes a hallow'd form,
 And, like Heaven's light'ning, sacredly destroys.
 Nor, Music, through thy breathing sphere,
 Lives there a sound more grateful to the ear
 Of Him who made all harmony,
 Than the bless'd sound of fetters breaking,
 And the first hymn that man, awaking
 From Slavery's slumber, breathes to Liberty.

70

SPANISH CHORUS

Hark ! from Spain, indignant Spain,
 Bursts the bold, enthusiast strain,
 Like morning's music on the air ;
 And seems, in every note, to swear
 By Saragossa's ruin'd streets,
 By brave Gerona's deathful story,
 That, while one Spaniard's life-blood beats,
 That blood shall stain the conqu'ror's glory.

80

SPANISH AIR.—' YA DESPERTO '

But ah ! if vain the patriot's zeal,
 If neither valour's force nor wisdom's light
 Can break or melt that blood-cemented seal,
 Which shuts so close the book of Europe's right—
 What song shall then in sadness tell
 Of broken pride, of prospects shaded,
 Of buried hopes, remember'd well,
 Of ardour quench'd, and honour faded ?
 What muse shall mourn the breathless brave,
 In sweetest dirge at Memory's shrine ?
 What harp shall sigh o'er Freedom's grave ?
 Oh Erin, Thine !

SET OF GLEES

MUSIC BY MOORE

THE MEETING OF THE SHIPS

WHEN o'er the silent seas alone,
For days and nights we've cheerless gone,
Oh they who've felt it know how sweet,
Some sunny morn a sail to meet.

Sparkling at once is ev'ry eye,
'Ship ahoy! ship ahoy!' our joyful cry;
While answering back the sounds we hear
'Ship ahoy! ship ahoy! what cheer? what cheer?'

Then sails are back'd, we nearer come,
Kind words are said of friends and home;
And soon, too soon, we part with pain,
To sail o'er silent seas again.

HIP, HIP, HURRA!

COME, fill round a bumper, fill up to the brim,
He who shrinks from a bumper I pledge not to him;
'Here's the girl that each loves, be her eye of what hue,
Or lustre, it may, so her heart is but true.'

Charge! (drinks) hip, hip, hurra, hurra!

Come, charge high again, boys, nor let the full wine
Leave a space in the brimmer, where daylight may shine;
'Here's the friends of our youth—though of some we're bereft
May the links that are lost but endear what are left!'

Charge! (drinks) hip, hip, hurra, hurra!

Once more fill a bumper—ne'er talk of the hour;
On hearts thus united old Time has no pow'r.
'May our lives, tho', alas! like the wine of to-night
They must soon have an end, to the last flow as bright.'

Charge! (drinks) hip, hip, hurra, hurra!

Quick, quick, now, I'll give you, since Time's glass will run
Ev'n faster than ours doth, three bumpers in one;
'Here's the poet who sings—here's the warrior who fights—
Here's the statesman who speaks, in the cause of men's rights!'

Charge! (drinks) hip, hip, hurra, hurra!

Come, once more, a bumper!—then drink as you please,
Tho', who could fill half-way to toast such as these?
'Here's our next joyous meeting—and oh when we meet,
May our wine be as bright and our union as sweet!'

Charge! (drinks) hip, hip, hurra, hurra!

HUSH, HUSH!

'HUSH, hush!'—how well
That sweet word sounds,
When Love, the little sentinel,
Walks his night-rounds;
Then, if a foot but dare
One rose-leaf crush,
Myriads of voices in the air
Whisper, 'Hush, hush!'

'Hark, hark, 'tis he!'
The night-elves cry,
And hush their fairy harmony,
While he steals by;
But if his silv'ry feet
One dew-drop brush,
Voices are heard in chorus sweet,
Whispering, 'Hush, hush!'

THE PARTING BEFORE THE BATTLE

HE

ON to the field, our doom is seal'd,
To conquer or be slaves:
This sun shall see our nation free,
Or set upon our graves.

SHE

Farewell, oh farewell, my love,
May Heav'n thy guardian be,
And send bright angels from above
To bring thee back to me.

HE

ON to the field, the battle-field,
Where Freedom's standard waves,
This sun shall see our tyrant yield,
Or shine upon our graves.

THE WATCHMAN

A TRIO

WATCHMAN

Past twelve o'clock—past twelve.

Good night, good night, my dearest—
How fast the moments fly!
'Tis time to part, thou hearest
That hateful watchman's cry.

WATCHMAN

Past one o'clock—past one.

Yet stay a moment longer—
Alas! why is it so,
The wish to stay grows stronger,
The more 'tis time to go?

WATCHMAN

Past two o'clock—past two.

Now wrap thy cloak about thee—
The hours must sure go wrong,
For when they're pass'd without thee,
They're, oh, ten times as long.

WATCHMAN

Past three o'clock—past three.

Again that dreadful warning!
Had ever time such flight?
And see the sky, 'tis morning—
So now, indeed, good night.

WATCHMAN

Past three o'clock—past three.

Good night, good night.

SAY, WHAT SHALL WE DANCE?

SAY, what shall we dance?
Shall we bound along the moonlight plain,
To music of Italy, Greece, or Spain?

Say, what shall we dance?
Shall we, like those who rove
Through bright Grenada's grove,
To the light Bolero's measures move?
Or choose the Guaracia's languishing lay,
And thus to its sound die away?

Strike the gay chords,
Let us hear each strain from ev'ry shore
That music haunts, or young feet wander
o'er.

Hark! 'tis the light march, to whose measured time,
The Polish lady, by her lover led,
Delights through gay saloons with step
untired to tread,
Or sweeter still, through moonlight walks,
Whose shadows serve to hide
The blush that's rais'd by him who talks
Of love the while by her side;
Then comes the smooth waltz, to whose floating sound
Like dreams we go gliding around,
Say, which shall we dance? which shall we dance?

THE EVENING GUN

REMEMB'REST thou that setting sun,
 The last I saw with thee,
 When loud we heard the ev'ning gun
 Peal o'er the twilight sea ?
 Boom !—the sounds appear'd to sweep
 Far o'er the verge of day,
 Till, into realms beyond the deep,
 They seem'd to die away.

Oft, when the toils of day are done,
 In pensive dreams of thee,
 I sit to hear that ev'ning gun,
 Peal o'er the stormy sea.
 Boom !—and while, o'er billows curl'd,
 The distant sounds decay,
 I weep and wish, from this rough world,
 Like them, to die away.

BALLADS, SONGS, MISCELLANEOUS
POEMS, ETC.

TO-DAY, DEAREST ! IS OURS

TO-DAY, dearest ! is ours ;
 Why should Love carelessly lose it ?
 This life shines on lowly
 Just as we, weak mortals, use it.
 'Tis time enough, when its flow'rs decay,
 To think of the thorns of Sorrow ;
 And Joy, if left on the stem to-day,
 May wither before to-morrow.

Then why, dearest ! so long
 Let the sweet moments fly over ?
 Though now, blooming and young,
 Thou hast me devoutly thy lover :
 Yet Time from both, in his silent lapse,
 Some treasure may steal or borrow ;
 Thy charms may be less in bloom,
 perhaps,
 Or I less in love to-morrow.

WHEN ON THE LIP THE SIGH DELAYS

WHEN on the lip the sigh delays,
 As if 'twould linger there for ever ;
 When eyes would give the world to gaze,
 Yet still look down, and venture never ;
 When, though with fairest nymphs we
 rove,
 There's one we dream of more than any—
 If all this is not real love,
 'Tis something wond'rous like it,
 Fanny !
 To think and ponder, when apart,
 On all we've got to say at meeting ;
 And yet when near, with heart to heart,
 Sit mute, and listen to their beating :

To see but one bright object move,
 The only moon, where stars are
 many—
 If all this is not downright love,
 I prithee say what is, my Fanny !
 When Hope foretells the brightest, best,
 Though Reason on the darkest reckons ;
 When Passion drives us to the west,
 Though Prudence to the eastward
 beckons ;
 When all turns round, below, above,
 And our own heads the most of any—
 If this is not stark, staring love,
 Then you and I are sages, Fanny.

HERE, TAKE MY HEART

HERE, take my heart—'twill be safe in thy keeping,
 While I go wand'ring o'er land and o'er sea ;
 Smiling or sorrowing, waking or sleeping,
 What need I care, so my heart is with thee ?

If, in the race we are destin'd to run, love,
 They who have light hearts the happiest be,
 Then, happier still must be they who have none, love,
 And that will be my case when mine is with thee.

It matters not where I may now be a rover,
 I care not how many bright eyes I may see ;
 Should Venus herself come and ask me to love her,
 I'd tell her I couldn't—my heart is with thee.

And there let it lie, growing fonder and fonder—
 For, even should Fortune turn truant to me,
 Why, let her go—I've a treasure beyond her,
 As long as my heart's out at int'rest with thee !

OH, CALL IT BY SOME BETTER NAME

OH, call it by some better name,
 For Friendship sounds too cold,
 While Love is now a worldly flame,
 Whose shrine must be of gold ;
 And Passion, like the sun at noon,
 That burns o'er all he sees,
 Awhile as warm, will set as soon—
 Then, call it none of these.

Imagine something purer far,
 More free from stain of clay
 Than Friendship, Love, or Passion are,
 Yet human still as they :
 And if thy lip, for love like this,
 No mortal word can frame,
 Go, ask of angels what it is,
 And call it by that name !

POOR WOUNDED HEART

Poor wounded heart, farewell !
 Thy hour of rest is come ;
 Thou soon wilt reach thy home,
 Poor wounded heart, farewell !
 The pain thou'lt feel in breaking
 Less bitter far will be,
 Than that long, deadly aching,
 This life has been to thee.

There—broken heart, farewell !
 The pang is o'er—
 The parting pang is o'er ;
 Thou now wilt bleed no more,
 Poor broken heart, farewell !

No rest for thee but dying—
 Like waves, whose strife is past,
 On death's cold shore thus lying,
 Thou sleep'st in peace at last—
 Poor broken heart, farewell !

THE EAST INDIAN

COME, May, with all thy flowers,
 Thy sweetly-scented thorn,
 Thy cooling ev'ning showers,
 Thy fragrant breath at morn :
 When May-flies haunt the willow,
 When May-buds tempt the bee,
 Then o'er the shining billow
 My love will come to me.

From Eastern Isles she's winging
 Through wat'ry wilds her way,
 And on her cheek is bringing
 The bright sun's orient ray :
 Oh, come and court her hither,
 Ye breezes mild and warm—
 One winter's gale would wither
 So soft, so pure a form.

The fields where she was straying
 Are blest with endless light,
 With zephyrs always playing
 Through gardens always bright.
 Then now, sweet May ! be sweeter
 Than e'er thou'st been before ;
 Let sighs from roses meet her
 When she comes near our shore.

POOR BROKEN FLOWER

POOR broken flow'r! what art can now recover thee?

Torn from the stem that fed thy rosy breath—

In vain the sun-beams seek

To warm that faded cheek;

The dews of heav'n, that once like balm fell over thee,

Now are but tears, to weep thy early death.

So droops the maid whose lover hath forsaken her,—

Thrown from his arms, as lone and lost as thou;

In vain the smiles of all

Like sun-beams round her fall;

The only smile that could from death awaken her,

That smile, alas! is gone to others now.

THE PRETTY ROSE-TREE

BEING weary of love,

I flew to the grove,

And chose me a tree of the fairest;

Saying, 'Pretty Rose-tree,

Thou my mistress shalt be,

And I'll worship each bud thou bearest.

For the hearts of this world are hollow,

And fickle the smiles we follow;

And 'tis sweet, when all

Their witch'ries pall,

To have a pure love to fly to:

So, my pretty Rose-tree,

Thou my mistress shalt be,

And the only one now I shall sigh to.'

When the beautiful hue

Of thy cheek through the dew

Of morning is bashfully peeping,

'Sweet tears,' I shall say

(As I brush them away),

'At least there's no art in this weeping.'

Although thou should'st die to-morrow,

'Twill not be from pain or sorrow;

And the thorns of thy stem

Are not like them

With which men wound each other:

So my pretty Rose-tree,

Thou my mistress shalt be,

And I'll ne'er again sigh to another.

SHINE OUT, STARS!

SHINE out, Stars! let Heav'n assemble

Round us ev'ry festal ray,

Lights that move not, lights that tremble,

All to grace this Eve of May.

Let the flow'r-beds all lie waking,

And the odours shut up there,

From their downy prisons breaking,

Fly abroad through sea and air.

And would Love, too, bring his sweetness,

With our other joys to weave,

Oh what glory, what completeness,

Then would crown this bright May Eve!

Shine out, Stars! let night assemble

Round us every festal ray,

Lights that move not, lights that tremble,

To adorn this Eve of May.

THE YOUNG MULETEERS OF GRENADA

Oh, the joys of our ev'ning posada,

Where, resting at close of day,

We, young Muleteers of Grenada,

Sit and sing the sunshine away;

So merry, that even the slumbers,

That round us hung, seem gone;

Till the lute's soft drowsy numbers

Again beguile them on.

Oh the joys, &c.

Then as each to his loved sultana

In sleep still breathes the sigh,

The name of some black-eyed Tirana

Escapes our lips as we lie.

Till, with morning's rosy twinkle,

Again we're up and gone—

While the mule-bell's drowsy tinkle

Beguiles the rough way on.

Oh the joys of our merry posada,

Where, resting at close of day,

We, young Muleteers of Grenada,

Thus sing the gay moments away.

TELL HER, OH, TELL HER

TELL her, oh, tell her, the lute she left lying
 Beneath the green arbour, is still lying there;
 And breezes, like lovers, around it are sighing,
 But not a soft whisper replies to their pray'r.

Tell her, oh, tell her, the tree that, in going,
 Beside the green arbour she playfully set,
 As lovely as ever is blushing and blowing,
 And not a bright leaflet has fall'n from it yet.

So while away from that arbour forsaken,
 The maiden is wandering, still let her be
 As true as the lute, that no sighing can waken,
 And blooming for ever, unchang'd as the tree.

NIGHTS OF MUSIC

NIGHTS of music, nights of loving,
 Lost too soon, remember'd long,
 When we went by moonlight roving,
 Hearts all love and lips all song.
 When this faithful lute recorded
 All my spirit felt to thee;
 And that smile the song rewarded—
 Worth whole years of fame to me!

Nights of song, and nights of splendour,
 Fill'd with joys too sweet to last—
 Joys that, like the star-light, tender,
 While they shone, no shadow cast.
 Though all other happy hours
 From my fading mem'ry fly,
 Of that star-light, of those bowers,
 Not a beam, a leaf shall die!

OUR FIRST YOUNG LOVE

OUR first young love resembles
 That short but brilliant ray,
 Which smiles, and weeps, and trembles
 Through April's earliest day.
 And not all life before us,
 Howe'er its lights may play,
 Can shed a lustre o'er us
 Like that first April ray.

Our summer sun may squander
 A blaze serener, grander;
 Our autumn beam
 May, like a dream
 Of heav'n, die calm away;
 But, no—let life before us
 Bring all the light it may,
 'Twill ne'er shed lustre o'er us
 Like that first youthful ray.

BLACK AND BLUE EYES

THE brilliant black eye
 May in triumph let fly
 All its darts without caring who feels
 'em;
 But the soft eye of blue,
 Though it scatter wounds too,
 Is much better pleas'd when it heals
 'em—

Dear Fanny!
 But the soft eye of blue,
 Though it scatter wounds too,
 Is much better pleas'd when it heals
 'em.

The black eye may say,
 'Come and worship my ray—
 By adoring, perhaps, you may move
 me!

But the blue eye, half hid,
 Says, from under its lid,
 'I love, and am yours, if you love me!'
 Yes, Fanny!
 The blue eye, half hid,
 Says, from under its lid,
 'I love, and am yours, if you love
 me!'

Come tell me, then, why,
 In that lovely blue eye,
 Not a charm of its tint I discover;
 Oh, why should you wear
 The only blue pair
 That ever said 'No' to a lover?
 Dear Fanny!
 Oh, why should you wear
 The only blue pair
 That ever said 'No' to a lover?

DEAR FANNY

'SHE has beauty, but still you must keep your heart cool;
 She has wit, but you mustn't be caught so :'
 Thus Reason advises, but Reason's a fool,
 And 'tis not the first time I have thought so,
 Dear Fanny,
 'Tis not the first time I have thought so.

'She is lovely; then love her, nor let the bliss fly;
 'Tis the charm of youth's vanishing season :'
 Thus Love has advis'd me, and who will deny
 That Love reasons much better than Reason,
 Dear Fanny?
 Love reasons much better than Reason.

FROM LIFE WITHOUT FREEDOM

FROM life without freedom, say, who would not fly?
 For one day of freedom, oh! who would not die?
 Hark!—hark! 'tis the trumpet! the call of the brave,
 The death-song of tyrants, the dirge of the slave.
 Our country lies bleeding—haste, haste to her aid;
 One arm that defends is worth hosts that invade.

In death's kindly bosom our last hope remains—
 The dead fear no tyrants, the grave has no chains.
 On, on to the combat; the heroes that bleed
 For virtue and mankind are heroes indeed.
 And oh, ev'n if Freedom from this world be driven,
 Despair not—at least we shall find her in heaven.

HERE'S THE BOWER

HERE's the bower she lov'd so much,
 And the tree she planted;
 Here's the harp she used to touch—
 Oh, how that touch enchanted!
 Roses now unheeded sigh;
 Where's the hand to wreathe them?
 Songs around neglected lie;
 Where's the lip to breathe them?
 Here's the bower, &c.

Spring may bloom, but she we lov'd
 Ne'er shall feel its sweetness;
 Time, that once so fleetly mov'd,
 Now hath lost its fleetness.
 Years were days, when here she stray'd,
 Days were moments near her;
 Heav'n ne'er form'd a brighter maid,
 Nor Pity wept a dearer!
 Here's the bower, &c.

I SAW THE MOON RISE CLEAR

A FINLAND LOVE SONG

I SAW the moon rise clear
 O'er hills and vales of snow,
 Nor told my fleet rein-deer
 The track I wish'd to go.
 Yet quick he bounded forth;
 For well my rein-deer knew
 I've but one path on earth—
 The path which leads to you.

The gloom that winter cast
 How soon the heart forgets,
 When Summer brings, at last,
 Her sun that never sets!
 So dawn'd my love for you;
 So, fix'd through joy and pain,
 Than summer sun more true,
 'Twill never set again.

LOVE AND THE SUN-DIAL

YOUNG Love found a Dial once, in a dark shade,
Where man ne'er had wander'd nor sunbeam play'd;
'Why thus in darkness lie,' whisper'd young Love;
'Thou, whose gay hours in sunshine should move?'
'I ne'er,' said the Dial, 'have seen the warm sun,
So noonday and midnight to me, Love, are one.'

Then Love took the Dial away from the shade,
And placed her where Heav'n's beam warmly play'd.
There she reclin'd, beneath Love's gazing eye,
While, mark'd all with sunshine, her hours flew by.
'Oh, how,' said the Dial, 'can any fair maid,
That's born to be shone upon, rest in the shade?'

But night now comes on, and the sunbeam's o'er,
And Love stops to gaze on the Dial no more.
Alone and neglected, while bleak rain and winds
Are storming around her, with sorrow she finds
That Love had but number'd a few sunny hours,—
Then left the remainder to darkness and showers!

LOVE AND TIME

'Tis said—but whether true or not
Let bards declare who've seen 'em—
That Love and Time have only got
One pair of wings between 'em.
In courtship's first delicious hour,
The boy full oft can spare 'em;
So, loit'ring in his lady's bower,
He lets the grey-beard wear 'em.
Then is Time's hour of play;
Oh, how he flies, flies away!
But short the moments, short as bright,
When he the wings can borrow;
If Time to-day has had his flight,
Love takes his turn to-morrow.
Ah! Time and Love, your change is then
The saddest and most trying,

When one begins to limp again,
And t'other takes to flying.
Then is Love's hour to stray;
Oh, how he flies, flies away!
But there's a nymph, whose chains I feel,
And bless the silken fetter,
Who knows, the dear one, how to deal
With Love and Time much better.
So well she checks their wanderings,
So peacefully she pairs 'em,
That Love with her ne'er thinks of
wings,
And Time for ever wears 'em.
This is Time's holiday;
Oh, how he flies, flies away.

LOVE'S LIGHT SUMMER-CLOUD

PAIN and sorrow shall vanish before us—
Youth may wither, but feeling will last;
All the shadow that e'er shall fall o'er us,
Love's light summer-cloud only shall cast.
Oh, if to love thee more
Each hour I number o'er
If this a passion be Worthy of thee,
Then be happy, for thus I adore thee.
Charms may wither, but feeling shall last:
All the shadow that e'er shall fall o'er thee,
Love's light summer-cloud sweetly shall cast.

Rest, dear bosom, no sorrows shall pain thee,
 Sighs of pleasure alone shalt thou steal;
 Beam, bright eyelid, no weeping shall stain thee,
 Tears of rapture alone shalt thou feel.
 Oh, if there be a charm
 In love, to banish harm—
 If pleasure's truest spell
 Be to love well,
 Then be happy, for thus I adore thee.
 Charms may wither, but feeling shall last:
 All the shadow that e'er shall fall o'er thee,
 Love's light summer-cloud sweetly shall cast.

LOVE, WAND'RING THROUGH THE GOLDEN MAZE

Love, wand'ring through the golden maze	And soon he found 'twere vain to fly;
Of my beloved's hair,	His heart was close confin'd,
Trac'd every lock with fond delays,	For, every ringlet was a tie—
And, doting, linger'd there.	A chain by beauty twin'd.

MERRILY EVERY BOSOM BOUNDETH

THE TYROLESE SONG OF LIBERTY

MERRILY every bosom boundeth,	Hath no fleetness;
Merrily, oh!	There the maiden's heart
Where the song of Freedom soundeth,	Hath no sweetness—
Merrily, oh!	Ev'ry flow'r of life declineth,
There the warrior's arms	Wearily, oh! wearily, oh!
Shed more splendour;	Cheerily then from hill and valley,
There the maiden's charms	Cheerily, oh!
Shine more tender;	Like your native fountains sally,
Ev'ry joy the land surroundeth,	Cheerily, oh!
Merrily, oh! merrily, oh!	If a glorious death,
Wearily every bosom pineth,	Won by bravery,
Wearily, oh!	Sweeter be than breath
Where the bond of slavery twineth	Sigh'd in slavery,
Wearily, oh!	Round the flag of Freedom rally,
There the warrior's dart	Cheerily, oh! cheerily, oh!

REMEMBER THE TIME

THE CASTILIAN MAID

REMEMBER the time, in La Mancha's shades,
 When our moments so blissfully flew;
 When you call'd me the flower of Castilian maids,
 And I blush'd to be call'd so by you;
 When I taught you to warble the gay seguedille,
 And to dance to the light castanet;
 Oh, never, dear youth, let you roam where you will,
 The delight of those moments forget.

They tell me, you lovers from Erin's green isle
 Every hour a new passion can feel;
 And that soon, in the light of some lovelier smile,
 You'll forget the poor maid of Castile.
 But they know not how brave in the battle you are,
 Or they never could think you would rove;
 For 'tis always the spirit most gallant in war
 That is fondest and truest in love.

OH, SOON RETURN

OUR white sail caught the ev'ning ray,
 The wave beneath us seem'd to burn,
 When all the weeping maid could say
 Was, 'Oh, soon return!'
 Through many a clime our ship was driven,

O'er many a billow rudely thrown;
 Now chill'd beneath a northern heaven,
 Now sunn'd in summer's zone:
 And still, where'er we bent our way,
 When evening bid the west wave burn
 I fancied still I heard her say,
 'Oh, soon return!'

If ever yet my bosom found
 Its thoughts one moment turn'd from
 thee,

'Twas when the combat rag'd around,
 And brave men look'd to me.
 But though the war-field's wild alarm
 For gentle Love was all unmeet,
 He lent to Glory's brow the charm,
 Which made even danger sweet.

And still, when vict'ry's calm came o'er
 The hearts where rage had ceas'd to burn,
 Those parting words I heard once more,
 'Oh, soon return!—Oh, soon return!'

LOVE THEE ?

LOVE thee ?—so well, so tenderly
 Thou'rt lov'd, ador'd by me,
 Fame, fortune, wealth, and liberty,
 Were worthless without thee.
 Though brimm'd with blessings, pure and rare,

Life's cup before me lay,
 Unless thy love were mingled there,
 I'd spurn the draught away.

Love thee ?—so well, so tenderly
 Thou'rt lov'd, ador'd by me,
 Fame, fortune, wealth, and liberty,
 Are worthless without thee.

Without thy smile, the monarch's lot
 To me were dark and lone,
 While, with it, ev'n the humblest cot
 Were brighter than his throne.
 Those worlds, for which the conqu'ror
 sighs,

For me would have no charms;
 My only world thy gentle eyes—
 My throne thy circling arms!
 Oh, yes, so well, so tenderly
 Thou'rt lov'd, ador'd by me,
 Whole realms of light and liberty
 Were worthless without thee.

ONE DEAR SMILE

COULDEST thou look as dear as when
 First I sigh'd for thee;
 Couldst thou make me feel again
 Every wish I breath'd thee then,
 Oh, how blissful life would be!
 Hopes, that now beguiling leave me,
 Joys, that lie in slumber cold—
 All would wake, couldst thou but give
 me
 One dear smile like those of old.

No—there's nothing left us now,
 But to mourn the past;
 Vain was every ardent vow—
 Never yet did heaven allow
 Love so warm, so wild, to last.
 Not even hope could now deceive
 me—
 Life itself looks dark and cold:
 Oh, thou never more canst give me
 One dear smile like those of old.

YES, YES, WHEN THE BLOOM

YES, yes, when the bloom of Love's boyhood is o'er,
 He'll turn into friendship that feels no decay;
 And, though Time may take from him the wings he once wore,
 The charms that remain will be bright as before,
 And he'll lose but his young trick of flying away.

Then let it console thee, if Love should not stay,
 That Friendship our last happy moments will crown:
 Like the shadows of morning, Love lessens away,
 While Friendship, like those at the closing of day,
 Will linger and lengthen as life's sun goes down.

THE DAY OF LOVE

THE beam of morning trembling
 Stole o'er the mountain brook,
 With timid ray resembling Affection's early look.
 Thus love begins—sweet morn of love!

The noon-tide ray ascended,
 And o'er the valley's stream
 Diffus'd a glow as splendid

As passion's riper dream.
 Thus love expands—warm noon of love!

But evening came, o'er shading
 The glories of the sky,
 Like faith and fondness fading
 From passion's alter'd eye.
 Thus love declines—cold eve of love!

LUSITANIAN WAR-SONG

THE song of war shall echo through our
 mountains,
 Till not one hateful link remains
 Of slavery's lingering chains;
 Till not one tyrant tread our plains,
 Nor traitor lip pollute our fountains.
 No! never till that glorious day
 Shall Lusitania's sons be gay,
 Or hear, oh Peace, thy welcome
 lay
 Resounding through her sunny mountains.

The song of war shall echo through our
 mountains,
 Till Victory's self shall, smiling, say,
 'Your cloud of foes hath pass'd away,
 And Freedom comes, with new-born ray,
 To gild your vines and light your foun-
 tains.'
 Oh, never till that glorious day
 Shall Lusitania's sons be gay,
 Or hear, sweet Peace, thy welcome lay
 Resounding through her sunny mountains.

THE YOUNG ROSE

THE young rose I give thee, so dewy and bright,
 Was the flow'et most dear to the sweet bird of night,
 Who oft, by the moon, o'er her blushes hath hung,
 And thrill'd every leaf with the wild lay he sung.

Oh, take thou this young rose, and let her life be Prolong'd by the breath she will borrow from thee;
 For, while o'er her bosom thy soft notes shall thrill,
 She'll think the sweet night-bird is courting her still.

WHEN MIDST THE GAY I MEET

WHEN midst the gay I meet
 That gentle smile of thine,
 Though still on me it turns most sweet,
 I scarce can call it mine :
 But when to me alone
 Your secret tears you show,
 Oh, then I feel those tears my own,
 And claim them while they flow.
 Then still with bright looks bless
 The gay, the cold, the free ;
 Give smiles to those who love you less,
 But keep your tears for me.

The snow on Jura's steep
 Can smile in many a beam,
 Yet still in chains of coldness sleep,
 How bright soe'er it seem.
 But, when some deep-felt ray,
 Whose touch is fire, appears,
 Oh, then the smile is warm'd away,
 And, melting, turns to tears.
 Then still with bright looks bless
 The gay, the cold, the free ;
 Give smiles to those who love you less,
 But keep your tears for me.

WHEN TWILIGHT DEWS

WHEN twilight dew's are falling soft
 Upon the rosy sea, love,
 I watch the star, whose beam so oft
 Has lighted me to thee, love.
 And thou too, on that orb so dear,
 Dost often gaze at even,
 And think, though lost for ever here,
 Thou'lt yet be mine in heaven.

There's not a garden walk I tread,
 There's not a flow'r I see, love,
 But brings to mind some hope that's fled,
 Some joy that's gone with thee, love.
 And still I wish that hour was near,
 When, friends and foes forgiven,
 The pains, the ills we've wept through
 here,
 May turn to smiles in heaven.

YOUNG JESSICA

YOUNG Jessica sat all the day,
 With heart o'er idle love-thoughts
 pining ;
 Her needle bright beside her lay,
 So active once !—now idly shining.

Ah, Jessy, 'tis in idle hearts
 That love and mischief are most nimble ;
 The safest shield against the darts
 Of Cupid, is Minerva's thimble.

The child, who with a magnet plays,
 Well knowing all its arts, so wily,
 The tempter near a needle lays,
 And laughing says, ' We'll steal it slyly.'

The needle, having nought to do,
 Is pleas'd to let the magnet wheedle ;
 Till closer, closer come the two,
 And—off, at length, elopes the needle.

Now, had this needle turn'd its eye
 To some gay reticule's construction,
 It ne'er had stray'd from duty's tie,
 Nor felt the magnet's sly seduction.
 Thus, girls, would you keep quiet
 hearts,
 Your snowy fingers must be nimble ;
 The safest shield against the darts
 Of Cupid, is Minerva's thimble.

HOW HAPPY, ONCE

How happy, once, though wing'd with
 sighs,
 My moments flew along,
 While looking on those smiling eyes,
 And list'ning to thy magic song !
 But vanish'd now, like summer dreams,
 Those moments smile no more ;
 For me that eye no longer beams,
 That song for me is o'er.
 Mine the cold brow,
 That speaks thy alter'd vow,
 While others feel thy sunshine now.

Oh, could I change my love like
 thee,
 One hope might yet be mine—
 Some other eyes as bright to see,
 And hear a voice as sweet as thine :
 But never, never can this heart
 Be wak'd to life again ;
 With thee it lost its vital part,
 And wither'd then !
 Cold its pulse lies,
 And mute are ev'n its sighs,
 All other griefs it now defies.

I LOVE BUT THEE

If, after all, you still will doubt and fear me,
 And think this heart to other loves will stray,
 If I must swear, then, lovely doubter, hear me;
 By ev'ry dream I have when thou'rt away,
 By ev'ry throb I feel when thou art near me,
 I love but thee—I love but thee!

By those dark eyes, where light is ever playing,
 Where Love, in depth of shadow, holds his throne,
 And by those lips, which give whate'er thou'rt saying,
 Or grave or gay, a music of its own,
 A music far beyond all minstrel's playing,
 I love but thee—I love but thee!

By that fair brow, where Innocence reposes,
 As pure as moonlight sleeping upon snow,
 And by that cheek, whose fleeting blush discloses
 A hue too bright to bless this world below,
 And only fit to dwell on Eden's roses,
 I love but thee—I love but thee!

LET JOY ALONE BE REMEMBER'D NOW

Let thy joys alone be remember'd now,
 Let thy sorrows go sleep awhile;
 Or if thought's dark cloud come o'er thy
 brow,
 Let Love light it up with his smile.
 For thus to meet, and thus to find,
 That Time, whose touch can chill
 Each flower of form, each grace of mind,
 Hath left thee blooming still,—
 Oh, joy alone should be thought of now,
 Let our sorrows go sleep awhile;
 Or, should thought's dark cloud come o'er thy brow,
 Let Love light it up with his smile.

When the flowers of life's sweet garden fade,
 If but one bright leaf remain,
 Of the many that once its glory made,
 It is not for us to complain.
 But thus to meet and thus to wake
 In all Love's early bliss;
 Oh, Time all other gifts may take,
 So he but leaves us this!
 Then let joy alone be remember'd now,
 Let our sorrows go sleep awhile;
 Or if thought's dark cloud come o'er thy
 brow,
 Let Love light it up with his smile!

LOVE THEE, DEAREST? LOVE THEE?

Love thee, dearest? love thee?
 Yes, by yonder star I swear,
 Which through tears above thee
 Shines so sadly fair;
 Though often dim,
 With tears, like him,
 Like him my truth will shine,
 And—love thee, dearest? love thee?
 Yes, till death I'm thine.

Leave thee, dearest? leave thee?
 No, that star is not more true;
 When my vows deceive thee,
 He will wander too.
 A cloud of night
 May veil his light,
 And death shall darken mine—
 But—leave thee, dearest? leave thee?
 No, till death I'm thine.

MY HEART AND LUTE

I give thee all—I can no more—
 Though poor the offering be;
 My heart and lute are all the store
 That I can bring to thee,

A lute whose gentle song reveals
 The soul of love full well;
 And, better far, a heart that feels
 Much more than lute could tell.

Though love and song may fail, alas !
 To keep life's clouds away,
 At least 'twill make them lighter pass
 Or gild them if they stay.
 And ev'n if Care, at moments, flings
 A discord o'er life's happy strain,
 Let love but gently touch the strings,
 'Twill all be sweet again !

PEACE, PEACE TO HIM THAT'S GONE !

WHEN I am dead
 Then lay my head
 In some lone, distant dell,
 Where voices ne'er
 Shall stir the air,
 Or break its silent spell.

If any sound
 Be heard around,
 Let the sweet bird alone,
 That weeps in song
 Sing all night long,
 'Peace, peace, to him that's gone !'
 Yet, oh, were mine
 One sigh of thine,
 One pitying word from thee,
 Like gleams of heav'n,
 To sinners giv'n,
 Would be that word to me.
 Howe'er unblest,
 My shade would rest
 While list'ning to that tone ;—
 Enough 'twould be
 To hear from thee,
 'Peace, peace, to him that's gone !

ROSE OF THE DESERT

ROSE of the Desert ! thou, whose blushing ray,
 Lonely and lovely, fleets unseen away ;
 No hand to cull thee, none to woo thy sigh,—
 In vestal silence left to live and die,—
 Rose of the Desert ! thus should woman be,
 Shining uncourted, lone and safe, like thee.

Rose of the Garden, how unlike thy doom !
 Destin'd for others, not thyself, to bloom ;
 Cull'd ere thy beauty lives through half its day ;
 A moment cherish'd, and then cast away ;
 Rose of the Garden ! such is woman's lot,— Worshipp'd, while blooming—when she fades, forgot.

'TIS ALL FOR THEE

If life for me hath joy or light,
 'Tis all from thee,
 My thoughts by day, my dreams by
 night,
 Are but of thee, of only thee.
 Whate'er of hope or peace I know,
 My zest in joy, my balm in woe,
 To those dear eyes of thine I owe,
 'Tis all from thee.
 My heart, ev'n ere I saw those eyes,
 Seem'd doom'd to thee ;
 Kept pure till then from other ties,
 'Twas all for thee, for only thee.

Like plants that sleep, till sunny May
 Calls forth their life, my spirit lay,
 Till, touch'd by Love's awak'ning ray,
 It liv'd for thee, it liv'd for thee.

When Fame would call me to her heights,
 She speaks by thee ;
 And dim would shine her proudest lights,
 Unshar'd by thee, unshar'd by thee.
 Whene'er I seek the Muse's shrine,
 Where Bards have hung their wreaths divine,
 And wish those wreaths of glory mine,
 'Tis all for thee, for only thee.

THE SONG OF THE OLDEN TIME¹

THERE'S a song of the olden time,
 Falling sad o'er the ear,
 Like the dream of some village chime,
 Which in youth we lov'd to hear.
 And ev'n amidst the grand and gay,
 When Music tries her gentlest art,
 I never hear so sweet a lay,
 Or one that hangs so round my heart,
 As that song of the olden time,
 Falling sad o'er the ear,
 Like the dream of some village chime,
 Which in youth we lov'd to hear.

And when all of this life is gone,—
 Ev'n the hope, ling'ring now,
 Like the last of the leaves left on Autumn's sere and faded bough,—
 'Twill seem as still those friends were
 near,
 Who lov'd me in youth's early day,
 If in that parting hour I hear
 The same sweet notes, and die away,—
 To that song of the olden time,
 Breath'd, like Hope's farewell strain,
 To say, in some brighter clime,
 Life and youth will shine again !

WAKE THEE, MY DEAR

WAKE thee, my dear—thy dreaming
 Till darker hours will keep ;
 While such a moon is beaming,
 'Tis wrong tow'rds Heav'n to sleep.

Moments there are we number,
 Moments of pain and care,
 Which to oblivious slumber
 Gladly the wretch would spare.
 But now—who'd think of dreaming
 When Love his watch should keep ?
 While such a moon is beaming,
 'Tis wrong tow'rds Heav'n to sleep.

If e'er the Fates should sever
 My life and hopes from thee, love,
 The sleep that lasts for ever
 Would then be sweet to me, love ;
 But now,—away with dreaming !
 Till darker hours 'twill keep ;
 While such a moon is beaming,
 'Tis wrong tow'rds Heav'n to sleep.

THE BOY OF THE ALPS

LIGHTLY, Alpine rover,
 Tread the mountains over ;
 Rude is the path thou'st yet to go ;
 Snow cliffs hanging o'er thee,
 Fields of ice before thee,
 While the hid torrent moans below.
 Hark, the deep thunder,
 Through the vales yonder !
 'Tis the huge av'lanched downward cast ;
 From rock to rock
 Rebounds the shock.

But courage, boy ! the danger's past.
 Onward, youthful rover,
 Tread the glacier over,
 Safe shalt thou reach thy home at
 last.

On, ere light forsake thee,
 Soon will dusk o'ertake thee :
 O'er yon ice-bridge lies thy way !
 Now, for the risk prepare thee ;
 Safe it yet may bear thee,
 Though 'twill melt in morning's ray.

Hark, that dread howling !
 'Tis the wolf prowling,—
 Scent of thy track the foe hath got ;
 And cliff and shore
 Resound his roar.

But courage, boy,—the danger's past !
 Watching eyes have found thee,
 Loving arms are round thee,
 Safe hast thou reach'd thy father's cot.

FOR THEE ALONE

For thee alone I brave the boundless deep,
 Those eyes my light through ev'ry distant sea ;
 My waking thoughts, the dream that gilds my sleep,
 The noon-tide rev'rie, all are giv'n to thee,
 To thee alone, to thee alone.

Though future scenes present to Fancy's eye
Fair forms of light that crowd the distant air,
When nearer view'd, the fairy phantoms fly,
The crowds dissolve, and thou alone art there,
Thou, thou alone.

To win thy smile, I speed from shore to shore,
While Hope's sweet voice is heard in every blast,
Still whisp'ring on, that when some years are o'er,
One bright reward shall crown my toil at last,
Thy smile alone, thy smile alone.

Oh place beside the transport of that hour
All earth can boast of fair, of rich, and bright,
Wealth's radiant mines, the lofty thrones of power,—
Then ask where first thy lover's choice would light ?
On thee alone, on thee alone.

HER LAST WORDS, AT PARTING

HER last words, at parting, how can I forget ?
Deep treasur'd through life, in my heart they shall stay ;
Like music, whose charm in the soul lingers yet,
When its sounds from the ear have long melted away.
Let Fortune assail me, her threat'nings are vain ;
Those still-breathing words shall my talisman be,—
'Remember, in absence, in sorrow, and pain,
There's one heart, unchanging, that beats but for thee.'

From the desert's sweet well tho' the pilgrim must hie,
Never more of that fresh-springing fountain to taste,
He hath still of its bright drops a treasur'd supply,
Whose sweetness lends life to his lips through the waste
So, dark as my fate is still doom'd to remain,
These words shall my well in the wilderness be,—
'Remember, in absence, in sorrow, and pain,
There's one heart, unchanging, that beats but for thee.'

LET'S TAKE THIS WORLD AS SOME WIDE SCENE

LET's take this world as some wide scene, Through which, in frail, but buoyant boat, With skies now dark and now serene, Together thou and I must float ; Beholding oft, on either shore, Bright spots where we should love to stay ; But Time plies swift his flying oar, And away we speed, away, away.	Should chilling winds and rains come on, We'll raise our awning 'gainst the show'r ; Sit closer till the storm is gone, And, smiling, wait a sunnier hour. And if that sunnier hour should shine, We'll know its brightness cannot stay, But happy, while 'tis thine and mine, Complain not when it fades away.
---	---

So shall we reach at last that Fall Down which life's currents all must go,—
 The dark, the brilliant, destin'd all
 To sink into the void below.
 Norev'n that hour shall want its charms,
 If, side by side, still fond we keep,
 And calmly, in each other's arms
 Together link'd, go down the steep.

LOVE'S VICTORY

SING to Love—for, oh, 'twas he
 Who won the glorious day ;
 Strew the wreaths of victory
 Along the conqu'ror's way.
 Yoke the Muses to his car,
 Let them sing each trophy won ;
 While his mother's joyous star
 Shall light the triumph on.

Hail to Love, to mighty Love,
 Let spirits sing around ;
 While the hill, the dale, and grove,
 With ' mighty Love ' resound ;
 Or, should a sigh of sorrow steal
 Amid the sounds thus echo'd o'er,
 'Twill but teach the god to feel
 His victories the more.

See his wings, like amethyst
 Of sunny Ind their hue ;
 Bright as when, by Psyche kist,
 They trembled through and through.
 Flowers spring beneath his feet ;
 Angel forms beside him run ;
 While unnumber'd lips repeat
 ' Love's victory is won !'
 Hail to Love, to mighty Love, &c.

SONG OF HERCULES TO HIS DAUGHTER¹

' I've been, oh, sweet daughter,
 To fountain and sea,
 To seek in their water
 Some bright gem for thee.
 Where diamonds were sleeping,
 Their sparkle I sought,
 Where crystal was weeping,
 Its tears I have caught.

¹ Founded on the fable reported by Arrian (in Indiciis) of Hercules having searched the

' The sea-nymph I've courted
 In rich coral halls ;
 With Naiads have sported
 By bright waterfalls.
 But sportive or tender,
 Still sought I, around,
 That gem, with whose splendour
 Thou yet shalt be crown'd.

' And see, while I'm speaking,
 Yon soft light afar ;—
 The pearl I've been seeking
 There floats like a star !
 In the deep Indian Ocean
 I see the gem shine,
 And quick as light's motion
 Its wealth shall be thine.'

Then eastward, like lightning,
 The hero-god flew,
 His sunny looks bright'ning
 The air he went through.
 And sweet was the duty,
 And hallow'd the hour,
 Which saw thus young Beauty
 Embellish'd by Power.

THE DREAM OF HOME

Who has not felt how sadly sweet
 The dream of home, the dream of
 home,
 Steals o'er the heart, too soon to fleet,
 When far o'er sea or land we roam ?
 Sunlight more soft may o'er us fall,
 To greener shores our bark may come ;
 But far more bright, more dear than all,
 That dream of home, that dream of
 home.

Ask of the sailor youth when far
 His light bark bounds o'er ocean's foam,
 What charms him most, when ev'ning's
 star
 Smiles o'er the wave ? to dream of
 home.
 Fond thoughts of absent friends and loves
 At that sweet hour around him come ;
 His heart's best joy where'er he roves,
 That dream of home, that dream of
 home.

Indian Ocean, to find the pearl with which he adorned his daughter Pandaea.

THEY TELL ME THOU'RT THE FAVOUR'D GUEST¹

THEY tell me thou'rt the favour'd guest
Of every fair and brilliant throng ;
No wit like thine to wake the jest,
No voicelikethine to breathe the song ;
And none could guess, so gay thou art,
That thou and I are far apart.

Alas ! alas ! how diff'rent flows
With thee and me the time away !
Not that I wish thee sad—heav'n
knows—

Still if thou can'st, be light and gay ;
I only know, that without thee
The sun himself is dark to me.

Do I thus haste to hall and bower,
Among the proud and gay to shine ?
Or deck my hair with gem and flower,
To flatter other eyes than thine ?
Ah, no, with me love's smiles are past,
Thou hadst the first, thou hadst the last.

THE YOUNG INDIAN MAID

THERE came a nymph dancing
Gracefully, gracefully,
Her eye a light glancing
Like the blue sea ;
And while all this gladness
Around her steps hung,
Such sweet notes of sadness
Her gentle lips sung,
That ne'er while I live from my mem'ry
shall fade
The song, or the look, of that young
Indian maid.

Her zone of bells ringing
Cheerily, cheerily,
Chimed to her singing
Light echoes of glee ;
But in vain did she borrow
Of mirth the gay tone,
Her voice spoke of sorrow,
And sorrow alone.
Nor e'er while I live from my mem'ry
shall fade
The song, or the look, of that young
Indian maid.

¹ Part of a translation of some Latin verses, supposed to have been addressed by Hippolyta Tarella to her husband, during his absence at

THE HOMEWARD MARCH

BE still, my heart : I hear them come :
Those sounds announce my lover near :
The march that brings our warriors home
Proclaims he'll soon be here.

Hark, the distant tread,
O'er the mountain's head,
While hills and dales repeat the sound ;
And the forest deer
Stand still to hear,
As those echoing steps ring round.

Be still, my heart, I hear them come,
Those sounds that speak my soldier
near ;

Those joyous steps seem wing'd for
home,—

Rest, rest, he'll soon be here.

But hark, more faint the footsteps grow,
And now they wind to distant glades
Not here their home,—alas, they go
To gladden happier maids !

Like sounds in a dream,
The footsteps seem,
As down the hills they die away ;
And the march, whose song
So peal'd along,
Now fades like a funeral lay.

'Tis past, 'tis o'er,—hush, heart, thy
pain !

And though not here, alas, they come,
Rejoice for those, to whom that strain
Brings sons and lovers home.

WAKE UP, SWEET MELODY

WAKE up, sweet melody !
Now is the hour
When young and loving hearts
Feel most thy pow'r.
One note of music, by moonlight's soft
ray—
Oh, 'tis worth thousands heard coldly by
day.
Then wake up, sweet melody !
Now is the hour
When young and loving hearts
Feel most thy pow'r.

the gay court of Leo the Tenth. The verses may be found in the Appendix to Roscoe's Work.

Ask the fond nightingale,
 When his sweet flow'r
 Loves most to hear his song,
 In her green bow'r ?
 Oh, he will tell thee, through summer-nights long,
 Fondest she lends her whole soul to his
 song.
 Then wake up, sweet melody !
 Now is the hour
 When young and loving hearts
 Feel most thy pow'r.

CALM BE THY SLEEP

CALM be thy sleep as infants' slumbers !
 Pure as angel thoughts thy dreams !
 May ev'ry joy this bright world numbers
 Shed o'er thee their mingled beams !
 Or if, where Pleasure's wing hath glided,
 There ever must some pang remain,
 Still be thy lot with me divided,—
 Thine all the bliss, and mine the pain !
 Day and night my thoughts shall hover
 Round thy steps where'er they stray ;
 As, ev'n when clouds his idol cover,
 Fondly the Persian tracks its ray.
 If this be wrong, if Heav'n offended
 By worship to its creature be,
 Then let my vows to both be blended,
 Half breath'd to Heav'n and half to
 thee.

THE EXILE

NIGHT waneth fast, the morning star
 Saddens with light the glimm'ring sea,
 Whose waves shall soon to realms afar
 Waft me from hope, from love, and
 thee.
 Coldly the beam from yonder sky
 Looks o'er the waves that onward stray ;
 But colder still the stranger's eye
 To him whose home is far away.
 Oh, not at hour so chill and bleak,
 Let thoughts of me come o'er thy
 breast ;
 But of the lost one think and speak,
 When summer suns sink calm to rest.
 So, as I wander, Fancy's dream
 Shall bring me o'er the sunset seas,
 Thy look, in ev'ry melting beam,
 Thy whisper, in each dying breeze.

THE FANCY FAIR

COME, maids and youths, for here we sell
 All wondrous things of earth and air ;
 Whatever wild romancers tell,
 Or poets sing, or lovers swear,
 You'll find at this our Fancy Fair.

Here eyes are made like stars to shine,
 And kept, for years, in such repair,
 That ev'n when turn'd of thirty-nine,
 They'll hardly look the worse for wear,
 If bought at this our Fancy Fair.

We've lots of tears for bards to show'r,
 And hearts that such ill usage bear,
 That, though they're broken ev'ry hour,
 They'll still in rhyme fresh breaking
 bear,
 If purchas'd at our Fancy Fair.

As fashions change in ev'ry thing,
 We've goods to suit each season's air,
 Eternal friendships for the spring,
 And endless loves for summer wear,—
 All sold at this our Fancy Fair.

We've reputations white as snow,
 That long will last, if us'd with care,
 Nay, safe through all life's journey go,
 If pack'd and mark'd as 'brittle ware,'—
 Just purchas'd at the Fancy Fair.

IF THOU WOULD'ST HAVE ME SING AND PLAY

If thou wouldst have me sing and play,
 As once I play'd and sung,
 First take this time-worn lute away,
 And bring one freshly strung.
 Call back the time when pleasure's sigh
 First breath'd among the strings ;
 And Time himself, in fitting by,
 Made music with his wings.

But how is this ? though new the lute,
 And shining fresh the chords,
 Beneath this hand they slumber mute,
 Or speak but dreamy words.
 In vain I seek the soul that dwelt
 Within that once sweet shell,
 Which told so warmly what it felt,
 And felt what nought could tell.

Oh, ask not then for passion's lay,
 From lyre so coldly strung ;
 With this I ne'er can sing or play,
 As once I play'd and sung.
 No, bring that long-lov'd lute again,—
 Though chill'd by years it be,
 If thou wilt call the slumb'ring strain,
 'Twill wake again for thee.

Though time have froz'n the tuneful
 stream
 Of thoughts that gush'd along,
 One look from thee, like summer's
 beam,
 Will thaw them into song.
 Then give, oh give, that wak'ning ray,
 And once more blithe and young,
 Thy bard again will sing and play,
 As once he play'd and sung.

STILL WHEN DAYLIGHT

STILL when daylight o'er the wave
 Bright and soft its farewell gave,
 I us'd to hear, while light was falling,
 O'er the wave a sweet voice calling,
 Mournfully at distance calling.

Ah ! once how blest that maid would
 come,
 To meet her sea-boy hast'ning home ;
 And through the night those sounds repeating,
 Hail his bark with joyous greeting,
 Joyously his light bark greeting.

But, one sad night, when winds were
 high,
 Nor earth, nor heaven, could hear her
 cry,
 She saw his boat come tossing over
 Midnight's wave,—but not her lover !
 No, never more her lover.

And still that sad dream loth to leave,
 She comes with wand'ring mind at eve,
 And oft we hear, when night is falling,
 Faint her voice through twilight calling,
 Mournfully at twilight calling.

THE SUMMER WEBS

THE summer webs that float and shine,
 The summer dews that fall,
 Though light they be, this heart of mine
 Is lighter still than all.
 It tells me every cloud is past
 Which lately seem'd to lour ;
 That Hope hath wed young Joy at
 last,
 And now's their nuptial hour !

With light thus round, within, above,
 With nought to wake one sigh,
 Except the wish, that all we love
 Were at this moment nigh,—
 It seems as if life's brilliant sun
 Had stopp'd in full career,
 To make this hour its brightest one,
 And rest in radiance here.

MIND NOT THOUGH DAYLIGHT

MIND not though daylight around us is breaking,— Who'd think now of sleeping when morn's but just waking ?
 Sound the merry viol, and daylight or not,
 Be all for one hour in the gay dance forgot.

See young Aurora, up heaven's hill advancing,
 Though fresh from her pillow, ev'n she too is dancing :
 While thus all creation, earth, heaven, and sea,
 Are dancing around us, oh, why should not we ?

Who'll say that moments we use thus are wasted ?
 Such sweet drops of time only flow to be tasted ;
 While hearts are high beating, and harps full in tune,
 The fault is all morning's for coming so soon.

THEY MET BUT ONCE

THEY met but once, in youth's sweet
hour,
And never since that day
Hath absence, time, or grief had pow'r
To chase that dream away.
They've seen the suns of other skies,
On other shores have sought delight;
But never more, to bless their eyes,
Can come a dream so bright!
They met but once,—a day was all
Of Love's young hopes they knew;
And still their hearts that day recall,
As fresh as then it flew.

Sweet dream of youth! oh, ne'er again
Let either meet the brow
They left so smooth and smiling then,
Or see what it is now.
For, Youth, the spell was only thine;
From thee alone th' enchantment
flows,
That makes the world around thee
shine
With light thyself bestows.
They met but once,—oh, ne'er again
Let either meet the brow
They left so smooth and smiling then,
Or see what it is now.

WITH MOONLIGHT BEAMING

WITH moonlight beaming
Thus o'er the deep,
Who'd linger dreaming
In idle sleep?
Leave joyless souls to live by day,—
Our life begins with yonder ray;
And while thus brightly
The moments flee,
Our barks skim lightly
The shining sea.
To halls of splendour
Let great ones hie;
Through light more tender
Our pathways lie.
While round, from banks of brook or lake,
Our company blithe echoes make;
And, as we lend 'em
Sweet word or strain,
Still back they send 'em,
More sweet, again.

CHILD'S SONG. FROM A MASQUE

I HAVE a garden of my own,
Shining with flow'rs of ev'ry hue;
I lov'd it dearly while alone,
But I shall love it more with you:
And there the golden bees shall come,
In summer-time at break of morn,
And wake us with their busy hum
Around the Siha's fragrant thorn.

I have a fawn from Aden's land,
On leafy buds and berries nurst;
And you shall feed him from your hand,
Though he may start with fear at first.
And I will lead you where he lies
For shelter in the noontide heat;
And you may touch his sleeping eyes,
And feel his little silv'ry feet.

THE HALCYON HANGS O'ER
OCEAN

THE halcyon hangs o'er ocean,
The sea-lark skims the brine;
This bright world's all in motion,
No heart seems sad but mine.

To walk through sun-bright places,
With heart all cold the while;
To look in smiling faces,
When we no more can smile;

To feel, while earth and heaven
Around thee shine with bliss,
To thee no light is given,—
Oh, what a doom is this!

THE WORLD WAS HUSH'D

THE world was hush'd, the moon above
Sail'd through ether slowly,
When, near the casement of my love,
Thus I whisper'd lowly,—
'Awake, awake, how canst thou sleep?
The field I seek to-morrow
Is one where man hath fame to reap,
And woman gleans but sorrow.'
'Let battle's field be what it may,'
Thus spoke a voice replying,
'Think not thy love, while thou'rt away,
Will here sit idly sighing.
No—woman's soul, if not for fame,
For love can brave all danger!'
Then forth from out the casement came
A plum'd and armed stranger.

A stranger ? No ; 'twas she, the maid,
Herself before me beaming,
With casque array'd, and falchion blade
Beneath her girdle gleaming !
Close side by side, in freedom's fight,
That blessed morning found us ;
In Vict'ry's light we stood ere night,
And Love, the morrow, crown'd us !

THE TWO LOVES

THERE are two Loves, the poet sings,
Both born of Beauty at a birth :
The one, akin to heaven, hath wings,
The other, earthly, walks on earth.
With this through bowers below we play,
With that through clouds above we
soar ;
With both, perchance, may lose our
way :—
Then, tell me which,

Tell me which shall we adore ?

The one, when tempted down from air,
At Pleasure's fount to lave his lip,
Nor lingers long, nor oft will dare
His wing within the wave to dip.
While, plunging deep and long beneath,
The other bathes him o'er and o'er
In that sweet current, ev'n to death :—
Then, tell me which,
Tell me which shall we adore ?

The boy of heav'n, even while he lies
In Beauty's lap, recalls his home ;
And when most happy, inly sighs
For something happier still to come.
While he of earth, too fully blest
With this bright world to dream of
more,
Sees all his heav'n on Beauty's breast :—
Then, tell me which,
Tell me which shall we adore ?

The maid who heard the poet sing
These twin-desires of earth and sky,
And saw, while one inspir'd his string,
The other glisten'd in his eye,—
To name the earthlier boy asham'd,
To choose the other fondly loath,
At length, all blushing, she exclaim'd,—
'Ask not which,
Oh, ask not which—we'll worship both.
'Th' extremes of each thus taught to shun,
With hearts and souls between them
given,
When weary of this earth with one,
We'll with the other wing to heaven.'
Thus pledg'd the maid her vow of bliss ;
And while one Love wrote down the oath,
The other seal'd it with a kiss ;
And Heav'n look'd on,
Heav'n look'd on, and hallow'd both.

THE LEGEND OF PUCK THE FAIRY

WOULDST know what tricks, by the pale moonlight,
Are play'd by me, the merry little Sprite,
Who wing through air from the camp to the court,
From king to clown, and of all make snort ;
Singing, I am the Sprite
Of the merry midnight,
Who laugh at weak mortals, and love the moonlight.

To a miser's bed, where he snoring slept
And dreamt of his cash, I slyly crept ;
Chink, chink o'er his pillow like money I rang,
And he waked to catch—but away I sprang,
Singing, I am the Sprite, &c.

I saw through the leaves, in a damsel's bower,
She was waiting her love at that starlight hour :
'Hist—hist !' quoth I, with an amorous sigh,
And she flew to the door, but away flew I,
Singing, I am the Sprite, &c.

While a bard sat inditing an ode to his love,
 Like a pair of blue meteors I star'd from above,
 And he swoon'd—for he thought 'twas the ghost, poor man!
 Of his lady's eyes, while away I ran,
 Singing, I am the Sprite, &c.

BEAUTY AND SONG

Down in yon summer vale,
 Where the rill flows,
 Thus said a Nightingale
 To his lov'd Rose:—

'Though rich the pleasures
 Of song's sweet measures,
 Vain were its melody,
 Rose, without thee.'

Then from the green recess
 Of her night-bow'r,
 Beaming with bashfulness,
 Spoke the bright flow'r:—
 'Though morn should lend her
 Its sunniest splendour,
 What would the Rose be,
 Unsung by thee?'

Thus still let Song attend
 Woman's bright way;
 Thus still let woman lend
 Light to the lay.

Like stars, through heaven's sea,
 Floating in harmony,
 Beauty shall glide along,
 Circled by Song.

WHEN THOU ART NIGH

WHEN thou art nigh, it seems
 A new creation round;
 The sun hath fairer beams,
 The lute a softer sound.
 Though thee alone I see,
 And hear alone thy sigh,
 'Tis light, 'tis song to me,
 'Tis all—when thou art nigh.

When thou art nigh, no thought
 Of grief comes o'er my heart;
 I only think—could aught
 But joy be where thou art?

Life seems a waste of breath,
 When far from thee I sigh;
 And death—ay, even death
 Were sweet, if thou wert nigh.

SONG OF A HYPERBOREAN

I COME from a land in the sun-bright
 deep,

Where golden gardens grow;
 Where the winds of the north, becalm'd
 in sleep,
 Their conch-shells never blow.¹
 Haste to that holy Isle with me,
 Haste—haste!

So near the track of the stars are we,²
 That oft, on night's pale beams,
 The distant sounds of their harmony
 Come to our ears, like dreams.
 Then, haste to that holy Isle with me, &c. &c.

The Moon, too, brings her world so nigh,³
 That when the night-seer looks
 To that shadowless orb, in a vernal sky,
 He can number its hills and brooks.
 Then, haste, &c. &c.

To the Sun-god all our hearts and lyres⁴
 By day, by night, belong;
 And the breath we draw from his living fires,
 We give him back in song.
 Then, haste, &c. &c.

From us descends the maid who brings
 To Delos gifts divine;
 And our wild bees lend their rainbow
 wings
 To glitter on Delphi's shrine.⁵
 Then, haste to that holy Isle with
 me,
 Haste—haste!

¹ On the Tower of the Winds, at Athens, there is a conch-shell placed in the hands of Boreas.—See Stuart's Antiquities. 'The north wind,' says Herodotus, in speaking of the Hyperboreans, 'never blows with them.'

² 'Sub ipso siderum cardine jacent.'—Pompon. Mela.

³ 'They can show the moon very near.'—Diodor. Sicul.

⁴ Hecataeus tells us, that this Hyperborean island was dedicated to Apollo; and most of the inhabitants were either priests or songsters.

⁵ Pausanias.

THOU BIDST ME SING

THOU bidst me sing the lay I sung to thee
 In other days, ere joy had left this brow ;
 But think, though still unchang'd the notes may be,
 How diff'rent feels the heart that breathes them now !
 The rose thou wear'st to-night is still the same
 We saw this morning on its stem so gay ;
 But, ah ! that dew of dawn, that breath which came
 Like life o'er all its leaves, hath pass'd away.
 Since first that music touch'd thy heart and mine,
 How many a joy and pain o'er both have past,—
 The joy, a light too precious long to shine,
 The pain, a cloud whose shadows always last.
 And though that lay would like the voice of home
 Breathe o'er our ear, 'twould waken now a sigh—
 Ah ! not, as then, for fancied woes to come,
 But, sadder far, for real bliss gone by.

CUPID ARMED

PLACE the helm on thy brow,
 In thy hand take the spear ;
 Thou art arm'd, Cupid, now,
 And thy battle-hour is near.
 March on ! march on ! thy shaft and bow
 Were weak against such charms ;
 March on ! march on ! so proud a foe
 Scorns all but martial arms.

See the darts in her eyes,
 Tipt with scorn, how they shine !

Ev'ry shaft, as it flies,
 Mocking proudly at thine.
 March on ! march on ! thy feather'd darts
 Soft bosoms soon might move ;
 But ruder arms to ruder hearts
 Must teach what 'tis to love.
 Place the helm on thy brow ;
 In thy hand take the spear,—
 Thou art arm'd, Cupid, now,
 And thy battle-hour is near.

ROUND THE WORLD GOES

ROUND the world goes, by day and
 night
 While with it also round go we ;
 And in the flight of one day's light
 An image of all life's course we see.
 Round, round, while thus we go round,
 The best thing a man can do,
 Is to make it, at least, a merry-go-
round,
 By—sending the wine round too.

Our first gay stage of life is when
 Youth, in its dawn, salutes the eye—
 Season of bliss ! Oh, who wouldn't then Wish to cry, 'Stop !' to earth and
 sky ?

But, round, round, both boy and girl
 Are whisk'd through that sky of blue ;
 And much would their hearts enjoy the whirl,
 If—their heads didn't whirl round too.
 Next, we enjoy our glorious noon,
 Thinking all life a life of light ;
 But shadows come on, 'tis evening soon,
 And, ere we can say, 'How short !'—
 'tis night.
 Round, round, still all goes round,
 Ev'n while I'm thus singing to you ;
 And the best way to make it a merry-go-
round,
 Is to—chorus my song round too.

OH, DO NOT LOOK SO BRIGHT AND BLEST

Oh, do not look so bright and blest,
 For still there comes a fear,
 When brow like thine looks happiest,
 That grief is then most near.
 There lurks a dread in all delight,
 A shadow near each ray,
 That warns us then to fear their flight,
 When most we wish their stay.
 Then look not thou so bright and blest,
 For ah ! there comes a fear,
 When brow like thine looks happiest,
 That grief is then most near.

Why is it thus that fairest things
 The soonest fleet and die ?—
 That when most light is on their wings,
 They're then but spread to fly !
 And, sadder still, the pain will stay—
 The bliss no more appears ;
 As rainbows take their light away,
 And leave us but the tears !
 Then look not thou so bright and blest,
 For ah ! there comes a fear,
 When brow like thine looks happiest,
 That grief is then most near.

THE MUSICAL BOX

' Look here,' said Rose, with laughing
 eyes,
 ' Within this box, by magic hid,
 A tuneful Sprite imprison'd lies,
 Who sings to me whene'er he's bid.
 Though roving once his voice and wing,
 He'll now lie still the whole day long ;
 Till thus I touch the magic spring—
 Then hark, how sweet and blithe his song !' (A symphony.)
 ' Ah, Rose,' I cried, ' the poet's lay
 Must ne'er ev'n Beauty's slave become ;
 Through earth and air his song may stray,
 If all the while his heart's at home.

And though in Freedom's air he dwell,
 Nor bond nor chain his spirit knows,
 Touch but the spring thou know'st so
 well,
 And—hark, how sweet the love-song
 flows !' (A symphony.)
 Thus pleaded I for Freedom's right ;
 But when young Beauty takes the field,
 And wise men seek defence in flight,
 The doom of poets is to yield.
 No more my heart th' enchantress braves,
 I'm now in Beauty's prison hid ;
 The Sprite and I are fellow-slaves,
 And I, too, sing whene'er I'm bid.

WHEN TO SAD MUSIC SILENT YOU LISTEN

WHEN to sad Music silent you listen,
 And tears on those eyelids tremble like dew,
 Oh, then there dwells in those eyes as they glisten
 A sweet holy charm that mirth never knew.
 But when some lively strain resounding
 Lights up the sunshine of joy on that brow,
 Then the young rein-deer o'er the hills bounding
 Was ne'er in its mirth so graceful as thou.

When on the skies at midnight thou gazest,
 A lustre so pure thy features then wear,
 That, when to some star that bright eye thou raisest,
 We feel 'tis thy home thou'rt looking for there.
 But, when the word for the gay dance is given,
 So buoyant thy spirit, so heartfelt thy mirth,
 Oh then we exclaim, ' Ne'er leave earth for heaven,
 But linger still here, to make heaven of earth.'

THE LANGUAGE OF FLOWERS

FLY swift, my light gazelle,
 To her who now lies waking,
 To hear thy silver bell
 The midnight silence breaking.
 And, when thou com'st, with gladsome
 feet,
 Beneath her lattice springing,
 Ah, well she'll know how sweet
 The words of love thou'rt bringing.
 Yet, no—not words, for they
 But half can tell love's feeling;
 Sweet flowers alone can say
 What passion fears revealing.

A once bright rose's wither'd leaf,
 A tow'ring lily broken,—
 Oh these may paint a grief
 No words could e'er have spoken.

Not such, my gay gazelle,
 The wreath thou speedest over
 Yon moonlight dale, to tell
 My lady how I love her.
 And, what to her will sweeter be
 Than gems the richest, rarest,
 From Truth's immortal tree¹
 One fadeless leaf thou bearest.

THE DAWN IS BREAKING O'ER US

THE dawn is breaking o'er us,
 See, heaven hath caught its hue!
 We've day's long light before us,
 What sport shall we pursue?
 The hunt o'er hill and lea?
 The sail o'er summer sea?
 Oh let not hour so sweet
 Unwing'd by pleasure fleet.
 The dawn is breaking o'er us,
 See, heaven hath caught its hue!
 We've day's long light before us,
 What sport shall we pursue?
 But see, while we're deciding,
 What morning sport to play,
 The dial's hand is gliding,
 And morn hath pass'd away!
 Ah, who'd have thought that noon
 Would o'er us steal so soon,—

That morn's sweet hour of prime
 Would last so short a time?
 But come, we've day before us,
 Still heaven looks bright and blue;
 Quick, quick, ere eve comes o'er us,
 What sport shall we pursue?
 Alas! why thus delaying?
 We're now at evening's hour;
 Its farewell beam is playing
 O'er hill and wave and bower.
 That light we thought would last,
 Behold, ev'n now, 'tis past;
 And all our morning dreams
 Have vanish'd with its beams!
 But come! 'twere vain to borrow
 Sad lessons from this lay,
 For man will be to-morrow—
 Just what he's been to-day.

¹ The tree, called in the East, Amrita, or the Immortal.

SONGS FROM THE GREEK ANTHOLOGY

HERE AT THY TOMB¹

BY MELEAGER

HERE, at thy tomb, these tears I shed, Tears, which though vainly now they
roll,
Are all love hath to give the dead,
And wept o'er thee with all love's
soul;—

Wept in remembrance of that light,
Which nought on earth, without thee,
gives,

Hope of my heart! now quench'd in
night,
But dearer, dead, than aught that lives.

Where is she? where the blooming bough
That once my life's sole lustre made?
Torn off by death, 'tis with'ring now,
And all its flow'rs in dust are laid.

Oh earth! that to thy matron breast
Hast taken all those angel charms,
Gently, I pray thee, let her rest,—
Gently, as in a mother's arms.

SALE OF CUPID²

BY MELEAGER

WHO'LL buy a little boy? Look, yonder is he,
Fast asleep, sly rogue, on his mother's knee;
So bold a young imp 't isn't safe to keep,
So I'll part with him now, while he's sound asleep.
See his arch little nose, how sharp 'tis curl'd,
His wings, too, ev'n in sleep unfurl'd;
And those fingers, which still ever ready are found
For mirth or for mischief, to tickle, or wound.

He'll try with his tears your heart to beguile,
But never you mind—he's laughing all the while;
For little he cares, so he has his own whim,
And weeping or laughing are all one to him.
His eye is as keen as the lightning's flash,
His tongue like the red bolt quick and rash;
And so savage is he, that his own dear mother
Is scarce more safe in his hands than another.

In short, to sum up this darling's praise,
He's a downright pest in all sorts of ways;
And if any one wants such an imp to employ,
He shall have a dead bargain of this little boy.
But see, the boy wakes—his bright tears flow—
His eyes seem to ask could I sell him? oh no,
Sweet child, no, no—though so naughty you be,
You shall live evermore with my Lesbia and me.

TO WEAVE A GARLAND FOR THE ROSE¹

BY PAUL, THE SILENTIARY

To weave a garland for the rose,
And think thus crown'd 'twould
lovelier be,
Were far less vain than to suppose
That silks and gems add grace to thee.
Where is the pearl whose orient lustre
Would not, beside thee, look less
bright?
What gold could match the glossy cluster
Of those young ringlets full of light?
Bring from the land, where fresh it
gleams,
The bright blue gem of India's mine,
And see how soon, though bright its
beams,
'Twill pale before one glance of thine:
Those lips, too, when their sounds have blest us
With some divine, mellifluous air,
Who would not say that Beauty's cestus
Had let loose all its witch'ries there?²
Here, to this conqu'ring host of charms
I now give up my spell-bound heart,
Nor blush to yield ev'n Reason's arms,
When thou her bright-ey'd conqueror
art.
Thus to the wind all fears are given;
Henceforth those eyes alone I see,
Where Hope, as in her own blue heaven,
Sits beck'ning me to bliss and thee!

WHY DOES SHE SO LONG DELAY?³

BY PAUL, THE SILENTIARY.

WHY does she so long delay?
Night is waning fast away;
Thrice have I my lamp renew'd,
Watching here in solitude.

¹ Ουτε ῥόδων στεφανῶν ἐπιδενεσαι, ουτε σὺ
πέπλων. Ap. Brunck. xvii.

² ——— και ἡ μελιφύρτος ἐκείνη
Ἡθεὸς ἁρμονίη, κέστος ἐφ' Παφίης.

³ Διθύνει Κλεοφαντίς.
Ap. Brunck. xxviii.

Where can she so long delay?
Where, so long delay?

Vainly now have two lamps shone;
See the third is nearly gone:⁴
Oh that Love would, like the ray
Of that weary lamp, decay!
But no, alas, it burns still on,
Still, still, burns on.

Gods, how oft the traitress dear
Swore, by Venus, she'd be here!
But to one so false as she
What is man or deity?
Neither doth this proud one fear,—
No, neither doth she fear.

TWIN'ST THOU WITH LOFTY
WREATH THY BROW?⁵

BY PAUL, THE SILENTIARY

TWIN'ST thou with lofty wreath thy
brow?

Such glory then thy beauty sheds,
I almost think, while aw'd I bow,
'Tis Rhea's self before me treads.
Be what thou wilt,—this heart
Adores whate'er thou art!

Dost thou thy loosen'd ringlets leave,
Like sunny waves to wander free?
Then, such a chain of charms they weave,

As draws my inmost soul from me.
Do what thou wilt,—I must
Be charm'd by all thou dost!

Ev'n when, enwapp'd in silv'ry veils,⁶
Those sunny locks elude the sight,—
Oh, not ev'n then their glory fails
To haunt me with its unseen light.
Change as thy beauty may,
It charms in every way.

For, thee the Graces still attend,
Presiding o'er each new attire,
And lending ev'ry dart they send
Some new, peculiar touch of fire.
Be what thou wilt,—this heart
Adores whate'er thou art!

WHEN THE SAD WORD¹

BY PAUL, THE SILENTIARY

WHEN the sad word, 'Adieu,' from my lip is nigh falling,
And with it, Hope passes away,
Ere the tongue hath half breathed it, my fond heart recalling
That fatal farewell, bids me stay.
For oh! 'tis a penance so weary
One hour from thy presence to be,
That death to this soul were less dreary,
Less dark than long absence from
thee

Thy beauty, like Day, o'er the dull world breaking,
Brings life to the heart it shines o'er,
And, in mine, a new feeling of happiness
waking
Made light what was darkness before.
But mute is the Day's sunny glory,
While thine hath a voice,² on whose
breath,
More sweet than the Syren's sweet story,³ My hopes hang, through life and through death!

MY MOPSA IS LITTLE⁴

BY PHILODEMUS

My Mopsa is little, my Mopsa is brown,
But her cheek is as smooth as the peach's soft down,
And, for blushing, no rose can come near her;
In short, she has woven such nets round my heart,
That I ne'er from my dear little Mopsa can part,— Unless I can find one that's dearer.

Her voice hath a music that dwells on the ear,
And her eye from its orb gives a daylight so clear,
That I'm dazzled whenever I meet her;
Her ringlets, so curly, are Cupid's own net,
And her lips, oh their sweetness I ne'er shall forget—
Till I light upon lips that are sweeter.

But 'tis not her beauty that charms me alone,
'Tis her mind, 'tis that language whose eloquent tone
From the depths of the grave could revive one:
In short, here I swear, that if death were her doom,
I would instantly join my dead love in the tomb—
Unless I could meet with a live one.

STILL, LIKE DEW IN SILENCE FALLING⁵

BY MELEAGER

STILL, like dew in silence falling,
Drops for thee the nightly tear;
Still that voice the past recalling,
Dwells, like echo, on my ear,
Still, still!
Day and night the spell hangs o'er
me,
Here for ever fix'd thou art;

As thy form first shone before me,
So 'tis graven on this heart,
Deep, deep!

Love, oh Love, whose bitter sweetness,
Dooms me to this lasting pain,
Thou who cam'st with so much fleetness,
Why so slow to go again?⁶
Why? why?

UP, SAILOR BOY, 'TIS DAY

UP, sailor boy, 'tis day !
 The west wind blowing,
 The spring tide flowing,
 Summon thee hence away.
 Didst thou not hear yon soaring swallow sing ?
 Chirp, chirp,—in every note he seem'd to say
 'Tis Spring, 'tis Spring.
 Up, boy, away,—
 Who'd stay on land to-day ?
 The very flowers
 Would from their bowers
 Delight to wing away !

Leave languid youths to pine
 On silken pillows
 But be the billows
 Of the great deep thine.
 Hark, to the sail the breeze sings,
 'Let us fly ;'
 While soft the sail, replying to the breeze,
 Says, with a yielding sigh,
 'Yes, where you please.'
 Up, boy ! the wind, the ray,
 The blue sky o'er thee,
 The deep before thee,
 All cry aloud, 'Away !'

IN MYRTLE WREATHS

BY ALCAEUS

In myrtle wreaths my votive sword I'll cover,
 Like them of old whose one immortal
 blow
 Struck off the galling fetters that hung over
 Their own bright land, and laid her tyrant low.
 Yes, lov'd Harmodius, thou'rt undying ;
 Still midst the brave and free,
 In isles, o'er ocean lying,
 Thy home shall ever be.

In myrtle leaves my sword shall hide its lightning,
 Like his, the youth, whose ever-glorious blade
 Leap'd forth like flame, the midnight
 banquet bright'ning,
 And in the dust a despot victim laid.
 Blest youths, how bright in Freedom's story
 Your wedded names shall be ;
 A tyrant's death your glory,
 Your meed, a nation free !

ASK NOT IF STILL I LOVE

ASK not if still I love,
 Too plain these eyes have told thee ;
 Too well their tears must prove
 How near and dear I hold thee.
 If, where the brightest shine,
 To see no form but thine,
 To feel that earth can show
 No bliss above thee,—
 If this be love, then know
 That thus, that thus, I love thee.
 'Tis not in pleasure's idle hour
 That thou canst know affection's
 pow'r.
 No, try its strength in grief or pain ;
 Attempt, as now, its bonds to
 sever,
 Thou'lt find true love's a chain
 That binds for ever !

DEAR ? YES

DEAR ? yes, though mine no more,
 Ev'n this but makes thee dearer ;
 And love, since hope is o'er,
 But draws thee nearer.
 Change as thou wilt to me,
 The same thy charm must be ;
 New loves may come to weave
 Their witch ry o'er thee,
 Yet still, though false, believe
 That I adore thee, yes, still adore thee.
 Think'st thou that aught but death could end
 A tie not falsehood's self can rend ?
 No, when alone, far off I die,
 No more to see, no more caress thee,
 Ev'n then, my life's last sigh
 Shall be to bless thee, yes, still to bless
 thee.

UNBIND THEE, LOVE

UNBIND thee, love, unbind thee, love,
 From those dark ties unbind thee;
 Though fairest hand the chain hath
 wove,
 Too long its links have twin'd thee.
 Away from earth!—thy wings were made
 In yon mid-sky to hover,
 With earth beneath their dove-like
 shade,
 And heav'n all radiant over.

Awake thee, boy, awake thee, boy,
 Too long thy soul is sleeping;
 And thou may'st from this minute's joy
 Wake to eternal weeping.
 Oh, think, this world is not for thee;
 Though hard its links to sever;
 Though sweet and bright and dear they
 be,
 Break, or thou'rt lost for ever.

THERE'S SOMETHING STRANGE

(A BUFFO SONG)

THERE'S something strange, I know not what,
 Come o'er me,
 Some phantom I've for ever got
 Before me.

I look on high, and in the sky
 'Tis shining;
 On earth, its light with all things bright
 Seems twining.

In vain I try this goblin's spells
 To sever;
 Go where I will, it round me dwells
 For ever.

And then what tricks by day and night
 It plays me;
 In ev'ry shape the wicked sprite
 Waylays me.

Sometimes like two bright eyes of blue
 'Tis glancing;
 Sometimes like feet, in slippers neat,
 Comes dancing.

By whispers round of every sort
 I'm taunted.
 Never was mortal man, in short,
 So haunted.

NOT FROM THEE

Not from thee the wound should come,
 No, not from thee.
 I care not what, or whence, my doom,
 So not from thee!
 Cold triumph! first to make
 This heart thy own;
 And then the mirror break
 Where fix'd thou shin'st alone.

Not from thee the wound should come,
 Oh, not from thee.
 I care not what, or whence, my doom,
 So not from thee.

Yet no—my lips that wish recall;
 From thee, from thee—
 If ruin o'er this head must fall,
 'Twill welcome be.

Here to the blade I bare
 This faithful heart;
 Wound deep—thou'lt find that there
 In every pulse thou art.

Yes, from thee I'll bear it all;
 If ruin be
 The doom that o'er this heart must
 fall,
 'Twere sweet from thee.

GUESS, GUESS

I LOVE a maid, a mystic maid,
 Whose form no eyes but mine can
 see;
 She comes in light, she comes in shade,
 And beautiful in both is she.

Her shape in dreams I oft behold,
 And oft she whispers in my ear
 Such words as when to others told,
 Awake the sigh, or wring the tear;—
 Then guess, guess, who she,
 The lady of my love, may be.

I find the lustre of her brow
 Come o'er me in my darkest ways;
 And feel as if her voice, ev'n now,
 Were echoing far off my lays.

There is no scene of joy or woe
 But she doth gild with influence
 bright;
 And shed o'er all so rich a glow,
 As makes ev'n tears seem full of light:

Then guess, guess, who she,
 The lady of my love, may be.

WHEN LOVE, WHO RUL'D

WHEN Love, who rul'd as Admiral o'er
His rosy mother's isles of light,
Was cruising off the Paphian shore,
A sail at sunset hove in sight.
'A chase, a chase! my Cupids all,'
Said Love, the little Admiral.

Aloft the winged sailors sprung,
And, swarming up the mast like bees,
The snow-white sails expanding flung,
Like broad magnolias to the breeze.
'Yo ho, yo ho, my Cupids all!'
Said Love, the little Admiral.

The chase was o'er—the bark was caught,
The winged crew her freight explor'd;
And found 'twas just as Love had
thought,

For all was contraband aboard.
'A prize, a prize, my Cupids all!'
Said Love, the little Admiral.

Safe stow'd in many a package there,
And labell'd slyly o'er, as 'Glass,'
Were lots of all th' illegal ware,
Love's Custom-House forbids to pass.
'O'erhaul, o'erhaul, my Cupids all,'
Said Love, the little Admiral.

False curls they found, of every hue,
With rosy blushes ready made;
And teeth of ivory, good as new,
For veterans in the smiling trade.
'Ho ho, ho ho, my Cupids all,'
Said Love, the little Admiral.

Mock sighs, too,—kept in bags for use,
Like breezes bought of Lapland seers,—
Lay ready here to be let loose,
When wanted, in young spinster's ears.
'Ha ha, ha ha, my Cupids all,'
Said Love, the little Admiral.

False papers next on board were found,
Sham invoices of flames and darts,
Professedly for Paphos bound,
But meant for Hymen's golden marts.
'For shame, for shame, my Cupids all!'
Said Love, the little Admiral.

Nay, still to every fraud awake,
Those pirates all Love's signals knew,
And hoisted off his flag, to make
Rich wards and heiresses bring-to.¹

¹ 'To BRING-TO, to check the course of a ship.'—Falconer.

'A foe, a foe, my Cupids all!'
Said Love, the little Admiral.

'This must not be,' the boy exclaims,
'In vain I rule the Paphian seas,
If Love's and Beauty's sovereign names
Are lent to cover frauds like these.
Prepare, prepare, my Cupids all!'
Said Love, the little Admiral.

Each Cupid stood with lighted match—
A broadside struck the smuggling foe,
And swept the whole unhallow'd batch
Of falsehood to the depths below.
'Huzza, huzza! my Cupids all!'
Said Love, the little Admiral.

STILL THOU FLIEST

STILL thou fliest, and still I woo thee,
Lovely phantom,—all in vain;
Restless ever, my thoughts pursue thee,
Fleeting ever, thou mock'st their pain.
Such doom, of old, that youth betided,
Who woo'd, he thought, some angel's
charms,
But found a cloud that from him glided,—
As thou dost from these out-stretch'd
arms.

Scarce I've said, 'How fair thou shinest,'
Ere thy light hath vanish'd by;
And 'tis when thou look'st divinest
Thou art still more sure to fly.
Ev'n as the lightning, that, dividing
The clouds of night, saith, 'Look on
me,'
Then flits again, its splendour hiding,—
Ev'n such the glimpse I catch of thee.

THEN FIRST FROM LOVE

THEN first from Love, in Nature's bow'rs,
Did Painting learn her fairy skill,
And cull the hues of loveliest flow'rs,
To picture woman lovelier still.
For vain was every radiant hue,
Till Passion lent a soul to art,
And taught the painter, ere he drew,
To fix the model in his heart.

Thus smooth his toil awhile went on,
Till, lo, one touch his art defies;
The brow, the lip, the blushes shone,
But who could dare to paint those
eyes?

'Twas all in vain the painter strove ;
 So turning to that boy divine,
 'Here take,' he said, 'the pencil, Love,
 No hand should paint such eyes, but thine.'

HUSH, SWEET LUTE

HUSH, sweet Lute, thy songs remind
 me
 Of past joys, now turn'd to pain ;
 Of ties that long have ceas'd to bind
 me,
 But whose burning marks remain.

In each tone, some echo falleth
 On my ear of joys gone by ;
 Ev'ry note some dream recalleth
 Of bright hopes but born to die.

Yet, sweet Lute, though pain it bring me,
 Once more let thy numbers thrill ;
 Though death were in the strain they sing me,
 I must woo its anguish still.
 Since no time can e'er recover
 Love's sweet light when once 'tis set,—
 Better to weep such pleasures over,
 Than smile o'er any left us yet.

BRIGHT MOON

BRIGHT moon, that high in heav'n art shining,
 All smiles, as if within thy bower to-night
 Thy own Endymion lay reclining,
 And thou would'st wake him with a kiss of light !—
 By all the bliss thy beam discovers,
 By all those visions far too bright for day,
 Which dreaming bards and waking lovers
 Behold, this night, beneath thy ling'ring ray,—
 I pray thee, queen of that bright heaven,
 Quench not to-night thy love-lamp in the sea,
 Till Anthe, in this bow'r, hath given
 Beneath thy beam, her long-vow'd kiss to me.
 Guide hither, guide her steps benighted,
 Ere thou, sweet moon, thy bashful crescent hide ;
 Let Love but in this bow'r be lighted,
 Then shroud in darkness all the world beside.

LONG YEARS HAVE PASS'D

LONG years have pass'd, old friend, since
 we
 First met in life's young day ;
 And friends long lov'd by thee and me,
 Since then have dropp'd away ;—
 But enough remain to cheer us on,
 And sweeten, when thus we're met,
 The glass we fill to the many gone,
 And the few who're left us yet.
 Our locks, old friend, now thinly grow,
 And some hang white and chill ;
 While some, like flow'rs 'mid Autumn's
 snow,
 Retain youth's colour still.

And so, in our hearts, though one by
 one,
 Youth's sunny hopes have set,
 Thank heav'n, not all their light is
 gone,—
 We've some to cheer us yet.
 Then here's to thee, old friend, and long
 May thou and I thus meet,
 To brighten still with wine and song
 This short life, ere it fleet.
 And still as death comes stealing on,
 Let's never, old friend, forget,
 Ev'n while we sigh o'er blessings gone
 How many are left us yet.

DREAMING FOR EVER

DREAMING for ever, vainly dreaming,
 Life to the last pursues its flight ;
 Day hath its visions fairly beaming,
 But false as those of night.
 The one illusion, the other real,
 But both the same brief dreams at
 last ;
 And when we grasp the bliss ideal,
 Soon as it shines, 'tis past.

Here, then, by this dim lake reposing,
 Calmly I'll watch, while light and gloom
 Flit o'er its face till night is closing—
 Emblem of life's short doom !
 But though, by turns, thus dark and shining,
 'Tis still unlike man's changeful day,
 Whose light returns not, once declining,
 Whose cloud, once come, will stay.

THOUGH LIGHTLY SOUNDS THE SONG I SING

A SONG OF THE ALPS

THOUGH lightly sounds the song I sing to thee,
 Though like the lark's its soaring music be,
 Thou'lt find ev'n here some mournful note that tells How near such April joy to weeping dwells.
 'Tis 'mong the gayest scenes that oft'nest steal
 Those sadd'ning thoughts we fear, yet love to feel ;
 And music never half so sweet appears,
 As when her mirth forgets itself in tears.

Then say not thou this Alpine song is gay—
 It comes from hearts that, like their mountain-lay,
 Mix joy with pain, and oft when pleasure's breath
 Most warms the surface, feel most sad beneath.
 The very beam in which the snow-wreath wears
 Its gayest smile is that which wins its tears,—
 And passion's pow'r can never lend the glow
 Which wakens bliss, without some touch of woe.

THE RUSSIAN LOVER

FLEETLY o'er the moonlight snows
 Speed we to my lady's bow'r ;
 Swift our sledge as lightning goes,
 Nor shall stop till morning's hour.
 Bright, my steed, the northern star
 Lights us from yon jewell'd skies ;
 But, to greet us, brighter far,
 Morn shall bring my lady's eyes.
 Lovers, lull'd in sunny bow'rs,
 Sleeping out their dream of time,
 Know not half the bliss that's ours,
 In this snowy, icy clime.

Like yon star that livelier gleams
 From the frosty heavens around,
 Love himself the keener beams
 When with snows of coyness crown'd.
 Fleet then on, my merry steed,
 Bound, my sledge, o'er hill and dale ;—
 What can match a lover's speed ?
 See, 'tis daylight, breaking pale !
 Brightly hath the northern star
 Lit us from yon radiant skies ;
 But, behold, how brighter far
 Yonder shine my lady's eyes !

LALLA ROOKH

TO

SAMUEL ROGERS, ESQ.

THIS EASTERN ROMANCE IS INSCRIBED

BY HIS VERY GRATEFUL AND AFFECTIONATE FRIEND

May 19, 1817.

THOMAS MOORE.

LALLA ROOKH

In the eleventh year of the reign of Aurungzebe, Abdalla, King of the Lesser Bucharia, a lineal descendant from the Great Zingis, having abdicated the throne in favour of his son, set out on a pilgrimage to the Shrine of the Prophet; and, passing into India through the delightful valley of Cashmere, rested for a short time at Delhi on his way. He was entertained by Aurungzebe in a style of magnificent hospitality, worthy alike of the visitor and the host, and was afterwards escorted with the same splendour to Surat, where he embarked for Arabia.¹ During the stay of the Royal Pilgrim at Delhi, a marriage was agreed upon between the Prince, his son, and the youngest daughter of the Emperor, LALLA ROOKH²;—a Princess described by the poets of her time as more beautiful than Leila,³ Shirine,⁴ Dewildé,⁵ or any of those heroines whose names and loves embellish the songs of Persia and Hindostan. It was intended that the nuptials should be celebrated at Cashmere; where the young King, as soon as the cares of empire would permit, was to meet, for the first time, his lovely bride, and, after a few months' repose in that enchanting valley, conduct her over the snowy hills into Bucharia.

The day of LALLA ROOKH's departure from Delhi was as splendid as sunshine and pageantry could make it. The bazaars and baths were all covered with the richest tapestry; hundreds of gilded barges upon the Jumna floated with their banners shining in the water; while through the streets groups of beautiful children went strewing the most delicious flowers around, as in that Persian festival called the Scattering of the Roses⁶; till every part of the city was as fragrant as if a caravan of musk from Khoten had passed through it. The Princess, having taken leave of her kind father, who at parting hung a cornelian of Yemen round her neck, on which was inscribed a verse from the Koran, and having sent a considerable present to the Fakirs, who kept up the Perpetual Lamp in her sister's tomb, meekly ascended the palankeen prepared for her; and, while Aurungzebe stood to take a last look from his balcony, the procession moved slowly on the road to Lahore.

Seldom had the Eastern world seen a cavalcade so superb. From the gardens in the suburbs to the Imperial palace, it was one unbroken line of splendour. The gallant appearance of the Rajahs and Mogul lords, distinguished by those insignia of the Emperor's favour,¹ the feathers of the egret of Cashmere in their turbans, and the small silver-rim'd kettle drums at the bows of their saddles;—the costly armour of their cavaliers, who vied, on this occasion, with the guards of the great Keder Khan,² in the brightness of their silver battle-axes and the massiness of their maces of gold;—the glittering of the gilt pine-apples³ on the tops of the palankeens;—the embroidered trappings of the elephants, bearing on their backs small turrets, in the shape of little antique temples, within which the Ladies of LALLA ROOKH lay as it were enshrined;—the rose-coloured veils of the Princess's own sumptuous litter,⁴ at the front of which a fair young female slave sat fanning her through the curtains, with feathers of the Argus pheasant's wing⁵;—and the lovely troop of Tartarian and Cashmerian maids of honour, whom the young King had sent to accompany his bride, and who rode on each side of the litter, upon small Arabian horses;—all was brilliant, tasteful, and magnificent, and pleased even the critical and fastidious FADLADEEN, Great Nazir or Chamberlain of the Haram, who was borne in his palankeen immediately after the Princess, and considered himself not the least important personage of the pageant.

FADLADEEN was a judge of every thing,—from the pencilling of a Circassian's eyelids to the deepest questions of science and literature; from the mixture of a conserve of rose-leaves to the composition of an epic poem: and such influence had his opinion upon the various tastes of the day, that all the cooks and poets of Delhi stood in awe of him. His political conduct and opinions were founded upon that line of Sadi,—‘Should the Prince at noon-day say, It is night, declare that you behold the moon and stars.’—And his zeal for religion, of which Aurungzebe was a munificent protector,⁶ was about as disinterested as that of the goldsmith who fell in love with the diamond eyes of the idol of Jaghernaut.⁷

¹ ‘One mark of honour or knighthood bestowed by the Emperor is the permission to wear a small kettledrum at the bows of their saddles, which at first was invented for the training of hawks, and to call them to the lure, and is worn in the field by all sportsmen to that end.’—Fryer's Travels.

‘Those on whom the King has conferred the privilege must wear an ornament of jewels on the right side of the turban, surmounted by a high plume of the feathers of a kind of egret. This bird is found only in Cashmere, and the feathers are carefully collected for the King, who bestows them on his nobles.’—Elphinstone's Account of Cabul.

² ‘Khedar Khan, the Khakan, or King of Turkestan, beyond the Gihon (at the end of the eleventh century), whenever he appeared abroad was preceded by seven hundred horsemen with silver battle-axes, and was followed by an equal number bearing maces of gold. He was a great patron of poetry, and it was he who used to preside at public exercises of genius, with four basins of gold and silver by him to distribute among the poets who excelled.’—Richardson's Dissertation prefixed to his Dictionary.

³ ‘The kubbeh, a large golden knob, generally in the shape of a pine-apple, on the top of the canopy over the litter or palanquin.’—Scott's Notes on the Baharadansh.

⁴ ‘In the Poem of Zohair, in the Moallakat, there is the following lively description of ‘a company of maidens seated on camels.’

‘They are mounted in carriages covered with costly awnings, and with rose-coloured veils, the linings of which have the hue of crimson Andem-wood.

‘When they ascend from the bosom of the vale, they sit forward on the saddle-cloth, with every mark of a voluptuous gaiety.

‘Now, when they have reached the brink of yon blue-gushing rivulet, they fix the poles of their tents like the Arab with a settled mansion.’

⁵ See Bernier's description of the attendants on Ranchanara-Begum, in her progress to Cashmere.

⁶ This hypocritical Emperor would have made a worthy associate of certain Holy Leagues.—‘He held the cloak of religion (says Dow) between his actions and the vulgar; and impudently thanked the Divinity for a success which he owed to his own wickedness. When he was murdering and persecuting his brothers and their families, he was building a magnificent mosque at Delhi, as an offering to God for his assistance to him in the civil wars. He acted as high priest at the consecration of this temple; and made a practice of attending divine service there, in the humble dress of a Fakier. But when he lifted one hand to the Divinity, he, with the other, signed warrants for the assassination of his relations.’—History of Hindostan, vol. iii. p. 335. See also the curious letter of Aurungzebe, given in the Oriental Collections, vol. i. p. 320.

⁷ ‘The idol at Jaghernath has two fine diamonds for eyes. No goldsmith is suffered to enter the Pagoda, one having stole one of these eyes, being locked up all night with the idol.’—Tavernier.

During the first days of their journey, LALLA ROOKH, who had passed all her life within the shadow of the Royal Gardens of Delhi,¹ found enough in the beauty of the scenery through which they passed to interest her mind, and delight her imagination; and when at evening, or in the heat of the day, they turned off from the high road to those retired and romantic places which had been selected for her encampments,—sometimes on the banks of a small rivulet, as clear as the waters of the Lake of Pearl²; sometimes under the sacred shade of a Banyan tree, from which the view opened upon a glade covered with antelopes; and often in those hidden, embowered spots, described by one from the Isles of the West,³ as ‘places of melancholy, delight, and safety, where all the company around was wild peacocks and turtle-doves’;—she felt a charm in these scenes, so lovely and so new to her, which, for a time, made her indifferent to every other amusement. But LALLA ROOKH was young, and the young love variety; nor could the conversation of her Ladies and the Great Chamberlain, FADLADEEN, (the only persons, of course, admitted to her pavilion), sufficiently enliven those many vacant hours, which were devoted neither to the pillow nor the palankeen. There was a little Persian slave who sung sweetly to the Vina, and who, now and then, lulled the Princess to sleep with the ancient ditties of her country, about the loves of Wamak and Ezra,⁴ the fair-haired Zal and his mistress Rodahver;⁵ not forgetting the combat of Rustam with the terrible White Demon.⁶ At other times she was amused by those graceful dancing-girls of Delhi, who had been permitted by the Bramins of the Great Pagoda to attend her, much to the horror of the good Mussulman FADLADEEN, who could see nothing graceful or agreeable in idolaters, and to whom the very tinkling of their golden anklets⁷ was an abomination.

But these and many other diversions were repeated till they lost all their charm, and the nights and noon-days were beginning to move heavily, when, at length, it was recollected that, among the attendants sent by the bridegroom, was a young poet of Cashmere, much celebrated throughout the Valley for his manner of reciting the Stories of the East, on whom his Royal Master had conferred the privilege of being admitted to the pavilion of the Princess, that he

⁶ Their amour is recounted in the Shah-Namêh of Ferdousi; and there is much beauty in the passage which describes the slaves of Rodahver sitting on the bank of the river and throwing flowers into the stream, in order to draw the attention of the young Hero who is encamped on the opposite side.—See Champion’s translation.

⁷ ‘The women of the Idol, or dancing girls of the Pagoda, have little golden bells fastened to their feet, the soft harmonious tinkling of which vibrates in unison with the exquisite melody of their voices.’—Maurice’s Indian Antiquities.

‘The Arabian courtesans, like the Indian women, have little golden bells fastened round their legs, neck, and elbows, to the sound of which they dance before the King. The Arabian princesses wear golden rings on their fingers, to which little bells are suspended, as well as in the flowing tresses of their hair, that their superior rank may be known, and they themselves receive in passing the homage due to them.’—See Calmet’s Dictionary, art. Bells.

might help to beguile the tediousness of the journey by some of his most agreeable recitals. At the mention of a poet, FADLADEEN elevated his critical eyebrows, and, having refreshed his faculties with a dose of that delicious opium¹ which is distilled from the black poppy of the Thebais, gave orders for the minstrel to be forthwith introduced into the presence.

The Princess, who had once in her life seen a poet from behind the screens of gauze in her Father's hall, and had conceived from that specimen no very favourable ideas of the Caste, expected but little in this new exhibition to interest her;—she felt inclined, however, to alter her opinion on the very first appearance of FERAMORZ. He was a youth about LALLA ROOKH's own age, and graceful as that idol of women, Crishna,²—such as he appears to their young imaginations, heroic, beautiful, breathing music from his very eyes, and exalting the religion of his worshippers into love. His dress was simple, yet not without some marks of costliness; and the Ladies of the Princess were not long in discovering that the cloth, which encircled his high Tartarian cap, was of the most delicate kind that the shawl-goats of Tibet supply.³ Here and there, too, over his vest, which was confined by a flowered girdle of Kashan, hung strings of fine pearl, disposed with an air of studied negligence;—nor did the exquisite embroidery of his sandals escape the observation of these fair critics; who, however they might give way to FADLADEEN upon the unimportant topics of religion and government, had the spirit of martyrs in every thing relating to such momentous matters as jewels and embroidery.

For the purpose of relieving the pauses of recitation by music, the young Cashmerian held in his hand a kitar;—such as, in old times, the Arab maids of the West used to listen to by moonlight in the gardens of the Alhambra—and, having premised, with much humility, that the story he was about to relate was founded on the adventures of that Veiled Prophet of Khorassan,⁴ who, in the year of the Hegira 163, created such alarm throughout the Eastern Empire, made an obeisance to the Princess, and thus began:—

THE

VEILED PROPHET OF KHORASSAN⁵

IN that delightful Province of the Sun,
The first of Persian lands he shines upon,
Where all the loveliest children of his beam,
Flow'rets and fruits, blush over ev'ry stream,⁶
And, fairest of all streams, the MURGA roves
Among MEROU's⁷ bright palaces and groves;—
There on that throne, to which the blind belief
Of millions rais'd him, sat the Prophet-Chief,
The Great MOKANNA. O'er his features hung
The Veil, the Silver Veil, which he had flung

⁷ One of the royal cities of Khorassan.

In mercy there, to hide from mortal sight
 His dazzling brow, till man could bear its light.
 For, far less luminous, his votaries said,
 Were ev'n the gleams, miraculously shed
 O'er MOUSSA's¹ cheek,² when down the Mount he trod,
 All glowing from the presence of his God!

On either side, with ready hearts and hands,
 His chosen guard of bold Believers stands;
 Young fire-ey'd disputants, who deem their swords,
 On points of faith, more eloquent than words; 20
 And such their zeal, there's not a youth with brand
 Uplifted there, but, at the Chief's command,
 Would make his own devoted heart its sheath,
 And bless the lips that doom'd so dear a death!
 In hatred to the Caliph's hue of night,³
 Their vesture, helms and all, is snowy white;
 Their weapons various—some equipp'd, for speed,
 With javelins of the light Kathaian reed;⁴
 Or bows of buffalo horn and shining quivers
 Fill'd with the stems⁵ that bloom on IRAN's rivers;⁶ 30
 While some, for war's more terrible attacks,
 Wield the huge mace and pond'rous battle-axe;
 And as they wave aloft in morning's beam
 The milk-white plumage of their helms, they seem Like a chenar-tree grove⁷ when winter throws
 O'er all its tufted heads his feath'ring snows.

Between the porphyry pillars, that uphold
 The rich moresque-work of the roof of gold,
 Aloft the Haram's curtain'd galleries rise,
 Where through the silken network, glancing eyes, 40
 From time to time, like sudden gleams that glow
 Through autumn clouds, shine o'er the pomp below.—
 What impious tongue, ye blushing saints, would dare
 To hint that aught but Heav'n hath plac'd you there?
 Or that the loves of this light world could bind,
 In their gross chain, your Prophet's soaring mind?
 No—wrongful thought!—commission'd from above
 To people Eden's bowers with shapes of love, (Creatures so bright, that the same lips and eyes
 They wear on earth will serve in Paradise,) 50

⁶ The Persians call this plant Gaz. The celebrated shaft of Isfendiar, one of their ancient heroes, was made of it.—'Nothing can be more beautiful than the appearance of this plant in flower during the rains on the banks of rivers, where it is usually interwoven with a lovely twining asclepias.'—Sir W. Jones, Botanical Observations on Select Indian Plants.

There to recline among Heav'n's native maids,
 And crown the' Elect with bliss that never fades—
 Well hath the Prophet-Chief his bidding done ;
 And ev'ry beauteous race beneath the sun,
 From those who kneel at BRAHMA'S burning founts,¹
 To the fresh nymphs bounding o'er YEMEN'S mounts ;
 From PERSIA'S eyes of full and fawn-like ray,
 To the small, half-shut glances of KATHAY ;²
 And GEORGIA'S bloom, and AZAB'S darker smiles,
 And the gold ringlets of the Western Isles ;
 All, all are there ;—each Land its flower hath given,
 To form that fair young Nursery for Heav'n !

60

But why this pageant now ? this arm'd array ?
 What triumph crowds the rich Divan to-day
 With turban'd heads, of ev'ry hue and race,
 Bowing before that veil'd and awful face,
 Like tulip-beds,³ of diff'rent shape and dyes,
 Bending beneath the' invisible West-wind's sighs !
 What new-made mystery now, for Faith to sign,
 And blood to seal, as genuine and divine,
 What dazzling mimicry of God's own power
 Hath the bold Prophet plann'd to grace this hour ?

70

Not such the pageant now, though not less proud ;
 Yon warrior youth, advancing from the crowd,
 With silver bow, with belt of broider'd crape,
 And fur-bound bonnet of Bucharian shape,⁴
 So fiercely beautiful in form and eye,
 Like war's wild planet in a summer sky ;
 That youth to-day,—a proselyte, worth hordes
 Of cooler spirits and less practis'd swords,—
 Is come to join, all bravery and belief,
 The creed and standard of the heav'n-sent Chief.

80

Though few his years, the West already knows
 Young AZIM'S fame ;—beyond the' Olympian snows
 Ere manhood darken'd o'er his downy cheek,
 O'erwhelm'd in fight, and captive to the Greek,⁵
 He linger'd there, till peace dissolv'd his chains ;—
 Oh, who could, ev'n in bondage, tread the plains
 Of glorious GREECE, nor feel his spirit rise
 Kindling within him ? who, with heart and eyes,
 Could walk where liberty had been, nor see
 The shining foot-prints of her Deity,
 Nor feel those godlike breathings in the air,
 Which mutely told her spirit had been there ?

Not he, that youthful warrior,—no, too well
 For his soul's quiet work'd the' awak'ning spell;
 And now, returning to his own dear land,
 Full of those dreams of good that, vainly grand,
 Haunt the young heart,—proud views of human kind,
 Of men to Gods exalted and refin'd,—
 False views, like that horizon's fair deceit,
 100 Where earth and heav'n but seem, alas, to meet!—
 Soon as he heard an Arm Divine was rais'd
 To right the nations, and beheld, emblaz'd
 On the white flag, MOKANNA's host unfurl'd,
 Those words of sunshine, 'Freedom to the World,'
 At once his faith, his sword, his soul obey'd
 The' inspiring summons; every chosen blade
 That fought beneath that banner's sacred text
 Seem'd doubly edg'd, for this world and the next;
 110 And ne'er did Faith with her smooth bandage bind
 Eyes more devoutly willing to be blind,
 In virtue's cause;—never was soul inspir'd
 With livelier trust in what it most desir'd,
 Than his, the' enthusiast there, who kneeling, pale
 With pious awe, before that Silver Veil,
 Believes the form, to which he bends his knee,
 Some pure, redeeming angel, sent to free
 This fetter'd world from every bond and stain,
 And bring its primal glories back again!
 120

Low as young AZIM knelt, that motley crowd
 Of all earth's nations sunk the knee and bow'd,
 With shouts of 'ALLA!' echoing long and loud;
 While high in air, above the Prophet's head,
 Hundreds of banners, to the sunbeam spread,
 Wav'd, like the wings of the white birds that fan
 The flying throne of star-taught SOLIMAN.¹
 Then thus he spoke:—'Stranger, though new the frame
 Thy soul inhabits now, I've track'd its flame
 For many an age,² in ev'ry chance and change
 130 Of that existence, through whose varied range,—
 As through a torch-race, where, from hand to hand
 The flying youths transmit their shining brand,
 From frame to frame the unextinguish'd soul
 Rapidly passes, till it reach the goal!

'Nor think 'tis only the gross Spirits, warm'd
 With duskier fire and for earth's medium form'd,

¹ This wonderful Throne was called The Star of the Genii. For a full description of it, see the Fragment, translated by Captain Franklin, from a Persian MS. entitled 'The History of Jerusalem.' Oriental Collections, vol. i. p. 235.—When Soliman travelled, the eastern writers say, 'He had a carpet of green silk on which his throne was placed, being of a prodigious length and breadth, and sufficient for all his forces to stand upon, the men placing themselves on his right hand, and the spirits on his left; and that when all were in order, the wind, at his command, took up the carpet, and transported it, with all that were upon it, wherever he pleased; the army of birds at the same time flying over their heads, and forming a kind of canopy to shade them from the sun.—Sale's Koran, vol. ii. p. 214, note.

² The transmigration of souls was one of his doctrines.—Vide D'Herbelot.

That run this course :—Beings, the most divine,
 Thus deign through dark mortality to shine.
 Such was the Essence that in ADAM dwelt, 140
 To which all Heav'n, except the Proud One, knelt :¹
 Such the refin'd Intelligence that glow'd
 In MOUSSA'S² frame,—and, thence descending, flow'd
 Through many a Prophet's breast³ ;—in ISSA⁴ shone,
 And in MOHAMMED burn'd ; till, hast'ning on,
 (As a bright river that, from fall to fall
 In many a maze descending, bright through all,
 Finds some fair region where, each labyrinth past,
 In one full lake of light it rests at last,)
 That Holy Spirit, settling calm and free 150
 From lapse or shadow, centers all in me !⁵

Again, throughout the' assembly at these words,
 Thousands of voices rung : the warriors' swords
 Were pointed up to heaven ; a sudden wind
 In the' open banners play'd, and from behind
 Those Persian hangings, that but ill could screen
 The Haram's loveliness, white hands were seen Waving embroider'd scarves, whose motion gave
 A perfume forth—like those the Houris wave
 When beck'ning to their bow'rs the' immortal Brave. 160

'But these,' pursued the Chief, 'are truths sublime,
 That claim a holier mood and calmer time
 Than earth allows us now ;—this sword must first
 The darkling prison-house of Mankind burst,
 Ere Peace can visit them, or Truth let in
 Her wakening daylight on a world of sin.
 But then,—celestial warriors, then, when all
 Earth's shrines and thrones before our banner fall ;
 When the glad Slave shall at these feet lay down
 His broken chain, the tyrant Lord his crown, 170
 The Priest his book, the Conqueror his wreath,
 And from the lips of Truth one mighty breath
 Shall, like a whirlwind, scatter in its breeze
 That whole dark pile of human mockeries ;—
 Then shall the reign of mind commence on earth,
 And starting fresh as from a second birth,
 Man, in the sunshine of the world's new spring,
 Shall walk transparent, like some holy thing !
 Then, too, your Prophet from his angel brow
 Shall cast the Veil that hides its splendours now, 180
 And gladden'd Earth shall, through her wide expanse,
 Bask in the glories of this countenance !

¹ 'And when we said unto the angels, Worship Adam, they all worshipped him except Eblis (Lucifer), who refused.'—The Koran, chap. ii.

² Moses.

³ This is according to D'Herbelot's account of the doctrines of Mokanna :—'Sa doctrine étoit, que Dieu avoit pris une forme et figure humaine, depuis qu'il eut commandé aux Anges d'adorer Adam, le premier des hommes. Qu'après la mort d'Adam, Dieu étoit apparu sous la figure de plusieurs Prophetes, et autres grands hommes qu'il avoit choisis, jusqu'à ce qu'il prit celle d'Abu Moslem, Prince de la Khorassan, lequel professoit l'erreur de la Tenassukhiah ou Métempsychose ; et qu'après la mort de ce Prince, la Divinité étoit passée, et descendue en sa personne.' ⁴ Jesus.

'For thee, young warrior, welcome!—thou hast yet
Some tasks to learn, some frailties to forget,
Ere the white war-plume o'er thy brow can wave;—
But, once my own, mine all till in the grave!'

The pomp is at an end—the crowds are gone—
Each ear and heart still haunted by the tone
Of that deep voice, which thrill'd like ALLA's own!
The Young all dazzled by the plumes and lances,
The glitt'ring throne, and Haram's half-caught glances; 190
The Old deep pond'ring on the promis'd reign
Of peace and truth: and all the female train
Ready to risk their eyes, could they but gaze
A moment on that brow's miraculous blaze!

But there was one, among the chosen maids,
Who blush'd behind the gallery's silken shades,
One, to whose soul the pageant of to-day
Has been like death:—you saw her pale dismay,
Ye wond'ring sisterhood, and heard the burst 200
Of exclamation from her lips, when first
She saw that youth, too well, too dearly known,
Silently kneeling at the Prophet's throne.

Ah ZELICA! there was a time, when bliss
Shone o'er thy heart from ev'ry look of his;
When but to see him, hear him, breathe the air
In which he dwelt, was thy soul's fondest prayer;
When round him hung such a perpetual spell,
Whate'er he did, none ever did so well.
Too happy days! when, if he touch'd a flow'r 210
Or gem of thine, 'twas sacred from that hour;
When thou didst study him till every tone
And gesture and dear look became thy own,—
Thy voice like his, the changes of his face
In thine reflected with still lovelier grace,
Like echo, sending back sweet music, fraught
With twice the' aërial sweetness it had brought!
Yet now he comes,—brighter than even he
Ere beam'd before,—but, ah! not bright for thee;
No—dread, unlook'd for, like a visitant 220
From the' other world, he comes as if to haunt
Thy guilty soul with dreams of lost delight,
Long lost to all but mem'ry's aching sight:—
Sad dreams! as when the Spirit of our Youth
Returns in sleep, sparkling with all the truth
And innocence once ours, and leads us back,
In mournful mockery, o'er the shining track
Of our young life, and points out every ray
Of hope and peace we've lost upon the way!

Once happy pair!—In proud BOKHARA's groves,
Who had not heard of their first youthful loves? 230

Born by that ancient flood,¹ which from its spring
 In the dark Mountains swiftly wandering,
 Enrich'd by ev'ry pilgrim brook that shines
 With relics from BUCHARIA's ruby mines,
 And, lending to the CASPIAN half its strength,
 In the cold Lake of Eagles sinks at length;—
 There, on the banks of that bright river born,
 The flow'rs that hung above its wave at morn,
 Bless'd not the waters, as they murmur'd by, 240
 With holier scent and lustre, than the sigh
 And virgin-glance of first affection cast
 Upon their youth's smooth current, as it pass'd !
 But war disturb'd this vision,—far away
 From her fond eyes summon'd to join the' array
 Of PERSIA's warriors on the hills of THRACE,
 The youth exchang'd his sylvan dwelling-place
 For the rude tent and war-field's deathful clash ;
 His ZELICA's sweet glances for the flash
 Of Grecian wild-fire, and Love's gentle chains 250
 For bleeding bondage on BYZANTIUM'S plains.

Month after month, in widowhood of soul
 Drooping, the maiden saw two summers roll
 Their suns away—but, ah, how cold and dim
 Ev'n summer suns, when not beheld with him !
 From time to time ill-omen'd rumours came,
 Like spirit-tongues, mutt'ring the sick man's name,
 Just ere he dies :—at length those sounds of dread
 Fell with'ring on her soul, 'AZIM is dead !'
 Oh Grief, beyond all other griefs, when fate 260
 First leaves the young heart lone and desolate
 In the wide world, without that only tie
 For which it lov'd to live or fear'd to die ;—
 Lorn as the hung-up lute, that ne'er hath spoken
 Since the sad day its master-chord was broken !

Fond maid, the sorrow of her soul was such,
 Ev'n reason sunk,—blighted beneath its touch ;
 And though, ere long, her sanguine spirit rose
 Above the first dead pressure of its woes,
 Though health and bloom return'd, the delicate chain 270
 Of thought, once tangled, never clear'd again.
 Warm, lively, soft as in youth's happiest day,
 The mind was still all there, but turn'd astray ;—
 A wand'ring bark, upon whose pathway shone
 All stars of heaven, except the guiding one !
 Again she smil'd, nay, much and brightly smil'd,
 But 'twas a lustre, strange, unreal, wild ;
 And when she sung to her lute's touching strain,
 'Twas like the notes, half ecstasy, half pain,
 The bulbul² utters, ere her soul depart, 280

¹ The Amoo, which rises in the Belur Tag, which falls into the Caspian sea, and the other or Dark Mountains, and running nearly from into Aral Nahr, or the Lake of Eagles.
 east to west, splits into two branches ; one of ² The nightingale.

When, vanquish'd by some minstrel's pow'rful art,
She dies upon the lute whose sweetness broke her heart !

Such was the mood in which that mission found
Young ZELICA,—that mission, which around
The Eastern world, in every region blest
With woman's smile, sought out its loveliest,
To grace that galaxy of lips and eyes
Which the Veil'd Prophet destin'd for the skies :—
And such quick welcome as a spark receives
Dropp'd on a bed of Autumn's wither'd leaves, 290
Did every tale of these enthusiasts find
In the wild maiden's sorrow-blighted mind.
All fire at once the madd'ning zeal she caught ;—
Elect of Paradise ! blest, rapturous thought !
Predestin'd bride, in heaven's eternal dome,
Of some brave youth—ha ! durst they say 'of some ?'
No—of the one, one only object trac'd
In her heart's core too deep to be effac'd ;
The one whose mem'ry, fresh as life, is twin'd
With every broken link of her lost mind ; 300
Whose image lives, though Reason's self be wreck'd,
Safe 'mid the ruins of her intellect !

Alas, poor ZELICA ! it needed all
The fantasy, which held thy mind in thrall,
To see in that gay Haram's glowing maids
A sainted colony for Eden's shades ;
Or dream that he,—of whose unholy flame
Thou wert too soon the victim,—shining came
From Paradise, to people its pure sphere
With souls like thine, which he hath ruin'd here ! 310
No—had not reason's light totally set,
And left thee dark, thou hadst an amulet
In the lov'd image, graven on thy heart,
Which would have sav'd thee from the tempter's art,
And kept alive, in all its bloom of breath,
That purity, whose fading is love's death !—
But lost, inflam'd,—a restless zeal took place
Of the mild virgin's still and feminine grace ;
First of the Prophet's favourites, proudly first
In zeal and charms,—too well the Impostor nurs'd 320
Her soul's delirium, in whose active flame,
Thus lighting up a young, luxuriant frame,
He saw more potent sorceries to bind
To his dark yoke the spirits of mankind,
More subtle chains than hell itself e'er twin'd.
No art was spar'd, no witch'ry ;—all the skill
His demons taught him was employ'd to fill
Her mind with gloom and ecstasy by turns—
That gloom, through which Frenzy but fiercer burns ;
That ecstasy, which from the depth of sadness
Glazes like the maniac's moon, whose light is madness ! 330

'Twas from a brilliant banquet, where the sound
Of poesy and music breath'd around,

Together picturing to her mind and ear
 The glories of that heav'n, her destin'd sphere,
 Where all was pure, where every stain that lay
 Upon the spirit's light should pass away,
 And, realizing more than youthful love
 E'er wish'd or dream'd, she should for ever rove
 Through fields of fragrance by her AZIM's side,
 His own bless'd, purified, eternal bride !— 340
 'Twas from a scene, a witching trance like this,
 He hurried her away, yet breathing bliss,
 To the dim charnel-house ;—through all its steams
 Of damp and death, led only by those gleams
 Which foul Corruption lights, as with design
 To show the gay and proud she too can shine—
 And, passing on through upright ranks of Dead,
 Which to the maiden, doubly craz'd by dread,
 Seem'd, through the bluish death-light round them cast, 350
 To move their lips in mutt'rings as she pass'd—
 There, in that awful place, when each had quaff'd
 And pledg'd in silence such a fearful draught,
 Such—oh ! the look and taste of that red bowl
 Will haunt her till she dies—he bound her soul
 By a dark oath, in hell's own language fram'd,
 Never, while earth his mystic presence claim'd,
 While the blue arch of day hung o'er them both,
 Never, by that all-imprecating oath,
 In joy or sorrow from his side to sever.— 360
 She swore, and the wide charnel echoed, ' Never, never ! '

From that dread hour, entirely, wildly giv'n
 To him and—she believ'd, lost maid !—to heav'n ;
 Her brain, her heart, her passions all inflam'd,
 How proud she stood, when in full Haram nam'd
 The Priestess of the Faith !—how flash'd her eyes
 With light, alas, that was not of the skies,
 When round, in trances, only less than hers,
 She saw the Haram kneel, her prostrate worshippers.
 Well might MOKANNA think that form alone 370
 Had spells enough to make the world his own :—
 Light, lovely limbs, to which the spirit's play
 Gave motion, airy as the dancing spray,
 When from its stem the small bird wings away :
 Lips in whose rosy labyrinth, when she smil'd,
 The soul was lost ; and blushes, swift and wild
 As are the momentary meteors sent
 Across the' uncalm, but beauteous firmament.
 And then her look—oh ! where's the heart so wise
 Could unbewilder'd meet those matchless eyes ? 380
 Quick, restless, strange, but exquisite withal,
 Like those of angels, just before their fall ;
 Now shadow'd with the shames of earth—now crost
 By glimpses of the Heav'n her heart had lost ;
 In ev'ry glance there broke, without controul,
 The flashes of a bright, but troubled soul,

Where sensibility still wildly play'd,
Like lightning, round the ruins it had made !

And such was now young ZELICA—so chang'd
From her who, some years since, delighted rang'd
The almond groves that shade BOKHARA'S tide,
All life and bliss, with AZIM by her side !
So alter'd was she now, this festal day,
When, 'mid the proud Divan's dazzling array,
The vision of that Youth whom she had lov'd,
Had wept as dead, before her breath'd and mov'd ;—
When—bright, she thought, as if from Eden's track
But half-way trodden, he had wander'd back
Again to earth, glist'ning with Eden's light—
Her beauteous AZIM shone before her sight.

390

400

O Reason ! who shall say what spells renew,
When least we look for it, thy broken clew !
Through what small vistas o'er the darken'd brain
Thy intellectual day-beam bursts again ;
And how, like forts, to which beleaguers win
Unhop'd-for entrance through some friend within,
One clear idea, waken'd in the breast
By mem'ry's magic, lets in all the rest.
Would it were thus, unhappy girl, with thee !
But though light came, it came but partially ;
Enough to show the maze, in which thy sense
Wander'd about,—but not to guide it thence ;
Enough to glimmer o'er the yawning wave,
But not to point the harbour which might save.
Hours of delight and peace, long left behind,
With that dear form came rushing o'er her mind ;
But, oh ! to think how deep her soul had gone
In shame and falsehood since those moments shone ;
And, then, her oath—there madness lay again,
And, shudd'ring, back she sunk into her chain
Of mental darkness, as if blest to flee
From light, whose every glimpse was agony !
Yet, one relief this glance of former years
Brought, mingled with its pain,—tears, floods of tears.
Long frozen at her heart, but now like rills
Let loose in spring-time from the snowy hills,
And gushing warm, after a sleep of frost,
Through valleys where their flow had long been lost.

410

Sad and subdu'd, for the first time her frame
Trembled with horror, when the summons came (A summons proud and rare, which all but she,
And she, till now, had heard with ecstasy,
To meet MOKANNA at his place of prayer,
A garden oratory, cool and fair,
By the stream's side, where still at close of day
The Prophet of the Veil retir'd to pray ;
Sometimes alone—but, oft'ner far, with one,
One chosen nymph to share his orison.

430

Of late none found such favour in his sight
 As the young Priestess; and though, since that night 440
 When the death-caverns echo'd every tone
 Of the dire oath that made her all his own,
 The' Impostor, sure of his infatuate prize,
 Had, more than once, thrown off his soul's disguise,
 And utter'd such unheav'nly, monstrous things,
 As ev'n across the desp'rate wanderings
 Of a weak intellect, whose lamp was out,
 Threw startling shadows of dismay and doubt;—
 Yet zeal, ambition, her tremendous vow,
 The thought, still haunting her, of that bright brow, 450
 Whose blaze, as yet from mortal eye conceal'd,
 Would soon, proud triumph! be to her reveal'd,
 To her alone;—and then the hope, most dear,
 Most wild of all, that her transgression here
 Was but a passage through earth's grosser fire,
 From which the spirit would at last aspire,
 Ev'n purer than before,—as perfumes rise
 Through flame and smoke, most welcome to the skies—
 And that when AZIM's fond, divine embrace
 Should circle her in heav'n, no dark'ning trace 460
 Would on that bosom he once lov'd remain,
 But all be bright, be pure, be his again!—
 These were the wild'ring dreams, whose curst deceit
 Had chain'd her soul beneath the tempter's feet,
 And made her think ev'n damning falsehood sweet.
 But now that Shape, which had appall'd her view,
 That Semblance—oh how terrible, if true!
 Which came across her frenzy's full career
 With shock of consciousness, cold, deep, severe,
 As when, in northern seas, at midnight dark, 470
 An isle of ice encounters some swift bark,
 And, startling all its wretches from their sleep,
 By one cold impulse hurls them to the deep;—
 So came that shock not frenzy's self could bear,
 And waking up each long-lull'd image there,
 But check'd her headlong soul, to sink it in despair!

Wan and dejected, through the ev'ning dusk,
 She now went slowly to that small kiosk,
 Where, pond'ring alone his impious schemes,
 MOKANNA waited her—too wrapt in dreams 480
 Of the fair-rip'ning future's rich success,
 To heed the sorrow, pale and spiritless,
 That sat upon his victim's downcast brow,
 Or mark how slow her step, how alter'd now
 From the quick, ardent Priestess, whose light bound Came like a spirit's o'er the' unechoing ground,—
 From that wild ZELICA, whose every glance
 Was thrilling fire, whose ev'ry thought a trance!

Upon his couch the Veil'd MOKANNA lay,
 While lamps around—not such as lend their ray, 490
 Glimm'ring and cold, to those who nightly pray

In holy KOOM,¹ or MECCA's dim arcades,—
 But brilliant, soft, such lights as lovely maids
 Look loveliest in, shed their luxurious glow
 Upon his mystic Veil's white glitt'ring flow.
 Beside him, 'stead of beads and books of pray'r,
 Which the world fondly thought he mus'd on there,
 Stood Vases, fill'd with KISHMEE's² golden wine,
 And the red weepings of the SHIRAZ vine;
 Of which his curtain'd lips full many a draught
 Took zealously, as if each drop they quaff'd,
 Like ZEMZEM's Spring of Holiness,³ had pow'r
 To freshen the soul's virtues into flow'r!
 And still he drank and ponder'd—nor could see
 The' approaching maid, so deep his reverie;
 At length, with fiendish laugh, like that which broke
 From EBLIS at the Fall of Man, he spoke:—
 'Yes, ye vile race, for hell's amusement given,
 Too mean for earth, yet claiming kin with heav'n
 God's images, forsooth!—such gods as he
 Whom INDIA serves, the monkey deity;—
 Ye creatures of a breath, proud things of clay,
 To whom if LUCIFER, as grandams say,
 Refus'd, though at the forfeit of heaven's light,
 To bend in worship, LUCIFER was right!⁴—
 Soon shall I plant this foot upon the neck
 Of your foul race, and without fear or check,
 Luxuriating in hate, avenge my shame,
 My deep-felt, long-nurst loathing of man's name!
 Soon at the head of myriads, blind and fierce
 As hooded falcons, through the universe
 I'll sweep my dark'ning, desolating way,
 Weak man my instrument, curst man my prey!

See a curious account, in Stephen's Persia, of a solemn embassy from some part of the Indies to Goa, when the Portuguese were there, offering vast treasures for the recovery of a monkey's tooth, which they held in great veneration, and which had been taken away upon the conquest of the kingdom of Jafanapatan.

⁵ This resolution of Eblis not to acknowledge the new creature, man, was, according to Mahometan tradition, thus adopted:—'The earth (which God had selected for the materials of his work) was carried into Arabia to a place between Mecca and Tayef, where, being first kneaded by the angels, it was afterwards fashioned by God himself into a human form, and left to dry for the space of forty days, or, as others say, as many years; the angels, in the mean time, often visiting it, and Eblis (then one of the angels nearest to God's presence, afterwards the devil) among the rest; but he, not contented with looking at it, kicked it with his foot till it rung, and knowing God designed that creature to be his superior, took a secret resolution never to acknowledge him as such.'—Sale on the Koran.

⁶ A kind of lantern formerly used by robbers, called the Hand of Glory, the candle for which was made of the fat of a dead malefactor. This, however, was rather a western than an eastern superstition.

Ye shall have honours—wealth—yes, Sages, yes—
 I know, grave fools, your wisdom's nothingness;
 Undazzled it can track yon starry sphere,
 But a gilt stick, a bauble blinds it here.
 How I shall laugh, when trumpeted along,
 In lying speech, and still more lying song,
 By these learn'd slaves, the meanest of the throng;
 Their wits bought up, their wisdom shrunk so small,
 A sceptre's puny point can wield it all!

'Ye too, believers of incredible creeds,
 Whose faith enshrines the monsters which it breeds;
 Who, bolder ev'n than NEMROD, think to rise,
 By nonsense heap'd on nonsense, to the skies;
 Ye shall have miracles, ay, sound ones too,
 Seen, heard, attested, ev'ry thing—but true.
 Your preaching zealots, too inspir'd to seek
 One grace of meaning for the things they speak;
 Your martyrs, ready to shed out their blood,
 For truths too heav'nly to be understood;
 And your State Priests, sole vendors of the lore,
 That works salvation;—as, on AVA's shore,
 Where none but priests are privileg'd to trade
 In that best marble of which Gods are made;¹
 They shall have mysteries—ay, precious stuff,
 For knaves to thrive by—mysteries enough;
 Dark, tangled doctrines, dark as fraud can weave,
 Which simple votaries shall on trust receive,
 While craftier feign belief, till they believe.
 A Heav'n too ye must have, ye lords of dust,—
 A splendid Paradise,—pure souls, ye must:
 That Prophet ill sustains his holy call,
 Who finds not heav'n's to suit the tastes of all;
 Houris for boys, omniscience for sages,
 And wings and glories for all ranks and ages.
 Vain things!—as lust or vanity inspires,
 The heav'n of each is but what each desires,
 And, soul or sense, whate'er the object be,
 Man would be man to all eternity!
 So let him—EBLIS!—grant this crowning curse,
 But keep him what he is, no Hell were worse.'

'Oh my lost soul!' exclaim'd the shudd'ring maid,
 Whose ears had drunk like poison all he said.—
 MOKANNA started—not abash'd, afraid,—
 He knew no more of fear than one who dwells
 Beneath the tropics knows of icicles!
 But, in those dismal words that reach'd his ear,
 'Oh my lost soul!' there was a sound so drear.
 So like that voice, among the sinful dead,
 In which the legend o'er Hell's Gate is read,

¹ The material of which images of Gaudima (the Birman Deity) are made, is held sacred. mass, but are suffered, and indeed encouraged to buy figures of the Deity ready made.—
 'Birmans may not purchase the marble in Syme's Ava, vol. ii, p. 376.

That, new as 'twas from her, whom nought could dim
Or sink till now, it startled even him.

'Ha, my fair Priestess!'—thus, with ready wile,
The' Impostor turn'd to greet her—'thou, whose smile 580
Hath inspiration in its rosy beam
Beyond the' Enthusiast's hope or Prophet's dream;
Light of the Faith! who twin'st religion's zeal
So close with love's, men know not which they feel,
Nor which to sigh for, in their trance of heart,
The heav'n thou preacheest or the heav'n thou art!
What should I be without thee? without thee
How dull were power, how joyless victory!
Though borne by angels, if that smile of thine
Bless'd not my banner, 'twere but half divine. 590
But—why so mournful, child? those eyes, that shone
All life last night—what!—is their glory gone?
Come, come—this morn's fatigue hath made them pale,
They want rekindling—suns themselves would fail
Did not their comets bring, as I to thee,
From light's own fount supplies of brilliancy.
Thou seest this cup—no juice of earth is here,
But the pure waters of that upper sphere,
Whose rills o'er ruby beds and topaz flow,
Catching the gem's bright colour, as they go. 600
Nightly my Genii come and fill these urns—
Nay, drink—in ev'ry drop life's essence burns;
'Twill make that soul all fire, those eyes all light—
Come, come, I want thy loveliest smiles to-night:
There is a youth—why start?—thou saw'st him then;
Look'd he not nobly? such the godlike men
Thou'lt have to woo thee in the bow'rs above;—
Though he, I fear, hath thoughts too stern for love,
Too rul'd by that cold enemy of bliss
The world calls virtue—we must conquer this; 610
Nay, shrink not, pretty sage! 'tis not for thee
To scan the mazes of Heav'n's mystery:
The steel must pass through fire, ere it can yield
Fit instruments for mighty hands to wield.
This very night I mean to try the art
Of powerful beauty on that warrior's heart.
All that my Haram boasts of bloom and wit,
Of skill and charms, most rare and exquisite,
Shall tempt the boy;—young MIRZALA's blue eyes,
Whose sleepy lid like snow on violets lies; 620
ABOUYA's cheeks, warm as a spring-day sun,
And lips that, like the seal of SOLOMON,
Have magic in their pressure; ZEBBA's lute,
And LILLA's dancing feet, that gleam and shoot
Rapid and white as sea-birds o'er the deep—
All shall combine their witching powers to steep
My convert's spirit in that soft'ning trance,
From which to heav'n is but the next advance;—
That glowing, yielding fusion of the breast,

On which Religion stamps her image best. 630
 But hear me, Priestess!—though each nymph of these Hath some peculiar, practis'd pow'r to please,
 Some glance or step which, at the mirror tried,
 First charms herself, then all the world beside;
 There still wants one, to make the vict'ry sure,
 One who in every look joins every lure;
 Through whom all beauty's beams concentr'd pass,
 Dazzling and warm, as through love's burning glass;
 Whose gentle lips persuade without a word,
 Whose words, ev'n when unmeaning, are ador'd, 640
 Like inarticulate breathings from a shrine,
 Which our faith takes for granted are divine!
 Such is the nymph we want, all warmth and light,
 To crown the rich temptations of to-night;
 Such the refin'd enchantress that must be
 This hero's vanquisher,—and thou art she!

With her hands clasp'd, her lips apart and pale,
 The maid had stood, gazing upon the Veil
 From which these words, like south winds through a fence
 Of Kerzrah flow'rs, came fill'd with pestilence;¹ 650
 So boldly utter'd too! as if all dread
 Of frowns from her, of virtuous frowns, were fled,
 And the wretch felt assur'd that, once plung'd in,
 Her woman's soul would know no pause in sin!

At first, though mute she listen'd, like a dream
 Seem'd all he said: nor could her mind, whose beam
 As yet was weak, penetrate half his scheme.
 But when, at length, he utter'd, 'Thou art she!'
 All flash'd at once, and shrieking piteously,
 'Oh not for worlds!' she cried—'Great God! to whom 660
 I once knelt innocent, is this my doom?
 Are all my dreams, my hopes of heav'nly bliss,
 My purity, my pride, then come to this,—
 To live, the wanton of a fiend! to be
 The pander of his guilt—oh infamy!
 And sunk, myself, as low as hell can steep
 In its hot flood, drag others down as deep!
 Others—ha! yes—that youth who came to-day—
 Not him I lov'd—not him—oh! do but say,
 But swear to me this moment 'tis not he, 670
 And I will serve, dark fiend, will worship even thee!'

'Beware, young raving thing;—in time beware,
 Nor utter what I cannot, must not bear,
 Ev'n from thy lips. Go—try thy lute, thy voice,
 The boy must feel their magic;—I rejoice
 To see those fires, no matter whence they rise,
 Once more illuming my fair Priestess' eyes;
 And should the youth, whom soon those eyes shall warm,
 Indeed resemble thy dead lover's form,

¹ 'It is commonly said in Persia, that if a June or July passes over that flower (the man breathe in the hot south wind, which in Kerzereh), it will kill him.'—Thevenot.

So much the happier wilt thou find thy doom, 680
 As one warm lover, full of life and bloom,
 Excels ten thousand cold ones in the tomb.
 Nay, nay, no frowning, sweet!—those eyes were made
 For love, not anger—I must be obey'd.
 'Obey'd!—'tis well—yes, I deserve it all—
 'On me, on me Heav'n's vengeance cannot fall
 Too heavily—but AZIM, brave and true
 And beautiful—must he be ruin'd too?
 Must he too, glorious as he is, be driven
 A renegade like me from Love and Heaven? 690
 Like me?—weak wretch, I wrong him—not like me;
 No—he's all truth and strength and purity!
 Fill up your madd'ning hell-cup to the brim,
 Its witch'ry, fiends, will have no charm for him.
 Let loose your glowing wantons from their bow'rs,
 He loves, he loves, and can defy their powers!
 Wretch as I am, in his heart still I reign
 Pure as when first we met, without a stain!
 Though ruin'd—lost—my mem'ry, like a charm
 Left by the dead, still keeps his soul from harm. 700
 Oh! never let him know how deep the brow
 He kiss'd at parting is dishonour'd now;—
 Ne'er tell him how debas'd, how sunk is she,
 Whom once he lov'd—once!—still loves dotingly.
 Thou laugh'st, tormentor,—what!—thou'lt brand my name?
 Do, do—in vain—he'll not believe my shame—
 He thinks me true, that nought beneath God's sky
 Could tempt or change me, and—so once thought I.
 But this is past—though worse than death my lot,
 Than hell—'tis nothing while he knows it not. 710
 Far off to some benighted land I'll fly,
 Where sunbeam ne'er shall enter till I die;
 Where none will ask the lost one whence she came,
 But I may fade and fall without a name.
 And thou—curst man or fiend, whate'er thou art,
 Who found'st this burning plague-spot in my heart,
 And spread'st it—oh, so quick!—through soul and frame,
 With more than demon's art, till I became
 A loathsome thing, all pestilence, all flame!—
 If, when I'm gone—
 'Hold, fearless maniac, hold, 720
 Nor tempt my rage—by Heaven, not half so bold
 The puny bird, that dares with teasing hum
 Within the crocodile's stretch'd jaws to come;¹
 And so thou'lt fly, forsooth?—what!—give up all
 Thy chaste dominion in the Haram Hall,
 Where now to Love and now to ALLA given,
 Half mistress and half saint, thou hang'st as even

¹ The humming bird is said to run this risk for the purpose of picking the crocodile's teeth. The same circumstance is related of the lapwing, as a fact to which he was witness, by Paul Lucas, Voyage fait en 1714.

The ancient story concerning the Trochilus, or humming-bird, entering with impunity into the mouth of the crocodile, is firmly believed at Java.—Barrow's Cochin-China.

As doth MEDINA'S tomb, 'twixt hell and heaven !
 Thou'lt fly ?—as easily may reptiles run,
 The gaunt snake once hath fix'd his eyes upon ;
 As easily, when caught, the prey may be
 Pluck'd from his loving folds, as thou from me.
 No, no, 'tis fix'd—let good or ill betide,
 Thou'rt mine till death, till death MOKANNA'S bride !
 Hast thou forgot thy oath ?—

730

At this dread word,
 The Maid, whose spirit his rude taunts had stirr'd
 Through all its depths, and rous'd an anger there,
 That burst and lighten'd even through her despair—
 Shrunk back, as if a blight were in the breath
 That spoke that word, and stagger'd pale as death.

740

'Yes, my sworn bride, let others seek in bow'rs
 Their bridal place—the charnel vault was ours !
 Instead of scents and balms, for thee and me
 Rose the rich steams of sweet mortality ;
 Gay, flick'ring death-lights shone while we were wed,
 And, for our guests, a row of goodly Dead,
 (Immortal spirits in their time, no doubt,)
 From reeking shrouds upon the rite look'd out !
 That oath thou heard'st more lips than thine repeat—
 That cup—thou shudd'rest, Lady,—was it sweet ?
 That cup we pledg'd, the charnel's choicest wine,
 Hath bound thee—ay—body and soul all mine ;
 Bound thee by chains that, whether blest or curst
 No matter now, not hell itself shall burst !
 Hence, woman, to the Haram, and look gay,
 Look wild, look—any thing but sad ; yet stay—
 One moment more—from what this night hath pass'd,
 I see thou know'st me, know'st me well at last.
 Ha ! ha ! and so, fond thing, thou thought'st all true,
 And that I love mankind ?—I do, I do—
 As victims, love them ; as the sea-dog doats
 Upon the small, sweet fry that round him floats ;
 Or, as the Nile-bird loves the slime that gives
 That rank and venomous food on which she lives ?—¹

750

760

'And, now thou seest my soul's angelic hue,
 'Tis time these features were uncurtain'd too ;—
 This brow, whose light—oh rare celestial light !
 Hath been reserv'd to bless thy favour'd sight ;
 These dazzling eyes, before whose shrouded might Thou'st seen immortal Man kneel down and quake—
 Would that they were heaven's lightnings for his sake !
 But turn and look—then wonder, if thou wilt,
 That I should hate, should take revenge, by guilt,
 Upon the hand, whose mischief or whose mirth
 Sent me thus maim'd and monstrous upon earth ;

And on that race who, though more vile they be
Than mowing apes, are demi-gods to me!
Here—judge if hell, with all its power to damn,
Can add one curse to the foul thing I am!’—

He rais’d his veil—the Maid turn’d slowly round,
Look’d at him—shriek’d—and sunk upon the ground!

780

ON their arrival, next night, at the place of encampment, they were surprised and delighted to find the groves all around illuminated; some artists of Yamtcheou¹ having been sent on previously for the purpose. On each side of the green alley which led to the Royal Pavilion, artificial sceneries of bamboo-work² were erected, representing arches, minarets, and towers, from which hung thousands of silken lanterns, painted by the most delicate pencils of Canton.—Nothing could be more beautiful than the leaves of the mango-trees and acacias, shining in the light of the bamboo-scenery, which shed a lustre round as soft as that of the nights of Peristan.

LALLA ROOKH, however, who was too much occupied by the sad story of ZELICA and her lover, to give a thought to any thing else, except, perhaps, him who related it, hurried on through this scene of splendour to her pavilion,—greatly to the mortification of the poor artists of Yamtcheou,—and was followed with equal rapidity by the Great Chamberlain, cursing, as he went, that ancient Mandarin, whose parental anxiety in lighting up the shores of the lake, where his beloved daughter had wandered and been lost, was the origin of these fantastic Chinese illuminations.³

Without a moment’s delay, young FERAMORZ was introduced, and FADLADEEN, who could never make up his mind as to the merits of a poet, till he knew the religious sect to which he belonged, was about to ask him whether he was a Shia or a Sooni, when LALLA ROOKH impatiently clapped her hands for silence, and the youth, being seated upon the musnud near her, proceeded:—

PREPARE thy soul, young AZIM!—thou hast brav’d
The bands of GREECE, still mighty though enslav’d;
Hast fac’d her phalanx, arm’d with all its fame,
Her Macedonian pikes and globes of flame;
All this hast fronted, with firm heart and brow;
But a more perilous trial waits thee now,—
Woman’s bright eyes, a dazzling host of eyes
From every land where woman smiles or sighs;

¹ ‘The feast of Lanterns is celebrated at Yamtcheou with more magnificence than anywhere else; and the report goes, that the illuminations there are so splendid, that an Emperor once, not daring openly to leave his Court to go thither, committed himself with the Queen and several Princesses of his family into the hands of a magician, who promised to transport them thither in a trice. He made them in the night to ascend magnificent thrones that were borne up by swans, which in a moment arrived at Yamtcheou. The Emperor saw at his leisure all the solemnity, being carried upon a cloud that hovered over the city and descended by degrees; and came back again with the same speed and equipage, nobody at court perceiving his absence. —

² See a description of the nuptials of Vizier Aleé in the Asiatic Annual Register of 1804.

³ ‘The vulgar ascribe it to an accident that happened in the family of a famous Mandarin, whose daughter, walking one evening upon the shore of a lake, fell in and was drowned: this afflicted father, with his family, ran thither, and, the better to find her, he caused a great company of lanterns to be lighted. All the inhabitants of the place thronged after him with torches. The year ensuing they made fires upon the shores the same day; they continued the ceremony every year, every one lighted his lantern, and by degrees it commenced into a custom.’—The Present State of China.

Of every hue, as Love may chance to raise
 His black or azure banner in their blaze; 10
 And each sweet mode of warfare, from the flash
 That lightens boldly through the shadowy lash,
 To the sly, stealing splendours, almost hid,
 Like swords half sheath'd, beneath the downcast lid;—
 Such, AZIM, is the lovely, luminous host
 Now led against thee; and, let conquerors boast
 Their fields of fame, he who in virtue arms
 A young, warm spirit against beauty's charms,
 Who feels her brightness, yet defies her thrall,
 Is the best, bravest conqueror of them all. 20

Now, through the Haram chambers, moving lights
 And busy shapes proclaim the toilet's rites;—
 From room to room the ready handmaids hie,
 Some skill'd to wreath the turban tastefully,
 Or hang the veil, in negligence of shade,
 O'er the warm blushes of the youthful maid,
 Who, if between the folds but one eye shone,
 Like SEBA'S Queen could vanquish with that one:—¹
 While some bring leaves of Henna, to imbue
 The fingers' ends with a bright roseate hue,² 30
 So bright, that in the mirror's depth they seem Like tips of coral branches in the stream:
 And others mix the Kohol's jetty dye,
 To give that long, dark languish to the eye,³
 Which makes the maids, whom kings are proud to cull
 From fair Circassia's vales, so beautiful.
 All is in motion; rings and plumes and pearls
 Are shining ev'ry where:—some younger girls
 Are gone by moonlight to the garden-beds,
 To gather fresh, cool chaplets for their heads;— 40
 Gay creatures! sweet, though mournful, 'tis to see
 How each prefers a garland from that tree
 Which brings to mind her childhood's innocent day
 And the dear fields and friendships far away.
 The maid of INDIA, blest again to hold

'None of these ladies,' says Shaw, 'take themselves to be completely dressed, till they have tinged their hair and edges of their eyelids with the powder of lead-ore. Now, as this operation is performed by dipping first into the powder a small wooden bodkin of the thickness of a quill, and then drawing it afterwards through the eyelids over the ball of the eye, we shall have a lively image of what the Prophet (Jer. iv. 30) may be supposed to mean by rending the eyes with painting. This practice is no doubt of great antiquity; for besides the instance already taken notice of, we find that where Jezebel is said (2 Kings ix. 30) to have painted her face, the original words are, she adjusted her eyes with the powder of lead-ore.'—Shaw's Travels.

Upon her long black hair, with glossy gleam
 Just dripping from the consecrated stream ;
 While the young Arab, haunted by the smell
 Of her own mountain flow'rs, as by a spell,—
 The sweet Elcaya,¹ and that courteous tree
 Which bows to all who seek its canopy,²
 Sees, call'd up round her by these magic scents,
 The well, the camels, and her father's tents ;
 Sighs for the home she left with little pain,
 And wishes ev'n its sorrows back again !

Meanwhile, through vast illuminated halls,
 Silent and bright, where nothing but the falls
 Of fragrant waters, gushing with cool sound
 From many a jasper fount, is heard around,
 Young AZIM roams bewild'rd,—nor can guess
 What means this maze of light and loneliness.
 Here, the way leads, o'er tessellated floors
 Or mats of CAIRO, through long corridors,
 Where, rang'd in cassiolets and silver urns,
 Sweet wood of aloe or of sandal burns ;
 And spicy rods, such as illumine at night
 The bow'rs of TIBET,³ send forth odorous light,
 Like Peris' wands, when pointing out the road
 For some pure Spirit to its blest abode :—
 And here, at once, the glittering saloon
 Bursts on his sight, boundless and bright as noon ;
 Where, in the midst, reflecting back the rays
 In broken rainbows, a fresh fountain plays
 High as the' enamell'd cupola, which tow'rs
 All rich with Arabesques of gold and flow'rs :
 And the mosaic floor beneath shines through
 The sprinkling of that fountain's silv'ry dew,
 Like the wet, glist'ning shells, of ev'ry dye,
 That on the margin of the Red Sea lie.

Here too he traces the kind visitings
 Of woman's love in those fair, living things
 Of land and wave, whose fate—in bondage thrown
 For their weak loveliness—is like her own !
 On one side gleaming with a sudden grace
 Through water, brilliant as the crystal vase
 In which it undulates, small fishes shine,
 Like golden ingots from a fairy mine ;—
 While, on the other, lattic'd lightly in
 With odoriferous woods of COMORIN,⁴
 Each brilliant bird that wings the air is seen ;—
 Gay, sparkling loories, such as gleam between

 Mecca's blue sacred pigeon, ² and the thrush
 Of Hindostan, ³ whose holy warblings gush,
 At evening, from the tall pagoda's top ;—
 Those golden birds that, in the spice-time, drop 100
 About the gardens, drunk with that sweet food ⁴
 Whose scent hath lur'd them o'er the summer flood ; ⁵
 And those that under Araby's soft sun
 Build their high nests of budding cinnamon ; ⁶
 In short, all rare and beauteous things, that fly
 Through the pure element, here calmly lie
 Sleeping in light, like the green birds ⁷ that dwell
 In Eden's radiant fields of asphodel !

So on, through scenes past all imagining,
 More like the luxuries of that impious King, ⁸ 110
 Whom Death's dark Angel, with his lightning torch,
 Struck down and blasted ev'n in Pleasure's porch,
 Than the pure dwelling of a Prophet sent,
 Arm'd with Heaven's sword, for man's enfranchisement—
 Young AZIM wander'd, looking sternly round,
 His simple garb and war-boots' clanking sound
 But ill according with the pomp and grace
 And silent lull of that voluptuous place.

'Is this, then,' thought the youth, 'is this the way
 To free man's spirit from the dead'ning sway 120
 Of worldly sloth,—to teach him while he lives,
 To know no bliss but that which virtue gives,
 And when he dies, to leave his lofty name
 A light, a landmark on the cliffs of fame ?
 It was not so, Land of the generous thought
 And daring deed, thy godlike sages taught ;
 It was not thus, in bowers of wanton ease,
 Thy Freedom nurs'd her sacred energies ;
 Oh ! not beneath the' enfeebling, with'ring glow
 Of such dull lux'ry did those myrtles grow, 130
 With which she wreath'd her sword, when she would dare
 Immortal deeds ; but in the bracing air
 Of toil,—of temperance,—of that high, rare,
 Ethereal virtue, which alone can breathe
 Life, health, and lustre into Freedom's wreath.

Who, that surveys this span of earth we press,—
 This speck of life in time's great wilderness,
 This narrow isthmus 'twixt two boundless seas,
 The past, the future, two eternities!—
 Would sully the bright spot, or leave it bare, 140
 When he might build him a proud temple there,
 A name, that long shall hallow all its space,
 And be each purer soul's high resting-place.
 But no—it cannot be, that one, whom God
 Has sent to break the wizard Falsehood's rod,—
 A Prophet of the Truth, whose mission draws
 Its rights from Heav'n, should thus profane its cause
 With the world's vulgar pomps;—no, no,—I see—
 He thinks me weak—this glare of luxury
 Is but to tempt, to try the eaglet gaze 150
 Of my young soul—shine on, 'twill stand the blaze!'

So thought the youth;—but, ev'n while he defied
 This witching scene, he felt its witch'ry glide
 Through ev'ry sense. The perfume breathing round,
 Like a pervading spirit;—the still sound
 Of falling waters, lulling as the song
 Of Indian bees at sunset, when they throng
 Around the fragrant NILICA, and deep
 In its blue blossoms hum themselves to sleep;¹
 And music, too—dear music! that can touch 160
 Beyond all else the soul that loves it much—
 Now heard far off, so far as but to seem
 Like the faint, exquisite music of a dream;
 All was too much for him, too full of bliss,
 The heart could nothing feel, that felt not this;
 Soften'd he sunk upon a couch, and gave
 His soul up to sweet thoughts, like wave on wave
 Succeeding in smooth seas, when storms are laid;
 He thought of ZELICA, his own dear maid,
 And of the time when, full of blissful sighs, 170
 They sat and look'd into each other's eyes,
 Silent and happy—as if God had giv'n
 Nought else worth looking at on this side heav'n.

'Oh, my lov'd mistress, thou, whose spirit still
 Is with me, round me, wander where I will—
 It is for thee, for thee alone I seek
 The paths of glory; to light up thy cheek
 With warm approval—in that gentle look,
 To read my praise, as in an angel's book,
 And think all toils rewarded, when from thee 180
 I gain a smile worth immortality!
 How shall I bear the moment, when restor'd
 To that young heart where I alone am Lord,
 Though of such bliss unworthy,—since the best
 Alone deserve to be the happiest:—

When from those lips, unbreath'd upon for years,
 I shall again kiss off the soul-felt tears,
 And find those tears warm as when last they started,
 Those sacred kisses pure as when we parted.
 O my own life!—why should a single day,
 A moment keep me from those arms away?'

While thus he thinks, still nearer on the breeze
 Come those delicious, dream-like harmonies,
 Each note of which but adds new, downy links
 To the soft chain in which his spirit sinks.
 He turns him tow'rd the sound, and far away
 Through a long vista, sparkling with the play
 Of countless lamps,—like the rich track which Day
 Leaves on the waters, when he sinks from us,
 So long the path, its light so tremulous;—
 He sees a group of female forms advance,
 Some chain'd together in the mazy dance
 By fetters, forg'd in the green sunny bow'rs,
 As they were captives to the King of Flow'rs;¹
 And some disporting round, unlin'd and free,
 Who seem'd to mock their sisters' slavery;
 And round and round them still, in wheeling flight
 Went, like gay moths about a lamp at night;
 While others wak'd, as gracefully along
 Their feet kept time, the very soul of song
 From psalt'ry, pipe, and lutes of heav'nly thrill,
 Or their own youthful voices, heav'nlier still.
 And now they come, now pass before his eye,
 Forms such as Nature moulds, when she would vie
 With Fancy's pencil, and give birth to things
 Lovely beyond its fairest picturings.
 Awhile they dance before him, then divide,
 Breaking, like rosy clouds at even-tide
 Around the rich pavilion of the sun,—
 Till silently dispersing, one by one,
 Through many a path, that from the chamber leads
 To gardens, terraces, and moonlight meads,
 Their distant laughter comes upon the wind,
 And but one trembling nymph remains behind,—
 Beck'ning them back in vain, for they are gone,
 And she is left in all that light alone;
 No veil to curtain o'er her beauteous brow,
 In its young bashfulness more beauteous now;
 But a light golden chain-work round her hair,²
 Such as the maids of YEZD³ and SHIRAS wear,
 From which, on either side, gracefully hung
 A golden amulet, in the Arab tongue,

Engraven o'er with some immortal line
 From Holy Writ, or bard scarce less divine;
 While her left hand, as shrinkingly she stood,
 Held a small lute of gold and sandal-wood,
 Which, once or twice, she touch'd with hurried strain,
 Then took her trembling fingers off again.
 But when at length a timid glance she stole
 At AZIM, the sweet gravity of soul
 She saw through all his features calm'd her fear,
 And, like a half-tam'd antelope, more near,
 Though shrinking still, she came;—then sat her down
 Upon a musnud's¹ edge, and, bolder grown,
 In the pathetic mode of ISFAHAN²
 Touch'd a preluding strain, and thus began:—

240

There's a bower of roses by BENDEMEER'S³ stream,
 And the nightingale sings round it all the day long;
 In the time of my childhood 'twas like a sweet dream,
 To sit in the roses and hear the bird's song.

250

That bower and its music I never forget,
 But oft when alone, in the bloom of the year,
 I think—is the nightingale singing there yet?
 Are the roses still bright by the calm BENDEMEER?

No, the roses soon wither'd that hung o'er the wave,
 But some blossoms were gather'd, while freshly they shone,
 And a dew was distill'd from their flowers, that gave
 All the fragrance of summer, when summer was gone.

Thus memory draws from delight, ere it dies,
 An essence that breathes of it many a year;
 Thus bright to my soul, as 'twas then to my cyes,
 Is that bower on the banks of the calm BENDEMEER!

260

'Poor maiden!' thought the youth, 'if thou wert sent,
 With thy soft lute and beauty's blandishment,
 To wake unholy wishes in this heart,
 Or tempt its troth, thou little know'st the art.
 For though thy lip should sweetly counsel wrong,
 Those vestal eyes would disavow its song.
 But thou hast breath'd such purity, thy lay
 Returns so fondly to youth's virtuous day,
 And leads thy soul—if e'er it wander'd thence
 So gently back to its first innocence,
 That I would sooner stop the unchain'd dove,
 When swift returning to its home of love,
 And round its snowy wing new fetters twine,
 Than turn from virtue one pure wish of thine!

270

Scarce had this feeling pass'd, when, sparkling through
 The gently open'd curtains of light blue

That veil'd the breezy casement, countless eyes,
 Peeping like stars through the blue ev'ning skies, 280
 Look'd laughing in, as if to mock the pair
 That sat so still and melancholy there :—
 And now the curtains fly apart, and in
 From the cool air, 'mid show'rs of jessamine
 Which those without fling after them in play,
 Two lightsome maidens spring,—lightsome as they
 Who live in the' air on odours,—and around
 The bright saloon, scarce conscious of the ground,
 Chase one another, in a varying dance
 Of mirth and languor, coyness and advance, 290
 Too eloquently like love's warm pursuit :—
 While she, who sung so gently to the lute
 Her dream of home, steals timidly away,
 Shrinking as violets do in summer's ray,—
 But takes with her from AZIM's heart that sigh,
 We sometimes give to forms that pass us by
 In the world's crowd, too lovely to remain,
 Creatures of light we never see again !

 Hung carcanets of orient gems, that glanc'd 300
 More brilliant than the sea-glass glitt'ring o'er
 The hills of crystal on the Caspian shore ;¹
 While from their long, dark tresses, in a fall
 Of curls descending, bells as musical
 As those that, on the golden-shafted trees
 Of EDEN, shake in the eternal breeze,²
 Rung round their steps, at ev'ry bound more sweet,
 As 'twere the' ecstatic language of their feet,
 At length the chase was o'er, and they stood wreath'd
 Within each other's arms ; while soft there breath'd 310
 Through the cool casement, mingled with the sighs
 Of moonlight flow'rs, music that seem'd to rise
 From some still lake, so liquidly it rose ;
 And, as it swell'd again at each faint close,
 The ear could track through all that maze of chords
 And young sweet voices, these impassion'd words :

A SPIRIT there is, whose fragrant sigh
 Is burning now through earth and air ;
 Where cheeks are blushing, the Spirit is nigh,
 Where lips are meeting, the Spirit is there ! 320
 His breath is the soul of flow'rs like these,
 And his floating eyes—oh ! they resemble³
 Blue water-lilies,⁴ when the breeze
 Is making the stream around them tremble.

Hail to thee, hail to thee, kindling pow'r !
 Spirit of Love, Spirit of Bliss !
 Thy holiest time is the moonlight hour,
 And there never was moonlight so sweet as this.

By the fair and brave
 Who blushing unite,
 Like the sun and wave,
 When they meet at night ; 330

By the tear that shows
 When passion is nigh,
 As the rain-drop flows
 From the heat of the sky ;

By the first love-beat
 Of the youthful heart,
 By the bliss to meet,
 And the pain to part ; 340

By all that thou hast
 To mortals given,
 Which—oh, could it last,
 This earth were heaven !

We call thee hither, entrancing Power !
 Spirit of Love ! Spirit of Bliss !
 Thy holiest time is the moonlight hour,
 And there never was moonlight so sweet as this.

Impatient of a scene, whose lux'ries stole,
 Spite of himself, too deep into his soul
 And where, midst all that the young heart loves most,
 Flow'rs, music, smiles, to yield was to be lost, 350
 The youth had started up, and turn'd away
 From the light nymphs, and their luxurious lay,
 To muse upon the pictures that hung round,—¹
 Bright images, that spoke without a sound,
 And views, like vistas into fairy ground.
 But here again new spells came o'er his sense :—
 All that the pencil's mute omnipotence
 Could call up into life, of soft and fair, 360
 Of fond and passionate, was glowing there ;
 Nor yet too warm, but touch'd with that fine art
 Which paints of pleasure but the purer part ;
 Which knows ev'n Beauty when half-veil'd is best,—
 Like her own radiant planet of the west,
 Whose orb when half retir'd looks loveliest.²
 There hung the history of the Genii-King,
 Trac'd through each gay, voluptuous wandering

¹ It has been generally supposed that the Mahometans prohibit all pictures of animals ; but Toderini shows that, though the practice is forbidden by the Koran, they are not more averse to painted figures and images than other people. From Mr. Murphy's work, too, we find that the Arabs of Spain had no objection to the introduction of figures into painting.

² This is not quite astronomically true. 'Dr. Hadley (says Keil) has shown that Venus is brightest when she is about forty degrees removed from the sun ; and that then but only a fourth part of her lucid disk is to be seen from the earth.'

With her from SABA'S bowers, in whose bright eyes
 He read that to be blest is to be wise;—¹
 Here fond ZULEIKA ² woos with open arms
 The Hebrew boy, who flies from her young charms,
 Yet, flying, turns to gaze, and, half undone,
 Wishes that Heav'n and she could both be won;
 And here MOHAMMED, born for love and guile,
 Forgets the Koran in his MARY's smile;—
 Then beckons some kind angel from above
 With a new text to consecrate their love.³

370

With rapid step, yet pleas'd and ling'ring eye,
 Did the youth pass these pictur'd stories by,
 And hasten'd to a casement, where the light
 Of the calm moon came in, and freshly bright
 The fields without were seen, sleeping as still
 As if no life remain'd in breeze or rill.
 Here paus'd he, while the music, now less near,
 Breath'd with a holier language on his ear,
 As though the distance, and that heav'nly ray
 Through which the sounds came floating, took away
 All that had been too earthly in the lay.

380

Oh! could he listen to such sounds unmov'd,
 And by that light—nor dream of her he lov'd?
 Dream on, unconscious boy! while yet thou may'st;
 'Tis the last bliss thy soul shall ever taste.
 Clasp yet awhile her image to thy heart,
 Ere all the light, that made it dear, depart.
 Think of her smiles as when thou saw'st them last,
 Clear, beautiful, by nought of earth o'ercast;
 Recall her tears, to thee at parting giv'n,
 Pure as they weep, if angels weep, in Heav'n.
 Think, in her own still bower she waits thee now,
 With the same glow of heart and bloom of brow,
 Yet shrin'd in solitude—thine all, thine only,
 Like the one star above thee, bright and lonely.
 Oh! that a dream so sweet, so long enjoy'd,
 Should be so sadly, cruelly destroy'd!

The song is hush'd, the laughing nymphs are flown,
 And he is left, musing of bliss, alone;—

² 'In the palace which Solomon ordered to be built against the arrival of the Queen of Saba, the floor or pavement was of transparent glass, laid over running water, in which fish were swimming.' This led the Queen into a very natural mistake, which the Koran has not thought beneath its dignity to commemorate. 'It was said unto her, "Enter the palace." And when she saw it she imagined it to be a great water; and she discovered her legs, by lifting up her robe to pass through it. Whereupon Solomon said to her, "Verily, this is the place evenly floored with glass."—Chap. 27.

Alone?—no, not alone—that heavy sigh,
 That sob of grief, which broke from some one nigh—
 Whose could it be?—alas! is misery found
 Here, even here, on this enchanted ground? 410
 He turns, and sees a female form, close veil'd,
 Leaning, as if both heart and strength had fail'd,
 Against a pillar near;—not glitt'ring o'er
 With gems and wreaths, such as the others wore,
 But in that deep-blue, melancholy dress,¹
 BOKHARA'S maidens wear in mindfulness
 Of friends or kindred, dead or far away;—
 And such as ZELICA had on that day
 He left her—when, with heart too full to speak, 420
 He took away her last warm tears upon his cheek.

A strange emotion stirs within him,—more
 Than mere compassion ever wak'd before;
 Unconsciously he opes his arms, while she
 Springs forward, as with life's last energy,
 But, swooning in that one convulsive bound,
 Sinks, ere she reach his arms, upon the ground;—
 Her veil falls off—her faint hands clasp his knees—
 'Tis she herself!—'tis ZELICA he sees!
 But, ah, so pale, so chang'd—none but a lover 430
 Could in that wreck of beauty's shrine discover
 The once-ador'd divinity—ev'n he Stood for some moments mute, and doubtingly
 Put back the ringlets from her brow, and gaz'd
 Upon those lids, where once such lustre blaz'd,
 Ere he could think she was indeed his own,
 Own darling maid, whom he so long had known
 In joy and sorrow, beautiful in both;
 Who, ev'n when grief was heaviest—when loth
 He left her for the wars—in that worst hour 440
 Sat in her sorrow like the sweet night-flow'r,²
 When darkness brings its weeping glories out,
 And spreads its sighs like frankincense about.

'Look up, my ZELICA—one moment show
 Those gentle eyes to me, that I may know
 Thy life, thy loveliness is not all gone,
 But there, at least, shines as it ever shone.
 Come, look upon thy AZIM—one dear glance,
 Like those of old, were heav'n! whatever chance
 Hath brought thee here, oh, 'twas a blessed one! 450
 There—my lov'd lips—they move—that kiss hath run
 Like the first shoot of life through every vein,
 And now I clasp her, mine, all mine again.
 Oh the delight—now, in this very hour,
 When had the whole rich world been in my pow'r,

¹ 'Deep blue is their mourning colour.'—
Hanway.

² The sorrowful nyctanthes, which begins to spread its rich odour after sunset.

I should have singled out thee, only thee,
From the whole world's collected treasury—
To have thee here—to hang thus fondly o'er
My own, best, purest ZELICA once more !'

It was indeed the touch of those fond lips 460
Upon her eyes that chas'd their short eclipse,
And, gradual as the snow, at Heaven's breath,
Melts off and shows the azure flow'rs beneath,
Her lids unclos'd, and the bright eyes were seen
Gazing on his—not, as they late had been,
Quick, restless, wild, but mournfully serene ;
As if to lie, ev'n for that tranced minute,
So near his heart, had consolation in it ;
And thus to wake in his belov'd caress
Took from her soul one half its wretchedness. 470
But, when she heard him call her good and pure,
Oh, 'twas too much—too dreadful to endure !
Shudd'ring she broke away from his embrace,
And, hiding with both hands her guilty face,
Said, in a tone whose anguish would have riv'n
A heart of very marble, 'Pure !—oh Heav'n !'—

That tone—those looks so chang'd—the withering blight,
That sin and sorrow leave where'er they light ;
The dead despondency of those sunk eyes,
Where once, had he thus met her by surprise, 480
He would have seen himself, too happy boy,
Reflected in a thousand lights of joy ;
And then the place,—that bright, unholy place,
Where vice lay hid beneath each winning grace
And charm of lux'ry, as the viper weaves
Its wily cov'ring of sweet balsam leaves,—¹
All struck upon his heart, sudden and cold
As death itself ;—it needs not to be told—
No, no—he sees it all, plain as the brand
Of burning shame can mark—whate'er the hand, 490
That could from Heav'n and him such brightness sever,
'Tis done—to Heav'n and him she's lost for ever !
It was a dreadful moment ; not the tears,
The ling'ring, lasting misery of years
Could match that minute's anguish—all the worst
Of sorrow's elements in that dark burst
Broke o'er his soul, and, with one crash of fate,
Laid the whole hopes of his life desolate.

'Oh ! curse me not,' she cried, as wild he toss'd
His desprate hand tow'rds Heav'n—'though I am lost, 500
Think not that guilt, that falsehood made me fall,
No, no—'twas grief, 'twas madness did it all !
Nay, doubt me not—though all thy love hath ceas'd—
I know it hath—yet, yet believe, at least,

¹ 'Concerning the vipers, which Pliny says | very particular inquiry ; several were brought were frequent among the balsam-trees, I made | me alive both to Yambo and Jidda.'—Bruce.

That every spark of reason's light must be Quench'd in this brain, ere I could stray from thee.
 They told me thou wert dead—why, AZIM, why
 Did we not, both of us, that instant die
 When we were parted? oh! couldst thou but know
 With what a deep devotedness of woe
 I wept thy absence—o'er and o'er again 510
 Thinking of thee, still thee, till thought grew pain,
 And mem'ry, like a drop that, night and day,
 Falls cold and ceaseless, wore my heart away.
 Didst thou but know how pale I sat at home,
 My eyes still turn'd the way thou wert to come,
 And, all the long, long night of hope and fear,
 Thy voice and step still sounding in my ear—
 Oh God! thou wouldst not wonder that, at last,
 When every hope was all at once o'er cast, 520
 When I heard frightful voices round me say
Azim is dead!—this wretched brain gave way,
 And I became a wreck, at random driven,
 Without one glimpse of reason or of Heav'n—
 All wild—and even this quenchless love within Turn'd to foul fires to light me into sin!—
 Thou pitiest me—I knew thou would'st—that sky
 Hath nought beneath it half so lorn as I.
 The fiend, who lur'd me hither—hist! come near,
 Or thou too, thou art lost, if he should hear— 530
 Told me such things—oh! with such dev'lish art,
 As would have ruin'd ev'n a holier heart—
 Of thee, and of that ever-radiant sphere,
 Where bless'd at length, if I but serv'd him here,
 I should for ever live in thy dear sight,
 And drink from those pure eyes eternal light.
 Think, think how lost, how madden'd I must be,
 To hope that guilt could lead to God or thee!
 Thou weep'st for me—do weep—oh, that I durst
 Kiss off that tear! but, no—these lips are curst, 540
 They must not touch thee;—one divine caress,
 One blessed moment of forgetfulness
 I've had within those arms, and that shall lie,
 Shrin'd in my soul's deep mem'ry till I die;
 The last of joy's last relics here below,
 The one sweet drop, in all this waste of woe,
 My heart has treasur'd from affection's spring,
 To soothe and cool its deadly withering!
 But thou—yes, thou must go—for ever go;
 This place is not for thee—for thee! oh no: 550
 Did I but tell thee half, thy tortur'd brain
 Would burn like mine, and mine go wild again!
 Enough, that Guilt reigns here—that hearts, once good,
 Now tainted, chill'd, and broken, are his food.—
 Enough, that we are parted—that there rolls
 A flood of headlong fate between our souls,
 Whose darkness severs me as wide from thee
 As hell from heav'n, to all eternity!

'ZELICA, ZELICA!' the youth exclaim'd,
 In all the tortures of a mind inflam'd, 560
 Almost to madness—'by that sacred Heav'n,
 Where yet, if pray'rs can move, thou'lt be forgiv'n,
 As thou art here—here, in this writhing heart,
 All sinful, wild, and ruin'd as thou art!
 By the remembrance of our once pure love,
 Which, like a church-yard light, still burns above
 The grave of our lost souls—which guilt in thee
 Cannot extinguish, nor despair in me!
 I do conjure, implore thee to fly hence—
 If thou hast yet one spark of innocence, 570
 Fly with me from this place—'

'With thee! oh bliss!
 'Tis worth whole years of torment to hear this.
 What! take the lost one with thee?—let her rove
 By thy dear side, as in those days of love,
 When we were both so happy, both so pure—
 Too heav'nly dream! if there's on earth a cure
 For the sunk heart, 'tis this—day after day
 To be the blest companion of thy way;
 To hear thy angel eloquence—to see
 Those virtuous eyes for ever turn'd on me; 580
 And, in their light re-chasten'd silently,
 Like the stain'd web that whitens in the sun,
 Grow pure by being purely shone upon!
 And thou wilt pray for me—I know thou wilt—
 At the dim vesper hour, when thoughts of guilt
 Come heaviest o'er the heart, thou'lt lift thine eyes,
 Full of sweet tears, unto the dark'ning skies,
 And plead for me with Heav'n, till I can dare
 To fix my own weak, sinful glances there;
 Till the good angels, when they see me cling 590
 For ever near thee, pale and sorrowing,
 Shall for thy sake pronounce my soul forgiv'n,
 And bid thee take thy weeping slave to Heav'n!
 Oh yes, I'll fly with thee—

Scarce had she said
 These breathless words, when a voice deep and dread
 As that of MONKER, waking up the dead
 From their first sleep—so startling 'twas to both—
 Rung through the casement near, 'Thy oath! thy oath!
 Oh Heav'n, the ghastliness of that Maid's look!
 'Tis he, faintly she cried, while terror shook 600
 Her inmost core, nor durst she lift her eyes,
 Though through the casement, now, nought but the skies
 And moonlight fields were seen, calm as before—
 'Tis he, and I am his—all, all is o'er—
 Go—fly this instant, or thou'rt ruin'd too—
 My oath, my oath, oh God! 'tis all too true,
 True as the worm in this cold heart it is—
 I am MOKANNA'S bride—his, AZIM, his—
 The Dead stood round us, while I spoke that vow,
 Their blue lips echo'd it—I hear them now! 610

Their eyes glar'd on me, while I pledg'd that bowl,
 'Twas burning blood—I feel it in my soul!
 And the Veil'd Bridegroom—hist! I've seen to-night
 What angels know not of—so foul a sight,
 So horrible—oh! never may'st thou see
 What there lies hid from all but hell and me!
 But I must hence—off, off—I am not thine,
 Nor Heav'n's, nor Love's, nor aught that is divine—
 Hold me not—ha! think'st thou the fiends that sever
 Hearts, cannot sunder hands?—thus, then—for ever!'

620

With all that strength, which madness lends the weak,
 She flung away his arm; and, with a shriek,
 Whose sound, though he should linger out more years
 Than wretch e'er told, can never leave his ears—
 Flew up through that long avenue of light,
 Fleetly as some dark, ominous bird of night,
 Across the sun, and soon was out of sight!

LALLA ROOKH could think of nothing all day but the misery of these two young lovers. Her gaiety was gone, and she looked pensively even upon FADLADEEN. She felt, too, without knowing why, a sort of uneasy pleasure in imagining that AZIM must have been just such a youth as FERAMORZ; just as worthy to enjoy all the blessings, without any of the pangs, of that illusive passion, which too often, like the sunny apples of Istkahar,¹ is all sweetness on one side, and all bitterness on the other.

As they passed along a sequestered river after sunset, they saw a young Hindoo girl upon the bank,² whose employment seemed to them so strange, that they stopped their palankeens to observe her. She had lighted a small lamp, filled with oil of cocoa, and placing it in an earthen dish, adorned with a wreath of flowers, had committed it with a trembling hand to the stream; and was now anxiously watching its progress down the current, heedless of the gay cavalcade which had drawn up beside her. LALLA ROOKH was all curiosity;—when one of her attendants, who had lived upon the banks of the Ganges, (where this ceremony is so frequent, that often, in the dusk of the evening, the river is seen glittering all over with lights, like the Oton-Tala, or Sea of Stars,³) informed the Princess that it was the usual way, in which the friends of those who had gone on dangerous voyages offered up vows for their safe return. If the lamp sunk immediately, the omen was disastrous; but if it went shining down the stream, and continued to burn till entirely out of sight, the return of the beloved object was considered as certain.

LALLA ROOKH, as they moved on, more than once looked back, to observe how the young Hindoo's lamp proceeded; and, while she saw with pleasure that it was still unextinguished, she could not help fearing that all the hopes of this life were no better than that feeble light upon the river. The remainder of the journey was passed in silence. She now, for the first time, felt that shade of melancholy, which comes over the youthful maiden's heart, as sweet and transient as her own breath upon a mirror; nor was it till she heard the lute of FERAMORZ, touched lightly at the door of her pavilion, that she waked from the reverie in which she had been wandering. Instantly her eyes were lighted up with pleasure; and, after a few unheard remarks from FADLADEEN upon the indecorum of a poet seating himself in presence of a Princess, every thing was arranged as on the preceding evening, and all listened with eagerness, while the story was thus continued :—

WHOSE are the gilded tents that crowd the way,
Where all was waste and silent yesterday ?
This City of War which, in a few short hours,
Hath sprung up here,¹ as if the magic powers
Of Him who, in the twinkling of a star,
Built the high pillar'd halls of CHILMINAR,²
Had conjur'd up, far as the eye can see,
This world of tents, and domes, and sun-bright armory :—
Princely pavilions, screen'd by many a fold
Of crimson cloth, and topp'd with balls of gold :— 10
Steeds, with their housings of rich silver spun,
Their chains and poyntrels glitt'ring in the sun ;
And camels, tufted o'er with Yemen's shells,³
Shaking in every breeze their light-ton'd bells !

But yester-eve, so motionless around,
So mute was this wide plain, that not a sound
But the far torrent, or the locust bird⁴
Hunting among the thickets, could be heard ;—
Yet hark ! what discords now, of ev'ry kind,
Shouts, laughs, and screams are revelling in the wind ; 20
The neigh of cavalry ;—the tinkling throngs
Of laden camels and their drivers' songs ;—⁵

¹ 'The Lescar or Imperial Camp is divided, like a regular town, into squares, alleys, and streets, and from a rising ground furnishes one of the most agreeable prospects in the world. Starting up in a few hours in an uninhabited plain, it raises the idea of a city built by enchantment. Even those who leave their houses in cities to follow the prince in his progress are frequently so charmed with the Lescar, when situated in a beautiful and convenient place, that they cannot prevail with themselves to remove. To prevent this inconvenience to the court, the Emperor, after sufficient time is allowed to the tradesmen to follow, orders them to be burnt out of their tents.'—Dow's Indoostan.

Colonel Wilks gives a lively picture of an Eastern encampment :—'His camp, like that of most Indian armies, exhibited a motley collection of covers from the scorching sun and dews of the night, variegated according to the taste or means of each individual, by extensive inclosures of coloured calico surrounding superb suites of tents; by ragged clothes or blankets stretched over sticks or branches; palm-leaves hastily spread over similar supports; handsome tents and splendid canopies; horses, oxen, elephants, and camels; all intermixed without any exterior mark of order or design, except the flags of the chiefs, which usually mark the centres of a congeries of these masses; the only regular part of the encampment being the streets of shops, each of which is constructed nearly in the manner of a booth at an English fair.'—Historical Sketches of the South of India.

⁵ 'Some of the camels have bells about their necks, and some about their legs, like those which our carriers put about their fore-horses' necks, which together with the servants (who belong to the camels, and travel on foot,) singing all night, make a pleasant noise, and the journey passes away delightfully.'—Pitt's Account of the Mahomedans.

'The camel-driver follows the camels singing, and sometimes playing upon his pipe; the louder he sings and pipes, the faster the camels go. Nay, they will stand still when he gives over his music.'—Tavernier.

Ringing of arms, and flapping in the breeze
Of streamers from ten thousand canopies ;—
War-music, bursting out from time to time,
With gong and tymbalon's tremendous chime ;—
Or, in the pause, when harsher sounds are mute,
The mellow breathings of some horn or flute,
That far off, broken by the eagle note
Of the' Abyssinian trumpet,¹ swell and float.

Who leads this mighty army ?—ask ye 'who ?'
And mark ye not those banners of dark hue,
The Night and Shadow,² over yonder tent ?—
It is the CALIPH's glorious armament.
Rous'd in his Palace by the dread alarms,
That hourly came, of the false Prophet's arms,
And of his host of infidels, who hurl'd
Defiance fierce at Islam³ and the world,—
Though worn with Grecian warfare, and behind
The veils of his bright Palace calm reclin'd,
Yet brook'd he not such blasphemy should stain,
Thus unreveng'd, the evening of his reign ;
But, having sworn upon the Holy Grave⁴
To conquer or to perish, once more gave
His shadowy banners proudly to the breeze,
And with an army, nurs'd in victories,
Here stands to crush the rebels that o'er-run
His blest and beauteous Province of the Sun.

Ne'er did the march of MAHADI display
Such pomp before ;—not ev'n when on his way
To MECCA's Temple, when both land and sea
Were spoil'd to feed the Pilgrim's luxury ;⁵
When round him, mid the burning sands, he saw
Fruits of the North in icy freshness thaw,
And cool'd his thirsty lip, beneath the glow
Of MECCA's sun, with urns of Persian snow :—⁶
Nor e'er did armament more grand than that
Pour from the kingdoms of the Caliphate.
First, in the van, the People of the Rock,⁷
On their light mountain steeds, of royal stock :⁸
Then, chieftains of DAMASCUS, proud to see
The flashing of their swords' rich marquetry ;—⁹

Men, from the regions near the VOLGA's mouth,
Mix'd with the rude, black archers of the South ;
And Indian lancers, in white-turban'd ranks,
From the far SINDE, or ATTOCK's sacred banks,
With dusky legions from the Land of Myrrh,¹
And many a mace-arm'd Moor and Mid-sea islander.

Nor less in number, though more new and rude
In warfare's school, was the vast multitude
That, fir'd by zeal, or by oppression wrong'd,
Round the white standard of the' impostor throng'd.
Beside his thousands of Believers—blind,
Burning and headlong as the Samiel wind—
Many who felt, and more who fear'd to feel
The bloody Islamite's converting steel,
Flock'd to his banner ;—Chiefs of the' UZBEK race,
Waving their heron crests with martial grace ;²
TURKOMANS, countless as their flocks, led forth
From the' aromatic pastures of the North ;
Wild warriors of the turquoise hills,³—and those
Who dwell beyond the everlasting snows
Of HINDOO KOSH,⁴ in stormy freedom bred,
Their fort the rock, their camp the torrent's bed.
But none, of all who own'd the Chief's command,
Rush'd to that battle-field with bolder hand,
Or sterner hate, than IRAN's outlaw'd men,⁵
Her Worshipers of Fire—all panting then
For vengeance on the' accursed Saracen ;
Vengeance at last for their dear country spurn'd,
Her throne usurp'd, and her bright shrines o'er-turn'd.
From YEZD's⁶ eternal Mansion of the Fire,
Where aged saints in dreams of Heav'n expire :
From BAKU, and those fountains of blue flame
That burn into the CASPIAN,⁷ fierce they came,
Careless for what or whom the blow was sped,
So vengeance triumph'd, and their tyrants bled.

Such was the wild and miscellaneous host,
That high in air their motley banners tost
Around the Prophet-Chief—all eyes still bent
Upon that glittering Veil, where'er it went,
That beacon through the battle's stormy flood,
That rainbow of the field, whose showers were blood !

⁷ 'When the weather is hazy, the springs of Naphtha (on an island near Baku) boil up the higher, and the Naphtha often takes fire on the surface of the earth, and runs in a flame into the sea to a distance almost incredible.'—Hanway on the Everlasting Fire at Baku.

Twice hath the sun upon their conflict set,
 And risen again, and found them grappling yet;
 While streams of carnage in his noontide blaze,
 Smoke up to Heav'n—hot as that crimson haze,
 By which the prostrate Caravan is aw'd,¹
 In the red Desert, when the wind's abroad.
 'On, Swords of God!' the panting CALIPH calls,— 110
 'Thrones for the living—Heav'n for him who falls!'
 'On, brave avengers, on,' MOKANNA cries,
 'And EBLIS blast the recreant slave that flies!'
 Now comes the brunt, the crisis of the day—
 They clash—they strive—the CALIPH's troops give way!
 MOKANNA's self plucks the black Banner down,
 And now the Orient World's Imperial crown
 Is just within his grasp—when, hark, that shout!
 Some hand hath check'd the flying Moslem's rout;
 And now they turn, they rally—at their head 120
 A warrior, (like those angel youths who led,
 In glorious panoply of Heav'n's own mail,
 The Champions of the Faith through BEDER's vale,)*
 Bold as if gifted with ten thousand lives,
 Turns on the fierce pursuer's blades, and drives
 At once the multitudinous torrent back—
 While hope and courage kindle in his track;
 And, at each step, his bloody falchion makes
 Terrible vistas through which vict'ry breaks!
 In vain MOKANNA, midst the general flight, 130
 Stands, like the red moon, on some stormy night,
 Among the fugitive clouds that, hurrying by,
 Leave only her unshaken in the sky—
 In vain he yells his desperate curses out,
 Deals death promiscuously to all about,
 To foes that charge and coward friends that fly,
 And seems of all the Great Arch-enemy.
 The panic spreads—'A miracle!' throughout
 The Moslem ranks, 'a miracle!' they shout,
 All gazing on that youth, whose coming seems 140
 A light, a glory, such as breaks in dreams;
 And ev'ry sword, true as o'er billows dim
 The needle tracks the load-star, following him!

Right tow'rs MOKANNA now he cleaves his path,
 Impatient cleaves, as though the bolt of wrath
 He bears from Heav'n withheld its awful burst
 From weaker heads, and souls but half way curst,
 To break o'er Him, the mightiest and the worst!
 But vain his speed—though, in that hour of blood,
 Had all God's seraphs round MOKANNA stood, 150

¹ Savary says of the south wind, which blows in Egypt from February to May, 'Sometimes it appears only in the shape of an impetuous whirlwind, which passes rapidly, and is fatal to the traveller, surprised in the middle of the deserts. Torrents of burning sand roll before it, the firmament is enveloped in a thick veil, and the sun appears of the colour of blood. Sometimes whole caravans are buried in it.'

² In the great victory gained by Mahomed at Beder, he was assisted, say the Mussulmans, by three thousand angels, led by Gabriel, mounted on his horse Hiazum.—See The Koran and its Commentators.

With swords of fire, ready like fate to fall,
 MOKANNA's soul would have defied them all ;
 Yet now, the rush of fugitives, too strong
 For human force, hurries ev'n him along :
 In vain he struggles 'mid the wedg'd array
 Of flying thousands—he is borne away ;
 And the sole joy his baffled spirit knows,
 In this forc'd flight, is—murd'ring as he goes !
 As a grim tiger, whom the torrent's might
 Surprises in some parch'd ravine at night,
 Turns, ev'n in drowning, on the wretched flocks,
 Swept with him in that snow-flood from the rocks,
 And, to the last, devouring on his way,
 Bloodies the stream he hath not power to stay.

'Alla illa Alla !'—the glad shout renew—
 'Alla Akbar !'—the Caliph's in MEROV.
 Hang out your gilded tapestry in the streets,
 And light your shrines and chaunt your ziraleets.²
 The Swords of God have triumph'd—on his throne
 Your Caliph sits, and the veil'd Chief hath flown.
 Who does not envy that young warrior now,
 To whom the Lord of Islam bends his brow,
 In all the graceful gratitude of power,
 For his throne's safety in that perilous hour ?
 Who doth not wonder, when, amidst the' acclaim
 Of thousands, heralding to heaven his name—
 'Mid all those holier harmonies of fame,
 Which sound along the path of virtuous souls,
 Like music round a planet as it rolls,—
 He turns away—coldly, as if some gloom
 Hung o'er his heart no triumphs can illumine ;—
 Some sightless grief, upon whose blasted gaze
 Though glory's light may play, in vain it plays.
 Yes, wretched AZIM ! thine is such a grief,
 Beyond all hope, all terror, all relief ;
 A dark, cold calm, which nothing now can break,
 Or warm or brighten,—like that Syrian Lake,³
 Upon whose surface morn and summer shed
 Their smiles in vain, for all beneath is dead !—
 Hearts there have been, o'er which this weight of woe
 Came by long use of suffering, tame and slow ;
 But thine, lost youth ! was sudden—over thee
 It broke at once, when all seem'd ecstasy ;
 When Hope look'd up, and saw the gloomy Past
 Melt into splendour, and Bliss dawn at last—
 'Twas then, ev'n then, o'er joys so freshly blown,
 This mortal blight of misery came down ;
 Ev'n then, the full, warm gushings of thy heart
 Were check'd—like fount-drops, frozen as they start—

One sole desire, one passion now remains
To keep life's fever still within his veins,
Vengeance!—dire vengeance on the wretch who cast
O'er him and all he lov'd that ruinous blast.
For this, when rumours reach'd him in his flight
Far, far away, after that fatal night,—
Rumours of armies, thronging to the' attack
Of the Veil'd Chief,—for this he wing'd him back,
Fleet as the vulture speeds to flags unfurl'd, 210
And, when all hope seem'd desp'rate, wildly hurl'd
Himself into the scale, and sav'd a world.
For this he still lives on, careless of all
The wreaths that Glory on his path lets fall;
For this alone exists—like lightning-fire,
To speed one bolt of vengeance, and expire!

But safe as yet that Spirit of Evil lives;
With a small band of desp'rate fugitives,
The last sole stubborn fragment, left unriv'n,
Of the proud host that late stood fronting Heav'n, 220
He gain'd MEROV—breath'd a short curse of blood
O'er his lost throne—then pass'd the JIHON'S flood,¹
And gath'ring all, whose madness of belief
Still saw a Saviour in their down-fall'n Chief,
Rais'd the white banner within NEXSHEB'S gates,²
And there, untam'd, the' approaching conqueror waits.

Of all his Haram, all that busy hive
With music and with sweets sparkling alive,
He took but one, the partner of his flight,
One—not for love—not for her beauty's light— 230
No, ZELICA stood with'ring 'midst the gay,
Wan as the blossom that fell yesterday
From the' Alma tree and dies, while overhead
To-day's young flow'r is springing in its stead.³
Oh, not for love—the deepest Damn'd must be Touch'd with Heaven's glory, ere such fiends as he Can feel one glimpse of Love's divinity.
But no, she is his victim;—there lie all
Her charms for him—charms that can never pall,
As long as hell within his heart can stir, 240
Or one faint trace of Heaven is left in her.
To work an angel's ruin,—to behold
As white a page as Virtue e'er unroll'd
Blacken, beneath his touch, into a scroll
Of dawning sins, seal'd with a burning soul—
This is his triumph; this the joy accurst,
That ranks him among demons all but first:

but you meet there either blossoms or fruit;

and as the blossom drops underneath on the ground (which is frequently covered with these purple-coloured flowers) others come forth in their stead,' &c. &c.—Nieuhoff.

This gives the victim, that before him lies —
 Blighted and lost, a glory in his eyes,
 A light like that with which hell-fire illumines 250
 The ghastly, writhing wretch whom it consumes!

But other tasks now wait him—tasks that need
 All the deep daringness of thought and deed
 With which the Dives¹ have gifted him—for mark,
 Over yon plains, which night had else made dark,
 Those lanterns, countless as the winged lights
 That spangle INDIA'S fields on show'ry nights,—²
 Far as their formidable gleams they shed,
 The mighty tents of the beleaguerer spread,
 Glimm'ring along the horizon's dusky line, 260
 And thence in nearer circles, till they shine
 Among the founts and groves, o'er which the town
 In all its arm'd magnificence looks down.
 Yet, fearless, from his lofty battlements
 MOKANNA views that multitude of tents;
 Nay, smiles to think that, though entoil'd, beset,
 Not less than myriads dare to front him yet;—
 That friendless, throneless, he thus stands at bay,
 Ev'n thus a match for myriads such as they.
 'Oh, for a sweep of that dark Angel's wing, 270
 Who brush'd the thousands of the Assyrian King³
 To darkness in a moment, that I might
 People Hell's chambers with yon host to-night!
 But, come what may, let who will grasp the throne,
 Caliph or Prophet, Man alike shall groan;
 Let who will torture him, Priest—Caliph—King—
 Alike this loathsome world of his shall ring
 With victims' shrieks and howlings of the slave,—
 Sounds, that shall glad me ev'n within my grave⁴
 Thus, to himself—but to the scanty train 280
 Still left around him, a far different strain :—
 'Glorious Defenders of the sacred Crown
 I bear from Heav'n, whose light nor blood shall drown
 Nor shadow of earth eclipse;—before whose gems

Warriors, rejoice—the port to which we've pass'd
 O'er Destiny's dark wave, beams out at last ! 290
 Vict'ry's our own—'tis written in that Book
 Upon whose leaves none but the angels look,
 That ISLAM'S sceptre shall beneath the power
 Of her great foe fall broken in that hour,
 When the moon's mighty orb, before all eyes,
 From NEKSHEB'S Holy Well portentously shall rise !
 Now turn and see !'—

They turn'd, and, as he spoke,
 A sudden splendour all around them broke,
 And they beheld an orb, ample and bright, 300
 Rise from the Holy Well,¹ and cast its light
 Round the rich city and the plain for miles,—²
 Flinging such radiance o'er the gilded tiles
 Of many a dome and fair-roof'd imaret,
 As autumn suns shed round them when they set.
 Instant from all who saw the' illusive sign
 A murmur broke—'Miraculous ! divine !'
 The Gheber bow'd, thinking his idol star
 Had wak'd, and burst impatient through the bar
 Of midnight, to inflame him to the war ; 310
 While he of MOUSSA'S creed saw, in that ray,
 The glorious Light which, in his freedom's day,
 Had rested on the Ark,³ and now again
 Shone out to bless the breaking of his chain.

'To victory !' is at once the cry of all—
 Nor stands MOKANNA loit'ring at that call ;
 But instant the huge gates are flung aside,
 And forth, like a diminutive mountain-tide
 Into the boundless sea, they speed their course
 Right on into the MOSLEM'S mighty force. 320
 The watchmen of the camp,—who, in their rounds,
 Had paus'd, and ev'n forgot the punctual sounds
 Of the small drum with which they count the night,⁴
 To gaze upon that supernatural light,—
 Now sink beneath an unexpected arm,
 And in a death-groan give their last alarm.
 'On for the lamps, that light yon lofty screen,⁵
 Nor blunt your blades with massacre so mean ;

¹ We are not told more of this trick of the Impostor, than that it was 'une machine, qu'il disoit être la Lune.' According to Richardson, the miracle is perpetuated in Neksheeb.—'Nakshab, the name of a city in Transoxiana, where they say there is a well, in which the appearance of the moon is to be seen night and day.'

² 'Il amusa pendant deux mois le peuple de la ville de Neksheeb, en faisant sortir toutes les nuits du fond d'un puits un corps lumineux semblable à la Lune, qui portoit sa lumière jusqu'à la distance de plusieurs milles.'—D'Herbelot. Hence he was called Sazendelmah, or the Moon-maker.

The tents of Princes were generally illuminated. Norden tells us that the tent of the Bey of Girge was distinguished from the other tents by forty lanterns being suspended before it.—See Harmer's Observations on Job.

There rests the CALIPH—speed—one lucky lance
May now achieve mankind's deliverance. 330
Desp'rate the die—such as they only cast,
Who venture for a world, and stake their last.
But Fate's no longer with him—blade for blade
Springs up to meet them thro' the glimm'ring shade,
And, as the clash is heard, new legions soon
Pour to the spot, like bees of KAUZEROON¹
To the shrill timbrel's summons,—till, at length,
The mighty camp swarms out in all its strength,
And back to NEKSHEB's gates, covering the plain
With random slaughter, drives the adventurous train; 340
Among the last of whom the Silver Veil
Is seen glitt'ring at times, like the white sail
Of some toss'd vessel, on a stormy night,
Catching the tempest's momentary light!

*And hath not this brought the proud spirit low?*
Nor dash'd his brow, nor check'd his daring? No.
Though half the wretches, whom at night he led
To thrones and vict'ry, lie disgrac'd and dead,
Yet morning hears him with unshrinking crest,
Still vaunt of thrones, and vict'ry to the rest;— 350
And they believe him!—oh, the lover may
Distrust that look which steals his soul away;—
The babe may cease to think that it can play
With Heaven's rainbow;—alchymists may doubt
The shining gold their crucible gives out;
But Faith, fanatic Faith, once wedded fast
To some dear falsehood, hugs it to the last.

And well the' Impostor knew all lures and arts,
That LUCIFER e'er taught to tangle hearts;
Nor, 'mid these last bold workings of his plot 360
Against men's souls, is ZELICA forgot.
Ill-fated ZELICA! had reason been
Awake, through half the horrors thou hast seen,
Thou never could'st have borne it—Death had come
At once, and taken thy wrung spirit home.
But 'twas not so—a torpor, a suspense
Of thought, almost of life, came o'er the intense
And passionate struggles of that fearful night,
When her last hope of peace and heav'n took flight:
And though, at times, a gleam of frenzy broke,— 370
As through some dull volcano's vale of smoke
Ominous flashings now and then will start,
Which show the fire's still busy at its heart;
Yet was she mostly wrapp'd in solemn gloom,—
Not such as AZIM's, brooding o'er its doom,
And calm without, as is the brow of death,
While busy worms are gnawing underneath—

But in a blank and pulseless torpor, free
From thought or pain, a seal'd-up apathy,
Which left her oft, with scarce one living thrill,
The cold, pale victim of her tort'rer's will.

380

Again, as in MEROU, he had her deck'd
Gorgeously out, the Priestess of the sect;
And led her glitt'ring forth before the eyes
Of his rude train, as to a sacrifice,—
Pallid as she, the young, devoted Bride
Of the fierce NILE, when, deck'd in all the pride
Of nuptial pomp, she sinks into his tide.¹
And while the wretched maid hung down her head,
And stood, as one just risen from the dead,
Amid that gazing crowd, the fiend would tell
His credulous slaves it was some charm or spell
Possess'd her now,—and from that darken'd trance
Should dawn ere long their Faith's deliverance.
Or if, at times, goaded by guilty shame,
Her soul was rous'd, and words of wildness came,
Instant the bold blasphemer would translate
Her ravings into oracles of fate,
Would hail Heav'n's signals in her flashing eyes,
And call her shrieks the language of the skies!

But vain at length his arts—despair is seen
Gath'ring around; and famine comes to glean
All that the sword had left unrea'd:—in vain
At morn and eve across the northern plain
He looks impatient for the promis'd spears
Of the wild Hordes and TARTAR mountaineers;
They come not—while his fierce beleaguers pour
Engines of havoc in, unknown before.²

¹ 'A custom still subsisting at this day, seems to me to prove that the Egyptians formerly sacrificed a young virgin to the God of the Nile; for they now make a statue of earth in shape of a girl, to which they give the name of the Betrothed Bride, and throw it into the river.'—Savary.

² That they knew the secret of the Greek fire among the Mussulmans early in the eleventh century, appears from Dow's Account of Mahmood I. 'When he arrived at Moultan, finding that the country of the Jits was defended by great rivers, he ordered fifteen hundred boats to be built, each of which he armed with six iron spikes, projecting from their prows and sides, to prevent their being boarded by the enemy, who were very expert in that kind of war. When he had launched this fleet, he ordered twenty archers into each boat, and five others with fire-balls, to burn the craft of the Jits, and naphtha to set the whole river on fire.'

The agnee aster, too, in Indian poems the Instrument of Fire, whose flame cannot be extinguished, is supposed to signify the Greek Fire.—See Wilks's South of India, vol. i. p. 471.—And in the curious Javan poem, the Brata

Judha given by Sir Stamford Raffles in his History of Java, we find, 'He aimed at the heart of Soëta with the sharp-pointed Weapon of Fire.'

The mention of gunpowder as in use among the Arabians, long before its supposed discovery in Europe, is introduced by Ebn Fadhil, the Egyptian geographer, who lived in the thirteenth century. 'Bodies,' he says, 'in the form of scorpions, bound round and filled with nitrous powder, glide along, making a gentle noise; then, exploding, they lighten, as it were, and burn.' But there are others which, cast into the air, stretch along like a cloud, roaring horribly, as thunder roars, and on all sides vomiting out flames, burst, burn, and reduce to cinders whatever comes in their way.' The historian Ben Abdalla, in speaking of the sieges of Abulualid, in the year of the Hegira 712, says, 'A fiery globe, by means of combustible matter, with a mighty noise suddenly emitted, strikes with the force of lightning, and shakes the citadel.'—See the extracts from Casiri's Biblioth. Arab. Hispan. in the Appendix to Berington's Literary History of the Middle Ages.

And horrible as new¹;—javelins, that fly
 Enwreath'd with smoky flames through the dark sky, 410
 And red-hot globes, that, opening as they mount,
 Discharge, as from a kindled Naphtha fount,²
 Show'rs of consuming fire o'er all below;
 Looking, as through the' illumin'd night they go,
 Like those wild birds³ that by the Magians oft,
 At festivals of fire, were sent aloft
 Into the air, with blazing faggots tied
 To their huge wings, scatt'ring combustion wide.
 All night the groans of wretches who expire,
 In agony, beneath these darts of fire, 420
 Ring through the city—while, descending o'er
 Its shrines and domes and streets of sycamore,—
 Its lone bazars, with their bright cloths of gold,
 Since the last peaceful pageant left unroll'd,—
 Its beauteous marble baths, whose idle jets
 Now gush with blood,—and its tall minarets,
 That late have stood up in the ev'ning glare
 Of the red sun, unhallow'd by a prayer;—
 O'er each, in turn, the dreadful flame-bolts fall,
 And death and conflagration throughout all 430
 The desolate city hold high festival!

MOKANNA sees the world is his no more;—
 One sting at parting, and his grasp is o'er.
 'What! drooping now?'—thus, with unblushing cheek,
 He hails the few, who yet can hear him speak,
 Of all those famish'd slaves around him lying,
 And by the light of blazing temples dying;—
 'What!—drooping now?—now, when at length we press
 Home o'er the very threshold of success;
 When ALLA from our ranks hath thinn'd away 440
 Those grosser branches, that kept out his ray
 Of favour from us, and we stand at length
 Heirs of his light and children of his strength,
 The chosen few, who shall survive the fall
 Of Kings and Thrones, triumphant over all!
 Have you then lost, weak murmurers as you are,
 All faith in him, who was your Light, your Star?

¹ The Greek fire, which was occasionally lent by the emperors to their allies. 'It was,' says Gibbon, 'either launched in red-hot balls of stone and iron, or darted in arrows and javelins, twisted round with flax and tow, which had deeply imbibed the inflammable oil.'

² See Hanway's Account of the Springs of Naphtha at Baku (which is called by Lieutenant Pottinger, Joala Mookke, or, the Flaming Mouth,) taking fire and running into the sea. Dr. Cooke, in his Journal, mentions some wells in Circassia, strongly impregnated with this inflammable oil, from which issues boiling water. 'Though the weather,' he adds, 'was now very cold, the warmth of these wells of hot water produced near them the verdure and flowers of spring.'

Major Scott Waring says, that naphtha is used by the Persians, as we are told it was in hell, for lamps.

many a row
 Of starry lamps and blazing cressets, fed
 With naphtha and asphaltus, yielding light

³ 'At the great festival of fire, called the Sheb Seze, they used to set fire to large bunches of dry combustibles, fastened round wild beasts and birds, which being then let loose, the air and earth appeared one great illumination; and as these terrified creatures naturally fled to the woods for shelter, it is easy to conceive the conflagrations they produced.'—Richardson's Dissertation.

Have you forgot the eye of glory, hid
 Beneath this Veil, the flashing of whose lid
 Could, like a sun-stroke of the desert, wither
 Millions of such as yonder Chief brings hither ? 450
 Long have its lightnings slept—too long—but now
 All earth shall feel the unveiling of this brow !
 To-night—yes, sainted men ! this very night,
 I bid you all to a fair festal rite,
 Where—having deep refresh'd each weary limb
 With viands, such as feast Heav'n's cherubim,
 And kindled up your souls, now sunk and dim,
 With that pure wine the Dark-ey'd Maids above
 Keep, seal'd with precious musk, for those they love,—¹ 460
 I will myself uncurtain in your sight
 The wonders of this brow's ineffable light ;
 Then lead you forth, and with a wink disperse
 Yon myriads, howling through the universe !'

Eager they listen—while each accent darts
 New life into their chill'd and hope-sick hearts ;
 Such treach'rous life as the cool draught supplies
 To him upon the stake, who drinks and dies !
 Wildly they point their lances to the light
 Of the fast sinking sun, and shout 'To-night !'— 470
 'To-night,' their Chief re-echoes in a voice
 Of fiend-like mock'ry that bids hell rejoice.
 Deluded victims !—never hath this earth
 Seen mourning half so mournful as their mirth.
Here, to the few, whose iron frames had stood
 This racking waste of famine and of blood,
 Faint, dying wretches clung, from whom the shout
 Of triumph like a maniac's laugh broke out :—
There, others, lighted by the smould'ring fire,
 Danc'd, like wan ghosts about a funeral pyre, 480
 Among the dead and dying, strew'd around ;—
 While some pale wretch look'd on, and from his wound
 Plucking the fiery dart by which he bled,
 In ghastly transport wav'd it o'er his head !

'Twas more than midnight now—a fearful pause
 Had follow'd the long shouts, the wild applause,
 That lately from those Royal Gardens burst,
 Where the Veil'd demon held his feast accurst,
 When ZELICA—alas, poor ruin'd heart,
 In ev'ry horror doom'd to bear its part !— 490
 Was bidden to the banquet by a slave,
 Who, while his quiv'ring lip the summons gave,
 Grew black, as though the shadows of the grave
 Compass'd him round, and, ere he could repeat
 His message through, fell lifeless at her feet !
 Shudd'ring she went—a soul-felt pang of fear,
 A presage that her own dark doom was near,

¹ 'The righteous shall be given to drink of pure wine, sealed ; the seal whereof shall be musk.' Koran, chap. lxxxiii.

Rous'd ev'ry feeling, and brought Reason back
 Once more, to writhe her last upon the rack.
 All round seem'd tranquil—ev'n the foe had ceas'd, 500
 As if aware of that demoniac feast,
 His fiery bolts; and though the heav'ns look'd red,
 'Twas but some distant conflagration's spread.
 But hark—she stops—she listens—dreadful tone!
 'Tis her Tormentor's laugh—and now, a groan,
 A long death-groan comes with it:—can this be
 The place of mirth, the bower of revelry?
 She enters—Holy ALLA, what a sight
 Was there before her! By the glimm'ring light
 Of the pale dawn, mix'd with the flare of brands 510
 That round lay burning, droop'd from lifeless hands,
 She saw the board, in splendid mockery spread,
 Rich censers breathing—garlands overhead—
 The urns, the cups, from which they late had quaff'd
 All gold and gems, but—what had been the draught?
 Oh! who need ask, that saw those livid guests,
 With their swoll'n heads sunk black'ning on their breasts,
 Or looking pale to Heav'n with glassy glare,
 As if they sought but saw no mercy there:
 As if they felt, though poison rack'd them through, 520
 Remorse the deadlier torment of the two!
 While some, the bravest, hardest in the train
 Of their false Chief, who on the battle-plain
 Would have met death with transport by his side,
 Here mute and helpless grasp'd;—but, as they died,
 Look'd horrible vengeance with their eyes' last strain,
 And clench'd the slack'ning hand at him in vain.

Dreadful it was to see the ghastly stare,
 The stony look of horror and despair,
 Which some of these expiring victims cast 530
 Upon their souls' tormentor to the last;—
 Upon that mocking Fiend, whose veil, now rais'd,
 Show'd them, as in death's agony they gaz'd,
 Not the long promis'd light, the brow, whose beaming
 Was to come forth, all conqu'ring, all redeeming,
 But features horribler than Hell e'er trac'd
 On its own brood;—no Demon of the Waste,¹
 No church-yard Ghole, caught ling'ring in the light
 Of the blest sun, e'er blasted human sight
 With lineaments so foul, so fierce as those 540
 The Impostor now, in grinning mock'ry, shows:—
 'There, ye wise Saints, behold your Light, your Star—
 Ye would be dupes and victims, and ye are.
 Is it enough? or must I, while a thrill
 Lives in your sapient bosoms, cheat you still?
 Swear that the burning death ye feel within
 Is but the trance with which Heav'n's joys begin;

¹ 'The Afghauns believe each of the numerous solitudes and deserts of their country to be inhabited by a lonely demon, whom they call the Ghoolee Beeabau, or Spirit of the Waste. They often illustrate the wildness of any sequestered tribe, by saying, they are wild as the Demon of the Waste.'—Elphinstone's Cambul.

That this foul visage, foul as e'er disgrac'd
 Ev'n monstrous man, is—after God's own taste;
 And that—but see!—ere I have half-way said
 My greetings through, the' uncourteous souls are fled. 550
 Farewell, sweet spirits! not in vain ye die,
 If ERLIS loves you half so well as I.—
 Ha, my young bride!—'tis well—take thou thy seat;
 Nay come—no shudd'ring—didst thou never meet
 The Dead before?—they grac'd our wedding, sweet;
 And these, my guests to-night, have brimm'd so true
 Their parting cups, that thou shalt pledge one too.
 But—how is this?—all empty? all drunk up?
 Hot lips have been before thee in the cup, 560
 Young bride—yet stay—one precious drop remains,
 Enough to warm a gentle Priestess' veins;—
 Here, drink—and should thy lover's conqu'ring arms
 Speed hither, ere thy lip lose all its charms,
 Give him but half this venom in thy kiss,
 And I'll forgive my haughty rival's bliss!

'For me—I too must die—but not like these Vile, rankling things, to fester in the breeze;
 To have this brow in ruffian triumph shown,
 With all death's grimness added to its own, 570
 And rot to dust beneath the taunting eyes
 Of slaves, exclaiming, "There his Godship lies!"
 No—cursed race—since first my soul drew breath,
 They've been my dupes, and shall be ev'n in death.
 Thou see'st yon cistern in the shade—'tis fill'd
 With burning drugs, for this last hour distill'd:—¹
 There will I plunge me in that liquid flame—
 Fit bath to lave a dying Prophet's frame!—
 There perish, all—ere pulse of thine shall fail—
 Nor leave one limb to tell mankind the tale. 580
 So shall my votaries, wheresoe'er they rave,
 Proclaim that Heav'n took back the Saint it gave;—
 That I've but vanish'd from this earth awhile,
 To come again, with bright, unshrouded smile!
 So shall they build me altars in their zeal,
 Where knaves shall minister, and fools shall kneel;
 Where Faith may mutter o'er her mystic spell,
 Written in blood—and Bigotry may swell
 The sail he spreads for Heav'n with blasts from hell!
 So shall my banner, through long ages, be 590
 The rallying sign of fraud and anarchy;—
 Kings yet unborn shall rue MOKANNA'S name,
 And, though I die, my spirit, still the same,
 Shall walk abroad in all the stormy strife,
 And guilt, and blood, that were its bliss in life.
 But, hark! their batt'ring engine shakes the wall—
 Why, let it shake—thus I can brave them all.

 mantes, afin qu'il ne restât rein de tous les —D'Herbelot.

No trace of me shall greet them, when they come,
 And I can trust thy faith, for—thou'lt be dumb.
 Now mark how readily a wretch like me,
 In one bold plunge commences Deity !' 600

He sprung and sunk, as the last words were said—
 Quick clos'd the burning waters o'er his head,
 And ZELICA was left—within the ring
 Of those wide walls the only living thing ;
 The only wretched one, still curs'd with breath,
 In all that frightful wilderness of death !
 More like some bloodless ghost—such as, they tell,
 In the Lone Cities of the Silent¹ dwell,
 And there, unseen of all but ALLA, sit 610
 Each by its own pale carcass, watching it.

But morn is up, and a fresh warfare stirs
 Throughout the camp of the beleaguers.
 Their globes of fire (the dread artill'ry lent
 By GREECE to conqu'ring MAHADI) are spent ;
 And now the scorpion's shaft, the quarry sent
 From high balistas, and the shielded throng
 Of soldiers swinging the huge ram along,
 All speak the impatient Islamite's intent
 To try, at length, if tower and battlement 620
 And bastion'd wall be not less hard to win,
 Less tough to break down than the hearts within.
 First in impatience and in toil is he,
 The burning AZIM—oh ! could he but see
 The' Impostor once alive within his grasp,
 Not the gaunt lion's hug, nor boa's clasp,
 Could match that gripe of vengeance, or keep pace
 With the fell heartiness of Hate's embrace !

Loud rings the pond'rous ram against the walls ;
 Now shake the ramparts, now a buttress falls,
 But still no breach—'Once more, one mighty swing
 Of all your beams, together thundering !'
 There—the wall shakes—the shouting troops exult,
 'Quick, quick discharge your weightiest catapult
 Right on that spot, and NEKSHEB is our own !'
 'Tis done—the battlements come crashing down,
 And the huge wall, by that stroke riv'n in two,
 Yawning, like some old crater, rent anew,
 Shows the dim, desolate city smoking through.
 But strange ! no signs of life—nought living seen 640
 Above, below—what can this stillness mean ?
 A minute's pause suspends all hearts and eyes—
 'In through the breach,' impetuous AZIM cries ;
 But the cool CALIPH, fearful of some wile
 In this blank stillness, checks the troops awhile,—

¹ 'They have all a great reverence for burial-grounds, which they sometimes call by the poetical name of Cities of the Silent, and which they people with the ghosts of the departed, who sit each at the head of his own grave, invisible to mortal eyes.'—Elphinstone.

Just then, a figure, with slow step, advanc'd
 Forth from the ruin'd walls, and, as there glanc'd
 A sunbeam over it, all eyes could see
 The well-known Silver Veil!—'Tis He, 'tis He,
 MOKANNA, and alone! they shout around;
 Young AZIM from his steed springs to the ground—
 'Mine, Holy CALIPH! mine,' he cries, 'the task
 To crush yon daring wretch—'tis all I ask.'
 Eager he darts to meet the demon foe,
 Who still across wide heaps of ruin slow
 And falteringly comes, till they are near;
 Then, with a bound, rushes on AZIM's spear,
 And, casting off the Veil in falling, shows—
 Oh!—'tis his ZELICA's life-blood that flows!

650

'I meant not, AZIM,' soothingly she said,
 As on his trembling arm she lean'd her head,
 And, looking in his face, saw anguish there
 Beyond all wounds the quiv'ring flesh can bear—
 'I meant not thou shouldst have the pain of this:—
 Though death, with thee thus tasted, is a bliss
 Thou wouldst not rob me of, didst thou but know,
 How oft I've pray'd to God I might die so!
 But the Fiend's venom was too scant and slow;—
 To linger on were madd'ning—and I thought
 If once that Veil—nay, look not on it—caught
 The eyes of your fierce soldiery, I should be Struck by a thousand death-darts instantly.
 But this is sweeter—oh! believe me, yes—
 I would not change this sad, but dear caress,
 This death within thy arms I would not give
 For the most smiling life the happiest live!
 All, that stood dark and drear before the eye
 Of my stray'd soul, is passing swiftly by;
 A light comes o'er me from those looks of love,
 Like the first dawn of mercy from above;
 And if thy lips but tell me I'm forgiv'n,
 Angels will echo the blest words in Heav'n!
 But live, my AZIM;—oh! to call thee mine
 Thus once again! my AZIM—dream divine!
 Live, if thou ever lov'dst me, if to meet
 Thy ZELICA hereafter would be sweet,
 Oh, live to pray for her—to bend the knee
 Morning and night before that Deity,
 To whom pure lips and hearts without a stain,
 As thine are, AZIM, never breath'd in vain,—
 And pray that He may pardon her,—may take Compassion on her soul for thy dear sake,
 And, nought rememb'ring but her love to thee,
 Make her all thine, all His, eternally!
 Go to those happy fields where first we twin'd
 Our youthful hearts together—every wind
 That meets thee there, fresh from the well-known flow'rs,
 Will bring the sweetness of those innocent hours

660

Back to thy soul, and thou may'st feel again
 For thy poor ZELICA as thou didst then.
 So shall thy orisons, like dew that flies
 To Heav'n upon the morning's sunshine, rise
 With all love's earliest ardour to the skies!
 And should they—but, alas, my senses fail—
 Oh for one minute!—should thy prayers prevail—
 If pardon'd souls may, from that World of Bliss
 Reveal their joy to those they love in this—
 I'll come to thee—in some sweet dream—and tell—
 Oh Heav'n—I die—dear love! farewell, farewell.'

700

Time fled—years on years had pass'd away,
 And few of those who, on that mournful day,
 Had stood, with pity in their eyes, to see
 The maiden's death, and the youth's agony,
 Were living still—when, by a rustic grave,
 Beside the swift Amoo's transparent wave,
 An aged man, who had grown aged there
 By that lone grave, morning and night in prayer,
 For the last time knelt down—and, though the shade
 Of death hung dark'ning over him, there play'd
 A gleam of rapture on his eye and cheek,
 That brighten'd even Death—like the last streak
 Of intense glory on the horizon's brim,
 When night o'er all the rest hangs chill and dim.
 His soul had seen a Vision, while he slept;
 She, for whose spirit he had pray'd and wept
 So many years, had come to him, all drest
 In angel smiles, and told him she was blest!
 For this the old man breath'd his thanks, and died.—
 And there, upon the banks of that lov'd tide,
 He and his ZELICA sleep side by side.

THE story of the Veiled Prophet of Khorassan being ended, they were now doomed to hear FADLADEEN'S criticisms upon it. A series of disappointments and accidents had occurred to this learned Chamberlain during the journey. In the first place, those couriers stationed, as in the reign of Shah Jehan, between Delhi and the Western coast of India, to secure a constant supply of mangoes for the Royal Table, had, by some cruel irregularity, failed in their duty; and to eat any mangoes but those of Mazagong was, of course, impossible.¹ In the next place, the elephant, laden with his fine antique porcelain,² had, in an unusual fit of liveliness, shattered the whole set to pieces:—an irreparable loss, as many of the vessels were so exquisitely old, as to have been used under the Emperors Yan

¹ 'The celebrity of Mazagong is owing to its mangoes, which are certainly the best fruit I ever tasted. The parent-tree, from which all those of this species have been grafted, is honoured during the fruit season by a guard of sepoys; and, in the reign of Shah Jehan, couriers were stationed between Delhi and the Mahratta coast, to secure an abundant and fresh supply of mangoes for the royal table.'—Mrs. Graham's Journal of a Residence in India.

² This old porcelain is found in digging, and 'if it is esteemed, it is not because it has acquired any new degree of beauty in the earth, but because it has retained its ancient beauty; and this alone is of great importance in China, where they give large sums for the smallest vessels which were used under the Emperors Yan and Chun, who reigned many ages before the dynasty of Tang, at which time porcelain began to be used by the Emperors' (about the year 442).—Dunn's Collection of Curious Observations, &c.;—a bad translation of some parts of the Lettres Edifiantes et Curieuses of the Missionary Jesuits.

and Chun, who reigned many ages before the dynasty of Tang. His Koran, too, supposed to be the identical copy between the leaves of which Mahomet's favourite pigeon used to nestle, had been mislaid by his Koran-bearer three whole days; not without much spiritual alarm to FADLADEEN, who, though professing to hold with other loyal and orthodox Mussulmans, that salvation could only be found in the Koran, was strongly suspected of believing in his heart, that it could only be found in his own particular copy of it. When to all these grievances is added the obstinacy of the cooks, in putting the pepper of Canara into his dishes instead of the cinnamon of Serendib, we may easily suppose that he came to the task of criticism with, at least, a sufficient degree of irritability for the purpose.

'In order,' said he, importantly swinging about his chaplet of pearls, 'to convey with clearness my opinion of the story this young man has related, it is necessary to take a review of all the stories that have ever——' 'My good FADLADEEN!' exclaimed the Princess, interrupting him, 'we really do not deserve that you should give yourself so much trouble. Your opinion of the poem we have just heard, will, I have no doubt, be abundantly edifying, without any further waste of your valuable erudition.' 'If that be all,' replied the critic, 'evidently mortified at not being allowed to show how much he knew about every thing, but the subject immediately before him—' 'if that be all that is required, the matter is easily despatched.' He then proceeded to analyse the poem, in that strain (so well known to the unfortunate bards of Delhi), whose censures were an infliction from which few recovered, and whose very praises were like the honey extracted from the bitter flowers of the aloe. The chief personages of the story were, if he rightly understood them, an ill-favoured gentleman, with a veil over his face;—a young lady, whose reason went and came, according as it suited the poet's convenience to be sensible or otherwise;—and a youth in one of those hideous Bucharian bonnets, who took the aforesaid gentleman in a veil for a Divinity. From such materials,' said he, 'what can be expected?—after rivalling each other in long speeches and absurdities, through some thousands of lines as indigestible as the filberts of Berdaa, our friend in the veil jumps into a tub of aqua-fortis; the young lady dies in a set speech, whose only recommendation is that it is her last; and the lover lives on to a good old age, for the laudable purpose of seeing her ghost, which he at last happily accomplishes, and expires. This, you will allow, is a fair summary of the story; and if Nasser, the Arabian merchant, told no better, our Holy Prophet (to whom be all honour and glory!) had no need to be jealous of his abilities for story-telling.'¹

With respect to the style, it was worthy of the matter;—it had not even those politic contrivances of structure, which make up for the commonness of the thoughts by the peculiarity of the manner, nor that stately poetical phraseology by which sentiments mean in themselves, like the blacksmith's² apron converted into a banner, are so easily gilt and embroidered into consequence. Then, as to the versification, it was, to say no worse of it, execrable: it had neither the copious flow of Ferdosi, the sweetness of Hafez, nor the sententious march of Sadi; but appeared to him, in the uneasy heaviness of its movements, to have been modelled upon the gait of a very tired dromedary. The licences, too, in which it indulged, were unpardonable;—for instance this line, and the poem abounded with such;—

Like the faint, exquisite music of a dream.

¹ 'La lecture de ces Fables plaisoit si fort aux Arabes, que, quand Mahomet les entretenoit de l'Histoire de l'Ancien Testament, ils les méprisoient, lui disant que celles que Nasser leur racontoit étoient beaucoup plus belles. Cette préférence attira à Nasser la malédiction de Mahomet et de tous ses disciples.'—D'Herbelot.

² The blacksmith Gao, who successfully resisted the tyrant Zohak, and whose apron became the Royal Standard of Persia.

'What critic that can count,' said FADLADEEN, 'and has his full complement of fingers to count withal, would tolerate for an instant such syllabic superfluities?'—He here looked round, and discovered that most of his audience were asleep; while the glimmering lamps seemed inclined to follow their example. It became necessary, therefore, however painful to himself, to put an end to his valuable animadversions for the present, and he accordingly concluded, with an air of dignified candour, thus:—'Notwithstanding the observations which I have thought it my duty to make, it is by no means my wish to discourage the young man:—so far from it, indeed, that if he will but totally alter his style of writing and thinking, I have very little doubt that I shall be vastly pleased with him.'

Some days elapsed, after this harangue of the Great Chamberlain, before LALLA ROOKH could venture to ask for another story. The youth was still a welcome guest in the pavilion—to one heart, perhaps, too dangerously welcome;—but all mention of poetry was, as if by common consent, avoided. Though none of the party had much respect for FADLADEEN, yet his censures, thus magisterially delivered, evidently made an impression on them all. The Poet, himself, to whom criticism was quite a new operation (being wholly unknown in that Paradise of the Indies, Cashmere), felt the shock as it is generally felt at first, till use has made it more tolerable to the patient;—the Ladies began to suspect that they ought not to be pleased, and seemed to conclude that there must have been much good sense in what FADLADEEN said, from its having set them all so soundly to sleep;—while the self-complacent Chamberlain was left to triumph in the idea of having, for the hundred and fiftieth time in his life, extinguished a Poet. LALLA ROOKH alone—and Love knew why—persisted in being delighted with all she had heard, and in resolving to hear more as speedily as possible. Her manner, however, of first returning to the subject was unlucky. It was while they rested during the heat of noon near a fountain, on which some hand had rudely traced those well-known words from the Garden of Sadi,—'Many, like me, have viewed this fountain, but they are gone, and their eyes are closed for ever!'—that she took occasion, from the melancholy beauty of this passage, to dwell upon the charms of poetry in general. 'It is true,' she said, 'few poets can imitate that sublime bird, which flies always in the air, and never touches the earth¹:—it is only once in many ages a Genius appears, whose words, like those on the Written Mountain, last for ever²:—but still there are some, as delightful, perhaps, though not so wonderful, who, if not stars over our head, are at least flowers along our path, and whose sweetness of the moment we ought gratefully to inhale, without calling upon them for a brightness and a durability beyond their nature. In short,' continued she, blushing, as if conscious of being caught in an oration, 'it is quite cruel that a poet cannot wander through his regions of enchantment, without having a critic for ever, like the old Man of the Sea, upon his back!³—FADLADEEN, it was plain, took this last luckless allusion to himself, and would treasure it up in his mind as a whetstone for his next criticism. A sudden silence ensued; and the Princess, glancing a look at FERAMORZ, saw plainly she must wait for a more courageous moment.

¹ 'The Huma, a bird peculiar to the East. It is supposed to fly constantly in the air, and never touch the ground; it is looked upon as a bird of happy omen; and that every head it overshadows will in time wear a crown.'—Richardson.

² 'To the pilgrims to Mount Sinai we must attribute the inscriptions, figures, &c. on those rocks, which have from thence acquired the name of the Written Mountain.'—Volney. M. Gebelin and others have been at much pains to attach some mysterious and important meaning to these inscriptions; but Niebuhr, as well as Volney, thinks that they must have been executed at idle hours by the travellers to Mount Sinai, 'who were satisfied with cutting the unpolished rock with any pointed instrument; adding to their names and the date of their journeys some rude figures, which bespeak the hand of a people but little skilled in the arts.'—Niebuhr.

³ The Story of Sinbad.

But the glories of Nature, and her wild, fragrant airs, playing freshly over the current of youthful spirits, will soon heal even deeper wounds than the dull Fadladeens of this world can inflict. In an evening or two after, they came to the small Valley of Gardens, which had been planted by order of the Emperor, for his favourite sister Rochinara, during their progress to Cashmere, some years before; and never was there a more sparkling assemblage of sweets, since the Gulzar-e-Irem, or Rose-bower of Irem. Every precious flower was there to be found, that poetry, or love, or religion, has ever consecrated; from the dark hyacinth, to which Hafez compares his mistress's hair,¹ to the Cámalatá, by whose rosy blossoms the heaven of Indra is scented.² As they sat in the cool fragrance of this delicious spot, and LALLA ROOKH remarked that she could fancy it the abode of that Flower-loving Nymph whom they worship in the temples of Kathay,³ or of one of those Peris, those beautiful creatures of the air, who live upon perfumes, and to whom a place like this might make some amends for the Paradise they have lost,—the young Poet, in whose eyes she appeared, while she spoke, to be one of the bright spiritual creatures she was describing, said hesitatingly that he remembered a Story of a Peri, which, if the Princess had no objection, he would venture to relate. 'It is,' said he, with an appealing look to FADLADEEN, 'in a lighter and humbler strain than the other': then, striking a few careless but melancholy chords on his kitar, he thus began:—

PARADISE AND THE PERI

ONE morn a Peri at the gate
Of Eden stood, disconsolate;
And as she listen'd to the Springs
Of Life within, like music flowing,
And caught the light upon her wings
Through the half-open portal glowing,
She wept to think her recreant race
Should e'er have lost that glorious place!

'How happy,' exclaim'd this child of air,
'Are the holy Spirits who wander there,
Mid flowers that never shall fade or
fall;
Though mine are the gardens of earth
and sea,
And the stars themselves have flowers
for me,
One blossom of Heaven out-blooms
them all!

² 'The Cámalatá (called by Linnaeus, Ipomaea) is the most beautiful of its order, both in the colour and form of its leaves and flowers; its elegant blossoms are "celestial rosy red, Love's proper hue," and have justly procured it the name of Cámalatá, or Love's Creeper.'—Sir W. Jones.

³ Cámalatá may also mean a mythological plant, by which all desires are granted to such as inhabit the heaven of Indra; and if ever flower was worthy of paradise, it is our charming Ipomaea.—Ib.

And sweetly the founts of that Valley
fall;

Though bright are the waters of SING-
SU-HAY,

And the golden floods that thitherward
stray,⁵

Yet—oh, 'tis only the Blest can say 20
How the waters of Heaven outshine
them all!

'Go, wing thy flight from star to star,
From world to luminous world, as far
As the universe spreads its flaming
wall:

Take all the pleasures of all the spheres,
And multiply each through endless years,
One minute of Heaven is worth them
all!'

The glorious Angel, who was keeping
The gates of Light, beheld her weeping ;
And, as he nearer drew and listen'd 30
To her sad song, a tear-drop glisten'd
Within his eyelids, like the spray

From Eden's fountain, when it lies
On the blue flow'r, which—Bramins
say—

Blooms nowhere but in Paradise.¹

'Nymph of a fair but erring line !'

Gently he said—' One hope is thine.

'Tis written in the Book of Fate,

The Peri yet may be forgiv'n

Who brings to this Eternal gate 40

The Gift that is most dear to Heav'n !

Go, seek it, and redeem thy sin—

'Tis sweet to let the pardon'd in.'

Rapidly as comets run

To the embraces of the Sun ;—

Fleeter than the starry brands

Flung at night from angel hands ²

At those dark and daring sprites

Who would climb the' empyreal heights,

Down the blue vault the PERI flies, 50

And, lighted earthward by a glance

That just then broke from morning's eyes.

Hung hovering o'er our world's expanse.

But whither shall the Spirit go

To find this gift for Heav'n ?—' I know

The wealth,' she cries, ' of every urn,

In which unnumber'd rubies burn,

I know where the Isles of Perfume are,⁴

Many a fathom down in the sea, 60

To the south of sun-bright ARABY ; ⁵

I know, too, where the Genii hid

The jewell'd cup of their King JAMSHID,⁶

With Life's elixir sparkling high—

But gifts like these are not for the sky.

Where was there ever a gem that shone

Like the steps of ALLA'S wonderful

Throne ?

And the Drops of Life—oh ! what would they be

In the boundless Deep of Eternity ? ⁷

While thus she mus'd, her pinions fann'd

The air of that sweet Indian land, 71

Whose air is balm ; whose ocean spreads

O'er coral rocks, and amber beds ; ⁷

Whose mountains, pregnant by the beam

Of the warm sun, with diamonds teem ;

Whose rivulets are like rich brides,

Lovely, with gold beneath their tides ;

Whose sandal groves and bow'rs of spice

Might be a Peri's Paradise !

But crimson now her rivers ran 80

With human blood—the smell of death

Came reeking from those spicy bow'rs,

And man, the sacrifice of man,

Mingled his taint with ev'ry breath

Upwaded from the' innocent flow'rs.

Thy cavern shrines, and Idol stones,
Thy Monarchs and their thousand Thrones ?¹

'Tis He of GAZNA²—fierce in wrath 90
He comes, and INDIA's diadems
Lie scatter'd in his ruinous path.—

His bloodhounds he adorns with gems,
Torn from the violated necks
Of many a young and lov'd Sultana ;³
Maidens, within their pure Zenana,
Priests in the very fane he slaughters,
And choaks up with the glitt'ring wrecks
Of golden shrines the sacred waters !

Downward the PERR turns her gaze, 100
And, through the war-field's bloody haze
Beholds a youthful warrior stand,

Alone beside his native river,—
The red blade broken in his hand,
And the last arrow in his quiver.

'Live,' said the Conqu'ror, 'live to share
The trophies and the crowns I bear !'
Silent that youthful warrior stood—

Silent he pointed to the flood
All crimson with his country's blood, 110
Then sent his last remaining dart,
For answer, to the Invader's heart.

False flew the shaft, though pointed well ;
The Tyrant liv'd, the Hero fell !—
Yet mark'd the PERR where he lay,

And, when the rush of war was past,
Swiftly descending on a ray

Of morning light, she caught the last—
Last glorious drop his heart had shed,
Before its free-born spirit fled ! 120

'Be this,' she cried, as she wing'd her
flight,

My welcome gift at the Gates of Light.

Though foul are the drops that oft distil
On the field of warfare, blood like this,
For Liberty shed, so holy is,
It would not stain the purest rill,
That sparkles among the Bowers of Bliss !

Oh, if there be, on this earthly sphere,
A boon, an offering Heav'n holds dear,
'Tis the last libation Liberty draws 130
From the heart that bleeds and breaks in her cause !'

'Sweet,' said the Angel, as she gave
The gift into his radiant hand,
'Sweet is our welcome of the Brave
Who die thus for their native Land.—
But see—alas !—the crystal bar
Of Eden moves not—holier far
Than ev'n this drop the boon must be,
That opes the Gates of Heav'n for thee !'

Her first fond hope of Eden blighted, 140
Now among AFRIC's lunar Mountains,⁴
Far to the South, the PERR lighted ;
And sleek'd her plumage at the foun-
tains

Of that Egyptian tide—whose birth
Is hidden from the sons of earth
Deep in those solitary woods,
Where oft the Genii of the Floods
Dance round the cradle of their Nile,
And hail the new-born Giant's smile.⁵
Thence over EGYPT's palmy groves, 150

'Twas a fair scene—a Land more bright
Never did mortal eye behold !
Who could have thought, that saw this
night 160

Those valleys and their fruits of gold
Basking in Heav'n's serenest light ;—
Those groups of lovely date-trees bend-
ing

Languidly their leaf-crown'd heads,
Like youthful maids, when sleep descending

Warns them to their silken beds ; 1—
Those virgin lilies, all the night
Bathing their beauties in the lake,
That they may rise more fresh and bright,

When their beloved Sun's awake ;—
Those ruin'd shrines and tow'rs that seem
The relics of a splendid dream ; 172

Amid whose fairy loneliness
Nought but the lapwing's cry is heard, Nought seen but (when the shadows,
flitting

Fast from the moon, unsheath its gleam,)
Some purple-wing'd Sultana ² sitting

Upon a column, motionless
And glitt'ring like an Idol bird !—
Who could have thought, that there,
ev'n there, 180

Amid those scenes so still and fair,
The Demon of the Plague hath cast
From his hot wing a deadlier blast,
More mortal far than ever came
From the red Desert's sands of flame !
So quick, that ev'ry living thing
Of human shape, touch'd by his wing,
Like plants, where the Simoom hath past,
At once falls black and withering !

The sun went down on many a brow, 190
Which, full of bloom and freshness then,
Is rankling in the pest-house now,
And ne'er will feel that sun again.
And, oh ! to see the' unburied heaps
On which the lonely moonlight sleeps—

³ Jackson, speaking of the plague that occurred in West Barbary, when he was there,

The very vultures turn away,
And sicken at so foul a prey !
Only the fierce hyaena stalks ³
Throughout the city's desolate walks ⁴
At midnight, and his carnage plies :—
Woe to the half-dead wretch, who meets 201
The glaring of those large blue eyes ⁵
Amid the darkness of the streets !

'Poor race of men !' said the pitying
Spirit,

Dearly ye pay for your primal Fall—
Some flow'rets of Eden ye still inherit,
But the trail of the Serpent is over
them all !'

She wept—the air grew pure and clear
Around her, as the bright drops ran ;
For there's a magic in each tear, 210
Such kindly Spirits weep for man !

Just then beneath some orange trees,
Whose fruit and blossoms in the breeze
Were wantoning together, free,
Like age at play with infancy—

Beneath that fresh and springing bower,
Close by the Lake, she heard the moan
Of one who, at this silent hour,
Had thither stol'n to die alone.

One who in life where'er he mov'd, 220
Drew after him the hearts of many ;
Yet now, as though he ne'er were lov'd,
Dies here unseen, unwept by any !

None to watch near him—none to slake
The fire that in his bosom lies,
With ev'n a sprinkle from that lake,
Which shines so cool before his eyes.

No voice, well known through many a day,
To speak the last, the parting word,
Which, when all other sounds decay, 230
Is still like distant music heard ;—

That tender farewell on the shore
Of this rude world, when all is o'er,
Which cheers the spirit, ere its bark
Puts off into the unknown Dark.

Deserted youth ! one thought alone
Shed joy around his soul in death—
That she, whom he for years had known,
And lov'd, and might have call'd his own,
Was safe from this foul midnight's
breath,— 240

Safe in her father's princely halls,
Where the cool airs from fountain falls,
Freshly perfum'd by many a brand
Of the sweet wood from India's land,
Were pure as she whose brow they fann'd.

But see—who yonder comes by stealth,¹
This melancholy bow'r to seek,
Like a young envoy, sent by Health,
With rosy gifts upon her cheek ?
'Tis she—far off, through moonlight
dim, 250

He knew his own betrothed bride,
She, who would rather die with him,
Than live to gain the world beside !—
Her arms are round her lover now,
His livid cheek to hers she presses,
And dips, to bind his burning brow,
In the cool lake her loosen'd tresses.
Ah ! once, how little did he think
An hour would come, when he should shrink

With horror from that dear embrace, 260
Those gentle arms, that were to him
Holy as is the cradling place
Of Eden's infant cherubim !

And now he yields—now turns away,
Shudd'ring as if the venom lay
All in those proffer'd lips alone—
Those lips that, then so fearless grown,
Never until that instant came
Near his unask'd or without shame.

'Oh ! let me only breathe the air, 270
The blessed air, that's breath'd by thee,
And, whether on its wings it bear
Healing or death, 'tis sweet to me
There—drink my tears, while yet they
fall—

Would that my bosom's blood were
balm,
And, well thou know'st, I'd shed it all,
To give thy brow one minute's calm.

Nay, turn not from me that dear face—
Am I not thine—thy own lov'd bride—
The one, the chosen one, whose place
In life or death is by thy side ? 281
Think'st thou that she, whose only light,
In this dim world, from thee hath
shone,
Could bear the long, the cheerless night,
That must be hers when thou art
gone ?

That I can live, and let thee go,
Who art my life itself ?—No, no—
When the stem dies, the leaf that grew
Out of its heart must perish too !
Then turn to me, my own love, turn, 290
Before, like thee, I fade and burn ;
Cling to these yet cool lips, and share
The last pure life that lingers there !
She falls—she sinks—as dies the lamp
In charnel airs, or cavern-damp,
So quickly do his baleful sighs
Quench all the sweet light of her eyes.
One struggle—and his pain is past—
Her lover is no longer living !
One kiss the maiden gives, one last, 300
Long kiss, which she expires in giving !

'Sleep,' said the PERI, as softly she stole
The farewell sigh of that vanishing soul,
As true as e'er warm'd a woman's breast—

'Sleep on, in visions of odour rest,
In balmier airs than ever yet stirr'd
The' enchanted pile of that lonely bird,
Who sings at the last his own death-lay,²
And in music and perfume dies away !'
Thus saying, from her lips she spread 310
Unearthly breathings through the place,
And shook her sparkling wreath, and
shed

Such lustre o'er each paly face,
That like two lovely saints they seem'd,
Upon the eve of doomsday taken
From their dim graves, in odour sleeping ;
While that benevolent PERI beam'd

tinued to his tail ; and that, after living one thousand years, he builds himself a funeral pile, sings a melodious air of different harmonies through his fifty organ pipes, flaps his wings with a velocity which sets fire to the wood, and consumes himself.—Richardson.

But morn is blushing in the sky ; 320
 Again the PERI soars above,
 Bearing to Heav'n that precious sigh
 Of pure, self-sacrificing love.
 High throbb'd her heart, with hope
 elate,

The' Elysian palm she soon shall win,
 For the bright Spirit at the gate
 Smil'd as she gave that off'ring in ;
 And she already hears the trees
 Of Eden, with their crystal bells
 Ringing in that ambrosial breeze 330
 That from the throne of ALLA swells ;
 And she can see the starry bowls
 That lie around that lucid lake,
 Upon whose banks admitted Souls
 Their first sweet draught of glory take !¹

But, ah ! even PERIS' hopes are vain—
 Again the Fates forbade, again
 The' immortal barrier clos'd—'Not yet,'
 The Angel said, as, with regret, 339
 He shut from her that glimpse of glory—
 'True was the maiden, and her story,
 Written in light o'er ALLA's head,
 By seraph eyes shall long be read.
 But, PERI, see—the crystal bar
 Of Eden moves not—holier far
 Than ev'n this sigh the boon must be
 That opes the Gates of Heav'n for thee.'

Now, upon SYRIA's land of roses
 Softly the light of Eve reposes,
 And, like a glory, the broad sun 350
 Hangs over sainted LEBANON ;
 Whose head in wintry grandeur tow'rs,
 And whitens with eternal sleet,
 While summer, in a vale of flow'rs,
 Is sleeping rosy at his feet.

To one, who look'd from upper air
 O'er all the' enchanted regions there,
 How beauteous must have been the glow,
 The life, the sparkling from below !

Cheer'd by this hope she bends her thither ;—

Still laughs the radiant eye of Heaven,
Nor have the golden bowers of Even

In the rich West begun to wither ;— 401
When, o'er the vale of BALBEC winging

Slowly, she sees a child at play,
Among the rosy wild flow'rs singing,

As rosy and as wild as they ;
Chasing, with eager hands and eyes,

The beautiful blue damsel-flies,¹
That flutter'd round the jasmine stems,

Like winged flow'rs or flying gems :—
And, near the boy, who tir'd with play

Now nestling 'mid the roses lay, 411
She saw a wearied man dismount

From his hot steed, and on the brink
Of a small imaret's rustic fount²

Impatient fling him down to drink.
Then swift his haggard brow he turn'd

To the fair child, who fearless sat,
Though never yet hath day-beam burn'd

Upon a brow more fierce than that,— Sullenly fierce—a mixture dire, 420

Like thunder clouds, of gloom and fire ;

Softened his spirit) look'd and lay,
Watching the rosy infant's play :—

As slow the orb of daylight sets, 441
Is rising sweetly on the air,

From SYRIA's thousand minarets !
The boy has started from the bed

Lipsing the' eternal name of God

From Purity's own cherub mouth,
And looking, while his hands and eyes

Are lifted to the glowing skies, 451

Just lighted on that flow'ry plain,
And seeking for its home again.

Oh ! 'twas a sight—that Heav'n—that child—

A scene, which might have well beguil'd
Ev'n haughty EBLIS of a sigh

For glories lost and peace gone by !

And how felt he, the wretched Man
Reclining there—while memory ran 460

O'er many a year of guilt and strife,
Flew o'er the dark flood of his life,

Nor found one sunny resting-place,
Nor brought him back one branch of grace.

'There was a time,' he said, in mild,
Heart-humbled tones—'thou blessed

child !
When, young and haply pure as thou,

I look'd and pray'd like thee—but now—'

 down from the moon

Falls through the withering airs of June
 Upon EGYPT'S land,¹ of so healing a
 pow'r,

So balmy a virtue, that ev'n in the
 hour

That drop descends, contagion dies, 481
 And health re-animates earth and skies !—

Oh, is it not thus, thou man of sin,
 The precious tears of repentance fall ?
 Though foul thy fiery plagues within,
 One heavenly drop hath dispell'd
 them all !'

And now—behold him kneeling there
 By the child's side, in humble pray'r,
 While the same sunbeam shines upon
 The guilty and the guiltless one, 490
 And hymns of joy proclaim through
 Heav'n

The triumph of a Soul Forgiv'n !

'Twas when the golden orb had set,
 While on their knees they linger'd yet,
 There fell a light more lovely far
 Than ever came from sun or star,
 Upon the tear that, warm and meek,
 Dew'd that repentant sinner's cheek.

To mortal eye this light might seem
 A northern flash or meteor beam— 500
 But well the' enraptur'd PERI knew
 'Twas a bright smile the Angel threw
 From Heaven's gate, to hail that tear
 Her harbinger of glory near !

'Joy, joy for ever ! my task is done—
 The gates are pass'd, and Heav'n is won !

Oh ! am I not happy ? I am, I am—
 To thee, sweet Eden ! how dark and sad

Are the diamond turrets of SHADUKIAM,²
 And the fragrant bowers of AMBERA-BAB !

'Farewell, ye odours of Earth, that die
 Passing away like a lover's sigh ;— 512
 My feast is now of the Tooba Tree,³
 Whose scent is the breath of Eternity !

'Farewell, ye vanishing flowers, that
 shone
 In my fairy wreath, so bright and brief ;—

Oh ! what are the brightest that e'er have blown,
 To the lote-tree, springing by ALLA'S throne,⁴

Whose flowers have a soul in every leaf !

Joy, joy for ever !—my task is done—
 The Gates are pass'd, and Heav'n is
 won !' 521

'AND this,' said the Great Chamberlain, 'is poetry ! this flimsy manufacture of the brain, which in comparison with the lofty and durable monuments of genius, is as the gold filigree-work of Zamara beside the eternal architecture of Egypt !' After this gorgeous sentence, which, with a few more of the same kind, FAD-LADEEN kept by him for rare and important occasions, he proceeded to the anatomy of the short poem just recited. The lax and easy kind of metre in which it was written ought to be denounced, he said, as one of the leading causes of the alarming growth of poetry in our times. If some check were not given to this lawless facility, we should soon be overrun by a race of bards as numerous and as shallow as the hundred and twenty thousand Streams of Basra.¹ They who succeeded in this style deserved chastisement for their very success;—as warriors have been punished, even after gaining a victory, because they had taken the liberty of gaining it in an irregular or unestablished manner. What, then, was to be said to those who failed? to those who presumed, as in the present lamentable instance, to imitate the license and ease of the bolder sons of song, without any of that grace or vigour which gave a dignity even to negligence;—who, like them, flung the jereed² carelessly, but not, like them, to the mark;—‘and who,’ said he, raising his voice to excite a proper degree of wakefulness in his hearers, ‘contrive to appear heavy and constrained in the midst of all the latitude they allow themselves, like one of those young pagans that dance before the Princess, who is ingenious enough to move as if her limbs were fettered, in a pair of the lightest and loosest drawers of Masulipatam!’

It was but little suitable, he continued, to the grave march of criticism to follow this fantastical Peri, of whom they had just heard, through all her flights and adventures between earth and heaven; but he could not help adverting to the puerile conceitedness of the Three Gifts which she is supposed to carry to the skies,—a drop of blood, forsooth, a sigh, and a tear! How the first of these articles was delivered into the Angel’s ‘radiant hand’ he professed himself at a loss to discover; and as to the safe carriage of the sigh and the tear, such Peris and such poets were beings by far too incomprehensible for him even to guess how they managed such matters. ‘But, in short,’ said he, ‘it is a waste of time and patience to dwell longer upon a thing so incurably frivolous,—puny even among its own puny race, and such as only the Banyan Hospital³ for Sick Insects should undertake.’

In vain did LALLA ROOKH try to soften this inexorable critic; in vain did she resort to her most eloquent common-places,—reminding him that poets were a timid and sensitive race, whose sweetness was not to be drawn forth, like that of the fragrant grass near the Ganges, by crushing and trampling upon them;⁴—that severity often extinguished every chance of the perfection which it demanded; and that, after all, perfection was like the Mountain of the Talisman,—no one had ever yet reached its summit.⁵ Neither these gentle axioms, nor the still gentler looks with which they were inculcated, could lower for one instant the elevation of FADLADEEN’S eyebrows, or charm him into any thing like encouragement, or even toleration, of her poet. Toleration, indeed, was not among the weaknesses of FADLADEEN:—he carried the same spirit into matters of poetry and of religion, and, though little versed in the beauties or sublimities of either, was a perfect master of the art of persecution in both. His zeal was the same, too, in either pursuit; whether the game before him was pagans or poetasters,—worshippers of cows, or writers of epics.

They had now arrived at the splendid city of Lahore, whose mausoleums and shrines, magnificent and numberless, where Death appeared to share equal honours with Heaven, would have powerfully affected the heart and imagination of LALLA ROOKH, if feelings more of this earth had not taken entire possession of her already. She was here met by messengers, despatched from Cashmere, who informed her that the King had arrived in the Valley, and was himself superintending the sumptuous preparations that were then making in the Saloons of the Shalimar for her reception. The chill she felt on receiving this intelligence,—which to a bride whose heart was free and light would have brought only images of affection and pleasure,—convinced her that her peace was gone for ever, and that she was in love, irretrievably in love, with young FERAMORZ. The veil had fallen off in which this passion at first disguises itself, and to know that she loved was now as painful as to love without knowing it had been delicious. FERAMORZ, too,—what misery would be his, if the sweet hours of intercourse so imprudently allowed them should have stolen into his heart the same fatal fascination as into hers ;—if, notwithstanding her rank, and the modest homage he always paid to it, even he should have yielded to the influence of those long and happy interviews, where music, poetry, the delightful scenes of nature,—all had tended to bring their hearts close together, and to waken by every means that too ready passion, which often, like the young of the desert-bird, is warmed into life by the eyes alone !¹ She saw but one way to preserve herself from being culpable as well as unhappy, and this, however painful, she was resolved to adopt. FERAMORZ must no more be admitted to her presence. To have strayed so far into the dangerous labyrinth was wrong, but to linger in it, while the clue was yet in her hand, would be criminal. Though the heart she had to offer to the King of Bucharia might be cold and broken, it should at least be pure ; and she must only endeavour to forget the short dream of happiness she had enjoyed,—like that Arabian shepherd, who, in wandering into the wilderness, caught a glimpse of the Gardens of Irim, and then lost them again for ever !²

The arrival of the young Bride at Lahore was celebrated in the most enthusiastic manner. The Rajas and Omras in her train, who had kept at a certain distance during the journey, and never encamped nearer to the Princess than was strictly necessary for her safeguard, here rode in splendid cavalcade through the city, and distributed the most costly presents to the crowd. Engines were erected in all the squares, which cast forth showers of confectionery among the people ; while the artisans, in chariots³ adorned with tinsel and flying streamers, exhibited the badges of their respective trades through the streets. Such brilliant displays of life and pageantry among the palaces, and domes, and gilded minarets of Lahore, made the city altogether like a place of enchantment ;—particularly on the day when LALLA ROOKH set out again upon her journey, when she was accompanied to the gate by all the fairest and richest of the nobility, and rode along between ranks of beautiful boys and girls, who kept waving over their heads plates of gold and silver flowers,⁴ and then threw them around to be gathered by the populace.

For many days after their departure from Lahore, a considerable degree of gloom hung over the whole party. LALLA ROOKH, who had intended to make illness her excuse for not admitting the young minstrel, as usual, to the pavilion, soon found that to feign indisposition was unnecessary ;—FADLADEEN felt the loss of the good road they had hitherto travelled, and was very near cursing Jehan-Guire (of blessed memory!) for not having continued his delectable alley of trees,¹ at least as far as the mountains of Cashmere;—while the Ladies, who had nothing now to do all day but to be fanned by peacocks' feathers and listen to FADLADEEN, seemed heartily weary of the life they led, and, in spite of all the Great Chamberlain's criticisms, were so tasteless as to wish for the poet again. One evening, as they were proceeding to their place of rest for the night, the Princess, who, for the freer enjoyment of the air, had mounted her favourite Arabian palfrey, in passing by a small grove heard the notes of a lute from within its leaves, and a voice, which she but too well knew, singing the following words:—

TELL me not of joys above,
If that world can give no bliss,
Truer, happier than the Love
Which enslaves our souls in this.

Tell me not of Houris' eyes;—
Far from me their dangerous glow,
If those looks that light the skies
Would like some that burn below.

Who, that feels what Love is here,
All its falsehood—all its pain—
Would, for ev'n Elysium's sphere,
Risk the fatal dream again?

Who, that midst a desert's heat
Sees the waters fade away,
Would not rather die than meet
Streams again as false as they?

The tone of melancholy defiance in which these words were uttered, went to LALLA ROOKH's heart;—and, as she reluctantly rode on, she could not help feeling it to be a sad but still sweet certainty, that FERAMORZ was to the full as enamoured and miserable as herself.

The place where they encamped that evening was the first delightful spot they had come to since they left Lahore. On one side of them was a grove full of small Hindoo temples, and planted with the most graceful trees of the East; where the tamarind, the cassia, and the silken plantains of Ceylon were mingled in rich contrast with the high fan-like foliage of the Palmyra,—that favourite tree of the luxurious bird that lights up the chambers of its nest with fire-flies.² In the middle of the lawn where the pavilion stood there was a tank surrounded by small mangoe-trees, on the clear cold waters of which floated multitudes of the beautiful red lotus;³ while at a distance stood the ruins of a strange and awful-looking tower, which seemed old enough to have been the temple of some religion no longer known, and which spoke the voice of desolation in the midst of all that bloom and loveliness. This singular ruin excited the wonder and conjectures of all. LALLA ROOKH guessed in vain, and the all-pretending FADLADEEN, who had never till this journey been beyond the precincts of Delhi, was proceeding most learnedly to show that he knew nothing whatever about the matter, when one of the Ladies suggested that perhaps FERAMORZ could satisfy their curiosity. They were now approaching his native mountains, and this tower might perhaps be a relic of some of those dark superstitions, which had prevailed in that country before the light of Islam dawned upon it. The Chamberlain, who usually preferred his own ignorance to the best knowledge that any one else could give him, was by no means pleased with this officious reference; and the Princess, too, was about to interpose a faint word of objection, but, before either of them could speak, a slave was despatched for FERAMORZ, who, in a very few minutes, made his appearance before them—looking so pale and unhappy in LALLA ROOKH's eyes, that she repented already of her cruelty in having so long excluded him.

That venerable tower, he told them, was the remains of an ancient Fire-Temple, built by those Ghebers or Persians of the old religion, who, many hundred years since, had fled hither from their Arab conquerors,¹ preferring liberty and their altars in a foreign land to the alternative of apostasy or persecution in their own. It was impossible, he added, not to feel interested in the many glorious but unsuccessful struggles, which had been made by these original natives of Persia to cast off the yoke of their bigoted conquerors. Like their own Fire in the Burning Field at Bakou,² when suppressed in one place, they had but broken out with fresh flame in another; and, as a native of Cashmere, of that fair and Holy Valley, which had in the same manner become the prey of strangers,³ and seen her ancient shrines and native princes swept away before the march of her intolerant invaders, he felt a sympathy, he owned, with the sufferings of the persecuted Ghebers, which every monument like this before them but tended more powerfully to awaken.

It was the first time that FERAMORZ had ever ventured upon so much prose before FADLADEEN, and it may easily be conceived what effect such prose as this must have produced upon that most orthodox and most pagan-hating personage. He sat for some minutes aghast, ejaculating only at intervals, 'Bigoted conquerors!—sympathy with Fire-worshippers!'—while FERAMORZ, happy to take advantage of this almost speechless horror of the Chamberlain, proceeded to say that he knew a melancholy story, connected with the events of one of those struggles of the brave Fire-worshippers against their Arab masters, which, if the evening was not too far advanced, he should have much pleasure in being allowed to relate to the Princess. It was impossible for LALLA ROOKH to refuse;—he had never before looked half so animated; and when he spoke of the Holy Valley his eyes had sparkled, she thought, like the talismanic characters on the scimitar of Solomon. Her consent was therefore most readily granted; and while FADLADEEN sat in unspeakable dismay, expecting treason and abomination in every line, the poet thus began his story of the Fire-worshippers:—

THE FIRE-WORSHIPPERS

Bask in the night-beam beautifully,

And her blue waters sleep in smiles.

¹ This mountain is generally supposed to be inaccessible. Struy says, 'I can well assure the reader that their opinion is not true, who suppose this mount to be inaccessible.' He adds, that 'the lower part of the mountain is cloudy, misty, and dark, the middlemost part very cold, and like clouds of snow, but the upper regions perfectly calm.'—It was on this mountain that the Ark was supposed to have rested after the Deluge, and part of it, they say, exists there still, which Struy thus gravely accounts for: 'Whereas none can remember that the air on the top of the hill did ever change or was subject either to wind or rain, which is presumed to be the reason that the Ark has endured so long without being rotten.'

 Where the bright eyes of angels only
 Should come around us, to behold
 A paradise so pure and lonely.
 Would this be world enough for thee?'—
 Playful she turn'd, that he might see
 The passing smile her cheek put on;
 But when she mark'd how mournfully
 His eyes met hers, that smile was
 gone;

And, bursting into heart-felt tears, 273
 'Yes, yes,' she cried, 'my hourly fears,
 My dreams have boded all too right—
 We part—for ever part—to-night!
 I knew, I knew it could not last—
 'Twas bright, 'twas heav'nly, but 'tis
 past!

Oh! ever thus, from childhood's hour,
 I've seen my fondest hopes decay; 280
 I never lov'd a tree or flow'r,

But 'twas the first to fade away.
 I never nurs'd a dear gazelle,
 To glad me with its soft black eye,
 But when it came to know me well,
 And love me, it was sure to die!
 Now too—the joy most like divine
 Of all I ever dreamt or knew,

To see thee, hear thee, call thee mine,—
 Oh misery! must I lose that too? 290
 Yet go—on peril's brink we meet;—
 Those frightful rocks—that treach'rous
 sea—

No, never come again—though sweet,
 Though heav'n, it may be death to
 thee.

Farewell—and blessings on thy way,
 Where'er thou goest, beloved stranger!
 Better to sit and watch that ray,
 And think thee safe, though far away,
 Than have thee near me, and in danger!

'Danger!—oh, tempt me not to boast—'
 The youth exclaim'd—'thou little know'st 301
 What he can brave, who, born and nurs'd
 In Danger's paths, has dar'd her worst;
 Upon whose ear the signal-word
 Of strife and death is hourly breaking;
 Who sleeps with head upon the sword
 His fever'd hand must grasp in waking.
 Danger!—'

'Say on—thou fear'st not then,
 And we may meet—oft meet again?'

'Oh! look not so—beneath the skies 310
 I now fear nothing but those eyes.
 If aught on earth could charm or force
 My spirit from its destin'd course,—
 If aught could make this soul forget
 The bond to which its seal is set,
 'Twould be those eyes;—they, only they,
 Could melt that sacred seal away!
 But no—'tis fix'd—my awful doom
 Is fix'd—on this side of the tomb
 We meet no more;—why, why did
 Hear'n 320

Mingle two souls that earth has riv'n,
 Has rent asunder wide as ours?
 Oh, Arab maid, as soon the Powers
 Of Light and Darkness may combine,
 As I be link'd with thee or thine!

Thy Father——'

'Holy ALLA save

His grey head from that lightning
glance!

Thou know'st him not—he loves the
brave;

Nor lives there under heaven's expanse
One who would prize, would worship thee
And thy bold spirit, more than he. 331

Oft when, in childhood, I have play'd
With the bright falchion by his side,
I've heard him swear his lisping maid
In time should be a warrior's bride.

And still, whene'er at Haram hours,
I take him cool sherbets and flow'rs,
He tells me, when in playful mood,

A hero shall my bridegroom be,
Since maids are best in battle woo'd, 340
And won with shouts of victory!

Nay, turn not from me—thou alone
Art form'd to make both hearts thy own.
Go—join his sacred ranks—thou know'st
The' unholy strife these Persians wage:—

Good Heav'n, that frown!—even now
thou glow'st

With more than mortal warrior's rage.
Haste to the camp by morning's light,
And, when that sword is rais'd in fight,
Oh still remember, Love and I 350
Beneath its shadow trembling lie!

One vict'ry o'er those Slaves of Fire,
Those impious Ghebers, whom my sire
Abhors——'

'Hold, hold—thy words are death——'

The stranger cried, as wild he flung
His mantle back, and show'd beneath
The Gheber belt that round him clung.—¹

¹ 'They (the Ghebers) lay so much stress on their cushee or girdle, as not to dare to be an instant without it.'—Grose's Voyage. 'Le jeune homme n'a d'abord la chose; mais, ayant été dépourvu de sa robe, et la large ceinture qu'il portait comme Ghebre,' &c. &c.—D'Herbelot, art. 'Aduani.' 'Pour se distinguer des Idolâtres de l'Inde, les Guebres se ceignent tous d'un cordon de laine, ou de poil de chameau.'—Encyclop. du Français.

D'Herbelot says this belt was generally of leather.

² 'They suppose the Throne of the Almighty is seated in the sun, and hence their worship of that luminary.'—Hanway. 'As to fire, the Ghebers place the spring-head of it in that globe of fire, the Sun, by them called Mythras, or Mithr, to which they pay the highest reverence, in gratitude for the manifold benefits

'Here, maiden, look—weep—blush to see
All that thy sire abhors in me!

Yes—I am of that impious race, 360
Those Slaves of Fire who, morn and even,

Hail their Creator's dwelling-place

Among the living lights of heaven: *

Yes—I am of that outcast few,

To IRAN and to vengeance true,

Who curse the hour your Arabs came

To desolate our shrines of flame,

And swear, before God's burning eye,

To break our country's chains, or die!

Thy bigot sire,—nay, tremble not,— 370

He, who gave birth to those dear eyes,

With me is sacred as the spot

From which our fires of worship rise!

But know—'twas he I sought that night,

When, from my watch-boat on the sea,

I caught this turret's glimm'ring light,

And up the rude rocks desperately

Rush'd to my prey—thou know'st the
rest—

I climb'd the gory vulture's nest, 370

And found a trembling dove within;—

Thine, thine the victory—thine the sin—

If Love hath made one thought his own,

That Vengeance claims first—last—
alone!

Oh! had we never, never met,

Or could this heart ev'n now forget

How link'd, how bless'd we might have been,

Had fate not frown'd so dark between!

Hadst thou been born a Persian maid,

In neighbouring valleys had we dwelt,

Through the same fields in childhood
play'd, 390

At the same kindling altar knelt,— flowing from its ministerial omniscience. But they are so far from confounding the subordination of the servant with the majesty of its Creator, that they not only attribute no sort of sense or reasoning to the sun or fire, in any of its operations, but consider it as a purely passive blind instrument, directed and governed by the immediate impression on it of the will of God; but they do not even give that luminary, all-glorious as it is, more than the second rank amongst his works, reserving the first for that stupendous production of divine power, the mind of man.'—Grose. The false charges brought against the religion of these people by their Mussulman tyrants is but one proof among many of the truth of this writer's remark, that 'calumny is often added to oppression, if but for the sake of justifying it.'

Then, then, while all those nameless ties,
In which the charm of Country lies,
Had round our hearts been hourly spun,
Till IRAN'S cause and thine were one ;
While in thy lute's awak'ning sigh
I heard the voice of days gone by,
And saw, in every smile of thine,
Returning hours of glory shine ;—
While the wrong'd Spirit of our Land

Liv'd, look'd, and spoke her wrongs through thee,— 401
God ! who could then this sword withstand ?

Its very flash were victory !
But now—estrang'd, divorc'd for ever,
Far as the grasp of Fate can sever ;
Our only ties what love has wove,—
In faith, friends, country, sunder'd
wide ;

And then, then only, true to love,
When false to all that's dear beside !
Thy father IRAN'S deadliest foe— 410
Thyself, perhaps, ev'n now—but no—
Hate never look'd so lovely yet !

No—sacred to thy soul will be
The land of him who could forget
All but that bleeding land for thee.
When other eyes shall see, unmov'd,
Her widows mourn, her warriors fall,
Thou'lt think how well one Gheber
lov'd,

And for his sake thou'lt weep for all !
But look—— !¹

With sudden start he turn'd 420
And pointed to the distant wave,
Wherelights, like charnel meteors, burn'd
Bluely, as o'er some seaman's grave :

And fiery darts, at intervals,¹
Flew up all sparkling from the main,
As if each star that nightly falls,
Were shooting back to heav'n again.

' My signal lights !—I must away—
Both, both are ruin'd, if I stay.
Farewell—sweet life ! thou cling'st in vain—

Now, Vengeance, I am thine again !⁴³⁰
Fiercely he broke away, nor stopp'd,
Nor look'd—but from the lattice dropp'd
Down mid the pointed crags beneath,
As if he fled from love to death.

Whilepale and mute young HINDA stood,
Nor mov'd, till in the silent flood
A momentary plunge below
Startled her from her trance of woe ;—
Shrieking she to the lattice flew, 440

' I come—I come—if in that tide
Thou sleep'st to-night, I'll sleep there
too,

In death's cold wedlock, by thy side.
Oh ! I would ask no happier bed
Than the chill wave my love lies under :—

Sweeter to rest together dead,
Far sweeter, than to live asunder !'
But no—their hour is not yet come—
Again she sees his pinnace fly,
Wafting him fleetly to his home, 450
Where'er that ill-starr'd home may
lie ;

And calm and smooth it seem'd to win
Its moonlight way before the wind,
As if it bore all peace within,
Nor left one breaking heart behind !

THE Princess, whose heart was sad enough already, could have wish'd that FERAMORZ had chosen a less melancholy story ; as it is only to the happy that tears are a luxury. Her Ladies, however, were by no means sorry that love was once more the Poet's theme ; for, whenever he spoke of love, they said, his voice was as sweet as if he had chewed the leaves of that enchanted tree, which grows over the tomb of the musician, Tan-Sein.²

Their road all the morning had lain through a very dreary country ;—through valleys, covered with a low bushy jungle, where, in more than one place, the parable skill, who flourished at the court of Akbar. The tomb is overshadowed by a tree, concerning which a superstitious notion prevails, that the chewing of its leaves will give an extraordinary melody to the voice.'—Narrative of a Journey from Agra to Ouzen, by W. Hunter, Esq.

awful signal of the bamboo staff,¹ with the white flag at its top, reminded the traveller that, in that very spot, the tiger had made some human creature his victim. It was, therefore, with much pleasure that they arrived at sunset in a safe and lovely glen, and encamped under one of those holy trees, whose smooth columns and spreading roofs seem to destine them for natural temples of religion. Beneath this spacious shade, some pious hands had erected a row of pillars ornamented with the most beautiful porcelain,² which now supplied the use of mirrors to the young maidens, as they adjusted their hair in descending from the palankeens. Here, while, as usual, the Princess sat listening anxiously, with FADLADEEN in one of his loftiest moods of criticism by her side, the young Poet, leaning against a branch of the tree, thus continued his story :—

THE morn hath risen clear and calm,
And o'er the Green Sea³ palely shines,
Revealing BAHREIN'S⁴ groves of palm,
And lighting KISHMA'S⁵ amber vines.
Fresh smell the shores of ARABY,
While breezes from the Indian Sea
Blow round SELAMA'S⁶ sainted cape,
And curl the shining flood beneath,— Whose waves are rich with many a grape,

And cocoa-nut and flow'ry wreath, 10
Which pious seamen, as they pass'd,
Had tow'rd that holy headland cast—
Oblations to the Genii there
For gentle skies and breezes fair !
The nightingale now bends her flight⁷
From the high trees, where all the night
She sung so sweet, with none to listen ;
And hides her from the morning star
Where thickets of pomegranate glisten
In the clear dawn,—bespangled o'er 20
With dew, whose night-drops would not stain
The best and brightest scimitar⁸

¹ 'It is usual to place a small white triangular flag, fixed to a bamboo staff of ten or twelve feet long, at the place where a tiger has destroyed a man. It is common for the passengers also to throw each a stone or brick near the spot, so that in the course of a little time a pile equal to a good waggon-load is collected. The sight of these flags and piles of stones imparts a certain melancholy, not perhaps altogether void of apprehension.'—Oriental Field Sports, vol. ii.

² 'The Ficus Indica is called the Pagod Tree and Tree of Councils ; the first, from the idols placed under its shade ; the second, because meetings were held under its cool branches. In some places it is believed to be the haunt of spectres, as the ancient spreading oaks of Wales have been of fairies ; in others are erected beneath the shade pillars of stone, or posts, elegantly carved, and ornamented with the most beautiful porcelain to supply the use of mirrors.'—Ponnant.

That ever youthful Sultan wore
On the first morning of his reign.

And see—the Sun himself !—on wings
Of glory up the East he springs.
Angel of Light ! who from the time
Those heavens began their march sub-
lime,

Hath first of all the starry choir
Trod in his Maker's steps of fire ! 30
Where are the days, thou wondrous sphere,

When IRAN, like a sun-flow'r, turn'd
To meet that eye where'er it burn'd ?—
When, from the banks of BENDEMEER
To the nut-groves of SAMARCAND,
Thy temples flam'd o'er all the land ?
Where aro they ? ask the shades of

Saw fierce invaders pluck the gem
From IRAN'S broken diadem, 40

⁸ The place where the Persians were finally defeated by the Arabs, and their ancient monarchy destroyed.

Beyond the Caspian's Iron Gates,¹
 Or on the snowy Mossian mountains,
 Far from his beauteous land of dates,
 Her jasmine bow'rs and sunny foun-
 tains :

Yet happier so than if he trod
 His own belov'd, but blighted, sod,
 Beneath a despot stranger's nod !— 50
 Oh, he would rather houseless roam
 Where Freedom and his God may lead,
 Than be the sleekest slave at home
 That crouches to the conqueror's creed !

Is IRAN's pride then gone for ever,
 Quench'd with the flame in MITHRA's caves ?—

No—she has sons, that never—never—
 Will stoop to be the Moslem's slaves,
 While heav'n has light or earth has graves ;—

Spirits of fire, that brood not long, 60
 But flash resentment back for wrong ;
 And hearts where, slow but deep, the seeds

Of vengeance ripen into deeds,
 Till, in some treach'rous hour of calm,
 They burst, like ZEILAN's giant palm,²
 Whose buds fly open with a sound
 That shakes the pigmy forests round !

Yes, EMIR ! he, who scal'd that tow'r,
 And, had he reach'd thy slumb'ring
 breast,

Had taught thee, in a Gheber's pow'r 70
 How safe ev'n tyrant heads may rest—

Is one of many, brave as he,
 Who loathe thy haughty race and thee ;
 Who, though they know the strife is vain,
 Who, though they know the riven chain
 Snaps but to enter in the heart
 Of him who rends its links apart,
 Yet dare the issue,—blest to be
 Ev'n for one bleeding moment free,
 And die in pangs of liberty ! 80

Thou know'st them well—'tis some moons since

Thy turban'd troops and blood-red flags,

Thou satrap of a bigot Prince,

Have swarm'd among these Green Sea
 crags ;

Yet here, ev'n here, a sacred band
 Ay, in the portal of that land
 Thou, Arab, dar'st to call thy own,
 Their spears across thy path have thrown ;
 Here—ere the winds half wing'd thee
 o'er—

Rebellion brav'd thee from the shore. 90

Rebellion ! foul, dishonouring word,
 Whose wrongful blight so oft has
 stain'd

The holiest cause that tongue or sword
 Of mortal ever lost or gain'd.

How many a spirit, born to bless,
 Hath sunk beneath that with'ring
 name,

Whom but a day's, an hour's success
 Had wafted to eternal fame !

As exhalations, when they burst
 From the warm earth, if chill'd at first,
 If check'd in soaring from the plain, 101
 Darken to fogs and sink again ;—

But, if they once triumphant spread
 Their wings above the mountain-head,
 Become enthron'd in upper air,
 And turn to sun-bright glories there !

And who is he, that wields the might
 Of Freedom on the Green Sea brink,
 Before whose sabre's dazzling light³

The eyes of YEMEN's warriors wink ?
 Who comes, embower'd in the spears
 Of KERMAN's hardy mountaineers ?—
 Those mountaineers that truest, last,
 Cling to their country's ancient rites,
 As if that God, whose eyelids cast 115

Their closing gleam on IRAN's heights,
 Among her snowy mountains threw
 The last light of his worship too !

'Tis HAFED—name of fear, whose sound
 Chills like the mutt'ring of a charm !—

Shout but that awful name around, 121
 And palsy shakes the manliest arm.

'Tis HAFED, most accurs'd and dire
 (So rank'd by Moslem hate and ire)
 Of all the rebel Sons of Fire ;

Of whose malign, tremendous power
The Arabs, at their mid-watch hour,
Such tales of fearful wonder tell,
That each affrighted sentinel
Pulls down his cowl upon his eyes, 130
Lest HAFED in the midst should rise!
A man, they say, of monstrous birth,
A mingled race of flame and earth,
Sprung from those old, enchanted kings,¹
Who in their fairy helmets, of yore,

A feather from the mystic wings
Of the Simoorgh resistless wore;
And gifted by the Fiends of Fire, 138
Who groan'd to see their shrines expire,
With charms that, all in vain withstood,
Would drown the Koran's light in blood!

Such were the tales, that won belief,
And such the colouring Fancy gave
To a young, warm, and dauntless Chief,—
One who, no more than mortal brave,
Fought for the land his soul ador'd,
For happy homes and altars free,
His only talisman, the sword,

His only spell-word, Liberty!
One of that ancient hero line, 150
Along whose glorious current shine
Names, that have sanctified their blood;
As LEBANON'S small mountain-flood
Is render'd holy by the ranks
Of sainted cedars on its banks.²

'Twas not for him to crouch the knee
Tamely to Moslem tyranny;
'Twas not for him, whose soul was cast
In the bright mould of ages past,
Whose melancholy spirit, fed 160
With all the glories of the dead,
Though fram'd for IRAN'S happiest
years,

Was born among her chains and tears!—

The griffin Simoorgh, they say, took some feathers from her breast for Tahnuras, with which he adorned his helmet, and transmitted them afterwards to his descendants.

² This rivulet, says Dandini, is called the Holy River from the 'cedar-saints' among which it rises.

In the Lettres Édiifiantes, there is a different cause assigned for its name of Holy. 'In these are deep caverns, which formerly served as so many cells for a great number of recluses, who had chosen these retreats as the only witnesses upon earth of the severity of their penance. The tears of these pious penitents gave the

'Twas not for him to swell the crowd
Of slavish heads, that shrinking bow'd
Before the Moslem, as he pass'd,
Like shrubs beneath the poison-blast—
No—far he fled—indignant fled

The pageant of his country's shame;
While every tear her children shed 170
Fell on his soul like drops of flame;
And, as a lover hails the dawn
Of a first smile, so welcom'd he
The sparkle of the first sword drawn
For vengeance and for liberty!

But vain was valour—vain the flow'r
Of KERMAN, in that deathful hour,
Against AL HASSAN'S whelming pow'r,—
In vain they met him, helm to helm,
Upon the threshold of that realm 180
He came in bigot pomp to sway,
And with their corpses block'd his
way—

In vain—for every lance they rais'd,
Thousands around the conqueror blaz'd;
For every arm that lin'd their shore,
Myriads of slaves were wafted o'er,—
A bloody, bold, and countless crowd,
Before whose swarm as fast they
bow'd

As dates beneath the locust cloud.

There stood—but one short league away
From old HARMOZIA'S sultry bay— 191
A rocky mountain, o'er the Sea
Of OMAN beetling awfully;³
A last and solitary link

Of those stupendous chains that reach
From the broad Caspian's reedy brink
Down winding to the Green Sea beach.

Around its base the bare rocks stood,
Like naked giants, in the flood,

river of which we have just treated the name of the Holy River.'—See Châteaubriand's Beautés of Christianity.

³ This mountain is my own creation, as the 'stupendous chain,' of which I suppose it a link, does not extend quite so far as the shores of the Persian Gulf. 'This long and lofty range of mountains formerly divided Media from Assyria, and now forms the boundary of the Persian and Turkish empires. It runs parallel with the river Tigris and Persian Gulf, and almost disappearing in the vicinity of Gombe-roon (Harmozia) seems once more to rise in the southern districts of Kerma, and following an easterly course through the centre of Meckraun and Balouchistan, is entirely lost in the deserts of Sindh.'—Kinnier's Persian Empire.

As if to guard the Gulf across ; 200
While, on its peak, that brav'd the sky,
A ruin'd Temple tower'd, so high

That oft the sleeping albatross¹
Struck the wild ruins with her wing,
And from her cloud-rock'd slumbering
Started—to find man's dwelling there
In her own silent fields of air !
Beneath, terrific caverns gave
Dark welcome to each stormy wave
That dash'd, like midnight revellers,
in ;— 210

And such the strange, mysterious din
At times throughout those caverns
roll'd,—

And such the fearful wonders told
Of restless sprites imprison'd there,
That bold were Moslem, who would
dare,

At twilight hour, to steer his skiff
Beneath the Gheber's lonely cliff.²

On the land side, those tow'rs sublime,
That seem'd above the grasp of Time,
Were sever'd from the haunts of men 220
By a wide, deep, and wizard glen,
So fathomless, so full of gloom,

No eye could pierce the void between :
It seem'd a place where Gholes might
come

With their foul banquets from the tomb,
And in its caverns feed unseen.

Like distant thunder, from below,

The sound of many torrents came,
Too deep for eye or ear to know
If 'twere the sea's imprison'd flow, 230
Or floods of ever-restless flame.

For, each ravine, each rocky spire
Of that vast mountain stood on fire ;³
And, though for ever past the days
When God was worshipp'd in the blaze
That from its lofty altar shone,—

¹ These birds sleep in the air. They are most common about the Cape of Good Hope.

² 'There is an extraordinary hill in this neighbourhood called Kohé Gubr, or the Guebre's mountain. It rises in the form of a lofty cupola, and on the summit of it, they say, are the remains of an Atush Kudu or Fire Temple. It is superstitiously held to be the residence of Deeves or Sprites, and many marvellous stories are recounted of the injury and witchcraft suffered by those who essayed in former days to ascend or explore it.'—Pottinger's Beloochistan.

³ The Ghebers generally built their temples over subterraneous fires.

Though fled the priests, the vot'ries gone,
Still did the mighty flame burn on.⁴
Through chance and change, through good and ill,

Like its own God's eternal will, 240
Deep, constant, bright, unquenchable !

Thither the vanquish'd HAFED led

His little army's last remains ;—

'Welcome, terrific glen !' he said,

'Thygloom, that Eblis' self might dread,

Is Heav'n to him who flies from chains '

O'er a dark, narrow bridge-way, known

To him and to his Chiefs alone,

They cross'd the chasm and gain'd the

tow'rs,— 249

'This home,' he cried, 'at least is ours ;

Here we may bleed, unmock'd by hymns

Of Moslem triumph o'er our head ;

Here we may fall, nor leave our limbs

To quiver to the Moslem's tread.

Stretch'd on this rock, while vultures'

beaks

Are whetted on our yet warm cheeks,

Here—happy that no tyrant's eye

Gloats on our torments—we may die !'—

'Twas night when to those towers they
came,

And gloomily the fitful flame, 260

That from the ruin'd altar broke,

Glared on his features, as he spoke :—

''Tis o'er—what men could do, we've done—

If IRAN will look tamely on,

And see her priests, her warriors driv'n

Before a sensual bigot's nod,

A wretch who shrines his lust in heav'n,

And makes a pander of his God ; 268

If her proud sons, her high-born souls,

Men, in whose veins—oh last disgrace!

The blood of ZAL and RUSTAM⁵ rolls,—

If they will court this upstart race,

⁴ 'At the city of Yezd, in Persia, which is distinguished by the appellation of the Darûb Abadut, or Seat of Religion, the Guebres are permitted to have an Atush Kudu or Fire Temple (which, they assert, has had the sacred fire in it since the days of Zoroaster) in their own compartment of the city ; but for this indulgence they are indebted to the avarice, not the tolerance of the Persian government, which taxes them at twenty-five rupees each man.'—Pottinger's Beloochistan.

⁵ Ancient heroes of Persia. 'Among the Guebres there are some, who boast their descent from Rustam.'—Stephen's Persia.

And turn from MITHRA's ancient ray,
To kneel at shrines of yesterday ;
If they will crouch to IRAN's foes,

Why, let them—till the land's despair
Cries out to Heav'n, and bondage grows

Too vile for ev'n the vile to bear !
Till shame at last, long hidden, burns
Their inmost core, and conscience turns
Each coward tear the slave lets fall 281
Back on his heart in drops of gall.
But here, at least, are arms unchain'd,
And souls that thralldom never stain'd ;—

This spot, at least, no foot of slave
Or satrap ever yet profaned ;

And though but few—though fast the
wave

Of life is ebbing from our veins,
Enough for vengeance still remains.
As panthers, after set of sun, 290
Rush from the roots of LEBANON

Across the dark-sea robber's way,¹
We'll bound upon our startled prey ;
And when some hearts that proudest
swell

Have felt our falchion's last farewell ;
When Hope's expiring throb is o'er,
And ev'n Despair can prompt no more,
This spot shall be the sacred grave
Of the last few who, vainly brave,
Die for the land they cannot save ! 300

His Chiefs stood round—each shining blade

Upon the broken altar laid—
And though so wild and desolate
Those courts, where once the Mighty sate ;

Nor longer on those mould'ring tow'rs
Was seen the feast of fruits and flow'rs,
With which of old the Magi fed
The wand'ring Spirits of their dead ; 2

¹ See Russel's account of the panther's attacking travellers in the night on the sea-shore about the roots of Lebanon.

² 'Among other ceremonies the Magi used to place upon the tops of high towers various kinds of rich viands, upon which it was supposed the Peris and the spirits of their departed heroes regaled themselves.'—Richardson.

³ In the ceremonies of the Ghebers round their Fire, as described by Lord, 'the Daroo,' he says, 'giveth them water to drink, and a pomegranate leaf to chew in the mouth, to cleanse them from inward uncleanness.'

⁴ 'Early in the morning, they (the Parsees or Ghebers at Oulam) go in crowds to pay

Though neither priest nor rites were
there,

Nor charmed leaf of pure pome-
granate ; 310

Nor hymn, nor censer's fragrant air,
Nor symbol of their worshipp'd planet ; 4

Yet the same God that heard their sires
Heard them, while on that altar's fires
They swore 5 the latest, holiest deed
Of the few hearts, still left to bleed,
Should be, in IRAN's injur'd name,
To die upon that Mount of Flame—
The last of all her patriot line,
Before her last untrampled Shrine ! 320

Brave, suffer'ing souls ! they little knew
How many a tear their injuries drew
From one meek maid, one gentle foe,
Whom love first touch'd with others'
woe—

Whose life, as free from thought as sin,
Slept like a lake, till Love threw in
His talisman, and woke the tide,
And spread its trembling circles wide.
Once, EMIR ! thy unheeding child,
Mid all this havoc, bloom'd and smil'd,—
Tranquil as on some battle plain 331

The Persian lily shines and tow'rs,⁶
Before the combat's redd'ning stain
Hath fall'n upon her golden flow'rs.
Light-hearted maid, unaw'd, unmov'd,
While Heav'n but spar'd the sire she
lov'd,

Once at thy evening tales of blood
Unlist'ning and aloof she stood—
And oft, when thou hast pac'd along
Thy Haram halls with furious heat, 340
Hast thou not curs'd her cheerful song,
That came across thee, calm and sweet,
Like lutes of angels, touch'd so near Hell's confines, that the damn'd can hear !

their devotions to the Sun, to whom upon all the altars there are spheres consecrated, made by magic, resembling the circles of the sun, and when the sun rises, these orbs seem to be inflamed, and to turn round with a great noise. They have every one a censer in their hands, and offer incense to the sun.'—Rabbi Benjamin.

⁶ 'A vivid verdure succeeds the autumnal rains, and the ploughed fields are covered with the Persian lily, of a resplendent yellow colour.'—Russel's Aleppo.

Far other feelings Love hath brought—
Her soul all flame, her brow all sadness,
She now has but the one dear thought,
And thinks that o'er, almost to madness!

Off doth her sinking heart recall
His words—'for my sake weep for all;'
And bitterly, as day on day 351

Of rebel carnage fast succeeds,
She weeps a lover snatch'd away
In ev'ry Gheber wretch that bleeds.

There's not a sabre meets her eye,
But with his life-blood seems to swim;
There's not an arrow wings the sky,
But fancy turns its point to him.

No more she brings with footstep light
AL HASSAN's falchion for the fight; 360
And—had he look'd with clearer sight,
Had not the mists, that ever rise
From a foul spirit, dimm'd his eyes—
He would have mark'd her shudd'ring
frame,

When from the field of blood he came,
The falt'ring speech—the look estrang'd—

Voice, step, and life, and beauty chang'd—
He would have mark'd all this, and known
Such change is wrought by Love alone!

Ah! not the Love, that should have bless'd 370

So young, so innocent a breast;
Not the pure, open, prosperous Love,
That, pledg'd on earth and seal'd above,
Grows in the world's approving eyes,

In friendship's smile and home's caress,
Collecting all the heart's sweet ties
Into one knot of happiness!

No, HINDA, no,—thy fatal flame
Is nurs'd in silence, sorrow, shame;—
A passion, without hope or pleasure,
In thy soul's darkness buried deep, 381

It lies like some ill-gotten treasure,—
Some idol, without shrine or name,
O'er which its pale-ey'd vot'ries keep
Unholy watch, while others sleep.

Seven nights have darken'd OMAN's sea,
Since last, beneath the moonlight ray,
She saw his light oar rapidly
Hurry her Gheber's bark away,—

And still she goes, at midnight hour, 390
To weep alone in that high bow'r,
And watch, and look along the deep
For him whose smiles first made her
weep;—

But watching, weeping, all was vain,
She never saw his bark again.
The owlet's solitary cry,
The night-hawk, flitting darkly by,
And oft the hateful carrion bird,
Heavily flapping his clogg'd wing,
Which reek'd with that day's banquet-
ing— 400

Was all she saw, was all she heard.

'Tis the eighth morn—AL HASSAN's brow
Is brighten'd with unusual joy—

What mighty mischief glads him now,
Who never smiles but to destroy?

The sparkle upon HERKEND's Sea,
When toss'd at midnight furiously,¹
Tells not of wreck and ruin nigh,
More surely than that smiling eye!

'Up, daughter, up—the KERNAS's²
breath 410

Has blown a blast would waken death,
And yet thou sleep'st—up, child, and see
This blessed day for Heaven and me,
A day more rich in Pagan blood
Than ever flash'd o'er OMAN's flood.
Before another dawn shall shine,
His head—heart—limbs—will all be
mine;

This very night his blood shall steep
These hands all over ere I sleep!'

'His blood!' she faintly scream'd—her
mind 420

Still singling one from all mankind—
'Yes—spite of his ravines and tow'rs,
HAFED, my child, this night is ours.
Thanks to all-conqu'ring treachery,

Without whose aid the links accurst,
That bind these impious slaves, would be

Too strong for ALLA's self to burst!
That rebel fiend, whose blade has spread
My path with piles of Moslem dead,
Whose baffling spells had almost driv'n
Back from their course the Swords of
Heav'n, 431

² A kind of trumpet:—it 'was that used by Tamerlane, the sound of which is described as uncommonly dreadful, and so loud as to be heard at the distance of several miles.'—Richardson.

This night, with all his band, shall know
How deep an Arab's steel can go,
When God and Vengeance speed the
blow.

And—Prophet! by that holy wreath
Thou wor'st on OHOD's field of death,¹
I swear, for ev'ry sob that parts
In anguish from these heathen hearts,
A gem from PERSIA's plunder'd mines
Shall glitter on thy Shrine of Shrines. 440
But, ha!—she sinks—that look so
wild—

Those livid lips—my child, my child,
This life of blood befits not thee,
And thou must back to ARABY.

Ne'er had I risk'd thy timid sex
In scenes that man himself might dread,
Had I not hop'd our ev'ry tread

Would be on prostrate Persian necks—
Curs'd race, they offer swords instead!
But cheer thee, maid,—the wind that
now 450

Is blowing o'er thy feverish brow,
To-day shall wait thee from the shore;
And, ere a drop of this night's gore
Have time to chill in yonder tow'rs,
Thou'lt see thy own sweet Arab bow'rs!'

His bloody boast was all too true;
There lurk'd one wretch among the few

Whom HAFED's eagle eye could count
Around him on that Fiery Mount,—
One miscreant, who for gold betray'd 460
The pathway through the valley's shade
To those high tow'rs, where Freedom stood

In her last hold of flame and blood

Left on the field last dreadful night,
When, sallying from their Sacred height,
The Ghebers fought hope's farewell fight,
He lay—but died not with the brave;
That sun, which should have gilt his
grave,

Saw him a traitor and a slave;—
And, while the few, who thence return'd
To their high rocky fortress, mourn'd 471
For him among the matchless dead
They left behind on glory's bed,
He liv'd, and, in the face of morn,
Laugh'd them and Faith and Heav'n to scorn.

Oh for a tongue to curse the slave,

Whose treason, like a deadly blight,
Comes o'er the councils of the brave,

And blasts them in their hour of might,
May Life's unblessed cup for him 480
Be drugg'd with treach'ries to the brim,
With hopes, that but allure to fly,

With joys, that vanish while he sips,
Like Dead Sea fruits, that tempt the eye,

But turn to ashes on the lips! 2
His country's curse, his children's shame,
Outcast of virtue, peace, and fame,
May he, at last, with lips of flame
On the parch'd desert thirsting die,— While lakes, that shone in mockery
nigh,³ 490

Are fading off, untouch'd, untasted,
Like the once glorious hopes he blasted!
And, when from earth his spirit flies,
Just Prophet, let the damn'd one
dwell

Full in the sight of Paradise,

Beholding heav'n, and feeling hell!

³ 'The Asphalt Lake, known by the name of the Dead Sea, is very remarkable on account of the considerable proportion of salt which it contains. In this respect it surpasses every other known water on the surface of the earth. This great proportion of bitter tasted salts is the reason why neither animal nor plant can live in this water.'—Klaproth's Chemical Analysis of the Water of the Dead Sea, Annals of Philosophy, January, 1813. Hasselquist, however, doubts the truth of this last assertion, as there are shell-fish to be found in the lake.

Lord Byron has a similar allusion to the fruits of the Dead Sea, in that wonderful display of genius, his third Canto of Childe Harold,—magnificent beyond any thing, perhaps, that even he has ever written.

⁴ 'The Suhrab or Water of the Desert is said to be caused by the rarefaction of the atmosphere from extreme heat; and, which augments the delusion, it is most frequent in hollows, where water might be expected to lodge. I have seen bushes and trees reflected in it, with as much accuracy as though it had been the face of a clear and still lake.'—Pottinger.

⁵ 'As to the unbelievers, their works are like a vapour in a plain, which the thirsty traveller thinketh to be water, until when he cometh thereto he findeth it to be nothing.'—Koran, chap. xxiv.

LALLA ROOKH had, the night before, been visited by a dream which, in spite of the impending fate of poor HAFED, made her heart more than usually cheerful during the morning, and gave her cheeks all the freshened animation of a flower that the Bid-musk has just pass'd over.¹ She fancied that she was sailing on that Eastern Ocean, where the sea-gipsies, who live for ever on the water,² enjoy a perpetual summer in wandering from isle to isle, when she saw a small gilded bark approaching her. It was like one of those boats which the Maldivian islanders send adrift, at the mercy of winds and waves, loaded with perfumes, flowers, and odoriferous wood, as an offering to the Spirit whom they call King of the Sea. At first, this little bark appeared to be empty, but, on coming nearer—

She had proceeded thus far in relating the dream to her Ladies, when FERAMORZ appeared at the door of the pavilion. In his presence, of course, every thing else was forgotten, and the continuance of the story was instantly requested by all. Fresh wood of aloes was set to burn in the cassolets;—the violet sherbets³ were hastily handed round, and after a short prelude on his lute, in the pathetic measure of Nava,⁴ which is always used to express the lamentations of absent lovers, the Poet thus continued :—

THE day is low'ring—stilly black
Sleeps the grim wave, while heav'n's rack,
Dispers'd and wild, 'twixt earth and sky
Hangs like a shatter'd canopy.
There's not a cloud in that blue plain
But tells of storm to come or past ;—
Here, flying loosely as the mane
Of a young war-horse in the blast ;—
There, roll'd in masses dark and swelling,
As proud to be the thunder's dwelling !
While some, already burst and riv'n, 11
Seem melting down the verge of heav'n ;
As though the infant storm had rent
The mighty womb that gave him birth,
And, having swept the firmament,
Was now in fierce career for earth.

On earth 'twas yet all calm around,
A pulseless silence, dread, profound,
More awful than the tempest's sound.
The diver steer'd for ORMUS' bowers, 20
And moor'd his skiff till calmer hours ;
The sea-birds, with portentous screech,
Flew fast to land ;—upon the beach
The pilot oft had paus'd, with glance
Turn'd upward to that wild expanse ;—
And all was boding, drear, and dark
As her own soul, when HINDA's bark
Went slowly from the Persian shore.—
No music tim'd her parting oar.⁵
Nor friends upon the less'ning strand 30
Linger'd, to wave the unseen hand,
Or speak the farewell, heard no more ;—

² 'The Biajús are of two races: the one is settled on Borneo, and are a rude but warlike and industrious nation, who reckon themselves the original possessors of the island of Borneo. The other is a species of sea-gipsies or itinerant fishermen, who live in small covered boats, and enjoy a perpetual summer on the eastern ocean, shifting to leeward from island to island, with the variations of the monsoon. In some of their customs this singular race resemble the natives of the Maldivia islands. The Maldivians annually launch a small bark, loaded with perfumes, gums, flowers, and odoriferous wood, and turn it adrift at the mercy of wind and waves, as an offering to the Spirit of the Winds; and sometimes similar offerings are made to the spirit whom they term the King of the Sea. In like manner the Biajús perform their offering to the god of evil, launching a small bark, loaded with all the sins and misfortunes of the nation, which are imagined to fall on the unhappy crew that may be so unlucky as first to meet with it.'—Dr. Leyden on the Language and Literature of the Indo-Chinese Nations.

But lone, unheeded, from the bay
The vessel takes its mournful way,
Like some ill-destin'd bark that steers
In silence through the Gate of Tears.¹

And where was stern AL HASSAN then ?
Could not that saintly scourge of men
From bloodshed and devotion spare
One minute for a farewell there ? 40
No—close within, in changeful fits
Of cursing and of pray'r, he sits
In savage loneliness to brood
Upon the coming night of blood,—

With that keen, second-scent of death,
By which the vulture snuffs his food

In the still warm and living breath !²
While o'er the wave his weeping daughter
Is wafted from these scenes of slaughter,—
As a young bird of BABYLON,³ 50
Let loose to tell of vict'ry won,
Flies home, with wing, ah ! not un-
stain'd

By the red hands that held her chain'd.

And does the long-left home she seeks
Light up no gladness on her cheeks ?
The flow'rs she nurs'd—the well-known
groves,

Where oft in dreams her spirit roves—
Once more to see her dear gazelles
Come bounding with their silver bells ;
Her birds' new plumage to behold, 60

And the gay, gleaming fishes count,
She left, all filleted with gold,

Shooting around their jasper fount ;⁴
Her little garden mosque to see,

And once again, at evening hour,
To tell her ruby rosary⁵

In her own sweet acacia bow'r.—
Can these delights, that wait her now,
Call up no sunshine on her brow ?
No,—silent, from her train apart,— 70
As even now she felt at heart

¹ 'The Gate of Tears, the straits or passage into the Red Sea, commonly called Babel-mandel. It received this name from the old Arabians, on account of the danger of the navigation, and the number of shipwrecks by which it was distinguished ; which induced them to consider as dead, and to wear mourning for all who had the boldness to hazard the passage through it into the Ethiopic ocean.'—Richardson.

³ 'They fasten some writing to the wings of

The chill of her approaching doom,—
She sits, all lovely in her gloom
As a pale Angel of the Grave ;
And o'er the wide, tempestuous wave,
Looks, with a shudder, to those tow'rs,
Where, in a few short awful hours,
Blood, blood, in streaming tides shall run,
Foul incense for to-morrow's sun !
'Where art thou, glorious stranger !
thou, 80

So lov'd, so lost, where art thou now ?
Foe—Gheber—infidels—whate'er
The' unhallow'd name thou'rt doom'd
to bear,

Still glorious—still to this fond heart
Dear as its blood, whate'er thou art !
Yes—ALLA, dreadful ALLA ! yes—
If there be wrong, be crime in this,
Let the black waves that round us roll,
Whelm me this instant, ere my soul,
Forgetting faith—home—father—all—
Before its earthly idol fall, 91

Nor worship ev'n Thyself above him—
For, oh, so wildly do I love him,
Thy Paradise itself were dim
And joyless, if not shar'd with him !
Her hands were clasp'd—her eyes up-
turn'd,

Dropping their tears like moonlight
rain ;

And, though her lip, fond raver ! burn'd
With words of passion, bold, profane,
Yet was there light around her brow, 100
A holiness in those dark eyes,
Which show'd,—though wand'ring earth-
ward now,—

Her spirit's home was in the skies.
Yes—for a spirit pure as hers
Is always pure, ev'n while it errs ;
As sunshine, broken in the rill,
Though turn'd astray, is sunshine still !
So wholly had her mind forgot
All thoughts but one, she heeded not a Bagdat or Babylonian pigeon.'—Travels of certain Englishmen.

The rising storm—the wave that cast 110
A moment's midnight, as it pass'd—
Nor heard the frequent shout, the tread
Of gath'ring tumult o'er her head—
Clash'd swords, and tongues that seem'd to vie

With the rude riot of the sky.—

But, hark!—that war-whoop on the deck—

That crash, as if each engine there,
Mast, sails, and all, were gone to wreck,

Mid yells and stampings of despair!

Merciful Heaven! what can it be? 120

'Tis not the storm, though fearfully

The ship has shudder'd as she rode

O'er mountain-waves—'Forgive me,
God!

Forgive me'—shriek'd the maid, and knelt,

Trembling all over—for she felt

As if her judgment-hour was near;

While crouching round, half dead with fear,

Her handmaids clung, nor breath'd, nor stirr'd—

When, hark!—a second crash—a third—

And now, as if a bolt of thunder 130
Had riv'n the labouring planks asunder,
The deck falls in—what horrors then!

Blood, waves, and tackle, swords and
men

Come mix'd together through the chasm,—

Some wretches in their dying spasm

Still fighting on—and some that call

'For GOD and IRAN!' as they fall!

Whose was the hand that turn'd away
The perils of the' infuriate fray,

And snatch'd her breathless from beneath 140

This wilderment of wreck and death?

She knew not—for a faintness came

Chill o'er her, and her sinking frame

Amid the ruins of that hour

Lay, like a pale and scorched flow'r,

Beneath the red volcano's shower.

But, oh! the sights and sounds of dread

That shock'd her ere her senses fled!

The yawning deck—the crowd that strove
Upon the tott'ring planks above— 150

The sail, whose fragments, shiv'ring o'er
The strugglers' heads, all dash'd with
gore,

Flutter'd like bloody flags—the clash

Of sabres, and the lightning's flash

Upon their blades, high toss'd about

Like meteor brands¹—as if throughout

The elements one fury ran,

One gen'ral rage, that left a doubt

Which was the fiercer, Heav'n or Man!

Once too—but no—it could not be— 160

'Twas fancy all—yet once she thought,

While yet her fading eyes could see,

High on the ruin'd deck she caught

A glimpse of that unearthly form,

That glory of her soul,—even then,

Amid the whirl of wreck and storm,

Shining above his fellow-men,

As, on some black and troublous night,

The Star of EGYPT,² whose proud light

Never hath beam'd on those who rest 170

In the White Islands of the West,³

Burns through the storm with looks of
flame

That put Heav'n's cloudier eyes to
shame.

But no—'twas but the minute's dream—

A fantasy—and ere the scream

Had half-way pass'd her pallid lips,

A death-like swoon, a chill eclipse

Of soul and sense its darkness spread

Around her, and she sunk, as dead.

How calm, how beautiful comes on 180

The stilly hour, when storms are gone;

When warring winds have died away,

And clouds, beneath the glancing ray,

Melt off, and leave the land and sea

Sleeping in bright tranquillity,—

Fresh as if Day again were born,

Again upon the lap of Morn!—

When the light blossoms, rudely torn

And scatter'd at the whirlwind's will,

Hang floating in the pure air still, 190

Filling it all with precious balm,

In gratitude for this sweet calm;—

And every drop the thunder-show'rs

Have left upon the grass and flow'rs

Isles in the West*.

Sparkles, as 'twere that lightning-gem¹
 Whose liquid flame is born of them !
 When, 'stead of one unchanging breeze,
 There blow a thousand gentle airs,

And each a diff'rent perfume bears,—
 As if the loveliest plants and trees 200
 Had vassal breezes of their own
 To watch and wait on them alone,
 And waft no other breath than theirs :
 When the blue waters rise and fall,
 In sleepy sunshine mantling all ;
 And ev'n that swell the tempest leaves
 Is like the full and silent heavens
 Of lovers' hearts, when newly blest,
 Too newly to be quite at rest.

Such was the golden hour that broke 210
 Upon the world, when HINDA woke
 From her long trance, and heard
 around

No motion but the water's sound
 Rippling against the vessel's side,
 As slow it mounted o'er the tide.—
 But where is she ?—her eyes are dark,
 Are wilder'd still—is this the bark,
 The same, that from HARMOZIA's bay
 Bore her at morn—whose bloody way
 The sea-dog track'd ?—no—strange and 220 new

Is all that meets her wond'ring view.
 Upon a galliot's deck she lies,
 Beneath no rich pavilion's shade,—
 No plumes to fan her sleeping eyes,
 Nor jasmine on her pillow laid.
 But the rude litter, roughly spread
 With war-cloaks, is her homely bed,
 And shawl and sash, on javelins hung,
 For awning o'er her head are flung.
 Shudd'ring she look'd around—there lay
 A group of warriors in the sun, 231
 Resting their limbs, as for that day
 Their ministry of death were done.

Some gazing on the drowsy sea,
 Lost in unconscious reverie ;
 And some, who seem'd but ill to brook
 That sluggish calm, with many a look
 To the slack sail impatient cast,
 As loose it flagg'd around the mast.

¹ A precious stone of the Indies, called by the ancients Ceraunium, because it was supposed to be found in places where thunder had fallen. Tertullian says it has a glittering appearance, as if there had been fire in it ; and the author of the Dissertation in Harris's Voyages, supposes it to be the opal.

Blest ALLA ! who shall save her now ?
 There's not in all that warrior band
 One Arab sword, one turban'd brow 242
 From her own Faithful Moslem land.
 Their garb—the leathern belt² that wraps

Each yellow vest³—that rebel hue—
 The Tartar fleece upon their caps—⁴
 Yes—yes—her fears are all too true,
 And Heav'n hath, in this dreadful hour,
 Abandon'd her to HAFED's power ;
 HAFED, the Gheber !—at the thought
 Her very heart's blood chills within ;
 He, whom her soul was hourly taught
 To loathe, as some foul fiend of sin,
 Some minister, whom Hell had sent,
 To spread its blast, where'er he went,
 And fling, as o'er our earth he trod,
 His shadow betwixt man and God !
 And she is now his captive,—thrown
 In his fierce hands, alive, alone ;
 His the' infuriate band she sees, 260
 All infidels—all enemies !

What was the daring hope that then
 Cross'd her like light'ning, as again,
 With boldness that despair had lent,
 She darted through that armed crowd
 A look so searching, so intent,

That ev'n the sternest warrior bow'd
 Abash'd, when he her glances caught,
 As if he guess'd whose form they sought.
 But no—she sees him not—'tis gone.
 The vision that before her shone 271
 Through all the maze of blood and
 storm,

Is fled—'twas but a phantom form—
 One of those passing, rainbow dreams,
 Half light, half shade, which Fancy's
 beams

Paint on the fleeting mists that roll
 In trance or slumber round the soul.

But now the bark, with livelier bound,
 Scales the blue wave—the crew's in motion, 279

The oars are out, and with light sound
 Break the bright mirror of the ocean,
 Scatt'ring its brilliant fragments round.

And now she sees—with horror sees,
Their course is tow'rd that mountain-
hold,—

Those tow'rs, that make her life-blood
freeze,

Where MECCA's godless enemies

Lie, like beleaguer'd scorpions, roll'd

In their last deadly, venomous fold !

Amid the' illumin'd land and flood
Sunless that mighty mountain stood ;
Save where, above its awful head, 291
There shone a flaming cloud, blood-red,
As 'twere the flag of destiny
Hung out to mark where death would be!

Had her bewilder'd mind the pow'r
Of thought in this terrific hour,
She well might marvel where or how Man's foot could scale that mountain's
brow,

Since ne'er had Arab heard or known
Of path but through the glen alone.—
But every thought was lost in fear, 301
When, as their bounding bark drew near
The craggy base, she felt the waves
Hurry them tow'rd those dismal caves,
That from the Deep in windings pass
Beneath that Mount's volcanic mass ;—
And loud a voice on deck commands
To low'r the mast and light the brands!—
Instantly o'er the dashing tide
Within a cavern's mouth they glide, 310
Gloomy as that eternal Porch

Through which departed spirits go :—
Not ev'n the flare of brand and torch
Its flick'ring light could further throw
Than the thick flood that boil'd
below.

Silent they floated—as if each
Sat breathless, and too aw'd for speech
In that dark chasm, where even sound
Seem'd dark,—so sullenly around
The goblin echoes of the cave 320
Mutter'd it o'er the long black wave,
As 'twere some secret of the grave !

But soft—they pause—the current turns
Beneath them from its onward track ;—
Some mighty, unseen barrier spurns
The vexed tide, all foaming, back,
And scarce the oars' redoubled force
Can stem the eddy's whirling force ;
When, hark !—some desp'rate foot has sprung
Among the rocks—the chain is flung—

The oars are up—the grapple clings, 331
And the toss'd bark in moorings swings.
Just then, a day-beam through the shade
Broke tremulous—but, ere the maid
Can see from whence the brightness steals,

Upon her brow she shudd'ring feels
A viewless hand, that promptly ties
A bandage round her burning eyes ;
While the rude litter where she lies,
Uplifted by the warrior throng 340
O'er the steep rocks is borne along.

Blest power of sunshine !—genial Day,
What balm, what life is in thy ray !
To feel thee is such real bliss,
That had the world no joy but this,
To sit in sunshine calm and sweet,—
It were a world too exquisite

For man to leave it for the gloom,
The deep, cold shadow of the tomb. 349
Ev'n HINDA, though she saw not where
Or whither wound the perilous road,

Yet knew by that awak'ning air,
Which suddenly around her glow'd,
That they had ris'n from darkness then,
And breath'd the sunny world again !
But soon this balmy freshness fled—
For now the steepy labyrinth led Through damp and gloom—'mid crash of boughs,

And fall of loosen'd crags that rouse
The leopard from his hungry sleep, 360
Who, starting, thinks each crag a prey,
And long is heard, from steep to steep,
Chasing them down their thund'ring
way !

The jackal's cry—the distant moan
Of the hyaena, fierce and lone—
And that eternal sadd'ning sound
Of torrents in the glen beneath,
As 'twere the ever-dark Profound
That rolls beneath the Bridge of
Death !

All, all is fearful—ev'n to see, 370
To gaze on those terrific things
She now but blindly hears, would be
Relief to her imaginings ;
Since never yet was shape so dread,
But Fancy, thus in darkness thrown,
And by such sounds of horror fed,
Could frame more dreadful of her own.

But does she dream ? has Fear again
Perplex'd the workings of her brain,

Or did a voice, all music, then 380
Come from the gloom, low whisp'ring
near—

'Tremble not, love, thy Gheber's here ?'
She does not dream—all sense, all ear,
She drinks the words, 'Thy Gheber's
here.'

'Twas his own voice—she could not err—
Throughout the breathing world's extent

There was but one such voice for her,
So kind, so soft, so eloquent !
Oh, sooner shall the rose of May Mistake her own sweet nightingale,
And to some meaner minstrel's lay 391
Open her bosom's glowing veil,¹
Than Love shall ever doubt a tone,
A breath of the beloved one !

Though blest, 'mid all her ills, to think
She has that one beloved near,
Whose smile, though met on ruin's brink,
Hath power to make even ruin dear,—
Yet soon this gleam of rapture, crost
By fears for him, is chill'd and lost. 400
How shall the ruthless HAFED brook
That one of Gheber blood should look,
With aught but curses in his eye,
On her a maid of ARABY—

A Moslem maid—the child of him,
Whose bloody banner's dire success
Hath left their altars cold and dim,
And their fair land a wilderness !
And, worse than all, that night of blood
Which comes so fast—Oh ! who shall stay 410

The sword, that once hath tasted food
Of Persian hearts, or turn its way ?

What arm shall then the victim cover,
Or from her father shield her lover ?

'Save him, my God !' she inly cries—
'Save him this night—and if thine eyes
Have ever welcom'd with delight
The sinner's tears, the sacrifice
Of sinners' hearts—guard him this
night,

And here, before thy throne, I swear 420
From my heart's inmost core to tear
Love, hope, remembrance, though they be

Link'd with each quiv'ring life-string
there,

And give it bleeding all to Thee !
Let him but live,—the burning tear,
The sighs, so sinful, yet so dear,
Which have been all too much his own,
Shall from this hour be Heaven's alone.
Youth pass'd in penitence, and age
In long and painful pilgrimage, 430
Shall leave no traces of the flame
That wastes me now—nor shall his name

Ere bless my lips, but when I pray
For his dear spirit, that away
Casting from its angelic ray
The' cclipse of earth, he, too, may shine
Redeem'd, all glorious and all Thine !
Think—think what victory to win
One radiant soul like his from sin,—
One wand'ring star of virtue back 440
To its own native, heaven-ward track !
Let him but live, and both are Thine,
Together thine—for, blest or crost,

Living or dead, his doom is mine,
And, if he perish, both are lost !'

THE next evening LALLA ROOKH was entreated by her Ladies to continue the relation of her wonderful dream ; but the fearful interest that hung round the fate of HINDA and her lover had completely removed every trace of it from her mind ;—much to the disappointment of a fair seer or two in her train, who prided themselves on their skill in interpreting visions, and who had already remarked, as an unlucky omen, that the Princess, on the very morning after the dream, had worn a silk dyed with the blossoms of the sorrowful tree, Nilica.²

FADLADEEN, whose indignation had more than once broken out during the recital of some parts of this heterodox poem, seemed at length to have made up his mind to the infliction ; and took his seat this evening with all the patience of a martyr, while the Poet resumed his profane and seditious story as follows :—

To tearless eyes and hearts at ease
The leafy shores and sun-bright seas,
That lay beneath that mountain's height,

Had been a fair enchanting sight.
'Twas one of those ambrosial eves
A day of storm so often leaves
At its calm setting—when the West
Opens her golden bowers of rest,
And a moist radiance from the skies
Shoots trembling down, as from the
eyes 10

Of some meek penitent, whose last,
Bright hours atone for dark ones past,
And whose sweet tears, o'er wrong for-
giv'n,
Shine, as they fall, with light from
heav'n !

'Twas stillness all—the winds that late
Had rush'd through KERMÁN'S salmond
groves,

And shaken from her bow'rs of date
That cooling feast the traveller loves,¹
Now, lull'd to languor, scarcely curl
The Green Sea wave, whose waters gleam 20

Limpid, as if her mines of pearl
Were melted all to form the stream :
And her fair islets, small and bright,
With their green shores reflected
there,
Look like those PERI isles of light,
That hang by spell-work in the air.

But vainly did those glories burst
On HINDA'S dazzled eyes, when first
The bandage from her brow was taken,
And, pale and aw'd as those who waken
In their dark tombs—when, scowling
near, 31
The Searchers of the Grave² appear,—
She shudd'ring turn'd to read her fate
In the fierce eyes that flash'd around ;
And saw those towers all desolate,
That o'er her head terrific frown'd,

As if defying ev'n the smile
Of that soft heav'n to gild their pile.
In vain with mingled hope and fear,
She looks for him whose voice so dear 40
Had come, like music, to her ear—
Strange, mocking dream ! again 'tis fled.
And oh, the shoots, the pangs of dread

That through her inmost bosom run,
When voices from without proclaim
'HAFED, the Chief'—and, one by one,
The warriors shout that fearful name !

Hecomes—therock resounds his tread—
How shall she dare to lift her head,
Or meet those eyes whose scorching glare
Not YEMEN'S boldest sons can bear ? 51
In whose red beam, the Moslem tells,
Such rank and deadly lustre dwells,
As in those hellish fires that light
The mandrake's charnel leaves at night.
How shall she bear that voice's tone,
At whose loud battle-cry alone
Whole squadrons oft in panic ran,
Scatter'd like some vast caravan,
When, stretch'd at evening round the
well, 60
They hear the thirsting tiger's yell.

Breathless she stands, with eyes cast
down,
Shrinking beneath the fiery frown,
Which, fancy tells her, from that brow
Is flashing o'er her fiercely now :
And shudd'ring as she hears the tread
Of his retiring warrior band.—

Never was pause so full of dread ;
Till HAFED with a trembling hand
Took hers, and, leaning o'er her, said, 70
'HINDA ;'—that word was all he spoke,
And 'twas enough—the shriek that broke
From her full bosom, told the rest.—

Panting with terror, joy, surprise,
The maid but lifts her wond'ring eyes,
To hide them on her Gheber's breast !
'Tis he, 'tis he—the man of blood,
The fellest of the Fire-fiend's brood,

Grave' in the 'Creed of the orthodox Mahometans' given by Ockley, vol. ii.

³ 'The Arabians call the mandrake 'the Devil's candle,' on account of its shining appearance in the night.'—Richardson.

HAFED, the demon of the fight,
Whose voice unnerves, whose glances
blight,— 80

Is her own loved Gheber, mild
And glorious as when first he smil'd
In her lone tow'r, and left such beams
Of his pure eye to light her dreams,
That she believ'd her bower had giv'n
Rest to some wanderer from heav'n !

Moments there are, and this was one
Snatch'd like a minute's gleam of sun
Amid the black Simoom's eclipse—

Or, like those verdant spots that bloom 90

Around the crater's burning lips,
Sweet'ning the very edge of doom !
The past—the future—all that Fate
Can bring of dark or desperate
Around such hours, but makes them cast
Intenser radiance while they last !

Ev'n he, this youth—though dimm'd and gone

Each star of Hope that cheer'd him on—
His glories lost—his cause betray'd—
IRAN, his dear-lov'd country, made 100
A land of carcasses and slaves,
Onedreary waste of chains and graves!—
Himself but ling'ring, dead at heart,

To see the last, long struggling breath
Of Liberty's great soul depart,
Then lay him down and share her
death—

Ev'n he, so sunk in wretchedness,
With doom still darker gath'ring o'er
him,

Yet, in this moment's pure caress,
In the mild eyes that shone before him,
Beaming that blest assurance, worth 111
All other transports known on earth,
That he was lov'd—well, warmly lov'd—
Oh ! in this precious hour he prov'd
How deep, how thorough—felt the glow
Of rapture, kindling out of woe ;—
How exquisite one single drop
Of bliss, thus sparkling to the top
Of mis'ry's cup—how keenly quaff'd,
Though death must follow on the draught ! 120

She, too, while gazing on those eyes
That sink into her soul so deep,
Forgets all fears, all miseries,
Or feels them like the wretch in sleep.

Whom fancy cheats into a smile,
Who dreams of joy, and sobs the while !
The mighty Ruins where they stood,

Upon the mount's high, rocky verge,
Lay open tow'rds the ocean flood,

Where lightly o'er the illumin'd surge
Many a fair bark that, all the day, 131
Had lurk'd in shelt'ring creek or bay,
Now bounded on, and gave their sails,
Yet dripping, to the ev'ning gales ;
Like eagles, when the storm is done,
Spreading their wet wings in the sun.
The beauteous clouds, though daylight
Star

Had sunk behind the hills of LAR,
Were still with ling'ring glories bright,—
As if, to grace the gorgeous West, 140
The Spirit of departing Light
That eve had left his sunny vest

Behind him, ere he wing'd his flight.
Never was scene so form'd for love !
Beneath them waves of crystal move
In silent swell—Heav'n glows above,
And their pure hearts, to transport giv'n
Swell like the wave, and glow like
Heav'n.

But ah ! too soon that dream is past—
Again, again her fear returns ;— 150
Night, dreadful night, is gath'ring fast,
More faintly the horizon burns,
And every rosy tint that lay
On the smooth sea hath died away.
Hastily to the dark'ning skies
A glance she casts—then wildly cries
'At night, he said—and, look, 'tis
near—

Fly fly,—if yet thou lov'st me, fly—
Soon will his murder'ous hand be here,
And I shall see thee bleed and die.—
Hush ! heard'st thou not the tramp of
men 161

Sounding from yonder fearful glen ?—
Perhaps ev'n now they climb the wood—Fly, fly—though still the West is
bright,

He'll come—oh ! yes—he wants thy blood—

I know him—he'll not wait for night !'

In terrors ev'n to agony
She clings around the wond'ring
Chief ;—

'Alas, poor wilder'd maid ! to me
Thou ow'st this raving trance of grief.

Lost as I am, nought ever grew 171
 Beneath my shade but perish'd too—
 My doom is like the Dead Sea air,
 And nothing lives that enters there!
 Why were our barks together driv'n
 Beneath this morning's furious heav'n?
 Why, when I saw the prize that chance
 Had thrown into my desp'rate arms,—
 When, casting but a single glance
 Upon thy pale and prostrate charms,
 I vow'd (though watching viewless o'er Thy safety through that hour's alarms) 182
 To meet the unmann'd sight no more—
 Why have I broke that heart-wrung
 vow?
 Why weakly, madly met thee now?—
 Start not—that noise is but the shock
 Of torrents through yon valley
 hurl'd—
 Dread nothing here—upon this rock
 We stand above the jarring world,
 Alike beyond its hope—its dread— 190
 In gloomy safety, like the Dead!
 Or, could ev'n earth and hell unite
 In league to storm this Sacred Height,
 Fear nothing thou—myself, to-night,
 And each o'erlooking star that dwells
 Near God will be thy sentinels;—
 And, ere to-morrow's dawn shall glow,
 Back to thy sire—
 'To-morrow!—no—'
 The maiden scream'd—'thou'lt never
 see
 To-morrow's sun—death, death will be
 The night-cry through each reeking tower, 201
 Unless we fly, ay, fly this hour!
 Thou art betray'd—some wretch who knew
 That dreadful glen's mysterious clew—
 Nay, doubt not—by yon stars, 'tis true—
 Hath sold thee to my vengeful sire;
 This morning, with that smile so dire
 He wears in joy, he told me all,
 And stamp'd in triumph through our
 hall,
 As though thy heart already beat 210
 Its last life-throb beneath his feet!
 Good Heav'n, how little dream'd I then
 His victim was my own lov'd youth!—
 Fly—send—let some one watch the glen—
 By all my hopes of heav'n 'tis truth!

Oh! colder than the wind that freezes
 Founts, that but now in sunshine
 play'd,
 Is that congealing pang which seizes
 The trusting bosom, when betray'd.
 He felt it—deeply felt—and stood, 220
 As if the tale had froz'n his blood,
 So maz'd and motionless was he;—
 Like one whom sudden spells enchant,
 Or some mute, marble habitant
 Of the still Halls of ISHMONIE!¹

But soon the painful chill was o'er,
 And his great soul, herself once more,
 Look'd from his brow in all the rays
 Of her best, happiest, grandest days.
 Never, in moment most elate, 230
 Did that high spirit loftier rise;—
 While bright, serene, determinate,
 His looks are lifted to the skies,
 As if the signal lights of Fate
 Were shining in those awful eyes
 'Tis come—his hour of martyrdom
 In IRAN's sacred cause is come;
 And, though his life hath pass'd away,
 Like lightning on a stormy day,
 Yet shall his death-hour leave a track
 Of glory, permanent and bright, 241
 To which the brave of after-times,
 The suffering brave, shall long look back
 With proud regret,—and by its light
 Watch through the hours of slav'ry's
 night
 For vengeance on the oppressor's crimes.
 This rock, his monument aloft,
 Shall speak the tale to many an age;
 And hither bards and heroes oft
 Shall come in secret pilgrimage, 250
 And bring their warrior sons, and tell
 The wond'ring boys where HAFED fell;
 And swear them on those lone remains
 Of their lost country's ancient fanes,
 Never—while breath of life shall live
 Within them—never to forgive
 The accursed race, whose ruthless chain
 Hath left on IRAN's neck a stain
 Blood, blood alone can cleanse again!

Such are the swelling thoughts that now
 Enthroned themselves on HAFED's brow;

¹ For an account of Ishmonie, the petrified city in Upper Egypt, where it is said there are many statues of men, women, &c. to be seen to this day, see Perry's View of the Levant.

And ne'er did Saint of Issa¹ gaze 262
On the red wreath, for martyrs twin'd,
More proudly than the youth surveys
That pile, which through the gloom
behind,

Half lighted by the altar's fire,
Glimmers—his destin'd funeral pyre
Heap'd by his own, his comrades' hands,
Of ev'ry wood of odorous breath,
There, by the Fire-God's shrine it stands, 270

Ready to fold in radiant death
The few still left of those who swore
To perish there, when hope was o'er—
The few, to whom that couch of flame,
Which rescues them from bonds and
shame,

Is sweet and welcome as the bed
For their own infant Prophet spread,
When pitying Heav'n to roses turn'd
The death-flames that beneath him
burn'd!²

With watchfulness the maid attends 280
His rapid glance, where'er it bends—
Why shoot his eyes such awful beams?
What plans he now? what thinks or
dreams?

Alas! why stands he musing here,
When ev'ry moment teems with fear?
'HAFED, my own beloved Lord,'
She kneeling cries—'first, last ador'd!
If in that soul thou'st ever felt

Half what thy lips impassion'd swore,
Here, on my knees that never knelt 290
To any but their God before,

I pray thee, as thou lov'st me, fly—
Now, now—ere yet their blades are nigh.
Oh haste—the bark that bore me hither
Can waft us o'er yon dark'ning sea,
East—west—alas, I care not whither,
So thou art safe, and I with thee!

Go where we will, this hand in thine,
Those eyes before me smiling thus,
Through good and ill, through storm and
shine, 300

The world's a world of love for us!

¹ Jesus.

² The Ghebers say that when Abraham, their great Prophet, was thrown into the fire by order of Nimrod, the flame turned instantly into 'a bed of roses, where the child sweetly reposed.'—Tavernier.

Of their other Prophet, Zoroaster, there is a story told in Dion Prusæus, Orat. 36, that

On some calm, blessed shore we'll dwell,
Where 'tis no crime to love too well;—
Where thus to worship tenderly
An erring child of light like thee
Will not be sin—or, if it be,
Where we may weep our faults away,
Together kneeling, night and day,
Thou, for my sake, at ALLA's shrine,
And I—at any God's, for thine! 310

Wildly these passionate words she spoke—
Then hung her head, and wept for
shame;
Sobbing, as if a heart-string broke
With every deep-heav'd sob that came.

While he, young, warm—oh! wond'ring
If, for a moment, pride and fame,
His oath—his cause—that shrine of
flame,

And IRAN's self are all forgot
For her whom at his feet he sees
Kneeling in speechless agonies. 320

No, blame him not, if Hope awhile
Dawn'd in his soul, and threw her smile
O'er hours to come—o'er days and nights,
Wing'd with those precious, pure delights
Which she, who bends all beauteous
there,

Was born to kindle and to share.
A tear or two, which, as he bow'd
T'raise the suppliant, trembling stole,
First warn'd him of this dang'rous cloud

Of softness passing o'er his soul. 330
Starting, he brush'd the drops away,
Unworthy o'er that cheek to stray;—
Like one who, on the morn of fight,
Shakes from his sword the dew of night,
That had but dimm'd, not stain'd its
light.

Yet, though subdued the' unnerving
thrill,

Its warmth, its weakness, linger'd still
So touching in its look and tone,
That the fond, fearing, hoping maid
Half counted on the flight she pray'd,
Half thought the hero's soul was grown
As soft, as yielding as her own, 342

the love of wisdom and virtue leading him to a solitary life upon a mountain, he found it one day all in a flame, shining with celestial fire, out of which he came without any harm, and instituted certain sacrifices to God, who, he declared, then appeared to him.—Vide Patrick on Exod. iii. 2.

And smil'd and bless'd him, while he said,—

'Yes—if there be some happier sphere,
Where fadeless truth like ours is dear,—
If there be any land of rest

For those who love and ne'er forget,
Oh! comfort thee—for safe and blest
We'll meet in that calm region yet!'

Scarce had she time to ask her heart 350
If good or ill these words impart,
When the rous'd youth impatient flew
To the tow'r-wall, where, high in view,
A pond'rous sea-horn¹ hung, and blew
A signal, deep and dread as those
The storm-fiend at his rising blows.—
Full well his Chieftains, sworn and true
Through life and death, that signal
knew;

For 'twas the appointed warning blast,
The alarm, to tell when hope was past,
And the tremendous death-die cast! 361
And there, upon the mould'ring tow'r,
Hath hung this sea-horn many an hour,
Ready to sound o'er land and sea
That dirge-note of the brave and free.

They came—his Chieftains at the call
Came slowly round, and with them all—
Alas, how few!—the worn remains
Of those who late o'er KERMAN's plains
Went gaily prancing to the clash 370

Of Moorish zel and tymbalon,
Catching new hope from every flash
Of their long lances in the sun,
And, as their couriers charg'd the wind,
And the white ox-tails stream'd behind,²
Looking, as if the steeds they rode
Were wing'd, and every Chief a God!
How fall'n, how alter'd now! how wan
Each scarr'd and faded visage shone
Around the burningshrine they came;—

How deadlly was the glare it cast, 381
As mute they paus'd before the flame

To light their torches as they pass'd!
'Twas silence all—the youth hath plann'd
The duties of his soldier-band;
And each determin'd brow declares
His faithful Chieftains well know theirs.

² 'The finest ornament for the horses is made

But minutes speed—night gems the skies—

And oh, how soon, ye blessed eyes, 389
That look from heaven, ye may behold
Sights that will turn your star-fires cold!
Breathless with awe, impatience, hope,
The maiden sees the veteran group
Her litter silently prepare,

And lay it at her trembling feet;—
And now the youth, with gentle care,
Hath plac'd her in the shelter'd seat,
And press'd her hand—that ling'ring
press

Of hands, that for the last time sever;
Of hearts, whose pulse of happiness, 400
When that hold breaks, is dead for ever.

And yet to her this sad caress
Gives hope—so fondly hope can err!
'Twas joy, she thought, joy's mute excess—

Their happy flight's dear harbinger;
'Twas warmth—assurance—tender-
ness—

'Twas any thing but leaving her.

'Haste, haste!' she cried, 'the clouds
grow dark,

But still, ere night, we'll reach the bark;
And by to-morrow's dawn—oh bliss! 410

With thee upon the sun-bright deep,
Far off, I'll but remember this,

As some dark vanish'd dream of sleep;
And thou——' but ah!—he answers
not—

Good Heav'n!—and does she go alone?
She now has reach'd that dismal spot,
Where, some hours since, his voice's
tone

Had come to soothe her fears and ills,
Sweet as the angel ISRAFIL'S,³

When every leaf on Eden's tree 420
Is trembling to his minstrelsy—

Yet now—oh, now, he is not nigh.—

'HAFED! my HAFED!—if it be

Thy will, thy doom this night to die,

Let me but stay to die with thee,

And I will bless thy loved name,

Till the last life-breath leave this frame.

of six large flying tassels of long white hair, taken out of the tails of wild oxen, that are to be found in some places of the Indies.'—Thevenot.

³ 'The angel Israfil, who has the most melodious voice of all God's creatures.'—Sale.

Oh ! let our lips, our cheeks be laid
But near each other while they fade :
Let us but mix our parting breaths, 430
And I can die ten thousand deaths !
You too, who hurry me away
So cruelly, one moment stay—

Oh ! stay—one moment is not much—
He yet may come—for him I pray—
HAFED ! dear HAFED ! '—all the way

In wild lamentings, that would touch
A heart of stone, she shriek'd his name
To the dark woods—no HAFED came :— No—hapless pair—you've look'd your
last :— 440

Your hearts should both have broken
then :

The dream is o'er—your doom is cast—
You'll never meet on earth again !

Alas for him, who hears her cries !

Still half-way down the steep he stands,
Watching with fix'd and feverish eyes
The glimmer of those burning brands,
That down the rocks, with mournful ray,
Light all he loves on earth away !

Hopeless as they who, far at sea, 450
By the cold moon have just consign'd
The corpse of one, lov'd tenderly,

To the bleak flood they leave behind ;
And on the deck still ling'ring stay,
And long look back, with sad delay,
To watch the moonlight on the wave,
That ripples o'er that cheerless grave.

But see—he starts—what heard he
then ? 458

That dreadful shout !—across the glen
From the land-side it comes, and loud
Rings through the chasm ; as if the crowd
Of fearful things, that haunt that dell,
Its Gholes and Dives and shapes of hell,
Had all in one dread howl broke out,
So loud, so terrible that shout !

' They come—the Moslems come ! '—he
cries,

His proud soul mounting to his eyes,—
' Now, Spirits of the Brave, who roam
Enfranchis'd through yon starry dome,
Rejoice—for souls of kindred fire 470
Are on the wing to join your choir ! '—
He said—and, light as bridegrooms bound

To their young loves, reclin'd the steep
And gain'd the Shrine—his Chiefs stood
round—

Their swords, as with instinctive leap,

Together, at that cry accurst,
Had from their sheaths, like sunbeams,
burst.

And hark !—again—again it rings ;
Near and more near its echoings
Peal through the chasm—oh ! who that
then

Had seen those list'ning warrior-men, 480
With their swords grasp'd, their eyes of
flame

Turn'd on their Chief—could doubt the
shame,

The' indignant shame with which they
thrill

To hear those shouts, and yet stand still ?

He read their thoughts—they were his
own—

' What ! while our arms can wield
these blades,

Shall we die tamely ? die alone ?

Without one victim to our shades,
One Moslem heart, where, buried deep,
The sabre from its toil may sleep ? 491
No—God of IRAN's burning skies !

Thou scorn'st the' inglorious sacrifice.
No—though of all earth's hope bereft,
Life, swords, and vengeance still are left.

We'll make yon valley's reeking caves
Live in the awe-struck minds of men,
Till tyrants shudder, when their slaves

Tell of the Gheber's bloody glen.
Follow, brave hearts !—this pile remains

Our refuge still from life and chains ;
But his the best, the holiest bed, 502
Who sinks entomb'd in Moslem dead !'

Down the precipitous rocks they sprung,
While vigour, more than human, strung
Each arm and heart.—The' exulting foe
Still through the dark defiles below,
Track'd by his torches' lurid fire,

Wound slow, as through GOLCONDA's
vale¹

The mighty serpent, in his ire, 510
Glides on with glitt'ring, deadly trail,

No torch the Ghebers need—so well
They know each myst'ry of the dell,
So oft have, in their wanderings,
Cross'd the wild race that round them
dwell,

The very tigers from their delves
Look out, and let them pass, as things
Untam'd and fearless like themselves !

¹ See Hoole upon the Story of Sinbad.

There was a deep ravine, that lay
Yet darkling in the Moslem's way; 520
Fit spot to make invaders rue
The many fall'n before the few.
The torrents from that morning's sky
Had fill'd the narrow chasm breast-high,
And, on each side, aloft and wild,
Huge cliffs and toppling crags were pil'd,—

The guards with which young Freedom
lines

The pathways to her mountain-shrines.
Here, at this pass, the scanty band
Of IRAN's last avengers stand; 530
Here wait, in silence like the dead,
And listen for the Moslem's tread
So anxiously, the carrion-bird
Above them flaps his wing unheard !

They come—that plunge into the water
Gives signal for the work of slaughter.
Now, Ghebers, now—if e'er your blades
Had point or prowess, prove them
now—

Woe to the file that foremost wades !
They come—a falchion greets each
brow, 540

And, as they tumble, trunk on trunk,
Beneath the gory waters sunk,
Still o'er their drowning bodies press
New victims quick and numberless ;
Till scarce an arm in HAFED's band,

So fierce their toil, hath power to stir,
But listless from each crimson hand
The sword hangs, clogg'd with massacre.

Never was horde of tyrants met
With bloodier welcome—never yet 550
To patriot vengeance hath the sword
More terrible libations pour'd !

All up the dreary, long ravine,
By the red, murky glimmer seen
Of half-quenched brands, that o'er the flood

Lie scatter'd round and burn in blood,
What ruin glares ! what carnage swims !
Heads, blazing turbans, quiv'ring limbs,
Lost swords that, dropp'd from many
a hand,

In that thick pool of slaughter stand ;—

¹ 'In this thicket upon the banks of the Jordan several sorts of wild beasts are wont to harbour themselves, whose being washed out of the covert by the overflowings of the river,

Wretches who wading, half on fire 561
From the toss'd brands that round
them fly,

'Twixt flood and flame in shrieks expire ;—

And some who, grasp'd by those that
die,

Sink woundless with them, smother'd
o'er

In their dead brethren's gushing gore !

But vainly hundreds, thousands bleed,
Still hundreds, thousands more succeed ;
Countless tow'rs some flame at night
The North's dark insects wing their flight, 570

And quench or perish in its light,
To this terrific spot they pour—

Till, bridg'd with Moslem bodies o'er,
It bears aloft their slipp'ry tread,
And o'er the dying and the dead,

Tremendous causeway ! on they pass.—
Then, hapless Ghebers, then, alas,

What hope was left for you ? for you,
Whose yet warm pile of sacrifice

Is smoking in their vengeful eyes ;— 580
Whose swords how keen, how fierce they knew,

And burn with shame to find how few ?

Crush'd down by that vast multitude,
Some found their graves where first they
stood ;

While some with hardier struggle died,
And still fought on by HAFED's side,

Who, fronting to the foe, trod back
Tow'rs the high towers his gory track ;

And, as a lion swept away
By sudden swell of JORDAN's pride

From the wild covert where he lay,¹ 591
Long battles with the o'erwhelming
tide,

So fought he back with fierce delay,
And kept both foes and fate at bay.

But whither now ? their track is lost,
Their prey escap'd—guide, torches
gone—

By torrent-beds and labyrinths crost,
The scatter'd crowd rush blindly on—

'Curse on those tardy lights that wind,'
They panting cry, 'so far behind ; 600

gave occasion to that allusion of Jeremiah, he shall come up like a lion from the swelling of Jordan.—Maunder's Aleppo.

Oh for a bloodhound's precious scent,
To track the way the Gheber went !
Vain wish—confusedly along
They rush, more desp'rate as more
wrong :

Till, wilder'd by the far-off lights,
Yet glitt'ring up those gloomy heights,
Their footing, maz'd and lost, they miss,
And down the darkling precipice
Are dash'd into the deep abyss ;
Or midway hang, impal'd on rocks, 610
A banquet, yet alive, for flocks
Of rav'ning vultures,—while the dell
Re-echoes with each horrible yell.

Those sounds—the last, to vengeance
dear,

That e'er shall ring in HAFED's ear,—
Now reach'd him, as aloft, alone,
Upon the steep way breathless thrown,
He lay beside his reeking blade,

Resign'd, as if life's task were o'er,
Its last blood-offering amply paid, 620
And IRAN's self could claim no more.

One only thought, one ling'ring beam
Now broke across his dizzy dream
Of pain and weariness—'twas she,

His heart's pure planet, shining yet
Above the waste of memory,

When all life's other lights were set.
And never to his mind before
Her image such enchantment wore.

It seem'd as if each thought that stain'd,
Each fear that chill'd their loves was
past, 631

And not one cloud of earth remain'd
Between him and her radiance cast ;—
As if to charms, before so bright,

New grace from other worlds was
giv'n,

And his soul saw her by the light

Now breaking o'er itself from heav'n !
A voice spoke near him—'twas the tone
Of a lov'd friend, the only one
Of all his warriors, left with life 640
From that short night's tremendous strife.—

' And must we then, my Chief, die here ?
Foes round us, and the Shrine so near !'
These words have rous'd the last remains

Of life within him—' what ! not yet
Beyond the reach of Moslem chains !'

The thought could make ev'n Death
forget

His icy bondage—with a bound
He springs, all bleeding, from the ground,
And grasps his comrade's arm, now grown 650

Ev'n feebler, heavier than his own,
And up the painful pathway leads,
Death gaining on each step he treads.
Speed them, thou God, who heards't their vow !

They mount—they bleed—oh save them
now—

The crags are red they've clamber'd
o'er,

The rock-weed's dripping with their
gore ;—

Thy blade too, HAFED, false at length,
Now breaks beneath thy tott'ring
strength !

Haste, haste—the voices of the Foe 660
Come near and nearer from below—

One effort more—thank Heav'n ! 'tis
past,

They've gain'd the topmost steep at last,
And now they touch the temple's walls,

Now HAFED sees the Fire divine—
When, lo !—his weak, worn comrade falls

Dead on the threshold of the shrine.

' Alas, brave soul, too quickly fled !

And must I leave thee with'ring here,
The sport of every ruffian's tread, 670

The mark for every coward's spear ?
No, by yon altar's sacred beams !'

He cries, and, with a strength that seems
Not of this world, uplifts the frame
Of the fall'n Chief, and tow'rd's the flame
Bears him along ;—with death-damp
hand

The corpse upon the pyre he lays,
Then lights the consecrated brand,

And fires the pile, whose sudden blaze
Like lightning bursts o'er OMAN'S Sea.—

' Now, Freedom's God ! I come to Thee,'
The youth exclaims, and with a smile

Of triumph vaulting on the pile, 683
In that last effort, ere the fires

Have harm'd one glorious limb, expires !

What shriek was that on OMAN's tide ?

It came from yonder drifting bark,
That just hath caught upon her side

The death-light—and again is dark.
It is the boat—ah, why delay'd ?— 690

That bears the wretched Moslem maid ;

Confided to the watchful care
Of a small veteran band, with whom
Their gen'rous Chieftain would not share

The secret of his final doom,
But hop'd when HINDA, safe and
free,

Was render'd to her father's eyes,
Their pardon, full and prompt, would be
The ransom of so dear a prize.—

Unconscious, thus, of HAFED's fate, 700
And proud to guard their beauteous
freight,

Scarce had they clear'd the surfy waves
That foam around those frightful caves,
When the curst war-whoops, known so
well,

Came echoing from the distant dell—
Sudden each ear, upheld and still,
Hung dripping o'er the vessel's side,
And, driving at the current's will,

They rock'd along the whisp'ring tide;
While every eye, in mute dismay, 710
Wastow'rd that fatal mountain turn'd,
When the dim altar's quiv'ring ray

As yet all lone and tranquil burn'd.

Oh! 'tis not HINDA, in the pow'r
Of Fancy's most terrific touch
To paint thy pangs in that dread hour—
Thy silent agony—'twas such

As those who feel could paint too well,
But none e'er felt and liv'd to tell!
'Twas not alone the dreary state 720

Of a lorn spirit, crush'd by fate,
When, though no more remains to dread,
The panic chill will not depart;—

When, though the inmate Hope be dead,
Her ghost still haunts the mould'ring
heart;

No—pleasures, hopes, affections gone,
The wretch may bear, and yet live on,
Like things, within the cold rock found
Alive, when all's congeal'd around.

But there's a blank repose in this, 730
A calm stagnation, that were bliss
To the keen, burning, harrowing pain,
Now felt through all thy breast and brain;—

That spasm of terror, mute, intense,
That breathless, agonis'd suspense,
From whose hot throb, whose deadly aching,

The heart hath no relief but breaking!

Calm is the wave—heav'n's brilliant lights

Reflected dance beneath the prow;—
Time was when, on such lovely nights,

She who is there, so desolate now, 741
Could sit all cheerful, though alone,

And ask no happier joy than seeing
That star-light o'er the waters thrown—

No joy but that, to make her blest,
And the fresh, buoyant sense of Being,

Which bounds in youth's yet careless
breast,—

Itself a star, not borrowing light,
But in its own glad essence bright. 749

How different now!—but, hark, again
The yell of havoc rings—brave men!

In vain, with beating hearts, ye stand
On the bark's edge—in vain each hand

Half draws the falchion from its sheath;

All's o'er—in rust your blades may
lie:—

He, at whose word they've scatter'd
death,

Ev'n now, this night, himself must
die!

Well may ye look to yon dim tower,
And ask, and wond'ring guess what means

The battle-cry at this dead hour— 760
Ah! she could tell you—she, who leans

Unheeded there, pale, sunk, aghast,
With brow against the dew-cold mast;—

Too well she knows—her more than life,

Her soul's first idol and its last,
Lies bleeding in that murd'rous strife.

But see—what moves upon the height?
Some signal!—'tis a torch's light.

What bodes its solitary glare?
In gasping silence tow'rd the Shrine 770

All eyes are turn'd—thine, HINDA, thine
Fix their last fading life-beams there.

'Twas but a moment—fierce and high
The death-pile blaz'd into the sky,

And far away, o'er rock and flood
Its melancholy radiance sent;

While HAFED, like a vision stood
Reveal'd before the burning pyre,

Tall, shadowy, like a Spirit of Fire
Shrin'd in its own grand element! 780

'Tis he!'—the shudd'ring maid ex-claims,— But, while she speaks, he's seen no more; High burst in air the funeral flames, And IRAN's hopes and hers are o'er!	One wild, heart-broken shriek she gave; Then sprung, as if to reach that blaze, Where still she fix'd her dying gaze, And, gazing, sunk into the wave,— Deep, deep,—where never care or pain Shall reach her innocent heart again!
---	--

Farewell—farewell to thee, ARABY's daughter!
 (Thus warbled a PERR beneath the dark sea,)
 No pearl ever lay, under OMAN's green water,
 More pure in its shell than thy Spirit in thee.

Oh! fair as the sea-flower close to thee growing,
 How light was thy heart till Love's witchery came,
 Like the wind of the south¹ o'er a summer lute blowing,
 And hush'd all its music, and wither'd its frame!

But long, upon ARABY's green sunny highlands,
 Shall maids and their lovers remember the doom 800
 Of her, who lies sleeping among the Pearl Islands,
 With nought but the sea-star² to light up her tomb.

And still, when the merry date-season is burning,³
 And calls to the palm-groves the young and the old,
 The happiest there, from their pastime returning
 At sunset, will weep when thy story is told.

The young village-maid, when with flow'rs she dresses
 Her dark flowing hair for some festival day,
 Will think of thy fate till, neglecting her tresses,
 She mournfully turns from the mirror away. 810

Nor shall IRAN, belov'd of her Hero! forget thee—
 Though tyrants watch over her tears as they start,
 Close, close by the side of that Hero she'll set thee,
 Embalm'd in the innermost shrine of her heart.

Farewell—be it ours to embellish thy pillow
 With ev'ry thing beauteous that grows in the deep;
 Each flow'r of the rock and each gem of the billow
 Shall sweeten thy bed and illumine thy sleep.

Around thee shall glisten the loveliest amber
 That ever the sorrowing sea-bird has wept;⁴ 820
 With many a shell, in whose hollow-wreath'd chamber,
 We, Peris of Ocean, by moonlight have slept.

We'll dive where the gardens of coral lie darkling,
 And plant all the rosiest stems at thy head ;
 We'll seek where the sands of the Caspian¹ are sparkling,
 And gather their gold to strew over thy bed.

Farewell—farewell—until Pity's sweet fountain
 Is lost in the hearts of the fair and the brave,
 They'll weep for the Chieftain who died on that mountain,
 They'll weep for the Maiden who sleeps in this wave.

THE singular placidity with which FADLADEEN had listened, during the latter part of this obnoxious story, surprised the Princess and FERAMORZ exceedingly ; and even inclined towards him the hearts of these unsuspicious young persons, who little knew the source of a complacency so marvellous. The truth was, he had been organizing, for the last few days, a most notable plan of persecution against the poet, in consequence of some passages that had fallen from him on the second evening of recital,—which appeared to this worthy Chamberlain to contain language and principles, for which nothing short of the summary criticism of the Chabuk² would be advisable. It was his intention, therefore, immediately on their arrival at Cashmere, to give information to the King of Bucharia of the very dangerous sentiments of his minstrel ; and if, unfortunately, that monarch did not act with suitable vigour on the occasion, (that is, if he did not give the Chabuk to FERAMORZ, and a place to FADLADEEN,) there would be an end, he feared, of all legitimate government in Bucharia. He could not help, however, auguring better both for himself and the cause of potentates in general ; and it was the pleasure arising from these mingled anticipations that diffused such unusual satisfaction through his features, and made his eyes shine out like poppies of the desert, over the wide and lifeless wilderness of that countenance.

Having decided upon the Poet's chastisement in this manner, he thought it but humanity to spare him the minor tortures of criticism. Accordingly, when they assembled the following evening in the pavilion, and LALLA ROOKH was expecting to see all the beauties of her bard melt away, one by one, in the acidity of criticism, like pearls in the cup of the Egyptian queen,—he agreeably disappointed her, by merely saying, with an ironical smile, that the merits of such a poem deserved to be tried at a much higher tribunal ; and then suddenly passed off into a panegyric, upon all Mussulman sovereigns, more particularly his august and Imperial master, Aurungzebe,—the wisest and best of the descendants of Timur—who, among other great things he had done for mankind, had given to him, FADLADEEN, the very profitable posts of Betel-carrier, and Taster of Sherbets to the Emperor, Chief Holder of the Girdle of Beautiful Forms,³ and Grand Nazir, or Chamberlain of the Haram.

They were now not far from that Forbidden River,⁴ beyond which no pure Hindoo can pass ; and were reposing for a time in the rich valley of Hussun Abdaul, which had always been a favourite resting-place of the Emperors in their annual migrations to Cashmere. Here often had the Light of the Faith, Jehan-Guire, been known to wander with his beloved and beautiful Nourmahal ; and whose limits it was not thought graceful to exceed. If any of them outgrew this standard of shape, they were reduced by abstinence till they came within proper bounds.

³ Kempfer mentions such an officer among the attendants of the King of Persia, and calls him 'formae corporis estimator.' His business was, at stated periods, to measure the ladies of the Haram by a sort of regulation-girdle,

⁴ The Attock.

here would LALLA ROOKH have been happy to remain for ever, giving up the throne of Bucharia and the world, for FERAMORZ and love in this sweet lonely valley. But the time was now fast approaching when she must see him no longer,—or, what was still worse, behold him with eyes whose every look belonged to another; and there was a melancholy preciousness in these last moments, which made her heart cling to them as it would to life. During the latter part of the journey, indeed, she had sunk into a deep sadness, from which nothing but the presence of the young minstrel could awake her. Like those lamps in tombs, which only light up when the air is admitted, it was only at his approach that her eyes became smiling and animated. But here, in this dear valley, every moment appeared an age of pleasure; she saw him all day, and was, therefore, all day happy,—resembling, she often thought, that people of Zinge,¹ who attribute the unfading cheerfulness they enjoy to one genial star that rises nightly over their heads.²

The whole party, indeed, seemed in their liveliest mood during the few days they passed in this delightful solitude. The young attendants of the Princess, who were here allowed a much freer range than they could safely be indulged with in a less sequestered place, ran wild among the gardens and bounded through the meadows lightly as young roes over the aromatic plains of Tibet. While FADLADEEN, in addition to the spiritual comfort derived by him from a pilgrimage to the tomb of the saint from whom the valley is named, had also opportunities of indulging, in a small way, his taste for victims, by putting to death some hundreds of those unfortunate little lizards,³ which all pious Mussulmans make it a point to kill;—taking for granted, that the manner in which the creature hangs its head is meant as a mimicry of the attitude in which the Faithful say their prayers.

About two miles from Hussun Abdaul were those Royal Gardens,⁴ which had grown beautiful under the care of so many lovely eyes, and were beautiful still, though those eyes could see them no longer. This place, with its flowers and its holy silence, interrupted only by the dipping of the wings of birds in its marble basins filled with the pure water of those hills, was to LALLA ROOKH all that her heart could fancy of fragrance, coolness, and almost heavenly tranquillity. As the Prophet said of Damascus, 'it was too delicious';⁵—and here, in listening to the sweet voice of FERAMORZ, or reading in his eyes what yet he never dared to tell her, the most exquisite moments of her whole life were passed. One evening, when they had been talking of the Sultana Nourmahal, the Light of the Haram,⁶ who had so often wandered among these flowers, and fed with her own hands, in those marble basins, the small shining fishes of which she was so fond,⁷

¹ 'The inhabitants of this country (Zinge) are never afflicted with sadness or melancholy; on this subject the Sheikh Abu-al-Kheir-Azhari has the following distich:—

"Who is the man without care or sorrow, (tell) that I may rub my hand to him.

"(Behold) the Zingians, without care or sorrow, frolicksome with tipsiness and mirth."

"The philosophers have discovered that the cause of this cheerfulness proceeds from the influence of the star Soheil, or Canopus, which rises over them every night."—Extract from a Geographical Persian Manuscript called Hefi Alim, or the Seven Climates, translated by W. Ouseley, Esq.

daul I am indebted to the very interesting Introduction of Mr. Elphinstone's work upon Caubul.

⁵ "As you enter at that Bazar, without the gate of Damascus, you see the Green Mosque, so called because it hath a steeply faced with green glazed bricks, which render it very resplendent; it is covered at top with a pavilion of the same stuff. The Turks say this mosque was made in that place, because Mahomet being come so far, would not enter the town, saying it was too delicious."—Thevenot. This reminds one of the following pretty passage in Isaac Walton:—"When I sat last on this primrose bank, and looked down these meadows, I thought of them as Charles the Emperor did of the city of Florence, "that they were too pleasant to be looked on, but only on holidays."

⁶ Nourmahal signifies Light of the Haram. She was afterwards called Nourjehan, or the Light of the World.

the youth, in order to delay the moment of separation, proposed to recite a short story, or rather rhapsody, of which this adored Sultana was the heroine. It related, he said, to the reconciliation of a sort of lovers' quarrel which took place between her and the Emperor during a Feast of Roses at Cashmere; and would remind the Princess of that difference between Haroun-al-Raschid and his fair mistress Marida,¹ which was so happily made up by the soft strains of the musician, Moussali. As the story was chiefly to be told in song, and FERAMORZ had unluckily forgotten his own lute in the valley, he borrowed the vina of LALLA ROOKH's little Persian slave, and thus began :—

Who has not heard of the Vale of CASH-MERE,

With its roses the brightest that earth
ever gave;²

Its temples, and grottos, and fountains
as clear

As the love-lighted eyes that hang over their wave ?

Oh ! to see it at sunset,—when warm
o'er the Lake

Its splendour at parting a summer eve
throws,

Like a bride, full of blushes, when ling'ring to take

A last look of her mirror at night ere she goes !—

When the shrines through the foliage are gleaming half shown,

And each hallows the hour by some rites
of its own.

Here the music of pray'r from a minaret
swells,

Here the Magian his urn, full of perfume, is swinging,

And here, at the altar, a zone of sweet
bells

Round the waist of some fair Indian dancer is ringing.³

Or to see it by moonlight,—when mellowly shines

The light o'er its palaces, gardens, and
shrines ;

Giafar Barmaki, son favori, qui s'en apperçut, commanda à Abbas ben Ahnaf, excellent poète de ce tems là, de composer quelques vers sur le sujet de cette brouillerie. Ce poète exécuta l'ordre de Giafar, qui fit chanter ces vers par Moussali en présence du Khalife, et ce prince fut tellement touché de la tendresse des vers du poète, et de la douceur de la voix du musicien, qu'il alla aussi-

The Valley holds its Feast of Roses;¹
The joyous Time, when pleasures pour
Profusely round and, in their shower,
Hearts open, like the Season's Rose,—

The Flow'ret of a hundred leaves,²
Expanding while the dew-fall flows,
And every leaf its balm receives.

'Twas when the hour of evening came
Upon the Lake, serene and cool,

When Day had hid his sultry flame 50

Behind the palms of BARAMOULE,³

When maids began to lift their heads,
Refresh'd from their embroider'd beds,

Where they had slept the sun away,
And wak'd to moonlight and to play.

All were abroad—the busiest hives

When saffron beds are full in flow'r,
Than look'd the Valley in that hour.

A thousand restless torches play'd 60

Through every grove and island shade;
A thousand sparkling lamps were set

On every dome and minaret;
And fields and pathways, far and near,

Were lighted by a blaze so clear,
That you could see, in wand'ring round,

The smallest rose-leaf on the ground.
Yet did the maids and matrons leave

Their veils at home, that brilliant eve;
And there were glancing eyes about, 70

And cheeks, that would not dare shine

And fairest fields of all the year,
The mingled spoil were scatter'd here.

The Lake, too, like a garden breathes,
With the rich buds that o'er it lie,—

As if a shower of fairy wreaths
Had fall'n upon it from the sky !

And then the sounds of joy,—the beat
(Of labors and of dancing feet;— 91

The minaret-crier's chaunt of glee
Sung from his lighted gallery,⁶

And answer'd by a ziraleet
From neighbouring Haram, wild and

sweet;—

The merry laughter, echoing
From gardens, where the silken swing⁷

Wafts some delighted girl above
The top leaves of the orange-grove ;

Or, from those infant groups at play
Among the tents ? that line the way,

Flinging, unaw'd by slave or mother,
Handfuls of roses at each other.—

Then, the sounds from the Lake,—the low whisp'ring in boats,

As they shoot through the moonlight ;
—the dipping of oars,

And the wild, airy warbling that ev'ry
where floats,

Through the groves, round the islands,
as if all the shores,

⁶ 'The swing is a favourite pastime in the East, as promoting a circulation of air, extremely refreshing in those sultry climates.'—Richardson.

⁷ 'The swings are adorned with festoons. This pastime is accompanied with music of voices and of instruments, hired by the masters of the swings.'—Thevenot.

⁸ 'At the keeping of the Feast of Roses we beheld an infinite number of tents pitched, with such a crowd of men, women, boys, and girls, with music, dances, &c. &c.—Herbert.

Like those of KATHAY, utter'd music,
and gave
An answer in song to the kiss of each wave.¹
But the gentlest of all are those sounds,
full of feeling, 110
That soft from the lute of some lover are stealing,—
Some lover, who knows all the heart-touching power
Of a lute and a sigh in this magical hour.
Oh! best of delights as it ev'ry where is
To be near the lov'd One,—what a rapture is his Whoin moonlight and music thus sweetly may glide
O'er the Lake of CASHMERE, with that
One by his side!
If woman can make the worst wilderness
dear,
Think, think what a Heav'n she must make of CASHMERE!
So felt the magnificent Son of ACBAR,²
When from pow'r and pomp and the trophies of war 121
He flew to that Valley, forgetting them
all
With the Light of the HARAM, his young
NOURMAHAL.
When free and uncrown'd as the Conqueror rov'd
By the banks of that lake, with his only belov'd,
He saw, in the wreaths she would playfully snatch
From the hedges, a glory his crown could not match,
And prefer'd in his heart the least ringlet that curl'd
Down her exquisite neck to the throne of the world.
There's a beauty, for ever unchangingly
bright, 130
Like the long, sunny lapse of a summer-
day's light,

Shining on, shining on, by no shadow
made tender,
Till Love falls asleep in its sameness of splendour.
This was not the beauty—oh, nothing like this,
That to young NOURMAHAL gave such magic of bliss!
But that loveliness, ever in motion,
which plays
Like the light upon autumn's soft shadowy days,
Now here and now there, giving warmth
as it flies
From the lip to the cheek, from the cheek to the eyes;
Now melting in mist and now breaking in gleams, 140
Like the glimpses a saint hath of Heav'n
in his dreams.
When pensive, it seem'd as if that very
grace,
That charm of all others, was born with her face!
And when angry,—for ev'n in the tran-quillest climes
Light breezes will ruffle the blossoms sometimes—
The short, passing anger but seem'd to awaken
New beauty, like flow'rs that are sweetest when shaken.
If tenderness touch'd her, the dark of her eye
At once took a darker, a heav'nlier dye,
From the depth of whose shadow, like holy revealings 150
From innermost shrines, came the light of her feelings.
Then her mirth—oh! 'twas sportive as ever took wing
From the heart with a burst, like the wild-bird in spring:
Illum'd by a wit that would fascinate sages,
Yet playful as Peris just loos'd from their cages.³

¹ 'An old commentator of the Chou-King says, the ancients having remarked that a current of water made some of the stones near its banks send forth a sound, they detached some of them, and being charmed with the delightful sound they emitted, constructed King or musical instruments of them.'—Grosier.

This miraculous quality has been attributed also to the shore of Attica. 'Hujus littus, ait Capella, concentum musicum illis terrae undis reddere, quod propter tantam eruditionis vim puto dictum.'—Ludov. Vives in Augustin. de Civitat. Dei, lib. xviii. c. 8.

² Jehan-Guire was the son of the Great Acbar.

³ In the wars of the Dives with the Peris, whenever the former took the latter prisoners, 'they shut them up in iron cages, and hung them on the highest trees. Here they were visited by their companions, who brought them the choicest odours.'—Richardson.

While her laugh, full of life, without any control
 But the sweet one of gracefulness, rung
 from her soul;
 And where it most sparkled no glance
 could discover,
 In lip, cheek, or eyes, for she brighten'd
 all over,—
 Like any fair lake that the breeze is
 upon, 160
 When it breaks into dimples and laughs
 in the sun.
 Such, such were the peerless enchantments, that gave
 NOURMAHAL the proud Lord of the East
 for her slave:
 And though bright was his Haram,—a living parterre
 Of the flow'rs¹ of this planet—though treasures were there,
 For which SOLIMAN's self might have giv'n all the store
 That the navy from OPHIR e'er wing'd
 to his shore,
 Yet dim before her were the smiles of
 them all,
 And the Light of his Haram was young
 NOURMAHAL!

But where is she now, this night of
 joy, 170
 When bliss is every heart's employ?—
 When all around her is so bright,
 So like the visions of a trance,
 That one might think, who came by chance
 Into the vale this happy night,
 He saw that City of Delight²
 In Fairy-land, whose streets and tow'rs
 Are made of gems and light and flow'rs!
 Where is the lov'd Sultana? where,
 When mirth brings out the young and
 fair, 180
 Does she, the fairest, hide her brow,
 In melancholy stillness now?

Alas!—how light a cause may move
 Dissension between hearts that love!

¹ In the Malay language the same word signifies women and flowers.

³ See the representation of the Eastern Cupid, pinioned closely round with wreaths of flowers, in Picart's Cérémonies Religieuses.

Heartsthat the world in vain had tried,
 And sorrow but more closely tied;
 That stood the storm, when waves
 were rough,
 Yet in a sunny hour fall off,
 Like ships that have gone down at sea,
 When heaven was all tranquillity! 190
 A something, light as air—a look,
 A word unkind or wrongly taken—
 Oh! love, that tempests never shook,
 A breath, a touch like this hath shaken.

And ruder words will soon rush in
 To spread the breach that words begin;
 And eyes forget the gentle ray
 They wore in courtship's smiling day;
 And voices lose the tone that shed
 A tenderness round all they said; 200
 Till fast declining, one by one,
 The sweetnesss of love are gone,
 And hearts, so lately mingled, seem Like broken clouds,—or like the
 stream,
 That smiling left the mountain's brow
 As though its waters ne'er could
 sever,
 Yet, ere it reach the plain below,
 Breaks into floods, that part for ever.

Oh, you, that have the charge of Love,
 Keep him in rosy bondage bound,
 As in the Fields of Bliss above 211
 He sits, with flow'rets fetter'd
 round; ³—

Loose not a tie that round him clings,
 Nor ever let him use his wings;
 For ev'n an hour, a minute's flight
 Will rob the plumes of half their light.
 Like that celestial bird,—whose nest
 Is found beneath far Eastern skies, Whose wings, though radiant when at
 rest,

Lose all their glory when he flies!⁴

Some difference, of this dang'rous kind,— 221
 By which, though light, the links that bind

⁴ Among the birds of Tonquin is a species of goldfinch, which sings so melodiously that it is called the Celestial Bird. Its wings, when it is perched, appear variegated with beautiful colours, but when it flies they lose all their splendour.—Grosier.

The fondest hearts may soon be riv'n ;
 Someshadow in Love's summer heav'n,
 Which, though a fleecy speck at first,
 May yet in awful thunder burst ;—
 Such cloud it is, that now hangs over
 The heart of the Imperial Lover,
 And far hath banish'd from his sight
 His NOURMAHAL, his Haram's Light !
 Hence is it, on this happy night, 231
 When Pleasure through the fields and
 groves

Has let loose all her world of loves,
 And every heart has found its own,
 He wanders, joyless and alone,
 And weary as that bird of Thrace,
 Whose pinion knows no resting-place. 1

In vain the loveliest cheeks and eyes
 This Eden of the Earth supplies
 Come crowding round—the cheeks are pale, 240
 The eyes are dim :—though rich the spot

With every flow'r this earth has got,
 What is it to the nightingale,
 If there his darling rose is not ? 2
 In vain the Valley's smiling throng
 Worship him, as he moves along ;
 He heeds them not—one smile of hers
 Is worth a world of worshippers.
 They but the Star's adorers are, 249
 She is the Heav'n that lights the Star !

Hence is it, too, that NOURMAHAL,
 Amid the luxuries of this hour
 Far from the joyous festival,
 Sits in her own sequester'd bow'r,
 With no one near, to soothe or aid,
 But that inspir'd and wondrous maid,
 NAMOUNA, the Enchantress ;—one,
 O'er whom his race the golden sun
 For unremember'd years has run,
 Yet never saw her blooming brow 260
 Younger or fairer than 'tis now.
 Nay, rather,—as the west wind's sigh
 Freshens the flow'r it passes by,— Time's wing but seem'd, in stealing

 o'er,
 To leave her lovelier than before.
 Yet on her smiles a sadness hung,
 And when, as oft, she spoke or sung
 Of other worlds, there came a light
 From her dark eyes so strangely bright,
 That all believ'd nor man nor earth
 Were conscious of NAMOUNA's birth !

All spells and talismans she knew, 272
 From the great Mantra,³ which around
 The Air's sublimer Spirits drew,
 To the gold gems⁴ of AFRIC, bound
 Upon the wand'ring Arab's arm,
 To keep him from the Siltim's⁵ harm.
 And she had pledg'd her pow'rful art,—
 Pledg'd it with all the zeal and heart
 Of one who knew, though high her
 sphere, 280
 What 'twas to lose a love so dear,—
 To find some spell that should recall
 Her Selim's⁶ smile to NOURMAHAL !

'Twas midnight—through the lattice,
 wreath'd
 With woodbine, many a perfume
 breath'd
 From plants that wake when others
 sleep,
 From timid jasmine buds, that keep
 Their odour to themselves all day,
 But, when the sun-light dies away,
 Let the delicious secret out 290
 To every breeze that roams about ;—
 When thus NAMOUNA :—'Tis the hour
 That scatters spellson herb and flow'r,
 And garlands might be gather'd now,
 That, twin'd around the sleeper's
 brow,
 Would make him dream of such de-
 lights,
 Such miracles and dazzling sights,
 As Genii of the Sun behold,
 At evening, from their tents of gold

Their sunny mansions melt away.
Now, too, a chaplet might be wreath'd

breath'd,

Which worn by her, whose love has stray'd,

Might bring some Peri from the
skies,

Some sprite, whose very soul is made
Of flow'rets' breaths and lovers'
sighs,

And who might tell——'

'For me, for me,'

Cried NOURMAHAL impatiently,— 310
'Oh! twine that wreath for me to-
night.'

Then, rapidly, with foot as light
As the young musk-roe's, out she flew,

To cull each shining leaf that grew

Thus singing as she winds and weaves
In mystic form the glittering leaves:—

I know where the winged visions dwell
That around the night-bed play;
I know each herb and flow'ret's bell,
Where they hide their wings by day.
Then hasten we, maid,
To twine our braid, 370
To-morrow the dreams and flow'rs will fade.

The image of love, that nightly flies
To visit the bashful maid,
Steals from the jasmine flower, that
sighs
Its soul, like her, in the shade.
The dream of a future, happier hour,
That alights on misery's brow,
Springs out of the silv'ry almond-
flow'r,
That blooms on a leafless bough.¹
Then hasten we, maid, 380
To twine our braid,
To-morrow the dreams and flowers
will fade.

The visions, that oft to worldly eyes
The glitter of mines unfold,
Inhabit the mountain-herb,² that dyes
The tooth of the fawn like gold.
The phantom shapes—oh touch not
them—
That appal the murd'rer's sight,
Lurk in the fleshy mandrake's stem,
That shrieks, when pluck'd at night!
Then hasten we, maid, 391
To twine our braid,
To-morrow the dreams and flowers
will fade.

² A herb on Mount Libanus, which is said to communicate a yellow golden hue to the teeth of the goats and other animals that graze upon it.

Niebulur thinks this may be the herb which the Eastern alchemists look to as a means of making gold. 'Most of those alchemical enthusiasts think themselves sure of success, if they could but find out the herb, which gilds the teeth and gives a yellow colour to the flesh of the sheep that eat it. Even the oil of this plant must be of a golden colour. It is called Haschischat ed dab.'

Father Jerome Dandini, however, asserts that the teeth of the goats at Mount Libanus are of

The dream of the injur'd, patient mind,
That smiles with the wrongs of men,
Is found in the bruise'd and wounded rind
Of the cinnamon, sweetest then.
Then hasten we, maid,
To twine our braid,
To-morrow the dreams and flowers

No sooner was the flow'ry crown
Plac'd on her head, than sleep came down,
Gently as nights of summer fall,
Upon the lids of NOURMAHAL;—
And, suddenly, a tuneful breeze,
As full of small, rich harmonies
As ever wind, that o'er the tents
Of AZAB³ blew, was full of scents,
Steals on her ear, and floats and swells,
Like the first air of morning creep-
ing 410

Of sweetness when he waves his wings,—
Hovers around her, and thus sings:

come,
Call'd by that moonlight garland's
spell; 420
From CHINDARA'S fount, my fairy
home,
Where in music, morn and night, I
dwell.

a silver colour; and adds, 'this confirms to me that which I observed in Candia: to wit, that the animals that live on Mount Ida eat a certain herb, which renders their teeth of a golden colour; which, according to my judgment, cannot otherwise proceed than from the mines which are under ground.'—Dandini, Voyage to Mount Libanus.

song !

Hither I come
From my fairy home,
And if there's a magic in Music's
strain,

I swear by the breath 430
Of that moonlight wreath,
Thy Lover shall sigh at thy feet again.

For mine is the lay that lightly floats,
And mine are the murmur'ing, dying
notes,

That fall as soft as snow on the sea,
And melt in the heart as instantly :—
And the passionate strain that, deeply
going,

Refines the bosom it trembles
through,
As the musk-wind, over the water
blowing,
Ruffles the wave, but sweetens it
too. 440

Mine is the charm, whose mystic sway
The Spirits of past Delight obey ;—
Let but the tuneful talisman sound,
And they come, like Genii, hover'ing
round.

And mine is the gentle song that bears

airs

And then, her voice—'tis more than human—

Never, till now, had it been given darting its rays through it, it is the cause of the Soobhi Kazim, or this temporary appearance of day-break. As it ascends, the earth is again veiled in darkness, until the sun rises above the mountain, and brings with it the Soobhi Sadig, or real morning.'—Scott Waring. He thinks Milton may allude to this, when he says,—

'Ere the blabbing Eastern scout,
The nice morn on the Indian steep
From her cabin'd loop-hole peep.'

And hourly she renews the lay,
So fearful lest its heav'nly sweetness
Should, ere the evening, fade away,—
For things so heav'nly have such fleetness !

But, far from fading, it but grows
Richer, diviner as it flows : 490
Till rapt she dwells on every string,
And pours again each sound along,
Like echo, lost and languishing,
In love with her own wondrous song.

That evening, (trusting that his soul
Might be from haunting love releas'd

The' Imperial SELIM held a feast
In his magnificent Shalimar : 1— 499
In whose Saloons, when the first star
Of evening o'er the waters trembled,
The Valley's loveliest all assembled ;
All the bright creatures that, like
dreams,

Glide through its foliage, and drink
beams

Of beauty from its founts and streams ; 2
And all those wand'ring minstrel-

Singing in gardens of the South 3

1 'In the centre of the plain, as it approaches the Lake, one of the Delhi Emperors, I believe Shah Jehan, constructed a spacious garden called the Shalimar, which is abundantly stored with fruit-trees and flowering shrubs. Some of the rivulets which intersect the plain are led into a canal at the back of the garden, and flowing through its centre, or occasionally thrown into a variety of water-works, compose the chief beauty of the Shalimar. To decorate this spot the Mogul Princes of India have displayed an equal magnificence and taste ; especially Jehan Gheer, who, with the enchanting Noor Mahl, made Kashmir his usual residence during the summer months. On arches thrown over the canal are erected, at equal distances, four or five suites of apartments, each consisting of a saloon, with four rooms at the angles, where the followers of the court attend, and the servants prepare sherbets, coffee, and the hookah. The frame of the doors of the principal saloon is composed of pieces of a stone of a black colour, streaked with yellow lines, and of a closer grain and higher polish than porphyry. They were taken, it is said, from a Hindoo temple, by one of the Mogul princes, and are esteemed of great value.'—Forster.

And sunniest apples ³ that CAUBUL

In all its thousand gardens ⁴ bears ;—
Plantains, the golden and the green,
MALAYA's nectar'd mangusteen ; ⁵

Prunes of BOKHARA, and sweet nuts
From the far groves of SAMARCAND,

And BASRA dates, and apricots, 560
Seed of the Sun, ⁶ from IRAN's land ;—

With rich conserve of Visna cherries,⁷
Of orange flowers, and of those berries
That, wild and fresh, the young gazelles
Feed on in ERAC's rocky dells.⁸

All these in richest vases smile,

In baskets of pure santal-wood,
And urns of porcelain from that isle ⁹

Sunk underneath the Indian flood,
Whence oft the lucky diver brings 570

Vases to grace the halls of kings.

Wines, too, of every clime and hue,
Around their liquid lustre threw ;

Amber Rosolli,¹⁰—the bright dew
From vineyards of the Green-Sea

gushing ; ¹¹

And SHIRAZ wine, that richly ran
As if that jewel, large and rare,

The ruby for which KUBLAI-KHAN
Offer'd a city's wealth,¹² was blushing,

Melted within the goblets there !

And amply SELIM quaffs of each, 581
And seems resolv'd the flood shall reach

His inward heart,—shedding around

A genial deluge, as they run,

That soon shall leave no spot un-
drown'd,

For Love to rest his wings upon.

He little knew how well the boy

Can float upon a goblet's streams,

Lighting them with his smile of joy :—

As bards have seen him in their
dreams, 590

Down the blue GANGES laughing glide

Upon a rosy lotus wreath,¹³

Catching new lustre from the tide

That with his image shone beneath.

But what are cups, without the aid
Of song to speed them as they flow ?
And see—a lovely Georgian maid,
With all the bloom, the freshen'd glow
Of her own country maidens' looks,
When warm they rise from TEFLIS'
brooks ;¹ 600
And with an eye, whose restless ray,
Full, floating, dark—oh, he, who
knows
His heart is weak, of Heav'n should pray
To guard him from such eyes as those !—
With a voluptuous wildness flings
Her snowy hand across the strings
Of a syrinda,² and thus sings :—
Come hither, come hither—by night and
by day,
We linger in pleasures that never are
gone ;
Like the waves of the summer, as one
dies away, 610
Another as sweet and as shining comes
on.
And the love that is o'er, in expiring,
gives birth
To a new one as warm, as unequal'd
in bliss ;
And, oh ! if there be an Elysium on
earth,
It is this, it is this.³
Here maidens are sighing, and fragrant their sigh
As the flow'r of the Amra just op'd by a bee ;⁴
And precious their tears as that rain from the sky,⁵
Which turns into pearls as it falls in
the sea.
Oh ! think what the kiss and the smile

perfect in bliss,

And own if there be an Elysium on earth,
It is this, it is this.

Here sparkles the nectar, that, hallow'd
by love,
Could draw down those angels of old

The Georgian's song was scarcely
mute,
When the same measure, sound for
sound,
Was caught up by another lute,
And so divinely breath'd around,
That all stood hush'd and wondering,
And turn'd and look'd into the air,
As if they thought to see the wing,
Of ISRAFIL,⁷ the Angel, there ;—
So pow'rfully on ev'ry soul 640
That new, enchanted measure stole.
While now a voice, sweet as the note
Of the charm'd lute, was heard to float
Along its chords, and so entwine
Its sounds with theirs, that none knew whether
The voice or lute was most divine,
So wondrously they went together :—

There's a bliss beyond all that the minstrel has told,
When two, that are link'd in one
heav'nly tie,
With heart never changing, and brow
never cold, 650

⁸ The Angel of Music. See note ², p. 429.

One hour of a passion so sacred is worth
Whole ages of heartless and wand'ring
bliss ;
And, oh ! if there be an Elysium on
earth,

It is this, it is this.

'Twas not the air, 'twas not the
words,

But that deep magic in the chords
And in the lips, that gave such pow'r
As Music knew not till that hour.

At once a hundred voices said, 660
'It is the mask'd Arabian maid !'

While SELIM, who had felt the strain
Deepest of any, and had lain
Some minutes rapt, as in a trance,

After the fairy sounds were o'er,
Too inly touch'd for utterance,

Now motion'd with his hand for
more :—

Fly to the desert, fly with me,
Our Arab tents are rude for thee ;
But, oh ! the choice what heart can
doubt, 670

Of tents with love, or thrones without ?

Our rocks are rough, but smiling there
The' acacia waves her yellow hair,
Lonely and sweet, nor lov'd the less
For flow'ring in a wilderness.

Our sands are bare, but down their slope

The silv'ry-footed antelope
As gracefully and gaily springs
As o'er the marble courts of kings.

Then come—thy Arab maid will be
The lov'd and lone acacia-tree, 681
The antelope, whose feet shall bless
With their light sound thy loneliness.

Oh ! there are looks and tones that dart

An instant sunshine through the heart,—

As if the soul that minute caught
Some treasure it through life had sought ;

As if the very lips and eyes,
Predestin'd to have all our sighs,
And never be forgot again, 690
Sparkled and spoke before us then !

So came thy ev'ry glance and tone
When first on me they breath'd and
shone ;

New, as if brought from other spheres,
Yet welcome as if lov'd for years.

Then fly with me,—if thou hast
known

No other flame, nor falsely thrown
A gem away, that thou hadst sworn
Should ever in thy heart be worn.

Come, if the love thou hast for me, 700
Is pure and fresh as mine for thee,—
Fresh as the fountain under ground,
When first 'tis by the lapwing found.¹

But if for me thou dost forsake
Some other maid, and rudely break
Her worshipp'd image from its base,
To give to me the ruin'd place ;—

Then, fare thee well—I'd rather make
My bower upon some icy lake 709
When thawing suns begin to shine,
Than trust to love so false as thine !

There was a pathos in this lay,

That, ev'n without enchantment's
art,

Would instantly have found its way
Deep into SELIM's burning heart ;
But, breathing, as it did, a tone
To earthly lutes and lips unknown ;
With every chord fresh from the touch
Of Music's Spirit,—'twas too much !
Starting, he dash'd away the cup,—

Which, all the time of this sweet
air,

His hand had held, untasted, up, 722

As if 'twere fix'd by magic there,—
And naming her, so long unnam'd,
So long unseen, wildly exclaim'd,

'Oh NOURMAHAL ! oh NOURMAHAL !
Hadst thou but sung this witching
strain,

I could forget—forgive thee all,
And never leave those eyes again.'

The mask is off—the charm is wrought— 730

And SELIM to his heart has caught,

¹ The Hudhud, or Lapwing, is supposed to have the power of discovering water under ground.

In blushes, more than ever bright,
His NOURMAHAL, his Haram's Light !
And well do vanish'd frowns enhance
The charm of every brighten'd glance;
And dearer seems each dawning smile
For having lost its light awhile :

And, happier now for all her sighs,
As on his arm her head reposes,
She whispers him, with laughing eyes,
'Remember, love, the Feast of
Roses !' 741

FADLADEEN, at the conclusion of this light rhapsody, took occasion to sum up his opinion of the young Cashmerian's poetry,—of which, he trusted, they had that evening heard the last. Having recapitulated the epithets, 'frivolous'—'inharmonious'—'nonsensical,' he proceeded to say that, viewing it in the most favourable light, it resembled one of those Maldivian boats, to which the Princess had alluded in the relation of her dream,¹—a slight, gilded thing, sent adrift without rudder or ballast, and with nothing but vapid sweets and faded flowers on board. The profusion, indeed, of flowers and birds, which this poet had ready on all occasions,—not to mention dew, gems, &c.—was a most oppressive kind of opulence to his hearers; and had the unlucky effect of giving to his style all the glitter of the flower-garden without its method, and all the flutter of the aviary without its song. In addition to this, he chose his subjects badly, and was always most inspired by the worst parts of them. The charms of paganism, the merits of rebellion,—these were the themes honoured with his particular enthusiasm; and, in the poem just recited, one of his most palatable passages was in praise of that beverage of the Unfaithful, wine;—'being, perhaps,' said he, relaxing into a smile, as conscious of his own character in the Haram on this point, 'one of those bards, whose fancy owes all its illumination to the grape, like that painted porcelain,² so curious and so rare, whose images are only visible when liquor is poured into it.' Upon the whole, it was his opinion, from the specimens which they had heard, and which, he begged to say, were the most tiresome part of the journey, that—whatever other merits this well-dressed young gentleman might possess—poetry was by no means his proper avocation: 'and indeed,' concluded the critic, 'from his fondness for flowers and for birds, I would venture to suggest that a florist or a bird-catcher is a much more suitable calling for him than a poet.'

They had now begun to ascend those barren mountains, which separate Cashmere from the rest of India; and, as the heats were intolerable, and the time of their encampments limited to the few hours necessary for refreshment and repose, there was an end to all their delightful evenings, and LALLA ROOKH saw no more of FERAMORZ. She now felt that her short dream of happiness was over, and that she had nothing but the recollection of its few blissful hours, like the one draught of sweet water that serves the camel across the wilderness, to be her heart's refreshment during the dreary waste of life that was before her. The blight that had fallen upon her spirits soon found its way to her cheek, and her ladies saw with regret—though not without some suspicion of the cause—that the beauty of their mistress, of which they were almost as proud as of their own, was fast vanishing away at the very moment of all when she had most need of it. What must the King of Bucharia feel, when, instead of the lively and beautiful LALLA ROOKH, whom the poets of Delhi had described as more perfect than the divinest images in the house of Azor,³ he should receive a pale and inanimate victim, upon whose cheek neither health nor pleasure bloomed, and from whose eyes Love had fled,—to hide himself in her heart?

If any thing could have charmed away the melancholy of her spirits, it would have been the fresh airs and enchanting scenery of that Valley, which the Persians so justly called the Unequaled.¹ But neither the coolness of its atmosphere, so luxurious after toiling up those bare and burning mountains,—neither the splendour of the minarets and pagodas, that shone out from the depth of its woods, nor the grottos, hermitages, and miraculous fountains,² which make every spot of that region holy ground,—neither the countless waterfalls, that rush into the Valley from all those high and romantic mountains that encircle it, nor the fair city on the Lake, whose houses, roofed with flowers,³ appeared at a distance like one vast and variegated parterre;—not all these wonders and glories of the most lovely country under the sun could steal her heart for a minute from those sad thoughts, which but darkened, and grew bitter every step she advanced.

The gay pomps and processions that met her upon her entrance into the Valley, and the magnificence with which the roads all along were decorated, did honour to the taste and gallantry of the young King. It was night when they approached the city, and, for the last two miles, they had passed under arches, thrown from hedge to hedge, festooned with only those rarest roses from which the Attar Gul, more precious than gold, is distilled, and illuminated in rich and fanciful forms with lanterns of the triple-coloured tortoise-shell of Pegu.⁴ Sometimes, from a dark wood by the side of the road, a display of fire-works would break out, so sudden and so brilliant, that a Brahmin might fancy he beheld that grove, in whose purple shade the God of Battles was born, bursting into a flame at the moment of his birth;—while, at other times, a quick and playful irradiation continued to brighten all the fields and gardens by which they passed, forming a line of dancing lights along the horizon; like the meteors of the north as they are seen by those hunters,⁵ who pursue the white and blue foxes on the confines of the Icy Sea.

These arches and fire-works delighted the Ladies of the Princess exceedingly; and with their usual good logic, they deduced from his taste for illuminations, that the King of Bucharia would make the most exemplary husband imaginable. Nor, indeed, could LALLA ROOKH herself help feeling the kindness and splendour with which the young bridegroom welcomed her;—but she also felt how painful is the gratitude, which kindness from those we cannot love excites; and that their best blandishments come over the heart with all that chilling and deadly sweetness, which we can fancy in the cold, odoriferous wind⁶ that is to blow over this earth in the last days.

² The pardonable superstition of the sequestered inhabitants has multiplied the places of worship of Mahadeo, of Beschian, and of Brama. All Cashmere is holy land, and miraculous fountains abound.—Major Rennel's Memoirs of a Map of Hindostan.

Jehan-Guire mentions 'a fountain in Cashmere called Tirnagh, which signifies a snake; probably because some large snake had formerly been seen there.'—'During the lifetime of my father, I went twice to this fountain, which is about twenty coss from the city of Cashmere. The vestiges of places of worship and sanctity are to be traced without number amongst the ruins and the caves, which are interspersed in its neighbourhood.'—Toozek Jehangeery.—Vide Asiatic Misc., vol. ii.

There is another account of Cashmere by Abul-Fazil, the author of the Ayin-Acbaree, 'who,' says Major Rennel, 'appears to have caught some of the enthusiasm of the valley, by his description of the holy places in it.'

³ 'On a standing roof of wood is laid a covering of fine earth, which shelters the building from the great quantity of snow that falls in the winter season. This fence communicates an equal warmth in winter, as a refreshing coolness in the summer season, when the tops of the houses, which are planted with a variety of flowers, exhibit at a distance the spacious view of a beautifully-chequered parterre.'—Forster.

⁴ 'Two hundred slaves there are, who have no other office than to hunt the woods and marshes for triple-coloured tortoises for the King's Vivary. Of the shells of these also lanterns are made.'—Vincent le Blanc's Travels.

⁵ For a description of the Aurora Borealis as it appears to these hunters, vide Encyclopædia.

⁶ This wind, which is to blow from Syria Damascena, is, according to the Mahometans, one of the signs of the Last Day's approach.

Another of the signs is, 'Great distress in the world, so that a man when he passes by another's grave shall say, Would to God I were in his place!'—Sale's Preliminary Discourse.

The marriage was fixed for the morning after her arrival, when she was, for the first time, to be presented to the monarch in that Imperial Palace beyond the lake, called the Shalimar. Though never before had a night of more wakeful and anxious thought been passed in the Happy Valley, yet, when she rose in the morning, and her Ladies came around her, to assist in the adjustment of the bridal ornaments, they thought they had never seen her look half so beautiful. What she had lost of the bloom and radiancy of her charms was more than made up by that intellectual expression, that soul beaming forth from the eyes, which is worth all the rest of loveliness. When they had tinged her fingers with the Henna leaf, and placed upon her brow a small coronet of jewels, of the shape worn by the ancient Queens of Bucharía, they flung over her head the rose-coloured bridal veil, and she proceeded to the barge that was to convey her across the lake;—first kissing, with a mournful look, the little amulet of cornelian, which her father at parting had hung about her neck.

The morning was as fresh and fair as the maid on whose nuptials it rose, and the shining lake all covered with boats, the minstrels playing upon the shores of the islands, and the crowded summer-houses on the green hills around, with shawls and banners waving from their roofs, presented such a picture of animated rejoicing, as only she who was the object of it all, did not feel with transport. To LALLA ROOKH alone it was a melancholy pageant; nor could she have even borne to look upon the scene, were it not for a hope that, among the crowds around, she might once more perhaps catch a glimpse of FERAMORZ. So much was her imagination haunted by this thought, that there was scarcely an islet or boat she passed on the way, at which her heart did not flutter with the momentary fancy that he was there. Happy, in her eyes, the humblest slave upon whom the light of his dear looks fell!—In the barge immediately after the princess sat FADLADEEN, with his silken curtains thrown widely apart, that all might have the benefit of his august presence, and with his head full of the speech he was to deliver to the King, 'concerning FERAMORZ, and literature, and the Chabuk, as connected therewith.'

They now had entered the canal which leads from the Lake to the splendid domes and saloons of the Shalimar, and went gliding on through the gardens that ascended from each bank, full of flowering shrubs that made the air all perfume; while from the middle of the canal rose jets of water, smooth and unbroken, to such a dazzling height, that they stood like tall pillars of diamond in the sunshine. After sailing under the arches of various saloons, they at length arrived at the last and most magnificent, where the monarch awaited the coming of his bride; and such was the agitation of her heart and frame, that it was with difficulty she could walk up the marble steps which were covered with cloth of gold for her ascent from the barge. At the end of the hall stood two thrones, as precious as the Cerulean Throne of Coolburga,¹ on one of which sat ALIRIS, the youthful King of Bucharía, and on the other was, in a few minutes, to be placed the most beautiful Princess in the world. Immediately upon the entrance of LALLA ROOKH into the saloon, the monarch descended from his throne to meet her; but scarcely had he time to take her hand in his, when she screamed with surprise, and fainted at his feet. It was FERAMORZ himself that stood before who possessed this throne, made a point of adding to it some rich stones; so that when in the reign of Sultan Mamood, it was taken to pieces, to remove some of the jewels to be set in vases and cups, the jewellers valued it at one corore of oons (nearly four millions sterling). I learned also that it was called Firozeh from being partly enamelled of a sky-blue colour, which was in time totally concealed by the number of jewels.—Ferishta.

her!—FERAMORZ was, himself, the Sovereign of Bucharía, who in this disguise had accompanied his young bride from Delhi, and, having won her love as a humble minstrel, now amply deserved to enjoy it as a King.

The consternation of FADLADEEN at this discovery was, for the moment, almost pitiable. But change of opinion is a resource too convenient in courts for this experienced courtier not to have learned to avail himself of it. His criticisms were all, of course, recanted instantly: he was seized with an admiration of the King's verses, as unbounded as, he begged him to believe, it was disinterested; and the following week saw him in possession of an additional place, swearing by all the Saints of Islam that never had there existed so great a poet as the Monarch ALIRIS, and, moreover, ready to prescribe his favourite regimen of the Chabuk for every man, woman, and child that dared to think otherwise.

Of the happiness of the King and Queen of Bucharía, after such a beginning, there can be but little doubt; and, among the lesser symptoms, it is recorded of LALLA ROOKH, that, to the day of her death, in memory of their delightful journey, she never called the King by any other name than FERAMORZ.

POLITICAL AND SATIRICAL POEMS

Lines on the Death of MR. P—RC—V—L

In the dirge we sung o'er him no censure was heard,

Unembitter'd and free did the tear-drop descend;

We forgot, in that hour, how the statesman had err'd,

And wept for the husband, the father, and friend.

Oh, proud was the meed his integrity won,

And gen'rous indeed were the tears that we shed,

When, in grief, we forgot all the ill he had done,

And, though wrong'd by him, living, bewail'd him, when dead.

Even now, if one harsher emotion intrude,

'Tis to wish he had chosen some lowlier state,

Had known what he was—and, content to be good,

Had ne'er, for our ruin, aspir'd to be great.

So, left through their own little orbit to move,

His years might have roll'd inoffensive away;

His children might still have been bless'd with his love,

And England would ne'er have been curs'd with his sway.

Sir,

To the Editor of the Morning Chronicle

IN order to explain the following Fragment, it is necessary to refer your readers to a late florid description of the Pavilion at Brighton, in the apartments of which, we are told, 'FUM, The Chinese Bird of Royalty,' is a principal ornament.

I am, Sir, yours, &c.

MUM.

FUM AND HUM, THE TWO BIRDS OF ROYALTY

ONE day the Chinese Bird of Royalty, FUM,

Thus accosted our own Bird of Royalty, HUM,

In that Palace or China-shop (Brighton, which is it?)

Where FUM had just come to pay HUM a short visit.—

Near akin are these Birds, though they differ in nation
 (The breed of the HUMs is as old as creation);
 Both, full-craw'd Legitimates—both, birds of prey,
 Both, cackling and ravenous creatures, half way
 'Twixt the goose and the vulture, like Lord C—STL—GH.
 While FUM deals in Mandarins, Bonzes, Bohea,
 Peers, Bishops, and Punch, HUM, are sacred to thee!
 So congenial their tastes, that, when FUM first did light on The floor of that grand China-warehouse at Brighton,
 The lanterns and dragons, and things round the dome
 Were so like what he left, 'Gad,' says FUM, 'I'm at home.'—
 And when, turning, he saw Bishop L—GH, 'Zooks, it is,'
 Quoth the Bird, 'Yes—I know him—a Bonze, by his phyz—
 And that jolly old idol he kneels to so low
 Can be none but our round-about godhead, fat Fo!'
 It chanc'd at this moment, the' Episcopal Prig
 Was imploring the P—E to dispense with his wig,¹
 Which the Bird, overhearing, flew high o'er his head,
 And some TOMIT-like marks of his patronage shed,
 Which so dimm'd the poor Dandy's idolatrous eye,
 That, while FUM cried 'Oh Fo!' all the court cried 'Oh fie!'

10

But, a truce to digression;—these Birds of a feather
 Thus talk'd, t'other night, on State matters together;
 (The P—E just in bed, or about to depart for't,
 His legs full of gout, and his arms full of H—RTF—D.)
 'I say, HUM,' says FUM—FUM, of course, spoke Chinese,
 But, bless you, that's nothing—at Brighton one sees Foreign lingoes and Bishops translated with ease—
 'I say, HUM, how fares it with Royalty now?
 Is it up? is it prime? is it spooney—or how?'
 (The Bird had just taken a flash-man's degree Under B—RR—M—RE, Y—TH, and young Master L—E)
 'As for us in Pekin'—here, a devil of a din
 From the bed-chamber came, where that long Mandarin,
 C—STL—GH (whom FUM calls the Confucius of Prose),
 Was rehearsing a speech upon Europe's repose
 To the deep, double bass of the fat Idol's nose.

30

(Nota bene—his Lordship and L—V—RF—L come,
 In collateral lines, from the old Mother HUM,
 C—STL—GH a HUM-bug—L—V—RF—L a HUM-drum.)
 The Speech being finish'd, out rush'd C—STL—GH,
 Saddled HUM in a hurry, and, whip, spur, away,
 Through the regions of air, like a Snip on his hobby,
 Ne'er paus'd, till he lighted in St. Stephen's lobby.

LINES ON THE DEATH OF SH—R—D—N

Principibus placuisse viris !—HORAT.

YEs, grief will have way—but the fast falling tear
 Shall be mingled with deep execrations on those,
 Who could bask in that Spirit's meridian career,
 And yet leave it thus lonely and dark at its close :—

Whose vanity flew round him, only while fed
 By the odour his fame in its summer-time gave ;—
 Whose vanity now, with quick scent for the dead,
 Like the Ghoul of the East, comes to feed at his grave.

Oh ! it sickens the heart to see bosoms so hollow,
 And spirits so mean in the great and high-born ; 10
 To think what a long line of titles may follow
 The relics of him who died—friendless and lorn !

How proud they can press to the fun'ral array
 Of one, whom they shunn'd in his sickness and sorrow :—
 How bailiffs may seize his last blanket, to-day,
 Whose pall shall be held up by nobles to-morrow !

And Thou, too, whose life, a sick epicure's dream,
 Incoherent and gross, even grosser had pass'd,
 Were it not for that cordial and soul-giving beam,
 Which his friendship and wit o'er thy nothingness cast :— 20

No, not for the wealth of the land, that supplies thee
 With millions to heap upon Foppery's shrine ;—
 No, not for the riches of all who despise thee,
 Though this would make Europe's whole opulence mine ;—

Would I suffer what—ev'n in the heart that thou hast—
 All mean as it is—must have consciously burn'd,
 When the pittance, which shame had wrung from thee at last,
 And which found all his wants at an end, was return'd ;¹

' Was this then the fate,'—future ages will say,
 When some names shall live but in history's curse ; 30
 When Truth will be heard, and these Lords of a day
 Be forgotten as fools, or remember'd as worse ;—

' Was this then the fate of that high-gifted man,
 The pride of the palace, the bow'r and the hall,
 The orator,—dramatist,—minstrel,—who ran
 Through each mode of the lyre, and was master of all ;—

' Whose mind was an essence, compounded with art
 From the finest and best of all other men's pow'rs :—
 Who rul'd ; like a wizard, the world of the heart,
 And could call up its sunshine, or bring down its show'rs ;— 40

' Whose humour, as gay as the fire-fly's light,
 Play'd round every subject, and shone as it play'd ;—
 Whose wit, in the combat, as gentle as bright,
 Ne'er carried a heart-stain away on its blade ;—

¹ The sum was two hundred pounds—offered | sustenance, and declined, for him, by his

'Whose eloquence—bright'ning whatever it tried,
Whether reason or fancy, the gay or the grave,—
Was as rapid, as deep, and as brilliant a tide,
As ever bore Freedom aloft on its wave!'

Yes—such was the man, and so wretched his fate;—
And thus, sooner or later, shall all have to grieve,
Who waste their morn's dew in the beams of the Great,
And expect 'twill return to refresh them at eve.

In the woods of the North there are insects that prey
On the brain of the elk till his very last sigh;¹
Oh, Genius! thy patrons, more cruel than they,
First feed on thy brains, and then leave thee to die!

EPISTLE

FROM TOM CRIB TO BIG BEN²CONCERNING SOME FOUL PLAY IN A LATE TRANSACTION.³'Ahi, mio BEN!'—METASTASIO.⁴

WHAT! BEN, my old hero, is this your renown?

Is this the new go?—kick a man when he's down!
When the foe has knock'd under, to tread on him then—
By the fist of my father, I blush for thee, BEN!

'Foul! foul!' all the lads of the Fancy exclaim—
CHARLEY SHOCK is electrified—BELCHER spits flame—

And MOLYNEUX—ay, even BLACKY⁵ cries 'shame!'

Time was, when JOHN BULL little difference spied
'Twixt the foe at his feet, and the friend at his side:

When he found (such his humour in fighting and eating)
His foe, like his beef-steak, the sweeter for beating.

10

But this comes, Master BEN, of your curst foreign notions,
Your trinkets, wigs, thingumbobs, gold lace and lotions;

Your Noyeaas, Curaçoas, and the Devil knows what—
(One swig of *Blue Ruin*⁶ is worth the whole lot!)

Your great and small crosses—(my eyes, what a brood!
A cross-buttock from me would do some of them good!)

Which have spoilt you, till hardly a drop, my old porpoise,
Of pure English claret is left in your corpus;

And (as JIM says) the only one trick, good or bad, 20

Of the Fancy you're up to, is fibbing, my lad.

Hence it comes,—BOXIANA, disgrace to thy page!—

Having floor'd, by good luck, the first swell of the age,

Having conquer'd the prime one, that mill'd us all round,

You kick'd him, old BEN, as he gasp'd on the ground!

Ay—just at the time to show spunk, if you'd got any—

Kick'd him, and jaw'd him, and *lag'd*⁷ him to Botany!

Oh, shade of the Cheesemonger !¹ you, who, alas,
 Doubled up, by the dozen, those Mounseers in brass,
 On that great day of milling, when blood lay in lakes,
 When Kings held the bottle, and Europe the stakes,
 Look down upon BEN—see him, dunghill all o'er,
 Insult the fall'n foe, that can harm him no more !
 Out, cowardly spooney !—again and again,
 By the fist of my father, I blush for thee, BEN.
 To show the white feather is many men's doom,
 But, what of one feather ?—BEN shows a whole Plume.

THE FUDGE FAMILY IN PARIS

Le Leggi della Maschera richiedono che una persona mascherata non sia salutata per nome da uno che la conosce malgrado il suo travestimento.—CASTIGLIONE.

PREFACE

IN what manner the following Epistles came into my hands, it is not necessary for the public to know. It will be seen by Mr. FUDGE's Second Letter, that he is one of those gentlemen whose Secret Services in Ireland, under the mild ministry of my Lord C———GH, have been so amply and gratefully remunerated. Like his friend and associate, THOMAS REYNOLDS, Esq., he had retired upon the reward of his honest industry ; but has lately been induced to appear again in active life, and superintend the training of that Delatorian Cohort, which Lord S—DM—TH, in his wisdom and benevolence, has organized.

Whether Mr. FUDGE, himself, has yet made any discoveries, does not appear from the following pages. But much may be expected from a person of his zeal and sagacity, and, indeed, to him, Lord S—DM—TH, and the Greenland-bound ships, the eyes of all lovers of discoveries are now most anxiously directed.

I regret much that I have been obliged to omit Mr. BOB FUDGE's Third Letter, concluding the adventures of his Day with the Dinner, Opera, &c. &c. ;—but, in consequence of some remarks upon Marinette's thin drapery, which, it was thought, might give offence to certain well-meaning persons, the manuscript was sent back to Paris for his revision, and had not returned when the last sheet was put to press.

It will not, I hope, be thought presumptuous, if I take this opportunity of complaining of a very serious injustice I have suffered from the public. Dr. KING wrote a treatise to prove that BENTLEY 'was not the author of his own book,' and a similar absurdity has been asserted of me, in almost all the best-informed literary circles. With the name of the real author staring them in the face, they have yet persisted in attributing my works to other people ; and the fame of the Twopenny Post-Bag—such as it is—having hovered doubtfully over various persons, has at last settled upon the head of a certain little gentleman, who wears it, I understand, as complacently as if it actually belonged to him ; without even the honesty of avowing, with his own favourite author, (he will excuse the pun)

Εγω δ' Ὁ ΜΩΡΟΣ ἀπας
 Εἰσαμην μετῴπω.

¹ A Life Guardsman, one of the Fancy, who distinguished himself, and was killed in the memorable set-to at Waterloo.

I can only add, that if any lady or gentleman, curious in such matters, will take the trouble of calling at my lodgings, 245, Piccadilly, I shall have the honour of assuring them, in propria persona, that I am—his, or her,

Very obedient

And very humble Servant,

THOMAS BROWN, THE YOUNGER.

THE FUDGE FAMILY IN PARIS

LETTER I

FROM MISS BIDDY FUDGE TO MISS DOROTHY —, OF CLONKILTY, IN IRELAND

Amiens.

DEAR DOLL, while the tails of our horses are plaiting,

The trunks tying on, and Papa, at the door,
Into very bad French is, as usual, translating

His English resolve not to give a sou more,
I sit down to write you a line—only think!—
A letter from France, with French pens and French ink,
How delightful! though, would you believe it, my dear?

I have seen nothing yet very wonderful here;
No adventure, no sentiment, far as we've come,
But the corn-fields and trees quite as dull as at home;

10

And but for the post-boy, his boots and his queue,
I might just as well be at Clonkilty with you!
In vain, at DESSEIN's, did I take from my trunk
That divine fellow, STERNE, and fall reading 'The Monk';
In vain did I think of his charming Dead Ass,
And remember the crust and the wallet—alas!

No monks can be had now for love or for money,
(All owing, Pa says, to that infidel BONEY;)
And, though one little Neddy we saw in our drive
Out of classical Nampont, the beast was alive!

20

By the by, though, at Calais, Papa had a touch
Of romance on the pier, which affected me much.

At the sight of that spot, where our darling DIX-HUIT
Set the first of his own dear legitimate feet,¹ (Modell'd out so exactly, and—God bless the mark!

'Tis a foot, DOLLY, worthy so Grand a Monarque,
He exclaim'd, 'Oh, mon Roi!' and, with tear-dropping eye,

Stood to gaze on the spot—while some Jacobin, nigh,
Mutter'd out with a shrug, (what an insolent thing!)

'Ma foi, he be right—'tis de Englishman's King;

30

And dat gros pied de cochon—begar, me vil say
Dat de foot look mosh better, if turn'd toder way.²

There's the pillar, too—Lord! I had nearly forgot—
What a charming idea!—rais'd close to the spot;

The mode being now, (as you've heard, I suppose,)
To build tombs over legs,³ and raise pillars to toes.

¹ To commemorate the landing of Louis le Désiré from England, the impression of his foot is marked out on the pier at Calais, and a pillar with an inscription raised opposite to the spot.

² Ci-git la jambe de, &c. &c.

This is all that's occur'd sentimental as yet ;
 Except, indeed, some little flow'r-nymphs we've met,
 Who disturb one's romance with pecuniary views,
 Flinging flow'rs in your path, and then—bawling for sous ! 40
 And some picturesque beggars, whose multitudes seem
 To recall the good days of the ancien régime,
 All as ragged and brisk, you'll be happy to learn,
 And as thin as they were in the time of dear STERNE.

Our party consists (in a neat Calais job)
 Of Papa and myself, Mr. CONNOR and BOB.
 You remember how sheepish BOB look'd at Kilrandy,
 But, Lord ! he's quite alter'd—they've made him a Dandy ;
 A thing, you know, whisker'd, great-coated, and lac'd,
 Like an hour-glass, exceedingly small in the waist : 50
 Quite a new sort of creatures, unknown yet to scholars,
 With heads, so immovably stuck in shirt-collars,
 That seats, like our music-stools, soon must be found them,
 To twirl, when the creatures may wish to look round them.
 In short, dear, 'a Dandy' describes what I mean,
 And BOB's far the best of the genus I've seen :
 An improving young man, fond of learning, ambitious,
 And goes now to Paris to study French dishes,
 Whose names—think, how quick ! he already knows pat,
A la braise, petits pâtés, and—what d'ye call that 60
 They inflict on potatoes ?—oh ! maitre d'hôtel—
 I assure you, dear DOLLY, he knows them as well
 As if nothing else all his life he had eat,
 Though a bit of them BOBBY has never touch'd yet ;
 But just knows the names of French dishes and cooks,
 As dear Pa knows the titles of authors and books.

As to Pa, what d'ye think ?—mind, it's all entre nous,
 But you know, love, I never keep secrets from you—
 Why, he's writing a book—what ! a tale ? a romance ?
 No, ye Gods, would it were !—but his Travels in France ; 70
 At the special desire (he let out t'other day)
 Of his great friend and patron, my Lord C—STL—R—GH,
 Who said, 'My dear FUDGE'—I forget the exact words,
 And, it's strange, no one ever remembers my Lord's ;
 But 'twas something to say that, as all must allow
 A good orthodox work is much wanting just now,
 To expound to the world the new—thingummie—science,
 Found out by the—what's-its-name—Holy Alliance,
 And prove to mankind that their rights are but folly,
 Their freedom a joke, (which it is, you know, DOLLY,) 80
 'There's none,' said his Lordship, 'if I may be judge,
 Half so fit for this great undertaking as FUDGE !'

The matter's soon settled—Pa flies to the Row
 (The first stage your tourists now usually go),
 Settles all for his quarto—advertisements, praises—
 Starts post from the door, with his tablets—French phrases—
 'SCOTT'S Visit,' of course—in short, ev'ry thing he has An author can want, except words and ideas :—

And, lo! the first thing, in the spring of the year,
Is PHIL. FUDGE at the front of a Quarto, my dear! 90

But, bless me, my paper's near out, so I'd better
Draw fast to a close:—this exceeding long letter
You owe to a déjeuner à la fourchette,
Which BOBBY would have, and is hard at it yet.—
What's next? oh, the tutor, the last of the party,
Young CONNOR:—they say he's so like BONAPARTE,
His nose and his chin—which Papa rather dreads,
As the Bourbons, you know, are suppressing all heads
That resemble old NAP's, and who knows but their honours
May think, in their fright, of suppressing poor CONNOR's? 100
Au reste (as we say), the young lad's well enough,
Only talks much of Athens, Rome, virtue, and stuff;
A third cousin of ours, by the way—poor as Job
(Though of royal descent by the side of Mamma),
And for charity made private tutor to BOB;—
Entre nous, too, a Papist—how lib'ral of Pa!

This is all, dear,—forgive me for breaking off thus,
But BOB's déjeuner's done, and Papa's in a fuss.

B. F.

P.S.

How provoking of Pa! he will not let me stop
Just to run in and rummage some milliner's shop; 110
And my début in Paris, I blush to think on it,
Must now, DOLL, be made in a hideous low bonnet.
But Paris, dear Paris!—oh, there will be joy,
And romance, and high bonnets, and Madame Le Roi!¹

LETTER II

FROM PHIL. FUDGE, ESQ. TO THE LORD VISCOUNT C—ST—R—GH

Paris.

At length, my Lord, I have the bliss
To date to you a line from this
'Demoraliz'd' metropolis;
Where, by plebeians low and scurvy,
The throne was turn'd quite topsy-turvy,
And Kingship, tumbled from its seat,
'Stood prostrate' at the people's feet;
Where(still to use your Lordship's tropes)
The level of obedience slopes
Upward and downward, as the stream 10
Of hydra faction kicks the beam!²
Where the poor Palace changes masters
Quicker than a snake its skin,
And LOUIS is roll'd out on castors,
While BONEY's borne on shoulders
in:—

But where, in every change, no doubt,
One special good your Lordship traces,—
That 'tis the Kings alone turn out,
The Ministers still keep their places.
How oft, dear Viscount C——GH, 20
I've thought of thee upon the way,
As in my job (what place could be More apt to wake a thought of thee?)—
Or, oftener far, when gravely sitting Upon my dicky, (as is fitting
For him who writes a Tour, that he May more of men and manners see.)
I've thought of thee and of thy glories,
Thou guest of Kings, and King of Tories!

Thus the eloquent Counsellor B——, in describing some hypocritical pretender to charity, said, 'He put his hand in his breeches-pocket, like a crocodile, and,' &c. &c.

² This excellent imitation of the noble Lord's style shows how deeply Mr. Fudge must have studied his great original. Irish oratory, indeed, abounds with such startling peculiarities.

Reflecting how thy fame has grown 30
And spread, beyond man's usual share,
At home, abroad, till thou art known,
Like Major SEMPLE, every where!
And marv'ling with what powers of
breath

Your Lordship, having speech'd to death
Some hundreds of your fellow-men,
Next speech'd to Sov'reigns' ears,—and when

All Sov'reigns else were doz'd, at last Speech'd down the Sov'reign¹ of Belfast. 39

Oh! mid the praises and the trophies
Thou gain'st from Morosops and Sophis;
Mid all the tributes to thy fame,
There's one thou should'st be chiefly pleas'd at—

That Ireland gives her snuff thy name,
And C———G's the thing now
sneez'd at!

Buthold, my pen!—a truce to praising—
Though ev'n your Lordship will allow
The theme's temptations are amazing;
But time and ink run short, and now,
(As thou wouldst say, my guide and teacher 50

In these gay metaphorio fringes,
I must embark into the feature

On which this letter chiefly hinges;)—²
My Book, the Book that is to prove—
And will, (so help ye Sprites above,
That sit on clouds, as grave as judges,
Watching the labours of the FUDGES!)
Will prove that all the world, at present,
Is in a state extremely pleasant;

That Europe—thanks to royal swords 60
And bay'nets, and the Duke commanding—

Enjoys a peace which, like the Lord's,
Passeth all human understanding:

² Verbatim from one of the noble Viscount's Speeches—'And now, Sir, I must embark into the feature on which this question chiefly hinges.'

That France prefers her go-cart King
To such a coward scamp as BONEY;
Though round, with each a leading-string,

There standeth many a Royal crony,
For fear the chubby, tott'ring thing
Should fall, if left there loney-poney;
—That England, too, the more her debts,
The more she spends, the richer gets; 71
And that the Irish, grateful nation!

Remember when by thee reign'd over,
And bless thee for their flagellation,
As HELOISA did her lover!—³

That Poland, left for Russia's lunch
Upon the side-board, snug reposes:
While Saxony's as pleas'd as Punch,
And Norway 'on a bed of roses!' 80
That, as for some few million souls, 80
Transferr'd by contract, bless the clods!

If half were strangled—Spaniards, Poles,
And Frenchmen—'twouldn't make much odds,

So Europe's goodly Royal ones,
Sit easy on their sacred thrones;
So FERDINAND embroiders gaily,⁴
And LOUIS eats his salmi,⁵ daily;
So time is left to Emperor SANDY
To be half Caesar and half Dandy;
And G———G the R———T (who'd forget 90

That doughtiest chieftain of the set?)
Hath wherewithal for trinkets new,

For dragons, after Chinese models,
And chambers where Duke Ho and Soo,
Might come and nine times knock their noddles!—

All this my Quarto 'll prove—much
more

Than Quarto ever prov'd before:
In reas'ning with the Post I'll vie,
My facts the Courier shall supply, 99
My jokes V—NS—T, P—LE my sense,
And thou, sweet Lord, my eloquence!

² See her Letters.

⁴ It would be an edifying thing to write a history of the private amusements of sovereigns, tracing them down from the fly-sticking of Domitian, the mole-catching of Artabanus, the hog-mimicking of Parmenides, the horse-carrying of Aretas, to the petticoat-embroidering of Ferdinand, and the patience-playing of the P———T.

⁵ Οψα τε, οία εδουσι διωτρεφες βασιλεις.
Homer, Odys, 3,

My Journal, penn'd by fits and starts,
 On BRDDY's back or BOBBY's shoulder,
 (My son, my Lord, a youth of parts,
 Who longs to be a small place-holder,
 Is—though I say't, that shouldn't say—
 Extremely good; and, by the way,
 One extract from it—only one—
 To show its spirit, and I've done.
'Jul. thirty-first.—Went, aftersnack, 110
 To the Cathedral of St. Denny;
 Sigh'd o'er the Kings of ages back,
 And—gave the old Concierge a penny.
 (Mem.—Must see Rheims, much fam'd,
 'tis said,
 For making Kings and gingerbread.)
 Was shown the tomb where lay, so stately,
 A little Bourbon, buried lately.
 Thrice high and puissant, we were told,
 Though only twenty-four hours old!¹
 Hear this, thought I, ye Jacobins: 120
 Ye Burdetts, tremble in your skins!

If Royalty, but ag'd a day,
 Can boast such high and puissant sway,
 What impious hand its pow'r would fix,
 Full fledg'd and wigg'd² at fifty-six!³
 The argument's quite new, you see,
 And proves exactly Q. E. D.
 So now, with duty to the R—g—t,
 I am, dear Lord,

Your most obedient,
 P. F.

Hôtel Breteuil, Rue Rivoli. 130
 Neat lodgings—rather dear for me;
 But BRDDY said she thought 'twould
 look
 Genteeler thus to date my Book;
 And BRDDY's right—besides, it curries
 Some favour with our friends at MUR-RAY'S,
 Who scorn what any man can say,
 That dates from Rue St.-Honoré!

LETTER III

FROM MR. BOB FUDGE TO RICHARD ———, ESQ.

OH Dick! you may talk of your writing and reading,
 Your Logic and Greek, but there's nothing like feeding;
 And this is the place for it, DICKY, you dog,
 Of all places on earth—the head-quarters of Prog!
 Talk of England—her fam'd Magna Charta, I swear, is
 A humbug, a flam, to the Carte⁴ at old VÉRY'S;
 And as for your Juries—who would not set o'er 'em
 A Jury of Tasters,⁵ with woodcocks before 'em?
 Give CARTWRIGHT his Parliaments, fresh every year;
 But those friends of short Commons would never do here; 10
 And, let ROMILLY speak as he will on the question,
 No Digest of Law's like the laws of digestion!

By the by, DICK, I fatten—but n'importe for that,
 'Tis the mode—your Legitimates always get fat.
 There's the R—g—t, there's LOUIS—and BONEY tried too,
 But, though somewhat imperial in paunch, 'twouldn't do:—
 He improv'd, indeed, much in this point, when he wed,
 But he ne'er grew right royally fat in the head.

¹ So described on the coffin: 'très-haute et puissante Princesse, âgée d'un jour.'

² There is a fulness and breadth in this portrait of Royalty, which reminds us of what Pilny says, in speaking of Trajan's great qualities: —'nonne longè latèque Principem ostentant?'

³ See the Quarterly Review for May, 1816, where Mr. Hobhouse is accused of having written his book 'in a back street of the French capital.'

⁴ The Bill of Fare.—Véry, a well-known Restaurateur.

⁵ Mr. Boballudes particularly, I presume, to the famous Jury Dégustateur, which used to assemble at the Hôtel of M. Grimoed de la Reynière, and of which this modern Arche-stratus has given an account in his Almanach des Gourmands, cinquième année, p. 78.

DICK, DICK, what a place is this Paris!—but stay—
As my raptures may bore you, I'll just sketch a Day,
As we pass it, myself and some comrades I've got,
All thorough-bred Gnostics, who know what is what.

20

After dreaming some hours of the land of Cocaigne,¹

That Elysium of all that is friend and nice,
Where for hail they have bon-bons, and claret for rain,
And the skaters in winter show off on cream-ice;

Where so ready all nature its cookery yields,
Macaroni au parmesan grows in the fields;

Little birds fly about with the true pheasant taint,
And the geese are all born with a liver complaint!²

30

I rise—put on neck-cloth—stiff, tight, as can be—

For a lad who goes into the world, DICK, like me,
Should have his neck tied up, you know—there's no doubt of it—
Almost as tight as some lads who go out of it.

With whiskers well oil'd, and with boots that 'hold up
The mirror to nature'—so bright you could sup

Off the leather like china; with coat, too, that draws
On the tailor, who suffers, a martyr's applause!

With head bridled up, like a four-in-hand leader,
And stays—devil's in them—too tight for a feeder,

40

I strut to the old Café Hardy, which yet
Beats the field at a déjeuner à la fourchette.

There, DICK, what a breakfast! oh, not like your ghost
Of a breakfast in England, your curst tea and toast;³

But a side-board, you dog, where one's eye roves about,
Like a Turk's in the Haram, and thence singles out

One pâté of larks, just to tune up the throat,
One's small limbs of chickens, done en papillote,

One's erudite cutlets, drest all ways but plain,

Or one's kidneys—imagine, DICK—done with champagne!

50

Then, some glasses of Beauvère, to dilute—or, mayhap, Chambertin,⁴ which you know's the pet tippie of NAP,

¹ The fairy-land of cookery and gourmandise:
'Pays, où le ciel offre les viandes toutes cuites,
et ou, comme on parle, les alouettes tombent toutes rôties. Du Latin, coquere.'—Duchat.

² The process by which the liver of the unfortunate goose is enlarged, in order to produce that richest of all dainties, the foie gras, of which such renowned pâtés are made at Strasbourg and Toulouse, is thus described in the Cours Gastronomique:—"On dépouille l'estomac des oies; on attache ensuite ces animaux aux chenets d'une cheminée, et on les nourrit devant le feu. La captivité et la chaleur donnent à ces volatiles une maladie hépatique, qui fait gonfler leur foie," &c. p. 208.

³ Is Mr. Bob aware that his contempt for tea renders him liable to a charge of atheism? Such, at least, is the opinion cited in Christian Faister. Amoenitat. Philog.—"Atheum interpretabatur hominem ab herbâ The aversum." He would not, I think, have been so irreverent to this beverage of scholars, if he had read Peter Petit's Poem in praise of Tea, addressed to the learned Huet—or the Epigraphe which Pechlinus wrote for an altar he meant to dedicate to this herb—or the Anacreontics of Peter Francius, in which he calls Tea

Θεαν, θεην, θεανραν.

The following passage from one of these Anacreontics will, I have no doubt, be gratifying to all true Theists.

Θεοις, θεων τε πατρι,
Εν χρυσειοις σκυφοισι
Δίδοι το νεκταρ 'Ηβη.
Σε μοι διακονοῦντο
Σκυφοις εν μύρρινοισι
Τῷ καλλεῖ προπονσαι
Καλαῖς χερσὶσι κουραι.

Which may be thus translated:—

Yes, let Hebe, ever young,
High in heav'n her nectar hold,
And to Jove's immortal throng
Pour the tide in cups of gold—
I'll not envy heaven's Princes,
While, with snowy hands, for me,
KATE the china tea-cup rinses,
And pours out her best Bohea!

⁴ The favourite wine of Napoleon.

And which Dad, by the by, that legitimate stickler,
 Much scruples to taste, but I'm not so partic'lar.—
 Your coffee comes next, by prescription: and then, DICK, 's
 The coffee's ne'er-failing and glorious appendix,
 (If books had but such, my old Grecian, depend on't, I'd swallow ev'n W—TK—NS', for sake of the end on't,)
 A neat glass of parfait-amour, which one sips
 Just as if bottled velvet¹ tipp'd over one's lips. 60
 This repast being ended, and paid for—(how odd!

Till a man's us'd to paying, there's something so queer in't!)—
 The sun now well out, and the girls all abroad,

And the world enough air'd for us, Nobs, to appear in't,
 We lounge up the Boulevards, where—oh, DICK, the phyzzes,
 The turn-outs, we meet—what a nation of quizzes!

Here toddles along some old figure of fun,

With a coat you might date Anno Domini 1;

A lac'd hat, worsted stockings, and—noble old soul!

A fine ribbon and cross in his best button-hole; 70

Just such as our PR—CE, who nor reason nor fun dreads,

Inflicts, without ev'n a court-martial, on hundreds.²

Here trips a grisette, with a fond, roguish eye,

(Rather eatable things these grisettes by the by);

And there an old demoiselle, almost as fond,

In a silk that has stood since the time of the Fronde.

There goes a French Dandy—ah, DICK! unlike some ones
 We've seen about WHITE's—the Mounseers are but rum ones;

Such hats!—fit for monkeys—I'd back Mrs. DRAPER

To cut neater weather-boards out of brown paper: 80

And coats—how I wish, if it wouldn't distress 'em,

Their'd club for old BR—MM—L, from Calais, to dress 'em!

The collar sticks out from the neck such a space,

That you'd swear 'twas the plan of this head-lobbing nation,

To leave there behind them a snug little place

For the head to drop into, on decapitation.

In short, what with mountebanks, counts, and friseurs,

Some mummers by trade, and the rest amateurs—

What with captains in new jockey-boots and silk breeches,

Old dustmen with swinging great opera-hats, 90

And shoeblacks reclining by statues in niches,

There never was seen such a race of Jack Sprats!

From the Boulevards—but hearken!—yes—as I'm a sinner,

The clock is just striking the half-hour to dinner:

So no more at present—short time for adorning—

My Day must be finish'd some other fine morning.

Now, hey for old BEAUVILLIERS'³ larder, my boy!

And, once there, if the Goddess of Beauty and Joy

Were to write 'Come and kiss me, dear BOB!' I'd not budge—

Not a step, DICK, as sure as my name is

R. FUDGE. 100

LETTER IV

FROM PHELM CONNOR TO —

'RETURN!'—no, never, while the with'ring hand
 Of bigot power is on that hapless land;
 While, for the faith my fathers held to God,
 Ev'n in the fields where free those fathers trod,
 I am proscrib'd, and—like the spot left bare
 In Israel's halls, to tell the proud and fair
 Amidst their mirth, that Slav'ry had been there—¹
 On all I love, home, parents, friends, I trace
 The mournful mark of bondage and disgrace!
 No!—let them stay, who in their country's pangs
 See nought but food for factions and harangues;
 Who yearly kneel before their masters' doors,
 And hawk their wrongs, as beggars do their sores:
 Still let your ²

10

Still hope and suffer, all who can!—but I,
 Who durst not hope, and cannot bear, must fly.

But whither?—everywhere the scourge pursues—
 Turn where he will, the wretched wand'rer views,
 In the bright, broken hopes of all his race,
 Countless reflections of the Oppressor's face.
 Everywhere gallant hearts, and spirits true,
 Are serv'd up victims to the vile and few;
 While E—gl—d, everywhere—the general foe
 Of Truth and Freedom, wheresoe'er they glow—
 Is first, when tyrants strike, to aid the blow.

20

Oh, E—gl—d! could such poor revenge atone
 For wrongs, that well might claim the deadliest one;
 Were it a vengeance, sweet enough to sate
 The wretch who flies from thy intolerant hate,
 To hear his curses on such barb'rous sway
 Echoed, where'er he bends his cheerless way;—
 Could this content him, every lip he meets
 Teems for his vengeance with such poisonous sweets;
 Were this his lux'ry, never is thy name
 Pronounc'd, but he doth banquet on thy shame;
 Hears maledictions ring from every side
 Upon that grasping power, that selfish pride,
 Which vaunts its own, and scorns all rights beside;
 That low and desp'rate envy, which to blast
 A neighbour's blessings, risks the few thou hast;—
 That monster, Self, too gross to be conceal'd,
 Which ever lurks behind thy proffer'd shield;—

¹ 'They used to leave a yard square of the wall of the house unplastered, on which they wrote, in large letters, either the fore-mentioned verse of the Psalmist ("If I forget thee, O Jerusalem," &c.) or the words—"The memory of the desolation."—Leo of Modena,

² I have thought it prudent to omit some parts of Mr. Phelim Connor's letter. He is evidently an intemperate young man, and has associated with his cousin the Fudges, to very little purpose.

That faithless craft, which, in thy hour of need,
 Can court the slave, can swear he shall be freed,
 Yet basely spurns him, when thy point is gain'd,
 Back to his masters, ready gagg'd and chain'd !
 Worthy associate of that band of Kings,
 That royal, rav'ning flock, whose vampire wings
 O'er sleeping Europe treacherously brood, 50
 And fan her into dreams of promis'd good,
 Of hope, of freedom—but to drain her blood !
 If thus to hear thee branded be a bliss
 That Vengeance loves, there's yet more sweet than this,
 That 'twas an Irish head, an Irish heart,
 Made thee the fall'n and tarnish'd thing thou art ;
 That, as the centaur¹ gave the infected vest
 In which he died, to rack his conqueror's breast,
 We sent thee C——GE :—as heaps of dead 60
 Have slain their slayers by the pest they spread,
 So hath our land breath'd out, thy fame to dim,
 Thy strength to waste, and rot thee, soul and limb,
 Her worst infections all condens'd in him !

When will the world shake off such yokes ? oh, when
 Will that redeeming day shine out on men,
 That shall behold them rise, erect and free
 As Heav'n and Nature meant mankind should be !
 When Reason shall no longer blindly bow 70
 To the vile pagod things, that o'er her brow,
 Like him of Jaghernaut, drive trampling now ;
 Nor Conquest dare to desolate God's earth ;
 Nor drunken Vict'ry, with a NERO's mirth,
 Strike her lewd harp amidst a people's groans ;—
 But, built on love, the world's exalted thrones
 Shall to the virtuous and the wise be given—
 Those bright, those sole Legitimates of Heaven !

When will this be ?—or, oh ! is it, in truth,
 But one of those sweet, day-break dreams of youth,
 In which the Soul, as round her morning springs, 80
 'Twixt sleep and waking, sees such dazzling things !
 And must the hope, as vain as it is bright,
 Be all resign'd ?—and are they only right,
 Who say this world of thinking souls was made
 To be by Kings partition'd, truck'd, and weigh'd
 In scales that, ever since the world begun,
 Have counted millions but as dust to one ?
 Are they the only wise, who laugh to scorn
 The rights, the freedom to which man was born ?
 Who 90

Who, proud to kiss each sep'rate rod of pow'r,
 Bless, while he reigns, the minion of the hour ;

Worship each would-be God, that o'er them moves
 And take the thund'ring of his brass for Jove's
 If this be wisdom, then farewell, my books,
 Farewell, ye shrines of old, ye classic brooks,
 Which fed my soul with currents, pure and fair,
 Of living Truth, that now must stagnate there!—
 Instead of themes that touch the lyre with light,
 Instead of Greece, and her immortal fight
 For Liberty, which once awak'd my strings,
 Welcome the Grand Conspiracy of Kings,
 The High Legimates, the Holy Band,
 Who, bolder ev'n than He of Sparta's land,
 Against whole millions, panting to be free,
 Would guard the pass of right-line tyranny.
 Instead of him, the' Athenian bard, whose blade
 Had stood the onset which his pen portray'd, Welcome

100

110

And, 'stead of ARISTIDES—woe the day
 Such names should mingle!—welcome C——GH!

Here break we off, at this unhallow'd name,¹
 Like priests of old, when words ill-omen'd came.
 My next shall tell thee, bitterly shall tell,
 Thoughts that

Thoughts that—could patience hold—'twere wiser far
 To leave still hid and burning where they are.

LETTER V

FROM MISS BIDDY FUDGE TO MISS DOROTHY —

WHAT a time since I wrote!—I'm a sad, naughty girl—
 For, though, like a tee-totum, I'm all in a twirl;—
 Yet ev'n (as you wittily say) a tee-totum
 Between all its swirls gives a letter to note 'em.
 But, Lord, such a place! and then, DOLLY, my dresses,
 My gowns, so divine!—there's no language expresses,
 Except just the two words 'superbe,' 'magnifique,'
 The trimmings of that which I had home last week!
 It is call'd—I forget—à la—something which sounded
 Like alicampane—but, in truth, I'm confounded
 And bother'd, my dear, 'twixt that troublesome boy's (Bob's) cookery language, and Madame LE ROI's:

10

¹ The late Lord C. of Ireland had a curious theory about names:—he held that every man with three names was a jacobin. His instances in Ireland were numerous:—viz. Archibald Hamilton Rowan, Theobald Wolfe Tone, James Napper Tandy, John Philpot Curran, &c. &c.; and in England, he produced as examples Charles James Fox, Richard Brinsley Sheridan, John Horne Tooke, Francis Burdett Jones, &c. &c.

The Romans called a thief 'homo trium literarum.'

Tun' trium literarum homo
 Me vituperas? Fur.^a
 Plautus, Aulular. Act. ii. Scene 4.

^a Dissaldeus supposes this word to be a glossema:—that is, he thinks 'Fur' has made his escape from the margin into the text.

What with fillets of roses, and fillets of veal,
 Things garni with lace, and things garni with eel,
 One's hair and one's cutlets both en papillote,
 And a thousand more things I shall ne'er have by rote,
 I can scarce tell the difference, at least as to phrase,
 Between beef à la Psyché and curls à la braise.—
 But, in short, dear, I'm trick'd out quite à la Française,
 With my bonnet—so beautiful!—high up and poking,
 Like things that are put to keep chimnies from smoking.

20

Where shall I begin with the endless delights
 Of this Eden of milliners, monkies, and sights—
 This dear busy place, where there's nothing transacting
 But dressing and dinnering, dancing and acting?
 Imprimis, the Opera—mercy, my ears!

Brother BOBBY's remark, t'other night, was a true one;—
 'This must be the music,' said he, 'of the spears,

For I'm curst if each note of it doesn't run through one!'
 Pa says (and you know, love, his Book's to make out
 'Twas the Jacobins brought ev'ry mischief about)
 That this passion for roaring has come in of late,
 Since the rabble all tried for a voice in the State.—
 What a frightful idea, one's mind to o'erwhelm!

30

What a chorus, dear DOLLY, would soon be let loose of it,
 If, when of age, every man in the realm

Had a voice like old LAÏS,¹ and chose to make use of it!
 No—never was known in this riotous sphere
 Such a breach of the peace as their singing, my dear.
 So bad too, you'd swear that the God of both arts,

40

Of Music and Physic, had taken a frolic
 For setting a loud fit of asthma in parts,
 And composing a fine rumbling base to a cholic!

But, the dancing—ah! parlez-moi, DOLLY, de ça—
 There, indeed, is a treat that charms all but Papa.
 Such beauty—such grace—oh ye sylphs of romance!

Fly, fly to TITANIA, and ask her if she has
 One light-footed nymph in her train, that can dance
 Like divine BIGOTTINI and sweet FANNY BIAS!
 FANNY BIAS in FLORA—dear creature!—you'd swear,
 When her delicate feet in the dance twinkle round,
 That her steps are of light, that her home is the air,
 And she only par complaisance touches the ground.

50

And when BIGOTTINI in PSYCHÉ dishevels
 Her black flowing hair, and by daemons is driven,
 Oh! who does not envy those rude little devils,
 That hold her and hug her, and keep her from heaven?
 Then, the music—so softly its cadences die,
 So divinely—oh, DOLLY! between you and I,
 It's as well for my peace that there's nobody nigh
 To make love to me then—you've a soul, and can judge
 What a crisis 'twould be for your friend BIDDY FUDGE!

The next place (which BOBBY has near lost his heart in)
 They call it the Play-house—I think—of St. Martin; ¹
 Quite charming—and very religious—what folly
 To say that the French are not pious, dear DOLLY,
 Where here one beholds, so correctly and rightly,
 The Testament turn'd into melo-dramas nightly; ²
 And, doubtless, so fond they're of scriptural facts,
 They will soon get the Pentateuch up in five acts.
 Here DANIEL, in pantomime, ³ bids bold defiance
 To NEBUCHADNEZZAR and all his stuff'd lions,
 While pretty young Israelites dance round the Prophet,
 In very thin clothing, and but little of it;—
 Here BÉGRAND, ⁴ who shines in this scriptural path,
 As the lovely SUZANNA, without ev'n a relic
 Of drapery round her, comes out of the bath
 In a manner that, BOB says, is quite Eve-angelic!
 But in short, dear, 'twould take me a month to recite
 All the exquisite places we're at, day and night;
 And, besides, ere I finish, I think you'll be glad
 Just to hear one delightful adventure I've had.

70

Last night, at the Beaujon, ⁵ a place where—I doubt
 If its charms I can paint—there are cars, that set out
 From a lighted pavilion, high up in the air,
 And rattle you down DOLL—you hardly know where.
 These vehicles, mind me, in which you go through
 This delightfully dangerous journey, hold two.
 Some cavalier asks, with humility, whether

You'll venture down with him—you smile—'tis a match;
 In an instant you're seated, and down both together
 Go thund'ring, as if you went post to old scratch! ⁶
 Well, it was but last night, as I stood and remark'd
 On the looks and odd ways of the girls who embark'd,
 The impatience of some for the perilous flight,
 The forc'd giggle of others, 'twixt pleasure and fright,—
 That there came up—imagine, dear DOLL, if you can
 A fine sallow, sublime, sort of Werter-fac'd man,
 With mustachios that gave (what we read of so oft)
 The dear Corsair expression, half savage, half soft,

100

¹ The Théâtre de la Porte St.-Martin, which was built when the Opera House in the Palais Royal was burnt down, in 1781.—A few days after this dreadful fire, which lasted more than a week, and in which several persons perished, the Parisian élégantes displayed flame-coloured dresses, 'couleur de feu d'Opéra!'—Dulaure, Curiosités de Paris.

² 'The Old Testament,' says the theatrical Critic in the Gazette de France, 'is a mine of gold for the managers of our small play-houses. A multitude crowd round the Théâtre de la Gaîté every evening to see the Passage of the Red Sea.'

In the play-bill of one of these sacred melo-dramas at Vienna, we find 'The Voice of G—d,' by M. Schwartz.'

³ A piece very popular last year, called

'Daniel, ou La Fosse aux Lions.' The following scene will give an idea of the daring sublimity of these Scriptural pantomimes. 'Scene 20.—La fournaise devient un berceau de nuages azurés, au fond duquel est un groupe de nuages plus lumineux, et au milieu "Jehovah" au centre d'un cercle de rayons brillans, qui annonce la présence de l'Eternel.'

⁴ Madame Bégrand, a finely-formed woman, who acts in 'Susanna and the Elders,'—'L'Amour et la Folie,' &c. &c.

⁵ The Promenades Asiniennes, or French Mountains.—See a description of this singular and fantastic place of amusement in a pamphlet, truly worthy of it, by 'F. F. Cottarel Médecin, Docteur de la Faculté de Paris,' &c. &c.

⁶ According to Dr. Cottarel the cars go at the rate of forty-eight miles an hour.

As Hyaenas in love may be fancied to look, or
 A something between ABELARD and old BLUCHER!
 Up he came, DOLL, to me, and, uncov'ring his head,
 (Rather bald, but so warlike!) in bad English said,
 'Ah! my dear—if Ma'mselle vil be so very good—
 Just for von littel course'—though I scarce understood
 What he wish'd me to do, I said, thank him, I would.
 Off we set—and, though faith, dear, I hardly knew whether
 My head or my heels were the uppermost then,
 For 'twas like heav'n and earth, DOLLY, coming together,— 110

Yet, spite of the danger, we dar'd it again.
 And oh! as I gaz'd on the features and air
 Of the man, who for me all this peril defied,
 I could fancy almost he and I were a pair
 Of unhappy young lovers, who thus, side by side,
 Were taking, instead of rope, pistol, or dagger, a Desperate dash down the falls of Niagara!

This achiev'd, through the gardens¹ we saunter'd about,
 Saw the fire-works, exclaim'd 'magnifique!' at each cracker,
 And, when 'twas all o'er, the dear man saw us out 120
 With the air I will say, of a Prince, to our fiacre.

Now, hear me—this stranger—it may be mere folly—
 But who do you think we all think it is, DOLLY?
 Why, bless you, no less than the great King of Prussia,
 Who's here now incog.²—he, who made such a fuss, you
 Remember, in London, with BLUCHER and PLATOFF,
 When SAL was near kissing old BLUCHER's cravat off!
 Pa says ho's come here to look after his money.
 (Not taking things now as he us'd under BONEY,) 130
 Which suits with our friend, for BOB saw him, he swore,
 Looking sharp to the silver receiv'd at the door.
 Besides, too, they say that his grief for his Queen
 (Which was plain in this sweet fellow's face to be seen)
 Requires such a stimulant dose as this car is,
 Us'd three times a day with young ladies in Paris.
 Some Doctor, indeed, has declared that such grief
 Should—unless 'twould to utter despairing its folly push—
 Fly to the Beaujon, and there seek relief
 By rattling, as BOB says, 'like shot through a holly-bush.'

I must now bid adieu;—only think, DOLLY, think 140
 If this should be the King—I have scarce slept a wink
 With imagining how it will sound in the papers
 And how all the Misses my good luck will grudge,
 When they read that Count RUPPIN, to drive away vapours,
 Has gone down the Beaujon with Miss BRIDY FUDGE.

¹ In the Café attached to these gardens there are to be (as Doctor Cottetel informs us) 'douze nègres, très-alertes, qui contrasteront par l'ébène de leur peau avec le teint de lis et de roses de nos belles. Les glaces et les sorbets, servis par une main bien noire, fera davantage ressortir l'albâtre des bras arrondis de celles-ci.'—p. 22.

² His Majesty, who was at Paris under the travelling name of Count Ruppín, is known to have gone down the Beaujon very frequently.

Nota Bene.—Papa's almost certain 'tis he—
For he knows the Legitimate cut, and could see,
In the way he went poisoning and manag'd to tower
So erect in the car, the true Balance of Power.

LETTER VI

FROM PHIL. FUDGE, ESQ. TO HIS BROTHER TIM FUDGE, ESQ. BARRISTER AT LAW

Yours of the 12th receiv'd just now—
Thanks for the hint, my trusty brother!

'Tis truly pleasing to see how

We, FUDGES, stand by one another.
But never fear—I know my chap,
And he knows me too—verbum sap.
My Lord and I are kindred spirits,
Like in our ways as two young ferrets;
Both fashion'd, as that supple race is,
To twist into all sorts of places;—
Creatures lengthy, lean, and hungering,
Fond of blood and burrow-mongering.

As to my Book in 91,

Call'd 'Down with Kings, or, Who'd have thought it?'

Bless you, the Book's long dead and
gone,—

Not ev'n the Attorney-General bought it.

And, though some few seditious tricks
I play'd in 95 and 6,

As you remind me in your letter,
His Lordship likes me all the better;—
We proselytes, that come with news full,
Are, as he says, so vastly useful!

REYNOLDS and I—(you know TOM
REYNOLDS—

Drinks his claret, keeps his chaise—
Lucky the dog that first unkennels
Traitors and Luddites now-a-days;
Or who can help to bag a few,
When S—D—TH wants a death or two;]

¹ Lord C.'s tribute to the character of his friend, Mr. Reynolds, will long be remembered with equal credit to both.

² This interpretation of the fable of Midas's ears seems the most probable of any, and is thus stated in Hoffmann:—'Hæc allegoriâ significatum, Midam, utpote tyrannum, subauscultatores dimittere solitum, per quos, quaecunque per omnem regionem vel ferebant, vel dicerentur, cognosceret, nimirum illis utens aurium vice.'

³ Brossette, in a note on this line of Boileau, 'Midas, le Roi Midas, a des oreilles d'Ane,' tells us, that 'M. Perrault le Médecin voulut

REYNOLDS and I, and some few more,
All men, like us, of information,
Friends, whom his Lordship keeps in store,

As under-saviours of the nation—
Have form'd a Club this season, where
His Lordship sometimes take the chair,
And gives us many a bright oration
In praise of our sublime vocation;
Tracing it up to great King MIDAS,
Who, though in fable typified as
A royal Ass, by grace divine
And right of ears, most asinine,
Was yet no more, in fact historical,

Than an exceeding well-bred tyrant;
And these, his ears, but allegorical,
Meaning Informers, kept at high rent—

Gem'men, who touch'd the Treasury
glisterers,

Like us, for being trusty list'ners;
And picking up each tale and fragment,
For royal MIDAS's Green Bag meant.

'And wherefore,' said this best of Peers,
'Should not the R—G—T too have ears,
To reach as far, as long and wide as
Those of his model, good King MIDAS?'

This speech was thought extremely good,
And (rare for him) was understood—
Instant we drank 'The R—G—T's Ears,'
With three times three illustrious cheers,

Which made the room resound like thunder—

'The R—G—T's Ears, and may he ne'er
From foolish shame, like MIDAS, wear
Old paltry wigs to keep them under!'

faire à notre auteur un crime d'état de ce vers, comme d'une maligne allusion au Roi.' I trust, however, that no one will suspect the line in the text of any such indecorous allusion.

⁴ It was not under wigs, but tiaras, that King Midas endeavoured to conceal these appendages:

Tempora purpureis tentat velare tiaris.—

OVID.

The Noble Giver of the toast, however, had evidently, with his usual clearness, confounded King Midas, Mr. Liston, and the P—e R—g—t together.

This touch at our old friends, the Whigs,
Made us as merry all as grigs. 62

In short (I'll thank you not to mention
These things again), we get on gaily ;

And, thanks to pension and Suspension,
Our little Club increases daily.

CASTLES, and OLIVER, and such,
Who don't as yet full salary touch,

Nor keep their chaise and pair, nor buy
Houses and lands, like TOM and I, 70

Of course don't rank with us, salvators,¹
But merely serve the Club as waiters.

Like Knights, too, we've our collar days,
(For us, I own, an awkward phrase,)

When, in our new costume adorn'd,—
The R—G—T's buff-and-blue coats
turn'd—

We have the honour to give dinners
To the chief Rats in upper stations ; ²

Your W—Ys, V—Ns,—half-fledg'd sinners,

Who shame us by their imitations ; 80
Who turn, 'tis true—but what of that ?

Give me the useful peaching Rat ;
Not things as mute as Punch, when bought,

Whose wooden heads are all they've brought ;

Who, false enough to shirk their friends,

But too faint-hearted to betray,
Are, after all their twists and bends,

But souls in Limbo, damn'd half way.
No, no, we nobler vermin are

A genus useful as we're rare ; 90
³Midst all the things miraculous

Of which your natural histories brag,
The rarest must be Rats like us,

Who let the cat out of the bag.
Yet still these Tyros in the cause

Deserve, I own, no small applause ;

¹ Mr. Fudge and his friends ought to go by this name—as the man, who, some years since, saved the late Right Hon. George Rose from drowning, was ever after called Salvator Rosa.

² This intimacy between the Rats and In-formers is just as it should be—verè dulce sodalium.

³ His Lordship, during one of the busiest periods of his Ministerial career, took lessons three times a week from a celebrated music-master, in glee-singing.

⁴ How amply these two propensities of the Noble Lord would have been gratified among that ancient people of Etruria, who, as Aristotle tell us, used to whip their slaves once a year to the sound of flutes !

⁵ This Right Hon. Gentleman ought to give

And they're by us receiv'd and treated
With all due honours—only seated

In the' inverse scale of their reward,
The merely promis'd next my Lord ; 100

Small pensions then, and so on, down,
Rat after rat, they graduate

Through job, red ribbon, and silk gown,
To Chanc'llorship and Marquisate.

This serves to nurse the ratting spirit ;
The less the bribe the more the merit.

Our music's good, you may be sure ;
My Lord, you know, 's an amateur—³

Takes every part with perfect ease, 109
Though to the Base by nature suited ;

And, form'd for all, as best may please,
For whips and bolts, or chords and keys,

Turns from his victims to his glees,
And has them both well executed.⁴

H—T—D, who, though no Rat himself,

Delights in all such liberal arts,
Drinks largely to the House of Guelf,

And superintends the Corn's parts.
While C—NN—G,⁵ who'd be first by choice,

Consents to take an under voice ; 120

And GR—V—S,⁶ who well that signal
knows,

Watches the Voliti subitos.⁷

In short, as I've already hinted,
We take, of late, prodigiously ;

But as our Club is somewhat stunted
For Gentlemen, like TOM and me,

We'll take it kind if you'll provide
A few Squireens ⁸ from t'other side ;—

Some of those loyal, cunning elves 129
(We often tell the tale with laughter),

Who us'd to hide the pikes themselves,
Then hang the fools who found them after.

up his present alliance with Lord C., if upon no other principle than that which is inculcated in the following arrangement between two Ladies of Fashion.—

Says Clarinda, 'though tears it may cost,
It is time we should part, my dear Sue ;
For your character's totally lost,
And I have not sufficient for two !'

⁶ The rapidity of this Noble Lord's transformation, at the same instant, into a Lord of the Bed-chamber and an opponent of the Catholic Claims, was truly miraculous.

⁷ Turn instantly—a frequent direction in music-books.

⁸ The Irish diminutive of Squire.

I doubt not you could find us, too,
 Some Orange Parsons that might do ;
 Among the rest, we've heard of one,
 The Reverend—something—HAMILTON,
 Who stuff'd a figure of himself
 (Delicious thought!) and had it shot at,
 To bring some Papists to the shelf,
 That couldn't otherwise be got at—
 If he'll but join the' Association, 141
 We'll vote him in by acclamation.

And now, my brother, guide, and friend,
 This somewhat tedious scrawl must end.
 I've gone into this long detail,

Because I saw your nerves were shaken
 With anxious fears lest I should fail
 In this new, loyal, course I've taken.
 But, bless your heart! you need not
 doubt—

We, FUDGES, know what we're about.
 Look round, and say if you can see
 A much more thriving family. 152

There's JACK, the Doctor—night and day
 Hundreds of patients so besiege him,
 You'd swear that all the rich and gay
 Fell sick on purpose to oblige him.

And while they think, the precious ninnies,
 He's counting o'er their pulses so steady,
 The rogue but counts how many guineas
 He's fobb'd, for that day's work,
 already. 160

I'll ne'er forget the' old maid's alarm,
 When, feeling thus Miss Sukey Flirt, he Said, as he dropp'd her shrivell'd arm,
 'Damn'd bad this morning—only thirty!'

Your dowagers, too, every one,
 So gen'rous are, when they call him in,
 That he might now retire upon

The rheumatisms of three old women.
 Then, whatsoe'er your ailments are,
 He can so learnedly explain ye 'em—
 Your cold, of course, is a catarrh, 171

Your headache is a hemi-cranium :—
 His skill, too, in young ladies' lungs,
 The grace with which, most mild of
 men,

He begs them to put out their tongues,
 Then bids them—put them in again :
 In short, there's nothing now like
 JACK!—

Take all your doctors great and small,
 Of present times and ages back, 179
 Dear Doctor FUDGE is worth them all.

So much for physic—then, in law too,
 Counsellor TIM, to thee we bow ;
 Not one of us gives more eclat to
 The' immortal name of FUDGE than thou.

Not to expatiate on the art
 With which you play'd the patriot's part,
 Till something good and snug should offer ;—

Like one, who, by the way he acts
 The' enlight'ning part of candle-snuffer,
 The manager's keen eye attracts, 190
 And is promoted thence by him
 To strut in robes, like thee, my TIM!—
 Who shall describe thy pow'rs of face,
 Thy well-fee'd zeal in ev'ry case,
 Or wrong or right—but ten times warmer
 (As suits thy calling) in the former—
 Thy glorious, lawyer-like delight
 In puzzling all that's clear and right,
 Which, though conspicuous in thy
 youth, 199

Improves so with a wig and band on,
 That all thy pride's to waylay Truth,
 And leave her not a leg to stand on.

Thy patent, prime, morality,—
 Thy cases, cited from the Bible—
 Thy candour, when it falls to thee
 To help in trouncing for a libel ;—

God knows, I, from my soul, profess
 To hate all bigots and benighters !
 God knows, I love, to ev'n excess,
 The sacred Freedom of the Press, 210

My only aim's to—crush the writers.
 These are the virtues, TIM, that draw
 The briefs into thy bag so fast ;

And these, oh TIM—if Law be Law—
 Will raise thee to the Bench at last.

I blush to see this letter's length—
 But 'twas my wish to prove to thee
 How full of hope, and wealth, and
 strength,

Are all our precious family.
 And, should affairs go on as pleasant 220
 As, thank the Fates, they do at present—
 Should we but still enjoy the sway
 Of S—DM—H and of C—GH,
 I hope, ere long, to see the day
 When England's wisest statesmen, judges,

Lawyers, peers, will all be—FUDGES !
 Good-by—my paper's out so nearly,
 I've only room for Yours sincerely.

LETTER VII

FROM PHELM CONNOR TO ———

BEFORE we sketch the Present—let us cast
A few, short, rapid glances to the Past.

When he, who had defied all Europe's strength,
Beneath his own weak rashness sunk at length;—
When, loos'd, as if by magic, from a chain
That seem'd like Fate's, the world was free again,
And Europe saw, rejoicing in the sight,
The cause of Kings, for once, the cause of Right;—
Then was, indeed, an hour of joy to those
Who sigh'd for justice—liberty—repose, 10
And hop'd the fall of one great vulture's nest
Would ring its warning round, and scare the rest.
All then was bright with promise;—Kings began
To own a sympathy with suff'ring Man,
And Man was grateful; Patriots of the South
Caught wisdom from a Cossack Emperor's mouth,
And heard, like accents thaw'd in Northern air,
Unwonted words of freedom burst forth there!

Who did not hope, in that triumphant time,
When monarchs, after years of spoil and crime, 20
Met round the shrine of Peace, and Heav'n look'd on,—
Who did not hope the lust of spoil was gone;
That that rapacious spirit, which had play'd
The game of Pilnitz o'er so oft, was laid;
And Europe's Rulers, conscious of the past,
Would blush, and deviate into right at last?
But no—the hearts, that nurs'd a hope so fair,
Had yet to learn what men on thrones can dare;
Had yet to know, of all earth's rav'ning things,
The only quite untameable are Kings! 30
Scarce had they met when, to its nature true,
The instinct of their race broke out anew;
Promises, treaties, charters, all were vain,
And 'Rapine! rapine!' was the cry again.
How quick they carv'd their victims, and how well,
Let Saxony, let injur'd Genoa tell;—
Let all the human stock that, day by day,
Was, at that Royal slave-mart, truck'd away,—
The million souls that, in the face of heaven,
Were split to fractions,¹ barter'd, sold, or given 40
To swell some despot Power, too huge before,
And weigh down Europe with one Mammoth more.
How safe the faith of Kings let France decide;—
Her charter broken, ere its ink had dried;—

¹ 'Whilst the Congress was re-constructing Europe—not according to rights, natural affiances, language, habits, or laws; but by tables of finance, which divided and subdivided her population into souls, demi-souls, and even fractions, according to a scale of the direct duties or taxes which could be levied by the acquiring state,' &c.—Sketch of the Military and Political Power of Russia. The words on the protocol are âmes, demi-âmes, &c.

Her Press enthrall'd—her Reason mock'd again
 With all the monkery it had spurn'd in vain;
 Her crown disgrac'd by one, who dar'd to own
 He thank'd not France but England for his throne;
 Her triumphs cast into the shade by those,
 Who had grown old among her bitterest foes,
 And now return'd, beneath her conquerors' shields,
 Unblushing slaves! to claim her heroes' fields;
 To tread down ev'ry trophy of her fame,
 And curse that glory which to them was shame!—
 Let these—let all the damning deeds, that then
 Were dar'd through Europe, cry aloud to men,
 With voice like that of crashing ice that rings
 Round Alpine huts, the perfidy of Kings;
 And tell the world, when hawks shall harmless bear
 The shrinking dove, when wolves shall learn to spare
 The helpless victim for whose blood they lusted,
 Then, and then only, monarchs may be trusted.

It could not last—these horrors could not last—
 France would herself have ris'n, in might, to cast
 The' insulters off—and oh! that then, as now,
 Chain'd to some distant islet's rocky brow,
 NAPOLEON ne'er had come to force, to blight,
 Ere half matur'd, a cause so proudly bright;—
 To palsy patriot arts with doubt and shame,
 And write on Freedom's flag a despot's name;—
 To rush into the lists, unask'd, alone,
 And make the stake of all the game of one!
 Then would the world have seen again what pow'r
 A people can put forth in Freedom's hour;
 Then would the fire of France once more have blaz'd;—
 For every single sword, reluctant rais'd
 In the stale cause of an oppressive throne,
 Millions would then have leap'd forth in her own;
 And never, never had the' unholy stain
 Of Bourbon feet disgrac'd her shores again.

But fate decreed not so—the' Imperial Bird,
 That, in his neighbouring cage, unfear'd, unstirr'd,
 Had seem'd to sleep with head beneath his wing,
 Yet watch'd the moment for a daring spring;—
 Well might he watch, when deeds were done, that made
 His own transgressions whiten in their shade;
 Well might he hope a world, thus trampled o'er
 By clumsy tyrants, would be his once more:—
 Forth from his cage the eagle burst to light,
 From steeple on to steeple¹ wing'd his flight,
 With calm and easy grandeur, to that throne
 From which a Royal craven just had flown;
 And resting there, as in his aerie, furl'd
 Those wings, whose very rustling shook the world!

What was your fury then, ye crown'd array,
 Whose feast of spoil, whose plund'ring holiday
 Was thus broke up, in all its greedy mirth,
 By one bold chieftain's stamp on Gallic earth!
 Fierce was the cry, and fulminant the ban,—
 'Assassinate, who will—enchain, who can,
 The vile, the faithless, outlaw'd, low-born man!' 100
 'Faithless!'—and this from you—from you, forsooth,
 Ye pious Kings, pure paragons of truth,
 Whose honesty all knew, for all had tried;
 Whose true Swiss zeal had serv'd on every side;
 Whose fame for breaking faith so long was known,
 Well might ye claim the craft as all your own,
 And lash your lordly tails, and fume to see
 Such low-born apes of Royal perfidy!
 Yes—yes—to you alone did it belong 110
 To sin for ever, and yet ne'er do wrong.—
 The frauds, the lies of Lords legitimate
 Are but fine policy, deep strokes of state;
 But let some upstart dare to soar so high
 In Kingly craft, and 'outlaw' is the cry!
 What, though long years of mutual treachery
 Had peopled full your diplomatic shelves
 With ghosts of treaties, murder'd 'mong yourselves;
 Though each by turns was knave and dupe—what then?
 A Holy League would set all straight again; 120
 Like Jūno's virtue, which a dip or two
 In some bless'd fountain made as good as new!¹
 Most faithful Russia—faithful to whome'er
 Could plunder best, and give him amplest share;
 Who, ev'n when vanquish'd, sure to gain his ends,
 For want of foes to rob, made free with friends,²
 And, deepening still by amiable gradations,
 When foes were stript of all, then fleec'd relations!³
 Most mild and saintly Prussia—steep'd to the ears
 In persecuted Poland's blood and tears, 130
 And now, with all her harpy wings outspread
 O'er sever'd Saxony's devoted head!
 Pure Austria too—whose hist'ry nought repeats
 But broken leagues and subsidiz'd defeats;
 Whose faith, as Prince, extinguish'd Venice shows,
 Whose faith, as man, a widow'd daughter knows!
 And thou, oh England—who, though once as shy
 As cloister'd maids, of shame or perfidy,
 Art now broke in, and, thanks to C———GH,
 In all that's worst and falsest lead'st the way! 140
 Such was the pure divan, whose pens and wits
 The' escape from Elba frighten'd into fits;—
 Such were the saints, who doom'd NAPOLÉON's life,
 In virtuous frenzy to the assassin's knife.

² At the peace of Tilsit, where he abandoned his ally, Prussia, to France, and received a portion of her territory.

³ The seizure of Finland from his relative of Sweden.

Disgusting crew!—who would not gladly fly
 To open, downright, bold-fac'd tyranny,
 To honest guilt, that dares do all but lie,
 From the false, juggling craft of men like these,
 Their canting crimes and varnish'd villainies;—
 These Holy Leaguers, who then loudest boast
 Of faith and honour, when they've stain'd them most; 150
 From whose affection men should shrink as loath
 As from their hate, for they'll be fleec'd by both;
 Who, ev'n while plund'ring, forge Religion's name
 To frank their spoil, and, without fear or shame,
 Call down the Holy Trinity¹ to bless
 Partition leagues, and deeds of devilishness!
 But hold—enough—soon would this swell of rage
 O'erflow the boundaries of my scanty page;—
 So, here I pause—farewell—another day, 160
 Return we to those Lords of pray'r and prey,
 Whose loathsome cant, whose frauds by right divine,
 Deserve a lash—oh! weightier far than mine!

LETTER VIII

FROM MR. BOB FUDGE TO RICHARD —, ESQ.

DEAR DICK, while old DONALDSON'S² mending my stays,—
 Which I knew would go smash with me one of these days,
 And, at yesterday's dinner, when, full to the throttle,
 We lads had begun our desert with a bottle
 Of neat old Constantia, on my leaning back
 Just to order another, by Jove I went crack!—
 Or, as honest TOM said, in his nautical phrase,
 'D—n my eyes, BOB, in doubling the Cape you've miss'd stays.'³
 So, of course, as no gentleman's seen out without them,
 They're now at the Schneider's⁴—and, while he's about them, 10
 Here goes for a letter, post-haste, neck and crop.
 Let us see—in my last I was—where did I stop?
 Oh, I know—at the Boulevards, as motley a road as Man ever would wish a day's lounging upon;
 With its cafés and gardens, hotels and pagodas,
 Its founts, and old Counts sipping beer in the sun:
 With its houses of all architectures you please,
 From the Grecian and Gothic, DICK, down by degrees
 To the pure Hottentot, or the Brighton Chinese;
 Where in temples antique you may breakfast or dinner it, 20
 Lunch at a mosque, and see Punch from a minaret.
 Then, DICK, the mixture of bonnets and bow'rs,
 Of foliage and fripp'ry, facres and flow'rs,

¹ The usual preamble of these flagitious compacts. In the same spirit, Catherine, after the dreadful massacre of Warsaw, ordered a solemn 'thanksgiving to God in all the churches, for the blessings conferred upon the Poles;' and commanded that each of them should 'swear fidelity and loyalty to her, and to shed in her defence the last drop of their blood, as they should answer for it to God, and his terrible judgment, kissing the holy word and cross of their Saviour!

² An English tailor at Paris.

³ A ship is said to miss stays, when she does not obey the helm in tacking.

⁴ The dandy term for a tailor.

Green-grocers, green gardens—one hardly knows whether
 'Tis country or town, they're so mess'd up together !
 And there, if one loves the romantic, one sees
 Jew clothes-men, like shepherds, reclin'd under trees ;
 Or Quidnuncs, on Sunday, just fresh from the barber's,
 Enjoying their news and *groseille*¹ in those arbours ;
 While gaily their wigs, like the tendrils, are curling,
 And founts of red currant-juice² round them are purling.

30

Here, DICK, arm in arm as we chattering stray,
 And receive a few civil 'God-dems' by the way,—
 For, 'tis odd, these mounseers,—though we've wasted our wealth
 And our strength, till we've thrown ourselves into a phthisis,
 To cram down their throats an old King for their health,

As we whip little children to make them take physic ;—
 Yet, spite of our good-natur'd money and slaughter,
 They hate us as Beelzebub hates holy-water !

40

But who the deuce cares, DICK, as long as they nourish us
 Neatly as now, and good cookery flourishes—
 Long as, by bay'nets protected, we, Natties,
 May have our full fling at their salmis and pâtés ?
 And, truly, I always declar'd 'twould be pity
 To burn to the ground such a choice-feeding city.
 Had Dad but his way, he'd have long ago blown
 The whole batch to old Nick—and the people, I own,
 If for no other cause than their curst monkey looks,
 Well deserve a blow-up—but then, damn it, their Cooks !
 As to Marshals, and Statesmen, and all their whole lineage,
 For aught that I care, you may knock them to spinage ;
 But think, DICK, their Cooks—what a loss to mankind !
 What a void in the world would their art leave behind !
 Their chronometer spits—their intense salamanders—
 Their ovens—their pots, that can soften old ganders,
 All vanish'd for ever—their miracles o'er,
 And the *Marmite Perpétuelle*³ bubbling no more !
 Forbid it, forbid it, ye Holy Allies !

50

Take whatever ye fancy—take statues, take money—
 But leave them, oh leave them, their Perigueux pies,
 Their glorious goose-livers, and high pickled tunny !⁴
 Though many, I own, are the evils they've brought us,
 Though Royalty's here on her very last legs,
 Yet, who can help loving the land that has taught us
 Six hundred and eighty-five ways to dress eggs ?⁵

60

² These gay, portable fountains, from which the groseille water is administered, are among the most characteristic ornaments of the streets of Paris.

³ 'Cette merveilleuse Marmite Perpétuelle, sur le feu depuis près d'un siècle ; qui a donné le jour à plus de 800,000 chapons.'—Alman. de Gourmands, Quatrième Année, p. 152.

⁴ Le thon mariné, one of the most favourite and indigestible hors-d'œuvres. This fish is taken chiefly in the Golfe de Lyon. 'La tête et le dessous du ventre sont les parties les plus recherchées des gourmets.'—Cours Gastronomique, p. 252.

⁵ The exact number mentioned by M. de la Reynière—'On connoît en France 685 manières différentes d'accommoder les œufs ; sans compter celles que nos savans imaginent chaque jour.'

You see, DICK, in spite of their cries of 'God-dam,'
 'Coquin Anglais,' et caet'ra—how gen'rous I am!
 And now (to return, once again, to my 'Day,'
 Which will take us all night to get through in this way,) 70
 From the Boulevards we saunter through many a street,
 Crack jokes on the natives—mine, all very neat—
 Leave the Signs of the Times to political fops,
 And find twice as much fun in the Signs of the Shops;—
Here, a Louis Dix-huit—there, a Martinmas goose, (Much in vogue since your eagles are gone out of use)—
 Henri Quatres in shoals, and of Gods a great many,
 But saints are the most on hard duty of any:—
 St. TONY, who us'd all temptations to spurn,
Here hangs o'er a beer-shop, and tempts in his turn;
 While there St. VENECIA¹ sits hemming and frilling her 80
 Holy mouchoir o'er the door of some milliner;—
 Saint AUSTIN's the 'outward and visible sign
 Of an inward' cheap dinner, and pint of small wine;
 While St. DENYS hangs out o'er some hatter of ton,
 And possessing, good bishop, no head of his own,²
 Takes an int'rest in Dandies, who've got—next to none!
 Then we stare into shops—read the evening's affiches—
 Or, if some, who're Lotharios in feeding, should wish
 Just to flirt with a luncheon, (a devilish bad trick,
 As it takes off the bloom of one's appetite, DICK,) 90
 To the Passage des—what d'ye call't—*des Panoramas*³
 We quicken our pace, and there heartily cram as Seducing young pâtés, as ever could cozen
 One out of one's appetite, down by the dozen.
 We vary, of course—petits pâtés do one day,
 The next we've our lunch with the Gaufrier Hollandais,⁴
 That popular artist, who brings out, like Sc—TT,
 His delightful productions so quick, hot and hot;
 Not the worse for the exquisite comment that follows,—
 Divine maresquino, which—Lord, how one swallows! 100

Once more, then, we saunter forth after our snack, or
 Subscribe a few francs for the price of a fiacre,
 And drive far away to the old Montagnes Russes,
 Where we find a few twirls in the car of much use
 To regen'rate the hunger and thirst of us sinners,
 Who've laps'd into snacks—the perdition of dinners.
 And here, DICK—in answer to one of your queries,
 About which we, Gourmands, have had much discussion—
 I've tried all these mountains, Swiss, French, and Ruggieri's,
 And think, for digestion,⁵ there's none like the Russian; 110

¹ Veronica, the Saint of the Holy Handkerchief, is also, under the name of Venisse or Venecia, the tutelary saint of milliners.

² St. Denys walked three miles after his head was cut off. The mot of a woman of wit upon this legend is well known:—'Je le crois bien; en pareil cas, il n'y a que le premier pas qui coûte.'

³ Off the Boulevards Italiens.

⁴ In the Palais Royal; successor, I believe, to the Flamand, so long celebrated for the mouffoux of his Gaufres.

⁵ Doctor Cottarel recommends, for this purpose, the Beaujon or French Mountains, and calls them 'une médecine aérienne, couleur de rose;' but I own I prefer the authority of Mr. Bob, who seems, from the following note found in his own hand-writing, to

So equal the motion—so gentle, though fleet—

It, in short, such a light and salubrious scamper is,
That take whom you please—take old L—s D—x—t,
And stuff him—ay, up to the neck—with stew'd lampreys.¹
So wholesome these Mounts, such a solvent I've found them,
That, let me but rattle the Monarch well down them,
The fiend, Indigestion, would fly far away,
And the regicide lampreys² be foil'd of their prey!

Such, DICK, are the classical sports that content us,
Till five o'clock brings on that hour so momentous,³
That epoch—but woa! my lad—here comes the Schneider,
And, curse him, has made the stays three inches wider—
Too wide by an inch and a half—what a Guy!
But, no matter—'twill all be set right by-and-by.
As we've MASSINOT'S⁴ eloquent carte to eat still up,
An inch and a half's but a trifle to fill up.
So—not to lose time, DICK—here goes for the task;
Au revoir, my old boy—of the Gods I but ask,
That my life, like 'the Leap of the German,'⁵ may be,
'Du lit à la table, de la table au lit!'

R. F.

LETTER IX

FROM PHIL. FUDGE, ESQ. TO THE LORD VISCOUNT C—ST—GH

My Lord, the Instructions, brought to-day,
'I shall in all my best obey.'
Your Lordship talks and writes so sensibly!
And—whatsoever some wags may say—
Oh! not at all incomprehensibly.
I feel the inquiries in your letter
About my health and French most flattering;

have studied all these mountains very carefully:—

Memoranda—The Swiss little notice deserves,
While the fall at Ruggieri's is death to weak nerves;
And (whatever Doctor Cott'rel may write on the question)
The turn at the Beaujon's too sharp for digestion.

I doubt whether Mr. Bob is quite correct in accenting the second syllable of Ruggieri.

¹ A dish so indigestible, that a late novelist, at the end of his book, could imagine no more summary mode of getting rid of all his heroes and heroines than by a hearty supper of stewed lampreys.

² They killed Henry I. of England:—'a food' (says Hume, gravely,) 'which always agreed better with his palate than his constitution.'

Lampreys, indeed, seem to have been always a favourite dish with kings—whether from some congeniality between them and that fish, I know not; but Dio Cassius tells us that Pollio

Thank ye, my French, though somewhat better,

Is, on the whole, but weak and smattering:—

Nothing, of course, that can compare to With his who made the Congress stare (A certain Lord we need not name),

Who ev'n in French, would have his trope,

And talk of 'bâtir un système
Sur l'équilibre de l'Europe!'

fattened his lampreys with human blood. St. Louis of France was particularly fond of them.—See the anecdote of St. Thomas Aquinas eating up his majesty's lamprey, in a note upon Rabelais, liv. iii. chap. 2.

³ Had Mr. Bob's Dinner Epistle been inserted, I was prepared with an abundance of learned matter to illustrate it, for which, as, indeed, for all my *scientia popinas*⁴, I am indebted to a friend in the Dublin University,—whose reading formerly lay in the magic line; but, in consequence of the Provost's enlightened alarm at such studies, he has taken to the authors de re cibaria instead; and has left Bodin, Remigius, Agrippa and his little dog Filiokus, for Apicius, Nonius, and that most learned and savoury jesuit, Bulengerus.

⁴ A famous Restaurateur—now Dupont.

⁵ An old French saying;—'Faire le saut de l'Allemand, du lit à la table et de la table au lit.'

* Seneca.

Sweet metaphor!—and then the 'Epistle,
Which bid the Saxon King go whistle,—
That tender letter to 'Mon Prince,'¹
Which show'd alike thy French and sense ;—

Oh no, my Lord—there's none can do
Or say un-English things like you ; 21
And, if the schemes that fill thy breast
Could but a vent congenial seek,
And use the tongue that suits them
best,

What charming Turkish wouldst thou
speak !

But as for me, a Frenchless grub,
At Congress never born to stammer,
Nor learn like thee, my Lord, to snub
Fall'n Monarchs, out of CHAMBAUD's grammar—

Bless you, you do not, cannot know 30
How far a little French will go ;
For all one's stock, one need but draw

On some half-dozen words like these—

Comme ça—par-là—là-bas—ah ha !
They'll take you all through France with ease.

Your Lordship's praises of the scraps
I sent you from my Journal lately,
(Enveloping a few lac'd caps
For Lady C.) delight me greatly.
Her flatt'ring speech—'what pretty
things 40

One finds in Mr. FUDGE's pages !'
Is praise which (as some poet sings)
Would pay one for the toils of ages.

Thus flatter'd, I presume to send
A few more extracts by a friend ;
And I should hope they'll be no less
Approv'd of than my last MS.—
The former ones, I fear, were creas'd,
As BIDDY round the caps would pin
them !

But these will come to hand, at least 50
Unrump'd, for there's nothing in
them.

¹ The celebrated letter to Prince Hardenburgh (written, however, I believe, originally in English,) in which his Lordship, professing to see 'no moral or political objection' to the dismemberment of Saxony, denounced the unfortunate King as 'not only the most devoted,
but the most favoured of Bonaparte's vassals.'

Extracts from Mr. Fudge's Journal, addressed to Lord C.

Aug. 10.

Went to the Mad-house—saw the man,²
Who thinks, poor wretch, that, while the Fiend

Of Discord here full riot ran,
He, like the rest, was guillotined ;—
But that when, under BONEY's reign,
(A more discreet, though quite as strong one,)

The heads were all restor'd again,
He, in the scramble, got a wrong one.
Accordingly, he still cries out 60
This strange head fits him most unpleasantly ;

And always runs, poor devil, about,
Inquiring for his own incessantly !

While to his case a tear I dropt,
And saunter'd home, thought I—ye
Gods !

How many heads might thus be swopp'd,
And, after all, not make much odds !
For instance, there's V—s—tt—r's
head—

('Tam carum' ³ it may well be said)
If by some curious chance it came 70
To settle on BILL SOAMES's⁴ shoulders,
The effect would turn out much the
same

On all respectable cash-holders :
Except that while, in its new socket,
The head was planning schemes to win

A zig-zag way into one's pocket,
The hands would plunge directly in.

Good Viscount S—DM—H, too, instead
Of his own grave, respected head,
Might wear (for aught I see that bars) 80
Old Lady WILHELMINA FRUMP's—

So while the hand sign'd Circulars,
The head might lip out, 'What is trumps ?'—

The R—G—r's brains could we transfer
To some robust man-milliner,

² This extraordinary madman is, I believe, in the Bicêtre. He imagines, exactly as Mr. Fudge states it, that, when the heads of those who had been guillotined were restored, he by mistake got some other person's instead of his own.

³ Tam cari capitis.—Horace.

⁴ A celebrated pickpocket.

The shop, the shears, the lace, and ribbon
 Would go, I doubt not, quite as glib on;
 And, vice versa, take the pains 88
 To give the P—ce the shopman's brains,
 One only change from thence would flow,
Ribbons would not be wasted so.

'Twas thus I ponder'd on, my Lord;
 And, ev'n at night, when laid in bed,
 I found myself, before I snor'd,
 Thus chopping, swopping head for head,
 At length I thought, fantastic elf!
 How such a change would suit myself.
 'Twixt sleep and waking, one by one,
 With various perioraniums saddled,
 At last I tried your Lordship's on, 100
 And then I grew completely addled—
 Forgot all other heads, od rot 'em!
 And slept, and dreamt that I was—
 BOTTOM.

Aug. 21.

Walk'd out with daughter BID—was shown
 The house of Commons, and the Throne,
 Whose velvet cushion's just the same¹
 NAPOLEON sat on—what a shame!
 Oh, can we wonder, best of speakers,
 When LOUIS seated thus we see, 109
 That France's 'fundamental features'
 Are much the same they us'd to be?
 However,—God preserve the Throne,
 And cushion too—and keep them free
 From accidents, which have been known
 To happen ev'n to Royalty!²

Aug. 28.

Read, at a stall (for oft one pops
 On something at these stalls and shops,
 That does to quote, and gives one's Book
 A classical and knowing look.—
 Indeed I've found, in Latin, lately, 120
 A course of stalls improves me greatly)—

¹ The only change, if I recollect right, is the substitution of lilies for bees. This war upon the bees is, of course, universal; 'exitium misere apibus,' like the angry nymphs in Virgil—but may not new swarms arise out of the victims of Legitimacy yet?

² I am afraid that Mr. Fudge alludes here to a very awkward accident, which is well known to have happened to poor L—s le D—s—e, some years since, at one of the R—g—t's Fêtes. He was sitting next our gracious Queen at the time.

³ The third day of the Feast the King causeth

'Twas thus I read, that, in the East,
 A monarch's fat's a serious matter;
 And once in ev'ry year, at least,
 He's weigh'd—tosee if he gets fatter:³
 Then, if a pound or two he be Increas'd, there's quite a jubilee!
 Suppose, my Lord—and far from me
 To treat such things with levity—
 But just suppose the R—g—t's weight
 Were made thus an affair of state; 131
 And, ev'ry sessions, at the close,—
 'Stead of a speech, which, all can see, is Heavy and dull enough, God knows—
 We were to try how heavy he is.
 Much would it glad all hearts to hear
 That, while the Nation's Revenue
 Loses so many pounds a year,
 The P—e, God bless him! gains
 a few.

With bales of muslin, chintzes, spices, 140
 I see the Easterns weigh their Kings;—
 But, for the R—g—t, my advice is,
 We should throw in much heavier
 things:

For instance ———'s quarto volumes,
 Which, though not spices, serve to wrap them;
 Dominie ST—DD—T's Daily columns,
 'Prodigious!'—in, of course, we'd clap them—
 Letters, that C—RTW—T's⁵ pen indites,

In which, with logical confusion,
 The Major like a Minor writes, 150
 And never comes to a Conclusion :—
 Lord S—M—RS' pamphlet—or his head—
 (Ah, that were worth its weight in lead!)
 Along with which we in may whip, sly,
 The Speeches of Sir JOHN C—X
 H—FF—SLY;

That Baronet of many words,
 Who loves so, in the House of Lords,

himself to be weighed with great care.'—F.
 Bernier's Voyage to Surat, &c.

⁴ 'I remember,' says Bernier, 'that all the Omrahs expressed great joy that the King weighed two pounds more now than the year preceding.'—Another author tells us that 'Fatness, as well as a very large head, is considered, throughout India, as one of the most precious gifts of heaven. An enormous skull is absolutely revered, and the happy owner is looked up to as a superior being. To a Prince a jolter head is invaluable.' Oriental Field Sports.
⁵ Major Cartwright,

To whisper Bishops—and so nigh
 Unto their wigs in whisp'ring goes,
 That you may always know him by 160
 A patch of powder on his nose!—
 If this wo'n't do, we in must cram
 The 'Reasons' of Lord B—CK—GH—M;
 (A Book his Lordship means to write, Entitled 'Reasons for my Ratting:')

Or, should these prove too small and
 light,

His r—p's a host—we'll bundle that in!

And, still should all these masses fail
 To turn the R—G—r's ponderous scale,
 Why then, my Lord, in heaven's name,
 Pitch in, without reserve or stint, 171
 The whole of R—GL—r's beauteous
 Dame—

If that wo'n't raise him, devil's in it!

Aug. 31.

Consulted MURPHY's TACITUS

About those famous spies at Rome,¹
 Whom certain Whigs—to make a fuss—
 Describe as much resembling us,²

Informing gentlemen, at home. 178

But, bless the fools, they can't be serious,
 To say Lord S—DM—TH's like TIBERIUS!
 What! he, the Peer, that injures no man,
 Like that severe, blood-thirsty Roman!—

'Tis true, the Tyrant lent an ear to
 All sort of spies—so doth the Peer, too.

'Tis true my Lord's Elect tell fibs,
 And deal in perjury—ditto TIB's.

'Tis true, the Tyrant screen'd and hid
 His rogues from justice³—ditto SID.

'Tis true the Peer is grave and glib
 At moral speeches—ditto TIB.⁴ 190

'Tis true, the feats the Tyrant did
 Were in his dotage—ditto SID.

¹ The name of the first worthy who set up the trade of informer at Rome (to whom our Oliver and Castles ought to erect a statue) was Romanus Hispanus:—'qui formam vitæ initi, quam postea celeberrimæ miseriæ temporum et audaciæ hominum fecerunt.'—Tacit. Annal. i. 74.

² They certainly possessed the same art of instigating their victims, which the Report of the Secret Committee attributes to Lord Sidmouth's agents:—'socius' (says Tacitus of one of them) 'libidinum et necessitatum, quo pluribus indicibus inligaret.'

³ 'Neque tamen id Sereno noxiæ fuit, quæm odium publicum tutiorem faciebat. Nam ut quis districtior accusator velut sacrosanctus erat.'—

So far, I own, the parallel
 'Twixt TIB and SID goes vastly well;
 But there are points in TIB that strike
 My humble mind as much more like
 Yourself, my dearest Lord, or him,
 Of the India Board—that soul of whim!
 Like him, TIBERIUS lov'd his joke,⁵

On matters, too, where few can bear
 one; 200

E.g. a man, cut up, or broke

Upon the wheel—a devilish fair one!
 Your common fractures, wounds, and fits,

Are nothing to such wholesale wits;
 But, let the sufferer gasp for life,

The joke is then worth any money;
 And, if he writhe beneath a knife,—

Oh dear, that's something quite too funny.

In this respect, my Lord, you see
 The Roman wag and ours agree: 210

Now as to your resemblance—mum—

This parallel we need not follow;⁶
 Though 'tis, in Ireland, said by some

Your Lordship beats TIBERIUS hollow;
 Whips, chains—but these are things too serious

For me to mention or discuss;
 Whene'er your Lordship acts TIBERIUS,

PHIL. FUDGE's part is Tacitus!

Sept. 2.

Was thinking, had Lord S—DM—TH got
 Any good decent sort of Plot 220

Against the winter-time—if not,

Alas, alas, our ruin's fated!

All done up, and spificated!

Ministers and all their vassals,

Down from C—TL—GH to CASTLES,—

Unless we can kick up a riot,

Ne'er can hope for peace or quiet!

Annal. lib. iv. 38.—Or, as it is translated by Mr. Fudge's friend, Murphy:—'This daring accuser had the curses of the people, and the protection of the Emperor. Informers, in proportion as they rose in guilt, became sacred characters.'

⁴ 'Murphy even confers upon one of his speeches the epithet 'constitutional.' Mr. Fudge might have added to his parallel, that Tiberius was a good private character:—'egregium vitæ famæque quoad privatus.'

⁵ 'Ludibria seris permiscere solitus.'
⁶ There is one point of resemblance between Tiberius and Lord C. which Mr. Fudge might have mentioned—'suspensa semper et obscura verba.'

What's to be done?—Spa-Fields was clever;

But even that brought gibes and mockings 229

Upon our heads—so, mem.—must never
Keep ammunition in old stockings;
For fear some wag should in his curst head

Take it to say our force was worsted.

Mem. too—when SID an army raises,

It must not be 'incog.' like Bayes's:

Nor must the General be a hobbling

Professor of the art of cobbling;

Lest men, who perpetrate such puns,

Should say, with Jacobinio grin,

He felt, from soleing Wellingtons,¹ 240

A Wellington's great soul within!

Nor must an old Apothecary

Go take the Tower, for lack of

pence,

With (what these wags would call, so merry,)

Physical force and phial-ence!

No—no—our Plot, my Lord, must be

Next time contriv'd more skilfully.

John Bull, I grieve to say, is growing

So troublesomely sharp and knowing,

So wise—in short, so Jacobin— 250

'Tis monstrous hard to take him in.

Sept. 6.

Heard of the fate of our Ambassador

In China, and was sorely nettled;

But think, my Lord, we should not pass
it o'er

Till all this matter's fairly settled;

And here's the mode occurs to me:—

As none of our Nobility,

Though for their own most gracious
King

(They would kiss hands, or—any thing),

Can be persuaded to go through 260

This farce-like trick of the Ko-tou;

And as these Mandarins wo'n't bend,

Without some mumming exhibition,

Suppose, my Lord, you were to send

GRIMALDI to them on a mission:

¹ Short boots, so called.

² The open countenance, recommended by Lord Chesterfield.

³ Mr. Fudge is a little mistaken here. It was not Grimaldi, but some very inferior performer, who played this part of 'Lord Morley' in the pantomime,—so much to the horror of the dis-

As Legate, JOE could play his part,

And if, in diplomatic art,

The 'volto sciolto' ² 's meritorious,

Let JOE but grin, he has it, glorious!

A title for him's easily made; 270

And, by-the-by, one Christmas time,

If I remember right, he play'd

Lord MORLEY in some pantomime;—³

As Earl of M—RL—Y then gazette him,

If t'other Earl of M—RL—Y'll let him.

(And why should not the world be blest

With two such stars, for East and West?)

Then, when before the Yellow Screen

He's brought—and, sure, the very essence

Of etiquette would be that scene 280

Of JOE in the Celestial Presence!—

He thus should say:—'Duke Ho and

Soo,

'I'll play what tricks you please for you,

If you'll, in turn, but do for me

A few small tricks you now shall see.

If I consult your Emperor's liking,

At least you'll do the same for my King.

He then should give them nine such grins,

As would astound ev'n Mandarins;

And throw such somersets before 290

The picture of King GEORGE (God bless him!)

As, should Duke Ho but try them o'er,

Would, by CONFUCIUS, much distress him!

I start this merely as a hint,

But think you'll find some wisdom in't;

And, should you follow up the job,

My son, my Lord (you know poor BOB),

Would in the suite be glad to go

And help his Excellency, JOE;—

At least, like noble AMH—RST's son, 300

The lad will do to practise on.⁴

tinguished Earl of that name. The expostulatory letters of the Noble Earl to Mr. H—rr—s, upon this vulgar profanation of his spick-and-span new title, will, I trust, some time or other, be given to the world.

LETTER X

FROM MISS BIDDY FUDGE TO MISS DOROTHY —

WELL, it isn't the King, after all, my dear creature!

But do'n't you go laugh, now—there's nothing to quiz in't—
For grandeur of air and for grimness of feature,

He might be a King, DOLL, though, hang him, he isn't.

At first, I felt hurt, for I wish'd it, I own,

If for no other cause but to vex Miss MALONE,—

(The great heiress, you know, of Shandangan, who's here,

Showing off with such airs, and a real Cashmere,¹

While mine's but a paltry old rabbit-skin, dear!)

But Pa says, on deeply consid'ring the thing,

'I am just as well pleas'd it should not be the King;

As I think for my BIDDY, so gentille and jolie,

Whose charms may their price in an honest way fetch,

That a Brandenburg'—(what is a Brandenburg, DOLLY?)—

'Would be, after all, no such very great catch.

If the R—g—r indeed'—added he, looking sly—

(You remember that comical squint of his eye)

But I stopp'd him with 'La, Pa, how can you say so,

When the R—g—r loves none but old women, you know!

Which is fact, my dear DOLLY—we, girls of eighteen,

And so slim—Lord, he'd think us not fit to be seen;

And would like us much better as old—ay, as old

As that Countess of DESMOND, of whom I've been told

That she liv'd to much more than a hundred and ten,

And was kill'd by a fall from a cherry-tree then!

What a frisky old girl! but—to come to my lover,

Who, though not a King, is a hero I'll swear,—

You shall hear all that's happen'd, just briefly run over,

Since that happy night, when we whisk'd through the air!

Let me see—'twas on Saturday—yes, DOLLY, yes—

From that evening I date the first dawn of my bliss,

When we both rattled off in that dear little carriage,

Whose journey, BOB says, is so like Love and Marriage,

'Beginning gay, desperate, dashing, down-hilly,

And ending as dull as a six-inside Dilly!' ²

Well, scarcely a wink did I sleep the night through;

And, next day, having scribbled my letter to you,

With a heart full of hope this sweet fellow to meet,

I set out with Papa, to see LOUIS DIX-HUIT

Make his bow to some half dozen women and boys,

Who get up a small concert of shrill Vive le Roi's—

And how vastly genteeler, my dear, even this is,

Than vulgar Pall-Mall's oratorio of hisses!

The gardens seem'd full—so, of course, we walk'd o'er 'em,

'Mong orange-trees, clipp'd into town-bred decorum,

And daphnes, and vases, and many a statue,

There staring, with not ev'n a stitch on them, at you!

told her by Madame de Genlis, of the young | ² The cars, on the return, are dragged up gentleman whose love was cured by finding | slowly by a chain.

The ponds, too, we view'd—stood awhile on the brink
 To contemplate the play of those pretty gold fishes—
 'Live bullion,' says merciless BOB, 'which, I think,
 Would, if coin'd, with a little mint sauce, be delicious!' ⁵⁰

But what, DOLLY, what, is the gay orange-grove,
 Or gold fishes, to her that's in search of her love?
 In vain did I wildly explore every chair
 Where a thing like a man was—no lover sat there!
 In vain my fond eyes did I eagerly cast
 At the whiskers, mustachios, and wigs that went past,
 To obtain, if I could, but a glance at that curl,—
 A glimpse of those whiskers, as sacred, my girl,
 As the lock that, Pa says,² is to Mussulmen giv'n,
 For the angel to hold by that 'lugs them to heav'n!' ⁶⁰
 Alas, there went by me full many a quiz,
 And mustachios in plenty, but nothing like his!
 Disappointed, I found myself sighing out 'well-a-day,—
 Thought of the words of T—M M—RE's Irish Melody,
 Something about the 'green spot of delight'³

(Which, you know, Captain MACKINTOSH sung to us one day):

Ah DOLLY, my 'spot' was that Saturday night,
 And its verdure, how fleeting, had wither'd by Sunday!
 We din'd at a tavern—La, what do I say? ⁷⁰

If BOB was to know!—a Restaurateur's, dear;
 Where your properest ladies go dine every day,
 And drink Burgundy out of large tumblers, like beer.
 Fine BOB (for he's really grown super-fine)

Condescended, for once, to make one of the party;
 Of course, though but three, we had dinner for nine,

And in spite of my grief, love, I own I ate hearty.
 Indeed, DOLL, I know not how 'tis, but, in grief,
 I have always found eating a wondrous relief;

¹ Mr. Bob need not be ashamed of his cookery jokes, when he is kept in countenance by such men as Cicero, St. Augustine, and that jovial bishop, Venantius Fortunatus. The pun of the great orator upon the 'jus Verrinum,' which he calls bad hog-broth, from a play upon both the words, is well known; and the Saint's puns upon the conversion of Lot's wife into salt are equally ingenious:—'In salem conversa hominibus fidelibus quoddam præstitit condimentum, quo sapienter aliquid, unde illud caveatur exemplum.'—De Civitat. Dei, lib. xvi. cap. 30. The jokes of the pious favourite of Queen Radagunda, the convivial Bishop Venantius, may be found among his poems, in some lines against a cook who had robbed him. The following is similar to Cicero's pun:—

Plus jussella Coci quam mea jura valent.

See his poems, Corpus Poetar. Latin. tom. ii. p. 1732.—Of the same kind was Montmaur's joke, when a dish was spilt over him—'sum-mum jus, summa injuria'; and the same celebrated parasite, in ordering a sole to be placed before him, said,—

Elige cui dicas, tu mihi sola places.

The reader may likewise see, among a good deal of kitchen erudition, the learned Lipsius's jokes on cutting up a capon in his Saturnal. Sermon. lib. ii. cap. 2.

² For this scrap of knowledge 'Pa' was, I suspect, indebted to a note upon Volney's ruins; a book which usually forms part of a Jacobin's library, and with which Mr. Fudge must have been well acquainted at the time when he wrote his 'Down with Kings,' &c. The note in Volney is as follows:—'It is by this tuft of hair (on the crown of the head), worn by the majority of Mussulmans, that the Angel of the Tomb is to take the elect and carry them to Paradise.'

³ The young lady, whose memory is not very correct, must allude, I think, to the following lines:—

Oh that fairy form is ne'er forgot,
 Which First Love trae'd;
 Still it ling'ring haunts the greenest spot
 On Memory's waste!

And BOB, who's in love, said he felt the same, quite—
 'My sighs,' said he, 'ceas'd with the first glass I drank you;
 The lamb made me tranquil, the puffs made me light,
 And—now that all's o'er—why, I'm—pretty well, thank you!' 80

To my great annoyance, we sat rather late;
 For BOBBY and Pa had a furious debate
 About singing and cookery—BOBBY, of course,
 Standing up for the latter Fine Art in full force;
 And Pa saying, 'God only knows which is worst,
 The French Singers or Cooks, but I wish us well over it—
 What with old LAIS and VÉRY, I'm curst
 If my head or my stomach will ever recover it!' 90

'Twas dark, when we got to the Boulevards to stroll,
 And in vain did I look 'mong the street Macaronis,
 When, sudden it struck me—last hope of my soul—
 That some angel might take the dear man to TORTONI'S!¹
 We enter'd—and, scarcely had BOB, with an air,
 For a grappe à la jardinière call'd to the waiters,
 When, oh DOLL! I saw him—my hero was there
 (For I knew his white small-clothes and brown leather gaiters),
 A group of fair statues from Greece smiling o'er him,²
 And lots of red currant-juice sparkling before him! 100
 Oh DOLLY, these heroes—what creatures they are;

In the boudoir the same as in fields full of slaughter!
 As cool in the Beaujon's precipitous car,

As when safe at TORTONI'S, o'er ic'd currant water!
 He join'd us—imagine, dear creature, my ecstasy—
 Join'd by the man I'd have broken ten necks to see!
 BOB wish'd to treat him with Punch à la glace,
 But the sweet fellow swore that my beauté, my grâce,
 And my je-ne-sais-quoi (then his whiskers he twirl'd) 110
 Were, to him, 'on de top of all Ponch in de world.'—
 How pretty!—though oft (as of course, it must be)
 Both his French and his English are Greek, DOLL, to me.
 But, in short, I felt happy as ever fond heart did;
 And happier still, when 'twas fix'd, ere we parted,
 That, if the next day should be pastoral weather,
 We all would set off, in French buggies, together,
 To see Montmorency—that place which, you know,
 Is so famous for cherries and JEAN JACQUES ROUSSEAU.
 His card then he gave us—the name, rather creas'd— 120
 But 'twas CALICOT—something—a Colonel at least!
 After which—sure there never was hero so civil—he Saw us safe home to our door in Rue Rivolt,

¹ Cookery has been dignified by the researches of a Bacon; see his Natural History, Receipts, &c. and takes its station as one of the Fine Arts in the following passage of Mr. Dugald Stewart:—'Agreeably to this view of the subject, sweet may be said to be intrinsically pleasing, and bitter to be relatively pleasing; which both are, in many cases, equally essential to those effects, which, in the art of cookery, correspond to that composite beauty, which it is the object of the painter and of the poet to create.'—Philosophical Essays.

² A fashionable café glacier on the Italian Boulevards.

³ 'You eat your ice at Tortoni's,' says Mr. Scott, 'under a Grecian group.'

Where his last words, as, at parting, he threw
A soft look o'er his shoulders, were—'How do you do!' ¹

But, lord,—there's Papa for the post—I'm so vext—
Montmorency must now, love, be kept for my next.
That dear Sunday night!—I was charmingly drest,
And—so providential!—was looking my best;
Such a sweet muslin gown, with a flounce—and my frills,
You've no notion how rich—(though Pa has by the bills)
And you'd smile had you seen, where we sat rather near,
Colonel CALICOT eyeing the cambric, my dear.
Then the flow'rs in my bonnet—but, la, it's in vain—
So, good-by, my sweet DOLL—I shall soon write again.

130

B. F.

Nota bene—our love to all neighbours about—
Your Papa in particular—how is his gout?

P.S.—I've just open'd my letter to say,
In your next you must tell me, (now do, DOLLY, pray,
For I hate to ask BOB, he's so ready to quiz,)
What sort of a thing, dear, a Brandenburgh is.

LETTER XI

FROM PHELM CONNOR TO —

YES, 'twas a cause, as noble and as great
As ever hero died to vindicate—
A Nation's right to speak a Nation's voice,
And own no power but of the Nation's choice!
Such was the grand, the glorious cause that now
Hung trembling on NAPOLEON's single brow;
Such the sublime arbitrament, that pour'd,
In patriot eyes, a light around his sword,
A hallowing light, which never, since the day
Of his young victories, had illum'd its way!

10

Oh, 'twas not then the time for tame debates,
Ye men of Gaul, when chains were at your gates;
When he, who late had fled your Chieftain's eye,
As geese from eagles on Mount Taurus fly,²
Denounc'd against the land, that spurn'd his chain,
Myriads of swords to bind it fast again—
Myriads of fierce invading swords, to track
Through your best blood his path of vengeance back;
When Europe's Kings, that never yet combin'd
But (like those upper Stars, that, when conjoin'd, Shed war and pestilence,) to scourge mankind,
Gather'd around, with hosts from every shore,
Hating NAPOLEON much, but Freedom more, 20

² See Aelian, lib. v. cap. 29.—who tells us that these geese, from a consciousness of their own loquacity, always cross Mount Taurus with stones in their bills, to prevent any unlucky cackle from betraying them to the eagles — διαπετοῦσαι σιμωπῶντες.

And, in that coming strife, appall'd to see
 The world yet left one chance for liberty!—
 No, 'twas not then the time to weave a net
 Of bondage round your Chief; to curb and fret
 Your veteran war-horse, pawing for the fight,
 When every hope was in his speed and might—
 To waste the hour of action in dispute, 30
 And coolly plan how freedom's boughs should shoot,
 When your Invader's axe was at the root!
 No, sacred Liberty! that God, who throws,
 Thy light around, like his own sunshine, knows
 How well I love thee, and how deeply hate
 All tyrants, upstart and Legitimate—
 Yet, in that hour, were France my native land,
 I would have follow'd, with quick heart and hand,
 NAPOLEON, NEBO—ay, no matter whom—
 To snatch my country from that damning doom, 40
 That deadliest curse that on the conquer'd waits—
 A Conqueror's satrap, thron'd within her gates!

 True, he was false—despotic—all you please—
 Had trampled down man's holiest liberties—
 Had, by a genius, form'd for nobler things
 Than lie within the grasp of vulgar Kings,
 But rais'd the hopes of men—as eaglets fly
 With tortoises aloft into the sky—
 To dash them down again more shatt'ringly!
 All this I own—but still¹ 50

LETTER XII

FROM MISS BIDDY FUDGE TO MISS DOROTHY —

At last, DOLLY,—thanks to a potent emetic,
 Which BOBBY and Pa, with grimace sympathetic,
 Have swallow'd this morning to balance the bliss
 Of an eel matelote and a bisque d'écrevisses—
 I've a morning at home to myself, and sit down
 To describe you our heavenly trip out of town.
 How agog you must be for this letter, my dear!
 Lady JANE, in the novel, less languish'd to hear
 If that elegant cornet she met at Lord NEVILLE's
 Was actually dying with love or—blue devils. 10
 But Love, DOLLY, Love is the theme I pursue;
 With Blue Devils, thank heav'n, I have nothing to do—
 Except, indeed, dear Colonel CALICOT spies
 Any imps of that colour in certain blue eyes,
 Which he stares at till I, DOLL, at his do the same;

¹ Somebody (Fontenelle, I believe,) has said, that if he had his hand full of truths, he would open but one finger at a time; and the same sort of reserve I find to be necessary with respect to Mr. Connor's very plain-spoken letters. The remainder of this Epistle is so full of unsafe matter-of-fact, that it must, for the present at least, be withheld from the public.

Then he simpers—I blush—and would often exclaim,
If I knew but the French for it, 'Lord, Sir, for shame!'

Well, the morning was lovely—the trees in full dress
For the happy occasion—the sunshine express—
Had we order'd it, dear, of the best poet going, 20
It scarce could be furnish'd more golden and glowing.
Though late when we started, the scent of the air
Was like GATTIE'S rose-water,—and, bright, here and there,
On the grass an odd dew-drop was glittering yet,
Like my aunt's diamond pin on her green tabbinet!
While the birds seem'd to warble as blest on the boughs,
As if each a plum'd Calicot had for her spouse;
And the grapes were all blushing and kissing in rows,
And—in short, need I tell you, wherever one goes
With the creature one loves, 'tis all couleur de rose; 30
And, ah, I shall ne'er, liv'd I ever so long, see
A day such as that at divine Montmorency!

There was but one drawback—at first when we started,
The Colonel and I were inhumanly parted;
How cruel—young hearts of such moment to rob!
He went in Pa's buggy, and I went with BOB;
And, I own, I felt spitefully happy to know
That Papa and his comrade agreed but so-so.
For the Colonel, it seems, is a stickler of BONEY'S—
Serv'd with him of course—nay, I'm sure they were cronies. 40
So martial his features! dear DOLL, you can trace
Ulm, Austerlitz, Lodi, as plain in his face
As you do on that pillar of glory and brass,¹
Which the poor DUC DE B—RI must hate so to pass!
It appears, too, he made—as most foreigners do—
About English affairs an odd blunder or two.
For example—misled by the names, I dare say—
He confounded JACK CASTLES with Lord C—GH;
And—sure such a blunder no mortal hit ever on—
Fancied the present Lord C—MD—N the clever one! 50

But politics ne'er were the sweet fellow's trade;
'Twas for war and the ladies my Colonel was made.
And, oh, had you heard, as together we walk'd
Through that beautiful forest, how sweetly he talk'd;
And how perfectly well he appear'd, DOLL, to know
All the life and adventures of JEAN JACQUES ROUSSEAU!—
'Twas there,' said he—not that his words I can state—
'Twas a gibb'rish that Cupid alone could translate;—
But 'there,' said he, (pointing where, small and remote,
The dear Hermitage rose,) 'there his JULIE he wrote,— 60
Upon paper gilt-edg'd,² without blot or erasure;
Then sanded it over with silver and azure,
And—oh, what will genius and fancy not do?—
Tied the leaves up together with nomparselle blue!'

² 'Employant pour cela le plus beau papier et d'argent, et cousant mes cahiers avec de la doré, séchant l'écriture avec de la poudre d'azur liv. 9.

What a trait of Rousseau! what a crowd of emotions
 From sand and blue ribbons are conjur'd up here!
 Alas, that a man of such exquisite¹ notions
 Should send his poor brats to the Foundling, my dear!

'Twas here, too, perhaps,' Colonel CALICOT said—
 As down the small garden he pensively led—(Though once I could see his sublime forehead wrinkle
 With rage not to find there the lov'd periwinkle)²
 'Twas here he receiv'd from the fair D'EPINAY
 (Who call'd him so sweetly her Bear,³ every day,
 That dear flannel petticoat, pull'd off to form
 A waistcoat to keep the enthusiast warm!'⁴

70

Such, DOLL, were the sweet recollections we ponder'd,
 As, full of romance, through that valley we wander'd.
 The flannel (one's train of ideas, how odd it is!)
 Led us to talk about other commodities,
 Cambric, and silk, and—I ne'er shall forget,
 For the sun was then hast'ning in pomp to its set,
 And full on the Colonel's dark whiskers shone down,
 When he ask'd me, with eagerness,—who made my gown?
 The question confus'd me—for, DOLL, you must know,
 And I ought to have told my best friend long ago,
 That, by Pa's strict command, I no longer employ⁵
 That enchanting couturière, Madame LE ROI;
 But am forc'd now to have VICTORINE, who—deuce take her!—
 It seems is, at present, the King's mantua-maker—
 I mean of his party—and, though much the smartest,
 LE ROI is condemn'd as a rank Bonapartist.⁶
 Think, DOLL, how confounded I look'd—so well knowing
 The Colonel's opinion—my cheeks were quite glowing;
 I stammer'd out something—nay, even half nam'd
 The legitimate sempstress, when, loud, he exclaim'd,
 'Yes, yes, by the stitching 'tis plain to be seen
 It was made by that Bourbonite b——h, VICTORINE!'
 What a word for a hero!—but heroes will err,
 And I thought, dear, I'd tell you things just as they were.
 Besides, though the word on good manners intrench,
 I assure you 'tis not half so shocking in French.
 But this cloud, though embarrassing, soon pass'd away
 And the bliss altogether, the dreams of that day,

80

100

¹ This word, 'exquisite,' is evidently a favourite of Miss Fudge's; and I understand she was not a little angry when her brother Bob committed a pun on the last two syllables of it in the following couplet:—

I'd fain praise your Poem—but tell me, how is it
 When I cry out 'Exquisite,' Echo cries quis il ?

² The flower which Rousseau brought into such fashion among the Parisians, by exclaiming one day, 'Ah, voilà de la pervenche!'

³ Mon ours, voilà votre asyle—et vous, mon ours, ne viendrez-vous pas aussi?—&c. &c.

⁴ 'Un jour, qu'il geloit très-fort, en ouvrant

un paquet qu'elle m'envoyoit, je trouvai un petit jupon de flanelle d'Angleterre, qu'elle me marquoit avoir porté, et dont elle vouloit que je me fisse faire un gilet. Ce soin, plus qu'amical, me parut si tendre, comme si elle se fût dépouillée pour me vêtir, que, dans mon émotion, je baisai vingt fois en pleurant le billet et le jupon.'

⁵ Miss Biddy's notions of French pronunciation may be perceived in the rhymes which she always selects for 'Le Roi.'

⁶ Le Roi, who was the Couturière of the Empress Maria Louisa, is at present, of course, out of fashion, and is succeeded in her station by the Royalist mantua-maker, VICTORINE.

The thoughts that arise, when such dear fellows woo us—
 The nothings that then, love, are every thing to us—
 That quick correspondence of glances and sighs,
 And what BOB calls the 'Twopenny-post of the Eyes'—
 Ah, DOLL! though I know you've a heart, 'tis in vain
 To a heart so unpractis'd these things to explain. 110
 They can only be felt, in their fulness divine,
 By her who has wander'd, at evening's decline,
 Through a valley like that, with a Colonel like mine!

But here I must finish—for BOB, my dear DOLLY,
 Whom physic, I find, always makes melancholy,
 Is seiz'd with a fancy for church-yard reflections;
 And, full of all yesterday's rich recollections,
 Is just setting off for Montmartre—'for there is,'
 Said he, looking solemn, 'The tomb of the VÉRRYS!¹
 Long, long have I wish'd, as a votary true, 120

O'er the grave of such talents to utter my moans;
 And, to-day—as my stomach is not in good cue
 For the flesh of the VÉRRYS—I'll visit their bones!'—
 He insists upon my going with him—how teasing!
 This letter, however, dear DOLLY, shall lie
 Unseal'd in my draw'r, that, if any thing pleasing
 Occurs while I'm out, I may tell you—good-bye.

B. F.

Four o'clock.

Oh, DOLLY, dear DOLLY, I'm ruin'd for ever—
 I ne'er shall be happy again, DOLLY, never!
 To think of the wretch—what a victim was I! 130
 'Tis too much to endure—I shall die, I shall die—
 My brain's in a fever—my pulses beat quick—
 I shall die, or, at least, be exceedingly sick!
 Oh, what do you think? after all my romancing,
 My visions of glory, my sighing, my glancing,
 This Colonel—I scarce can commit it to paper—
 This Colonel's no more than a vile linen-draper!!
 'Tis true as I live—I had coax'd brother BOB so,
 (You'll hardly make out what I'm writing, I sob so,)
 For some little gift on my birth-day—September 140
 The thirtieth, dear, I'm eighteen, you remember—
 That BOB to a shop kindly order'd the coach,

(Ah, little I thought who the shopman would prove,
 To bespeak me a few of those mouchoirs de poche,

Which, in happier hours, I have sigh'd for, my love—
 (The most beautiful things—two Napoleons the price—
 And one's name in the corner embroider'd so nice!)
 Well, with heart full of pleasure, I enter'd the shop,
 But—ye Gods, what a phantom!—I thought I should drop—
 There he stood, my dear DOLLY—no room for a doubt— 150

There, behind the vile counter, these eyes saw him stand,
 With a piece of French cambric, before him roll'd out,
 And that horrid yard-measure uprais'd in his hand!

¹ It is the brother of the present excellent Restaurateur who lies entombed so magnificently in the Cimetière Montmartre. The inscription on the column at the head of the tomb concludes with the following words:—
 'Toute sa vie fut consacrée aux arts utiles.'

Oh—Papa, all along, knew the secret, 'tis clear—
 'Twas a shopman he meant by a 'Brandenburgh,' dear!
 The man, whom I fondly had fancied a King,
 And, when that too delightful illusion was past,
 As a hero had worshipp'd—vile, treacherous thing—
 To turn out but a low linen-drapeer at last!

My head swam around—the wretch smil'd, I believe, 160
 But his smiling, alas, could no longer deceive—
 I fell back on BOB—my whole heart seem'd to wither—
 And, pale as a ghost, I was carried back hither!
 I only remember that BOB, as I caught him,
 With cruel facetiousness said, 'Curse the Kiddy!
 A staunch Revolutionist always I've thought him,
 But now I find out he's a Counter one, BIDDY!'

Only think, my dear creature, if this should be known
 To that saucy, satirical thing, Miss MALONE!
 What a story 'twill be at Shandangan for ever! 170
 What laughs and what quizzing she'll have with the men!
 It will spread through the country—and never, oh, never
 Can BIDDY be seen at Kilrandy again!
 Farewell—I shall do something desp'rate, I fear—
 And, ah! if my fate ever reaches your ear,
 One tear of compassion my DOLL will not grudge
 To her poor—broken-hearted—young friend,

BIDDY FUDGE.

Nota bene—I am sure you will hear, with delight,
 That we're going, all three, to see BRUNET to-night,
 A laugh will revive me—and kind Mr. COX 180
 (Do you know him?) has got us the Governor's box.

FABLES FOR THE HOLY ALLIANCE

Tu Regibus alas
Eripe.
Virgil, Georg. lib. iv.

Clip the wings
Of these high-flying, arbitrary Kings.
Dryden's Translation.

TO LORD BYRON

DEAR LORD BYRON,

THOUGH this Volume should possess no other merit in your eyes, than that of reminding you of the short time we passed together at Venice, when some of the trifles which it contains were written, you will, I am sure, receive the dedication of it with pleasure, and believe that I am,

My dear Lord,
Ever faithfully yours,

T. B.

PREFACE

THOUGH it was the wish of the Members of the Poco-curante Society (who have lately done me the honour of electing me their Secretary) that I should prefix my name to the following Miscellany, it is but fair to them and to myself to state, that, except in the 'painful pre-eminence' of being employed to transcribe their lucubrations, my claim to such a distinction in the title-page is not greater than that of any other gentleman, who has contributed his share to the contents of the volume.

I had originally intended to take this opportunity of giving some account of the origin and objects of our Institution, the names and characters of the different members, &c. &c.—but, as I am at present preparing for the press the First Volume of the 'Transactions of the Poco-curante Society,' I shall reserve for that occasion all further details upon the subject; and content myself here with referring, for a general insight into our tenets, to a Song which will be found at the end of this work, and which is sung to us on the first day of every month, by one of our oldest members, to the tune of (as far as I can recollect, being no musician,) either 'Nancy Dawson' or 'He stole away the Bacon.'

It may be as well also to state for the information of those critics, who attack with the hope of being answered, and of being, thereby, brought into notice, that it is the rule of this Society to return no other answer to such assailants, than is contained in the three words 'Non curat Hippoclidēs,' (meaning in English, 'Hippoclidēs does not care a fig,') which were spoken two thousand years ago by the first founder of Poco-curantism, and have ever since been adopted as the leading dictum of the sect.

THOMAS BROWN.

FABLE I

THE DISSOLUTION OF THE HOLY ALLIANCE

A DREAM

I'VE had a dream that bodes no good
Unto the Holy Brotherhood.

I may be wrong, but I confess—

As far as it is right or lawful

For one, no conjurer, to guess—

It seems to me extremely awful.

Methought, upon the Neva's flood
A beautiful Ice Palace stood,
A dome of frost-work, on the plan
Of that once built by Empress Anne,¹ to Which shone by moonlight—as the tale
is—
Like an Aurora Borealis.

¹ 'It is well known that the Empress Anne built a palace of ice on the Neva, in 1740, which was fifty-two feet in length, and when illuminated had a surprising effect.'—Pinkerton.

In this said Palace, furnish'd all
And lighted as the best on land are,
I dreamt there was a splendid Ball,
Given by the Emperor Alexander,
To entertain with all due zeal,
Those holy gentlemen, who've shown a
Regard so kind for Europe's weal,
At Troppau, Laybach, and Verona. 20

The thought was happy—and design'd
To hint how thus the human Mind
May, like the stream imprison'd there,
Be check'd and chill'd, till it can bear
The heaviest Kings, that ode or sonnet
E'er yet be-prais'd, to dance upon it.

And all were pleas'd, and cold, and
stately,
Shivering in grand illumination—
Admir'd the superstructure greatly,
Nor gave one thought to the foundation. 30

Much too the Czar himself exulted,
To all plebeian fears a stranger,
For, Madame Krudener, when consulted,
Had pledg'd her word there was no
danger.

So, on he caper'd, fearless quite,
Thinking himself extremely clever,
And waltz'd away with all his might,
As if the Frost would last for ever.

Just fancy how a bard like me,
Who reverence monarchs, must have
trembled 40
To see that goodly company,
At such a ticklish sport assembled.

Nor were the fears, that thus astounded
My loyal soul, at all unfounded—
For, lo! ere long, those walls so massy
Were seiz'd with an ill-omen'd dripping,

And o'er the floors, now growing glassy,
Their Holinesses took to slipping.
The Czar, half through a Polonaise
Could scarce get on for downright stumbling; 50

And Prussia, though to slippery ways
Well used, was cursedly near tumbling.

Yet still 'twas, who could stamp the floor most,
Russia and Austria 'mong the foremost.—

And now, to an Italian air,

This precious brace would, hand in hand, go;
Now—while old Louis, from his chair,
Intreated them his toes to spare—
Call'd loudly out for a Fandango.

And a Fandango, 'faith, they had, 60
At which they all set to, like mad!
Never were Kings (though small the expense is
Of wit among their Excellencies)
So out of all their princely senses.
But, ah, that dance—that Spanish
dance—

Scarce was the luckless strain begun,
When, glaring red, as 'twere a glance
Shot from an angry Southern sun,
A light through all the chambers flam'd,
Astonishing old Father Frost, 70
Who, bursting into tears, exclaim'd,
'A thaw, by Jove—we're lost, we're
lost;

Run, France—a second Waterloo
Is come to drown you—saute qui peut!

Why, why will monarchs caper so
In palaces without foundations?—
Instantly all was in a flow,
Crowns, fiddles, sceptres, decorations—

Those Royal Arms, that look'd so nice,
Cut out in the resplendent ice— 80
Those Eagles, handsomely provided
With double heads for double dealings—

How fast the globes and sceptres glided
Out of their claws on all the ceilings!
Proud Prussia's double bird of prey
Tame as a spatch cook, slunk away;
While—just like France herself, when
she

Proclaims how great her naval skill
is—

Poor Louis' drowning fleurs-de-lys
Imagin'd themselves water-lilies. 90

And not alone rooms, ceilings, shelves,
But—still more fatal execution—
The Great Legimates themselves
Seem'd in a state of dissolution.
The' indignant Czar—when just about
To issue a sublime Ukase,
'Whereas all light must be kept out'—
Dissolv'd to nothing in its blaze.

Next Prussia took his turn to melt,
 And, while his lips illustrious felt 100
 The influence of this southern air,
 Some word, like 'Constitution'—long
 Congeal'd in frosty silence there—
 Came slowly thawing from his tongue.
 While Louis, lapsing by degrees,
 And sighing out a faint adieu
 To truffles, salmis, toasted cheese
 And smoking fondus, quickly grew,
 Himself, into a fondus too ;—
 Or like that goodly King they make 110
 Of sugar for a Twelfth-night cake,
 When, in some urchin's mouth, alas,
 It melts into a shapeless mass !

In short, I scarce could count a minute,
 Ere the bright dome, and all within it,
 Kings, Fiddlers, Emperors, all were
 gone—

And nothing now was seen or heard
 But the bright river, rushing on,
 Happy as an enfranchis'd bird,
 And prouder of that natural ray, 120
 Shining along its chainless way—
 More proudly happy thus to glide
 In simple grandeur to the sea,
 Than when, in sparkling fetters tied,
 'Twas deck'd with all that kingly pride
 Could bring to light its slavery !

Such is my dream—and, I confess,
 I tremble at its awfulness.
 That Spanish Dance—that southern
 beam— 129
 But I say nothing—there's my dream—
 And Madame Krudener, the she-prophet,
 May make just what she pleases of it.

FABLE II

THE LOOKING-GLASSES

PROEM

WHERE Kings have been by mob-elections
 Rais'd to the Throne, 'tis strange to
 see
 What different and what odd perfec-
 tions
 Men have requir'd in Royalty.
 Some, liking monarchs large and plumpy,

¹ The Goths had a law to choose always a short, thick man for their King. Munster, Cosmog. lib. iii, p. 164.

Have chos'n their Sovereigns by the weight ;—
 Some wish'd them tall, some thought your dumpy,
 Dutch-built, the true Legitimate.¹
 The Easterns in a Prince, 'tis said,
 Prefer what's called a jolter-head :² 10
 The' Egyptians wer'n't at all particular,
 So that their Kings had not red hair—
 This fault not even the greatest stickler
 For the blood royal well could bear.
 A thousand more such illustrations
 Might be adduc'd from various nations.
 But, 'mong the many tales they tell us,
 Touching the' acquir'd or natural right
 Which some men have to rule their fellows,
 There's one, which I shall here recite :— 20

FABLE

There was a land—to name the place
 Is neither now my wish nor duty—
 Where reign'd a certain Royal race,
 By right of their superior beauty.
 What was the out legitimate
 Of these great persons' chins and noses,
 By right of which they rul'd the state,
 No history I have seen discloses.
 But so it was—a settled case—
 Some Act of Parliament, pass'd snugly,
 Had voted them a beauteous race, 31
 And all their faithful subjects ugly.

As rank, indeed, stood high or low,
 Some change it made in visual organs ;
 Your Peers were decent—Knights, so
 so—
 But all your common people, gorgons !

Of course, if any knave had hinted
 That the King's nose was turned awry,
 Or that the Queen (God bless her !) ¹
 squinted—
 The judges doom'd that knave to die.
 But rarely things like this occur'd, 41
 The people to their King were deuteous,
 And took it, on his Royal word,
 That they were frights, and He was beauteous.

² 'In a Prince a jolter-head is invaluable.'
Oriental Field Sports.

The cause whereof, among all classes,
Was simply this—these island elves
Had never yet seen looking-glasses,
And, therefore, did not know themselves.

Sometimes, indeed, their neighbours' faces
Might strike them as more full of reason, 49
More fresh than those in certain places—
But, Lord, the very thought was treason !

Besides, howe'er we love our neighbour,
And take his face's part, 'tis known
We ne'er so much in earnest labour,
As when the face attack'd's our own.

So, on they went—the crowd believing—
(As crowds well govern'd always do)
Their rulers, too, themselves deceiving—
So old the joke, they thought 'twas true. 60

But jokes, we know, if they too far go,
Must have an end—and so, one day,
Upon that coast there was a cargo
Of looking-glasses cast away.

'Twas said, some Radicals, somewhere,
Had laid their wicked heads together,
And forc'd that ship to founder there,—
While some believe it was the weather.

However this might be, the freight
Was landed without fees or duties ; 70
And from that hour historians date
The downfall of the Race of Beauties.

The looking-glasses got about,
And grew so common through the land,
That scarce a tinker could walk out,
Without a mirror in his hand.

Comparing faces, morning, noon,
And night, their constant occupation—

By dint of looking-glasses, soon,
They grew a most reflecting nation. 80

In vain the Court, aware of errors
In all the old, establish'd mazards,
Prohibited the use of mirrors,
And tried to break them at all hazards :—

In vain—their laws might just as well
Have been waste paper on the shelves ;
That fatal freight had broke the spell ;
People had look'd—and knew themselves.

If chance a Duke, of birth sublime,
Presum'd upon his ancient face, 90
(Some calf-head, ugly from all time,) 90
They popp'd a mirror to his Grace :—

Just hinting, by that gentle sign,
Now little Nature holds it true,
That what is call'd an ancient line,
Must be the line of Beauty too.

From Duke's they pass'd to regal
phizzes,
Compar'd them proudly with their own,
And cried, 'How could such monstrous quizzes
In Beauty's name usurp the throne !'—

They then wrote essays, pamphlets,
books, 101

Upon Cosmetical Oeconomy,
Which made the King try various looks,
But none improv'd his physiognomy.

And satires at the Court were levell'd,
And small lampoons, so full of sly-
nesses,

That soon, in short, they quite bedevil'd

Their Majesties and Royal Highnesses.

At length—but here I drop the veil,
To spare some loyal folks' sensations ;
Besides, what follow'd is the tale 111
Of all such late enlighten'd nations ;

Of all to whom old Time discloses
A truth they should have sooner
known—

That Kings have neither rights nor noses

A whit diviner than their own.

FABLE III

THE TORCH OF LIBERTY

I saw it all in Fancy's glass—
Herself, the fair, the wild magician,
Who bid this splendid day-dream pass,
And nam'd each gliding apparition.

'Twas like a torch-race—such as they
Of Greece perform'd, in ages gone,
When the fleet youths, in long array,
Pass'd the bright torch triumphant
on.

I saw the' expectant nations stand,
To catch the coming flame in turn ;—
I saw, from ready hand to hand, II
The clear, though struggling, glory
burn.

And, oh, their joy, as it came near,
'Twas, in itself, a joy to see ;—
While Fancy whisper'd in my ear,
'That torch they pass is Liberty !'

And, each, as she receiv'd the flame,
Lighted her altar with its ray ;
Then, smiling, to the next who came,
Speeded it on its sparkling way. 20

From ALBION first, whose ancient shrine
Was furnish'd with the fire already,
COLUMBIA caught the boon divine,
And lit a flame, like Albion's, steady.

The splendid gift then GALLIA took,
And, like a wild Bacchante, raising
The brand aloft, its sparkles shook,
As she would set the world a-blazing !

Thus kindling wild, so fierce and high
Her altar blaz'd into the air, 30
That ALBION, to that fire too nigh, Shrunk back, and shudder'd at its glare !

Next, SPAIN, so new was light to her,
Leap'd at the torch—but, ere the spark
That fell upon her shrine could stir,
'Twas quench'd—and all again was
dark.

Yet, no—not quench'd—a treasure,
worth
So much to mortals, rarely dies :
Again her living light look'd forth,
And shone, a beacon, in all eyes. 40

Who next receiv'd the flame ? alas,
Unworthy NAPLES—shame of shames,
That ever through such hands should
pass
That brightest of all earthly flames !

Scarce had her fingers touch'd the torch,
When, frighted by the sparks it shed,
Nor waiting even to feel the scorch,
She dropp'd it to the earth—and fled.

And fall'n it might have long remain'd ;
But GREECE, who saw her moment
now, 50
Caught up the prize, though prostrate,
stain'd,
And wav'd it round her beauteous
brow.

And Fancy bade me mark where, o'er
Her altar, as its flame ascended,
Fair, laurell'd spirits seem'd to soar,
Who thus in song their voices blended :—

'Shine, shine for ever, glorious Flame,
Divinest gift of Gods to men !
From GREECE thy earliest splendour
came,
To GREECE thy ray returns again. 60

'Take, Freedom, take thy radiant round,
When dimm'd, revive, when lost,
return,
Till not a shrine through earth be
found,
On which thy glories shall not burn !'

FABLE IV

THE FLY AND THE BULLOCK

PROEM

Or all that, to the sage's survey,
This world presents of topsy-turvy,
There's nought so much disturbs one's patience,
As little minds in lofty stations.
'Tis like that sort of painful wonder,
Which slender columns, labouring under Enormous arches, give beholders ;—
Or those poor Caryatides,
Condemn'd to smile and stand at ease,
With a whole house upon their shoulders. 10

If, as in some few royal cases,
Small minds are born into such places—
If they are there, by Right Divine,
Or any such sufficient reason,
Why—Heav'n forbid we should repine !—
To wish it otherwise were treason ;

Nay, ev'n to see it in a vision,
Would be what lawyers call misprision.

Sir ROBERT FILMER saith—and he, 19
Of course, knew all about the matter—
'Both men and beasts love Monarchy ;'
Which proves how rational—the latter.

SIDNEY, we know, or wrong or right,
Entirely differ'd from the Knight !
Nay, hints a King may lose his head,
By slipping awkwardly his bridle :—
But this is treasonous, ill-bred,
And (now-a-days, when Kings are led
In patent snaffles) downright idle.

No, no—it isn't right-line Kings, 30
(Those sovereign lords in leading-strings
Who, from their birth, are Faith-Defenders.)

That move my wrath—'tis your pre-tenders,

Your mushroom rulers, sons of earth,
Who—not, like t'others, bores by birth,
Establish'd gratiâ Dei blockheads,
Born with three kingdoms in their pockets—

Yet, with a brass that nothing stops,
Push up into the loftiest stations, 39
And, though too dull to manage shops,

Presume, the dolts, to manage nations!

This class it is, that moves my gall,
And stirs up bile, and spleen, and
all.

While other senseless things appear
To know the limits of their sphere—
While not a cow on earth romances
So much as to conceit she dances—
While the most jumping frog we know
of,
Would scarce at Astley's hope to show
off—

Your —s, your —'s dare, 50
Untrain'd as are their minds, to set
them

To any business, any where,
At any time that fools will let
them.

But leave we here these upstart things—
My business is, just now, with Kings ;
To whom, and to their right-line glory,
I dedicate the following story.

FABLE

THE wise men of Egypt were secret as dummies ;
And, ev'n when they most con-
descended to teach,
They pack'd up their meaning, as they did their mummies, 60
In so many wrappers, 'twas out of one's reach.

They were also, good people, much given to Kings—
Fond of craft and of crocodiles, monkeys and mystery ;
But blue-bottle flies were their best belov'd things—
As will partly appear in this very short history.

A Scythian philosopher (nephew, they
say,
To that other great traveller, young Anacharsis),
Stept into a temple at Memphis one day,
To have a short peep at their mystical farcas.

He saw ¹ a brisk blue-bottle Fly on an altar, 70
Made much of, and worshipp'd, as something divine ;
While a large, handsome Bullock, led
there in a halter,
Before it lay stabb'd at the foot of the shrine.

Surpris'd at such doings, he whisper'd his teacher—
'If 't isn't impertinent, may I ask
why
Should a Bullock, that useful and powerful creature,
Bethus offer'd up to a blue-bottle Fly ?'

'No wonder'—said t'other—'you stare
at the sight,
But we as a Symbol of Monarchy view it—
That Fly on the shrine is Legitimate
Right, 80
And that Bullock, the People, that's sacrific'd to it.'

¹ According to Aelian, it was in the island of Leucadia they practised this ceremony—*θεῖον
βοῦν τὰς μυίας*.—De Animal. lib. ii, cap. 8.

FABLE V CHURCH AND STATE

PROEM

'The moment any religion becomes national, or established, its purity must certainly be lost, because it is then impossible to keep it unconnected with men's interests; and, if connected, it must inevitably be perverted by them.'—Soame Jenyns.

THUS did SOAME JENYNS—though a
Tory,
A Lord of Trade and the Plantations;
Feel how Religion's simple glory
Is stain'd by State associations.

When CATHERINE, ere she crush'd the Poles,

Appeal'd to the benign Divinity;
Then cut them up in protocols,
Made fractions of their very souls¹—

All in the name of the bless'd Trinity;
Or when her grandson, ALEXANDER, to
That mighty Northern salamander,²
Whose icy touch, felt all about,
Puts every fire of Freedom out—
When he, too, winds up his Ukases
With God and the Panagia's praises—
When he, of royal Saints the type,
In holy water dips the sponge,
With which, at one imperial wipe,

He would all human rights expunge;
When LOUIS (whom as King, and eater,
Some name Dix-huit and some Des- huitres,)²¹

Calls down 'St. Louis' God' to witness
The right, humanity, and fitness
Of sending eighty thousand Solons,
Sages, with muskets and lac'd coats,
To cram instruction, nolens volens,
Down the poor struggling Spaniards'
throats—

I can't help thinking, (though to Kings
I must, of course, like other men, bow),
That when a Christian monarch brings 30
Religion's name to gloss these things—
Such blasphemy out—Benbows Benbow!³

Or—not so far for facts to roam,
Having a few much nearer home—

When we see Churchmen, who, if ask'd,
'Must Ireland's slaves be tith'd, and task'd,

And driv'n like Negroes or Croäts,
That you may roll in wealth and bliss?'
Look from beneath their shovel hats 39
With all due pomp, and answer 'Yes!'
But then, if question'd, 'Shall the brand
Intolerance flings throughout that land, Shall the fierce strife now taught to grow

Betwixt her palaces and hovels,
Be ever quench'd?'—from the same shovels

Look grandly forth, and answer
'No.'—

Alas, alas! have these a claim
To merciful Religion's name?
If more you seek, go see a bevy
Of bowing parsons at a levee— 50 (Choosing your time, when straw's
before

Some apoplectic bishop's door,)
Then, if thou canst, with life, escape
That rush of lawn, that press of crape,
Just watch their rev'rences and graces,
As on each smirking suitor frisks,
And say, if those round shining faces
To heav'n or earth most turn their disks?

This, this it is—Religion, made,
'Twixt Church and State, a truck, a trade— 60

This most ill-match'd, unholy Co.,
From whence the ills we witness flow;
The war of many creeds with one—
The' extremes of too much faith, and none—

Till, betwixt ancient trash and new,
'Twixt Cant and Blasphemy—the two
Rank ills with which this age is curst—
We can no more tell which is worst,
Than erst could Egypt, when so rich
In various plagues, determine which 70
She thought most pestilent and vile,
Her frogs, like Benbow and Carlisle,
Croaking their native mud-notes loud,
Or her fat locusts, like a cloud
Of pluralists, obesely low'ring,
At once benighting and devouring!

³ A well-known publisher of irreligious books.

This—this it is—and here I pray
 Those sapient wits of the Reviews,
 Who make us poor, dull authors say,
 Not what we mean, but what they choose; 80
 Who to our most abundant shares
 Of nonsense add still more of theirs,
 And are to poets just such evils
 As caterpillars find those flies,⁵
 Which, not content to sting like devils,
 Lay eggs upon their backs likewise—
 To guard against such foul deposits
 Of other's meaning in my rhymes,
 (A thing more needful here, because it's
 A subject, ticklish in these times)—90
 I, here, to all such wits make known,
 Monthly and Weekly, Whig and Tory,
 'Tis this Religion—this alone
 I aim at in the following story:—

FABLE

When Royalty was young and bold,
 Ere, touch'd by Time, he had become
 If 't isn't civil to say old,
 At least, a ci-devant jeune homme;

One evening, on some wild pursuit
 Driving along, he chanc'd to see 100
 Religion, passing by on foot,
 And took him in his vis-à-vis.

This said Religion was a Friar,
 The humblest and the best of men,
 Who ne'er had notion or desire
 Of riding in a coach till then.

'I say'—quoth Royalty, who rather Enjoy'd a masquerading joke—
 'I say, suppose, my good old father,
 You lend me, for a while, your cloak.'

The Friar consented—little knew 111
 What tricks the youth had in his
 head;

Besides, was rather tempted too
 By a lac'd coat he got in stead.

Away ran Royalty, slap-dash,
 Scamp'ring like mad about the town;
 Broke windows, shiver'd lamps to smash,
 And knock'd whole scores of watchmen down.

¹ 'The greatest number of the ichneumon tribe are seen settling upon the back of the caterpillar, and darting at different intervals

While nought could they, whose heads were broke, 119
 Learn of the 'why' or the 'wherefore,'
 Except that 'twas Religion's cloak,
 The gentleman, who crack'd them,
 wore.

Meanwhile, the Friar, whose head was
 turn'd

By the lac'd coat, grew frisky too;
 Look'd big—his former habits spurn'd—
 And storm'd about, as great men do:

Dealt much in pompous oaths and curses—
 Said 'd—mn you' often, or as bad—
 Laid claim to other people's purses—
 In short, grew either knave, or mad.

As work like this was unbefitting, 131
 And flesh and blood no longer bore it,
 The Court of Common Sense, then sitting,
 Summon'd the culprits both before it.

Where, after hours in wrangling spent (As Courts must wrangle to decide
 well),

Religion to St. Luke's was sent,
 And Royalty pack'd off to Bridewell.

With this proviso—should they be
 Restor'd, in due time, to their senses,
 They both must give security, 141
 In future, against such offences—

Religion ne'er to lend his cloak,
 Seeing what dreadful work it leads to;
 And Royalty to crack his joke,—
 But not to crack poor people's heads
 too.

THE LITTLE GRAND LAMA

PROEM

NOVELLA, a young Bolognese,
 Thedaughter of a learn'd Law Doctor,¹
 Who had with all the subtleties
 Of old and modern jurists stook'd her,
 Was so exceeding fair, 'tis said,
 And over hearts held such dominion,
 That when her father, sick in bed,
 Or busy, sent her, in his stead,
 To lecture on the Code Justinian, their stings into its body—at every dart they depose an egg.—Goldsmith.

² Andreas.

She had a curtain drawn before her, 10
 Lest, if her charms were seen, the students
 Should let their young eyes wander o'er
 her,
 And quite forget their jurisprudence.¹
 Just so it is with truth, when seen,
 Too dazzling far,—'tis from behind
 A light, thin allegoric screen,
 She thus can safest teach mankind.

FABLE

In Thibet once there roign'd, we're told,
 A little Lama, one year old—Rais'd to the throne, that realm to bless, 20
 Just when his little Holiness
 Had cut—as near as can be reckon'd—
 Some say his first tooth, some his second.
 Chronologers and Nurses vary,
 Which proves historians should be wary.
 We only know the' important truth,
 His Majesty had cut a tooth.²
 And much his subjects were enchanted,—
 As well all Lamas' subjects may be,
 And would have giv'n their heads, if wanted, 30
 To make tee-totums for the baby.
 Thron'd as he was by Right Divine—
 (What Lawyers call Jure Divino,
 Meaning a right to yours, and mine,
 And every body's goods and rhino,)
 Of course, his faithful subjects' purses
 Were ready with their aids and suc-
 cours ;
 Nothing was seen but pension'd Nurses,
 And the land groan'd with bibs and tuckers.

Oh ! had there been a Hume or Bennet,
 Then sitting in the Thibet Senate, 41
 Ye Gods, what room for long debates
 Upon the Nursery Estimates !
 What cutting down of swaddling-clothes
 And pin-a-fores, in nightly battles !
 What calls for papers to expose
 The waste of sugar-plums and rattles !

¹ Quand il étoit occupé d'aucune essoine, il envoyoit Nouvelle, sa fille, en son lieu lire aux escholes en charge, et, afin, que la bialité d'elle n'empêchât la pensée des oyants, elle avoit une petite courtine devant elle—Christ. de Pise, Cité des Dames, p. 11, cap. 36.

² See Turner's Embassy to Thibet for an ac-

But no—if Thibet had M.P.'s,
 They were far better bred than these ;
 Nor gave the slightest opposition, 50
 During the Monarch's whole dentition.
 But short this calm ;—for, just when he
 Had reach'd the' alarming age of three,
 When Royal natures, and, no doubt,
 Those of all noble beasts break out—
 The Lama, who till then was quiet,
 Show'd symptoms of a taste for riot ;
 And, ripe for mischief, early, late,
 Without regard for Church or State,
 Made free with whosoe'er came nigh ; 60
 Tweak'd the Lord Chancellor by the nose,

Turn'd all the Judges' wigs awry,
 And trod on the old Generals' toes :
 Pelted the Bishops with hot buns,
 Rode cockhorse on the City maces,
 And shot from little devilish guns
 Hard peas into his subjects' faces.
 In short, such wicked pranks he play'd,
 And grew so mischievous, God bless
 him !

That his Chief Nurse—with ev'n the aid
 Of an Archbishop—was afraid, 71
 When in these moods, to comb or dress him.

Nay, ev'n the persons most inclin'd
 Through thick and thin, for Kings to stickle,
 Thought him (if they'd but speak their
 mind,
 Which they did not) an odious pickle.

At length some patriot lords—a breed
 Of animals they've got in Thibet,
 Extremely rare, and fit, indeed,
 For folks like Pidcock, to exhibit— 80
 Some patriot lords, who saw the length
 To which things went, combin'd their
 strength,
 And penn'd a manly, plain and free
 Remonstrance to the Nursery ;
 Protesting warmly that they yielded
 To none, that ever went before 'em,
 In loyalty to him who wielded
 The' hereditary pap-spoon o'er 'em ;

count of his interview with the Lama.—'Teshoo Lama (he says) was at this time eighteen months old. Though he was unable to speak a word, he made the most expressive signs, and conducted himself with astonishing dignity and decorum.'

That, as for treason, 'twas a thing
That made them almost sick to think
of— 90

That they and theirs stood by the King,

Throughout his measles and his chin-
cough,

When others, thinking him consumptive,

Had rattled to the Heir Presumptive !—
But, still—though much admiring Kings

(And chiefly those in leading-strings),
They saw, with shame and grief of soul

There was no longer now the wise
And constitutional control

Of birch before their ruler's eyes ; 100
But that, of late, such pranks, and
tricks,

And freaks occur'd the whole day
long,

As all, but men with bishopricks,

Allow'd, in ev'n a King, were wrong.

Wherefore it was they humbly pray'd

That Honourable Nursery,

That such reforms be henceforth made,

As all good men desir'd to see ;—

In other words (lest they might seem Too tedious), as the gentlest scheme 110

For putting all such pranks to rest,
And in its bud the mischief nipping—

They ventur'd humbly to suggest
His Majesty should have a whipping !

When this was read, no Congreve rocket,
Discharg'd into the Gallic trenches,

E'er equal'd the tremendous shock it

Produc'd upon the Nursery benches.

The Bishops, who of course had votes,

By right of age and petticoats, 120

Were first and foremost in the fuss—

'What, whip a Lama ! suffer birch

To touch his sacred—infamous !

Deistical !—assailing thus

The fundamentals of the Church !—

No—no—such patriot plans as these,

(So help them Heaven—and their Sees !)

They held to be rank blasphemies.'

The' alarm thus given, by these and other

Grave ladies of the Nursery side, 130

Spread through the land, till, such a
pothor,

Such party squabbles, far and wide,

Never in history's page had been Recorded, as were then between
The Whippers and Non-whippers seen.

Till, things arriving at a state,
Which gave some fears of revolution,

The patriot lords' advice, though late,

Was put at last in execution.

The Parliament of Thibet met— 140

The little Lama, call'd before it,

Did, then and there, his whipping get,

And (as the Nursery Gazette

Assures us) like a hero bore it.

And though, 'mong Thibet Tories, some

Lament that Royal Martyrdom

(Please to observe, the letter D

In this last word's pronounc'd like B),

Yet to the' example of that Prince

So much is Thibet's land a debtor, 150

That her long line of Lamas, since,

Have all behav'd themselves much better.

FABLE VII

THE EXTINGUISHERS

PROEM

THOUGH soldiers are the true supports

The natural allies of Courts,

Woe to the Monarch, who depends

Too much on his red-coated friends ;

For even soldiers sometimes think—

Nay, Colonels have been known to reason,—

And reasoners, whether clad in pink,

Or red, or blue, are on the brink

(Nine cases out of ten) of treason.

Not many soldiers, I believe, are 10

As fond of liberty as Mina ;

Else—woe to kings, when Freedom's fever

Once turns into a Scarletina !

For then—but hold 'tis best to veil

My meaning in the following tale :—

FABLE

A Lord of Persia, rich and great,

Just come into a large estate,

Was shock'd to find he had, for neighbours,

Close to his gate, some rascal Ghebers,

Whose fires, beneath his very nose, 20

In heretic combustion rose.

But Lords of Persia can, no doubt,
 Do what they will—so, one fine
 morning,
 He turn'd the rascal Ghebers out,
 First giving a few kicks for warning.
 Then, thanking Heaven most piously,
 Heknock'd their Temple to the ground,
 Blessing himself for joy to see
 Such Pagan ruins strew'd around.
 But much it vex'd my Lord to find, 30
 That, while all else obey'd his will,
 The Fire these Ghebers left behind,
 Do what he would, kept burning still.
 Fiercely he storm'd, as if his frown
 Could scare the bright insurgent down ;
 But, no—such fires are headstrong
 things,
 And care not much for Lords or Kings.
 Scarce could his Lordship well contrive
 The flashes in one place to smother,
 Before—hey presto !—all alive, 40
 They sprung up freshly in another.
 At length when, spite of prayers and damns,
 'Twas found the sturdy flame defied
 him,
 His stewards came, with low salams,
 Off'ring, by contract, to provide him
 Some large Extinguishers, (a plan,
 Much us'd, they said, at Ispahan,
 Vienna, Petersburg—in short,
 Wherever Light's forbid at court.)
 Machines no Lord should be without, 50
 Which would, at once, put promptly
 out
 All kinds of fires,—from staring, stark
 Volcanos to the tiniest spark ;
 Till all things slept as dull and dark,
 As, in a great Lord's neighbourhood,
 'Twas right and fitting all things should.
 Accordingly, some large supplies
 Of these Extinguishers were furnish'd
 (All of the true Imperial size),
 And there, in rows, stood black and burnish'd, 60
 Ready, where'er a gleam but shone
 Of light or fire, to be clapp'd on.
 But, ah, how lordly wisdom errs,
 In trusting to extinguishers !

One day, when he had left all sure,
 (At least, so thought he) dark, secure—
 The flame, at all its exits, entries,
 Obstructed to his heart's content,
 And black extinguishers, like sentries,
 Plac'd over every dangerous vent—
 Ye Gods, imagine his amaze, 71
 His wrath, his rage, when, on return-
 ing,
 He found not only the old blaze,
 Brisk as before, crackling and burning,
 Not only new, young conflagrations,
 Popping up round in various stations—
 But, still more awful, strange, and dire,
 The Extinguishers themselves on fire !!¹
 They, they—those trusty, blind machines
 His Lordship had so long been prais-
 ing, 80
 As, under Providence, the means
 Of keeping down all lawless blazing,
 Were now, themselves—alas, too true
 The shameful fact—turn'd blazers too,
 And, by a change as odd as cruel,
 Instead of dampers, serv'd for fuel !

Thus, of his only hope bereft,
 'What,' said the great man, 'must be
 done ?'
 All that, in scrapes like this, is left
 To great men is—to cut and run. 90
 So run he did ; while to their grounds,
 The banish'd Ghebers blest return'd ;
 And, though their Fire had broke its bounds,
 And all abroad now wildly burn'd,
 Yet well could they, who lov'd the
 flame,
 Its wand'ring, its excess reclaim ;
 And soon another, fairer Dome
 Arose to be its sacred home,
 Where, cherish'd, guarded, not confin'd,
 The living glory dwelt inshrined, 100
 And, shedding lustre strong, but even,
 Though born of earth, grew worthy
 heav'n.

MORAL

The moral hence my Muse infers
 Is, that such Lords are simple elves,
 In trusting to Extinguishers,
 That are combustible themselves.

¹ The idea of this Fable was caught from one of those brilliant mots which abound in the conversation of my friend, the author of the Letters to Julia,—a production which contains some of the happiest specimens of playful poetry that have appeared in this or any ago.

FABLE VIII

LOUIS FOURTEENTH'S WIG

THE money rais'd—the army ready—
Drums beating, and the Royal Neddy
Valiantly braying in the van,
To the old tune 'Eh, eh, Sire Ane!'—¹
Nought wanting, but some coup
dramatic,

To make French sentiment explode,
Bring in, at once, the goût fanatic,
And make the war 'la dernière mode'—
Instantly, at the Pavillon Marsan,
Is held an Ultra consultation—¹⁰
What's to be done, to help the farce on ?
What stage-effect, what decoration,
To make this beauteous France forget,
In one grand, glorious pirouette,
All she had sworn to but last week,
And, with a cry of 'Magnifique !'
Rush forth to this, or any war,
Without inquiring once—'What for ?'

After some plans propos'd by each,
Lord Châteaubriand made a speech, ²⁰
(Quoting, to show what men's rights are,
Or rather what men's rights should be,
From Hobbes, Lord Castlereagh, the Czar,

And other friends to Liberty.)
Wherein he—having first protested
'Gainst humouring the mob—suggested (As the most high-bred plan he saw
For giving the new War éclat)
A grand, Baptismal Melo-drame,
To be got up at Nôtre-Dame, ³⁰
In which the Duke (who, bless his Highness !

Had by his kilt acquir'd such fame,
'Twas hop'd that he as little shyness
Would show, when to the point he came.)
Should, for his deeds so lion-hearted,
Be christen'd Hero, ere he started ;
With power, by Royal Ordonnance,
To bear that name—at least in France.

¹ They celebrated in the dark ages, at many churches, particularly at Rouen, what was called the Feast of the Ass. On this occasion the ass, finely drest, was brought before the altar, and they sung before him this elegant anthem, 'Eh, eh, eh, Sire Ane, eh, eh, eh, Sire Ane.'—Warton's Essay on Pope.

² Brought from the river Jordan by M. Châteaubriand, and presented to the French

Himself—the Viscount Châteaubriand—
(To help the' affair with more esprit on)
Off'ring, for this baptismal rite, ⁴¹
Some of his own fam'd Jordan water—³ (Marie Louise not having quite Us'd all that, for young Nap, he brought her.)

The baptism, in this case, to be Applied to that extremity,
Which Bourbon heroes most expose ;
And which (as well all Europe knows)
Happens to be, in this Defender
Of the true faith, extremely tender.⁵⁰

Or if (the Viscount said) this scheme
Too rash and premature should seem—
If thus discounting heroes, on tick—

This glory, by anticipation,
Was too much in the genre romantique
For such a highly classic nation,
He begg'd to say, the Abyssinians
A practice had in their dominions,
Which, if at Paris got up well,
In full costume, was sure to tell. ⁶⁰
At all great epochs, good or ill,
They have, says BRUCE (and BRUCE ne'er budes

From the strict truth), a grand Quadrille
Inpublicanc'd by the Twelve Judges—⁴
And, he assures us, the grimaces,
The entre-chats, the airs and graces
Of dancers, so profound and stately,
Divert the Abyssinians greatly.

'Now (said the Viscount), there's but few
Great Empires, where this plan would
do :

For instance, England ;—let them take What pains they would—'twere vain to strive—

The twelve stiff Judges there would make

The worst Quadrille-set now alive.
One must have seen them, ere one could

Imagine properly JUDGE WOOD,

Empress for the christening of young Napoleon.
³ See the Duke's celebrated letter to madame, written during his campaign in 1815, in which he says, 'J'ai le postérieur légèrement endommagé.'

⁴ On certain great occasions the twelve Judges (who are generally between sixty and seventy years of age) sing the song and dance the figure-dance, &c.—Book v.

Performing, in his wig, so gaily,
A queue-de-chat with JUSTICE BAILEY !
French Judges, though, are, by no
means,

This sort of stiff, be-wigg'd machines !
And we, who've seen them at Saumur,
And Poitiers lately, may be sure
They'd dance quadrilles, or any thing,
That would be pleasing to the King—
Nay, stand upon their heads, and more
do,

To please the little Duke de Bordeaux !

After these several schemes there came
Some others—needless now to name,
Since that, which Monsieur plann'd,
himself,

Soon doom'd all others to the shelf, 90
And was receiv'd par acclamation,
As truly worthy the Grande Nation.

It seems (as Monsieur told the story)
That LOUIS the Fourteenth,—that
glory,

That Coryphée of all crown'd pates,—
That pink of the Legitimates—
Had, when, with many a pious pray'r,
he

Bequeath'd unto the Virgin Mary
His marriage deeds, and cordons bleu,¹
Bequeath'd to her his State Wig too—
(An offering which, at Court, 'tis
thought,

The Virgin values as she ought)— 102
That Wig, the wonder of all eyes,
The Cynosure of Gallia's skies,
To watch and tend whose curls ador'd,

Re-build its tow'ring roof, when flat,
And round its rumpled base, a Board
Of sixty Barbers daily sat,²

With Subs, on State-Days, to assist,
Well pension'd from the Civil List :—
That wond'rous Wig, array'd in which
And form'd alike to awe or witch, 112
He beat all other heirs of crowns,
In taking mistresses and towns,

² The learned author of Recherches Historiques sur les Perruques says that the Board consisted but of Forty—the same number as the Academy. 'Le plus beau tems des perruques fut

Requiring but a shot at one,
A smile at t'other, and 'twas done !—

'That Wig' (said Monsieur, while his
brow

Rose proudly,) 'is existing now ;—
That Grand Perruque, amid the fall
Of ev'ry other Royal glory, 120
With curls erect survives them all,
And tells in ev'ry hair their story.
Think, think, how welcome at this time
A relic, so belov'd, sublime !

What worthier standard of the Cause
Of Kingly Right can France demand ?
Or who among our ranks can pause
To guard it, while a curl shall stand ?
Behold, my friends'—(while thus he cried,

A curtain, which conceal'd this pride 130
Of Princely Wigs was drawn aside)

'Behold that grand Perruque—how big
With recollections for the world—

For France—for us—Great LOUIS' Wig,
By HIPPOLYTE³ new frizz'd and curl'd—

New frizz'd ! alas, 'tis but too true,
Well may you start at that word new—
But such the sacrifice, my friends,

The Imperial Cossack recommends ;
Thinking such small concessions sage,
To meet the spirit of the age, 141

And do what best that spirit flatters,
In Wigs—if not in weightier matters.

Wherefore, to please the Czar, and show
That we too, much-wrong'd Bourbons,
know

What liberalism in Monarchs is,
We have conceded the New Friz !
Thus arm'd, ye gallant Ultras, say,
Can men, can Frenchmen, fear the fray ?

With this proud relic in our van, 150
And D'ANGOULÊME our worthy leader,
Let rebel Spain do all she can,

Let recreant England arm and feed
her,—

celui où Louis XIV commença à porter, lui-même, perruque ; On ignore l'époque où se fit cette révolution ; mais on sait qu'elle engagea Louis le Grand à y donner ses soins paternels, en créant, en 1656, quarante charges de perruquiers, suivant la cour ; et en 1673, il forma un corps de deux cents perruquiers pour la Ville de Paris.'—P. 111.

³ A celebrated Coiffeur of the present day.

Urg'd by that pupil of HUNT's school,
That Radical, Lord LIVERPOOL—
France can have nought to fear—far from it—

When once astounded Europe sees
The wig of LOUIS, like a Comet,

Streaming above the Pyrenées, All's o'er with Spain—then on, my sons, 160
On, my incomparable Duke
And, shouting for the Holy Ones,
Cry Vive la Guerre—et la Perruque!

RHYMES ON THE ROAD

EXTRACTED FROM THE JOURNAL OF A TRAVELLING MEMBER OF
THE POCO-CURANTE SOCIETY, 1819

THE greater part of the following Rhymes were written or composed in an old calèche, for the purpose of beguiling the ennui of solitary travelling; and as verses, made by a gentleman in his sleep, have been lately called 'a psychological curiosity,' it is to be hoped that verses, composed by a gentleman to keep himself awake, may be honoured with some appellation equally Greek.

INTRODUCTORY RHYMES

Different Attitudes in which Authors compose.—
Bayes, Henry Stephens, Herodotus, &c.—Writing in Bed—in the Fields.—Plato and Sir Richard Blackmore.—Fiddling with Gloves and Trigs.—Madame de Staël.—Rhyming on the Road, in an old Calèche.

WHAT various attitudes, and ways,
And tricks, we authors have in writing!
While some write sitting, some, like
BAYES,

Usually stand, while they're inditing.
Poets there are, who wear the floor out,
Measuring a line at every stride;
While some, like HENRY STEPHENS,
pour out

Rhymes by the dozen, while they ride.¹
HERODOTUS wrote most in bed;

And RICHERAND, a French physician,
Declares the clock-work of the head
Goes best in that reclined position.
If you consult MONTAIGNE² and PLINY

on
The subject, 'tis their joint opinion
That Thought its richest harvest yields
Abroad, among the woods and fields;
That bards, who deal in small retail,
At home may, at their counters,

stop;
But that the grove, the hill, the vale,
Are Poesy's true wholesale shop. 20

—Paravicin. Singular.

And, verily, I think they're right—

For, many a time, on summer eves,
Just at that closing hour of light,

When, like an Eastern Prince, who leaves

For distant war his Haram bow'rs,
The Sun bids farewell to the flow'rs,
Whose heads are sunk, whose tears are flowing

Mid all the glory of his going!—

Ev'n I have felt, beneath those beams,
When wand'ring through the fields
alone, 30

Thoughts, fancies, intellectual gleams,
Which, far too bright to be my own,
Seem'd lent me by the Sunny Pow'r,
That was abroad at that still hour.

If thus I've felt, how must they feel,

The few, whom genuine Genius warms;
Upon whose souls he stamps his seal,
Graven with Beauty's countless forms;—

The few upon this earth, who seem
Born to give truth to PLATO's dream, 40
Since in their thoughts, as in a glass,
Shadows of heavenly things appear,
Reflections of bright shapes that pass Through other worlds, above our sphere!

² 'Mes pensées dorment, si je les assis.'—
Montaigne.
Animus eorum qui in aperto aere ambulat,
attollitur.—Pliny.

But this reminds me I digress ;—
 For PLATO, too, produc'd, 'tis said,
 (As one, indeed, might almost guess,)
 His glorious visions all in bed.¹
 'Twas in his carriage the sublime 29
 Sir RICHARD BLACKMORE used to rhyme;
 And (if the wits don't do him wrong)
 'Twixt death² and epics pass'd his
 time,
 Scribbling and killing all day long—
 Like Phoebus in his car, at ease,
 Now warbling forth a lofty song,
 Now murd'ring the young Niobes.

There was a hero 'mong the Danes,
 Who wrote, we're told, 'mid all the pains
 And horrors of exenteration,
 Nine charming odes, which, if you'll
 look, 60
 You'll find preserv'd, with a transla-
 tion,
 By BARTHOLOMEUS in his book.³
 In short, 'twere endless to recite
 The various modes in which men write.
 Some wits are only in the mind,
 When beaux and belles are round
 them prating;
 Some, when they dress for dinner, find
 Their muse and valet both in waiting;
 And manage, at the self-same time,
 To' adjust a neckcloth and a rhyme. 70
 Some bards there are who cannot scribble

Without a glove, to tear or nibble;
 Or a small twig to whisk about—
 As if the hidden founts of Fancy,
 Like wells of old, were thus found out
 By mystic tricks of rhabdomancy.
 Such was the little feathery wand,⁴
 That, held for ever in the hand
 Of her,⁵ who won and wore the crown
 Of female genius in this age, 80
 Seem'd the conductor, that drew down
 Those words of lightning to her page.

¹ The only authority I know for imputing this practice to Plato and Herodotus, is a Latin Poem by M. de Valois on his Bed, in which he says :—

Lucifer Herodotum vidit Vesperque cubantem,
 Desedit totos hic Plato saepe dies.

² Sir Richard Blackmore was a physician, as well as a bad poet.

³ Eadem curâ nec minores inter cruciatus

As for myself—to come, at last,
 To the odd way in which I write—
 Having employ'd these few months past
 Chiefly in travelling, day and night,
 I've got into the easy mode,
 Of rhyming thus along the road—
 Making a way-bill of my pages,
 Counting my stanzas by my stages— 90
 'Twixt lays and re-lays no time lost—
 In short, in two words, writing post.

'Twas late—the sun had almost shone
 His last and best, when I ran on,
 Anxious to reach that splendid view,
 Before the day-beams quite withdrew;
 And feeling as all feel, on first Approaching scenes, where, they are told,
 Such glories on their eyes will burst,
 As youthful bards in dreams behold.

'Twas distant yet, and, as I ran,
 Full often was my wistful gaze 10
 Turn'd to the sun, who now began
 To call in all his out-post rays,
 And form a denser march of light,
 Such as bessems a hero's flight.
 Oh, how I wish'd for JOSHUA's pow'r,
 To stay the brightness of that hour!
 But no—the sun still less became,
 Diminish'd to a speck, as splendid
 And small as were those tongues of
 flame,
 That on the' Apostles' heads descended! 20

'Twas at this instant—while there
 glow'd
 This last, intensest gleam of light—
 Suddenly, through the opening road,
 The valley burst upon my sight!

⁶ Between Vattay and Gex.

That glorious valley, with its Lake,
And Alps on Alps in clusters swelling,
Mighty, and pure, and fit to make
The ramparts of a Godhead's dwelling.

I stood entranc'd—as Rabbins say
This whole assembled, gazing world
Will stand, upon that awful day, 31
When the Ark's Light, aloft unfurl'd,
Among the opening clouds shall shine,
Divinity's own radiant sign !

Mighty MONT BLANC, thou wert to me,
That minute, with thy brow in heaven,
As sure a sign of Deity
As e'er to mortal gaze was given.
Nor ever, were I destin'd yet
To live my life twice o'er again, 40
Can I the deep-felt awe forget,
The dream, the trance that rapt me
then !

'Twas all that consciousness of pow'r
And life, beyond this mortal hour ;—
Those mountings of the soul within
At thoughts of Heav'n—as birds begin
By instinct in the cage to rise,
When near their time for change of skies ;—
That proud assurance of our claim
To rank among the Sons of Light, 50
Mingled with shame—oh bitter shame !—
At having risk'd that splendid right,
For aught that earth through all its range
Of glories, offers in exchange !
'Twas all this, at that instant brought,
Like breaking sunshine, o'er my
thought—

'Twas all this, kindled to a glow
Of sacred zeal, which, could it shine
Thus purely ever, man might grow,
Ev'n upon earth a thing divine, 60
And be, once more, the creature made
To walk unstain'd the Elysian shade !

No, never shall I lose the trace
Of what I've felt in this bright place.
And, should my spirit's hope grow weak,
Should I, oh God, e'er doubt thy pow'r,
This mighty scene again I'll seek,
At the same calm and glowing hour,

¹ In the year 1782, when the forces of Berne, Sardinia, and France laid siege to Geneva, and when, after a demonstration of heroism and self-devotion, which promised to rival the feats of their ancestors in 1602 against Savoy, the Genevans, either panic-struck or betrayed, to

FATE OF GENEVA IN THE YEAR 1782

A FRAGMENT

YES—if there yet live some of those,
Who, when this small Republic rose,
Quick as a startled hive of bees,
Against her leaguering enemies—¹
When, as the Royal Satrap shook
His well-known fetters at her gates,
Ev'n wives and mothers arm'd, and took
Their stations by their sons and mates ;
And on these walls there stood—yet, no,
Shame to the traitors—would have stood 10

As firm a band as e'er let flow
At Freedom's base their sacred blood ;
If those yet live, who, on that night,
When all were watching, girt for fight,
Stole, like the creeping of a pest,
From rank to rank, from breast to breast,
Filling the weak, the old with fears,
Turning the heroine's zeal to tears,—
Betraying Honour to that brink,
Where, onestep more, and he must sink—
And quenching hopes, which, though the last, 21

Like meteors on a drowning mast,
Would yet have led to death more bright,
Than life e'er look'd, in all its light !
Till soon, too soon, distrust, alarms
Throughout the embattled thousands ran,

And the high spirit, late in arms,
The zeal, that might have work'd such
charms,

Fell, like a broken talisman—
Their gates, that they had sworn should
be 30

The gates of Death, that very dawn,
Gave passage widely, bloodlessly,
To the proud foe—nor sword was
drawn,

the surprise of all Europe, opened their gates to the besiegers, and submitted without a struggle to the extinction of their liberties.—See an account of this Revolution in Cox's Switzerland.

Nor ev'n one martyr'd body cast
To stain their footsteps, as they pass'd ;
But, of the many sworn at night
To do or die, some fled the sight,
Some stood to look, with sullen frown,
While some, in impotent despair, 39
Broke their bright armour and lay down,
Weeping, upon the fragments there!—
If those, I say, who brought that shame,

That blast upon GENEVA's name,
Be living still—though crime so dark
Shall hang up, fix'd and unforgiv'n,
In History's page, the' eternal mark
For Scorn to pierce—so help me Heav'n,
I wish the traitorous slaves no worse,
No deeper, deadlier disaster,
From all earth's ills no fouler curse 50
Than to have . . . their master !

Fancy and Truth.—Hippomenes and Atalanta.—Mont Blanc.—Clouds.

Geneva.

EVEN here, in this region of wonders, I find
That light-footed Fancy leaves truth far behind ;
Or, at least, like Hippomenes, turns her astray
By the golden illusions he flings in her way.¹

What a glory it seem'd the first ev'ning I gaz'd !
MONT BLANC, like a vision, then suddenly rais'd
On the wreck of the sunset—and all his array
Of high-towering Alps, touch'd still with a light
Far holier, purer than that of the Day,

As if nearness to Heaven had made them so bright !
Then the dying, at last, of these splendours away
From peak after peak, till they left but a ray,
One roseate ray, that, too precious to fly,

10

O'er the Mighty of Mountains still glowingly hung,
Like the last sunny step of ASTRÆA, when high
From the summit of earth to Elysium she sprung !
And those infinite Alps, stretching out from the sight
Till they mingled with Heaven, now shorn of their light,
Stood lofty, and lifeless, and pale in the sky,
Like the ghosts of a Giant Creation gone by !

20

That scene—I have view'd it this evening again,
By the same brilliant light that hung over it then—
The valley, the lake in their tenderest charms—

MONT BLANC in his awfulest pomp—and the whole
A bright picture of Beauty, reclin'd in the arms
Of Sublimity, bridegroom elect of her soul !

But where are the mountains, that round me at first,
One dazzling horizon of miracles, burst ?

Those Alps beyond Alps, without end swelling on Like the waves of eternity—where are they gone ?

30

Clouds—clouds—they were nothing but clouds, after all !²

That chain of MONT BLANCS, which my fancy flew o'er,
With a wonder that nought on this earth can recall,

Were but clouds of the evening, and now are no more.

¹ ———nitidique cupidine pomi
Declinat cursus, aurumque volubile tollit.

Ovid.

² It is often very difficult to distinguish between clouds and Alps ; and on the evening when I first saw this magnificent scene, the clouds were so disposed along the whole horizon as to deceive me into an idea of the stupendous extent of these mountains, which my subsequent observation was very far, of course, from confirming.

What a picture of Life's young illusions! Oh, Night,
Drop thy curtain, at once, and hide all from my sight.

WENT to the Brera—saw a Dance of Loves
By smooth ALBANO¹; him, whose pencil teems
With Cupids, numerous as in summer groves
The leaflets are, or motes in summer beams.

'Tis for the theft of Enna's flow'r² from earth,
These urchins celebrate their dance of mirth
Round the green tree, like fays upon a heath—
Those, that are nearest, link'd in order bright,
Cheek after cheek, like rose-buds in a wreath;
And those, more distant, showing from beneath
The others' wings their little eyes of light. 10
While see, among the clouds, their eldest brother,
But just flown up, tells with a smile of bliss
This prank of Pluto to his charmed mother,
Who turns to greet the tidings with a kiss!

Well might the Loves rejoice—and well did they,
Who wove these fables, picture, in their weaving,
That blessed truth, (which, in a darker day,
ORIGEN lost his saintship for believing.)³
That Love, eternal Love, whose fadeless ray 20
Nor time, nor death, nor sin can overcast,
Ev'n to the depths of hell will find his way,
And soothe, and heal, and triumph there at last

GUERCINO's Agar—where the bond-maid hears
From Abram's lips that he and she must part;
And looks at him with eyes all full of tears,
That seem the very last drops from her heart.
Exquisite picture!—let me not be told
Of minor faults, of colouring tame and cold—
If thus to conjure up a face so fair,⁴ 30
So full of sorrow; with the story there
Of all that woman suffers, when the stay
Her trusting heart hath lean'd on falls away—
If thus to touch the bosom's tend'rest spring,
By calling into life such eyes, as bring Back to our sad remembrance some of those
We've smil'd and wept with, in their joys and woes,

¹ This picture, the Agar of Guercino, and the Apostles of Guido (the two latter of which are now the chief ornaments of the Brera), were formerly in the Palazzo Zampieri, at Bologna.

Herself a fairer flower, by gloomy Dis

³ The extension of the Divine Love ultimately even to the regions of the damned.

⁴ It is probable that this fine head is a portrait, as we find it repeated in a picture by Guercino, which is in the possession of Signor Camuccini, the brother of the celebrated painter at Rome.

Thus filling them with tears, like tears we've known,
Till all the pictur'd grief becomes our own—
If this be deem'd the victory of Art—
If thus, by pen or pencil, to lay bare
The deep, fresh, living fountains of the heart
Before all eyes, be Genius—it is there!

*Fancy and Reality.—Rain-drops and Lakes.—Plan of a Story.—Where to place the Scene of it
In some unknown Region.—Psalmazar's Imposture with respect to the Island of Formosa.*

THE more I've view'd this world, the more I've found.

That, fill'd as 'tis with scenes and creatures rare,
Fancy commands, within her own bright round,

A world of scenes and creatures far more fair.

Nor is it that her power can call up there

A single charm, that's not from Nature won,
No more than rainbows, in their pride, can wear

A single hue unborrow'd from the sun—
But 'tis the mental medium it shines through,

That lends to Beauty all its charm and hue;
As the same light, that o'er the level lake

One dull monotony of lustre flings,
Will, entering in the rounded rain-drop, make
Colours as gay as those on Peris' wings!

10

And such, I deem, the difference between real,
Existing Beauty and that form ideal,
Which she assumes, when seen by poets' eyes,
Like sunshine in the drop—with all those dyes,
Which Fancy's variegating prism supplies.

I have a story of two lovers, fill'd

With all the pure romance, the blissful sadness,
And the sad, doubtful bliss, that ever thrill'd

Two young and longing hearts in that sweet madness.
But where to choose the region of my vision

In this wide, vulgar world—what real spot
Can be found out sufficiently Elysian

For two such perfect lovers, I know not.
Oh for some fair FORMOSA, such as he,

The young Jew fabled of, in the Indian Sea,
By nothing, but its name of Beauty, known,

And which Queen Fancy might make all her own,
Her fairy kingdom—take its people, lands,

And tenements into her own bright hands,
And make, at least, one earthly corner fit
For Love to live in, pure and exquisite!

The Fall of Venice not to be lamented.—Former Glory.—Expedition against Constantinople.—Giustinianus.—Republic.—Characteristics of the old Government.—Golden Book.—Brazen Mouths.—Spies.—Dungeons.—Present Desolation.

MOURN not for VENICE—let her rest
In ruin, 'mong those States unblest,
Beneath whose gilded hoofs of pride,
Where'er they trampled, Freedom died.
No—let us keep our tears for them,
Where'er they pine, whose fall hath

been
Not from a blood-stain'd diadem,
Like that which deck'd this ocean-queen,

But from high daring in the cause
Of human Rights—the only good to
And blessed strife, in which man draw
His mighty sword on land or flood.

Mourn not for VENICE; though her fall
Be awful, as if Ocean's wave
Swept o'er her, she deserves it all,
And Justice triumphs o'er her grave.
Thus perish ev'ry King and State,
That run the guilty race she ran,
Strong but in ill, and only great
By outrage against God and man! 20

True, her high spirit is at rest,
And all those days of glory gone,

² 'La famille entière des Justiniani, l'une des plus illustres de Venise, voulut marcher toute entière dans cette expédition; elle fournit cent combattans; c'était renouveler l'exemple d'une illustre famille de Rome; la même malheur les attendait.'—Histoire de Venise, par Daru.

³ The celebrated Fra Paolo. The collection of Maxims which this bold monk drew up at the request of the Venetian Government, for the guidance of the Secret Inquisition of State, are so atrocious as to seem rather an over-charged satire upon despotism, than a system of policy, seriously inculcated, and but too readily and constantly pursued.

The spirit, in which these maxims of Father Paul are conceived, may be judged from the instructions which he gives for the management of the Venetian colonies and provinces. Of the former he says:—'Il faut les traiter comme des animaux féroces, les rogner les dents, et les griffes, les humilier souvent, sur-tout leur ôter les occasions de s'aguerir. Du pain et le bâton, voilà ce qu'il leur faut; gardons l'humanité pour une meilleure occasion.'

For the treatment of the provinces he advises thus:—'Tendre à dépouiller les villes de leurs

Vanish'd are all her pomps, 'tis true, 29
But mourn them not—for vanish'd, too,
(Thanks to that Pow'r, who, soon or late, Hurls to the dust the guilty Great,)

Are all the outrage, falsehood, fraud,
The chains, the rapine, and the blood,
That fill'd each spot, at home, abroad,

Where the Republic's standard stood.
Desolate VENICE! when I track

⁶ Among those admitted to the honour of being inscribed in the Libro d'oro were some families of Brescia, Treviso, and other places, whose only claim to that distinction was the zeal with which they prostrated themselves and their country at the feet of the republic.

Thy all-pervading host of spies, 51
Watching o'er ev'ry glance and breath,
Till men look'd in each others' eyes,
Toread their chance of life or death;—
Thy laws, that made a mart of blood,
And legaliz'd the assassin's knife;—¹
Thy sunless cells beneath the flood,
And racks, and Leads,² that burnt out
life;—

When I review all this, and see
The doom that now hath fall'n on thee;
Thy nobles, tow'ring once so proud, 61

Themselves beneath the yoke now

A yoke, by no one grace redeem'd,
Such as, of old, around thee beam'd,
But mean and base as e'er yet gall'd
Earth's tyrants, when, themselves, enthrall'd,—

I feel the moral vengeance sweet,

Lord Byron's Memoirs, written by himself.—Reflections, when about to read them.

LET me, a moment,—ere with fear and hope
Of gloomy, glorious things, these leaves I ope—
As one, in fairy tale, to whom the key
Of some enchanter's secret halls is giv'n,
Doubts, while he enters, slowly, tremblingly,
If he shall meet with shapes from hell or heav'n—
Let me, a moment, think what thousands live
O'er the wide earth this instant, who would give,
Gladly, whole sleepless nights to bend the brow
Over these precious leaves, as I do now. 10
How all who know—and where is he unknown?
To what far region have his songs not flown,
Like PSAPHON's birds,³ speaking their master's name,
In ev'ry language, syllabled by Fame?—
How all, who've felt the various spells combin'd
Within the circle of that master-mind,—
Like spells, deriv'd from many a star, and met
Together in some wond'rous amulet,—
Would burn to know when first the Light awoke
In his young soul,—and if the gleams that broke
From that Aurora of his genius, rais'd 20
Most pain or bliss in those on whom they blaz'd;
Would love to trace the unfolding of that pow'r,
Which hath grown ampler, grander, ev'ry hour;
And feel, in watching o'er his first advance,
As did the Egyptian traveller,⁴ when he stood
By the young Nile, and fathom'd with his lance
The first small fountains of that mighty flood.

¹ By the infamous statutes of the State Inquisition, not only was assassination recognized as a regular mode of punishment, but this secret power over life was delegated to their minions at a distance, with nearly as much facility as a licence is given under the game laws of England. The only restriction seems to have been the necessity of applying for a new certificate, after every individual exercise of the power.

² 'Les prisons des plombs; c'est-à-dire ces fournaises ardentes qu'on avait distribuées en petites cellules sous les terrasses qui couvrent le palais.'

³ Psaphon, in order to attract the attention of the world, taught multitudes of birds to speak his name, and then let them fly away in various directions; whence the proverb, 'Psaphonis aves.'

⁴ Bruce.

They, too, who, mid the scornful thoughts that dwell
 In his rich fancy, tinging all its streams,—
 As if the Star of Bitterness, which fell 30
 On earth of old,¹ had touch'd them with its beams,—
 Can track a spirit, which, though driven to hate,
 From Nature's hands came kind, affectionate;
 And which, ev'n now, struck as it is with blight,
 Comes out, at times, in love's own native light;
 How gladly all, who've watch'd these struggling rays
 Of a bright, ruin'd spirit through his lays,
 Would here inquire, as from his own frank lips,
 What desolating grief, what wrongs had driven 40
 That noble nature into cold eclipse;
 Like some fair orb that, once a sun in heaven,
 And born, not only to surprise, but cheer
 With warmth and lustre all within its sphere,
 Is now so quench'd, that of its grandeur lasts
 Nought, but the wide, cold shadow which it casts!

Eventful volume! whatsoe'er the change
 Of scene and clime—the' adventures, bold and strange—
 The griefs—the frailties, but too frankly told—
 The loves, the feuds thy pages may unfold, 50
 If Truth with half so prompt a hand unlooks
 His virtues as his failings, we shall find
 The record there of friendships, held like rocks,
 And enmities, like sun-touch'd snow, resign'd;
 Of fealty, cherish'd without change or chill,
 In those who serv'd him, young, and serve him still;
 Of gen'rous aid, giv'n with that noiseless art
 Which wakes not pride, to many a wounded heart;
 Of acts—but, no—not from himself must aught
 Of the bright features of his life be sought. 60
 While they, who court the world, like MILTON's cloud,²
 'Turn forth their silver lining' on the crowd,
 This gifted Being wraps himself in night;
 And, keeping all that softens, and adorns,
 And gilds his social nature hid from sight,
 Turns but its darkness on a world he scorns.

 In ruin'd places, why, oh why
 Must Beauty thus with Glory die?

There bloom'd such beauty here, 'tis
gone,— 60

Gone, like the face that in the stream
Of Ocean for an instant shone,
When Venus at that mirror gazed
A last look, ere she left the wave.

And though, among the crowded ways,
We oft are startled by the blaze
Of eyes that pass, with fittful light,
Like fire-flies on the wing at night,⁸

'Tis not that nobler beauty, giv'n
To show how angels look in heav'n. 70
Ev'n in its shape most pure and fair,

'Tis Beauty, with but half her zone,—
All that can warm the Sense is there,

But the Soul's deeper charms flow'n:—
'Tis RAPHAEL'S Fornarina,—warm,

Luxuriant, arch, but unrefin'd;
A flower, round which the noontides warm

Of young Desires may buzz and wind,
But where true Love no treasure meets,
Worth hoarding in his hive of sweets. 80

Ah, no,—for this, and for the hue
Upon the rounded cheek, which tells

How fresh, within the heart, this dew
Of Love's unrifed sweetness dwells,

We must go back to our own Isles,
Where Modesty, which here but gives

A rare and transient grace to smiles,
In the heart's holy centre lives;

And thence, as from her throne diffuses
O'er thoughts and looks so bland a reign, 90

That not a thought or feeling loses
Its freshness in that gentle chain.

picture by Titian in the possession of the Marquis Cambian at Turin, whose collection, though small, contains some beautiful specimens of all the great masters.

⁶ As Paul Veronese gave but little into the beau idéal, his women may be regarded as pretty close imitations of the living models which Venice afforded in his time.

AND is there then no earthly place,
Where we can rest, in dream Elysian,
Without some curst, round English face,
Popping up near, to break the vision ?
'Mid northern lakes, 'mid southern

Unholy cites we're doom'd to meet ;
Nor highest Alps nor Apennines
Are sacred from Threadneedle Street !

If up the Simplon's path we wind,
Fancying we leave this world behind, to Go where we may—rest where we will,

Eternal London haunts us still.

With every rill from Helicon !

And, if this rage for travelling lasts,
If Cockneys, of all sects and castes,

Old maidens, aldermen, and squires,
Will leave their puddings and coal fires,

To gape at things in foreign lands,
No soul among them understands ;

If Blues desert their coteries,
To show off 'mong the Wahabees ; 30

Verses of Hippolyta to her Husband.

THEY tell me thou'rt the favour'd guest'
Of every fair and brilliant throng ;
No wit, like thine, to wake the jest,
No voice like thine, to breathe the

song.
And none could guess, so gay thou art,
That thou and I are far apart.

Alas, alas, how different flows,
With thee and me the time away.

Not that I wish thee sad, heaven
knows—

Still, if thou canst, be light and gay ;
I only know that without thee 11
The sun himself is dark for me.

Do I put on the jewels rare
Thou'st always lov'd to see me wear ?
Do I perfume the locks that thou
So oft hast braided o'er my brow,
Thus deck'd, through festive crowds to run,

And all the' assembled world to see,—
All but the one, the absent one,

Worth more than present worlds to
me ! 20

No, nothing cheers this widow'd heart—
My only joy, from thee apart,

Me juvat, aut Arabo spargere odore
comas :

Non celebres ludos fastis spectare diebus.

Sola tuos vultus referens Raphaelis imago
Picta manu, curas allevat usque meas.

Huic ego delicias facio, arrideoque jocorque
Alloquor et tanquam reddere verba queat.

Assensu nutnque mihi saepe illa videtur
Dicere velle aliquid et tua verba loqui.

From thee thyself, is sitting hours
And days, before thy pictur'd form—
That dream of thee, which Raphael's pow'rs
Have made with all but life-breath
warm !
And as I smile to it, and say
The words I speak to thee in play,
I fancy from their silent frame,

Those eyes and lips give back the same ;
And still I gaze, and still they keep 31
Smiling thus on me—till I weep !
Our little boy, too, knows it well,
For there I lead him every day,
And teach his lisping lips to tell
The name of one that's far away.
Forgive me, love, but thus alone
My time is cheer'd, while thou art gone.

Florence.

No—'tis not the region where Love's to be found—
They have bosoms that sigh, they have glances that rove,
They have language a Sappho's own lip might resound,
When she warbled her best—but they've nothing like Love.

Nor is't that pure sentiment only they want,
Which Heav'n for the mild and the tranquil hath made—
Calm, wedded affection, that home-rooted plant,
Which sweetens seclusion, and smiles in the shade ;

That feeling, which, after long years have gone by,
Remains, like a portrait we've sat for in youth, 10
Where, ev'n though the flush of the colours may fly,
The features still live, in their first smiling truth ;

That union, where all that in Woman is kind,
With all that in Man most ennoblingly tow'rs,
Grow wreath'd into one—like the column, combin'd
Of the strength of the shaft and the capital's flow'rs.

Of this—bear ye witness, ye wives, ev'ry where,
By the ARNO, the Po, by all ITALY'S streams—
Of this heart-wedded love, so delicious to share,
Not a husband hath even one glimpse in his dreams. 20

But it is not this, only ;—born full of the light
Of a sun, from whose fount the luxuriant festoons
Of these beautiful valleys drink lustre so bright,
That, beside him, our suns of the north are but moons,—

We might fancy, at least, like their climate they burn'd ;
And that Love, though unus'd, in this region of spring,
To be thus to a tame Household Deity turn'd,
Would yet be all soul, when abroad on the wing.

And there may be, there are, those explosions of heart,
Which burst, when the senses have first caught the flame ; 30
Such fits of the blood as those climates impart,
Where Love is a sun-stroke, that maddens the frame.

But that Passion, which springs in the depth of the soul ;
Whose beginnings are virginly pure as the source
Of some small mountain rivulet, destin'd to roll
As a torrent, ere long, losing peace in its course—

A course, to which Modesty's struggle but lends
 A more headlong descent, without chance of recall;
 But which Modesty ev'n to the last edge attends,
 And, then, throws a halo of tears round its fall! 40

This exquisite Passion—ay, exquisite, even
 Mid the ruin its madness too often hath made,
 As it keeps, even then, a bright trace of the heaven,
 That heaven of Virtue from which it has stray'd—
 This entireness of love, which can only be found,
 Where Woman, like something that's holy, watch'd over,
 And fenc'd, from her childhood, with purity round,
 Comes, body and soul, fresh as Spring, to a lover!

Where not an eye answers, where not a hand presses,
 Till spirit with spirit in sympathy move; 50
 And the Senses, asleep in their sacred recesses,
 Can only be reach'd through the temple of Love!—

This perfection of Passion—how can it be found,
 Where the mystery nature hath hung round the tie
 By which souls are together attracted and bound,
 Is laid open, for ever, to heart, ear, and eye;—

Where nought of that innocent doubt can exist,
 That ignorance, even than knowledge more bright,
 Which circles the young, like the morn's sunny mist,
 And curtains them round in their own native light;— 60

Where Experience leaves nothing for Love to reveal,
 Or for Fancy, in visions, to gleam o'er the thought;
 But the truths which, alone, we would die to conceal
 From the maiden's young heart, are the only ones taught.

No, no, 'tis not here, howsoever we sigh,
 Whether purely to Hymen's one planet we pray,
 Or adore, like Sabaeans, each light of Love's sky,
 Here is not the region, to fix or to stray.

For faithless in wedlock, in gallantry gross,
 Without honour to guard, or reserve to restrain, 70
 What have they, a husband can mourn as a loss?
 What have they, a lover can prize as a gain?

Music in Italy.—Disappointed by it.—Recollections of other Times and Friends.—Sir John Stevenson.—His Daughter.—Musical Evenings together.

If it be true that Music reigns,
 Supreme, in ITALY's soft shades,
 'Tis like that Harmony, so famous,
 Among the spheres, which, He of SAMOS
 Declar'd, had such transcendent merit,
 That not a soul on earth could hear it;
 For, far as I have come—from Lakes,

Whose sleep the Tramontana breaks,
 Through MILAN, and that land, which gave

The Hero of the rainbow vest—¹ 10
 By MINCIO's banks, and by that wave,²
 Which made VERONA's bard so blest—
 Places, that (like the Attic shore,
 Which rung back music, when the sea
 Struck on its marge) should be, all o'er,
 Thrilling alive with melody—

¹ Bergamo—the birth-place, it is said, of Harlequin.

² The Lago di Garda.

I've heard no music—not a note
Of such sweet native airs as float
In my own land, among the throng,
And speak our nation's soul for song. 20

Nay, ev'n in higher walks, where Art
Performs, as 'twere, the gardener's part,
And richer, if not sweeter, makes
The flow'rs she from the wild-hedge takes—

Ev'n there, no voice hath charm'd my
ear,

No taste hath won my perfect praise,
Like thine, dear friend¹—long, truly
dear—

Thine, and thy lov'd OLIVIA's lays.
She, always beautiful, and growing
Still more so ev'ry note she sings— 30
Like an inspir'd young Sibyl,² glowing
With her own bright imaginings!
And thou, most worthy to be tied
In music to her, as in love,
Breathing that language by her side,
All other language far above,
Eloquent Song—whose tones and words
In ev'ry heart find answering chords!

How happy once the hours we past,
Singing or list'ning all day long, 40
Till Time itself seem'd chang'd, at
last,

To music, and we liv'd in song!
Turning the leaves of HAYDN o'er,
As quick, beneath her master hand,
They open'd all their brilliant store,
Like chambers, touch'd by fairy wand;

Or o'er the page of MOZART bending,
Now by his airy warblings cheer'd,

Now in his mournful Requiem blending Voices, through which the heart was
heard. 50

And still, to lead our ev'ning choir,
Was He invok'd, thy lov'd-one's Sire—³
He, who, if aught of grace there be
In the wild notes I write or sing,
First smooth'd their links of harmony,
And lent them charms they did not bring;—

He, of the gentlest, simplest heart,
With whom, employ'd in his sweet art,
(That art, which gives this world of ours
A notion how they speak in heav'n,) I've pass'd more bright and charmed
hours 60

Than all earth's wisdom could have
giv'n.

Oh happy days, oh early friends,
How Life, since then, hath lost its flow'rs!

But yet—though Time some foliage
rends,
The stem, the Friendship, still is
ours;

And long may it endure, as green,
And fresh as it hath always been!

How I have wander'd from my theme!
But where is he, that could return 70
To such cold subjects from a dream,
Through which these best of feelings
burn?—

Not all the works of Science, Art,
Or Genius in this world are worth
One genuine sigh, that from the heart
Friendship or Love draws freshly forth.

Reflections on reading Du Cerceau's Account of the Conspiracy of Rienzi, in 1347.⁴—The Meeting of the Conspirators on the Night of the 19th of May.—Their Procession in the Morning to the Capitol.—Rienzi's Speech.

'Twas a proud moment—ev'n to hear the words
Of Truth and Freedom 'mid these temples breath'd,
And see, once more, the Forum shine with swords,
In the Republic's sacred name unsheath'd—

² Such as those of Domenichino in the Palazzo Borghese at the Capitol, &c.

³ Sir John Stevenson.

⁴ The Conjuración de Nicolas Gabrini, dit de Rienzi, by the Jesuit Du Cerceau, is chiefly taken from the much more authentic work of Fortisioeca on the same subject. Rienzi was the son of a laundress.

That glimpse, that vision of a brighter day,
For his dear ROME, must to a Roman be,
Short as it was, worth ages pass'd away
In the dull lapse of hopeless slavery.

'Twas on a night of May, beneath that moon,
Which had, through many an age, seen Time untune
The strings of this Great Empire, till it fell
From his rude hands, a broken, silent shell—
The sound of the church clock,¹ near ADRIAN'S Tomb,
Summon'd the warriors, who had risen for ROME,
To meet unarm'd,—with none to watch them there,
But God's own eye,—and pass the night in pray'r.
Holy beginning of a holy cause,
When heroes, girt for Freedom's combat, pause
Before high Heav'n, and, humble in their might,
Call down its blessing on that coming fight.

10

At dawn, in arms, went forth the patriot band;
And, as the breeze, fresh from the TIBER, fann'd
Their gilded gonfalons, all eyes could see

The palm-tree there, the sword, the keys of Heav'n—
Types of the justice, peace, and liberty,

That were to bless them, when their chains were riv'n.
On to the Capitol the pageant mov'd,

While many a Shade of other times, that still Around that grave of grandeur sighing rov'd,

Hung o'er their footsteps up the Sacred Hill,
And heard its mournful echoes, as the last 30

High-minded heirs of the Republic pass'd.

Twas then that thou, their Tribune,² (name, which brought Dreams of lost glory to each patriot's thought,)

Didst, with a spirit Rome in vain shall seek
To wake up in her sons again, thus speak:—

'ROMANS, look round you—on this sacred place

There once stood shrines, and gods, and god-like men.

What see you now? what solitary trace

Is left of all, that made ROME's glory then?

40

The shrines are sunk, the Sacred Mount bereft

Ev'n of its name—and nothing now remains

But the deep mem'ry of that glory, left

To whet our pangs and aggravate our chains!

But shall this be?—our sun and sky the same,—

Treading the very soil our fathers trode,—

² 'Les gentilshommes conjurés portaient devant lui trois étendards. Nicolas Guallato, surnommé le bon diseur, portait le premier, qui était de couleur rouge, et plus grand que les autres. On y voyait des caractères d'or avec une femme assise sur deux lions, tenant d'une main le globe du monde, et de l'autre une Palme pour représenter la ville de Rome. C'était la Gonfalon de la Liberté. Le second, à fond blanc, avec un St. Paul tenant de la droite une Épée nue et de la gauche la couronne de Justice, était porté par Etienne Magnacuccia, notaire apostolique. Dans le troisième, St. Pierre avait en main les clefs de la Concorde et de la Paix. Tout cela insinuait le dessein de Rienzi, qui était de rétablir la liberté, la justice, et la paix.'—Du Cerceau, liv. ii.

³ Rienzi.

What with'ring curse hath fall'n on soul and frame,
 What visitation hath there come from God,
 To blast our strength, and rot us into slaves,
Here, on our great forefathers' glorious graves ? 50
 It cannot be—rise up, ye Mighty Dead,—
 If we, the living, are too weak to crush
 These tyrant priests, that o'er your empire tread,
 Till all but Romans at Rome's tameness blush !

' Happy, PALMYRA, in thy desert domes,
 Where only date-trees sigh and serpents hiss ;
 And thou, whose pillars are but silent homes
 For the stork's brood, superb PERSEPOLIS !
 Thrice happy both, that your extinguish'd race
 Have left no embers—no half-living trace— 60
 No slaves, to crawl around the once proud spot,
 Till past renown in present shame's forgot.
 While ROME, the Queen of all, whose very wrecks,
 If lone and lifeless through a desert hurl'd,
 Would wear more true magnificence than decks
 The' assembled thrones of all the' existing world—
 ROME, ROME alone, is haunted, stain'd and curst,
 Through ev'ry spot her princely TIBER laves,
 By living human things—the deadliest, worst,
 This earth engenders—tyrants and their slaves 70
 And we—oh shame !—we, who have ponder'd o'er
 The patriot's lesson and the poet's lay ;¹
 Have mounted up the streams of ancient lore,
 Tracking our country's glories all the way—
 Ev'n we have tamely, basely kiss'd the ground
 Before that Papal Power,—that Ghost of Her,
 The World's Imperial mistress—sitting, crown'd
 And ghastly, on her mould'ring sepulchre !²

' But this is past :—too long have lordly priests
 And priestly lords led us, with all our pride 80
 With'ring about us—like devoted beasts,
 Dragg'd to the shrine, with faded garlands tied.
 'Tis o'er—the dawn of our deliverance breaks !
 Up from his sleep of centuries awakes
 The Genius of the Old Republic, free
 As first he stood, in chainless majesty,
 And sends his voice through ages yet to come,
 Proclaiming ROME, ROME, ROME, Eternal ROME !³

¹ The fine Canzone of Petrarch, beginning 'Spirto gentil,' is supposed, by Voltaire and others, to have been addressed to Rienzi ; but there is much more evidence of its having been written, as Ginguéné asserts, to the young Stephen Colonna, on his being created a Senator of Rome. That Petrarch, however, was filled with high and patriotic hopes by the first measures of this extraordinary man, appears from one of his letters, quoted by Du Cerceau, where he says,—'Pour tout dire, en un mot, j'atteste, non comme lecteur, mais comme témoin oculaire, qu'il nous a ramenés la justice, la paix, la bonne foi, la sécurité, et tous les autres vestiges de l'âge d'or.'

² This image is borrowed from Hobbes, whose words are, as near as I can recollect :—'For what is the Papacy, but the Ghost of the old Roman Empire, sitting crowned on the grave thereof?'

FILL'D with the wonders I had seen,
In Rome's stupendous shrines and
halls,

I felt the veil of sleep, serene,
Come o'er the mem'ry of each scene,
As twilight o'er the landscape falls.

Nor was it slumber, sound and deep,
But such as suits a poet's rest—

That sort of thin, transparent sleep,
Through which his day-dreams shine
the best.

Methought upon a plain I stood, 10
Where certain wondrous men, 'twas
said,

With strange, mirac'ulous pow'r endu'd,
Were coming, each in turn, to shed
His arts' illusions o'er the sight,
And call up miracles of light.

The sky above this lonely place,
Was of that cold, uncertain hue,
The canvass wears, ere, warm'd apace,
Its bright creation dawns to view.

But soon a glimmer from the east 20
Proclaim'd the first enchantments
nigh; 1

And as the feeble light increas'd,
Strange figures mov'd across the
sky,

¹ The paintings of those artists who were introduced into Venice and Florence from Greece.

² Margaritone of Orezzo, who was a pupil and imitator of the Greeks, is said to have invented this art of gilding the ornaments of pictures, a practice which, though it gave way to a purer taste at the beginning of the 16th century, was still occasionally used by many of the great masters: as by Raphael in the ornaments of the Fornarina, and by Rubens not unfrequently in glories and flames.

³ Cimabue, Giotto, &c.

⁴ The works of Masaccio.—For the character

With golden glories deck'd, and streaks
Of gold among their garments' dyes; 3
And life's resemblance ting'd their cheeks,

But nought of life was in their eyes;—
Like the fresh-painted Dead one meets,
Borne slow along Rome's mournful streets.

But soon these figures pass'd away; 30
And forms succeeded to their place,

With less of gold, in their array,
But shining with more natural grace,
And all could see the charming wands
Had pass'd into more gifted hands.³

Among these visions there was one,⁴
Surpassing fair, on which the sun,
That instant ris'n, a beam let fall,

Which through the dusky twilight
trembled,

And reach'd at length the spot where all
Those great magicians stood assembled. 41

And as they turn'd their heads, to view
The shining lustre, I could trace
The bright varieties it threw

On each uplifted studying face; 5
While many a voice with loud acclaim,
Call'd forth, 'Masaccio' as the name
Of him, the Enchanter, who had rais'd
This miracle, on which all gaz'd.

'Twas daylight now—the sun had ris'n,
From out the dungeon of old Night,—

Like the Apostle, from his prison 52
Led by the Angel's hand of light;

And—as the fetters, when that ray
Of glory reach'd them, dropp'd away,⁵
So fled the clouds at touch of day!

Just then, a bearded sage 7 came forth,
Who oft in thoughtful dream would
stand,

To trace upon the dusky earth
Strange learned figures with his wand⁶ of this powerful and original genius, see Sir Joshua Reynolds's twelfth discourse. His celebrated frescoes are in the church of St. Pietro del Carmine, at Florence.

⁵ All the great artists studied, and many of them borrowed from Masaccio. Several figures in the Cartoons of Raphael are taken, with but little alteration, from his frescoes.

⁶ 'And a light shined in the prison . . . and his chains fell off from his hands.'—Acts.

⁷ Leonardo da Vinci.

⁸ His treatise on Mechanics, Optics, &c. preserved in the Ambrosian library at Milan.

And oft he took the silver lute¹ 61
His little page behind him bore,
And wak'd such music as, when mute,
Left in the soul a thirst for more!

Meanwhile, his potent spells went on,
And forms and faces, that from out
A depth of shadow mildly shone,
Were in the soft air seen about.
Though thick as midnight stars they
beam'd,

Yet all like living sisters seem'd, 70
So close, in every point, resembling
Each other's beauties—from the eyes
Lucid as if through crystal trembling,
Yet soft as if suffus'd with sighs,
To the long, fawn-like mouth, and chin,
Lovely tapering, less and less,
Till, by this very charm's excess,
Like virtue on the verge of sin,
It touch'd the bounds of ugliness.
Here look'd as when they liv'd the shades 80

Of some of Arno's dark-ey'd maids—
Such maids as should alone live on,
In dreams thus, when their charms are
gone:

Some Mona Lisa, on whose eyes
A painter for whole years might gaze,²

Nor find, in all his pallet's dyes,
One that could even approach their blaze!

Here float two spirit shapes,³ the one,
With her white fingers to the sun
Outspread, as if to ask his ray 90
Whether it e'er had chanc'd to play
On lilies half so fair as they!
This self-pleas'd nymph, was Vanity—
And by her side another smil'd,
In form as beautiful as she,
But with that air, subdu'd and mild,
That still reserve of purity,

² He is said to have been four years employed upon the portrait of this fair Florentine, without being able, after all, to come up to his idea of her beauty.

³ Vanity and Modesty in the collection of Cardinal Fesch, at Rome. The composition of the four hands here is rather awkward, but the

Which is to beauty like the haze
Of ev'ning to some sunny view,
Soft'ning such charms as it displays, 100
And veiling others in that hue,
Which fancy only can see through!
This phantom nymph, who could she be,
But the bright Spirit, Modesty?

Long did the learn'd enchanter stay
To weave his spells, and still there passed,

As in the lantern's shifting play,
Group after group in close array,
Each fairer, grander, than the last.

But the great triumph of his pow'r 110
Was yet to come:—gradual and slow,
(As all that is ordain'd to tow'r
Among the works of man must grow,)
The sacred vision stole to view,
In that half light, half shadow shown,
Which gives to ev'n the gayest hue,
A sober'd, melancholy tone.

It was a vision of that last,⁴
Sorrowful night which Jesus pass'd
With his disciples, when he said 120
Mournfully to them—'I shall be
Betray'd by one, who here hath fed
This night at the same board with
me.'

And though the Saviour, in the dream
Spoke not these words, we saw them
beam

Legibly in his eyes (so well
The great magician work'd his spell),
And read in every thoughtful line
Imprinted on that brow divine,
The meek, the tender nature, griev'd,
Not anger'd, to be thus deceiv'd— 131
Celestial love requited ill
For all its care, yet loving still—
Deep, deep regret that there should fall
From man's deceit so foul a blight
Upon that parting hour—and all
His Spirit must have felt that night, picture, altogether, is very delightful. There is a repetition of the subject in the possession of Lucien Bonaparte.

⁴ The Last Supper of Leonardo da Vinci, which is in the Refectory of the Convent delle Grazie at Milan. See L'Histoire de la Peinture en Italie, liv. iii, chap. 45. The writer of that interesting work (to whom I take this opportunity of offering my acknowledgements, for the copy he sent me a year since from Rome,) will see I have profited by some of his observations on this celebrated picture.

Who, soon to die for human-kind,
Thought only, 'mid his mortal pain,
How many a soul was left behind 140
For whom he died that death in vain!

Such was the heavenly scene—alas,
That scene so bright so soon should
pass!

But pictur'd on the humid air,
Its tints, ere long, grew languid there; 1
And storms came on, that, cold and rough,

Scatter'd its gentlest glories all—
As when the baffling winds blow off
The hues that hang o'er Terni's
fall,—

Till, one by one, the vision's beams 150
Faded away, and soon it fled,

To join those other vanish'd dreams
That now flit palely 'mong the dead,—
The shadows of those shades, that go,
Around Oblivion's lake, below!

*Mary Magdalen.—Her Story.—Numerous Pictures of her.—Correggio.—Guido.—Raphael, &c.—
Canova's two exquisite Statues.—The Samaritan
Magdalen.—Chantrey's Admiration of Canova's Works.*

No wonder, MARY, that thy story
Touches all hearts—for there we see
The soul's corruption, and its glory,
Its death and life combin'd in thee.

From the first moment, when we find
Thy spirit haunted by a swarm
Of dark desires,—like demons shrin'd
Unholy in that fair form,—

Till when, by touch of Heav'n set free,
Thou cam'st, with those bright locks
of gold 10

(So oft the gaze of BETHANY),
And, coving in their precious fold
Thy Saviour's feet, didst shed such tears
As paid, each drop, the sins of years!
Thence on, through all thy course of
love

To Him, thy Heavenly Master,—Him,
Whose bitter death-cup from above
Had yet this cordial round the brim,

¹ Leonardo appears to have used a mixture of oil and varnish for this picture, which alone, without the various other causes of its ruin,

That woman's faith and love stood fast

And fearless by Him to the last:— 20
Till, oh, blest boon for truth like thine!

Thou wert, of all, the chosen one,
Before whose eyes that Face Divine,
When risen from the dead, first
shone;

That thou might'st see how, like a cloud,

Had pass'd away its mortal shroud,
And make that bright revelation
known

To hearts, less trusting than thy own.
All is affecting, cheering, grand;
The kindest record ever giv'n, 30
Ev'n under God's own kindly hand,
Of what Repentance wins from
Heav'n!

No wonder, MARY, that thy face,
In all its touching light of tears,
Should meet us in each holy place,
Where Man before his God appears,
Hopeless—were he not taught to see
All hope in Him, who pardon'd thee!
No wonder that the painter's skill
Should oft have triumph'd in the
pow'r 40

Of keeping thee all lovely still
Ev'n in thy sorrow's bitt'rest hour;
That soft CORREGGIO should diffuse
His melting shadows round thy form;
That GUIDO's pale, unearthly hues
Should, in portraying thee, grow
warm;

That all—from the ideal, grand,
Inimitable Roman hand,
Down to the small, enamelling touch
Of smooth CARLINO—should delight
In pict'ring her, who 'lov'd so much,' 51
And was, in spite of sin, so bright!

But, MARY, 'mong these bold essays
Of Genius and of Art to raise
A semblance of those weeping eyes—
A vision, worthy of the sphere
Thy faith has earn'd thee in the skies,
And in the hearts of all men here,— None e'er hath match'd, in grief or
grace,
CANOVA's day-dream of thy face, 60

would have prevented any long duration of its beauties. It is now almost entirely effaced.

In those bright sculptur'd forms, more
bright

With true expression's breathing light,
Than ever yet, beneath the stroke
Of chisel, into life awoke.

The one,¹ portraying what thou wert
In thy first grief,—while yet the
flow'r

Of those young beauties was unhurt
By sorrow's slow, consuming pow'r;
And mingling earth's seductive grace

With heav'n's subliming thoughts so
well, 70

We doubt, while gazing, in which place
Such beauty was most form'd to
dwell!

The other, as thou look'dst, when years
Of fasting, penitence, and tears
Had worn thy frame;—and ne'er did

Art

With half such speaking pow'r express

The ruin which a breaking heart
Spreads, by degrees, o'er loveliness.
Those wasting arms, that keep the
trace,

Ev'n still, of all their youthful grace, 80
That loosen'd hair, of which thy brow
Was once so proud,—neglected now!—
Those features, ev'n in fading worth

The freshest bloom to others giv'n,
And those sunk eyes, now lost to
earth,

But, to the last, still full of heav'n!

Wonderful artist! praise, like mine—
Though springing from a soul, that feels

Deep worship of those works divine, 89
Where Genius all his light reveals—

How weak 'tis to the words that came
From him, thy peer in art and fame,²
Whom I have known, by day, by night,

Hang o'er thy marble with delight;
And, while his ling'ring hand would steal
O'er every grace the taper's rays,³

Give thee, with all the gen'rous zeal
Such master-spirits only feel,

That best of fame, a rival's praise!

¹ This statue is one of the last works of Canova, and was not yet in marble when I left Rome. The other, which seems to prove, in contradiction to very high authority, that expression, of the intensest kind, is fully within the sphere of sculpture, was executed many

STRANGE power of Genius, that can throw

Round all that's vicious, weak, and low,

Such magic lights, such rainbow dyes
As dazzle ev'n the steadiest eyes

'Tis worse than weak—'tis wrong, 'tis
shame,

This mean prostration before Fame;
This casting down, beneath the car
Of Idols, whatsoe'er they are, 10

Life's purest, holiest decencies,
To be career'd o'er, as they please.

No—give triumphant Genius all
For which his loftiest wish can call:

If he be worshipp'd, let it be
For attributes, his noblest, first;

Not with that base idolatry,
Which sanctifies his last and worst.

I may be cold;—may want that glow
Of high romance, which bards should know; 20

That holy homage, which is felt
In treading where the great have dwelt;

This rev'rence, whatsoe'er it be,
I fear, I feel, I have it not:—

For here, at this still hour, to me
The charms of this delightful spot;

Its calm seclusion from the throng,
From all the heart would fain forget;

This narrow valley, and the song
Of its small murmur'ing rivulet; 30

The fitting, to and fro, of birds,
Tranquil and tame as they were once

In Eden, ere the startling words
Of Man disturb'd their orisons;

years ago, and is in the possession of the Count Somariva, at Paris.

² Chantrey.

³ Canova always shows his fine statue, the Venere Vincitrice, by the light of a small candle.

Those little, shadowy paths, that wind
Up the hill-side, with fruit-trees lin'd,
And lighted only by the breaks
The gay wind in the foliage makes,
Or vistas, here and there, that ope

Through weeping willows, like the snatches 40

Of far-off scenes of light, which Hope Ev'n through the shade of sadness catches !—

All this, which—could I once but lose
The memory of those vulgar ties,
Whose grossness all the heavenliest hues
Of Genius can no more disguise,
Than the sun's beams can do away
The filth of fens o'er which they play—
This scene, which would have fill'd my heart

With thoughts of all that happiest
is ;—

Of Love, where self hath only part, 51
As echoing back another's bliss ;
Of solitude, secure and sweet,
Beneath whose shade the Virtues meet ;
Which, while it shelters, never chills

Our sympathies with human woe,
But keeps them, like sequester'd rills,
Purer and fresher in their flow ;
Of happy days, that share their beams
'Twixt quiet mirth and wise employ ;
Of tranquil nights, that give, in dreams,

The moonlight of the morning's joy !—
All this my heart could dwell on here,
But for those gross mementos near ;
Those sullyng truths, that cross the track

Of each sweet thought, and drive them
back

Full into all the mire, and strife,
And vanities of that man's life,
Who, more than all that e'er have
glow'd

With Fancy's flame (and it was his, 70
In fullest warmth and radiance) show'd
What an impostor Genius is ;

How, with that strong, mimetic art,
Which forms its life and soul, it takes
All shapes of thought, all hues of heart,
Nor feels, itself, one throb it wakes ;
How like a gem its light may smile
O'er the dark path, by mortals trod,
Itself as mean a worm, the while,
As crawls at midnight o'er the sod ; 80
What gentle words and thoughts may
fall

From its false lip, what zeal to bless,
While home, friends, kindred, country,
all,

Lie waste beneath its selfishness ;
How, with the pencil hardly dry
From colouring up such scenes of love
And beauty, as make young hearts sigh,
And dream, and think through heav'n
they rove,

They, who can thus describe and move,
The very workers of these charms, 90
Nor seek, nor know a joy, above
Some Maman's or Theresa's arms !

How all, in short, that makes the boast
Of their false tongues, they want the
most ;

And, while with freedom on their lips,
Sounding their timbrels, to set free
This bright world, labouring in the eclipse

Of priestcraft, and of slavery,—
They may, themselves, be slaves as low
As ever Lord or Patron made 100
To blossom in his smile, or grow,
Like stunted brushwood, in his shade.

Out on the craft !—I'd rather be
One of those hinds, that round me
tread,

With just enough of sense to see
The noonday sun that's o'er his head,
Than thus, with high-built genius curst,
That hath no heart for its foundation,
Be all, at once, that's brightest, worst,
Sublimest, meanest in creation ! 110

OCCASIONAL EPILOGUE

SPOKEN BY MR. CORRY, IN THE CHARACTER OF VAPID, AFTER THE PLAY
OF THE DRAMATIST, AT THE KILKENNY THEATRE

(Entering as if to announce the Play.)

LADIES and Gentlemen, on Monday night,
For the ninth time—oh accents of delight
To the poor author's ear, when three times three
With a full bumper crowns his Comedy!
When, long by money, and the muse, forsak'n,
He finds at length his jokes and boxes tak'n,
And sees his play-bill circulate—alas,
The only bill on which his name will pass!
Thus, Vapid, thus shall Thespian scrolls of fame
Through box and gall'ry wait your well-known name,
While critic eyes the happy cast shall con,
And learned ladies spell your Dram. Person.

10

'Tis said our worthy Manager¹ intends
To help my night, and he, you know, has friends.
Friends, did I say? for fixing friends, or parts,
Engaging actors, or engaging hearts,
There's nothing like him! wits, at his request,
Are turn'd to fools, and dull dogs learn to jest;
Soldiers, for him, good 'trembling cowards' make,
And beaus, turn'd clowns, look ugly for his sake;
For him ev'n lawyers talk without a fee,
For him (oh friendship!) I act tragedy!
In short, like Orpheus, his persuasive tricks
Make boars amusing, and put life in sticks.

20

With such a manager we can't but please,
Though London sent us all her loud O. P.'s,²
Let them come on, like snakes, all hiss and rattle,
Arm'd with a thousand fans, we'd give them battle;
You, on our side, R. P.³ upon our banners,
Soon should we teach the saucy O.P.'s manners:
And show that, here—howe'er John Bull may doubt—
In all our plays, the Riot-Act's cut out;
And, while we skim the cream of many a jest,
Your well-tim'd thunder never sours its zest.

30

Oh gently thus, when three short weeks are past,
At Shakspeare's altar,⁴ shall we breathe our last;
And, ere this long-lov'd dome to ruin nods,
Die all, die nobly, die like demigods!

² The brief appellation by which those persons were distinguished who, at the opening of the new theatre of Covent Garden, clamoured for the continuance of the old prices of admission.

³ The initials of our manager's name.

⁴ This alludes to a scenic representation then preparing for the last night of the performances.

EXTRACT

FROM A PROLOGUE WRITTEN AND SPOKEN BY THE AUTHOR, AT THE OPENING OF THE KILKENNY THEATRE, OCTOBER, 1809

YET, even here, though Fiction rules the hour,
There shine some genuine smiles, beyond her power;
And there are tears, too—tears that Memory sheds
Ev'n o'er the feast that mimic fancy spreads,
When her heart misses one lamented guest,¹
Whose eye so long threw light o'er all the rest!
There, there, indeed, the Muse forgets her task,
And drooping weeps behind Thalia's mask.

Forgive this gloom—forgive this joyless strain,
Too sad to welcome pleasure's smiling train.
But, meeting thus, our hearts will part the lighter,
As mist at dawn but makes the setting brighter;
Gay Epilogue will shine where Prologue fails—
As glow-worms keep their splendour for their tails.

I know not why—but time, methinks, hath pass'd
More fleet than usual since we parted last.
It seems but like a dream of yester-night,
Whose charm still hangs, with fond, delaying light;
And, ere the memory lose one glowing hue
Of former joy, we come to kindle new.
Thus ever may the flying moments haste
With trackless foot along life's vulgar waste,
But deeply print and lingeringly move,
When thus they reach the sunny spots we love.
Oh yes, whatever be our gay career,
Let this be still the solstice of the year,
Where Pleasure's sun shall at its height remain,
And slowly sink to level life again.

THE SYLPH'S BALL

A SYLPH, as bright as ever sported
Her figure through the fields of air,
By an old swarthy Gnome was courted,
And, strange to say, he won the fair.

The annals of the oldest witch
A pair so sorted could not show,
But how refuse?—the Gnome was rich,
The Rothschild of the world below;

And Sylphs, like other pretty creatures,
Are told, betimes, they must consider

Love as an auctioneer of features,
Who knocks them down to the best bidder.

Home she was taken to his Mine—
A Palace, pav'd with diamonds all—
And, proud as Lady Gnome to shine,
Sent out her tickets for a Ball.

The lower world, of course, was there,
And all the best; but of the upper
The sprinkling was but shy and rare,
A few old Sylphids, who lov'd supper.

As none yet knew the wondrous Lamp
Of DAVY, that renown'd Aladdin, 22
And the Gnome's Halls exhal'd a damp,
Which accidents from fire were bad in;

¹ The late Mr. John Lyster, one of the oldest members and best actors of the Kilkenny Theatrical Society.

The chambers were supplied with light
By many strange but safe devices;
Large fire-flies, such as shine at night
Among the Orient's flowers and spices;—

Musical flint-mills—swiftly play'd
By elfin hands—that, flashing round,
Like certain fire-eyed minstrel maids, 31
Gave out, at once, both light and sound.

Bologna stones, that drink the sun;
And water from that Indian sea,
Whose waves at night like wild-fire
run—
Cork'd up in crystal carefully.

Glow-worms, that round the tiny dishes,
Like little light-houses, were set up;
And pretty phosphorescent fishes,
That by their own gay light were eat
up. 40

'Mong the few guests from Ether, came
That wicked Sylph, whom Love we call

My Lady knew him but by name,
My Lord, her husband, not at all.

Some prudent Gnomes, 'tis said, appriz'd
That he was coming, and, no doubt,
Alarm'd about his touch, advis'd
He should, by all means, be kept out.

But others disapprov'd this plan,
And, by his flame though somewhat frighted, 50
Thought Love too much a gentleman,
In such a dangerous place to light it.

However, there he was—and dancing
With the fair Sylph, light as a feather;
They look'd like two fresh sunbeams,
glancing,
At daybreak, down to earth together.

And all had gone off safe and well,
But for that plaguy torch, whose
light,
Though not yet kindled—who could tell
How soon, how devilishly, it might? 60

And so it chanced—which, in those dark
And fireless halls, was quite amazing;

Did we not know how small a spark
Can set the torch of Love a-blazing.

Whether it came (when close entangled
In the gay waltz) from her bright
eyes,

Or from the lucciole, that spangled
Her locks of jet—is all surmise;

But certain 'tis the' ethereal girl
Did drop a spark, at some odd turn-
ing, 70

Which, by the waltz's windy whirl,
Was fann'd up into actual burning

Oh for that Lamp's metallic gauze,
That curtain of protecting wire,
Which DAVY delicately draws
Around illicit, dangerous fire!—

The wall he sets 'twixt Flame and
Air,
(Like that, which barr'd young Thisbe's bliss,)

Through whose small holes this dangerous pair
May see each other, but not kiss.¹ 80

At first the torch look'd rather bluely,
A sign, they say, that no good boded—

Then quick the gas became unruly,
And, crack! the ball-room all exploded.

Sylphs, gnomes, and fiddlers mix'd
together,
With all their aunts, sons, cousins,
nieces,
Like butterflies in stormy weather,
Were blown—legs, wings, and tails—
to pieces!

While, 'mid these victims of the torch,
The Sylph, alas, too, bore her part—
Found lying, with a livid scorch, 91
As if from lightning, o'er her heart!

'Well done'—a laughing Goblin said—
Escaping from this gaseous strife—
"Tis not the first time Love has made
A blow-up in connubial life!

REMONSTRANCE

After a Conversation with Lord John Russell, in which he had intimated some Idea of giving up all political Pursuits.

WHAT! thou, with thy genius, thy youth, and thy name—
Thou, born of a Russell—whose instinct to run
The accustom'd career of thy sires, is the same
As the eaglet's, to soar with his eyes on the sun!

Whose nobility comes to thee, stamp'd with a seal,
Far, far more ennobling than monarch e'er set;
With the blood of thy race, offer'd up for the weal
Of a nation, that swears by that martyrdom yet!

Shalt thou be faint-hearted and turn from the strife,
From the mighty arena, where all that is grand,
And devoted, and pure, and adorning in life,
'Tis for high-thoughted spirits like thine to command?

10

Oh no, never dream it—while good men despair
Between tyrants and traitors, and timid men bow,
Never think, for an instant, thy country can spare
Such a light from her darkening horizon as thou.

With a spirit, as meek as the gentlest of those
Who in life's sunny valley lie shelter'd and warm;
Yet bold and heroic as ever yet rose
To the top cliffs of Fortune, and breasted her storm;

20

With an ardour for liberty, fresh as, in youth,
It first kindles the bard and gives life to his lyre;
Yet mellow'd, ev'n now, by that mildness of truth,
Which tempers, but chills not, the patriot fire;

With an eloquence—not like those rills from a height,
Which sparkle, and foam, and in vapour are o'er;
But a current, that works out its way into light
Through the filtering recesses of thought and of lore.

Thus gifted, thou never canst sleep in the shade;
If the stirrings of Genius, the music of fame,
And the charms of thy cause have not power to persuade,
Yet think how to Freedom thou'rt pledg'd by thy Name.

30

Like the boughs of that laurel, by Delphi's decree
Set apart for the Fane and its service divine,
So the branches, that spring from the old Russell tree,
Are by Liberty claim'd for the use of her Shrine.

MY BIRTH-DAY

'My birth-day' what a diff'rent sound
That word had in my youthful ears!
And how, each time the day comes
round,
Less and less white its mark appears!

When first our scanty years are told,
It seems like pastime to grow old;
And, as Youth counts the shining links,
That Time around him binds so fast,
Pleas'd with the task, he little thinks
How hard that chain will press at last.

Vain was the man, and false as vain, 11
 Who said '—' were he ordain'd to run
 His long career of life again,
 He would do all that he had done.'—
 Ah, 'tis not thus the voice, that dwells
 In sober birth-days, speaks to me;
 Far otherwise—of time it tells,
 Lavish'd unwisely, carelessly;
 Of counsel mock'd; of talents, made
 Haply for high and pure designs, 20
 But oft, like Israel's incense, laid
 Upon unholy, earthly shrines;
 Of nursing many a wrong desire;
 Of wandering after Love too far
 And taking every meteor fire,
 That cross'd my pathway, for his
 star.—

All this it tells, and, could I trace
 The' imperfect picture o'er again,
 With pow'r to add, retouch, efface
 The lights and shades, the joy and
 pain, 30
 How little of the past would stay!
 How quickly all should melt away—
 All—but that Freedom of the Mind,
 Which hath been more than wealth to
 me;
 Those friendships, in my boyhood twin'd,
 And kept till now unchangingly;
 And that dear home, that saving ark,
 Where Love's true light at last I've
 found,
 Cheering within, when all grows dark,
 And comfortless, and stormy round! 40

FANCY

THE more I've view'd this world, the more I've found,
 That, fill'd as 'tis with scenes and creatures rare,
 Fancy commands, within her own bright round,
 A world of scenes and creatures far more fair.
 Nor is it that her power can call up there
 A single charm, that's not from nature won,—
 No more than rainbows, in their pride, can wear
 A single tint unborrow'd from the sun;
 But 'tis the mental medium it shines through,
 That lends to Beauty all its charm and hue;
 As the same light, that o'er the level lake
 One dull monotony of lustre flings,
 Will, entering in the rounded rain-drop, make
 Colours as gay as those on angels' wings!

SONG

FANNY, DEAREST!

YES! had I leisure to sigh and mourn,
 Fanny, dearest, for thee I'd sigh;
 And every smile on my cheek should turn
 To tears when thou art nigh.
 But, between love, and wine, and sleep,
 So busy a life I live,
 That even the time it would take to
 weep
 Is more than my heart can give.
 Then wish me not to despair and pine,
 Fanny, dearest of all the dears!
 The Love that's order'd to bathe in
 wine,
 Would be sure to take cold in tears.

Reflected bright in this heart of mine,
 Fanny dearest, thy image lies;
 But, ah! the mirror would cease to
 shine,
 If dimm'd too often with sighs.
 They lose the half of beauty's light,
 Who view it through sorrow's tear;
 And 'tis but to see thee truly bright
 That I keep my eye-beams clear.
 Then wait no longer till tears shall flow—
 Fanny, dearest! the hope is vain;
 If sunshine cannot dissolve thy snow,
 I shall never attempt it with rain.

TRANSLATIONS FROM CATULLUS

Carm. 70Dicebas quondam, &c.

TO LESBIA

THOU told'st me, in our days of love,
That I had all that heart of thine;
That, ev'n to share the couch of Jove,
Thou would'st not, Lesbia, part from mine.

How purely wert thou worshipp'd then!
Not with the vague and vulgar fires
Which Beauty wakes in soulless men,—
But lov'd, as children by their sires.

That flatt'ring dream, alas, is o'er;—
I know thee now—and though these eyes

Doat on thee wildly as before,
Yet, even in doating, I despise.

Yes, sorceress—mad as it may seem—
With all thy craft, such spells adorn thee,

That passion even outlives esteem,
And I, at once, adore—and scorn thee.

Carm. 11Pauca nunciate mee puellas.

COMRADES and friends! with whom,
where'er

The fates have will'd through life I've
lov'd,

Now speed ye home, and with you bear
These bitter words to her I've lov'd.

Tell her from fool to fool to run,
Where'er her vain caprice may call;
Of all her dupes not loving one,
But ruining and madd'ning all.

Bid her forget—what now is past—
Our once dear love, whose ruin lies
Like a fair flow'r, the meadow's last,
Which feels the ploughshare's edge,
and dies!

¹ O quid solutis est beatius curis,
Cum mens onus reponit, ac peregrino
Labore fessi venimus larem ad nostrum,
Desideratoque acquiescimus lecto?

Carm. 29Paeninsularum Sirmio, insularumque Ocellæ.

SWEET Sirmio! thou, the very eye
Of all peninsulas and isles,
That in our lakes of silver lie,
Or sleep, enwreath'd by Neptune's smiles—

How gladly back to thee I fly!
Still doubting, asking—can it be
That I have left Bithynia's sky,
And gaze in safety upon thee?

Oh! what is happier than to find
Our hearts at ease, our perils past
When, anxious long, the lighten'd mind
Lays down its load of care at last:

When, tir'd with toil o'er land and deep,
Again we tread the welcome floor
Of our own home, and sink to sleep
On the long-wish'd-for bed once more.¹

This, this it is, that pays alone
The ills of all life's former track.—
Shine out, my beautiful, my own
Sweet Sirmio! greet thy master back.

And thou, fair Lake, whose water quaffs
The light of heav'n like Lydia's sea,
Rejoice, rejoice—let all that laughs
Abroad, at home, laugh out for me!

TIBULLUS TO SULPICIA

Nulla tuum nobis subducat femina lectum,
&c. &c. Lib. iv. Carm. 13.

'NEVER shall woman's smile have pow'r
To win me from those gentle
charms!'

Thus swore I, in that happy hour,
When Love first gave thee to my arms.

And still alone thou charm'st my sight—
Still, though our city proudly shine
With forms and faces, fair and bright,
I see none fair or bright but thine.

Would thou wert fair for only me,
And could'st no heart but mine
allure!—

To all men else unpleasing be,
So shall I feel my prize secure.²

² Displaceas aliis, sic ego tutus ero.

Oh, love like mine ne'er wants the zest
Of others' envy, others' praise;
But, in its silence safely blest,
Broods o'er a bliss it ne'er betrays.

Charm of my life! by whose sweet pow'r
All cares are hush'd, all ills subdued—
My light, in ev'n the darkest hour,
My crowd, in deepest solitude!¹

No, not though heav'n itself sent down
Some maid, of more than heav'nly
charms,
With bliss undreamt thy bard to crown,
Would he for her forsake those arms!

IMITATION

FROM THE FRENCH

WITH women and apples both Paris and Adam

Made mischief enough in their day:—
God be prais'd that the fate of mankind,
my dear Madam,

Depends not on us, the same way.
For, weak as I am with temptation to grapple,

The world would have doubly to rue
thee;

Like Adam, I'd gladly take from thee the apple,

Like Paris, at once give it to thee.

INVITATION TO DINNER

ADDRESSED TO LORD LANSDOWNE

September, 1818.

SOME think we bards have nothing real;

That poets live among the stars so,
Their very dinners are ideal,—

(And, heaven knows, too oft they are so),—

For instance, that we have, instead
Of vulgar chops, and stews, and hashes,

First course—a Phoenix, at the head,

Done in its own celestial ashes;

At foot, a cygnet, which kept singing

All the time its neck was wringing.

Side dishes, thus—Minerva's owl,

Or any such like learned fowl:

¹ Tu mihi curarum requies, tu nocte vel atra
Lumen, et in solis tu mihi turba locis.

² A picturesque village in sight of my cottage, and from which it is separated but by a small verdant valley.

Doves, such as heav'n's poulterer gets,
When Cupid shoots his mother's pets.
Larks, stew'd in Morning's roseate
breath,

Or roasted by a sunbeam's splendour;
And nightingales, berhym'd to death—
Like young pigs whipp'd to make them tender.

Such fare may suit those bards, who're able

To banquet at Duke Humphrey's table;
But as for me, who've long been taught
To eat and drink like other people;
And can put up with mutton, bought Where Bromham² rears its ancient steeple—

If Lansdowne will consent to share
My humble feast, though rude the fare,
Yet, season'd by that salt he brings
From Attica's salinest springs,
'Twill turn to dainties;—while the cup
Beneath his influence bright'ning up,
Like that of Baucis, touch'd by Jove,
Will sparkle fit for gods above!

VERSES TO THE POET CRABBE'S INKSTAND²

WRITTEN MAY, 1832

ALL, as he left it!—ev'n the pen,
So lately at that mind's command,
Carelessly lying, as if then
Just fall'n from his gifted hand.

Have we then lost him? scarce an hour,
A little hour, seems to have past,
Since Life and Inspiration's pow'r
Around that relic breath'd their last.

Ah, pow'rless now—like talisman,
Found in some vanish'd wizard's
halls,
Whose mighty charm with him began,
Whose charm with him extinguish'd
falls.

Yet though, alas! the gifts that shone
Around that pen's exploring track,
Be now, with its great master, gone,
Nor living hand can call them back;

² Soon after Mr. Crabbe's death, the sons of that gentleman did me the honour of presenting to me the inkstand, pencil, &c. which their distinguished father had long been in the habit of using.

Who does not feel, while thus his eyes
Rest on the enchanter's broken wand,
Each earth-born spell it work'd arise
Before him in succession grand ?— 20

Grand, from the Truth that reigns o'er
all ;

The unshrinking Truth, that lets her
light

Through Life's low, dark, interior fall,
Opening the whole, severely bright :

Yet softening, as she frowns along,
O'er scenes which angels weep to see—
Where Truth herself half veils the Wrong,

In pity of the Misery.

True bard !—and simple, as the race
Of true-born poets ever are, 30
When, stooping from their starry place,
They're children, near, though gods,
afar.

How freshly doth my mind recall,
'Mong the few days I've known with
thee,

One that, most buoyantly of all,
Floats in the wake of memory ; 1

When he, the poet, doubly grac'd,
In life, as in his perfect strain,
With that pure, mellowing power of Taste,

Without which Fancy shines in vain ;

Who in his page will leave behind, 41
Pregnant with genius though it be,
But half the treasures of a mind,
Where Sense o'er all holds mastery :—

Friend of long years ! of friendship tried

Through many a bright and dark event ;

In doubts, my judge—in taste, my guide—

In all, my stay and ornament !

He, too, was of our feast that day,
And all were guests of one, whose
hand 50

Hath shed a new and deathless ray
Around the lyre of this great land ;

In whose sea-odes—as in those shells
Where Ocean's voice of majesty
Seems still to sound—immortal dwells
Old Albion's Spirit of the Sea.

Such was our host ; and though, since
then,
Slight clouds have ris'n twixt him and
me,

Who would not grasp such hand again,
Stretch'd forth again in amity ? 60

Who can, in this short life, afford
To let such mists a moment stay,
When thus one frank, atoning word,
Like sunshine, melts them all away ?

Bright was our board that day—though
one

Unworthy brother there had place ;
As 'mong the horses of the Sun,
One was, they say, of earthly race.

Yet, next to Genius is the power
Of feeling where true Genius lies ; 70
And there was light around that hour
Such as, in memory, never dies ;

Light which comes o'er me, as I gaze,
Thou Relic of the Dead, on thee,
Like all such dreams of vanish'd days,
Brightly, indeed—but mournfully !

TO CAROLINE, VISCOUNTESS

VALLETORT

WRITTEN AT LACOCK ABBEY, JANUARY, 1832.

WHEN I would sing thy beauty's light,
Such various forms, and all so bright,
I've seen thee, from thy childhood, wear,
I know not which to call most fair,
Nor 'mong the countless charms that spring

For ever round thee, which to sing.

When I would paint thee, as thou art,
Then all thou wert comes o'er my heart—
The graceful child, in beauty's dawn,
Within the nursery's shade withdrawn,
Or peeping out—like a young moon 11
Upon a world 'twill brighten soon.
Then next, in girlhood's blushing hour,
As from thy own lov'd Abbey-tow'r

¹ The lines that follow allude to a day passed in company with Mr. Crabbe, many years since, when a party, consisting only of Mr. Rogers,

Mr. Crabbe, and the author of these verses, had the pleasure of dining with Mr. Thomas Campbell, at his house at Sydenham.

I've seen thee look, all radiant, down,
 With smiles that to the hoary frown
 Of centuries round thee lent a ray,
 Chasing even Age's gloom away ;—
 Or, in the world's resplendent throng,
 As I have mark'd thee glide along, 20
 Among the crowds of fair and great
 A spirit, pure and separate,
 To which even Admiration's eye
 Was fearful to approach too nigh ;—
 A creature, circled by a spell
 Within which nothing wrong could
 dwell ;
 And fresh and clear as from the source,
 Holding through life her limpid course,
 Like Arethusa through the sea,
 Stealing in fountain purity. 30

Now, too, another change of light !
 As noble bride, still meekly bright,
 Thou bring'st thy Lord a dower above
 All earthly price, pure woman's love ;
 And show'st what lustre Rank receives,
 When with his proud Corinthian leaves
 Her rose thus high-bred Beauty weaves.

Wonder not if, where all's so fair
 To choose were more than bard can
 dare ;

Wonder not if, while every scene 40
 I've watch'd thee through so bright hath been,
 The' enamour'd Muse should, in her quest

Of beauty, know not where to rest,
 But, dazzled, at thy feet thus fall,
 Hailing thee beautiful in all !

A SPECULATION

OF all speculations the market holds
 forth,
 The best that I know for a lover of
 self,
 Is to buy Marcus up, at the price he is worth,
 And then sell him at that which he sets on himself.

TO MY MOTHER

WRITTEN IN A POCKET BOOK, 1822

THEY tell us of an Indian tree,
 Which, howsoe'er the sun and sky
 May tempt its boughs to wander free,
 And shoot, and blossom, wide and
 high,

Far better loves to bend its arms
 Downward again to that dear earth,
 From which the life, that fills and warms
 Its grateful being, first had birth.

'Tis thus, though woo'd by flattering
 friends,
 And fed with fame (if fame it be)
 This heart, my own dear mother, bends,
 With love's true instinct, back to
 thee !

LOVE AND HYMEN

LOVE had a fever—ne'er could close
 His little eyes till day was breaking ;
 And wild and strange enough, Heav'n
 knows,
 The things he rav'd about while
 waking.

To let him pine so were a sin ;—
 One, to whom all the world's a debtor—
 So Doctor Hymen was call'd in,
 And Love that night slept rather better.

Next day the case gave further hope yet,
 Though still some ugly fever latent ;—
 'Dose, as before'—a gentle opiate,
 For which old Hymen has a patent.

After a month of daily call,
 So fast the dose went on restoring,
 That Love, who first ne'er slept at all,
 Now took, the rogue ! to downright snoring.

Lines on the Entry of the Austrians into Naples, 1821

Carbone notati.

Ax—down to the dust with them, slaves as they are,
 From this hour, let the blood in their dastardly veins,
 That shrunk at the first touch of Liberty's war,
 Be wasted for tyrants, or stagnate in chains.

On, on like a cloud, through their beautiful vales,
 Ye locusts of tyranny, blasting them o'er—
 Fill, fill up their wide sunny waters, ye sails
 From each slave-mart of Europe, and shadow their shore!

Let their fate be a mock-word—let men of all lands
 Laugh out, with a scorn that shall ring to the poles, 10
 When each sword, that the cowards let fall from their hands,
 Shall be forg'd into fetters to enter their souls.

And deep, and more deep, as the iron is driv'n,
 Base slaves! let the whet of their agony be,
 To think—as the Doom'd often think of that heav'n
 They had once within reach—that they might have been free.

Oh shame! when there was not a bosom, whose heat
 Ever rose 'bove the zero of C——h's heart,
 That did not, like echo, your war-hymn repeat,
 And send all its prayers with your Liberty's start; 20

When the world stood in hope—when a spirit, that breath'd
 The fresh air of the olden time, whisper'd about;
 And the swords of all Italy, half-way unsheath'd,
 But waited one conquering cry, to flash out!

When around you the shades of your Mighty in fame,
FILICAJAS and PETRARCHES, seem'd bursting to view,
 And their words, and their warnings, like tongues of bright flame
 Over Freedom's apostles, fell kindling on you!

Oh shame! that, in such a proud moment of life,
 Worth the hist'ry of ages, when, had you but hurl'd 30
 One bolt at your tyrant invader, that strife
 Between freemen and tyrants had spread through the world—

That then—oh! disgrace upon manhood—ev'n then,
 You should falter, should cling to your pitiful breath;
 Cow'r down into beasts, when you might have stood men,
 And prefer the slave's life of prostration to death.

It is strange, it is dreadful:—shout, Tyranny, shout
 Through your dungeons and palaces, 'Freedom is o'er;'—
 If there lingers one spark of her light, tread it out,
 And return to your empire of darkness once more. 40

For, if such are the braggarts that claim to be free,
 Come, Despot of Russia, thy feet let me kiss;
 Far nobler to live the brute bondman of thee,
 Than to sully ev'n chains by a struggle like this!

THE LOVES OF THE ANGELS

PREFACE

THE Eastern story of the angels Harut and Marut,¹ and the Rabbinical fictions of the loves of Uzziel and Shámchazai,² are the only sources to which I need refer, for the origin of the notion on which this Romance is founded. In addition to the fitness of the subject for poetry, it struck me also as capable of affording an allegorical medium, through which might be shadowed out (as I have endeavoured to do in the following stories) the fall of the Soul from its original purity³—the loss of light and happiness which it suffers, in the pursuit of this world's perishable pleasures—and the punishments, both from conscience and Divine justice, with which impurity, pride, and presumptuous inquiry into the awful secrets of Heaven are sure to be visited. The beautiful story of Cupid and Psyche owes its chief charm to this sort of 'veiled meaning,' and it has been my wish (however I may have failed in the attempt) to communicate to the following pages the same moral interest.

Among the doctrines, or notions, derived by Plato from the East, one of the most natural and sublime is that which inculcates the pre-existence of the Soul, and its gradual descent into this dark material world, from that region of spirit and light which it is supposed to have once inhabited, and to which, after a long lapse of purification and trial, it will return. This belief, under various symbolical forms, may be traced through almost all the Oriental theologies. The Chaldeans represent the Soul as originally endowed with wings, which fall away when it sinks from its native element, and must be reproduced before it can hope to return. Some disciples of Zoroaster once inquired of him, 'How the wings of the Soul might be made to grow again?'—'By sprinkling them,' he replied, 'with the Waters of Life.'—'But where are those Waters to be found?' they asked.—'In the Garden of God,' replied Zoroaster.

The mythology of the Persians has allegorized the same doctrine, in the history of those genii of light who strayed from their dwellings in the stars, and obscured their original nature by mixture with this material sphere; while the Egyptians, connecting it with the descent and ascent of the sun in the zodiac, considered Autumn as emblematic of the Soul's decline towards darkness, and the re-appearance of Spring as its return to life and light.

Besides the chief spirits of the Mahometan heaven, such as Gabriel, the angel of Revelations, Israfil, by whom the last trumpet is to be sounded, and Azrael, the angel of death, there were also a number of subaltern intelligences, of which tradition has preserved the names, appointed to preside over the different stages, or ascents, into which the celestial world was supposed to be divided.⁴ Thus

² Hyde, de Relig. Vet. Persarum, p. 272.

³ The account which Macrobius gives* of the downward journey of the Soul, through that gate of the zodiac which opens into the lower spheres, is a curious specimen of the wild fancies passed for philosophy in ancient times.

In the system of Manes, the luminous or spiritual principle owes its corruption not to any evil tendency of its own, but to a violent

inroad of the spirits of darkness, who, finding themselves in the neighbourhood of this pure light, and becoming passionately enamoured of its beauty, break the boundaries between them, and take forcible possession of it.^b

⁴ 'We adorned the lower heaven with lights, and placed therein a guard of angels.'—Koran, chap. xli.

^b See a Treatise 'De la Religion des Perses,' by the Abbé Foucher, Mémoires de l'Académie, tom. xxxi. p. 456.

* In Somn. Scipionis, cap. 12.

Kelail governs the fifth heaven ; while Sadiel, the presiding spirit of the third, is also employed in steadying the motions of the earth, which would be in a constant state of agitation, if this angel did not keep his foot planted upon its orb.¹

Among other miraculous interpositions in favour of Mahomet, we find commemorated in the pages of the Koran the appearance of five thousand angels on his side at the battle of Bedr.

The ancient Persians supposed that Ormuzd appointed thirty angels to preside successively over the days of the month, and twelve greater ones to assume the government of the months themselves ; among whom Bahman (to whom Ormuzd committed the custody of all animals, except man,) was the greatest. Mihr, the angel of the 7th month, was also the spirit that watched over the affairs of friendship and love ;—Chûr had the care of the disk of the sun ;—Mah was agent for the concerns of the moon ;—Isphandârmaz (whom Cazvin calls the Spirit of the Earth) was the tutelar genius of good and virtuous women, &c. &c. &c. For all this the reader may consult the 19th and 20th chapters of Hyde, de Relig. Vet. Parsarum, where the names and attributes of these daily and monthly angels are with much minuteness and erudition explained. It appears, from the Zend-avesta, that the Persians had a certain office or prayer for every day of the month (addressed to the particular angel who presided over it), which they called the Sirouzé.

The Celestial Hierarchy of the Syrians, as described by Kircher, appears to be the most regularly graduated of any of these systems. In the sphere of the Moon they placed the angels, in that of Mercury the archangels, Venus and the Sun contained the Principalities and the Powers ;—and so on to the summit of the planetary system, where, in the sphere of Saturn, the Thrones had their station. Above this was the habitation of the Cherubim in the sphere of the fixed stars ; and still higher, in the region of those stars which are so distant as to be imperceptible, the Seraphim, we are told, the most perfect of all celestial creatures dwelt.

The Sabeans also (as D'Herbelot tells us) had their classes of angels, to whom they prayed as mediators, or intercessors ; and the Arabians worshipped female angels, whom they called Benad Hasche, or, Daughters of God.

THE LOVES OF THE ANGELS

'Twas when the world was in its prime,

When the fresh stars had just begun
Their race of glory, and young Time
Told his first birth-days by the sun ;
When, in the light of Nature's dawn
Rejoicing, men and angels met²

On the high hill and sunny lawn,—
Ere sorrow came, or Sin had drawn
'Twixt man and heav'n her curtain
yet !

When earth lay nearer to the skies 10
Than in these days of crime and woe,
And mortals saw, without surprise,

In the mid-air, angelic eyes
Gazing upon this world below.

Alas, that Passion should profane,
Ev'n then, the morning of the earth !
That, sadder still, the fatal stain
Should fall on hearts of heav'nly
birth—

And that from Woman's love should fall
So dark a stain, most sad of all ! 20

One ev'ning, in that primal hour,
On a hill's side, where hung the ray
Of sunset, bright'ning rill and bow'r,
Three noble youths conversing lay ;

² The Mahometans believe, says D'Herbelot, that in that early period of the world 'les hommes n'eurent qu'une seule religion, et furent souvent visités des Anges, qui leur donnoient la main.'

And, as they look'd, from time to time,
To the far sky, where Daylight furl'd
His radiant wing, their brows sublime

Bespoke them of that distant world—
Spirits, who once, in brotherhood
Of faith and bliss, near ALLA stood, 30
And o'er whose cheeks full oft had blown
The wind that breathes from ALLA's throne,¹

Creatures of light, such as still play,
Like motes in sunshine, round the Lord,
And through their infinite array
Transmit each moment, night and day,
The echo of His luminous word !

Of Heaven they spoke, and, still more oft,
Of the bright eyes that charm'd them
thence ;

Till, yielding gradual to the soft 40
And balmy evening's influence—
The silent breathing of the flow'rs

The melting light that beam'd above,
As on their first, fond, erring hours,

Each told the story of his love,
The history of that hour unblest,
When, like a bird, from its high nest
Won down by fascinating eyes,
For Woman's smile he lost the skies.

The First who spoke was one, with look
The least celestial of the three— 51

A Spirit of light mould, that took
The prints of earth most yieldingly ;
Who, ev'n in heav'n, was not of those Nearest the Throne,² but held a place
Far off, among those shining rows

That circle out through endless space,
And o'er whose wings the light from Him
In Heav'n's centre falls most dim.

Still fair and glorious, he but shone 60
Among those youths the' unheavenliest
one—

A creature, to whom light remain'd
From Eden still, but alter'd, stain'd,
And o'er whose brow not Love alone

¹ 'To which will be joined the sound of the bells hanging on the trees, which will be put in motion by the wind proceeding from the Throne, so often as the Blessed wish for music.' See Sale's Koran, 'Prelim. Dissert.'

² The ancient Persians supposed that this Throne was placed in the Sun, and that through the stars were distributed the various classes of Angels that encircled it.

The Basilidians supposed that there were three hundred and sixty-five orders of angels,

A blight had, in his transit, cast,
But other, earthlier joys had gone,
And left their foot-prints as they
pass'd.

Sighing, as back through ages flown,
Like a tomb-searcher, Mem'ry ran,
Lifting each shroud that Time had thrown 70
O'er buried hopes, he thus began :—

FIRST ANGEL'S STORY

'Twas in a land, that far away
Into the golden orient lies,
Where Nature knows not night's delay,
But springs to meet her bridegroom, Day,
Upon the threshold of the skies.

One morn, on earthly mission sent,³
And mid-way choosing where to light,
I saw, from the blue element—

Oh beautiful, but fatal sight ! 80
One of earth's fairest womankind,
Half veil'd from view, or rather shrin'd
In the clear crystal of a brook ;

Which, while it hid no single gleam
Of her young beauties, made them look
More spirit-like, as they might seem
Through the dim shadowing of a dream.

Pausing in wonder I look'd on,
While, playfully around her breaking
The waters, that like diamonds shone 90
She mov'd in light of her own making.
At length, as from that airy height
I gently lower'd my breathless flight,
The tremble of my wings all o'er (For through each plume I felt the thrill)

Startled her, as she reach'd the shore
Of that small lake—her mirror still—
Above whose brink she stood, like snow
When rosy with a sunset glow.
Never shall I forget those eyes !— 100
The shame, the innocent surprise
Of that bright face, when in the air
Uplooking, she beheld me there.

'dont la perfection alloit en décroissant, à mesure qu'ils s'éloignoient de la première classe d'esprits placés dans le premier ciel.' See Dupuis, Orig. des Cultes, tom. ii, p. 112.

³ It appears that, in most languages, the term employed for an angel means also a messenger. Frischteh, the Persian word for angel, is derived (says D'Herbelot) from the verb Frischtin, to send. The Hebrew term, too, Melak, has the same signification.

It seem'd as if each thought, and look,
And motion, were that minute chain'd
Fast to the spot, such root she took,
And—like a sunflower by a brook,
With face upturn'd—so still remain'd!

In pity to the wond'ring maid,
Though loth from such a vision turn-
ing, 110
Downward I bent, beneath the shade
Of my spread wings to hide the burning

Of glances, which—I well could feel—
For me, for her, too warmly shone;
But, ere I could again unseal
My restless eyes, or even steal
One sidelong look, the maid was
gone—

Hid from me in the forest leaves,
Sudden as when, in all her charms
Of full-blown light, some cloud receives
The Moon into his dusky arms. 121

'Tis not in words to tell the pow'r,
The despotism that, from that hour,
Passion held o'er me. Day and night
I sought around each neighbouring
spot;

And, in the chase of this sweet light,
My task, and heav'n, and all forgot;—
All, but the one, sole, haunting dream
Of her I saw in that bright stream.

Nor was it long, ere by her side 130

I found myself, whole happy days,
List'ning to words, whose music vied

With our own Eden's seraph lays,
When seraph lays are warm'd by love,
But, wanting that, far, far above!—
And looking into eyes where, blue
And beautiful, like skies seen through
The sleeping wave, for me there shone
A heaven, more worshipp'd than my own.
Oh what, while I could hear and see 140
Such words and looks, was heav'n to me?
Though gross the air on earth I drew,
'Twas blessed, while she breath'd it too;

Though dark the flow'rs, though dim
the sky,
Love lent them light, while she was nigh.
Throughout creation I but knew
Two separate worlds—the one, that small,
Belov'd, and consecrated spot
Where LEA was—the other, all
The dull, wide waste, where she was
not! 150

But vain my suit, my madness vain;
Though gladly, from her eyes to gain
One earthly look, one stray desire,
I would have torn the wings, that hung
Furl'd at my back, and o'er the Fire
In GEHIM's¹ pit their fragments flung;—
'Twas hopeless all—pure and unmov'd
She stood, as lilies in the light
Of the hot noon but look more white;—

And though she lov'd me, deeply lov'd,
'Twas not as man, as mortal—no, 161
Nothing of earth was in that glow—
She lov'd me but as one, of race
Angelic, from that radiant place
She saw so oft in dreams—that Heaven,
To which her prayers at morn were sent,
And on whose light she gaz'd at even,
Wishing for wings, that she might go
Out of this shadowy world below,
To that free, glorious element! 170

Well I remember by her side
Sitting at rosy even-tide,
When,—turning to the star, whose head
Look'd out, as from a bridal bed,
At that mute, blushing hour,—she said,
“Oh! that it were my doom to be
The Spirit of yon beauteous star,
 Dwelling up there in purity,
Alone, as all such bright things are;—
My sole employ to pray and shine, 180
To light my censor at the sun
And cast its fire towards the shrine
Of Him in heav'n, the 'Eternal one!’”

¹ The name given by the Mahometans to the infernal regions, over which, they say, the angel Tabhek presides.

By the seven gates of hell, mentioned in the Koran, the commentators understand seven different departments or wards, in which seven different sorts of sinners are to be punished. The first, called Gehennem, is for sinful Mussulmans; the second, Ladha, for Christian offenders; the third, Hothama, is appointed for Jews; and the fourth and fifth, called Sair and Sacar, are destined to receive the Sabaeans and the worshippers of fire: in the sixth, named Gehim, those pagans and idolaters who admit a plurality of gods are placed; while into the abyss of the seventh, called Derk Asfal, or the Deepest, the hypocritical canters of all religions are thrown.

So innocent the maid, so free
 From mortal taint in soul and frame,
 Whom 'twas my crime—my destiny—
 To love, ay, burn for, with a flame,
 To which earth's wildest fires are tame.
 Had you but seen her look, when first
 From my mad lips the' avowal burst;
 Not anger'd—no—the feeling came 191
 From depths beyond mere anger's
 flame—

It was a sorrow, calm as deep,
 A mournfulness that could not weep,
 So fill'd her heart was to the brink,
 So fix'd and froz'n with grief, to think
 That angel natures—that ev'n I,
 Whose love she clung to, as the tie
 Between her spirit and the sky— 199
 Should fall thus headlong from the height
 Of all that heav'n hath pure and bright !

That very night—my heart had grown
 Impatient of its inward burning ;
 The term, too, of my stay was flown,
 And the bright Watchers near the throne,
 Already, if a meteor shone
 Between them and this nether zone,
 Thought 'twas their herald's wing returning.

Of did the potent spell-word, giv'n
 To Envoys hither from the skies, 210
 To be pronounc'd, when back to heav'n
 It is their time or wish to rise,
 Come to my lips that fatal day ;
 And once, too, was so nearly spoken,
 That my spread plumage in the ray
 And breeze of heav'n began to play ;—
 When my heart fail'd—the spell was broken—

The word unfinish'd died away,
 And my check'd plumes, ready to soar,
 Fell sleek and lifeless as before. 220
 How could I leave a world which she,
 Or lost or won, made all to me ?
 No matter where my wand'ring were,
 So there she look'd, breath'd, mov'd about—

Woe, ruin, death, more sweet with her,
 Than Paradise itself, without !

¹ I have already mentioned that some of the circumstances of this story were suggested to me by the eastern legend of the two angels, Harut and Marut, as given by Mariti, who says that the author of the Taalim founds upon it the Mahometan prohibition of wine.* I have since found that Mariti's version of the tale

But, to return—that very day
 A feast was held, where, full of mirth,
 Came—crowding thick as flow'rs that
 play

In summer winds—the young and gay
 And beautiful of this bright earth. 231
 And she was there, and 'mid the young
 And beautiful stood first, alone ;
 Though on her gentle brow still hung
 The shadow I that morn had thrown—
 The first, that ever shame or woe
 Had cast upon its vernal snow.
 My heart was madden'd ;—in the flush
 Of the wild revel I gave way
 To all that frantic mirth—that rush 240
 Of desp'rate gaiety, which they,
 Who never felt how pain's excess
 Can break out thus, think happiness !
 Sad mimicry of mirth and life,
 Whose flashes come but from the strife
 Of inward passions—like the light
 Struck out by clashing swords in fight.

Then, too, that juice of earth, the bane
 And blessing of man's heart and brain—
 That draught of sorcery, which brings
 Phantoms of fair, forbidden things—
 Whose drops, like those of rainbows,
 smile 252

Upon the mists that circle man,
 Bright'ning not only Earth, the while,
 But grasping Heav'n, too, in their span !—
 Then first the fatal wine-cup rain'd
 Its dews of darkness through my lips,¹
 Casting whate'er of light remain'd
 To my lost soul into eclipse ;
 And filling it with such wild dreams, 260
 Such fantasies and wrong desires,
 As, in the absence of heav'n's beams,
 Haunt us for ever—like wild-fires
 That walk this earth, when day retires.

Now hear the rest ;—our banquet done,
 I sought her in the' accustom'd bow'r,
 Where late we oft, when day was gone,
 And the world hush'd, had met alone,
 At the same silent, moonlight hour.

(which differs also from that of Dr. Prideaux, in his Life of Mahomet), is taken from the French Encyclopédie, in which work, under the head 'Arot et Marot,' the reader will find it.

* The Babardanush tells the fable differently.

Her eyes, as usual, were upturn'd 270
 To her lov'd star, whose lustre burn'd
 Purer than ever on that night;
 While she, in looking, grew more
 bright,
 As though she borrow'd of its light.

There was a virtue in that scene,
 A spell of holiness around,
 Which, had my burning brain not been Thus madden'd, would have held me bound,

As though I trod celestial ground.
 Ev'n as it was, with soul all flame, 280
 And lips that burn'd in their own sighs,
 I stood to gaze, with awe and shame—
 The memory of Eden came

Full o'er me when I saw those eyes;
 And though too well each glance of
 mine

To the pale, shrinking maiden prov'd
 How far, alas, from aught divine,
 Aught worthy of so pure a shrine,

Was the wild love with which I lov'd,
 Yet must she, too, have seen—oh yes,
 'Tis soothing but to think she saw 291
 The deep, true, soul-felt tenderness,

The homage of an Angel's awe
 To her, a mortal, whom pure love
 Then plac'd above him—far above—
 And all that struggle to repress
 A sinful spirit's mad excess,
 Which work'd within me at that hour,

When, with a voice, where Passion shed
 All the deep sadness of her pow'r, 300

Her melancholy power—I said,
 Then be it so; if back to heaven
 I must unlov'd, unpitied fly,
 Without one blest memorial giv'n
 To soothe me in that lonely sky;
 One look, like those the young and fond Give when they're parting—which would be,

Ev'n in remembrance, far beyond
 All heav'n hath left of bliss for me!

Oh, but to see that head recline 310
 A minute on this trembling arm,
 And those mild eyes look up to mine,

Without a dread, a thought of harm!
 To meet, but once, the thrilling touch
 Of lips too purely fond to fear me—
 Or, if that boon be all too much,

Ev'n thus to bring their fragrance near me!

Nay, shrink not so—a look—a word—

Give them but kindly and I fly; 319
 Already, see, my plumes have stirr'd,
 And tremble for their home on high.
 Thus be our parting—cheek to cheek—
 One minute's lapse will be forgiv'n,
 And thou, the next, shalt hear me speak
 The spell that plumes my wing for
 heaven!"

While thus I spoke, the fearful maid,
 Of me, and of herself afraid,
 Had shrink'd like flow'rs beneath
 The scorching of the south-wind's breath:
 But when I nam'd—alas, too well, 330

I now recall, though wilder'd then,—
 Instantly, when I nam'd the spell,
 Her brow, her eyes uprose again,
 And, with an eagerness, that spoke
 The sudden light that o'er her broke,
 "The spell, the spell!—oh, speak it now,
 And I will bless thee!" she ex-
 claim'd—

Unknowing what I did, inflam'd,
 And lost already, on her brow

I stamp'd one burning kiss, and nam'd
 The mystic word, till then ne'er told 341
 To living creature of earth's mould!
 Scarce was it said, when, quick as thought,
 Her lips from mine, like echo, caught
 The holy sound—her hands and eyes
 Were instant lifted to the skies,
 And thrice to heav'n she spoke it out
 With that triumphant look Faith wears,

When not a cloud of fear or doubt,
 A vapour from this vale of tears, 350
 Between her and her God appears!

That very moment her whole frame
 All bright and glorified became,
 And at her back I saw unclose
 Two wings, magnificent as those

That sparkle around ALLA's Throne,
 Whose plumes, as buoyantly she rose
 Above me, in the moon-beam shone
 With a pure light, which—from its hue,
 Unknown upon this earth—I knew 360
 Was light from Eden, glist'ning through!
 Most holy vision! ne'er before

Did aught so radiant—since the day
 When EBILIS, in his downfall, bore
 The third of the bright stars away—
 Rise, in earth's beauty, to repair
 That loss of light and glory there!

But did I tamely view her flight ?
 Did not I, too, proclaim out thrice
 The pow'rful words that were, that
 night,— 370
 Oh ev'n for heaven too much delight !—
 Again to bring us, eyes to eyes,
 And soul to soul, in Paradise ?
 I did—I spoke it o'er and o'er—
 I pray'd, I wept, but all in vain ;
 For me the spell had pow'r no more.
 There seem'd around me some dark
 chain

Which still, as I essay'd to soar,
 Baffled, alas, each wild endeavour :
 Dead lay my wings, as they have lain
 Since that sad hour, and will remain—
 So wills the' offended God—for ever !

It was to yonder star I trac'd 383
 Her journey up the' illumin'd waste—
 That isle in the blue firmament,
 To which so oft her fancy went
 In wishes and in dreams before,
 And which was now—such, Purity,
 Thy blest reward—ordain'd to be
 Her home of light for evermore ! 390
 Once—or did I but fancy so ?—

Ev'n in her flight to that fair sphere,
 'Mid all her spirit's new-felt glow,
 A pitying look she turn'd below
 On him who stood in darkness here ;
 Him whom, perhaps, if vain regret
 Can dwell in heaven, she pities yet ;
 And oft, when looking to this dim
 And distant world, remembers him.

But soon that passing dream was gone ;
 Farther and farther off she shone, 401
 Till lessen'd to a point, as small
 As are those specks that yonder
 burn,—

Those vivid drops of light, that fall
 The last from Day's exhausted urn.
 And when at length she merg'd, afar,
 Into her own immortal star,
 And when at length my straining sight
 Had caught her wing's last fading ray,
 That minute from my soul the light 410
 Of heav'n and love both pass'd away ;
 And I forgot my home, my birth,
 Profan'd my spirit, sunk my brow,
 And revell'd in gross joys of earth,
 Till I became—what I am now !

¹ The Kerubim, as the Mussulmans call them, are often joined indiscriminately with

The Spirit bow'd his head in shame ;
 A shame, that of itself would tell—
 Were there not ev'n those breaks of
 flame,
 Celestial, through his clouded frame—
 How grand the height from which he fell ! 420
 That holy Shame, which ne'er forgets
 The' unblench'd renown it us'd to
 wear ;

Whose blush remains, when Virtue sets,
 To show her sunshine has been there.

Once only, while the tale he told,
 Were his eyes lifted to behold
 That happy stainless star, where she
 Dwelt in her bower of purity ! 428
 One minute did he look, and then—
 As though he felt some deadly pain
 From its sweet light through heart and brain—
 Shrunk back, and never look'd again.

Who was the Second Spirit ? he
 With the proud front and piercing glance—
 Who seem'd when viewing heaven's expanse,
 As though his far-sent eye could see
 On, on into the' Immensity
 Behind the veils of that blue sky,
 Where ALLAH's grandest secrets lie ?—
 His wings, the while, though day was
 gone, 440

Flashing with many a various hue
 Of light they from themselves alone,
 Instinct with Eden's brightness, drew.
 'Twas RUBI—once among the prime
 And flow'r of those bright creatures,
 nam'd,

Spirits of Knowledge,¹ who o'er Time
 And Space and Thought an empire
 claim'd,

Second alone to Him, whose light
 Was, ev'n to theirs, as day to night ;
 'Twixt whom and them was distance far 450

And wide as would the journey be
 To reach from any island star
 The vague shores of Infinity !

the Asrafil or Seraphim, under one common name of Azazil, by which all spirits who approach near the throne of Alla are designated.

'Twas RUBI, in whose mournful eye
Slept the dim light of days gone by;
Whose voice, though sweet, fell on the
ear

Like echoes, in some silent place,
When first awak'd for many a year;
And when he smil'd, if o'er his face
Smile ever shone, 'twas like the grace
Of moonlight rainbows, fair, but wan,
The sunny life, the glory gone. 462
Ev'n o'er his pride, though still the same,
A soft'ning shade from sorrow came;
And though at times his spirit knew
The kindlings of disdain and ire,
Short was the fitful glare they threw—
Like the last flashes, fierce but few,
Seen through some noble pile on fire!

Such was the Angel, who now broke 470
The silence that had come o'er all,
When he, the Spirit that last spoke,
Clos'd the sad hist'ry of his fall;
And, while a sacred lustre, flown
For many a day relum'd his cheek—
Beautiful, as in days of old;
And not those eloquent lips alone
But every feature seem'd to speak—
Thus his eventful story told:—

SECOND ANGEL'S STORY

' You both remember well the day, 480
When unto Eden's new-made bow'rs,
ALLA convok'd the bright array
Of his supreme angelic pow'rs,
To witness the one wonder yet,
Beyond man, angel, star, or sun,
He must achieve, ere he could set
His seal upon the world, as done—
To see that last perfection rise,
That crowning of creation's birth,
When, mid the worship and surprise 490
Of circling angels, Woman's eyes
First open'd upon heav'n and earth;
And from their lids a thrill was sent,
That through each living spirit went,
Like first light through the firmament!

Can you forget how gradual stole
The fresh-awaken'd breath of soul
Throughout her perfect form—which seem'd
To grow transparent, as there beam'd
That dawn of Mind within, and caught
New loveliness from each new thought?

Slow as o'er summer seas we trace 502
The progress of the noontide air,
Dimpling its bright and silent face
Each minute into some new grace,
And varying heav'n's reflections
there—
Or, like the light of ev'ning, stealing
O'er some fair temple, which all day
Hath slept in shadow, slow revealing
Its several beauties, ray by ray, 510
Till it shines out, a thing to bless,
All full of light and loveliness.

Can you forget her blush, when round
Through Eden's lone, enchanted ground
She look'd, and saw, the sea—the skies—
And heard the rush of many a wing,
On high behests then vanishing;
And saw the last few angel eyes,
Still ling'ring—mine among the rest,—
Reluctant leaving scenes so blest? 520
From that miraculous hour, the fate
Of this new, glorious Being dwelt
For ever, with a spell-like weight,
Upon my spirit—early, late,
Whate'er I did, or dream'd, or felt,
The thought of what might yet befall
That matchless creature mix'd with all.—
Nor she alone, but her whole race
Through ages yet to come—whate'er
Of feminine, and fond, and fair, 530
Should spring from that pure mind and
face,
All wak'd my soul's intensest care;
Their forms, souls, feelings, still to me
Creation's strangest mystery!

It was my doom—ev'n from the first,
When witnessing the primal burst
Of Nature's wonders, I saw rise
Those bright creations in the skies,—
Those worlds instinct with life and light,
Which man, remote, but sees by night,—
It was my doom still to be haunted 541
By some new wonder, some sublime
And matchless work, that, for the
time
Held all my soul, enchain'd, enchanted,
And left me not a thought, a dream,
A word, but on that only theme!
The wish to know—that endless thirst,
Which ev'n by quenching is awak'd,
And which becomes or blest or curst,
As is the fount whereat 'tis slak'd—

Still urg'd me onward, with desire 551
 Insatiate, to explore, inquire—
 Whate'er the wondrous things might be,
 That wak'd each new idolatry—

Their cause, aim, source, whence-ever
 sprung—
 Their inmost pow'rs, as though for me
 Existence on that knowledge hung.

Oh what a vision were the stars,
 When first I saw them burn on high,
 Rolling along, like living cars 560
 Of light, for gods to journey by !¹

They were my heart's first passion—days
 And nights, unwearied, in their rays
 Have I hung floating, till each sense
 Seem'd full of their bright influence.
 Innocent joy ! alas, how much

Of misery had I shunn'd below,
 Could I have still liv'd blest with such ;
 Nor, proud and restless, burn'd to
 know

The knowledge that brings guilt and
 woe. 570

Often—so much I lov'd to trace
 The secrets of this starry race—
 Have I at morn and evening run
 Along the lines of radiance spun
 Like webs, between them and the sun,
 Untwisting all the tangled ties
 Of light into their different dyes—
 Then fleetly wing'd I off, in quest
 Of those, the farthest, loneliest,
 That watch, like winking sentinels,² 580
 The void, beyond which Chaos dwells ;
 And there, with noiseless plume, pursued
 Their track through that grand solitude,
 Asking intently all and each

What soul within their radiance dwelt,
 And wishing their sweet light were speech,

That they might tell me all they felt.

Nay, oft, so passionate my chase
 Of these resplendent heirs of space,

¹ 'C'est un fait indubitable que la plupart des anciens philosophes, soit Chaldéens, soit Grecs, nous ont donné les astres comme animés, et ont soutenu que les astres, qui nous éclairent, n'étoient que ou les chars, ou même les navires, des Intelligences qui les conduisoient. Pour les Chars, cela se lit partout ; on n'a qu'ouvrir Plin. St. Clément ; &c. &c.—Mémoire Historique, sur le Sabaïsme, par M. Fourmont.

A belief that the stars are either spirits or the vehicles of spirits, was common to all the religions and heresies of the East. Kircher has

Oft did I follow—lest a ray 590
 Should 'scape me in the farthest
 night—

Some pilgrim Comet, on his way
 To visit distant shrines of light,
 And well remember how I sung
 Exultingly, when on my sight
 New worlds of stars, all fresh and young,
 As if just born of darkness, sprung !

Such was my pure ambition then,
 My sinless transport, night and morn ;
 Ere yet this newer world of men, 600
 And that most fair of stars was born
 Which I, in fatal hour, saw rise
 Among the flow'rs of Paradise !
 Thenceforth my nature all was chang'd,
 My heart, soul, senses turn'd below ;
 And he, who but so lately rang'd
 Yon wonderful expanse, where glow Worlds upon worlds,—yet found his
 mind

Ev'n in that luminous range confin'd,—
 Now blest the humblest, meanest sod 610
 Of the dark earth where Woman trod !
 In vain my former idols glisten'd

From their far thrones ; in vain these ears

To the once-thrilling music listen'd,
 That hymn'd around my favourite spheres—

To earth, to earth each thought was
 giv'n,

That in this half-lost soul had birth ;
 Like some high mount, whose head's in
 heav'n,

While its whole shadow rests on
 earth !

Nor was it Love, ev'n yet, that thrall'd
 My spirit in his burning ties ; 621
 And less, still less could it be call'd

That grosser flame, round which Love flies

Nearer and nearer, till he dies—

given the names and stations of the seven archangels, who were by the Cabala of the Jews distributed through the planets.

² According to the cosmogony of the ancient Persians, there were four stars set as sentinels in the four quarters of the heavens, to watch over the other fixed stars, and superintend the planets in their course. The names of these four sentinel stars are, according to the Boundesh, Taschter, for the east ; Satevis, for the west ; Venand, for the south ; and Haftarang, for the north.

No, it was wonder, such as thrill'd
 At all God's works my dazzled sense ;
 The same rapt wonder, only fill'd
 With passion, more profound, intense,—
 A vehement, but wand'ring fire, 629
 Which, though nor love, nor yet desire,— Though through all womankind it took
 Its range, as lawless lightnings run,
 Yet wanted but a touch, a look,
 To fix it burning upon One.

Then, too, the ever-restless zeal,
 The' insatiate curiosity
 To know how shapes, so fair, must feel—
 To look, but once, beneath the seal
 Of so much loveliness, and see 639
 What souls belong'd to such bright eyes—
 Whether, as sun-beams find their way
 Into the gem that hidden lies,
 Those looks could inward turn their
 ray,
 And make the soul as bright as they :
 All this impell'd my anxious chase,
 And still the more I saw and knew
 Of Woman's fond, weak, conqu'ring race,
 The' intenser still my wonder grew.

I had beheld their First, their Eve,
 Born in that splendid Paradise, 650
 Which sprung there solely to receive
 The first light of her waking eyes.
 I had seen purest angels lean
 In worship o'er her from above ;
 And man—oh yes, had envying seen
 Proud man possess'd of all her love.
 I saw their happiness, so brief,
 So exquisite,—her error, too,
 That easy trust, that prompt belief 659
 In what the warm heart wishes true ;
 That faith in words, when kindly said,
 By which the whole fond sex is led—
 Mingled with—what I durst not blame,
 For 'tis my own—that zeal to know,
 Sad, fatal zeal, so sure of woe ;
 Which, though from heav'n all pure it
 came,
 Yet stain'd, misus'd, brought sin and
 shame
 On her, on me, on all below !

I had seen this ; had seen Man, arm'd,
 As his soul is, with strength and sense,
 By her first words to ruin charm'd ; 671
 His vaunted reason's cold defence,

Like an ice-barrier in the ray
 Of melting summer, smil'd away.
 Nay, stranger yet, spite of all this—
 Though by her counsels taught to err,
 Though driv'n from Paradise for her,
 (And with her—that, at least, was bliss,)
 Had I not heard him, ere he crost 679
 The threshold of that earthly heav'n,
 Which by her wildering smile he lost—
 So quickly was the wrong forgiv'n !—
 Had I not heard him, as he prest
 The frail, fond trembler to a breast
 Which she had doom'd to sin and strife,
 Call her—ev'n then—his Life ! his Life !¹
 Yes, such the love-taught name, the first,

That ruin'd Man to Woman gave,
 Ev'n in his outcast hour, when curst 689
 By her fond witchery, with that worst
 And earliest boon of love, the grave !
 She, who brought death into the world,
 There stood before him, with the
 light

Of their lost Paradise still bright
 Upon those sunny locks, that curl'd
 Down her white shoulders to her feet—
 So beautiful in form, so sweet
 In heart and voice, as to redeem
 The loss, the death of all things dear,
 Except herself—and make it seem 700
 Life, endless Life, while she was near !
 Could I help wond'ring at a creature,
 Thus circled round with spells so strong—

One, to whose ev'ry thought, word,
 feature,
 In joy and woe, through right and
 wrong,

Such sweet omnipotence heaven gave,
 To bless or ruin, curse or save ?

Nor did the marvel cease with her—
 New Eves in all her daughters came,
 As strong to charm, as weak to err, 710
 As sure of man through praise and
 blame,

Whate'er they brought him, pride or
 shame,
 He still the' unreasoning worshipper,
 And they, throughout all time, the
 same,
 Enchantresses of soul and frame,

¹ Chavah, or, as it is in Arabic, Havah (the name by which Adam called the woman after their transgression), means 'Life.'

Into whose hands, from first to last,
 This world with all its destinies,
 Devotedly by heav'n seems cast,
 To save or ruin, as they please !
 Oh, 'tis not to be told how long, 720
 How restlessly I sigh'd to find
 Some one, from out that witching throng,
 Some abstract of the form and mind
 Of the whole matchless sex, from which
 In my own arms beheld, possess,
 I might learn all the pow'rs to witch,
 To warm, and (if my fate unblest
 Would have it) ruin, of the rest !
 Into whose inward soul and sense
 I might descend, as doth the bee 730
 Into the flower's deep heart, and thence
 Rife, in all its purity,
 The prime, the quintessence, the whole
 Of wondrous Woman's frame and soul !
 At length, my burning wish, my prayer—
 (For such—oh what will tongues not dare,
 When hearts go wrong ?—this lip pre-ferr'd)—
 At length my ominous prayer was
 heard—
 But whether heard in heaven or hell,
 Listen—and thou wilt know too well. 740
 There was a maid, of all who move
 Like visions o'er this orb, most fit
 To be a bright young angel's love,
 Herself so bright, so exquisite !
 The pride, too, of her step, as light
 Along the' unconscious earth she went,
 Seem'd that of one, born with a right
 To walk some heavenlier element,
 And tread in places where her feet
 A star at ev'ry step should meet. 750
 'Twas not alone that loveliness
 By which the wilder'd sense is caught—
 Of lips, whose very breath could bless ;
 Of playful blushes, that seem'd nought
 But luminous escapes of thought ;
 Of eyes that, when by anger stirr'd
 Were fire itself, but, at a word
 Of tenderness, all soft became
 As though they could, like the sun's bird,
 Dissolve away in their own flame—
 Of form, as pliant as the shoots 761
 Of a young tree, in vernal flower ;
 Yet round and glowing as the fruits,
 That drop from it in summer's hour ;—

'Twas not alone this loveliness
 That falls to loveliest women's share,
 Though, even here, her form could spare
 From its own beauty's rich excess
 Enough to make ev'n them more fair—
 But 'twas the Mind, outshining clear 770
 Through her whole frame—the soul,
 still near,
 To light each charm, yet independent
 Of what it lighted, as the sun
 That shines on flowers, would be resplendent
 Were there no flowers to shine upon—
 'Twas this, all this, in one combin'd—
 The' unnumber'd looks and arts that form
 The glory of young woman-kind,
 Taken, in their perfection, warm, 779
 Ere time had chill'd a single charm,
 And stamp'd with such a seal of Mind,
 As gave to beauties, that might be Too sensual else, too unrefin'd,
 The impress of Divinity !
 'Twas this—a union, which the hand
 Of Nature kept for her alone,
 Of every thing most playful, bland,
 Voluptuous, spiritual, grand,
 In angel-natures and her own—
 Oh this it was that drew me nigh 790
 One, who seem'd kin to heaven as I,
 A bright twin-sister from on high—
 One, in whose love, I felt, were given
 The mix'd delights of either sphere,
 All that the spirit seeks in heaven,
 And all the senses burn for here.
 Had we—but hold—hear every part
 Of our sad tale—spite of the pain
 Remembrance gives, when the fix'd dart
 Is stirr'd thus in the wound again—800
 Hear every step, so full of bliss,
 And yet so ruinous, that led
 Down to the last, dark precipice,
 Where perish'd both—the fallen, the
 dead !
 From the first hour she caught my sight,
 I never left her—day and night
 Hovering unseen around her way,
 And 'mid her loneliest musings near,
 I soon could track each thought that lay,
 Gleaming within her heart, as clear
 As pebbles within brooks appear ; 811

And there, among the countless things
 That keep young hearts for ever glowing,
 Vague wishes, fond imaginings,
 Love-dreams, as yet no object knowing—
 Light, winged hopes, that come when bid,
 And rainbow joys that end in weeping;
 And passions, among pure thoughts hid,
 Like serpents under flowerets sleeping :— 819

'Mong all these feelings—felt where'er
 Young hearts are beating—I saw there
 Proud thoughts, aspirings high—beyond
 Whate'er yet dwelt in soul so fond—
 Glimpses of glory, far away
 Into the bright, vague future given ;
 And fancies, free and grand, whose play,
 Like that of eaglets, is near heaven !
 With this, too—what a soul and heart
 To fall beneath the tempter's art !—
 A zeal for knowledge, such as ne'er 830
 Enshrin'd itself in form so fair,
 Since that first, fatal hour, when Eve,
 With every fruit of Eden blest,
 Save one alone—rather than leave
 That one unreach'd, lost all the rest.

It was in dreams that first I stole
 With gentle mastery o'er her mind—
 In that rich twilight of the soul,
 When reason's beam, half hid behind
 The clouds of sleep, obscurely gilds 840
 Each shadowy shape the Fancy builds—
 'Twas then, by that soft light, I brought Vague, glimmering visions to her view ;—

Catches of radiance, lost when caught,
 Bright labyrinths, that led to nought,
 And vistas, with no pathway
 through ;—
 Dwellings of bliss, that opening shone,
 Then clos'd, dissolv'd, and left no
 trace—

All that, in short, could tempt Hope on,
 But give her wing no resting-place ;
 Myself the while, with brow, as yet, 851
 Pure as the young moon's coronet,
 Through every dream still in her sight,
 The' enchanter of each mocking scene,
 Who gave the hope, then brought the
 blight,
 Who said, " Behold, yon world of light,"
 Then sudden dropt a veil between !

At length, when I perceiv'd each
 thought,
 Waking or sleeping, fix'd on nought 859
 But these illusive scenes, and me—
 The phantom, who thus came and
 went,
 In half revelations only meant
 To madden curiosity—
 When by such various arts I found
 Her fancy to its utmost wound,
 One night—'twas in a holy spot,
 Which she for prayer had chosen—a grot
 Of purest marble, built below
 Her garden beds, through which a glow
 From lamps invisible then stole, 870
 Brightly pervading all the place—
 Like that mysterious light the soul,
 Itself unseen, sheds through the
 face.

There, at her altar, while she knelt,
 And all that woman ever felt,
 When God and man both claim'd her
 sighs—
 Every warm thought, that ever dwelt,
 Like summer clouds, 'twixt earth and
 skies,
 Too pure to fall, too gross to rise,
 Spoke in her gestures, tones, and
 eyes—

Then, as the mystic light's soft ray 881
 Grew softer still, as though its ray
 Was breath'd from her, I heard her
 say :—

" Oh idol of my dreams ! whate'er
 Thy nature be—human, divine,
 Or but half heav'nly—still too fair,
 Too heavenly to be ever mine !

Wonderful Spirit, who dost make Slumber so lovely that it seems
 No longer life to live awake, 890
 Since heaven itself descend in dreams,

Why do I ever lose thee ? why
 When on thy realms and thee I gaze
 Still drops that veil, which I could die,
 Oh gladly, but one hour to raise ?

Long ere such miracles as thou
 And thine came o'er my thoughts, a thirst
 For light was in this soul, which now
 Thy looks have into passion nurs'd.

There's nothing bright above, below,
In sky—earth—ocean, that this breast
Doth not intensely burn to know, 902
And thee, thee, thee, o'er all the
rest !

Then come, oh Spirit, from behind
The curtains of thy radiant home,
If thou wouldst be as angel shrin'd,
Or lov'd and clasp'd as mortal,
come !

Bring all thy dazzling wonders here,
That I may, waking, know and see ;
Or waft me hence to thy own sphere, 910
Thy heaven or—ay, even that with
thee !

Demon or God, who hold'st the book
Of knowledge spread beneath thine
eye,
Give me, with thee, but one bright
look
Into its leaves, and let me die !

By those ethereal wings, whose way
Lies through an element, so fraught
With living Mind, that, as they play,
Their every movement is a thought !

By that bright, wreathed hair, between 920
Whose sunny clusters the sweet wind
Of Paradise so late hath been,
And left its fragrant soul behind !

By those impassion'd eyes, that melt
Their light into the inmost heart ;
Like sunset in the waters, felt
As molten fire through every part—

I do implore thee, oh most bright
And worshipp'd Spirit, shine but o'er
My waking, wondering eyes this night,
This one blest night—I ask no
more ! ” 931

Exhausted, breathless, as she said
These burning words, her languid head
Upon the altar's steps she cast,
As if that brain-throb were its last—

Till, startled by the breathing, sigh,
Of lips, that echoed back her sigh,
Sudden her brow again she rais'd ;
And there, just lighted on the shrine,
Beheld me—not as I had blaz'd 940
Around her, full of light divine,

In her late dreams, but soften'd down
Into more mortal grace ;—my crown
Of flowers, too radiant for this world,
Left hanging on yon starry steep ;
My wings shut up, like banners furl'd,
When Peace hath put their pomp to
sleep ;
Or like autumnal clouds, that keep Their lightnings sheath'd, rather than mar

The dawning hour of some young star ;
And nothing left, but what besem'd 951
The' accessible, though glorious mate
Of mortal woman—whose eyes beam'd
Back upon hers, as passionate ;
Whose ready heart brought flame for
flame,

Whose sin, whose madness was the
same ;
And whose soul lost, in that one hour,
For her and for her love—oh more
Of heaven's light than ev'n the power
Of heav'n itself could now restore ! 960

And yet, that hour ! —

The Spirit here
Stopp'd in his utterance, as if words
Gave way beneath the wild career
Of his then rushing thoughts—like chords,

Midway in some enthusiast's song,
Breaking beneath a touch too strong ;
While the clench'd hand upon the
brow
Told how remembrance throb'd there
now !

But soon 'twas o'er—that casual blaze
From the sunk fire of other days— 970
That relic of a flame, whose burning
Had been too fierce to be relum'd
Soon pass'd away, and the youth, turn-
ing

To his bright listeners, thus resum'd :—
' Days, months elaps'd, and, though what most

On earth I sigh'd for was mine, all—
Yet—was I happy ? God, thou know'st, How'er they smile, and feign, and boast,

What happiness is theirs, who fall !
'Twas bitterest anguish—made more keen 980

Ev'n by the love, the bliss, between

Whose throbs it came, like gleams of hell

In agonizing cross-light given
Athwart the glimpses, they who dwell
In purgatory¹ catch of heaven!
The only feeling that to me
Seem'd joy—or rather my sole rest
From aching misery—was to see
My young, proud, blooming LILIS
blest.

She, the fair fountain of all ill 990
To my lost soul—whom yet its thirst
Fervidly panted after still,
And found the charm fresh as at first—

To see her happy—to reflect
Whatever beams still round me play'd
Of former pride, of glory wreck'd,
On her, my Moon, whose light I made,
And whose soul worshipp'd even my
shade—

This was, I own, enjoyment—this
My sole, last lingering glimpse of bliss.
And proud she was, fair creature!— proud, 1001

Beyond what ev'n most queenly stirs
In woman's heart, nor would have
bow'd

That beautiful young brow of hers
To aught beneath the First above,
So high she deem'd her Cherub's love!

Then, too, that passion, hourly growing Stronger and stronger—to which even Her love, at times, gave way—of know-
ing

Every thing strange in earth and
heaven; 1010

Not only all that, full reveal'd,
The' eternal ALLA loves to show,
But all that He hath wisely seal'd
In darkness, for man not to know—

¹ Called by the Mussulmans Al Araf—a sort of wall or partition which, according to the 7th chapter of the Koran, separates hell from paradise, and where they, who have not merits sufficient to gain them immediate admittance into heaven, are supposed to stand for a certain period, alternately tantalized and tormented by the sights that are on either side presented to them.

Manes, who borrowed in many instances from the Platonists, placed his purgatories, or places of purification, in the Sun and Moon.—Beausobre, liv. iii. chap. 8.

² Quelques gnomes désireux de devenir immortels, avoient voulu gagner les bonnes grâces

Ev'n this desire, alas, ill-starr'd
And fatal as it was, I sought
To feed each minute, and unbarr'd
Such realms of wonder on her thought,
As ne'er, till then, had let their light
Escape on any mortal's sight! 1020
In the deep earth—beneath the sea—
Through caves of fire—through wilds of air—

Wherever sleeping Mystery
Had spread her curtain, we were
there—

Love still beside us, as we went,
At home in each new element,
And sure of worship every where!

Then first was Nature taught to lay
The wealth of all her kingdoms down
At woman's worshipp'd feet, and say,
"Bright creature, this is all thine
own!" 1031

Then first were diamonds, from the night³
Of earth's deep centre brought to light,
And made to grace the conquering way
Of proud young beauty with their ray.

Then, too, the pearl from out its shell
Unightly, in the sunless sea,
(As 'twere a spirit, forc'd to dwell
In form unlovely) was set free,
And round the neck of woman threw
A light it lent and borrow'd too. 1041

For never did this maid—whate'er
The' ambition of the hour—forget
Her sex's pride in being fair;
Nor that adornment, tasteful, rare,
Which makes the mighty magnet, set
In Woman's form, more mighty yet.
Nor was there aught within the range
Of my swift wing in sea or air,
Of beautiful, or grand, or strange, 1050
That, quickly as her wish could change,
I did not seek, with such fond care,

des nos filles, et leur avoient apporté des pier-reries dont ils sont gardiens naturels : et ces auteurs ont cru, s'appuyans sur le livre d'Enoch mal-entendu, que c'étoient des pièges que les anges amoureux, &c. &c.—Comte de Gabalis.

As the fiction of the loves of angels with women gave birth to the fanciful world of sylphs and gnomes, so we owe to it also the invention of those beautiful Genii and Peris,
which embellish so much the mythology of the East; for in the fabulous histories of Calou-marath, of Thamurath, &c., these spiritual creatures are always represented as the descendants of Seth, and called the Bani Aiginn, or children of Gianni.

That when I've seen her look above
At some bright star admiringly,
I've said, "Nay, look not there, my love,"¹

Alas, I cannot give it thee!"

But not alone the wonders found
Through Nature's realm—the unveil'd, material,
Visible glories, that abound,
Through all her vast, enchanted ground—¹⁰⁶⁰

But whatso'er unseen, ethereal,
Dwells far away from human sense,
Wrapp'd in its own intelligence—
The mystery of that Fountain-head,
From which all vital spirit runs,
All breath of Life, where'er 'tis spread Through men or angels, flowers or suns—

The workings of the' Almighty Mind,
When first o'er Chaos he design'd ¹⁰⁶⁹
The outlines of this world; and through
That depth of darkness—like the bow,
Call'd out of rain-clouds, hue by hue—²

Saw the grand, gradual picture grow;—
The covenant with human kind

By ALLA made ³—the chains of Fate
He round himself and them hath
twin'd,

Till his high task he consummate;—
Till good from evil, love from hate,
Shall be work'd out through sin and
pain,

And Fate shall loose her iron chain, ¹⁰⁸⁰
And all be free, be bright again!

Such were the deep-drawn mysteries,
And some, ev'n more obscure, pro-
found,

And wildering to the mind than these,
Which—far as woman's thought could
sound,

Or a fall'n, outlaw'd spirit reach—
She dar'd to learn, and I to teach.
Till—fill'd with such unearthly lore,

And mingling the pure light it brings

¹ I am aware that this happy saying of Lord Albemarle's loses much of its grace and playfulness, by being put into the mouth of any but a human lover.

² According to Whitehurst's theory, the mention of rainbows by an antediluvian angel is an anachronism; as he says, 'There was no rain before the flood, and consequently no rainbow, which accounts for the novelty of this sight after the Deluge.'

With much that fancy had, before, ¹⁰⁹⁰
Shed in false, tinted glimmerings—
The' enthusiast girl spoke out, as
one

Inspir'd, among her own dark race,
Who from their ancient shrines would
run,

Leaving their holy rites undone,
To gaze upon her holier face.
And, though but wild the things she
spoke,

Yet, 'mid that play of error's smoke
Into fair shapes by fancy curl'd,
Some gleams of pure religion broke—
Glimpses, that have not yet awoke, ¹¹⁰¹
But startled the still dreaming world!
Oh, many a truth, remote, sublime,
Which Heav'n would from the minds of men

Have kept conceal'd, till its own
time,

Stole out in these revealments then—
Revealments dim, that have fore-run,
By ages, the great, Sealing One! ⁴

Like that imperfect dawn, or light ⁵
Escaping from the Zodiac's signs, ¹¹¹⁰
Which makes the doubtful east half
bright,

Before the real morning shines!

Thus did some moons of bliss go by—
Of bliss to her, who saw but love
And knowledge throughout earth and
sky;

To whose enamour'd soul and eye,
I seem'd—as is the sun on high—

The light of all below, above,
The spirit of sea, and land, and air,
Whose influence, felt every where, ¹¹²⁰
Spread from its centre, her own heart,
Ev'n to the world's extremest part;
While through that world her reainless
mind

Had now career'd so fast and far,
That earth itself seem'd left behind,
And her proud fancy, unconfin'd,
Already saw Heaven's gates ajar!

³ For the terms of this compact, of which the angels were supposed to be witnesses, see the chapter of the Koran, entitled Al Araf, and the article 'Adam' in D'Herbelot.

⁴ In acknowledging the authority of the great Prophets who had preceded him, Mahomet represented his own mission as the final 'Seal,' or consummation of them all.

⁵ The Zodiacal Light.

Happy enthusiast! still, oh, still
Spite of my own heart's mortal chill,
Spite of that double-fronted sorrow, 1130

Which looks at once before and back,
Beholds the yesterday, the morrow,

And sees both comfortless, both black—
Spite of all this, I could have still
In her delight forgot all ill;

Or, if pain would not be forgot,
At least have borne and murmur'd not.

When thoughts of an offended heaven,
Of sinfulness, which I—ev'n I,

While down its steep most headlong
driven— 1140

Well knew could never be forgiven,
Came o'er me with an agony

Beyond all reach of mortal woe—
A torture kept for those who know,

Know every thing, and—worst of all—
Know and love Virtue while they fall!

Even then, her presence had the power
To soothe, to warm—nay, even to

bless—
If ever bliss could graft its flower,

On stem so full of bitterness— 1150
Even then her glorious smile to me

Brought warmth and radiance, if not
balm;

Like moonlight o'er a troubled sea,
Brightening the storm it cannot calm.

Oft, too, when that disheartening fear,
Which all who love, beneath yon sky,

Feel, when they gaze on what is dear—
The dreadful thought that it must die!

That desolating thought, which comes
Into men's happiest hours and homes;

Whose melancholy boding flings 1161
Death's shadow o'er the brightest

things,
Sicklies the infant's bloom, and spreads

The grave beneath young lovers' heads!
This fear, so sad to all—to me

Most full of sadness, from the thought
That I must still live on,¹ when she

Would, like the snow that on the sea
Fell yesterday, in vain be sought;

That heaven to me this final seal 1170
Of all earth's sorrow would deny,

And I eternally must feel
The death-pang, without power to

die!

¹ Pocccke, however, gives it as the opinion of the Mahometan doctors, that all souls, not only of men and of animals, living either on

Ev'n this, her fond endearments—fond
As ever cherish'd the sweet bond

'Twixt heart and heart—could charm
away;

Before her look no clouds would stay,
Or, if they did, their gloom was gone,

Their darkness put a glory on!
But 'tis not, 'tis not for the wrong, 1180

The guilty, to be happy long;
And she, too, now, had sunk within

The shadow of her tempter's sin,
Too deep for ev'n Omnipotence

To snatch the fated victim thence!

Listen, and, if a tear there be Left in your hearts, weep it for me.

'Twas on the evening of a day,
Which we in love had dreamt away;

In that same garden, where—the pride
Of seraph splendour laid aside, 1191

And those wings fur'd, whose open light
For mortal gaze were else too bright—

I first had stood before her sight,
And found myself—oh, ecstasy,

Which even in pain I ne'er forget—
Worshipp'd as only God should be,

And lov'd as never man was yet!
In that same garden were we now,

Thoughtfully side by side reclining,
Her eyes turn'd upward, and her brow

With its own silent fancies shining.

It was an evening bright and still
As ever blush'd on wave or bower,

Smiling from heaven, as if nought ill
Could happen in so sweet an hour.

Yet, I remember, both grew sad
In looking at that light—even she,

Of heart so fresh, and brow so glad,
Felt the still hour's solemnity, 1210

And thought she saw, in that repose,
The death-hour not alone of light,

But of this whole fair world—the close
Of all things beautiful and bright—

The last, grand sunset, in whose ray
Nature herself died calm away!

At length, as though some livelier thought
Had suddenly her fancy caught,

She turn'd upon me her dark eyes,
Dilated into that full shape 1220

They took in joy, reproach, surprise,
As 'twere to let more soul escape, land or in the sea, but of the angels also, must necessarily taste of death.

And, playfully as on my head
Her white hand rested, smil'd and
said :—

"I had, last night, a dream of thee,
Resembling those divine ones, given,
Like preludes to sweet minstrelsy,
Before thou cam'st, thyself from
heaven.

The same rich wreath was on thy
brow,
Dazzling as if of starlight made ; 1230
And these wings, lying darkly now,
Like meteors round thee flash'd and
play'd.

Thou stood'st all bright, as in those
dreams,
As if just wafted from above ;
Mingling earth's warmth with heaven's
beams,
A creature to adore and love.

Sudden I felt thee draw me near
To thy pure heart, where, fondly
plac'd,
I seem'd within the atmosphere
Of that exhaling light embraç'd ; 1240

And felt, methought, the' ethereal
flame
Pass from thy purer soul to mine ;
Till—oh, too blissful—I became,
Like thee, all spirit, all divine !

Say, why did dream so blest come o'er
me,
If, now I wake, 'tis faded, gone ?
When will my Cherub shine before me
Thus radiant, as in heaven he shone ?

When shall I, waking, be allow'd 1249
To gaze upon those perfect charms,
And clasp thee once, without a cloud,
A chill of earth, within these arms ?

Oh what a pride to say, this, this
Is my own Angel—all divine,
And pure, and dazzling as he is,
And fresh from heaven—he's mine,
he's mine !

Think'st thou, were LILIS in thy
place,
A creature of yon lofty skies,
She would have hid one single grace,
One glory from her lover's eyes ? 1260

No, no—then, if thou lov'st like me,
Shine out, young Spirit, in the blaze
Of thy most proud divinity,
Nor think thou'lt wound this mortal gaze.

Too long and oft I've look'd upon Those ardent eyes, intense ev'n
thus—

Too near the stars themselves have gone,
To fear aught grand or luminous.

Then doubt me not—oh, who can
say
But that this dream may yet come
true, 1270

And my blest spirit drink thy ray,
Till it becomes all heavenly too ?

Let me this once but feel the flame
Of those spread wings, the very pride
Will change my nature, and this frame
By the mere touch be deified ! "

Thus spoke the maid, as one, not us'd
To be by earth or heaven refus'd—
As one, who knew her influence o'er
All creatures, whatsoe'er they were,
And, though to heaven she could not
soar, 1281
At least would bring down heaven to
her.

Little did she, alas, or I—Even I, whose soul, but half-way
yet

Immerg'd in sin's obscurity
Was as the earth whereon we lie,
O'er half whose disk the sun is set—
Little did we foresee the fate,
The dreadful—how can it be told ?
Such pain, such anguish to relate 1290
Is o'er again to feel, behold !
But, charg'd as 'tis, my heart must speak

Its sorrow out, or it will break !
Some dark misgivings had, I own,
Pass'd for a moment through my
breast—

Fears of some danger, vague, unknown,
To one, or both—something unblest
To happen from this proud request.
But soon these boding fancies fled ;
Nor saw I aught that could forbid 1300
My full revelation, save the dread
Of that first dazzle, when, unhid,
Such light should burst upon a lid

Ne'er tried in heaven;—and even this glare

She might, by love's own nursing care,
Be, like young eagles, taught to bear.
For well I knew, the lustre shed
From cherub wings, when proudest
spread,

Was, in its nature, lambent, pure,
And innocent as is the light 1310

The glow-worm hangs out to allure
Her mate to her green bower at night.
Oft had I, in the mid-air, swept Through clouds in which the lightning
slept,

As in its lair, ready to spring,
Yet wak'd it not—though from my wing
A thousand sparks fell glittering!

Oft too when round me from above
The feather'd snow, in all its white-
ness,

Fell, like the moultings of heaven's
Dove,—¹ 1320

So harmless, though so full of bright-
ness,

Was my brow's wreath, that it would shake

From off its flowers each downy flake
As delicate, unmelted, fair,
And cool as they had lighted there.

Nay ev'n with LILIS—had I not
Around her sleep all radiant beam'd,

Hung o'er her slumbers, nor forgot
To kiss her eye-lids, as she dream'd?

And yet, at morn, from that repose, 1330
Had she not wak'd, unscath'd and
bright,

As doth the pure, unconscious rose,
Though by the fire-fly kiss'd all night?

Thus having—as, alas, deceiv'd
By my sin's blindness, I believ'd—

No cause for dread, and those dark eyes
Now fix'd upon me, eagerly

As though the' unlocking of the skies
Then waited but a sign from me—

Thus having—as, alas, deceiv'd
By my sin's blindness, I believ'd—

No cause for dread, and those dark eyes
Now fix'd upon me, eagerly

As though the' unlocking of the skies
Then waited but a sign from me—

Thus having—as, alas, deceiv'd
By my sin's blindness, I believ'd—

No cause for dread, and those dark eyes
Now fix'd upon me, eagerly

As though the' unlocking of the skies
Then waited but a sign from me—

How could I pause? how ev'n let fall
A word, a whisper that could stir 1341

In her proud heart a doubt, that all
I brought from heaven belong'd to her.

Slow from her side I rose, while she Arose, too, mutely, tremblingly,

But not with fear—all hope, and pride,
She waited for the awful boon,

Like priestesses, at eventide,
Watching the rise of the full moon,

Whose light, when once its orb hath
shone, 1350

'Twill madden them to look upon!

Of all my glories, the bright crown,
Which, when I last from heaven came
down,

Was left behind me, in yon star
That shines from out those clouds afar,—

Where, relic sad, 'tis treasur'd yet,
The downfallen angel's coronet!—

Of all my glories, this alone
Was wanting:—but the' illumin'd
brow,

The sun-bright locks, the eyes that
now 1360

Had love's spell added to their own,
And pour'd a light till then unknown;—

The' unfolded wings, that, in their
play,

Shed sparkles bright as ALLA's throne;
All I could bring of heaven's array,

Of that rich panoply of charms
A Cherub moves in, on the day

Of his best pomp, I now put on;
And, proud that in her eyes I shone

Thus glorious, glided to her arms; 1370
Which still (though, at a sight so splendid,

Her dazzled brow had, instantly,
Sunk on her breast,) were wide extended

To clasp the form she durst not see!²
Great Heaven! how could thy vengeance
light

So bitterly on one so bright?

So bitterly on one so bright?

So bitterly on one so bright?

So bitterly on one so bright?

So bitterly on one so bright?

So bitterly on one so bright?

So bitterly on one so bright?

So bitterly on one so bright?

¹ The Dove, or pigeon which attended Mahomet as his Familiar, and was frequently seen to whisper into his ear, was, if I recollect right, one of that select number of animals (including also the ant of Solomon, the dog of the Seven Sleepers, &c.) which were thought by the Prophet worthy of admission into Paradise.

² 'The Moslems have a tradition that Mahomet was saved (when he hid himself in a cave in Mount Shur) by his pursuers finding the mouth of the cave covered by a spider's web, and a nest built by two pigeons at the entrance, with two eggs unbroken in it, which made them think no one could have entered it. In consequence of this, they say, Mahomet enjoined his followers to look upon pigeons as sacred, and never to kill a spider.'—Modern Universal History, vol. i.

² 'Mohammed' (says Sale), 'though a prophet, was not able to bear the sight of Gabriel, when he appeared in his proper form, much less would others be able to support it.'

How could the hand, that gave such charms,

Blast them again, in love's own arms ?
Scarce had I touch'd her shrinking frame

When—oh most horrible !—I felt 1380
That every spark of that pure flame—

Pure, while among the stars I dwelt—
Was now, by my transgression, turn'd
Into gross, earthly fire, which burn'd,
Burn'd all it touch'd, as fast as eye
Could follow the fierce, ravening flashes ;

Till there—oh God, I still ask why
Such doom was hers ?—I saw her lie

Blackening within my arms to ashes !
That brow, a glory but to see— 1390

Those lips, whose touch was what the first

Fresh cup of immortality
Is to a new-made angel's thirst !

Those clasping arms, within whose
round—

My heart's horizon—the whole bound
Of its hope, prospect, heaven was found !

Which, even in this dread moment, fond
As when they first were round me
cast,

Loos'd not in death the fatal bond,
But, burning, held me to the last !

All, all, that, but that morn, had seem'd
As if Love's self there breath'd and
beam'd, 1402

Now, parch'd and black, before me lay,
Withering in agony away ;

And mine, oh misery ! mine the flame,
From which this desolation came ;—

I, the curst spirit, whose caress
Had blasted all that loveliness !

'Twas maddening !—but now hear even worse—

Had death, death only, been the curse
I brought upon her—had the doom 1411

But ended here, when her young bloom
Lay in the dust—and did the spirit

No part of that fell curse inherit,
'Twere not so dreadful—but, come
near—

Too shocking 'tis for earth to hear—
Just when her eyes, in fading, took

Their last, keen, agoniz'd farewell,
And look'd in mine with—oh, that look !

Great vengeful Power, whate'er the hell 1420

Thou mayst to human souls assign,
The memory of that look is mine !—

In her last struggle, on my brow
Her ashy lips a kiss imprest,

So withering !—I feel it now—
'Twas fire—but fire, ev'n more un-
blest

Than was my own, and like that flame,
The angels shudder but to name,

Hell's everlasting element !
Deep, deep it pierc'd into my brain,

Madd'ning and torturing as it went ;
And here—mark here, the brand, the stain 1432

It left upon my front—burnt in
By that last kiss of love and sin—

A brand, which all the pomp and pride
Of a fallen Spirit cannot hide !

But is it thus, dread Providence—
Can it, indeed, be thus, that she,

*Who, (but for one proud, fond offence,)
Had honour'd heaven itself, should be*

*Now doom'd—I cannot speak it—no,
Merciful ALLA ! 'tis not so—* 1442

*Never could lips divine have said
The fiat of a fate so dread.*

And yet, that look—so deeply fraught
With more than anguish, with despair—

That new, fierce fire, resembling nought
In heaven or earth—this scorch I
bear !—

Oh—for the first time that these knees
Have bent before thee since my fall,

Great Power, if ever thy decrees 1451
Thou couldst for prayer like mine recall,

Pardon that spirit, and on me,
On me, who taught her pride to err,

Shed out each drop of agony
Thy burning phial keeps for her !

See, too, where low beside me kneel
Two other outcasts, who, though gone

And lost themselves, yet dare to feel
And pray for that poor mortal one.

Alas, too well, too well they know 1461
The pain, the penitence, the woe
That Passion brings upon the best,
The wisest, and the loveliest.—

Oh, who is to be sav'd, if such Bright, erring souls are not forgiven ;

So loth they wander, and so much
Their very wand'rings lean towards
heaven !

Again, I cry, Just Power, transfer
That creature's sufferings all to me—
Mine, mine the guilt, the torment be,
To save one minute's pain to her, 1472
Let mine last all eternity !

He paus'd, and to the earth bent down
His throbbing head ; while they, who felt

That agony as 'twere their own,
Those angel youths, beside him knelt,
And, in the night's still silence there,
While mournfully each wand'ring air
Play'd in those plumes, that never more
To their lost home in heaven must soar,
Breath'd inwardly the voiceless prayer,

Unheard by all but Mercy's ear—
And which if Mercy did not hear,
Oh, God would not be what this bright
And glorious universe of His,
This world of beauty, goodness, light,

And endless love, proclaims He is !
Not long they knelt, when, from a wood
That crown'd that airy solitude, 1490
They heard a low, uncertain sound,
As from a lute, that just had found
Some happy theme, and murmur'd round
The new-born fancy, with fond tone,
Scarce thinking aught so sweet its own !
Till soon a voice, that match'd as well

That gentle instrument, as suits
The sea-air to an ocean-shell
(So kin its spirit to the lute's),
Tremblingly follow'd the soft strain, 1500
Interpreting its joy, its pain,
And lending the light wings of words
To many a thought, that else had lain
Unfledg'd and mute among the chords.

All started at the sound—but chief
The third young Angel, in whose face,
Though faded like the others, grief
Had left a gentler, holier trace ;
As if, even yet, through pain and ill,
Hope had not fled him—as if still 1510
Her precious pearl, in sorrow's cup,
Unmelted at the bottom lay,
To shine again, when, all drunk up,
The bitterness should pass away.
Chiefly did he, though in his eyes
There shone more pleasure than surprise,

Turn to the wood, from whence that
sound
Of solitary sweetness broke ;

Then, listening, look delighted round
To his bright peers, while thus it
spoke :— 1520

'Come, pray with me, my seraph love,
My angel-lord, come pray with me ;
In vain to-night my lip hath strove
To send one holy prayer above—
The knee may bend, the lip may move,
But pray I cannot, without thee !
I've fed the altar in my bower
With droppings from the incense tree ;
I've shelter'd it from wind and shower,
But dim it burns the livelong hour, 1530
As if, like me, it had no power
Of life or lustre, without thee !

'A boat at midnight sent alone
To drift upon the moonless sea,
A lute, whose leading chord is gone,
A wounded bird, that hath but one
Imperfect wing to soar upon,
Are like what I am, without thee !

'Then ne'er, my spirit-love, divide,
In life or death, thyself from me ; 1540
But when again, in sunny pride,
Thou walk'st through Eden, let me glide,
A prostrate shadow, by thy side—
Oh happier thus than without thee !

The song had ceas'd, when, from the wood
Which, sweeping down that airy height,
Reach'd the lone spot whereon they stood—

There suddenly shone out a light
From a clear lamp, which, as it blaz'd
Across the brow of one, who rais'd 1550
Its flame aloft (as if to throw
The light upon that group below),
Display'd two eyes, sparkling between
The dusky leaves, such as are seen
By fancy only, in those faces,
That haunt a poet's walk at even,
Looking from out their leafy places
Upon his dreams of love and heaven.
'Twas but a moment—the blush, brought
O'er all her features at the thought 1560
Of being seen thus, late, alone,
By any but the eyes she sought,
Had scarcely for an instant shone
Through the dark leaves, when she was gone—

Gone, like a meteor that o'erhead
Suddenly shines, and, ere we've said,
'Behold, how beautiful !'—'tis fled.

Yet, ere she went, the words, 'I come,
I come, my NAMA,' reach'd her ear,
In that kind voice, familiar, dear, 1570
Which tells of confidence, of home,—
Of habit, that hath drawn hearts near,
Till they grow one,—of faith sincere,
And all that Love most loves to hear;
A music, breathing of the past,
The present, and the time to be,
Where Hope and Memory, to the last,
Lengthen out life's true harmony!
Nor long did he, whom call so kind
Summon'd away, remain behind; 1580
Nor did there need much time to tell
What they—alas, more fall'n than he
From happiness and heaven—knew well,
His gentler love's short history!

Thus did it run—not as he told
The tale himself, but as 'tis grav'd
Upon the tablets that, of old,
By SETH¹ were from the deluge sav'd,
All written over with sublime
And sadd'ning legends of the' unblest,
But glorious Spirits of that time, 1591
And this young Angel's 'mong the
rest.

THIRD ANGEL'S STORY

AMONG the Spirits, of pure flame,
That in the' eternal heavens abide—
Circles of light, that from the same
Unclouded centre sweeping wide,

¹ Seth is a favourite personage among the Orientals, and acts a conspicuous part in many of their most extravagant romances. The Syrians pretended to have a Testament of this Patriarch in their possession, in which was explained the whole theology of angels, their different orders, &c. &c. The Kurds, too (as Hyde mentions in his Appendix), have a book, which contains all the rites of their religion, and which they call Sohuph Sheit, or the Book of Seth.

In the same manner that Seth and Cham are supposed to have preserved these memorials of antediluvian knowledge, Xixuthrus is said in Chaldaean fable to have deposited in Siparis, the city of the Sun, those monuments of science which he had saved out of the waters of a deluge. See Jablonski's learned remarks upon these columns or tablets of Seth, which he supposes to be the same with the pillars of Mercury, or the Egyptian Thoth.—Pantheon. Egypt. lib. v. cap. 5.

² The Mussulmans, says D'Herbelot, apply the general name, Mocarreboun, to all those Spirits 'qui approchent le plus près le Trône.' Of this number are Mikail and Gebrail.

Carry its beams on every side—
Like spheres of air that waft around
The undulations of rich sound,
Till the far-circling radiance be 1600
Diffus'd into infinity!
First and immediate near the Throne
Of ALLA,² as if most his own,
The Seraphs stand³—this burning sign
Trac'd on their banner, 'Love divine!'
Their rank, their honours, far above
Ev'n those to high-brow'd Cherubs
given,
Though knowing all;—so much doth
love
Transcend all Knowledge, ev'n in
heaven!
'Mong these was ZARAPH once—and
none 1610
E'er felt affection's holy fire,
Or yearn'd towards the' Eternal One,
With half such longing, deep desire.
Love was to his impassion'd soul
Not, as with others, a mere part
Of its existence, but the whole—
The very life-breath of his heart!
Oft, when from ALLA's lifted brow
A lustre came, too bright to bear,
And all the seraph ranks would bow,
To shade their dazzled sight, nor dare
To look upon the' effulgence there—
This Spirit's eyes would court the blaze
(Such pride he in adoring took),
And rather lose, in that one gaze,
The power of looking, than not look!

² The Seraphim, or Spirits of Divine Love.
There appears to be, among writers on the East, as well as among the Orientals themselves, considerable indecision with regard to the respective claims of Seraphim and Cherubim to the highest rank in the celestial hierarchy. The derivation which Hyde assigns to the word Cherub seems to determine the precedence in favour of that order of spirits:—'Cherubim, i.e. Propinqui Angeli, qui sc. Deo propius quam alii accedunt; nam Chavus est i. q. Karab, appropinquare.' (P. 263.) Al Beidawi, too, one of the commentators of the Koran, on that passage, 'the angels, who bear the throne, and those who stand about it,' (chap. xl) says, 'These are the Cherubim, the highest order of angels.' On the other hand, we have seen, in a preceding note, that the Syrians place the sphere in which the Seraphs dwell at the very summit of all the celestial systems; and even, among Mahometans, the words Azazil and Mocarreboun (which mean the spirits that stand nearest to the throne of Alla) are indiscriminately applied to both Seraphim and Cherubim.

Then, too, when angel voices sung
The mercy of their God, and strung
Their harps to hail, with welcome
sweet, 1629

That moment, watch'd for by all eyes,
When some repentant sinner's feet
First touch'd the threshold of the
skies,

Oh then how clearly did the voice
Of ZARAPH above all rejoice !
Love was in ev'ry buoyant tone—
Such love, as only could belong
To the blest angels, and alone
Could, ev'n from angels, bring such
song !

Alas, that it should e'er have been
In heav'n as 'tis too often here, 1640
Where nothing fond or bright is seen,
But it hath pain and peril near ;— Where right and wrong so close resemble,

That what we take for virtue's thrill
Is often the first downward tremble
Of the heart's balance unto ill ;
Where Love hath not a shrine so pure,
So holy, but the serpent, Sin,
In moments, ev'n the most secure,
Beneath his altar may glide in ! 1650

So was it with that Angel—such
The charm, that slop'd his fall along,

From good to ill, from loving much,
Too easy lapse, to loving wrong.—
Ev'n so that amorous Spirit, bound
By beauty's spell, where'er 'twas found,
From the bright things above the moon
Down to earth's beaming eyes descended,

Till love for the Creator soon
In passion for the creature ended. 1660

'Twas first at twilight, on the shore
Of the smooth sea, he heard the lute
And voice of her he lov'd steal o'er
The silver waters, that lay mute,
As loth, by even a breath, to stay
The pilgrimage of that sweet lay,
Whose echoes still went on and on,
Till lost among the light that shone
Far off, beyond the ocean's brim—
There, where the rich cascade of day
Had, o'er the horizon's golden rim, 1671
Into Elysium roll'd away !

Of God she sung, and of the mild
Attendant Mercy, that beside
His awful throne for ever smil'd,
Ready, with her white hand, to guide

His bolts of vengeance to their prey—
That she might quench them on the
way !

Of Peace—of that Atoning Love,
Upon whose star, shining above 1680
This twilight world of hope and fear,
The weeping eyes of Faith are fix'd
So fond, that with her every tear
The light of that love-star is mix'd !—
All this she sung, and such a soul
Of piety was in that song,

That the charm'd Angel, as it stole
Tenderly to his ear, along
Those lulling waters where he lay,
Watching the daylight's dying ray, 1690
Thought 'twas a voice from out the
wave,

An echo, that some sea-nymph gave
To Eden's distant harmony, Heard faint and sweet beneath the
sea !

Quickly, however, to its source,
Tracing that music's melting course,
He saw, upon the golden sand
Of the sea-shore, a maiden stand,
Before whose feet the' expiring waves
Flung their last offering with a sigh—
As, in the East, exhausted slaves 1701
Lay down the far-brought gift, and
die—

And, while her lute hung by her, hush'd,
As if unequal to the tide
Of song, that from her lips still gush'd,
She rais'd, like one beatified,
Those eyes, whose light seem'd rather
given

To be ador'd than to adore—
Such eyes, as may have look'd from
heaven,
But ne'er were rais'd to it before ?

Oh Love, Religion, Music¹—all 1711
That's left of Eden upon earth—
The only blessings, since the fall
Of our weak souls, that still recall
A trace of their high, glorious birth—

¹ 'Les Égyptiens disent que la Musique est
Sœur de la Religion.'—Voyages de Pythagore, tom. i, p. 422.

How kindred are the dreams you bring !
 How Love, though unto earth so prone,
 Delights to take religion's wing,
 When time or grief hath stain'd his
 own !

How near to Love's beguiling brink, 1720
 Too oft, entranc'd Religion lies !
 While Music, Music is the link
 They both still hold by to the skies,
 The language of their native sphere,
 Which they had else forgotten here.

How then could ZARAPH fail to feel
 That moment's witcheries ?—one, so
 fair,

Breathing out music, that might steal
 Heaven from itself, and rapt in prayer
 That seraphs might be proud to share ! 1730

Oh, he did feel it, all too well—
 With warmth, that far too dearly cost—

Nor knew he, when at last he fell,
 To which attraction, to which spell,
 Love, Music, or Devotion, most
 His soul in that sweet hour was lost.

Sweet was the hour, though dearly won,
 And pure, as aught of earth could be,
 For then first did the glorious sun
 Before religion's altar see 1740

Two hearts in wedlock's golden tie
 Self-pledg'd, in love to live and die.
 Blest union ! by that Angel wove,
 And worthy from such hands to
 come ;

Safe, sole asylum, in which Love,
 When fall'n or exil'd from above,
 In this dark world can find a home.

And, though the Spirit had transgress'd,
 Had, from his station 'mong the blest
 Won down by woman's smile, allow'd
 Terrestrial passion to breathe o'er 1751
 The mirror of his heart, and cloud
 God's image, there so bright before—
 Yet never did that Power look down
 On error with a brow so mild ;
 Never did Justice wear a frown,
 Through which so gently Mercy smil'd.
 For humble was their love—with awe
 And trembling like some treasure kept,
 That was not theirs by holy law— 1760

Whose beauty with remorse they saw,
 And o'er whose preciousness they wept.
 Humility, that low, sweet root,
 From which all heavenly virtues shoot,
 Was in the hearts of both—but most
 In NAMA's heart, by whom alone
 Those charms for which a heaven was lost,

Seem'd all unvalued and unknown ;
 And when her seraph's eyes she caught,
 And hid hers glowing on his breast,
 Even bliss was humbled by the thought—
 'What claim have I to be so blest ?'
 Still less could maid, so meek, have nurs'd

Desire of knowledge—that vain thirst,
 With which the sex hath all been curs'd,

From luckless EVE to her, who near
 The Tabernacle stole to hear

The secrets of the angels¹ : no—

To love as her own Seraph lov'd,
 With Faith, the same through bliss and
 woe— 1780

Faith, that, were even its light
 remov'd,

Could, like the dial, fix'd remain,
 And wait till it shone out again ;—
 With Patience that, though often bow'd
 By the rude storm, can rise anew ;
 And Hope that, even from Evil's
 cloud,

Sees sunny Good half breaking
 through !

This deep, relying Love, worth more
 In heaven than all a Cherub's lore—
 This Faith, more sure than aught beside, 1790

Was the sole joy, ambition, pride
 Of her fond heart—the' unreasoning scope

Of all its views, above, below—
 So true she felt it that to hope,

To trust, is happier than to know.

And thus in humbleness they trod,
 Abash'd, but pure before their God ;
 Nor e'er did earth behold a sight

So meekly beautiful as they,
 When, with the altar's holy light 1800
 Full on their brows, they knelt to
 pray,

Hand within hand, and side by side,
 Two links of love, awhile untied

¹ Sara.

From the great chain above, but fast
 Holding together to the last !—
 Two fallen Splendors,¹ from that tree,
 Which buds with such eternally,²
 Shaken to earth, yet keeping all
 Their light and freshness in the fall.
 Their only punishment, (as wrong, r810 However sweet, must bear its brand,)
 Their only doom was this—that, long
 As the green earth and ocean stand,
 They both shall wander here—the
 same,
 Throughout all time, in heart and
 frame—
 Still looking to that goal sublime,
 Whose light remote, but sure, they
 see ;
 Pilgrims of Love, whose way is Time,
 Whose home is in Eternity ! r819
 Subject, the while, to all the strife
 True Love encounters in this life—
 The wishes, hopes, he breathes in
 vain ;
 The chill, that turns his warmest
 sighs
 To earthly vapour, ere they rise ;
 The doubt he feeds on, and the pain
 That in his very sweetness lies :—
 Still worse, the' illusions that betray
 His footsteps to their shining brink ;
 That tempt him, on his desert way Through the bleak world, to bend and drink, r830
 Where nothing meets his lips, alas,—
 But he again must sighing pass
 On to that far-off home of peace,
 In which alone his thirst will cease.
 All this they bear, but, not the less,
 Have moments rich in happiness—
 Blest meetings, after many a day
 Of widowhood past far away,
 When the lov'd face again is seen
 Close, close, with not a tear between—

¹ An allusion to the Sephiroths or Splendors of the Jewish Cabbala, represented as a tree, of which God is the crown or summit.

The Sephiroths are the higher orders of emanative beings in the strange and incomprehensible system of the Jewish Cabbala. They are called by various names, Pity, Beauty, &c. &c. ; and their influences are supposed to act through certain canals, which communicate with each other.

² The reader may judge of the rationality of this Jewish system by the following explanation of part of the machinery :—Les canaux

Confidings frank, without control, r841
 Pour'd mutually from soul to soul ;
 As free from any fear or doubt
 As is that light from chill or stain,
 The sun into the stars sheds out,
 To be by them shed back again !—
 That happy minglement of hearts,
 Where, chang'd as chymic compounds
 are,
 Each with its own existence parts,
 To find a new one, happier far ! r850
 Such are their joys—and, crowning all,
 That blessed hope of the bright hour,
 When, happy and no more to fall,
 Their spirits shall, with freshen'd
 power,
 Rise up rewarded for their trust
 In Him, from whom all goodness
 springs,
 And, shaking off earth's soiling dust
 From their emancipated wings,
 Wander for ever through those skies
 Of radiance, where Love never dies ! r860
 In what lone region of the earth
 These Pilgrims now may roam or
 dwell,
 God and the Angels, who look forth
 To watch their steps, alone can tell.
 But should we, in our wanderings,
 Meet a young pair, whose beauty wants
 But the adornment of bright wings,
 To look like heaven's inhabitants—
 Who shine where'er they tread, and yet
 Are humble in their earthly lot, r870
 As is the way-side violet,
 That shines unseen, and were it not
 For its sweet breath would be forgot—Whose hearts, in every thought, are
 one,
 Whose voices utter the same wills—
 Answering, as Echo doth some tone
 Of fairy music 'mong the hills,

qui sortent de la Miséricorde et de la Force, et qui vont aboutir à la Beauté, sont chargés d'un grand nombre d'anges. Il y en a trente-cinq sur le canal de la Miséricorde, qui récompensent et qui couronnent la vertu des Saints, &c. &c. —For a concise account of the Cabalistic Philosophy, see Enfield's very useful compendium of Brucker.

So like itself, we seek in vain
Which is the echo, which the strain—
Whose piety is love, whose love, 1880
Though close as 'twere their souls'
embrace,
Is not of earth, but from above—
Like two fair mirrors, face to face,
Whose light, from one to the other thrown,

Is heaven's reflection, not their own—
Should we e'er meet with aught so pure,
So perfect here, we may be sure
'Tis ZARAPH and his bride we see ;
And call young lovers round, to view
The pilgrim pair, as they pursue 1890
Their pathway towards eternity.

MISCELLANEOUS POEMS

SCEPTICISM

EREN Psyche drank the cup, that shed
Immortal Life into her soul,
Some evil spirit pour'd, 'tis said,
One drop of Doubt into the bowl—

Which, mingling darkly with the stream,
To Psyche's lips—she knew not
why—
Made even that blessed nectar seem
As though its sweetness soon would
die.

Off, in the very arms of Love,
A chill came o'er her heart—a fear
That Death might, even yet, remove
Her spirit from that happy sphere.

'Those sunny ringlets,' she exclaim'd,
Twining them round her snowy fingers ;

'That forehead, where a light, unnam'd,
Unknown on earth, for ever lingers ;

Those lips, through which I feel the
breath

Of Heaven itself, whene'er they sever—
Say, are they mine, beyond all death,
My own, hereafter, and for ever ?

Smile not—I know that starry brow,
Those ringlets, and bright lips of
thine,

Will always shine, as they do now—
But shall I live to see them shine ?

In vain did Love say, 'Turn thine eyes
On all that sparkles round thee here—
Thou'rt now in heaven, where nothing dies,
And in these arms—what canst thou
fear ?'

In vain—the fatal drop, that stole
Into that cup's immortal treasure,
Had lodg'd its bitter near her soul,
And gave a tinge to every pleasure.
And, though there ne'er was transport
given
Like Psyche's with that radiant boy,
Hers is the only face in heaven,
That wears a cloud amid its joy.

A JOKE VERSIFIED

'COME, come,' said Tom's father, 'at your time of life,
There's no longer excuse for thus playing the rake—
It is time you should think, boy, of taking a wife'—
'Why, so it is, father—whose wife shall I take ?'

ON THE DEATH OF A FRIEND

PURE as the mantle, which, o'er him who stood

By JORDAN's stream, descended from
the sky,
Is that remembrance, which the wise
and good

Leave in the hearts that love them,
when they die.

So pure, so precious shall the memory be,
Bequeath'd, in dying, to our souls by
thee—

So shall the love we bore thee, cherish'd
warm

Within our souls through grief, and pain, and strife,

Be, like ELISHA's cruse, a holy charm,
Wherewith to 'heal the waters' of this life !

TO JAMES CORRY, ESQ.

ON HIS MAKING ME A PRESENT OF A WINE
STRAINER

Brighton, June, 1825.

THIS life, dear Corry, who can doubt ?—
 Resembles much friend Ewart's¹ wine,
 When first the rosy drops come out,
 How beautiful, how clear they shine !

And thus awhile they keep their tint,
 So free from even a shade with some,
 That they would smile, did you but hint,
 That darker drops would ever come.

But soon the ruby tide runs short,
 Each minute makes the sad truth
 plainer,
 Till life, like old and crusty port,
 When near its close, requires a
 strainer.

This friendship can alone confer,
 Alone can teach the drops to pass,
 If not as bright as once they were,
 At least unclouded, through the glass.

Nor, Corry, could a boon be mine,
 Of which this heart were fonder,
 vainer,
 Than thus, if life grow like old wine,
 To have thy friendship for its strainer.

FRAGMENT OF A CHARACTER

HERE lies Factotum Ned at last ;
 Long as he breath'd the vital air,
 Nothing throughout all Europe pass'd,
 In which Ned hadn't some small share.

Whoe'er was in, whoe'er was out,
 Whatever statesmen did or said,
 If not exactly brought about,
 'Twas all, at least, contriv'd by Ned.

With NAP, if Russia went to war,
 'Twas owing, under Providence, 10
 To certain hints Ned gave the Czar—
 (Vide his pamphlet—price, sixpence.)

If France was beat at Waterloo—
 As all but Frenchmen think she was—
 To Ned, as Wellington well knew,
 Was owing half that day's applause.

¹ A wine-merchant.

Then for his news—no envoy's bag
 E'er pass'd so many secrets throughit;
 Scarcely a telegraph could wag
 Its wooden finger, but Ned knew it. 20

Such tales he had of foreign plots,
 With foreign names, one's ear to buzz in !

From Russia, chefs and ofs in lots,
 From Poland, owskis by the dozen.

When George, alarm'd for England's creed,

Turn'd out the last Whig ministry,
 And men ask'd—who advis'd the deed ?
 Ned modestly confess'd 'twas he.

For though, by some unlucky miss,
 He had not downright seen the King,
 He sent such hints through Viscount
This,
 To Marquis That, as clenched the thing. 31

The same it was in science, arts,
 The Drama, Books, MS. and printed—Kean learn'd from Ned his cleverest parts,
 And Scott's last work by him was hinted.

Childe Harold in the proofs he read,
 And, here and there, infus'd some soul in't—

Nay, Davy's Lamp, till seen by Ned,
 Had—odd enough—an awkward hole
 in't. 40

'Twas thus, all-doing and all-knowing,
 Wit, statesman, boxer, chymist,
 singer,

Whatever was the best pye going,
 In that Ned—trust him—had his finger.

WHAT SHALL I SING THEE ?
to —

WHAT shall I sing thee ? Shall I tell
 Of that bright hour, remember'd well
 As though it shone but yesterday,
 When, loitering idly in the ray
 Of a spring-sun, I heard, o'erhead,
 My name as by some spirit said,
 And, looking up, saw two bright eyes
 Above me from a casement shine,
 Dazzling my mind with such surprise
 As they, who sail beyond the Line,

Feel when new stars above them rise;—
And it was thine, the voice that spoke,
Like Ariel's, in the mid-air then;
And thine the eye, whose lustre broke—
Never to be forgot again!

What shall I sing thee? Shall I weave
A song of that sweet summer-eve,
(Summer, of which the sunniest part
Was that we, each, had in the heart,)
When thou and I, and one like thee,
In life and beauty, to the sound
Of our own breathless minstrelsy,
Danc'd till the sunlight faded round,
Ourselves the whole ideal Ball,
Lights, music, company, and all!
Oh, 'tis not in the languid strain
Of lute like mine, whose day is past,
To call up even a dream again
Of the fresh light those moments cast.

COUNTRY DANCE AND QUADRILLE

ONE night the nymph call'd COUNTRY
DANCE—
(Whom folks, of late, have used so ill,
Preferring a coquette from France,
That mincing thing, Mamselle QUAD-RILLE)—

Having been chas'd from London down
To that most humble haunt of all
She used to grace—a Country Town—
Went smiling to the New-Year's Ball.

'Here, here, at least,' she cried, 'though driven
From London's gay and shining tracks—' 10

Though, like a Peri cast from heaven,
I've lost, for ever lost, Almack's—

Though not a London Miss alive
Would now for her acquaintance own
me;

And spinsters, even, of forty-five,
Upon their honours ne'er have known
me;

Here, here, at least, I triumph still,
And—spite of 'some few dandy
Lancers,

Who vainly try to preach Quadrille—
See nought but true-blue Country
Dancers. 20

Here still I reign, and, fresh in charms,
My throne, like Magna Charta, raise
'Mong sturdy, freeborn legs and arms,
'That scorn the threaten'd chaîne
Anglaise.'

'Twas thus she said, as 'mid the din
Of footmen, and the town sedan,
She lighted at the King's Head Inn,
And up the stairs triumphant ran.

The Squires and their Squireesses all, 29
With young Squirinas, just come out,
And my Lord's daughters from the Hall, (Quadrillers, in their hearts, no
doubt,)—

All these, as light she tripp'd up stairs,
Were in the cloak-room seen assembling—

When, hark! some new, outlandish airs,
From the First Fiddle, set her trembling.

She stops—she listens—can it be?

Alas, in vain her ears would 'scape it—
It is 'Di tanti palpiti'

As plain as English bow can scrape it.

'Courage!' however—in she goes, 41
With her best, sweeping country
grace;

When, ah too true, her worst of foes,
QUADRILLE, there meets her, face to
face.

Oh for the lyre, or violin,
Or kit of that gay Muse, Terpsichore,
To sing the rage these nymphs were in,
Their looks and language, airs and trickery.

There stood QUADRILLE, with cat-like
face

(The beau-ideal of French beauty), 50
A band-box thing, all art and lace
Down from her nose-tip to her shoe-tye.

Her flounces, fresh from Victorine—
From Hippolyte, her rouge and hair—
Her poetry, from Lamartine—
Her morals, from—the Lord knows
where.

And, when she danc'd—so slidingly,
So near the ground she plied her art,
You'd swear her mother-earth and she
Had made a compact ne'er to part. 60

Her face too, all the while, sedate,
No signs of life or motion showing,
Like a bright pendule's dial-plate—
So still, you'd hardly think 'twas going.

Full fronting her stood Country Dance—
A fresh, frank nymph, whom you would know
For English, at a single glance—
English all o'er, from top to toe.

A little gauche, 'tis fair to own, 69
And rather given to skips and bounces;
Endangering thereby many a gown,
And playing, oft, the devil with flounces.

Unlike Mamselle—who would prefer
(As morally a lesser ill)
A thousand flaws of character,
To one vile rumple of a frill.

No rouge did She of Albion wear;
Let her but run that two-heat race
She calls a Set, not Dian e'er 79
Came rosier from the woodland chase.

Such was the nymph, whose soul had in't
Such anger now—whose eyes of blue (Eyes of that bright, victorious tint,
Which English maids call 'Waterloo')—

Like summer lightnings, in the dusk
Of a warm evening, flashing broke,
While—to the tune of 'Money Musk,'¹
Which struck up now—she proudly spoke :—

'Heard you that strain—that joyous strain ?

'Twas such as England lov'd to hear,
Ere thou, and all thy frippery train, 91
Corrupted both her foot and ear—

Ere Waltz, that rake from foreign lands,
Presum'd, in sight of all beholders,
To lay his rude, licentious hands
On virtuous English backs and shoulders—

Ere times and morals both grew bad,
And, yet unfleec'd by funding block-
heads,

Happy John Bull not only had,
But danc'd to, "*Money in both
pockets.*" 100

¹ An old English Country Dance.

Alas, the change !—Oh, L—d—y,
Where is the land could 'scape
disasters,

With such a Foreign Secretary,
Aided by Foreign Dancing Masters ?

Woe to ye, men of ships and shops !
Rulers of day-books and of waves !
Quadrill'd, on one side, into fops,
And drill'd, on t'other, into slaves !

Ye, too, ye lovely victims, seen,
Like pigeons, truss'd for exhibition,
With elbows, à la crapaudine, 111
And feet in—God knows what position ;

Hemm'd in by watchful chaperons,
Inspectors of your airs and graces,
Who intercept all whisper'd tones,
And read your telegraphic faces ;

Unable with the youth ador'd,
In that grim cordon of Mammas,
To interchange one tender word,
Though whisper'd but in queue de chats. 120

Ah did you know how blest we rang'd,
Ere vile Quadrille usurp'd the fiddle—
What looks in setting were exchang'd,
What tender words in down the middle ;

How many a couple, like the wind,
Which nothing in its course controls,

Left time and chaperons far behind,
And gave a loose to legs and souls ;

How matrimony throve—ere stopp'd
By this cold, silent, foot-coquetting—
How charmingly one's partner popp'd
The' important question in poussetting. 132

While now, alas—no sly advances—
No marriage hints—all goes on badly—
'Twixt Parson Malthus and French
Dances,
We, girls, are at a discount sadly.

Sir William Scott (now Baron Stowell)
Declares not half so much is made
By Licences—and he must know well—Since vile Quadrilling spoil'd the
trade.' 140

She ceas'd—tears fell from every Miss—
 She now had touch'd the true pathetic :—
 One such authentic fact as this
 Is worth whole volumes theoretic.
 Instant the cry was 'Country dance !'
 And the maid saw, with brightening
 face,
 The Steward of the night advance,
 And lead her to her birthright place.
 The fiddles, which awhile had ceas'd,
 Now tun'd again their summons sweet,
 And, for one happy night, at least, 151
 Old England's triumph was complete.

GAZEL

HASTE, Maami, the spring is nigh ;
 Already, in the ' unopen'd flowers
 That sleep around us, Fancy's eye
 Can see the blush of future bowers ;
 And joy it brings to thee and me,
 My own beloved Maami !

The streamlet frozen on its way,
 To feed the marble Founts of Kings,
 Now, loosen'd by the vernal ray,
 Upon its path exulting springs—
 As doth this bounding heart to thee,
 My ever blissful Maami !

Such bright hours were not made to stay ;
 Enough if they a while remain,
 Like Irem's bowers, that fade away,
 From time to time, and come again.
 And life shall all one Irem be
 For us, my gentle Maami.

O haste, for this impatient heart,
 Is like the rose in Yemen's vale,
 That rends its inmost leaves apart
 With passion for the nightingale ;
 So languishes this soul for thee,
 My bright and blushing Maami !

LINES

ON THE DEATH OF
 JOSEPH ATKINSON, ESQ. OF DUBLIN

If ever life was prosperously cast,
 If ever life was like the lengthen'd flow
 Of some sweet music, sweetness to the
 last,
 'Twas his who, mourn'd by many,
 sleeps below.

The sunny temper, bright where all is
 strife,
 The simple heart above all worldly wiles ;
 Light wit that plays along the calm of
 life,
 And stirs its languid surface into
 smiles ;

Pure charity, that comes not in a shower,
 Sudden and loud, oppressing what it
 feeds,
 But, like the dew, with gradual silent
 power,
 Felt in the bloom it leaves along the
 meads ;

The happy grateful spirit, that improves
 And brightens every gift by fortune
 given ;
 That, wander where it will with those it
 loves,
 Makes every place a home, and home
 a heaven :

All these were his.—Oh, thou who
 read'st this stone,
 When for thyself, thy children, to the
 sky
 Thou humbly prayest, ask this boon
 alone,
 That ye like him may live, like him
 may die !

GENIUS AND CRITICISM

Scripsit quidem fata, sed sequitur.
 Seneca.

Or old, the Sultan Genius reign'd,
 As Nature meant, supreme, alone ;
 With mind uncheck'd, and hands
 unchain'd,
 His views, his conquests were his
 own.

But power like his, that digs its grave
 With its own sceptre, could not
 last ;

So Genius' self became the slave
 Of laws that Genius' self had pass'd.

As Jove, who forg'd the chain of Fate,
 Was, ever after, doom'd to wear it ; 10
 His nods, his struggles all too late—
 ' Qui semel jussit, semper parat.'

To check young Genius' proud career,
The slaves, who now his throne invaded,
Made Criticism his prime Vizir,
And from that hour his glories faded.

Tied down in Legislation's school,
Afraid of even his own ambition,
His very victories were by rule,
And he was great but by permission.

His most heroic deeds—the same, 21
That dazzled, when spontaneous actions—
Now, done by law, seem'd cold and tame,
And shorn of all their first attractions.

If he but stirr'd to take the air,
Instant, the Vizir's Council sat—
'Good Lord, your Highness can't go
there—
Bless me, your Highness can't do
that.'

If, loving pomp, he chose to buy
Rich jewels for his diadem, 30
'The taste was bad, the price was
high—
A flower were simpler than a gem.'

To please them if he took to flowers—
'What trifling, what unmeaning
things!

Fit for a woman's toilet hours,
But not at all the style for Kings.'

If, fond of his domestic sphere,
He play'd no more the rambling comet—
'A dull, good sort of man, 'twas clear,
But, as for great or brave, far from
it. 40

Did he then look o'er distant oceans,
For realms more worthy to enthrone
him?
'Saint Aristotle, what wild notions!
Serve a "ne exeat regno" on him.'

At length, their last and worst to do,
They round him plac'd a guard of watchmen,
Reviewers, knaves in brown, or blue
Turn'd up with yellow—chiefly Scotchmen;

To dog his footsteps all about,
Like those in Longwood's prison grounds, 50
Who at Napoleon's heels rode out,
For fear the Conqueror should break
bounds.

Oh for some Champion of his power,
Some Ultra spirit, to set free,
As erst in Shakespeare's sovereign hour,
The thunders of his Royalty!—

To vindicate his ancient line,
The first, the true, the only one,
Of Right eternal and divine,
That rules beneath the blessed sun. 60

TO LADY J-R—Y,

ON BEING ASKED TO WRITE SOMETHING IN HER ALBUM

Written at Middleton.

OH albums, albums, how I dread
Your everlasting scrap and scrawl!
How often wish that from the dead,
Old Omar would pop forth his head,
And make a bonfire of you all!

So might I 'scape the spinster band,
The blushless blues, who, day and
night,
Like duns in doorways, take their stand,
To waylay bards, with book in hand,
Crying for ever, 'Write, sir, write!'

So might I shun the shame and pain,
That o'er me at this instant come,
When Beauty, seeking Wit in vain,
Knocks at the portal of my brain,
And gets, for answer, 'Not at home!'
November, 1828.

TO THE SAME

ON LOOKING THROUGH HER ALBUM

No wonder bards, both high and low,
From Byron down to — and me,
Should seek the fame, which all bestow
On him whose task is praising thee.

Let but the theme be J-r—y's eyes,
At once all errors are forgiven;
As ev'n old Sternhold still we prize,
Because, though dull, he sings of
heaven.

SATIRICAL AND HUMOROUS POEMS

THE following trifles, having enjoyed, in their circulation through the newspapers, all the celebrity and length of life to which they were entitled, would have been suffered to pass quietly into oblivion without pretending to any further distinction, had they not already been published, in a collective form, both in London and Paris, and, in each case, been mixed up with a number of other productions, to which, whatever may be their merit, the author of the following pages has no claim. A natural desire to separate his own property, worthless as it is, from that of others, is, he begs to say, the chief motive of the publication of this volume.

TO SIR HUDSON LOWE

*Effare causam nominis, Utrumne mores hoc tui
Nomen dedere, an nomen hoc Secuta morum regula.* Ausonius.

1816.

SIR Hudson Lowe, Sir Hudson Low,
(By name, and ah! by nature so)
As thou art fond of persecutions,
Perhaps thou'st read, or heard repeated,
How Captain Gulliver was treated,
When thrown among the Lilliputians.
They tied him down—these little men did—
And having valiantly ascended
Upon the Mighty Man's protuberance,

They did so strut!—upon my soul,
It must have been extremely droll
To see their pigmy pride's exuberance!

And how the doughty mannikins
Amus'd themselves with sticking pins
And needles in the great man's breeches:

And how some very little things,
That pass'd for Lords, on scaffoldings
Got up, and worried him with speeches.

Alas, alas! that it should happen
To mighty men to be caught napping!—
Though different, too, these persecu-
tions;

For Gulliver, there, took the nap,
While, here the Nap, oh sad mishap,
Is taken by the Lilliputians!

AMATORY COLLOQUY BETWEEN BANK AND GOVERNMENT

1826.

BANK

Is all then forgotten? those amorous pranks
You and I, in our youth, my dear Government, play'd;
When you call'd me the fondest, the truest of Banks,
And enjoy'd the endearing advances I made!

When left to ourselves, unmolested and free,
To do all that a dashing young couple should do,
A law against paying was laid upon me,
But none against owing, dear helpmate, on you.

And is it then vanish'd?—that 'hour (as Othello
So happily calls it) of Love and Direction?'¹
And must we, like other fond doves, my dear fellow,
Grow good in our old age, and cut the connexion?

¹ ——— 'An hour
Of love, of worldly matter and direction.'

GOVERNMENT

Even so, my belov'd Mrs. Bank, it must be;
 This paying in cash plays the devil with wooing:¹
 We've both had our swing, but I plainly foresee
 There must soon be a stop to our bill-ing and cooing.

Propagation in reason—a small child or two—
 Even Reverend Malthus himself is a friend to;
 The issue of some folks is moderate and few—
 But ours, my dear corporate Bank, there's no end to!

So—hard though it be on a pair, who've already
 Dispos'd of so many pounds, shillings, and pence;
 And, in spite of that pink of prosperity, Freddy,²
 So lavish of cash and so sparing of sense—

The day is at hand, my Papyria³ Venus,
 When—high as we once used to carry our capers—
 Those soft billet-doux we're now passing between us,
 Will serve but to keep Mrs. Coutts in curl-papers:

And when—if we still must continue our love,
 (After all that has pass'd)—our amour, it is clear,
 Like that which Miss Danaë manag'd with Jove,
 Must all be transacted in bullion, my dear!

February, 1826.

DIALOGUE BETWEEN A SOVEREIGN AND A ONE POUND NOTE

'O ego non felix, quam tu fugis, ut pavet acres
 Agna lupos, capreaque leones. Hor.

SAID a Sov'reign to a Note,
 In the pocket of my coat,
 Where they met in a neat purse of leather,

'How happens it, I prithee,
 That, though I'm wedded with thee,
 Fair Pound, we can never live together?

Like your sex, fond of change,
 With silver you can range,
 And of lots of young sixpences be mother;
 While with me—upon my word, 10
 Not my Lady and my Lord
 Of W—stm—th see so little of each other!'

The indignant Note replied
 (Lying crumpled by his side),
 'Shame, shame, it is yourself that roam, Sir—

¹ It appears, however, that Ovid was a friend to the resumption of payment in specie:—

— 'finem, specie caeleste resumit,
 Luctibus imposuit, venitque salutifer urbi.
Met. l. xv. v. 743.

One cannot look askance,
 But, whip! you're off to France,
 Leaving nothing but old rags at home,
 Sir.

Your scampering began
 From the moment Parson Van, 20
 Poor man, made us one in Love's fetter;
 "For better or for worse"
 Is the usual marriage curse,
 But ours is all "worse" and no "better."

In vain are laws pass'd,
 There's nothing holds you fast,
 Tho' you know, sweet Sovereign, I adore you—

At the smallest hint in life,
 You forsake your lawful wife,
 As other Sovereigns did before you. 30

I flirt with Silver, true—
 But what can ladies do,

² Honourable Frederick R-b-n-s-n.
³ So called, to distinguish her from the
 'Aurea' or Golden Venus.

When disown'd by their natural protectors ?
And as to falsehood, stuff !
I shall soon be false enough,
When I get among those wicked Bank
Directors.'

The Sovereign, smiling on her,
Now swore, upon his honour,
To be henceforth domestic and loyal ;
But, within an hour or two, 40
Why—I sold him to a Jew,
And he's now at No. 10, Palais Royal.

AN EXPOSTULATION TO LORD KING

'Quem das finem, Rex magne, laborum?' Virgil.

1826.

How can you, my Lord, thus delight to torment all
The Peers of the realm about cheapening their corn,¹
When you know, if one hasn't a very high rental,
'Tis hardly worth while being very high born ?

Why bore them so rudely, each night of your life,
On a question, my Lord, there's so much to abhor in ?
A question—like asking one, 'How is your wife ?'—
At once so confounded domestic and foreign.

As to weavers, no matter how poorly they feast ;
But Peers, and such animals, fed up for show, 10
(Like the well-physick'd elephant, lately deceas'd,)
Take a wonderful quantum of cramming, you know.

You might see, my dear Baron, how bor'd and distress
Were their high noble hearts by your merciless tale,
When the force of the agony wrung even a jest
From the frugal Scotch wit of my Lord L-d-d-le !²

Bright peer ! to whom Nature and Berwickshire gave
A humour, endow'd with effects so provoking,
That, when the whole House looks unusually grave,
You may always conclude that Lord L-d-d-le's joking ! 20

And then, those unfortunate weavers of Perth—
Not to know the vast difference Providence dooms
Between weavers of Perth and Peers of high birth,
'Twixt those who have heir-looms, and those who've but looms !

'To talk now of starving !'—as great Ath—l said—³
(And the nobles all cheer'd, and the bishops all wonder'd,)
'When, some years ago, he and others had fed
Of these same hungry devils about fifteen hundred !'

It follows from hence—and the Duke's very words
Should be publish'd wherever poor rogues of this craft are— 30
That weavers, once rescued from starving by Lords,
Are bound to be starved by said Lords ever after.

¹ See the proceedings of the Lords, Wednesday, March 1, 1826, when Lord King was severely reproved by several of the noble Peers, for making so many speeches against the Corn Laws.

² This noble Earl said, that 'when he heard the petition came from ladies' boot and shoemakers, he thought it must be against the

'corns' which they inflicted on the fair sex.'

³ The Duke of Athol said, that 'at a former period, when these weavers were in great distress, the landed interest of Perth had supported 1500 of them. It was a poor return for these very men now to petition against the persons who had fed them.'

When Rome was uproarious, her knowing patricians
 Made 'Bread and the Circus' a cure for each row;
 But not so the plan of our noble physicians,
 'No Bread and the Tread-mill's' the regimen now.

So cease, my dear Baron of Ockham, your prose,
 As I shall my poetry—neither convinces;
 And all we have spoken and written but shows,
 When you tread on a nobleman's corn,¹ how he winces.

THE SINKING FUND CRIED

'Now what, we ask, is become of this Sinking Fund—these eight millions of surplus above expenditure, which were to reduce the interest of the national debt by the amount of four hundred thousand pounds annually? Where, indeed, is the Sinking Fund itself?'—The Times.

TAKE your bell, take your bell,
 Good Crier, and tell
 To the Bulls and the Bears, till their ears are stunn'd,
 That, lost or stolen,
 Or fall'n through a hole in
 The Treasury floor, is the Sinking Fund!

O yes! O yes!
 Can any body guess
 What the deuce has become of this
 Treasury wonder?
 It has Pitt's name on't, 10
 All brass, in the front,
 And R—b—ns—n's, scrawl'd with a goose-quill, under.

Folks well knew what
 Would soon be its lot,
 When Frederick and Jenky set hobnobbing,²
 And said to each other,
 'Suppose, dear brother,
 We make this funny old Fund worth robbing.'

We are come, alas!
 To a very pretty pass— 20
 Eight Hundred Millions of score, to pay,
 With but Five in the till,
 To discharge the bill,
 And even that Five, too, whipp'd away!

Stop thief! stop thief!—
 From the Sub to the Chief,
 These Gemmen of Finance are plundering cattle—
 Call the watch—call Brougham,
 Tell Joseph Hume,
 That best of Charleys, to spring his rattle. 30

Whoever will bring
 This aforesaid thing
 To the well-known house of Robinson and Jenkin,
 Shall be paid, with thanks,
 In the notes of banks,
 Whose Funds have all learn'd 'the Art of Sinking.'

O yes! O yes!
 Can any body guess
 What the devil has become of this
 Treasury wonder?
 It has Pitt's name on't, 40
 All brass, in the front,
 And R—b—ns—n's, scrawl'd with a
 goose-quill, under.

ODE TO THE GODDESS CERES

BY SIR TH—M—S L—TH—E

'Legiferae Cereri Phoeboque.' Virgil.

DEAR Goddess of Corn, whom the ancients, we know,
 (Among other odd whims of those comical bodies,)
 Adorn'd with somniferous poppies, to show
 Thou wert always a true Country-gentleman's Goddess.

² In 1824, when the Sinking Fund was raised by the imposition of new taxes to the sum of five millions.

Behold, in his best shooting-jacket, before thee,
 An eloquent 'Squire, who most humbly beseeches,
 Great Queen of Mark-lane (if the thing doesn't bore thee),
 Thou'lt read o'er the last of his—never-last speeches.

Ah! Ceres, thou know'st not the slander and scorn
 Now heap'd upon England's 'Squirearchy, so boasted; 10
 Improving on Hunt,¹ 'tis no longer the Corn,
 'Tis the growers of Corn that are now, alas! roasted.

In speeches, in books, in all shapes they attack us—
 Reviewers, economists—fellows, no doubt,
 That you, my dear Ceres, and Venus, and Bacchus,
 And Gods of high fashion know little about.

There's B—nth—m, whose English is all his own making,—
 Who thinks just as little of settling a nation
 As he would of smoking his pipe, or of taking (What he, himself, calls) his 'post-prandial vibration.' ² 20

There are two Mr. M——lls, too, whom those that love reading
 Through all that's unreadable, call very clever;—
 And, whereas M——ll Senior makes war on good breeding,
 M——ll Junior makes war on all breeding whatever!

In short, my dear Goddess, Old England's divided Between ultra blockheads and superfine sages;—
 With which of these classes we, landlords, have sided
 Thou'lt find in my Speech, if thou'lt read a few pages.

For therein I've prov'd, to my own satisfaction,
 And that of all 'Squires I've the honour of meeting, 30
 That 'tis the most senseless and foul-mouth'd detraction
 To say that poor people are fond of cheap eating.

On the contrary, such the 'chaste notions' ³ of food
 That dwell in each pale manufacturer's heart,
 They would scorn any law, be it ever so good,
 That would make thee, dear Goddess, less dear than thou art!

And, oh! for Monopoly what a blest day,
 When the Land and the Silk ⁴ shall, in fond combination,
 (Like Sulky and Silky, that pair in the play,⁵)
 Cry out, with one voice, for High Rents and Starvation! 40

Long life to the Minister!—no matter who,
 Or how dull he may be, if, with dignified spirit, he Keeps the ports shut—and the people's mouths too,—
 We shall all have a long run of Freddy's prosperity.

¹ A sort of 'breakfast-powder,' composed of roasted corn, was about this time introduced by Mr. Hunt, as a substitute for coffee.

² The venerable Jeremy's phrase for his after-dinner walk.

³ A phrase in one of Sir T—m—s's last speeches.

⁴ Great efforts were, at that time, making for the exclusion of foreign silk.

⁵ 'Road to Ruin.'

And, as for myself, who've, like Hannibal, sworn
To hate the whole crew who would take our rents from us,
Had England but One to stand by thee, Dear Corn,
That last, honest Uni-Corn¹ would be Sir Th—m—s!

A HYMN OF WELCOME AFTER THE RECESS

'Animas sapientiores fieri quiescendo.'

AND now—cross-buns and pancakes
o'er—
Hail, Lords and Gentlemen, once more!
Thrice hail and welcome, Houses
Twain!

The short eclipse of April-Day
Having (God grant it!) pass'd away,
Collective Wisdom, shine again!

Come, Ayes and Noes, through thick and thin,—

With Paddy H—lmes for whipper-in,— Whate'er the job, prepar'd to back
it;

Come, voters of Supplies—bestowers of
Of jackets upon trumpet-blowers,
At eighty mortal pounds the jacket!²

Come—free, at length, from Joint-Stock cares—

Ye Senators of many Shares,
Whose dreams of premium knew no
boundary;

So fond of aught like Company,
That you would even have taken tea
(Had you been ask'd) with Mr.
Goundry.³

Come, matchless country-gentlemen;

Come, wise Sir Thomas—wisest then, 20
When creeds and corn-laws are debated;

Come, rival even the Harlot Red,
And show how wholly into bread

A 'Squire is transubstantiated.

Come, L—derd—e, and tell the world,
That—surely as thy scratch is curl'd,
As never scratch was curl'd before—Cheap eating does more harm than good,

And working-people, spoil'd by food,
The less they eat, will work the
more. 30

Come, G—lb—rn, with thy glib defence

(Which thou'dst have made for Peter's Pence)

Of Church-Rates, worthy of a halter;
Two pipes of port (old port, 'twas
said

By honest Newport⁴) bought and paid
By Papists for the Orange Altar!⁵

Come, H—rt—n, with thy plan, so merry,

For peopling Canada from Kerry—
Not so much rendering Ireland quiet,
As grafting on the dull Canadians 40
That liveliest of earth's contagions,
The bull-pock of Hibernian riot!

Come all, in short, ye wondrous men

Of wit and wisdom, come again;

Though short your absence, all deplore it—

Oh, come and show, whate'er men
say,

That you can, after April-Day,

Be just as—sapid as before it.

¹ This is meant not so much for a pun, as in allusion to the natural history of the Unicorn, which is supposed to be something between the Bos and the Asinus, and, as Rees's Cyclopaedia assures us, has a particular liking for every thing 'chaste.'

² An item of expense which Mr. Hume in vain endeavoured to get rid of:—trumpeters, it appears, like the men of All-Souls, must be 'bene vestiti.'

³ The gentleman, lately before the public, who kept his Joint-Stock Tea Company all to himself, singing 'Te solo adoro.'

⁴ Sir John Newport.

⁵ This charge of two pipes of port for the sacramental wine is a precious specimen of the sort of rates levied upon their Catholic fellow-parishioners by the Irish Protestants.

'The thirst that from the soul doth rise
Doth ask a drink divine.'

MEMORABILIA OF LAST WEEK

MONDAY, MARCH 13, 1826

THE Budget—quite charming and witty—no hearing,
 For plaudits and laughs, the good things that were in it ;—
 Great comfort to find, though the Speech isn't cheering,
 That all its gay auditors were, every minute.

What, still more prosperity !—mercy upon us,
 ' This boy'll be the death of me '—oft as, already,
 Such smooth Budgeteers have genteelly undone us,
 For Ruin made easy there's no one like Freddy.

TUESDAY

Much grave apprehension express'd by the Peers,
 Lest—calling to life the old Peachums and Lockitts—
 The large stock of gold we're to have in three years,
 Should all find its way into highwaymen's pockets !¹

WEDNESDAY

Little doing—for sacred, oh Wednesday, thou art
 To the seven-o'-clock joys of full many a table—
 When the Members all meet, to make much of that part,
 With which they so rashly fell out, in the Fable.

It appear'd, though, to-night, that—as churchwardens, yearly.
 Eat up a small baby—those cormorant sinners,
 The Bankrupt-Commissioners, bolt very nearly
 A moderate-siz'd bankrupt, tout chaud, for their dinners !²
Nota bene—a rumour to-day, in the City,
 ' Mr. R—b—ns—n just has resign'd '—what a pity !
 The Bulls and the Bears all fell a sobbing,
 When they heard of the fate of poor Cock Robin ;
 While thus, to the nursery tune, so pretty,
 A murmuring Stock-dove breath'd her ditty :—

' Alas, poor Robin, he crow'd as long
 And as sweet as a prosperous Cock could crow ;
 But his note was small, and the gold-finch's song
 Was a pitch too high for Robin to go.
 Who'll make his shroud ? '

' I,' said the Bank, though he play'd me a prank,
 While I have a rag, poor Rob shall be roll'd in't,
 With many a pound I'll paper him round,
 Like a plump rouleau—without the gold in't.'

¹ ' Another objection to a metallic currency was, that it produced a greater number of highway robberies.'—Debate in the Lords.

ALL IN THE FAMILY WAY

A NEW PASTORAL BALLAD

(SUNG IN THE CHARACTER OF BRITANNIA.)

'The Public Debt is due from ourselves to ourselves, and resolves itself into a Family Account.'—Sir Robert Peel's Letter.

Tune—My banks are all furnish'd with bees.

My banks are all furnish'd with rags,
So thick, even Freddy can't thin 'em;
I've torn up my old money-bags,
Having little or nought to put in 'em.
My tradesmen are smashing by dozens,
But this is all nothing, they say;
For bankrupts, since Adam, are cousins,
So, it's all in the family way.

My Debt not a penny takes from me,
As sages the matter explain;— 10
Bob owes it to Tom, and then Tommy
Just owes it to Bob back again.
Since all have thus taken to owing,
There's nobody left that can pay;
And this is the way to keep going,—
All quite in the family way.

My senators vote away millions,
To put in Prosperity's budget;
And though it were billions or trillions,
The generous rogues wouldn't grudge
it. 20

'Tis all but a family hop,
'Twas Pitt began dancing the hay;
Hands round!—why the deuce should we stop?

'Tis all in the family way.

My labourers used to eat mutton,
As any great man of the State does;
And now the poor devils are put on Small rations of tea and potatoes.
But cheer up, John, Sawney, and Paddy,
The King is your father, they say; 30
So, ev'n if you starve for your Daddy,
'Tis all in the family way.

My rich manufacturers tumble,
My poor ones have nothing to chew;
And, even if themselves do not grumble,
Their stomachs undoubtedly do.
But coolly to fast en famille,
Is as good for the soul as to pray;
And famine itself is genteel,
When one starves in a family way. 40

I have found out a secret for Freddy,
A secret for next Budget day;
Though, perhaps, he may know it
already,
As he, too, 's a sage in his way.
When next for the Treasury scene he Announces 'the Devil to pay,'
Let him write on the bills, 'Nota bene,
'Tis all in the family way.'

BALLAD FOR THE CAMBRIDGE
ELECTION

'I authorized my Committee to take the step which they did, of proposing a fair comparison of strength, upon the understanding that whichever of the two should prove to be the weakest, should give way to the other.'—Extract from Mr. W. J. B—kes's Letter to Mr. G—lb—n.

B—kes is weak, and G—lb—n too,
No one e'er the fact denied;—
Which is 'weakest' of the two,
Cambridge can alone decide.
Choose between them, Cambridge, pray,
Which is weakest, Cambridge, say.

G—lb—n of the Pope afraid is
B—kes, as much afraid as he;
Never yet did two old ladies
On this point so well agree.
Choose between them, Cambridge, pray,
Which is weakest, Cambridge, say.

Each a different mode pursues,
Each the same conclusion reaches;
B—kes is foolish in Reviews,
G—lb—n, foolish in his speeches.
Choose between them, Cambridge, pray,
Which is weakest, Cambridge, say.

Each a different foe doth damn,
When his own affairs have gone ill;
B—kes he dammeth Buckingham,
G—lb—n dammeth Dan O'Connell.
Choose between them, Cambridge, pray,
Which is weakest, Cambridge, say.

Once, we know, a horse's neigh
Fix'd the election to a throne,
So, which ever first shall bray,
Choose him, Cambridge, for thy own.
Choose him, choose him by his bray,
Thus elect him, Cambridge, pray,

June, 1826.

MR. ROGER DODSWORTH

1826.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE TIMES

Sir,—Having just heard of the wonderful resurrection of Mr. Roger Dodsworth from under an avalanche, where he had remained, bien frappé, it seems, for the last 166 years, I hasten to impart to you a few reflections on the subject.—Yours, &c. LAUDATOR TEMPORIS ACTI.

WHAT a lucky turn up!—just as Eld—n's withdrawing,
To find thus a gentleman, froz'n in the year
Sixteen hundred and sixty, who only wants thawing,
To serve for our times quite as well as the Peer ;—

To bring thus to light, not the Wisdom alone
Of our Ancestors, such as 'tis found on our shelves,
But, in perfect condition, full-wigg'd and full-grown,
To shovel up one of those wise bucks themselves !

Oh thaw Mr. Dodsworth, and send him safe home—
Let him learn nothing useful or new on the way ;
With his wisdom kept snug from the light let him come,
And our Tories will hail him with 'Hear!' and 'Hurra!'

What a God-send to them!—a good, obsolete man,
Who has never of Locke or Voltaire been a reader ;—
Oh thaw Mr. Dodsworth as fast as you can,
And the L—nsd—les and H—rtf—rds shall choose him for leader.

Yes, sleeper of ages, thou shalt be their chosen ;
And deeply with thee will they sorrow, good men,
To think that all Europe has, since thou wert frozen,
So alter'd, thou hardly wilt know it again.

And Eld—n will weep o'er each sad innovation
Such oceans of tears, thou wilt fancy that he Has been also laid up in a long congelation,
And is only now thawing, dear Roger, like thee.

COPY OF AN INTERCEPTED DESPATCH

FROM HIS EXCELLENCY DON STREPITOSO DIABOLO, ENVOY EXTRAORDINARY TO HIS SATANIC MAJESTY

St. James's Street, July 1, 1826.

GREAT Sir, having just had the good luck to catch
An official young Demon, preparing to go,
Ready booted and spurr'd, with a black-leg despatch
From the Hell here, at Cr—ckf—rd's to our Hell, below—

I write these few lines to your Highness Satanic,
To say that, first having obey'd your directions,
And done all the mischief I could in 'the Panic,'
My next special care was to help the Elections.

Well knowing how dear were those times to thy soul,
When every good Christian tormented his brother,
And caus'd, in thy realm, such a saving of coal,
From all coming down, ready grill'd by each other ;

Rememb'ring, besides, how it pain'd thee to part
 With the Old Penal Code—that chef-d'œuvre of Law,
 In which (though to own it too modest thou art)
 We could plainly perceive the fine touch of thy claw;

I thought, as we ne'er can those good times revive,
 (Though Eld—n, with help from your Highness would try,)
 'Twould still keep a taste for Hell's music alive,
 Could we get up a thund'ring No-Popery cry;—

20

That yell which, when chorus'd by laics and clerics,
 So like is to ours, in its spirit and tone,
 That I often nigh laugh myself into hysterics,
 To think that Religion should make it her own.

So, having sent down for the' original notes
 Of the chorus, as sung by your Majesty's choir,
 With a few pints of lava, to gargle the throats
 Of myself and some others, who sing it 'with fire,'¹

Thought I, 'if the Marseillois Hymn could command
 Such audience, though yell'd by a Sans-culotte crew,
 What wonders shall we do, who've men in our band,
 That not only wear breeches, but petticoats too.'

30

Such then were my hopes; but, with sorrow, your Highness,
 I'm forc'd to confess—be the cause what it will,
 Whether fewness of voices, or hoarseness, or shyness,—
 Our Beelzebub chorus has gone off but ill.

The truth is, no placeman now knows his right key
 The Treasury pitch-pipe of late is so various;
 And certain base voices, that look'd for a fee
 At the York music-meeting, now think it precarious.

40

Even some of our Reverends might have been warmer,— Though one or two capital roarers we've had;
 Doctor Wise² is, for instance, a charming performer,
 And Huntingdon Maberley's yell was not bad!

Altogether, however, the thing was not hearty;—
 Even Eld—n allows we got on but so so;
 And when next we attempt a No-Popery party,
 We must, please your Highness, recruit from below.

But, hark, the young Black-leg is cracking his whip—
 Excuse me, Great Sir—there's no time to be civil;—
 The next opportunity shan't be let slip,
 But, till then,

50

I'm, in haste, your most dutiful

DEVIL.

July, 1828.

THE MILLENNIUM

SUGGESTED BY THE LATE WORK OF THE REVEREND MR. IRV—NG 'ON PROPHECY

1826.

A MILLENNIUM at hand !—I'm delighted to hear it—
As matters, both public and private, now go,
With multitudes round us all starving, or near it,
A good rich Millennium will come à propos.

Only think, Master Fred, what delight to behold,
Instead of thy bankrupt old City of Rags,
A bran-new Jerusalem, built all of gold,
Sound bullion throughout, from the roof to the flags—

A City, where wine and cheap corn¹ shall abound—
A celestial Cocaigne, on whose buttery shelves
We may swear the best things of this world will be found,
As your Saints seldom fail to take care of themselves !

Thanks, reverend expounder of raptures Elysian,²
Divine Squintifobus, who, plac'd within reach
Of two opposite worlds, by a twist of your vision,
Can cast, at the same time, a sly look at each ;—

Thanks, thanks for the hope thou affordest, that we May, ev'n in our own times, a Jubilee share,
Which so long has been promis'd by prophets like thee,
And so often postpon'd, we began to despair.

There was Whiston,³ who learnedly took Prince Eugene
For the man who must bring the Millennium about ;
There's Faber, whose pious productions have been
All belied, ere his book's first edition was out ;—

There was Counsellor Dobbs, too, an Irish M.P.,
Who discours'd on the subject with signal éclat,
And, each day of his life, sat expecting to see
A Millennium break out in the town of Armagh !⁴

There was also—but why should I burden my lay
With your Brotheresses, Southcotes, and names less deserving,
When all past Millenniums henceforth must give way
To the last new Millennium of Orator Irv—ng.

Go on, mighty man,—doom them all to the shelf,—
And when next thou with Prophecy troublest thy sconce,
Oh forget not, I pray thee, to prove that thyself
Art the Beast (Chapter iv) that sees nine ways at once.

¹ 'A measure of wheat for a penny, and three measures of barley for a penny.'—Rev. vi.

² See the oration of this reverend gentleman, where he describes the connubial joys of Paradise, and paints the angels hovering round 'each happy fair.'

³ When Whiston presented to Prince Eugene the Essay in which he attempted to connect his victories over the Turks with Revelation, the Prince is said to have replied, that 'he was not aware he had ever had the honour of being known to St. John.'

⁴ Mr. Dobbs was a member of the Irish Parliament, and, on all other subjects but the Millennium, a very sensible person: he chose Armagh as the scene of his Millennium, on account of the name Armageddon, mentioned in Revelation.

THE THREE DOCTORS

Doctoribus laetamur tribus.

1828.

THOUGH many great Doctors there be,
There are three that all Doctors out-
top,

Doctor Eady, that famous M.D.,
Doctor S—th—y, and dear Doctor
Slop.¹

The purger—the proser—the bard—
All quacks in a different style ;

Doctor S—th—y writes books by the yard,

Doctor Eady writes puffs by the mile!²

Doctor Slop, in no merit outdone
By his scribbling or physicking
brother, 10

Can dose us with stuff like the one,
Ay, and dose us with stuff like the other.

Doctor Eady good company keeps
With 'No Popery' scribes on the walls;
Doctor S—th—y as gloriously sleeps
With 'No Popery' scribes, on the stalls.

Doctor Slop, upon subjects divine,
Such bedlamite slaver lets drop,
That, if Eady should take the mad line,
He'll be sure of a patient in Slop. 20

Seven millions of Papists, no less,
Doctor S—th—y attacks, like a Turk;³

Doctor Eady, less bold, I confess,
Attacks but his maid-of-all-work.⁴

Doctor S—th—y, for his grand attack,
Both a laureate and pensioner is ;
While poor Doctor Eady, alack,
Has been had up to Bow-street, for his!

And truly, the law does so blunder,
That, though little blood has been spilt, he 30

May probably suffer as, under
The Chalking Act, known to be guilty.

¹ The editor of the Morning Herald, so nicknamed.

² Alluding to the display of this doctor's name, in chalk, on all the walls round the metropolis.

³ This seraphic doctor, in the preface to his last work (Vindiciæ Ecclesiæ Anglicanæ), is pleased to anathematize not only all Catholics, but all advocates of Catholics :—'They have for their immediate allies (he says) every faction that is banded against the State, every demagogue, every irreligious and seditious journalist, every open and every insidious enemy to Monarchy and to Christianity.'

⁴ See the late accounts in the newspapers of the appearance of this gentleman at one of the Police-offices, in consequence of an alleged assault on his 'maid-of-all-work.'

So much for the merits sublime
(With whose catalogue ne'er should I stop)
Of the three greatest lights of our time,
Doctor Eady, and S—th—y, and Slop!

Should you ask me, to which of the three Great Doctors the preference should
fall,

As a matter of course, I agree
Doctor Eady must go to the wall. 40
But as S—th—y with laurels is crown'd,
And Slop with a wig and a tail is,
Let Eady's bright temples be bound
With a swingeing 'Corona Muralis !'⁵

EPITAPH ON A TUFT-HUNTER

LAMENT, lament, Sir Isaac Heard,
Put mourning round thy page,
Debrett,

For here lies one, who ne'er preferr'd
A Viscount to a Marquis yet.

Beside him place the God of Wit,
Before him Beauty's rosiest girls,
Apollo for a star he'd quit,
And Love's own sister for an Earl's.

Did niggard fate no peers afford,
He took, of course, to peers' relations ;
And, rather than not sport a Lord,
Put up with even the last creations.

Even Irish names, could he but tag 'em
With 'Lord' and 'Duke,' were sweet to call ;

And, at a pinch, Lord Ballyraggum
Was better than no Lord at all.

Heaven grant him now some noble
nook,

For, rest his soul ! he'd rather be
Genteelly damn'd beside a Duke,
Than sav'd in vulgar company.

⁵ A crown granted as a reward among the Romans to persons who performed any extraordinary exploits upon walls, such as scaling them, battering them, &c.—No doubt, writing them, to the extent Dr. Eady does, would equally establish a claim to the honour.

ODE TO A HAT

—'altum
Aedificat caput.' Juvenal.

1826.

HAIL, reverend Hat!—sublime 'mid all
The minor felts that round thee
grovel;—

Thou, that the Gods 'a Delta' call,
While meaner mortals call thee 'shovel.'

When on thy shape (like pyramid,
Cut horizontally in two)¹
I raptur'd gaze, what dreams, unbid,
Of stalls and mitres bless my view!

That brim of brims, so sleekly good—
Not flapp'd, like dull Wesleyans', down,
But looking (as all churchmen's should)
Devoutly upward—towards the crown.

Gods! when I gaze upon that brim,
So redolent of Church all over,
What swarms of Tithes, in vision dim,—
Some pig-tail'd, some like cherubim,
With ducklings' wings—around it hover!

Tents of all dead and living things,
That Nature into being brings,
From calves and corn to chitterlings. 20

Say, holy Hat, that hast, of cocks,
The very cock most orthodox,
To which, of all the well-fed throng
Of Zion,² joy'st thou to belong?
Thou'rt not Sir Harcourt Lee's—no, no—

For hats grow like the heads that wear
'em;

And hats, on heads like his, would grow
Particularly harum-scarum.

Who knows but thou may'st deck the pate
Of that fam'd Doctor Ad—mth—te, 30
(The reverend rat, whom we saw stand
On his hind-legs in Westmoreland,
Who chang'd so quick from blue to yellow,
And would from yellow back to blue,
And back again, convenient fellow,
If 'twere his interest so to do.

Or, haply, smartest of triangles,
Thou art the hat of Doctor Ow—n;
The hat that, to his vestry wrangles,
That venerable priest doth go in,— 40
And, then and there, amid the stare
Of all St. Olave's, takes the chair,
And quotes, with phiz right orthodox,
The example of his reverend brothers,
To prove that priests all fleece their flocks,
And he must fleece as well as others.

Blest Hat! (whoe'er thy lord may be)
Thus low I take off mine to thee,
The homage of a layman's castor,
To the spruce delta of his pastor. 50
Oh mayst thou be, as thou proceedest,
Still smarter cock'd, still brush'd the
brighter,
Till, bowing all the way, thou ledest
Thy sleek possessor to a mitre!

NEWS FOR COUNTRY COUSINS

1826.

DEAR COZ, as I know neither you nor Miss Draper,
When Parliament's up, ever take in a paper,
But trust for your news to such stray odds and ends
As you chance to pick up from political friends—
Being one of this well-inform'd class, I sit down
To transmit you the last newest news that's in town.

As to Greece and Lord Cochrane, things couldn't look better—

His Lordship (who promises now to fight faster)
Has just taken Rhodes, and despatch'd off a letter
To Daniel O'Connell, to make him Grand Master;
Engaging to change the old name, if he can,
From the Knights of St. John to the Knights of St. Dan;—
Or, if Dan should prefer (as a still better whim)
Being made the Colossus, 'tis all one to him.

10

² Archbishop Magee affectionately calls the Church Establishment of Ireland 'the little Zion.'

From Russia the last accounts are that the Czar—
 Most generous and kind, as all sovereigns are,
 And whose first princely act (as you know, I suppose)
 Was to give away all his late brother's old clothes—¹
 Is now busy collecting, with brotherly care,
 The late Emperor's nightcaps, and thinks of bestowing 20
 One nightcap apiece (if he has them to spare)
 On all the distinguish'd old ladies now going.
 (While I write, an arrival from Riga—the 'Brothers'— Having nightcaps on board for Lord Eld—n and others.)

Last advices from India—Sir Archy, 'tis thought,
 Was near catching a Tartar (the first ever caught
 In N. Lat. 21)—and his Highness Burmese,
 Being very hard press'd to shell out the rupees,
 And not having rhino sufficient, they say, meant,
 To pawn his august Golden Foot² for the payment. 30
 (How lucky for monarchs, that thus, when they choose,
 Can establish a running account with the Jews!)
 The security being what Rothschild calls 'goot,'
 A loan will be shortly, of course, set on foot;
 The parties are Rothschild, A. Baring and Co.,
 With three other great pawnbrokers: each takes a toe,
 And engages (lest Gold-foot should give us leg-bail,
 As he did once before) to pay down on the nail.

This is all for the present—what vile pens and paper!
 Yours truly, dear Cousin—best love to Miss Draper. 40

A VISION

BY THE AUTHOR OF CHRISTABEL

'Up!' said the Spirit, and, ere I could pray
 One hasty orison, whirl'd me away
 To a Limbo, lying—I wist not where—
 Above or below, in earth or air;
 For it glimmer'd o'er with a doubtful light,
 One couldn't say whether 'twas day or night;
 And 'twas crost by many a mazy track,
 One didn't know how to get on or back;
 And I felt like a needle that's going astray
 (With its one eye out) through a bundle of hay;
 When the Spirit he grinn'd, and whisper'd me, 10
 'Thou'rt now in the Court of Chancery!'

Around me flitted unnumber'd swarms
 Of shapeless, bodiless, tailless forms;
 (Like bottled-up babes, that grace the room
 Of that worthy knight, Sir Everard Home)—
 All of them, things half-kill'd in rearing;
 Some were lame—some wanted hearing;

¹ A distribution was made of the Emperor Alexander's military wardrobe by his successor. | ² This potentate styles himself the Monarch of the Golden Foot.

Some had through half a century run,
 Though they hadn't a leg to stand upon. 20
 Others, more merry, as just beginning,
 Around on a point of law were spinning;
 Or balanc'd aloft, 'twixt Bill and Answer,
 Lead at each end, like a tight-rope dancer.
 Some were so cross, that nothing could please 'em ;—
 Some gulp'd down affidavits to ease 'em ;—
 All were in motion, yet never a one,
 Let it move as it might, could ever move on.
 'These,' said the Spirit, 'you plainly see,
 Are what they call suits in Chancery !' 30

I heard a loud screaming of old and young,
 Like a chorus by fifty Vellutis sung ;
 Or an Irish Dump ('the words by Moore')
 At an amateur concert scream'd in score ;
 So harsh on my ear that wailing fell
 Of the wretches who in this Limbo dwell !
 It seem'd like the dismal symphony
 Of the shapes Aeneas in hell did see ;
 Or those frogs, whose legs a barbarous cook
 Cut off, and left the frogs in the brook, 40
 To cry all night, till life's last dregs,
 'Give us our legs !—give us our legs !'
 Touch'd with the sad and sorrowful scene,
 I ask'd what all this yell might mean,
 When the Spirit replied, with a grin of glee,
 "'Tis the cry of the Suitors in Chancery !'

I look'd, and I saw a wizard rise,¹
 With a wig like a cloud before men's eyes.
 In his aged hand he held a wand,
 Wherewith he beckon'd his embryo band, 50
 And they mov'd and mov'd, as he wav'd it o'er,
 But they never got on one inch the more.
 And still they kept limping to and fro,
 Like Ariels round old Prospero—
 Saying, 'Dear Master, let us go,'
 But still old Prospero answer'd 'No.'
 And I heard, the while, that wizard elf
 Muttering, muttering spells to himself,
 While o'er as many old papers he turn'd,
 As Hume e'er mov'd for, or Omar burn'd. 60
 He talk'd of his virtue—'though some, less nice,
 (He own'd with a sigh) prefer'd his Vice'—
 And he said, 'I think'—'I doubt'—'I hope,'
 Call'd God to witness, and damn'd the Pope ;
 With many more sleights of tongue and hand
 I couldn't, for the soul of me, understand.
 Amaz'd and pos'd, I was just about
 To ask his name, when the screams without,

¹ The Lord Chancellor Eld—n.

The merciless clack of the imps within,
 And that conjuror's mutterings, made such a din,
 That, startled, I woke—leap'd up in my bed—
 Found the Spirit, the imps, and the conjuror fled,
 And bless'd my stars, right pleas'd to see,
 That I wasn't, as yet, in Chancery.

THE PETITION OF THE ORANGEMEN OF IRELAND

1826.

To the people of England, the humble Petition
 Of Ireland's disconsolate Orangemen, showing—
 That sad, very sad, is our present condition ;—
 Our jobbing all gone, and our noble selves going ;—
 That, forming one seventh, within a few fractions,
 Of Ireland's seven millions of hot heads and hearts,
 We hold it the basest of all base transactions
 To keep us from murd'ring the other six parts ;—
 That, as to laws made for the good of the many,
 We humbly suggest there is nothing less true ;
 As all human laws (and our own, more than any,)
 Are made by and for a particular few ;—
 That much it delights every true Orange brother,
 To see you, in England, such ardour evince,
 In discussing which sect most tormented the other,
 And burn'd with most gusto, some hundred years since ;—
 That we love to behold, while old England grows faint,
 Messrs. Southey and Butler nigh coming to blows,
 To decide whether Dunstan, that strong-bodied Saint,
 Ever truly and really pull'd the Devil's nose ;
 Whether t'other Saint, Dominic, burnt the Devil's paw—
 Whether Edwy intrigued with Elgiva's old mother—¹
 And many such points, from which Southey can draw Conclusions most apt for our hating each other.
 That 'tis very well known this devout Irish nation
 Has now, for some ages, gone happily on,
 Believing in two kinds of Substantiation,
 One party in Trans and the other in Con ; ²
 That we, your petitioning Cons, have, in right
 Of the said monosyllable, ravag'd the lands,
 And embezzled the goods, and annoy'd, day and night,
 Both the bodies and souls of the sticklers for Trans ;—
 That we trust to Peel, Eldon, and other such sages,
 For keeping us still in the same state of mind ;
 Pretty much as the world used to be in those ages,
 When still smaller syllables madden'd mankind ;—

10

30

¹ To such important discussions as these the greater part of Dr. Southey's Vindictas Ecclesiae Anglicanae is devoted.

² Consubstantiation—the true Reformed belief ; at least, the belief of Luther, and, as Mosheim asserts, of Melancthon also.

When the words ex and *per*¹ serv'd as well, to annoy
 One's neighbours and friends with, as con and trans now;
 And Christians, like S—th—y, who stickled for oi,
 Cut the throats of all Christians who stickled for ou.²

40

That, relying on England, whose kindness already
 So often has help'd us to play this game o'er,
 We have got our red coats and our carabines ready,
 And wait but the word to show sport, as before.

That, as to the expence—the few millions, or so,
 Which for all such diversions John Bull has to pay—
 'Tis, at least, a great comfort to John Bull to know,
 That to Orangemen's pockets 'twill all find its way.
 For which your petitioners ever will pray,

&c. &c. &c. &c. &c.

COTTON AND CORN

A DIALOGUE

SAID Cotton to Corn, t'other day,
 As they met and exchange'd a salute—
 (Squire Corn in his carriage so gay, Poor Cotton, half famish'd, on foot):

'Great Squire, if it isn't uncivil
 To hint at starvation before you,
 Look down on a poor hungry devil,
 And give him some bread, I implore
 you!'

Quoth Corn then, in answer to Cotton,
 Perceiving he meant to make free—
 'Low fellow, you've surely forgotten
 The distance between you and me!

To expect that we, Peers of high birth,
 Should waste our illustrious acres,
 For no other purpose on earth
 Than to fatten curst calico-makers!—

That Bishops to bobbins should bend—
 Should stoop from their Bench's sublimity,

Great dealers in lawn, to befriend
 Such contemptible dealers in dimity!

'No—vile Manufacture! ne'er harbour
 A hope to be fed at our boards;—
 Base offspring of Arkwright the barber,
 What claim canst thou have upon Lords?

'No—thanks to the taxes and debt,
 And the triumph of paper o'er guineas,
 Our race of Lord Jemmys, as yet,
 May defy your whole rabble of Jennys!'

So saying—whip, crack, and away
 Went Corn in his chaise through the throng,

So headlong, I heard them all say,
 'Squire Corn would be down, before
 long.'

THE CANONIZATION OF SAINT B—TT—RW—RTH

'A Christian of the best edition.' Rabelais.

CANONIZE him!—yea, verily, we'll canonize him;
 Though Cant is his hobby, and meddling his bliss,
 Though sages may pity, and wits may despise him,
 He'll ne'er make a bit the worse Saint for all this.

¹ When John of Ragusa went to Constantinople (at the time this dispute between 'ex' and 'per' was going on), he found the Turks, we are told, 'laughing at the Christians for being divided by two such insignificant particles.'

² The Arian controversy.—Before that time, says Hooker, 'in order to be a sound believing Christian, men were not curious what syllables or particles of speech they used.'

Descend, all ye Spirits, that ever yet spread
 The dominion of Humbug o'er land and o'er sea,
 Descend on our B—tt—rw—rth's biblical head,
 Thrice-Great, Biblioplist, Saint, and M.P.

Come, shade of Joanna, come down from thy sphere,
 And bring little Shiloh—if 't isn't too far— 10
 Such a sight will to B—tt—rw—rth's bosom be dear,
His conceptions and thine being much on a par.

Nor blush, Saint Joanna, once more to behold
 A world thou hast honour'd by cheating so many;
 Thou'lt find still among us one Personage old,
 Who also by tricks and the *Seals*¹ makes a penny.

Thou, too, of the Shakers, divine Mother Lee!²
 Thy smiles to beatified B—tt—rw—rth deign;
 Two 'lights of the Gentiles' are thou, Anne, and he,
One hallowing Fleet Street, and t'other Toad Lane!³ 20

The Heathen, we know, made their Gods out of wood,
 And Saints may be fram'd of as handy materials;—
 Old women and B—tt—rw—rths make just as good
 As any the Pope ever book'd as Ethereals.

Stand forth, Man of Bibles!—not Mahomet's pigeon,
 When, perch'd on the Koran, he dropp'd there, they say,
 Strong marks of his faith, ever shed o'er religion
 Such glory as B—tt—rw—rth sheds every day.

Great Galen of souls, with what vigour he crams
 Down Erin's idolatrous throats, till they crack again, 30
 Bolus on bolus, good man!—and then damns
 Both their stomachs and souls, if they dare cast them back again.

How well might his shop—as a type representing
 The creed of himself and his sanctified clan,
 On its counter exhibit 'the Art of Tormenting,'
 Bound neatly, and letter'd 'Whole Duty of Man!'

Canonize him!—by Judas, we will canonize him;
 For Cant is his hobby, and twaddling his bliss;
 And, though wise men may pity and wits may despise him,
 He'll make but the better shop-saint for all this. 40

Call quickly together the whole tribe of Canters,
 Convoke all the serious Tag-rag of the nation;
 Bring Shakers and Snufflers and Jumpers and Ranters,
 To witness their B—tt—rw—rth's Canonization!

Yea, humbly I've ventur'd his merits to paint,
 Yea, feebly have tried all his gifts to portray,
 And they form a sum-total for making a Saint,
 That the Devil's own Advocate could not gainsay.

¹ A great part of the income of Joanna Southcott arose from the Seals of the Lord's protection which she sold to her followers.

² Mrs. Anne Lee, the 'chosen vessel' of the Shakers, and 'Mother of all the children of regeneration.'

³ Toad Lane, in Manchester, where Mother

Lee was born. In her 'Address to Young Believers,' she says, 'that it is a matter of no importance with them from whence the means of their deliverance come, whether from a stable in Bethlehem, or from Toad Lane, Manchester.'

Jump high, all ye Jumpers, ye Ranters all roar,
 While B—tt—rw—rth's spirit, uprais'd from your eyes, 50
 Like a kite made of foolscap, in glory shall soar,
 With a long tail of rubbish behind, to the skies !

AN INCANTATION

SUNG BY THE BUBBLE SPIRIT

Air.—*Come with me, and we will go
 Where the rocks of coral grow.*

COME with me, and we will blow
 Lots of bubbles, as we go ;
 Bubbles, bright as ever Hope
 Drew from fancy—or from soap ;
 Bright as e'er the South Sea sent
 From its frothy element !
 Come with me, and we will blow
 Lots of bubbles, as we go.
 Mix the lather, Johnny W—lks,
 Thou, who rhym'st so well to bilks ;¹ 10
 Mix the lather—who can be
 Fitter for such task than thee,
 Great M.P. for Sudsbury !

Now the frothy charm is ripe,
 Puffing Peter,² bring thy pipe,—
 Thou, whom ancient Coventry
 Once so dearly lov'd, that she Knew not which to her was sweeter,
 Peeping Tom or Puffing Peter ;—
 Puff the bubbles high in air, 20
 Puff thy best to keep them there.

Bravo, bravo, Peter M—re !
 Now the rainbow humbugs³ soar,
 Glitt'ring all with golden hues,
 Such as haunt the dreams of Jews ;—
 Some, reflecting mines that lie
 Under Chili's glowing sky,
 Some, those virgin pearls that sleep
 Cloister'd in the southern deep ;
 Others, as if lent a ray 30
 From the streaming Milky Way,
 Glist'ning o'er with curds and whey
 From the cows of Alderney.

¹ Strong indications of character may be sometimes traced in the rhymes to names. Marvell thought so, when he wrote

'Sir Edward Sutton,
 The foolish Knight who rhymes to mutton.'

² The member, during a long period, for Coventry.

³ An humble imitation of one of our modern poets, who, in a poem against War, after describing the splendid habiliments of the soldier,

Now's the moment—who shall first
 Catch the bubbles, ere they burst ?
 Run, ye Squires, ye Viscounts, run,
 Br—gd—n, T—ynh—m, P—lm—t—n ;—
 John W—lks junior runs beside ye !
 Take the good the knaves provide ye !⁴
 See, with upturn'd eyes and hands, 40
 Where the Shareman,⁵ Br—gd—n,
 stands,
 Gaping for the froth to fall
 Down his gullet—lye and all.
 See !—

But, hark, my time is out—
 Now, like some great water-spout,
 Scatter'd by the cannon's thunder,
 Burst, ye bubbles, all asunder !

[Here the stage darkens—a discordant crash is heard from the orchestra—the broken bubbles descend in a saponaceous but uncleanly mist over the heads of the Dramatis Personae, and the scene drops, leaving the bubble-hunters—all in the suds.]

A DREAM OF TURTLE

BY SIR W. CURTIS

1826.

'Twas evening time, in the twilight sweet
 I sail'd along, when—whom should I
 meet

But a Turtle journeying o'er the sea,
 'On the service of his Majesty.'

When spying him first through twilight
 dim,

I didn't know what to make of him ;
 But said to myself, as slow he plied
 His fins, and roll'd from side to side
 Conceitedly o'er the watery path—
 'Tis my Lord of St—w—ll taking a bath,

thus apostrophizes him—'thou rainbow ruffian !'

⁴ 'Lovely Thais sits beside thee :

Take the good the Gods provide thee.'

⁵ So called by a sort of Tuscan dulcification of the ch, in the word 'Chairman.'

⁶ We are told that the passport of this grand diplomatic Turtle (sent by the Secretary for Foreign Affairs to a certain noble envoy) described him as 'on his majesty's service.'

— dapibus supremi
 Grata testudo Jovis.

And I hear him now, among the fishes,
Quoting Vatel and Burgersdicius!

But, no—'twas, indeed, a Turtle, wide
And plump as ever these eyes descried;
A Turtle, juicy as ever yet

Glued up the lips of a Baronet!

And much did it grieve my soul to
see

That an animal of such dignity,
Like an absentee abroad should roam,
When he ought to stay and be ate at
home. 20

But now 'a change came o'er my dream,'
Like the magic lantern's shifting slider;—

I look'd, and saw, by the evening
beam,

On the back of that Turtle sat a rider—

A goodly man, with an eye so merry,
I knew 'twas our Foreign Secretary,¹

Who there, at his ease, did sit and smile
Like Waterton on his crocodile;²

Cracking such jokes, at every motion,
As made the Turtle squeak with glee;

And own they gave him a lively notion
Of what his forc'd-meat balls would be.

So, on the Sec. in his glory went, 33
Over that briny element,

Waving his hand, as he took farewell,
With graceful air, and bidding me tell

Inquiring friends that the Turtle and he
Were gone on a foreign embassy—

To soften the heart of a Diplomate,
Who is known to doat upon verdant fat,

And to let admiring Europe see, 41
That calipash and calipee

Are the English forms of Diplomacy.

THE DONKEY AND HIS PANNIERS

A FABLE

—'fessus jam sudat asellus,
Parce illi; vestrum delictum est asinus.' Virgil. Copa.

A DONKEY, whose talent for burdens was wondrous,

So much that you'd swear he rejoic'd in a load,

One day had to jog under panniers so pond'rous,

That—down the poor Donkey fell smack on the road!

His owners and drivers stood round in amaze—

What! Neddy, the patient, the prosperous Neddy,

So easy to drive, through the dirtiest ways,

For every description of job-work so ready!

One driver (whom Ned might have 'hail'd' as a 'brother')¹

Had just been proclaiming his Donkey's renown

For vigour, for spirit, for one thing or other— 10

When, lo, 'mid his praises, the Donkey came down!

But, how to upraise him?—one shouts, t'other whistles,

While Jenky, the Conjurer, wisest of all,

Declar'd that an 'over-production of thistles'—²

(Here Ned gave a stare)—'was the cause of his fall.'

Another wise Solomon cries, as he passes—

'There, let him alone, and the fit will soon cease;

The beast has been fighting with other jack-asses,

And this is his mode of "transition to peace." 20

² Wanderings in South America. 'It was the first and last time (says Mr. Waterton) I was ever on a crocodile's back.'

³ Alluding to an early poem of Mr. Coleridge's, addressed to an Ass, and beginning,

'I hail thee, brother!'

⁴ A certain country gentleman having said in the House, 'that we must return at last to the food of our ancestors,' somebody asked Mr. T. 'what food the gentleman meant?'—'Thistles, I suppose,' answered Mr. T.

Some look'd at his hoofs, and, with learned grimaces,
Pronounc'd that too long without shoes he had gone—
'Let the blacksmith provide him a sound metal basis
(The wise-acres said), and he's sure to jog on.'

Meanwhile, the poor Neddy, in torture and fear,
Lay under his panniers, scarce able to groan;
And—what was still dolefuller—lending an ear
To advisers, whose ears were a match for his own.

At length, a plain rustic, whose wit went so far
As to see others' folly, roar'd out, as he pass'd—
'Quick—off with the panniers, all dolts as ye are,
Or, your prosperous Neddy will soon kick his last !'

ODE TO THE SUBLIME PORTE

1826.

GREAT Sultan, how wise are thy state compositions !
And oh, above all, I admire that Decree,
In which thou command'st, that all she politicians
Shall forthwith be strangled and cast in the sea.

'Tis my fortune to know a lean Benthamite spinster—
A maid, who her faith in old Jeremy puts;
Who talks, with a lisp, of 'the last new Westminster,'
And hopes you're delighted with 'Mill upon Gluts';

Who tells you how clever one Mr. Fun-blank is,
How charming his Articles 'gainst the Nobility;—
And assures you that even a gentleman's rank is,
In Jeremy's school, of no sort of utility.

To see her, ye Gods, a new number perusing—

ART. 1. 'On the Needle's variations,' by Pl—e;¹

ART. 2.—By her fav'rite Fun-blank²—so amusing !

'Dear man ! he makes Poetry quite a Law case.'

ART. 3.—'Upon Fallacies,' Jeremy's own—

(Chief Fallacy being, his hope to find readers);—

ART. 4.—'Upon Honesty,' author unknown;—

ART. 5.—(by the young Mr. M——) 'Hints to Breeders.'

Oh, Sultan, oh, Sultan, though oft for the bag
And the bowstring, like thee, I am tempted to call—
Though drowning's too good for each blue-stocking hag,
I would bag this she Benthamite first of them all !

And, lest she should ever again lift her head
From the watery bottom, her clack to renew—
As a clog, as a sinker, far better than lead,
I would hang round her neck her own darling Review.

CORN AND CATHOLICS

Utrum horum Dirius borum? Incerti Auctoris.

WHAT! still those two infernal questions,
That with our meals, our slumbers
mix—

That spoil our tempers and digestions—
Eternal Corn and Catholics!

Gods! were there ever two such bores?
Nothing else talk'd of night or morn—
Nothing in doors, or out of doors,
But endless Catholics and Corn!

Never was such a brace of pests—
While Ministers, still worse than either, 10
Skill'd but in feathering their nests,
Plague us with both, and settle neither.

So addled in my cranium meet
Popery and Corn, that oft I doubt,
Whether, this year, 'twas bonded
Wheat,
Or bonded Papists, they let out.

Here, landlords, here, polemics nail you,
Arm'd with all rubbish they can rake
up;

Prices and Texts at once assail you—
From Daniel these, and those from Jacob.¹ 20

And when you sleep, with head still torn
Between the two, their shapes you mix,
Till sometimes Catholics seem Corn—
Then Corn again seems Catholics.

Now, Dantzic wheat before you floats—
Now, Jesuits from California—
Now Ceres, link'd with Titus Oats,
Comes dancing through the 'Porta
Cornea.'²

Oft, too, the Corn grows animate,
And a whole crop of heads appears,
Like Papists, bearding Church and
State— 31
Themselves, together by the ears!

In short, these torments never cease;
And oft I wish myself transferr'd off
To some far, lonely land of peace,
Where Corn or Papists ne'er were heard of.

¹ Author of the late Report on Foreign Corn.

² The Horn Gate, through which the ancients

Yes, waft me, Parry, to the Pole;
For—if my fate is to be chosen
'Twixt bores and icebergs—on my soul,
I'd rather, of the two, be frozen! 40

A CASE OF LIBEL

'The greater the truth, the worse the libel.'

A CERTAIN Sprite, who dwells below, ('Twere a libel, perhaps, to mention where,)

Came up incog., some years ago,
To try, for a change, the London air.

So well he look'd, and dress'd, and talk'd,
And hid his tail and horns so handy,
You'd hardly have known him as he walk'd,
From C—e, or any other Dandy.

(His horns, it seems, are made t'un-screw;
So, he has but to take them out of the socket, 10
And—just as some fine husbands do—Conveniently clap them into his pocket.)

In short, he look'd extremely natty,
And even contriv'd—to his own great wonder—
By dint of sundry scents from Gattie,
To keep the sulphurous hogo under.

And so my gentleman hoof'd about,
Unknown to all but a chosen few
At White's and Crockford's, where, no
doubt,
He had many post-obits falling due. 20

Alike a gamester and a wit,
At night he was seen with Crockford's crew,
At morn with learned dames would sit—
So pass'd his time 'twixt black and blue.

Some wish'd to make him an M.P.,
But, finding W—lks was also one, he Swore in a rage, 'he'd be d—d, if he Would ever sit in one house with Johnny.'

supposed all true dreams (such as those of the Popish Plot, &c.) to pass.

At length, as secrets travel fast,
And devils, whether he or she, 30
Are sure to be found out at last,
The affair got wind most rapidly.

The Press, the impartial Press, that snubs
Alike a fiend's or an angel's capers—
Miss Paton's soon as Beelzebub's—
Fir'd off a squib in the morning papers:

'We warn good men to keep aloof
From a grim old Dandy, seen about,
With a fire-proof wig, and a cloven hoof
Through a neat-cut Hobysmoking out.'

Now,—the Devil being a gentleman, 41
Who piques himself on well-bred dealings,—
You may guess, when o'er these lines he ran,
How much they hurt and shock'd his feelings.

Away he posts to a Man of Law,
And 'twould make you laugh could you have seen 'em,
As paw shook hand, and hand shook paw,
And 'twas 'hail, good fellow, well met,
between 'em.

Straight an indictment was prefer'd—
And much the Devil enjoy'd the jest,
When, asking about the Bench, he
heard 51
That, of all the Judges, his own was Best.¹

In vain Defendant proffer'd proof
That Plaintiff's self was the Father of Evil—
Brought Hoby forth, to swear to the hoof,
And Stultz to speak to the tail of the Devil.

The Jury (saints, all snug and rich,
And readers of virtuous Sunday papers)
Found for the plaintiff—on hearing which
The Devil gave one of his loftiest
capers. 60

For oh, 'twas nuts to the Father of Lies (As this wily fiend is nam'd in the Bible)
To find it settled by laws so wise,
That the greater the truth, the worse
the libel!

THE IRISH SLAVE⁴

1827.

I HEARD, as I lay, a wailing sound,
 'He is dead—he is dead,' the rumour flew;
 And I rais'd my chain, and turn'd me round,
 And ask'd, through the dungeon-window, 'Who?'

I saw my livid tormentors pass;
 Their grief 'twas bliss to hear and see!
 For, never came joy to them, alas,
 That didn't bring deadly bane to me.

Eager I look'd through the mist of night,
 And ask'd, 'What foe of my race hath died?'
 Is it he—that Doubter of law and right,
 Whom nothing but wrong could e'er decide—10

'Who, long as he sees but wealth to win,
 Hath never yet felt a qualm or doubt
 What suitors for justice he'd keep in,
 Or what suitors for freedom he'd shut out—

¹ This lady also favours us, in her Memoirs, with the address of those apothecaries, who have, from time to time, given her pills that agreed with her; always desiring that the pills should be ordered 'comme pour elle.'

² A gentleman, who distinguished himself by his evidence before the Irish Committees.

³ According to the common reading, 'quodcunque infundis, acescit.'

'Who, a clog for ever on Truth's advance,
Hangs round her (like the Old Man of the Sea Round Sinbad's neck¹), nor leaves a chance
Of shaking him off—is't he? is't he?'

20

Ghastly my grim tormentors smil'd,
And thrusting me back to my den of woe,
With a laughter even more fierce and wild
Than their funeral howling, answer'd 'No'.

But the cry still pierc'd my prison-gate,
And again I ask'd, 'What scourge is gone?
'Is it he—that Chief, so coldly great,
Whom Fame unwillingly shines upon—

'Whose name is one of the' ill-omen'd words
They link with hate, on his native plains;
And why?—they lent him hearts and swords,
And he, in return, gave scoffs and chains!

30

'Is it he? is it he?' I loud inquir'd,
When, hark!—there sounded a Royal knell;
And I knew what spirit had just expir'd,
And, slave as I was, my triumph fell.

He had pledg'd a hate unto me and mine,
He had left to the future nor hope nor choice,
But seal'd that hate with a Name Divine,
And he now was dead, and—I couldn't rejoice!

40

He had fann'd afresh the burning brands
Of a bigotry waxing cold and dim;
He had arm'd anew my torturers' hands,
And them did I curse—but sigh'd for him.

For, his was the error of head, not heart;
And—oh, how beyond the ambushed foe,
Who to enmity adds the traitor's part,
And carries a smile, with a curse below!

If ever a heart made bright amends
For the fatal fault of an erring head—
Go, learn his fame from the lips of friends,
In the orphan's tear be his glory read.

50

A Prince without pride, a man without guile,
To the last unchanging, warm, sincere,
For Worth he had ever a hand and smile,
And for Misery ever his purse and tear.

Touch'd to the heart by that solemn toll,
I calmly sunk in my chains again;
While, still as I said, 'Heaven rest his soul!'
My mates of the dungeon sigh'd 'Amen!'

ODE TO FERDINAND

1827.

QUIT the sword, thou King of men,
 Grasp the needle once again ;
 Making petticoats is far
 Safer sport than making war ;
 Trimming is a better thing
 Than the being trimm'd, oh King !
 Grasp the needle bright with which Thou didst for the Virgin stitch
 Garment, such as ne'er before
 Monarch stitch'd or Virgin wore.
 Not for her, oh semster nimble,
 Do I now invoke thy thimble ;
 Not for her thy wanted aid is,
 But for certain grave old ladies,
 Who now sit in England's cabinet,
 Waiting to be clothed in tabinet,
 Or whatever choice étouffe is Fit for Dowagers in office.
 First, thy care, oh King, devote
 To Dame Eld—n's petticoat.
 Make it of that silk, whose dye
 Shifts for ever to the eye,
 Just as if it hardly knew
 Whether to be pink or blue.
 Or—material fitter yet—
 If thou couldst a remnant get
 Of that stuff, with which, of old,
 Sage Penelope, we're told,
 Still by doing and undoing,
 Kept her suitors always wooing—
 That's the stuff which I pronounce, is Fittest for Dame Eld—n's flounces.

After this, we'll try thy hand,
 Mantua-making Ferdinand,
 For old Goody W—stm—l—d ;
 One who loves, like Mother Cole,
 Church and State with all her soul ;
 And has pass'd her life in frolics
 Worthy of your Apostolics.
 Choose, in dressing this old flirt,
 Something that wo'n't show the dirt,
 As, from habit, every minute
 Goody W—stm—l—d is in it.

This is all I now shall ask,
 Hie thee, monarch, to thy task ;

¹ 'Love rules the court, the camp, the grove,
 And men below and gods above,
 For Love is Heaven and Heaven is Love.'

Scott.

² 'Brim—a naughty woman.'—Grose.

Finish Eld—n's frills and borders,
 Then return for further orders.
 Oh what progress for our sake,
 Kings in millinery make !
 Ribands, garters, and such things, 50
 Are supplied by other Kings,—
 Ferdinand his rank denotes
 By providing petticoats.

HAT VERSUS WIG

1827.

'At the interment of the Duke of York, Lord
 Eld—n, in order to guard against the effects of the damp, stood upon his hat during the whole of the ceremony.'

—metus omnes et inexorabile fatum
 Subjecit pedibus, strepitumque Acherontis avari.

'TWIXT Eld—n's Hat and Eld—n's
 Wig

There lately rose an altercation,—
 Each with its own importance big,
 Disputing which most serves the nation.

Quoth Wig, with consequential air,
 'Pooh! pooh! you surely can't design,

My worthy beaver, to compare
 Your station in the state with mine.

'Who meets the learned legal crew? 9
 Who fronts the lordly Senate's pride?
 The Wig, the Wig, my friend—while you
 Hang dangling on some peg outside.

Oh, 'tis the Wig, that rules, like Love,
 Senate and Court, with like éclat—
 And wards below, and lords above,
 For Law is Wig and Wig is Law!¹

'Who tried the long, Long W—LL—SLY suit,
 Which tried one's patience, in return?
 Not thou, oh Hat!—though, could'st
 thou do't,
 Of other *brims*² than thine thou'dst
 learn. 20

'Twas mine our master's toil to share ;
 When, like "Truepenny," in the play,³
 He, every minute, cried out "Swear,"
 And merrily to swear went they ;—⁴

² 'Ghost [beneath].—Swear !

³ 'Hamlet.—Ha, ha! say'st thou so? Art thou there, Truepenny? Come on.'

⁴ His Lordship's demand for fresh affidavits was incessant.

When, loth poor W—LL—SL—Y to condemn, he
With nice discrimination weigh'd,
Whether 'twas only "Hell and Jemmy,"
Or "Hell and Tommy" that he
play'd.

No, no, my worthy beaver, no—
Though cheapen'd at the cheapest hatter's, 30
And smart enough, as beavers go,
Thou ne'er wert made for public matters.'

Here Wig concluded his oration,
Looking, as wigs do, wondrous wise;
While thus, full cock'd for declamation,
The veteran Hat enrag'd replies:—

'Ha! dost thou then so soon forget
What thou, what England owes to
me?

Ungrateful Wig!—when will a debt,
So deep, so vast, be owed to thee? 40

Think of that night, that fearful night,
When, through the steaming vault
below,

Our master dar'd, in gout's despite,
To venture his podagric toe!

Who was it then, thou boaster, say,
When thou had'st to thy box sneak'd
off,

Beneath his feet protecting lay,
And sav'd him from a mortal cough?

Think, if Catarrh had quench'd that
sun,

How blank this world had been to
thee! 50

Without that head to shine upon,
Oh Wig, where would thy glory be?

You, too, ye Britons,—had this hope
Of Church and state been ravish'd from ye,

Oh think, how Canning and the Pope
Would then have play'd up "Hell and Tommy!"

At sea, there's but a plank, they say,
'Twixt seamen and annihilation;

A Hat, that awful moment, lay
'Twixt England and Emancipation!

Oh!!!—

At this 'Oh!!!' The Times' Reporter 61
Was taken poorly, and retir'd;
Which made him cut Hat's rhetoric shorter,
Than justice to the case requir'd.

On his return, he found these shocks
Of eloquence all ended quite;
And Wig lay snoring in his box,
And hat was—hung up for the night.

THE PERIWINKLES AND THE LOCUSTS

A SALMAGUNDIAN HYMN

'To Panurge was assigned the Lairdship of Salmagundi, which was yearly worth 6,789,106,789 ryals, besides the revenue of the Locusts and Periwinkles, amounting one year with another to the value of 2,435,788, &c. &c.
—Rabelais.

'HURRA! hurra!' I heard them say,
And they cheer'd and shouted all the
way,

As the Laird of Salmagundi went,
To open in state his Parliament.

The Salmagundians once were rich,
Or thought they were—no matter
which—

For, every year, the Revenue¹
From their Periwinkles larger grew?
And their rulers, skill'd in all the trick
And legerdmain of arithmetic, 10
Knew how to place 1, 2, 3, 4,

5, 6, 7, 8, and 9 and 10,
Such various ways, behind, before,
That they made a unit seem a score,
And prov'd themselves most wealthy
men!

So, on they went, a prosperous crew,
The people wise, the rulers clever—
And God help those, like me and you,
Who dar'd to doubt (as some now do)
That the Periwinkle Revenue 20
Would thus go flourishing on for ever.

'Hurra! hurra!' I heard them say,
And they cheer'd and shouted all the
way,

As the Great Panurge in glory went
To open his own dear Parliament.

¹ Accented as 'in Swift's line—

'Not so a nation's revenues are paid.'

But folks at length began to doubt
 What all this conjuring was about;
 For, every day, more deep in debt
 They saw their wealthy rulers get:—
 'Let's look (said they) the items through,
 And see if what we're told be true 31
 Of our Periwinkle Revenue.'
 But, Lord! they found there wasn't a tittle
 Of truth in aught they heard before;
 For, they gain'd by Periwinkles little,

And lost by Locusts ten times more!
 These Locusts are a lordly breed
 Some Salmagundians love to feed.
 Of all the beasts that ever were born,
 Your Locust most delights in corn; 40
 And, though his body be but small,
 To fatten him takes the devil and all!
 'Oh fie! oh fie!' was now the cry,
 As they saw the gaudy show go by,
 And the Laird of Salmagundi went
 To open his Locust Parliament!

NEW CREATION OF PEERS

BATCH THE FIRST

'His 'prentice han'
 He tried on man,
 And then he made the lasses.'

1827,

'AND now,' quoth the Minister, (eased of his panics,
 And ripe for each pastime the summer affords),
 'Having had our full swing at destroying mechanics,
 By way of set-off, let us make a few Lords.

'Tis pleasant—while nothing but mercantile fractures,
 Some simple, some compound, is dinn'd in our ears—
 To think that, though robb'd of all coarse manufactures,
 We still have our fine manufacture of Peers;—

Those Gobelin productions, which Kings take a pride
 In engrossing the whole fabrication and trade of;
 Choice tapestry things, very grand on one side, 10
 But showing, on t'other, what rags they are made of.'

The plan being fix'd, raw material was sought,—
 No matter how middling, if Tory the creed be;
 And first, to begin with, Squire W——, 'twas thought,
 For a Lord was as raw a material as need be.

Next came, with his penchant for painting and pelf,
 The tasteful Sir Charles,¹ so renown'd, far and near,
 For purchasing pictures, and selling himself—
 And both (as the public well knows) very dear. 20

Beside him Sir John comes, with equal éclat, in;—
 Stand forth, chosen pair, while for titles we measure ye;
 Both connoisseur baronets, both fond of drawing,
 Sir John, after nature, Sir Charles, on the Treasury.

But, bless us!—behold a new candidate come—
 In his hand he upholds a prescription, new written;
 He poiseth a pill-box 'twixt finger and thumb,
 And he asketh a seat 'mong the Peers of Great Britain!!

'Forbid it,' cried Jenky, 'ye Viscounts, ye Earls!—
 Oh Rank, how thy glories would fall disenchant'd,
 If coronets gliss'n'd with pills 'stead of pearls, 30
 And the strawberry-leaves were by rhubarb supplanted!

No—ask it not, ask it not, dear Doctor H—lf—rd—
 If nought but a Peerage can gladden thy life,
 And young Master H—lf—rd as yet is too small for't,
 Sweet Doctor, we'll make a she Peer of thy wife.

Next to bearing a coronet on our own brows,
 Is to bask in its light from the brows of another;
 And grandeur o'er thee shall reflect from thy spouse,
 As o'er V—y F—tz—d 'twill shine through his mother.' ¹ 40

Thus ended the First Batch—and Jenky, much tir'd
 (It being no joke to make Lords by the heap),
 Took a large dram of ether—the same that inspir'd
 His speech 'gainst the Papists—and pros'd off to sleep.

SPEECH ON THE UMBRELLA² QUESTION

BY LORD ELD—N

'Vos inumbrelles video.'²—Ex Juvenil. Georgii Canningii.

1827.

My Lords, I'm accus'd of a trick that, God knows, is
 The last into which, at my age, I could fall—
 Of leading this grave House of Peers, by their noses,
 Wherever I choose, princes, bishops, and all.

My Lords, on the question before us at present,
 No doubt I shall hear, 'Tis that cursed old fellow,
 That bugbear of all that is lib'ral and pleasant,
 Who won't let the Lords give the man his umbrella!'

God forbid that your Lordships should knuckle to me;
 I am ancient—but were I as old as King Priam,
 Not much, I confess, to your credit 'twould be,
 To mind such a twaddling old Trojan as I am.

I own, of our Protestant laws I am jealous,
 And, long as God spares me, will always maintain,
 That, once having taken men's rights, or umbrellas,
 We ne'er should consent to restore them again.

What security have you, ye Bishops and Peers,
 If thus you give back Mr. Bell's parapluie,
 That he may'nt, with its stick, come about all your ears,
 And then—where would your Protestant periwigs be?

No, heaven be my judge, were I dying to-day,
 Ere I dropp'd in the grave, like a medlar that's mellow,
 'For God's sake'—at that awful moment I'd say—
 'For God's sake, don't give Mr. Bell his umbrella.'

['This address,' says a ministerial journal, 'delivered with amazing emphasis and earnestness, occasioned an extraordinary sensation in the House. Nothing since the memorable address of the Duke of York has produced so remarkable an impression.']

¹ Among the persons mentioned as likely to be raised to the Peerage are the mother of Mr. V—y F—tz—d, &c.

² A case which interested the public very much at this period. A gentleman, of the name of Bell, having left his umbrella behind him in the House of Lords, the doorkeepers (standing no doubt, on the privileges of that noble body) refused to restore it to him; and the above speech, which may be considered as a pendant to that of the Learned Earl on the Catholic Question, arose out of the translation.

³ From Mr. Canning's translation of Jekyl's—

'I say, my good fellows
 As you've no umbrellas.'

A PASTORAL BALLAD

BY JOHN BULL

'Dublin, March 12, 1827.—Friday, after the arrival of the packet bringing the account of the defeat of the Catholic Question, in the House of Commons, orders were sent to the Pigeon House to forward 5,000,000 rounds of musket-ball cartridge to the different garrisons round the country.'—Freeman's Journal.

I HAVE found out a gift for my Erin,

A gift that will surely content her;—
Sweet pledge of a love so endearing!

Five millions of bullets I've sent her.

She ask'd me for Freedom and Right,
But ill she her wants understood;—
Ball cartridges, morning and night,
Is a dose that will do her more good.

There is hardly a day of our lives

But we read, in some amiable trials,
How husbands make love to their wives
Through the medium of hemp and of phials.

One thinks, with his mistress or mate

A good halter is sure to agree—
That love-knot which, early and late,
I have tried, my dear Erin, on thee.

While another, whom Hymen has bless'd

With a wife that is not over placid,
Consigns the dear charmer to rest, 19
With a dose of the best Prussic acid.

Thus, Erin! my love do I show—

Thus quiet thee, mate of my bed!
And, as poison and hemp are too slow,
Do thy business with bullets instead.

Should thy faith in my medicine be shaken,

Ask R—d—n, that mildest of saints;
He'll tell thee, lead, inwardly taken,
Alone can remove thy complaints;—

That, blest as thou art in thy lot,
Nothing's wanted to make it more
pleasant

But being hang'd, tortur'd, and shot, 30
Much oftener than thou art at present.

Even W—ll—t—n's self hath averr'd
Thou art yet but half sabred and hung,
And I lov'd him the more when I heard
Such tenderness fall from his tongue.

So take the five millions of pills,

Dear partner, I herewith inclose;
'Tis the cure that all quacks for thy ills,
From Cromwell to Eld—n, propose.

And you, ye brave bullets that go, 41
How I wish that, before you set out,
The Devil of the Freischütz could know
The good work you are going about.

For he'd charm ye, in spite of your lead,
Into such supernatural wit,

That you'd all of you know, as you sped,
Where a bullet of sense ought to hit.

A LATE SCENE AT SWANAGE¹

Regnis ex-sul ademitis.

Virg.

1827.

To Swanage—that neat little town, in whose bay
Fair Thetis shows off, in her best silver slippers—
Lord Bags² took his annual trip t'other day,
To taste the sea breezes, and chat with the dippers.

There—learn'd as he is in conundrums and laws—

Quoth he to his dame (whom he oft plays the wag on),
'Why—are chancery suitors like bathers?'—'Because Their suits are put off, till—they haven't a rag on.'

Thus on he went chatting—but, lo, while he chats,

With a face full of wonder around him he looks;

For he misses his parsons, his dear shovel hats,

Who used to flock round him at Swanage like rooks.

¹ A small bathing-place on the coast of Dorsetshire, long a favourite summer resort of the ex-nobleman in question, and, till this season, much frequented also by gentlemen of the church.

² The Lord Chancellor Eld—n.

'How is this, Lady Bags?—to this region aquatic
Last year they came swarming, to make me their bow,
As thick as Burke's cloud o'er the vales of Carnatic,
Deans, Rectors, D.D.'s—where the devil are they now?'

'My dearest Lord Bags!' saith his dame, 'can you doubt?
I am loth to remind you of things so unpleasant;
But don't you perceive, dear, the Church have found out
That you're one of the people call'd Ex's, at present?'

'Ah, true—you have hit it—I am, indeed, one
Of those ill-fated Ex's (his Lordship replies),
And, with tears, I confess—God forgive me the pun!—
We X's have proved ourselves not to be Y's.'

WO! WO!¹

Wo, wo unto him who would check or disturb it—
That beautiful Light, which is now on its way;
Which, beaming, at first, o'er the bogs of Belturbet,
Now brightens sweet Ballinacorney with its ray!

Oh F—rnh—m, Saint F—rnh—m, how much do we owe thee!
How form'd to all tastes are thy various employs!
The old, as a catcher of Catholics, know thee,
The young, as an amateur scourger of boys.

Wo, wo to the man, who such doings would smother!—
On, Luther of Cavan! On, Saint of Kilgroggy!
With whip in one hand, and with Bible in t'other,
Like Mungo's tormentor, both 'preachee and floggee.'

10

Come, Saints from all quarters, and marshal his way;
Come, L—rt—n, who, scorning profane erudition,
Popp'd Shakspeare, they say, in the river, one day,
Though 'twas only old Bowdler's Velluti edition.

Come, R—den, who doubttest—so mild are thy views—
Whether Bibles or bullets are best for the nation;
Who leav'st to poor Paddy no medium to choose,
'Twixt good old Rebellion and new Reformation.

20

What more from her Saints can Hibernia require?
St. Bridget, of yore, like a dutiful daughter,
Supplied her, 'tis said, with perpetual fire,²
And Saints keep her, now, in eternal hot water.

Wo, wo to the man, who would check their career,
Or stop the Millennium, that's sure to await us,
When, bless'd with an orthodox crop every year,
We shall learn to raise Protestants, fast as potatoes.

¹ Suggested by a speech of the Bishop of Ch—st—r on the subject of the New Reformation in Ireland, in which his Lordship denounced 'Wo! Wo! Wo!' pretty abundantly on all those who dared to interfere with its progress.

² The inextinguishable fire of St. Bridget, at Kildare.

In kidnapping Papists, our rulers, we know,
 Had been trying their talent for many a day;
 Till F—rnh—m, when all had been tried, came to show,
 Like the German flea-catcher, 'anoder goot way.' 30

And nothing's more simple than F—rnh—m's receipt;— 'Catch your Catholic, first—soak him well in poleen—¹
 Add salary sauce,² and the thing is complete.
 You may serve up your Protestant, smoking and clean.'
 'Wo, wo to the wag, who would laugh at such cookery!'
 Thus, from his perch, did I hear a black crow³
 Caw angrily out, while the rest of the rookery
 Open'd their bills, and re-echo'd 'Wo! wo!' 40

TOUT POUR LA TRIPE

'If, in China or among the natives of India, we claimed civil advantages which were connected with religious usages, little as we might value those forms in our hearts, we should think common decency required us to abstain from treating them with offensive contumely; and, though unable to consider them sacred, we would not sneer at the name of Fot, or laugh at the imputed divinity of Vishnou.'—Courier, Tuesday, Jan. 16.

1827.

COME, take my advice, never trouble your cranium,
 When 'civil advantages' are to be gain'd,
 What god or what goddess may help to obtain you 'em,
 Hindoo or Chinese, so they're only obtain'd.

In this world (let me hint in your organ auricular)
 All the good things to good hypocrites fall;
 And he, who in swallowing creeds is particular,
 Soon will have nothing to swallow at all.

Oh place me where Fo (or, as some call him, Fot)
 Is the god, from whom 'civil advantages' flow,
 And you'll find, if there's any thing snug to be got,
 I shall soon be on excellent terms with old Fo.

Or were I where Vishnu, that four-handed god,
 Is the quadruple giver of pensions and places,
 I own I should feel it unchristian and odd
 Not to find myself also in Vishnu's good graces.

For, among all the gods that humanely attend
 To our wants in this planet, the gods to my wishes
 Are those that, like Vishnu and others, descend
 In the form, so attractive, of loaves and of fishes!⁴

So take my advice—for, if even the devil
 Should tempt men again as an idol to try him,
 'Twere best for us Tories, even then, to be civil,
 As nobody doubts we should get something by him.

¹ Whiskey.

² 'We understand that several applications have lately been made to the Protestant clergymen of this town by fellows, inquiring "What are they giving a head for converts?"'—Wexford Post.

³ Of the rook species—Corvus frugilegus, i. e. a great consumer of corn.

⁴ Vishnu was (as Sir W. Jones calls him) 'a pisciform god,'—his first Avatar being in the shape of a fish.

ENIGMA

Monstrum nulla virtute redemptum.

COME, riddle-me-ree, come, riddle-me-ree,
And tell me what my name may be.
I am nearly one hundred and thirty years old,
And therefore no chicken, as you may suppose;—
Though a dwarf in my youth (as my nurses have told),
I have, ev'ry year since, been outgrowing my clothes;
Till, at last, such a corpulent giant I stand,
That, if folks were to furnish me now with a suit,
It would take ev'ry morsel of scrip in the land
But to measure my bulk from the head to the foot. 10
Hence, they who maintain me, grown sick of my stature,
To cover me nothing but rags will supply;
And the doctors declare that, in due course of nature,
About the year 30 in rags I shall die.
Meanwhile, I stalk hungry and bloated around,
An object of int'rest, most painful, to all;
In the warehouse, the cottage, the palace I'm found,
Holding citizen, peasant, and king in my thrall.
Then riddle-me-ree, oh riddle-me-ree,
Come, tell me what my name may be. 20

When the lord of the counting-house bends o'er his book,
Bright pictures of profit delighting to draw,
O'er his shoulders with large cipher eye-balls I look,
And down drops the pen from his paralyz'd paw!
When the Premier lies dreaming of dear Waterloo,
And expects through another to caper and prank it,
You'd laugh did you see, when I bellow out 'Boo!'
How he hides his brave Waterloo head in the blanket.
When mighty Belshazzar brims high in the hall
His cup, full of gout, to the Gaul's overthrow, 30
Lo, 'Eight Hundred Millions' I write on the wall,
And the cup falls to earth and—the gout to his toe!
But the joy of my heart is when largely I cram
My maw with the fruits of the Squirearchy's acres,
And, knowing who made me the thing that I am,
Like the monster of Frankenstein, worry my makers.
Then riddle-me-ree, come, riddle-me-ree,
And tell, if thou knows't, who I may be.

DOG-DAY REFLECTIONS

BY A DANDY KEPT IN TOWN

'Vox clamantis in deserto.' 1827.

SAID Malthus, one day, to a clown Lying stretch'd on the beach, in the sun,—

'What's the number of souls in this town?'—

'The number! Lord bless you, there's
none.

We have nothing but dabs in this place,
Of them a great plenty there are;
But the soles, please your rev'rence and
grace,
Are all t'other side of the bar.'

And so 'tis in London just now,
Not a soul to be seen, up or down;—
Of dabs a great glut, I allow, 11
But your soles, every one, out of town.

East or west, nothing wond'rous or new;
No courtship or scandal, worth know-
ing;

Mrs. B——, and a Mermaid ¹ or two,
Are the only loose fish that are going.

Ah, where is that dear house of Peers,
That, some weeks ago, kept us merry?
Where, Eld—n, art thou, with thy tears?
And thou, with thy sense, L—d—d—y?

Wise Marquis, how much the Lord May'r,
In the dog-days, with thee must be puzzled!— 22

It being his task to take care
That such animals shan't go un-muzzled.

Thou, too, whose political toils
Are so worthy a captain of horse—
Whose amendments ² (like honest Sir Boyle's)
Are 'amendments, that make matters worse'; ³

Great Chieftain, who takest such pains
To prove—what is granted, nem. con.—
With how mod'rate a portion of brains
Some heroes contrive to get on. 32

And, thou, too, my R—d—sd—e, ah,
where

Is the peer, with a star at his button,
Whose quarters could ever compare
With R—d—sd—e's five quarters of mutton? ⁴

Why, why have ye taken your flight,
Ye diverting and dignified crew?
How ill do three farces a night,
At the Haymarket, pay us for you! 40

For, what is Bombastes to thee,
My Ell—nbro', when thou look'st big?

Or, where's the burletta can be
Like L—d—rd—le's wit, and his wig?

I doubt if ev'n Griffinhoof ⁵ could (Though Griffin's a comical lad)
Invent any joke half so good
As that precious one, 'This is too bad!'

Then come again, come again, Spring!
Oh haste thee, with Fun in thy train; 50
And—of all things the funniest—bring
These exalted Grimaldis again!

THE 'LIVING DOG' AND 'THE DEAD LION'

1828.

NEXT week will be publish'd (as 'Lives' are the rage)
The whole Reminiscences, wond'rous and strange,
Of a small puppy-dog, that liv'd once in the cage
Of the late noble Lion at Exeter 'Change.

Though the dog is a dog of the kind they call 'sad,'
'Tis a puppy that much to good breeding pretends;
And few dogs have such opportunities had
Of knowing how Lions behave—among friends;

How that animal eats, how he snores, how he drinks,
Is all noted down by this Boswell so small;
And 'tis plain, from each sentence, the puppy-dog thinks
That the Lion was no such great things after all.

Though he roar'd pretty well—this the puppy allows—
It was all, he says, borrow'd—all second-hand roar;
And he vastly prefers his own little bow-wows
To the loftiest war-note the Lion could pour.

² More particularly his Grace's celebrated amendment to the Corn Bill; for which, and the circumstances connected with it, see Annual Register for A. D. 1827.

³ From a speech of Sir Boyle Roche's, in the Irish House of Commons.

⁴ The learning his Lordship displayed, on the subject of the butcher's 'fifth quarter' of mutton, will not speedily be forgotten.

⁵ The nom de guerre under which Colman has written some of his best farces.

'Tis, indeed, as good fun as a Cynic could ask,
To see how this cockney-bred setter of rabbits
Takes gravely the Lord of the Forest to task,
And judges of lions by puppy-dog habits.

Nay, fed as he was (and this makes it a dark case)
With sops every day from the Lion's own pan,
He lifts up his leg at the noble beast's carcass,
And—does all a dog, so diminutive, can.

However, the book's a good book, being rich in
Examples and warnings to lions high-bred,
How they suffer small mongrelly curs in their kitchen
Who'll feed on them living, and foul them when dead.

ODE TO DON MIGUEL

Et tu, Brute!

1828¹

WHAT! Miguel, not patriotic? oh, fye,
After so much good teaching 'tis quite a take-in, Sir;—
First school'd, as you were, under Metternich's eye,
And then (as young misses say) 'finish'd' at Windsor!²

I ne'er in my life knew a case that was harder;—
Such feasts as you had, when you made us a call!
Three courses each day from his Majesty's larder,—
And now, to turn absolute Don, after all!!

Some authors, like Bayes, to the style and the matter
Of each thing they write suit the way that they dine,
Roast sirloin for Epic, broil'd devils for Satire,
And hotchpotch and trifle for rhymes such as mine.

That Rulers should feed the same way, I've no doubt;—
Great Despots on bouilli serv'd up à la Russe,³
Your small German Princes on frogs and sour crout,
And your Vice-roy of Hanover always on goose.

Some Dons, too, have fancied (though this may be fable)
A dish rather dear, if, in cooking, they blunder it;—
Not content with the common hot meat on a table,
They're partial (eh, Mig?) to a dish of cold under it!⁴

No wonder a Don of such appetites found
Even Windsor's collations plebeianly plain;
Where the dishes most high that my Lady sends round
Are her Maintenon cutlets and soup à la Reine.

Alas! that a youth with such charming beginnings,
Should sink, all at once, to so sad a conclusion,
And, what is still worse, throw the losings and winnings
Of worthies on 'Change into so much confusion!

¹ At the commencement of this year, the designs of Don Miguel and his partisans against the constitution established by his brother had begun more openly to declare themselves.

² Don Miguel had paid a visit to the English court, at the close of the year 1827.

³ Dressed with a pint of the strongest spirits—a favourite dish of the Great Frederick of Prussia, and which he persevered in eating even on his death-bed, much to the horror of physician Zimmerman.

⁴ This quiet case of murder, with all its particulars—the hiding the body under the dinner-table, &c. &c.—is, no doubt, well known to the reader.

The Bulls, in hysterics—the Bears just as bad—
 The few men who have, and the many who've not tick,
 All shock'd to find out that that promising lad,
 Prince Metternich's pupil, is—not patriotic!

THOUGHTS ON THE PRESENT GOVERNMENT OF IRELAND

OFt have I seen, in gay, equestrian pride, 1828.
 Some well-roug'd youth round Astley's Circus ride
 Two stately steeds—standing, with graceful straddle,
 Like him of Rhodes, with foot on either saddle,
 While to soft tunes—some jigs, and some andantes—
 He steers around his light-pac'd Rosinantes.

So rides along, with canter smooth and pleasant,
 That horseman bold, Lord Anglesea, at present;—
Papist and Protestant the coursers twain,
 That lend their necks to his impartial rein,
 And round the ring—each honour'd, as they go,
 With equal pressure from his gracious toe—
 To the old medley tune, half 'Patrick's Day'
 And half 'Boyne Water,' take their cant'ring way,
 While Peel, the showman in the middle, cracks
 His long-lash'd whip, to cheer the doubtful hacks.
 Ah, ticklish trial of equestrian art!
 How blest, if neither steed would bolt or start;—
 If Protestant's old restive tricks were gone,
 And Papist's winkers could be still kept on!
 But no, false hopes—not even the great Ducrow
 'Twixt two such steeds could 'scape an overthrow:
 If solar hacks play'd Phaëton a trick,
 What hope, alas, from hackney's lunatic?

If once my Lord his graceful balance loses,
 Or fails to keep each foot where each horse chooses;
 If Peel but gives one extra touch of whip
 To Papist's tail or Protestant's ear-tip—
 That instant ends their glorious horsemanship!
 Off bolt the sever'd steeds, for mischief free,
 And down, between them, plumps Lord Anglesea!

THE LIMBO OF LOST REPUTATIONS

A DREAM

'Ciò che si perde qui, là si raguna.' Ariosto.

'—— a valley, where he sees
 Things that on earth were lost.' Milton.

Know'st thou not him¹ the poet sings,
 Who flew to the moon's serene domain,
 And saw that valley, where all the things,
 That vanish on earth, are found again—
 The hopes of youth, the resolves of age,
 The vow of the lover, the dream of the sage,

¹ Astolpho.

The golden visions of mining cits,
 The promises great men strew about them ;
 And, pack'd in compass small, the wits
 Of monarchs, who rule as well without them !— 10
 Like him, but diving with wing profound,
 I have been to a Limbo under ground.
 Where characters lost on earth, (and cried,
 In vain, like H—rr—s's, far and wide,)
 In heaps, like yesterday's orts, are thrown
 And there, so worthless and fly-blown,
 That ev'n the imps would not purloin them,
 Lie, till their worthy owners join them.

Curious it was to see this mass
 Of lost and torn-up reputations ;— 20
 Some of them female wares, alas,
 Mislaid at innocent assignations ;
 Some, that had sigh'd their last amen
 From the canting lips of saints that would be ;
 And some once own'd by 'the best of men,'
 Who had prov'd—no better than they should be.
 'Mong others, a poet's fame I spied,
 Once shining fair, now soak'd and black—
 'No wonder' (an imp at my elbow cried),
 'For I pick'd it out of a butt of sack !' 30

Just then a yell was heard o'er head,
 Like a chimney-sweeper's lofty summons ;
 And lo ! a devil right downward sped,
 Bringing, within his claws so red,
 Two statesmen's characters, found, he said,
 Last night, on the floor of the House of Commons ;
 The which, with black official grin,
 He now to the Chief Imp handed in ;—
Both these articles much the worse
 For their journey down, as you may suppose ; 40
 But one so devilish rank—'Odds curse !'
 Said the Lord Chief Imp, and held his nose.

'Ho, ho !' quoth he, 'I know full well
 From whom these two stray matters fell ;'—
 Then, casting away, with loathful shrug,
 The' uncleaner waif (as he would a drug
 The' Invisible's own dark hand had mix'd),
 His gaze on the other¹ firm he fix'd,
 And trying, though mischief laugh'd in his eye,
 To be moral, because of the young imps by, 50
 'What a pity !' he cried—'so fresh its gloss,
 So long preserv'd—'tis a public loss !
 This comes of a man, the careless blockhead,
 Keeping his character in his pocket ;
 And there—without considering whether
 There's room for that and his gains together—

Cramming, and cramming, and cramming away,
Till—out slips character some fine day!

'However'—and here he view'd it round—
This article still may pass for sound.
Some flaws, soon patch'd, some stains are all
The harm it has had in its luckless fall.
Here, Puck!—and he call'd to one of his train—
'The owner may have this back again.
Though damag'd for ever, if us'd with skill,
It may serve, perhaps, to trade on still;
Though the gem can never, as once, be set,
It will do for a Tory Cabinet.'

HOW TO WRITE BY PROXY

Qui facit per alium facit per se.

'MONG our neighbours, the French, in the good olden time
When Nobility flourish'd, great Barons and Dukes
Often set up for authors in prose and in rhyme,
But ne'er took the trouble to write their own books.

Poor devils were found to do this for their betters;—
And one day, a Bishop, addressing a Blue,
Said, 'Ma'am, have you read my new Pastoral Letters?'
To which the Blue answer'd—'No, Bishop, have you?'

The same is now done by our privileg'd class;
And, to show you how simple the process it needs,
If a great Major-General¹ wishes to pass
For an author of History, thus he proceeds:—

First, scribbling his own stock of notions as well
As he can, with a goose-quill that claims him as kin
He settles his neckcloth—takes snuff—rings the bell,
And yawningly orders a Subaltern in.

The Subaltern comes—sees his General seated,
In all the self-glory of authorship swelling;—
'There, look,' saith his Lordship, 'My work is completed,—
It wants nothing now, but the grammar and spelling.'

Well used to a breach, the brave Subaltern dreads
Awkward breaches of syntax a hundred times more;
And, though often condemn'd to see breaking of heads,
He had ne'er seen such breaking of Priscian's before.

However, the job's sure to pay—that's enough—
So, to it he sets with his tinkering hammer,
Convinc'd that there never was job half so tough
As the mending a great Major-General's grammar.

But, lo, a fresh puzzlement starts up to view—
New toil for the Sub.—for the Lord new expense—
'Tis discover'd that mending his grammar wo'n't do,
As the Subaltern also must find him in sense!

¹ Or Lieutenant-General, as it may happen to be.

At last—even this is achieved by his aid;
 Friend Subaltern pockets the cash and—the story;
 Drums beat—the new Grand March of Intellect's play'd—
 And off struts my Lord, the Historian, in glory!

IMITATION OF THE INFERNO OF DANTE

'Così quel fiato gli spiriti mali
 Di qua, di là, di giù, di su gli mena.'

Inferno, canto 5.

I TURN'D my steps, and lo, a shadowy throng
 Of ghosts came fluttering tow'ards me—blown along,
 Like cockchafers in high autumnal storms,
 By many a fitful gust that through their forms
 Whistled, as on they came, with wheezy puff,
 And puff'd as—though they'd never puff enough.

'Whence and what are ye?' pitying I inquir'd
 Of these poor ghosts, who, tatter'd, tost, and tir'd
 With such eternal puffing, scarce could stand
 On their lean legs while answering my demand. 10
 'We once were authors'—thus the Sprite, who led
 This tag-rag regiment of spectres, said—
 'Authors of every sex, male, female, neuter,
 Who, early smit with love of praise and—peueter,¹
 On C—lb—n's² shelves first saw the light of day,
 In ———'s puffs exhal'd our lives away—
 Like summer windmills, doom'd to dusty peace,
 When the brisk gales, that lent them motion cease.
 Ah, little knew we then what ills await
 Much-lauded scribblers in their after state; 20
 Bepuff'd on earth—how loudly Str—t can tell—
 And, dire reward, now doubly puff'd in hell!'

Touch'd with compassion for his ghastly crew,
 Whose ribs, even now, the hollow wind sung through
 In mournful prose,—such prose as Rosa's³ ghost
 Still at the accustom'd hour of eggs and toast,
 Sighs through the columns of the M—rn—g P—t,— Pensive I turn'd to weep, when he, who stood
 Foremost of all that flatulentia brood,
 Singling a she-ghost from the party, said, 30
 'Allow me to present Miss X. Y. Z.,⁴
 One of our letter'd nymphs—excuse the pun—
 Who gain'd a name on earth by—having none;
 And whose initials would immortal be,
 Had she but learn'd those plain ones, A. B. C.
 Yon smirking ghost, like mummy dry and neat,
 Wrapp'd in his own dead rhymes—fit winding-sheet—

² The reader may fill up this gap with any one of the dissyllabic publishers of London that occurs to him.

³ Rosa Matilda, who was for many years the writer of the political articles in the journal alluded to, and whose spirit still seems to preside—'regnat Rosa'—over its pages.

⁴ Not the charming L. E. L., and still less, Mrs. F. H., whose poetry is among the most beautiful of the present day.

Still marvels much that not a soul should care
 One single pin to know who wrote 'May Fair';—
 While this young gentleman,' (here forth he drew
 A dandy spectre, puff'd quite through and through,
 As though his ribs were an Aeolian lyre
 For the old Row's soft trade-winds to inspire,]
 'This modest genius breath'd one wish alone,
 To have his volume read, himself unknown;
 But different far the course his glory took,
 All knew the author, and—none read the book.

40

'Behold, in yonder ancient figure of fun,
 Who rides the blast, Sir J—n—h B—rr—t—n;—
 In tricks to raise the wind his life was spent,
 And now the wind returns the compliment.
 This lady here, the Earl of —'s sister,
 Is a dead novelist; and this is Mister—
 Beg pardon—Honourable Mister L—st—r,
 A gentleman who, some weeks since, came over
 In a smart puff (wind S. S. E.) to Dover.
 Yonder behind us limps young Vivian Grey,
 Whose life, poor youth, was long since blown away,
 Like a torn paper-kite, on which the wind
 No further purchase for a puff can find.'

50

60

'And thou thyself'—here, anxious, I exclaim'd—
 'Tell us, good ghost, how thou, thyself, art nam'd.'
 'Me, Sir!' he blushing cried—'Ah, there's the rub—
 Know, then—a waiter once at Brooks's Club,
 A waiter still I might have long remain'd,
 And long the club-room's jokes and glasses drain'd;
 But, ah, in luckless hour, this last December,
 I wrote a book,¹ and Colburn dubb'd me "Member"—
 "Member of Brooks's!"—oh Promethean puff,
 To what wilt thou exalt even kitchen-stuff!
 With crums of gossip, caught from dining wits,
 And half-heard jokes, bequeath'd, like half-chew'd bits,
 To be, each night, the waiter's perquisites;—
 With such ingredients, serv'd up oft before,
 But with fresh fudge and fiction garnish'd o'er,
 I manag'd, for some weeks, to dose the town,
 Till fresh reserves of nonsense ran me down;
 And, ready still even waiters' souls to damn,
 The Devil but rang his bell, and—here I am;—
 Yes—"Coming up, Sir," once my favourite cry,
 Exchang'd for "Coming down, Sir," here am I!'

70

80

Scarce had the spectre's lips these words let drop,
 When, lo, a breeze—such as from —'s shop
 Blows in the vernal hour, when puffs prevail,
 And speeds the sheets and swells the lagging sail—
 Took the poor waiter rudely in the poop,
 And, whirling him and all his grisly group

Of literary ghosts—Miss X. Y. Z.—
 The nameless author, better known than read—
 Sir Jo.—the Honourable Mr. L—st—r,
 And, last, not least, Lord Nobody's twin-sister—
 Blew them, ye gods, with all their prose and rhymes
 And sins about them, far into those climes
 'Where Peter pitch'd his waistcoat'¹ in old times,
 Leaving me much in doubt, as on I prest,
 With my great master, through this realm unblest,
 Whether old Nick or C—lb—n puffs the best.

LAMENT FOR THE LOSS OF LORD B—TH—ST'S TAIL²

ALL in again—unlook'd for bliss!
 Yet, ah, one adjunct still we miss;—
 One tender tie, attach'd so long
 To the same head, through right and wrong.

Why, B—th—st, why didst thou cut
 off

That memorable tail of thine?

Why—as if one was not enough—

Thy pig-tie with thy place resign,
 And thus, at once, both cut and run?

Alas, my Lord, 'twas not well done, 10
 'Twas not, indeed—though sad at heart,

From office and its sweets to part,
 Yet hopes of coming in again,
 Sweet Tory hopes! beguild our pain;
 But thus to miss that tail of thine,
 Through long, long years our rallying sign—

As if the State and all its powers
 By tenancy in tail were ours—
 To see it thus by scissors fall,
This was 'the' unkindest cut of all!' 20
 It seem'd as though the' ascendant
 day

Of Toryism had pass'd away,
 And, proving Samson's story true,
 She lost her vigour with her queue.

Parties are much like fish, 'tis said—
 The tail directs them, not the head;
 Then, how could any party fail,
 That steer'd its course by B—th—st's tail?

Not Murat's plume, through Wagram's fight,

E'er shed such guiding glories from it,
 As erst, in all true Tories' sight, 30
 Blaz'd from our old Colonial comet!
 If you, my Lord, a Bashaw were,

(As W—ll—gt—n will be anon)
 Thou might'st have had a tail to spare;
 But no, alas, thou hadst but one,
 And that—like Troy, or Babylon,
 A tale of other times—is gone!

Yet—weep ye not, ye Tories true—
 Fate has not yet of all bereft us; 40
 Though thus depriv'd of B—th—st's queue,

We've E—b—h's curls still left us;—
 Sweet curls, from which young Love, so vicious,

His shots, as from nine-pounders, issues;
 Grand, glorious curls, which, in debate,
 Surcharg'd with all a nation's fate,
 His Lordship shakes, as Homer's God did,³

And oft in thundering talk comes near him;—

Except that, there, the speaker nodded,
 And, here, 'tis only those who hear
 him. 50

Long, long, ye ringlets, on the soil
 Of that fat cranium may ye flourish,
 With plenty of Macassar oil,
 Through many a year your growth to nourish!

And, ah, should Time too soon unsheath
 His barbarous shears such locks to
 sever,

Still dear to Tories, even in death,
 Their last, lov'd relics we'll bequeath,
 A hair-loom to our sons for ever.

¹ A Dantesque allusion to the old saying,
 'Nine miles beyond H—ll, where Peter pitched his waistcoat.'

² The noble Lord, it is well known, cut off

this much-respected appendage, on his retirement from office some months since.

³ 'Shakes his ambrosial curls, and gives the nod.'—Pope's Homer.

THE CHERRIES

A PARABLE¹

1828.

SEE those cherries, how they cover
Yonder sunny garden wall;—
Had they not that network over,
Thieving birds would eat them all.

So, to guard our posts and pensions,
Ancient sages wove a net,
Through whose holes, of small dimensions,
Only certain knaves can get.

Shall we then this network widen?
Shall we stretch these sacred holes, 10
Through which, even already, slide in Lots of small dissenting souls?

'God forbid!' old Testy crieth;
'God forbid!' so echo I;
Every ravenous bird that flieth
Then would at our cherries fly.

Ope but half an inch or so,
And, behold, what bebies break in;—
Here, some curst old Popish crow
Pops his long and lickerish beak in; 20

Here, sly Arians flock unnumber'd,
And Socinians, slim and spare,
Who, with small belief encumber'd,
Slip in easy any where;—

Methodists, of birds the aptest,
Where there's pecking going on;
And that water-fowl, the Baptist—
All would share our fruits anon;

Every bird, of every city,
That, for years, with ceaseless din, 30
Hath revers'd the starling's ditty,
Singing out 'I can't get in.'

'God forbid!' old Testy snivels;
'God forbid!' I echo too;
Rather may ten thousand d-v-ls
Seize the whole voracious crew!

If less costly fruit wo'n't suit 'em,
Hips and haws, and such like berries,
Curse the cormorants! stone 'em, shoot
'em,
Any thing—to save our cherries. 40

STANZAS WRITTEN IN ANTICIPATION OF DEFEAT²

1828.

Go seek for some abler defenders of wrong,
If we must run the gauntlet through blood and expense;
Or, Goths as ye are, in your multitude strong,
Be content with success, and pretend not to sense.

If the words of the wise and the gen'rous are vain,
If Truth by the bowstring must yield up her breath,
Let Mutes do the office—and spare her the pain
Or an In-gl—s or T—nd—l to talk her to death.

Chain, persecute, plunder—do all that you will—
But save us, at least, the old womanly lore 10
Of a F—st—r, who, dully prophetic of ill,
Is, at once, the two instruments, AUGUR³ and BORE.

Bring legions of Squires—if they'll only be mute—
And array their thick heads against reason and right,
Like the Roman of old, of historic repute,⁴
Who with droves of dumb animals carried the fight;

¹ Written during the late discussion on the Test and Corporation Acts.

² During the discussion of the Catholic question in the House of Commons last session.

³ This rhyme is more for the ear than the eye, as the carpenter's tool is spelt auger.

⁴ Fabius, who sent droves of bullocks against the enemy.

Pour out, from each corner and hole of the Court,
Your Bedchamber lordlings, your salaried slaves,
Who, ripe for all job-work, no matter what sort,
Have their consciences tack'd to their patents and staves. 20

Catch all the small fry who, as Juvenal sings,
Are the Treasury's creatures, wherever they swim ;¹
With all the base, time-serving toadies of Kings,
Who, if Punch were the monarch, would worship even him ;

And while, on the one side, each name of renown,
That illumines and blesses our age is combin'd ;
While the Foxes, the Pitts, and the Cannings look down,
And drop o'er the cause their rich mantles of Mind ;

Let bold Paddy H—lmes show his troops on the other,
And, counting of noses the quantum desir'd, 30
Let Paddy but say, like the Gracchi's fam'd mother,
'Come forward, my jewels'—'tis all that's requir'd.

And thus let your farce be enacted hereafter—
Thus honestly persecute, outlaw, and chain ;
But spare even your victims the tortures of laughter,
And never, oh never, try reasoning again !

ODE TO THE WOODS AND FORESTS

BY ONE OF THE BOARD

1828.

LET other bards to groves repair,
Where linnets strain their tuneful
throats,
Mine be the Woods and Forests, where
The Treasury pours its sweeter notes.

No whispering winds have charms for
me,
Nor zephyr's balmy sighs I ask ;
To raise the wind for Royalty
Be all our Sylvan zephyr's task !

And, 'stead of crystal brooks and floods,
And all such vulgar irrigation, 10
Let Gallic rhino through our Woods
Divert its 'course of liquid-ation.'

Ah, surely, Virgil knew full well
What Woods and Forests ought to
be,
When, sly, he introduc'd in hell
His guinea-plant, his bullion-tree :—²

² Called by Virgil botanically, 'species auri frondentis.'

Nor see I why, some future day,
Whenshort of cash, we should not send
Our H—rr—s down—he knows the way—
To see if Woods in hell will lend. 20

Long may ye flourish, sylvan haunts,
Beneath whose 'branches of expense'
Our gracious K—g gets all he wants,—
Except a little taste and sense.

Long, in your golden shade reclin'd,
Like him of fair Armida's bowers,
May W—ll—n some wood-nymph find,
To cheer his dozenth lustrum's hours ;

To rest from toil the Great Untaught,
And soothe the pangs his warlike brain
Must suffer, when, unus'd to thought,
It tries to think, and—tries in vain.

Oh long may Woods and Forests be 33
Preserv'd, in all their teeming graces,
To shelter Tory bards, like me,
Who take delight in Sylvan places !³

³ Tu facis, ut silvas, ut amem loca—
Ovid.

STANZAS FROM THE BANKS OF THE SHANNON¹'Take back the virgin page.' Moore's Irish Melodies.

1828.

No longer, dear V—sey, feel hurt and uneasy
At hearing it said by thy Treasury brother,
That thou art a sheet of blank paper, my V—sey,
And he, the dear innocent placeman, another.²

For, lo, what a service we, Irish, have done thee;—
Thou now art a sheet of blank paper no more;
By St. Patrick, we've scrawl'd such a lesson upon thee
As never was scrawl'd upon foolscap before.

Come—on with your spectacles, noble Lord Duke,
(Or O'Connell has green ones he haply would lend you,) 10
Read V—sey all o'er (as you can't read a book)
And improve by the lesson we, bog-trotters, send you;

A lesson, in large Roman characters trac'd,
Whose awful impressions from you and your kin
Of blank-sheeted statesmen will ne'er be effac'd—
Unless, 'stead of paper, you're mere asses' skin.

Shall I help you to construe it? ay, by the Gods,
Could I risk a translation, you should have a rare one;
But pen against sabre is desperate odds,
And you, my Lord Duke (as you hinted once), wear one. 20

Again and again I say, read V—sey o'er;—
You will find him worth all the old scrolls of papyrus,
That Egypt e'er fill'd with nonsensical lore,
Or the learned Champollion e'er wrote of, to tire us.

All blank as he was, we've return'd him on hand,
Scribbled o'er with a warning to Princes and Dukes,
Whose plain, simple drift if they wo'n't understand,
Though caress'd at St. James's, they're fit for St. Luke's.

Talk of leaves of the Sibyls!—more meaning convey'd is
In one single leaf such as now we have spell'd on, 30
Than e'er hath been utter'd by all the old ladies
That ever yet spoke, from the Sibyls to Eld—n.

THE ANNUAL PILL

Supposed to be sung by OLD PROSY, the Jew, in the Character of Major C—RTW—GHT.

VILL nobodies try my nice Annual Pill,
Dat's to purify every ting nashty away?
Pless ma heart, pless ma heart, let me say vat I vill,
Not a Chrishtian or Shentleman minds vat I say!

¹ These verses were suggested by the result of the Clare election, in the year 1828, when the Right Honourable W. Vesey Fitzgerald was rejected, and Mr. O'Connell returned.

² Some expressions to this purport, in a published letter of one of these gentlemen, had then produced a good deal of amusement.

'Tis so pretty a bolus!—just down let it go,
 And, at vonce, such a radical shange you vill see,
 Dat I'd not be surprish'd, like de horse in de show,
 If your heads all vere found, vere your tailsh ought to be!
 Vill nobodies try my nice Annual Pill, &c.

'Twill cure all Electors, and purge away clear 10
 Dat mighty bad itching dey've got in deir hands—
 'Twill cure, too, all Statesmen, of dulness, ma tear,
 Though the case vas as desperate as poor Mister VAN's.
 Dere is nothing at all vat dis Pill vill not reach—
 Give the Sinecure Shentleman von little grain,
 Pless ma heart, it vill act, like de salt on de leech,
 And he'll throw de pounds, shillings, and pence, up again!
 Vill nobodies try my nice Annual Pill, &c.

'Twould be tedious, ma tear, all its peauties to paint— 20
 But, among oder tings fundamentally wrong,
 It vill cure de *Proad Pottom*¹—a common complaint
 Among M. P.'s and weavers—from sitting too long,
 Should symptoms of speeching preak out on a dunce
 (Vat is often de case), it vill stop de disease,
 And pring away all de long speeches at vonce,
 Dat else vould, like tape-worms, come by degrees!
 Vill nobodies try my nice Annual Pill,
 Dat's to purify every ting nashty away?
 Pless ma heart, pless ma heart, let me say vat I vill,
 Not a Chrishtian or Shentleman minds vat I say! 30

'IF' AND 'PERHAPS'

OH tidings of freedom! oh accents of hope!
 Waft, waft them, ye zephyrs, to Erin's blue sea,
 And refresh with their sounds every son of the Pope,
 From Dingle-a-cooch to far Donaghadee.

'If mutely the slave will endure and obey,
 Nor clanking his fetters, nor breathing his pains,
 His masters, perhaps, at some far distant day,
 May think (tender tyrants!) of loosening his chains.'

Wise 'if' and 'perhaps!'—precious salve for our wounds,
 If he, who would rule thus o'er manacled mutes, 10
 Could check the free spring-tide of Mind, that resounds,
 Even now, at his feet, like the sea at Canute's.

But, no, 'tis in vain—the grand impulse is given—
 Man knows his high Charter, and knowing will claim;
 And if ruin must follow where fetters are riven,
 Be theirs, who have forg'd them, the guilt and the shame.

¹ Meaning, I presume, Coalition Administration.

² Written after hearing a celebrated speech in the House of Lords, June 10, 1828, when the motion in favour of Catholic Emancipation, brought forward by the Marquis of Lansdowne, was rejected by the House of Lords.

'If the slave will be silent!'—vain Soldier, beware—
 There is a dead silence the wrong'd may assume,
 When the feeling, sent back from the lips in despair,
 But clings round the heart with a deadlier gloom ;— 20

When the blush, that long burn'd on the suppliant's cheek,
 Gives place to the ' avenger's pale, resolute hue ;
 And the tongue, that once threaten'd, disdaining to speak,
 Consigns to the arm the high office—to do.

If men, in that silence, should think of the hour,
 When proudly their fathers in panoply stood,
 Presenting, alike, a bold front-work of power
 To the despot on land and the foe on the flood :

That hour, when a Voice had come forth from the west,
 To the slave bringing hopes, to the tyrant alarms ; 30
 And a lesson, long look'd for, was taught the oppress,
 That kings are as dust before freemen in arms !

If, awfuller still, the mute slave should recall
 That dream of his boyhood, when Freedom's sweet day
 At length seem'd to break through a long night of thrall,
 And Union and Hope went abroad in its ray ;—

If Fancy should tell him, that Day-spring of Good,
 Though swiftly its light died away from his chain,
 Though darkly it set in a nation's best blood,
 Now wants but invoking to shine out again ;— 40

If—if, I say—breathings like these should come o'er
 The chords of remembrance, and thrill, as they come,
 Then, perhaps—ay, perhaps—but I dare not say more ;
 Thou hast will'd that thy slaves should be mute—I am dumb.

WRITE ON, WRITE ON

A BALLAD

Air.—'Sleep on, sleep on, my Kathleen dear.'

Salvete, fratres asini. St. Francis.

WRITE on, write on, ye Barons dear,
 Ye Dukes, write hard and fast ;
 The good we've sought for many a year
 Your quills will bring at last.
 One letter more, N—wc—stle, pen
 To match Lord K—ny—n's two,
 And more than Ireland's host of men,
 One brace of Peers will do.

Write on, write on, &c.

Sure, never, since the precious use
 Of pen and ink began,
 Did letters, writ by fools, produce
 Such signal good to man.
 While intellect, 'mong high and low,
 Is marching on, they say,

Give me the Dukes and Lords, who go,
 Like crabs, the other way.

Write on, write on, &c.

Even now I feel the coming light—
 Even now, could Folly lure
 My Lord M—ntc—sh—l, too, to write,
 Emancipation's sure.
 By geese (we read in history),
 Old Rome was sav'd from ill ;
 And now, to quills of geese, we see Old Rome indebted still.

Write on, write on, &c.

Write, write, ye Peers, nor stoop to style,
 Nor beat for sense about—
 Things, little worth a Noble's while,
 You're better far without.
 Oh ne'er, since asses spoke of yore,
 Such miracles were done ;
 For, write but four such letters more,
 And Freedom's cause is won !

SONG OF THE DEPARTING
SPIRIT OF TITHE

'The parting Genius is with sighing sent.'
Milton.

It is o'er, it is o'er, my reign is o'er ;
I hear a Voice, from shore to shore,
From Dunfanaghy to Baltimore,
And it saith, in sad, parsonic tone,
'Great Tithe and Small are dead and
gone !'

Even now, I behold your vanishing wings,
Ye Tenths of all conceivable things,
Which Adam first, as Doctors deem,
Saw, in a sort of night-mare dream,¹
After the feast of fruit abhorr'd— 10
First indigestion on record !—

Ye decimate ducks, ye chosen chicks,
Ye pigs which, though ye be Catholics,
Or of Calvin's most select deprav'd,
In the Church must have your bacon
sav'd ;—

Ye fields, where Labour counts his sheaves,
And, whatsoe'er himself believes,
Must bow to the 'Establish'd Church
belief,

That the tenth is always a Protestant
sheaf ;— 19

Ye calves, of which the man of Heaven
Takes Irish tithe, one calf in seven ;²
Ye tenths of rape, hemp, barley, flax,
Eggs,³ timber, milk, fish, and bees' wax ;
All things, in short, since earth's creation,

Doom'd, by the Church's dispensation,
To suffer eternal decimation—
Leaving the whole lay-world, since then,
Reduc'd to nine parts out of ten ;
Or—as we calculate thefts and arsons—
Just ten per cent. the worse for Parsons !

¹ A reverend prebendary of Hereford, in an Essay on the Revenues of the Church of England, has assigned the origin of Tithes to 'some unrecorded revelation made to Adam.'

² The tenth calf is due to the parson of common right ; and if there are seven he shall have one.—Rees's Cyclopaedia, art. 'Tithes.'

³ Chaucer's Plowman complains of the parish rectors, that

'For the tithing of a duck,
Or an apple or an aye (egg),
They make him swear upon a boke ;
Thus they foulen Christ's lay.'

Alas, and is all this wise device 31
For the saving of souls thus gone in a trice ?—

The whole put down, in the simplest way,
By the souls resolving not to pay !
And even the Papists, thankless race,
Who have had so much the easiest case—
To pay for our sermons doom'd, 'tis true,
But not condemn'd to hear them, too—
(Our holy business being, 'tis known,
With the ears of their barley, not their
own,) 40

Even they object to let us pillage,
By right divine, their tenth of tillage,
And, horror of horrors, even decline
To find us in sacramental wine !⁴

It is o'er, it is o'er, my reign is o'er,
Ah, never shall rosy Rector more,
Like the shepherds of Israel, idly eat,
And make of his flock 'a prey and meat.'⁵
No more shall be his the pastoral sport
Of suing his flock in the Bishop's Court,
Through various steps, Citation, Libel—
Scriptures all, but not the Bible ; 52
Working the Law's whole apparatus,
To get at a few pre-doom'd potatoes,
And summoning all the powers of wig,
To settle the fraction of a pig !—
Till, parson and all committed deep
In the case of 'Shepherds versus Sheep,'
The Law usurps the Gospel's place,
And, on Sundays, meeting face to face,
While Plaintiff fills the preacher's station,
Defendants form the congregation. 62

So lives he, Mammon's priest, not Heaven's,

For tenths thus all at sizes and sevens,
Seeking what parsons love no less
Than tragic poets—a good distress.
Instead of studying St. Augustin,
Gregory Nyss., or old St. Justin (Books fit only to hoard dust in), 69
His reverence stints his evening readings
To learn'd Reports of Tithe Proceedings,
Sipping, the while, that port so ruddy,
Which forms his only ancient study ;—

⁴ Among the specimens laid before Parliament of the sort of Church rates levied upon Catholics in Ireland, was a charge of two pipes of port for sacramental wine.

⁵ Ezek. xxxiv. 10.—'Neither shall the shepherds feed themselves any more ; for I will deliver my flock from their mouth, that they may not be meat for them.'

Port so old, you'd swear its tartar
Was of the age of Justin Martyr,
And, had he sipp'd of such, no doubt
His martyrdom would have been—to gout.

Is all then lost?—alas, too true—
Ye Tenths belov'd, adieu, adieu!
My reign is o'er, my reign is o'er— 80
Like old Thumb's ghost, 'I can no
more.'

THE EUTHANASIA OF VAN

'We are told that the bigots are growing old and fast wearing out. If it be so, why not let us die in peace?'—Lord Bexley's Letter to the Freeholders of Kent.

Stop, Intellect, in mercy stop,
Ye curst improvements, cease;
And let poor Nick V—ns—tt—t drop
Into his grave in peace.

Hide, Knowledge, hide thy rising sun,
Young Freedom, veil thy head;
Let nothing good be thought or done,
Till Nick V—ns—tt—t's dead!

Take pity on a dotard's fears,
Who much doth light detest; 10
And let his last few drivelling years
Be dark as were the rest.

You, too, ye fleeting one-pound notes,
Speed not so fast away—
Ye rags, on which old Nicky gloats,
A few months longer stay.¹

Together soon, or much I err,
You both from life may go—
The notes unto the scavenger,
And Nick—to Nick below. 20

Ye Liberals, whate'er your plan,
Be all reforms suspended;
In compliment to dear old Van,
Let nothing bad be mended.

Ye Papists, whom oppression wrings,
Your cry politely cease,
And fret your hearts to fiddle-strings
That Van may die in peace.

So shall he win a fame sublime
By few old rag-men gain'd; 30
Since all shall own, in Nicky's time,
Nor sense, nor justice reign'd.

So shall his name through ages past,
And dolts ungotten yet,
Date from 'the days of Nicholas,'
With fond and sad regret;—

And sighing, say, 'Alas, had he
Been spar'd from Pluto's bowers,
The blessed reign of Bigotry
And Rags might still be ours!' 40

TO THE REVEREND ———

ONE OF THE SIXTEEN REQUISITIONISTS OF NOTTINGHAM

1828.

WHAT, you, too, my ———, in hashes so knowing,
Of sauces and soups Aristarchus protest!
Are you, too, my savoury Brunswicker, going
To make an old fool of yourself with the rest?

Far better to stick to your kitchen receipts;
And—if you want something to tease—for variety,
Go study how Ude, in his 'Cookery,' treats
Live eels, when he fits them for polish'd society.

Just snuggling them in, 'twixt the bars of the fire,
He leaves them to wriggle and writhe on the coals,* 10
In a manner that H—rn—r himself would admire,
And wish, 'stead of eels, they were Catholic souls.

² The only way, Monsieur Ude assures us, to get rid of the oil so objectionable in this fish.

Ude tells us, the fish little suffering feels ;
 While Papists, of late, have more sensitive grown ;
 So, take my advice, try your hand at live eels,
 And, for once, let the other poor devils alone.

I have even a still better receipt for your cook—
 How to make a goose die of confirm'd hepatitis ;¹
 And, if you'll, for once, fellow-feelings o'erlook,
 A well-tortur'd goose a most capital sight is.

20

First, catch him, alive—make a good steady fire—
 Set your victim before it, both legs being tied,
 (As, if left to himself, he might wish to retire,)
 And place a large bowl of rich cream by his side.

There roasting by inches, dry, fever'd, and faint,
 Having drunk all the cream, you so civilly laid, off,
 He dies of as charming a liver complaint
 As ever sleek parson could wish a pie made of.

Besides, only think, my dear one of Sixteen,
 What an emblem this bird, for the epicure's use meant,
 Presents of the mode in which Ireland has been Made a tit-bit for yours and your brethren's amusement :

30

Tied down to the stake, while her limbs, as they quiver,
 A slow fire of tyranny wastes by degrees—
 No wonder disease should have swell'd up her liver,
 No wonder you, Gourmands, should love her disease.

IRISH ANTIQUITIES

ACCORDING to some learn'd opinions The Irish once were Carthaginians ; But, trusting to more late descriptions, I'd rather say they were Egyptians. My reason's this :—the Priests of Isis, Whenforth they march'd in longarray,	Employ'd, 'mong other grave devices, A Sacred Ass to lead the way ;² And still the antiquarian traces 'Mong Irish Lords this Pagan plan, For still, in all religious cases, They put Lord R—d—n in the van.
--	--

A CURIOUS FACT

THE present Lord K—ny—n (the Peer who writes letters,
 For which the waste-paper folks much are his debtors)
 Hath one little oddity, well worth reciting,
 Which puzzlETH observers, even more than his writing.
 Whenever Lord K—ny—n doth chance to behold
 A cold Apple-pie—mind, the pie must be cold—
 His Lordship looks solemn (few people know why),
 And he makes a low bow to the said apple-pie.
 This idolatrous act, in so 'vital' a Peer,
 Is, by most serious Protestants, thought rather queer—
 Pie-worship, they hold, coming under the head
 (Vide Crustium, chap. iv.) of the Worship of Bread.

10

¹ A liver complaint. The process by which the livers of geese are enlarged for the famous Pâté de foie d'oie.

² To this practice the ancient adage alludes,
 'Asinus portans mysteria.'

Some think 'tis a tribute, as author, he owes
 For the service that pie-crust hath done to his prose;—
 The only good things in his pages, they swear,
 Being those that the pastry-cook sometimes puts there.
Others say, 'tis a homage, through pie-crust convey'd,
 To our Glorious Deliverer's much-honour'd shade;
 As that Protestant Hero (or Saint, if you please)
 Was as fond of cold pie as he was of green peas,¹ 20
 And 'tis solely in loyal remembrance of that,
 My Lord K—ny—n to apple-pie takes off his hat.
 While others account for this kind salutation
 By what Tony Lumpkin calls 'concatenation';—
 A certain good-will that, from sympathy's ties,
 'Twixt old Apple-women and Orange-men lies.

But 'tis needless to add, these are all vague surmises,
 For thus, we're assur'd, the whole matter arises:
 Lord K—ny—n's respected old father (like many Respected old fathers) was fond of a penny; 30
 And lov'd so to save,² that—there's not the least question—
 His death was brought on by a bad indigestion,
 From cold apple-pie-crust his Lordship would stuff in,
 At breakfast, to save the expense of hot muffin.
 Hence it is, and hence only, that cold apple-pies
 Are beheld by his Heir with such reverent eyes—
 Just as honest King Stephen his beaver might doff
 To the fishes that carried his kind uncle off—
 And while filial piety urges so many on,
 'Tis pure apple-pie-ety moves my Lord K—ny—n. 40

NEW-FASHIONED ECHOES

SIR,

Most of your readers are, no doubt, acquainted with the anecdote told of a certain, not over-wise, judge, who, when in the act of delivering a charge in some country court-house, was interrupted by the braying of an ass at the door. 'What noise is that?' asked the angry judge. 'Only an extraordinary echo there is in court, my Lord,' answered one of the counsel.

As there are a number of such 'extraordinary echoes' abroad just now, you will not, perhaps, be unwilling, Mr. Editor, to receive the following few lines suggested by them.

Yours, &c.

S.

Huc coeamus,³ ait; nullique libentius unquam
 Responsura sono, Coeamus, retulit echo.

Ovid.

THERE are echoes, we know, of all sorts,
 From the echo, that 'dies in the dale,'
 To the 'airy-tongued babbler,' that sports
 Up the tide of the torrent her 'tale.'

¹ See the anecdote, which the Duchess of Marlborough relates in her Memoirs of this polite hero appropriating to himself one day, at dinner, a whole dish of green peas—the first

There are echoes that bore us, like Blues,
 With the latest smart not they have
 heard;

There are echoes, extremely like shrews,
 Letting nobody have the last word.

In the bogs of old Paddy-land, too,
 Certain 'talented' echoes 'there
 dwell, 10

Who, on being ask'd, 'How do you do?'
 Politely reply, 'Pretty well.'

But why should I talk any more
 Of such old-fashion'd echoes as these,
 When Britain has new ones in store,
 That transcend them by many degrees?

of the season—while the poor Princess Anne, who was then in a long condition, sat by, vainly entreating, with her eyes, for a share.

² The same prudent propensity characterises his descendant, who (as is well known) would not even go to the expense of a dipthong on his father's monument, but had the inscription spelled, economically, thus:—'Mors janua vita.'

³ 'Let us form Clubs.'

⁴ Commonly called 'Paddy Blake's Echoes.'

For, of all repercussions of sound,
Concerning which bards make a
pothor,

There's none like that happy rebound
When one blockhead echoes another;—

When K—ny—n commences the bray,²¹
And the Borough-Duke follows his
track;

And loudly from Dublin's sweet bay,
R—thd—ne brays, with interest,
back;—

And while, of most echoes the sound
On our ear by reflection doth fall,
These Brunswickers¹ pass the bray
round,
Without any reflection at all.

Oh Scott, were I gifted like you,
Who can name all the echoes there
are 30

From Benvoirlich to bold Ben-venue,
From Benledi to wild Uamvar;

I might track, through each hard Irish
name,

The rebounds of this asinine strain,
Till from Neddy to Neddy, it came
To the chief Neddy, K—ny—n, again;

Might tell how it roar'd in R—thd—ne,
How from D—ws—n it died off
genteelly—

How hollow it rung from the crown
Of the fat-pated Marquis of E—y; 40

How, on hearing my Lord of G—e,
Thistle-eaters, the stoutest, gave way,
Outdone, in their own special line,
By the forty-ass power of his bray!

But, no—for so humble a bard
'Tis a subject too trying to touch on;
Such noblemen's names are too hard,
And their noddles too soft to dwell much on.

Oh Echo, sweet nymph of the hill,
Of the dell, and the deep-sounding shelves; 50

If, in spite of Narcissus, you still Take to fools who are charm'd with themselves,

¹ Anti-Catholic associations, under the title of Brunswick Clubs, were at this time becoming numerous both in England and Ireland.

Who knows but, some morning retiring,
To walk by the Trent's wooded
side,

You may meet with N—wc—stle, admir-
ing
His own lengthen'd ears in the tide!

Or, on into Cambria straying,
Find K—ny—n, that double-tongued
elf,

In his love of ass-cendency, braying 60
A Brunswick duet with himself!

INCANTATION

FROM THE NEW TRAGEDY OF 'THE BRUNSWICKERS'

1828.

SCENE.—Penenden Plain. In the middle, a cal-dron boiling. Thunder.—Enter Three Brunswickers.

1st Brun.—THrice hath scribbling
K—ny—n scrawl'd,

2nd Brun.—Once hath fool N—w-castle bawl'd,

3rd Brun.—B—xl—y snores :—'tis time, 'tis time,

1st Brun.—Round about the caldron
go;

In the poisonous nonsense throw.

Bigot spite, that long hath grown,

Like a toad within a stone,

Sweltering in the heart of Sc—tt,

Boil we in the Brunswick pot.

All.—Dribble, dribble, nonsense
dribble, 10

Eld—n, talk, and K—ny—n, scribble.

2nd Brun.—Slaver from N—wc—stle's quill

In the noisome mess distil,

Brimming high our Brunswick broth

Both with venom and with froth.

Mix the brains (though apt to hash ill,

Being scant) of Lord M—ntc—shel,

With that malty stuff which Ch—nd—s
Drivels as no other man does.

Catch (i.e. if catch you can) 20

One idea, spick and span,

From my Lord of S—l—sb—y,—

One idea, though it be

Smaller than the 'happy flea,'

Which his sire, in sonnet terse,
 Wedded to immortal verse.¹
 Though to rob the son is sin,
 Put his one idea in ;
 And, to keep it company,
 Let that conjuror W—nch—ls—a 30
 Drop but half another there,
 If he hath so much to spare.
 Dreams of murders and of arsons,
 Hatch'd in heads of Irish parsons,
 Bring from every hole and corner,
 Where ferocious priests, like H—rn—r,
 Purely for religious good,
 Cry aloud for Papist's blood,
 Blood for W—lls, and such old women,
 At their ease to wade and swim in. 40
All.—Dribble, dribble, nonsense drib-
 ble,
 B—xl—y, talk, and K—ny—n, scribble.
 3rd Bruns.—Now the charm begin to brew ;
 Sisters, sisters, add thereto
 Scraps of L—thbr—dge's old speeches,
 Mix'd with leather from his breeches.

Rinsings of old B—xl—y's brains,
 Thicken'd (if you'll take the pains)
 With that pulp which rags create,
 In their middle, nympha state, 50
 Ere, like insects frail and sunny,
 Forth they wing abroad as money.
 There—the Hell-brothwe'venchanted—
 Now but one thing more is wanted.
 Squeeze o'er all that Orange juice,
 C—— keeps cork'd for use,
 Which, to work the better spell, is Colour'd deep with blood of ——,
 Blood, of powers far more various,
 Even than that of Januarius, 60
 Since so great a charm hangs o'er it !
 England's parsons bow before it !
All.—Dribble, dribble, nonsense drib-
 ble,
 B—xl—y, talk, and K—ny—n, scribble.
 2nd Bruns.—Cool it now with ——'s
 blood,
 So the charm is firm and good.

[Exeunt.]

HOW TO MAKE A GOOD POLITICIAN

WHENE'ER you're in doubt, said a Sage I once knew,
 'Twixt two lines of conduct which course to pursue,
 Ask a woman's advice, and, whate'er she advise,
 Do the very reverse, and you're sure to be wise.

Of the same use as guides, are the Brunswicker throng ;
 In their thoughts, words, and deeds, so instinctively wrong,
 That, whatever they counsel, act, talk, or indite,
 Take the opposite course, and you're sure to be right.

So golden this rule, that, had nature denied you
 The use of that finger-post, Reason, to guide you— 10
 Were you even more doltish than any given man is,
 More soft than N—wc—stle, more twaddling than Van is,
 I'd stake my repute, on the following conditions,
 To make you the soundest of sound politicians.

Place yourself near the skirts of some high-flying Tory—
 Some Brunswicker parson, of port-drinking glory,—
 Watch well how he dines, during any great Question—
 What makes him feed gally, what spoils his digestion—
 And always feel sure that his joy o'er a stew
 Portends a clear case of dyspepsia to you. 20

¹ Alluding to a well-known lyric composition of the late Marquis, which, with a slight alteration, might be addressed either to a flea or a fly. For instance :—

'Oh, happy, happy, happy fly,
 If I were you, or you were I.'

Or,

'Oh, happy, happy, happy flea,
 If I were you, or you were me ;
 But since, alas, that cannot be,
 I must remain Lord S——y.'

Read him backwards, like Hebrew—whatever he wishes,
 Or praises, note down as absurd, or pernicious.
 Like the folks of a weather-house, shifting about,
 When he's out, be an In—when he's in, be an Out.
 Keep him always revers'd in your thoughts, night and day,
 Like an Irish barometer turn'd the wrong way:—
 If he's up, you may swear that foul weather is nigh;
 If he's down, you may look for a bit of blue sky.
 Never mind what debaters or journalists say,
 Only ask what he thinks, and then think t'other way. 30
 Does he hate the Small-note Bill? then firmly rely
 The Small-note Bill's a blessing, though you don't know why.
 Is Brougham his aversion? then Harry's your man.
 Does he quake at O'Connell? take doubly to Dan.
 Is he all for the Turks? then, at once, take the whole
 Russian Empire (Czar, Cossacks, and all) to your soul.
 In short, whatsoever he talks, thinks, or is,
 Be your thoughts, words, and essence the contrast of his.
 Nay, as Siamese ladies—at least, the polite ones—
 All paint their teeth black, 'cause the devil has white ones— 40
 If ev'n, by the chances of time or of tide,
 Your Tory, for once, should have sense on his side,
 Even then stand aloof—for, be sure that Old Nick,
 When a Tory talks sensibly, means you some trick.

Such my recipe is—and, in one single verse,
 I shall now, in conclusion, its substance rehearse.
 Be all that a Brunswicker is not, nor could be,
 And then—you'll be all that an honest man should be.

EPISTLE OF CONDOLENCE

FROM A SLAVE-LORD TO A COTTON-LORD

ALAS! my dear friend, what a state of affairs!
 How unjustly we both are despoil'd of our rights!
 Not a pound of black flesh shall I leave to my heirs,
 Nor must you any more work to death little whites.

Both forc'd to submit to that general controller
 Of Kings, Lords, and cotton mills, Public Opinion,
 No more shall you beat with a big-billy-roller,
 Nor I with the cart-whip assert my dominion.

Whereas, were we suffer'd to do as we please
 With our Blacks and our Whites, as of yore we were let,
 We might range them alternate, like harpsichord keys,
 And between us thump out a good piebald duet.

But this fun is all over;—farewell to the zest
 Which Slavery now lends to each tea-cup we sip;
 Which makes still the cruellest coffee the best,
 And that sugar the sweetest which smacks of the whip.

Farewell, too, the Factory's white picaninnies—
 Small, living machines, which, if flogg'd to their tasks,
 Mix so well with their namesakes, the 'Billies' and 'Jennies,'
 That which have got souls in 'em nobody asks;—

Little Maids of the Mill, who, themselves but ill-fed,
Are oblig'd, 'mong their other benevolent cares,
To 'keep feeding the scribblers,'¹—and better, 'tis said,
Than old Blackwood or Fraser have ever fed theirs.

All this is now o'er, and so dismal my loss is,
So hard 'tis to part from the smack of the thong,
That I mean (from pure love for the old whipping process),
To take to whipt syllabub all my life long.

THE GHOST OF MILTIADES

Ah quoties dubius Scriptis exarsit amator! Ovid.

THE Ghost of Miltiades came at night,
And he stood by the bed of the Benthamite,
And he said, in a voice, that thrill'd the frame,
'If ever the sound of Marathon's name
Hath fir'd thy blood or flush'd thy brow,
Lover of Liberty, rouse thee now!'

The Benthamite, yawning, left his bed—
Away to the Stock Exchange he sped,
And he found the Scrip of Greece so high,
That it fir'd his blood, it flush'd his eye,
And oh, 'twas a sight for the Ghost to see, 10
For never was Greek more Greek than he!
And still as the premium higher went,
His ecstasy rose—so much per cent.,
(As we see in a glass, that tells the weather,
The heat and the silver rise together,)
And Liberty sung from the patriot's lip,
While a voice from his pocket whisper'd 'Scrip!'
The Ghost of Miltiades came again;—
He smil'd, as the pale moon smiles through rain, 20
For his soul was glad at that patriot strain;
(And poor, dear ghost—how little he knew
The jobs and the tricks of the Philhellene crew!)
'Blessings and thanks!' was all he said,
Then, melting away, like a night-dream, fled!

The Benthamite hears—amaz'd that ghosts
Could be such fools,—and away he posts,
A patriot still? Ah no, ah no—
Goddess of Freedom, thy Scrip is low,
And, warm and fond as thy lovers are, 30
Thou triest their passion, when under par.
The Benthamite's ardour fast decays,
By turns he weeps, and swears, and prays,
And wishes the d—l had Crescent and Cross,
Ere he had been forc'd to sell at a loss.
They quote him the Stock of various nations,
But, spite of his classic associations,
Lord, how he loathes the Greek quotations!

¹ One of the operations in cotton mills usually performed by children.

'Who'll buy my Scrip? Who'll buy my Scrip?'

Is now the theme of the patriot's lip,
As he runs to tell how hard his lot is
To Messrs. Orlando and Luriottis,
And says, 'Oh Greece, for Liberty's sake,
Do buy my Scrip, and I vow to break
Those dark, unholy bonds of thine—
If you'll only consent to buy up mine!'
The Ghost of Miltiades came once more;—
His brow, like the night, was lowering o'er,
And he said, with a look that flash'd dismay,
'Of Liberty's foes the worst are they,
Who turn to a trade her cause divine,
And gamble for gold on Freedom's shrine!'
Thus saying, the Ghost, as he took his flight,
Gave a Parthian kick to the Benthamite,
Which sent him, whimpering, off to Jerry—
And vanish'd away to the Stygian ferry!

ALARMING INTELLIGENCE—REVOLUTION IN THE DICTIONARY —ONE GALT AT THE HEAD OF IT

God preserve us!—there's nothing now safe from assault;—
Thrones toppling around, churches brought to the hammer;
And accounts have just reach'd us that one Mr. Galt
Has declar'd open war against English and Grammar!

He had long been suspected of some such design,
And, the better his wicked intents to arrive at,
Had lately 'mong C—lb—n's troops of the line
(The penny-a-line men) enlisted as private.

There school'd, with a rabble of words at command,
Scotch, English, and slang, in promiscuous alliance,
He, at length, against Syntax has taken his stand,
And sets all the Nine Parts of Speech at defiance.

10

Next advices, no doubt, further facts will afford;
In the mean time the danger most imminent grows,
He has taken the Life of one eminent Lord,
And whom he'll next murder the Lord only knows.

Wednesday Evening.

Since our last, matters, luckily, look more serene;
Though the rebel, 'tis stated, to aid his defection,
Has seized a great Powder—no, Puff Magazine,
And the' explosions are dreadful in every direction.

20

What his meaning exactly is, nobody knows,
As he talks (in a strain of intense botheration)
Of lyrical 'ichor,'¹ 'gelatinous' prose,²
And a mixture call'd amber immortalization.³

² 'That gelatinous character of their effustions.'—Ibid.

³ 'The poetical embalment, or rather, amber immortalization.'—Ibid.

Now, he raves of a bard he once happen'd to meet,
 Seated high 'among rattlings,' and churning a sonnet;¹
 Now, talks of a mystery, wrapp'd in a sheet,
 With a halo (by way of a nightcap) upon it!²

We shudder in tracing these terrible lines;
 Something bad they must mean, though we can't make it out; 30
 For, whate'er may be guess'd of Galt's secret designs,
 That they're all Anti-English no Christian can doubt.

RESOLUTIONS

PASSED AT A LATE MEETING OF REVERENDS AND RIGHT REVERENDS

RESOLV'D—to stick to every particle
 Of every Creed and every Article;
 Reforming nought, or great or little,
 We'll stanchly stand by every tittle,³
 And scorn the swallow of that soul
 Which cannot boldly bolt the whole.

Resolv'd that, though St. Athanasius
 In damning souls is rather spacious—
 Though wide and far his curses fall, 9
 Our Church 'hath stomach for them all;
 And those who're not content with such,
 May e'en be d—d ten times as much.
 Resolv'd—such liberal souls are we—
 Though hating Nonconformity,
 We yet believe the cash no worse is
 That comes from Nonconformist purses.
 Indifferent whence the money reaches
 The pockets of our reverend breeches,
 To us the Jumper's jingling penny
 Chinks with a tone as sweet as any; 20
 And even our old friends Yea and Nay
 May through the nose for ever pray,
 If also through the nose they'll pay.

Resolv'd, that Hooper,⁴ Latimer,⁵
 And Cranmer,⁶ all extremely err,
 In taking such a low-bred view
 Of what Lords Spiritual ought to do:—
 All owing to the fact, poor men,
 That Mother Church was modest then,

¹ 'Sitting amidst the shrouds and rattlings, churning an inarticulate melody.'—Galt's Life of Byron.

² 'He was a mystery in a winding sheet, crowned with a halo.'—Ibid.

³ One of the questions propounded to the Puritans in 1578 was—'Whether the Book of Service was good and godly, every tittle grounded on the Holy Scripture?' 'On which an honest Dissenter remarks,—"Surely they had a wonderful opinion of their Service Book that there was not a tittle amiss in it."

⁴ 'They,' the Bishops, 'know that the primitive Church had no such Bishops. If the fourth

Nor knew what golden eggs her goose, 30
 The Public, would in time produce.
 One Pisgah peep at modern Durham
 To far more lordly thoughts would stir
 'em.

Resolv'd, that when we, Spiritual Lords,
 Whose income just enough affords
 To keep our Spiritual Lordships cozy,
 Are told, by Antiquarians prosy,
 How ancient Bishops cut up theirs,
 Giving the poor the largest shares—
 Our answer is, in one short word, 40
 We think it pious, but absurd.

Those good men made the world their
 debtor,
 But we, the Church reform'd, know
 better;
 And, taking all that all can pay,
 Balance the' account the other way.

Resolv'd, our thanks profoundly due are
 To last month's Quarterly Reviewer,
 Who proves (by arguments so clear
 One sees how much he holds per year)
 That England's Church, though out of date, 50

Must still be left to lie in state,
 As dead, as rotten, and as grand as
 The mummy of King Osymandias,
 All pickledsnug—the brains drawn out⁷—
 With costly ceremonies swath'd about,—
 And 'Touch me not,' those words terrific,

Scrawl'd o'er her in good hieroglyphic.

part of the bishopric remained unto the Bishop, it were sufficient.'—On the Commandments, p. 72.

⁵ 'Since the Prelates were made Lords and Nobles, the plough standeth, there is no work done, the people starve.'—Lat. Serm.

⁶ 'Of whom have come all these glorious titles, styles, and pomps into the Church. But I would that I, and all my brethren, the Bishops, would leave all our styles, and write the styles of our offices,' &c.—Life of Cranmer, by Strype.

SIR ANDREW'S DREAM

'Nec tu sperne piis venientia somnia portis:
Cum pia venerunt somnia, pondus habent.'

Propert. lib. iv, eleg. 7

As snug, on a Sunday eve, of late,
In his easy chair Sir Andrew sate,
Being much too pious, as every one knows,
To do aught, of a Sunday eve, but doze,
He dreamt a dream, dear, holy man,
And I'll tell you his dream as well as I can.
He found himself, to his great amaze,
In Charles the First's high Tory days,
And just at the time that gravest of Courts
Had publish'd its Book of Sunday Sports.¹
Sunday Sports! what a thing for the ear
Of Andrew, even in sleep, to hear!—
It chanc'd to be, too, a Sabbath day,
When the people from church were coming away;
And Andrew with horror heard this song,
As the smiling sinners flock'd along:—
'Long life to the Bishops, hurrah! hurrah
For a week of work and a Sunday of play
Make the poor man's life run merry away.'

10

'The Bishops!' quoth Andrew, 'Popish, I guess,'
And he grinned with conscious holiness.
But the song went on, and, to brim the cup
Of poor Andy's grief, the fiddles struck up!

20

'Come, take out the lasses—let's have a dance—
For the Bishops allow us to skip our fill,
Well knowing that no one's the more in advance
On the road to heaven, for standing still.
Oh, it never was meant that grim grimaces
Should sour the cream of a creed of love;
Or that fellows with long, disastrous faces,
Alone should sit among cherubs above.
Then hurrah for the Bishops, &c.

30

For Sunday fun we never can fail,
When the Church herself each sport points out;—
There's May-games, archery, Whitsun-ale,
And a May-pole high to dance about.
Or, should we be for a pole hard driven,
Some lengthy saint, of aspect fell,
With his pockets on earth, and his nose in heaven,
Will do for a May-pole just as well.

40

¹ The Book of Sports drawn up by Bishop Moreton was first put forth in the reign of James I, 1618, and afterwards republished, at the advice of Laud, by Charles I, 1633, with an injunction that it should be 'made public by order from the Bishops.' We find it therein declared, that 'for his good people's recreation, his Majesty's pleasure was, that after the end of divine service they should not be disturbed, letted, or discouraged from any lawful recreations, such as dancing, either of men or women, archery for men, leaping, vaulting, or any such harmless recreations, nor having of May-games, Whitsun-ales, or Morris-dances, or setting up of May-poles, or other sports therewith used,' &c.

Then hurrah for the Bishops, hurrah ! hurrah !
 A week of work and a Sabbath of play
 Make the poor man's life run merry away.'

To Andy, who doesn't much deal in history,
 This Sunday scene was a downright mystery ;
 And God knows where might have ended the joke,
 But, in trying to stop the fiddles, he woke.
 And the odd thing is (as the rumour goes)
 That since that dream—which, one would suppose,
 Should have made his godly stomach rise, 50
 Even more than ever, 'gainst Sunday pies—
 He has view'd things quite with different eyes ;
 Is beginning to take, on matters divine,
 Like Charles and his Bishops, the sporting line—
 Is all for Christians jigging in pairs,
 As an interlude 'twixt Sunday prayers ;—
 Nay, talks of getting Archbishop H—l—y
 To bring in a Bill, enacting duly,
 That all good Protestants, from this date,
 May, freely and lawfully, recreate, 60
 Of a Sunday eve, their spirits moody,
 With Jack in the Straw, or Punch and Judy.

A BLUE LOVE-SONG

TO MISS ———

Air.—' Come live with me, and be my love.'

COME wed with me, and we will write,
 My Blue of Blues, from morn till night.
 Chas'd from our classic souls shall be
 All thoughts of vulgar progeny ;
 And thou shalt walk through smiling rows

Of chubby duodecimos,
 While I, to match thy products nearly,
 Shall lie-in of a quarto yearly.
 'Tis true, ev'n books entail some trouble ;
 But live productions give one double.
 Correcting children is such bother,—
 While printers' devils correct the other.
 Just think, my own Malthusian dear,
 How much more decent 'tis to hear
 From male or female—as it may be—
 'How is your book ?' than 'How's your baby ?'

And, whereas physic and wet nurses
 Do much exhaust paternal purses,

Our books, if rickety, may go
 And be well dry-nurs'd in the Row ;
 And, when God wills to take them hence
 Are buried at the Row's expense.

Besides (as 'tis well prov'd by thee,
 In thy own Works, vol. 93)
 The march, just now, of population
 So much outstrips all moderation,
 That even prolific herring-shoals
 Keep pace not with our erring souls.¹
 Oh far more proper and well-bred
 To stick to writing books instead ;
 And show the world how two Blue lovers
 Can coalesce, like two book-covers,
 (Sheep-skin, or calf, or such wise leather,)
 Letter'd at back, and stitch'd together,
 Fondly as first the binder fix'd 'em,
 With nought but—literature betwixt
 'em.

¹ See Ellis of Garveloch.—Garveloch being a place where there was a large herring-fishery, but where, as we are told by the author, 'the people increased much faster than the produce.'

SUNDAY ETHICS

A SCOTCH ODE

PURE, profligate Londoners, having heard tell
That the De'il's got amang ye, and fearing 'tis true,
We ha' sent ye a mon wha's a match for his spell,
A chiel o' our ain, that the De'il himsel'
Will be glad to keep clear of, one Andrew Agnew.

So, at least, ye may reckon, for ane day entire
In ilka lang week ye'll be tranquil eneugh,
As Auld Nick, do him justice, abhors a Scotch squire,
An' would sooner gae roast by his ain kitchen fire
Than pass a hale Sunday wi' Andrew Agnew.

For, bless the gude mon, gin he had his ain way,
He'd na let a cat on the Sabbath say 'mew;
Nae birdie maun whistle, nae lambie maun play,
An' Phoebus himsel could na travel that day,
As he'd find a new Joshua in Andie Agnew.

Only hear, in your Senate, how awfu' he cries,
'Wae, wae to a' sinners who boil an' who stew!
Wae, wae to a' eaters o' Sabbath-bak'd pies,
For as surely again shall the crust thereof rise
In judgment against ye,' saith Andrew Agnew!

Ye may think, from a' this, that our Andie's the lad
To ca' o'er the coals your nobelity, too;
That their drives, o' a Sunday, wi' flunkies,¹ a' clad
Like Shawmen, behind 'em, would mak the mon mad—
But he's nae sic a noodle, our Andie Agnew.

If Lairds an' fine Ladies, on Sunday, think right
To gang to the deevil—as maist o' em do—
To stop them our Andie would think na polite;
And 'tis odds (if the chiel could get ony thing by 't)
But he'd follow 'em, booing,² would Andrew Agnew.

AWFUL EVENT

YES, W—nch—ls—a (I tremble while I pen it),
W—nch—ls—a's Earl hath cut the British Senate—
Hath said to England's Peers, in accent gruff,
'That for ye all' [snapping his fingers], and exit, in a huff!

Disastrous news!—like that, of old, which spread
From shore to shore, 'our mighty Pan is dead,'
O'er the cross benches (cross from being crost)
Sounds the loud wail, 'Our W—ch—ls—a is lost!'

Which of ye, Lords, that heard him, can forget
The deep impression of that awful threat,
'I quit your house!!'—midst all that histories tell,
I know but one event that's parallel:—

² For the 'gude effects and utility of booing,' see the Man of the World.

It chanc'd at Drury Lane, one Easter night,
 When the gay gods, too blest to be polite,
 Gods at their ease, like those of learn'd Lucretius,
 Laugh'd, whistled, groan'd, uproariously facetious—
 A well-dress'd member of the middle gallery,
 Whose 'ears polite' disdain'd such low canaillerie,
 Rose in his place—so grand, you'd almost swear
 Lord W—nch—is—a himself stood towering there—
 And like that Lord of dignity and nous,
 Said, 'Silence, fellows, or—I'll leave the house!!'

How brook'd the gods this speech? Ah well-a-day,
 That speech so fine should be so thrown away!
 In vain did this mid-gallery grandee
 Assert his own two-shilling dignity—
 In vain he menac'd to withdraw the ray
 Of his own full-price countenance away—
 Fun against Dignity is fearful odds,
 And as the Lords laugh now, so giggled then the gods!

THE NUMBERING OF THE CLERGY

PARODY ON SIR CHARLES HAN.

WILLIAMS'S FAMOUS ODE,

'COME, CLOE, AND GIVE ME SWEET KISSES'
 'We want more Churches and more Clergymen.' Bishop of London's late Charge.
 'Rectorum numerum, terris pereuntibus,
 augent.' Claudian in Eutrop.

COME, give us more Livings and Rectors,

For, richer no realm ever gave;
 But why, ye unchristian objectors,
 Do ye ask us how many we crave? ¹

Oh, there can't be too many rich
 Livings

For souls of the Pluralist kind,
 Who, despising old Cocker's misgivings,
 To numbers can ne'er be confin'd. ²

Count the cormorants hovering about, ³
 At the time their fish season sets in,
 When these models of keen diners-out
 Are preparing their beaks to begin.

¹ Come, Cloe, and give me sweet kisses,
 For sweeter sure never girl gave;
 But why, in the midst of my blisses,
 Do you ask me how many I'd have?

² For whilst I love thee above measure,
 To numbers I'll ne'er be confin'd.

³ Count the bees that on Hybla are playing,
 Count the flowers that enamel its fields,
 Count the flocks, &c.

Count the rooks that, in clerical dresses,
 Flockround when the harvest's in play,
 And, not minding the farmer's distresses,
 Like devils in grain peck away.

Go, number the locusts in heaven, ⁴
 On their way to some titheable shore;
 And when so many Parsons you've given,
 We still shall be craving for more.

Then, unless ye the Church would submerge, ye
 Must leave us in peace to augment,
 For the wretch who could number the Clergy,
 With few will be ever content. ⁵

A SAD CASE

'If it be the undergraduate season at which this rabies religiosa is to be so fearful, what security has Mr. G—lb—n against it at this moment, when his son is actually exposed to the full venom of an association with Dissenters?'—The Times, March 25.

How sad a case!—just think of it—
 If G—lb—n junior should be bit
 By some insane Dissenter, roaming Through Granta's halls, at large and foaming,

⁴ Go number the stars in the heaven,
 Count how many sands on the shore;
 When so many kisses you've given,
 I still shall be craving for more.

⁵ But the wretch who can number his kisses,
 With few will be ever content.

And with that aspect, ultra crabbed
Which marks Dissenters when they're rabid !

God only knows what mischiefs might Result from this one single bite,
Or how the venom, once suck'd in,
Might spread and rage through kith and
kin. 10

Mad folks, of all denominations,
First turn upon their own relations :
So that one G—lb—n, fairly bit,
Might end in maddening the whole kit,
Till, ah, ye gods, we'd have to rue
Our G—lb—n senior bitten too ;
The Hychurchphobia in those veins,
Where Tory blood now redly reigns ;—
And that dear man, who now perceives
Salvation only in lawn sleeves, 20
Might, tainted by such coarse infection,
Run mad in the' opposite direction,
And think, poor man, 'tis only given
To linsey-woolsey to reach Heaven !

Just fancy what a shock 'twould be
Our G—lb—n in his fits to see,
Tearing into a thousand particles
His once lov'd Nine and Thirty Articles ;
(Those Articles his friend, the Duke,¹
For Gospel, t'other night, mistook ;) 30
Cursing cathedrals, deans, and singers—
Wishing the ropes might hang the ringers—

Pelting the church with blasphemies,
Even worse than Parson B—v—rl—y's ;—
And ripe for severing Church and State,
Like any creedless reprobate,
Or like that class of Methodists
Prince Waterloo styles 'Atheists !'

But 'tis too much—the Muse turns pale,
And o'er the picture drops a veil, 40
Praying, God save the G—lb—rns all
From mad Dissenters, great and small !

A DREAM OF HINDOSTAN

— risum teneatis, amici.

'THE longer one lives, the more one learns,'

Said I, as off to sleep I went,
Bemus'd with thinking of Tithe concerns,
And reading a book, by the Bishop of FERNS,²

On the Irish Church Establishment.
But, lo, in sleep, not long I lay,
When Fancy her usual tricks began,

And I found myself bewitch'd away
To a goodly city in Hindostan—
A city, where he, who dares to dine 10
On aught but rice, is deem'd a sinner ;
Where sheep and kine are held divine,
And, accordingly—never drest for dinner.

'But how is this ?' I wond'ring cried—
As I walk'd that city, fair and wide,
And saw, in every marble street,
A row of beautiful butchers' shops—
'What means, for men who don't eat meat,

This grand display of loins and chops ?'
In vain I ask'd—'twas plain to see 20
That nobody dar'd to answer me.

So, on, from street to street I strode ;
And you can't conceive how vastly odd
The butchers look'd—a roseate crew,
Inshrin'd in stalls, with nought to do ;
While some on a bench, half-dozing, sat,
And the Sacred Cows were not more fat.

Still pos'd to think, what all this scene
Of sinecure trade was meant to mean,
'And, pray,' ask'd I—'by whom is paid
The expense of this strange masquerade ?'— 31

'The' expense !—oh that's of course
defray'd

(Said one of these well-fed Hecatombers)
By yonder rascally rice-consumers.'

'What ! they, who mustn't eat meat !'—
'No matter—

(And, while he spoke, his cheeks grew fatter,)

'Therogues may munch their Paddy crop,
But therogues must still support our shop.
And, depend upon it, the way to treat
Heretical stomachs that thus dissent,
Is to burden all that wo'n't eat meat, 41
With a costly MEAT ESTABLISHMENT.'

On hearing these words so gravely said,
With a volley of laughter loud I shook ;
And my slumber fled, and my dream
was sped,
And I found I was lying snug in bed,
With my nose in the Bishop of FERNS'
book.

'the Articles of Christianity.'

pamphlets.

THE BRUNSWICK CLUB

A letter having been addressed to a very distinguished personage, requesting him to become the Patron of this Orange Club, a polite answer was forthwith returned, of which we have been fortunate enough to obtain a copy

Brimstone-hall, September 1, 1828.

Private.—LORD BELZEBUB presents To the Brunswick Club his compliments, And much regrets to say that he Cannot, at present, their Patron be. In stating this, Lord Belzebub Assures, on his honour, the Brunswick Club,

That 'tisn't from any lukewarm lack Of zeal or fire he thus holds back— As even Lord Coal¹ himself is not For the Orange party more red-hot : 10 But the truth is, till their Club affords A somewhat decenter show of Lords, And on its list of members gets A few less rubbishy Baronets, Lord Belzebub must beg to be Excus'd from keeping such company.

Who the devil, he humbly begs to know, Are Lord Gl—nd—ne, and Lord D—nlo ? Or who, with a grain of sense, would go To sit and be bor'd by Lord M—yo ? 20 What living creature—except his nurse— For Lord M—ntc—sh—I cares a curse, Or thinks 'twould matter if Lord M—sk—rry

Were t'other side of the Stygian ferry ? Breathes there a man in Dublin town, Who'd give but half of half-a-crown To save from drowning my Lord R—thd—ne,

Or who wouldn't also gladly hustle in Lords R—d—n, B—nd—n, C—le, and J—c—l—n ?

In short, though, from his tenderest years, 30

Accustom'd to all sorts of Peers, Lord Belzebub much questions whether He ever yet saw, mix'd together, As 'twere in one capacious tub, Such a mess of noble silly-bub As the twenty Peers of the Brunswick Club.

'Tis therefore impossible that Lord B. Could stoop to such society,

Thinking, he owns (though no great prig),

For one in his station 'twere infra dig. 40 But he begs to propose, in the interim (Till they find some prop'r Peers for him),

His Highness of C—mb—d, as Sub, To take his place at the Brunswick Club—

Begging, meanwhile, himself to dub Their obedient servant, BELZEBUB.

It luckily happens, the R—y—I Duke Resembles so much, in air and look, The head of the Belzebub family, That few can any difference see ; 50 Which makes him, of course, the better suit

To serve as Lord B.'s substitute.

PROPOSALS FOR A GYNAECOCRACY

ADDRESSED TO A LATE RADICAL MEETING

———' Quas ipsa decus sibi dia Camilla Delegit pacisque bonas bellicque ministras. Virgil.

As Whig Reform has had its range, And none of us are yet content, Suppose, my friends, by way of change,

We try a Female Parliament ; And since, of late, with he M.P.'s We've far'd so badly, take to she's— Petticoat patriots, flounc'd John Russells, Burdetts in blonde, and Broughams in bustles.

The plan is startling, I confess— But 'tis but an affair of dress ; 10 Nor see I much there is to choose 'Twixt Ladies (so they're thorough bred ones)

In ribands of all sorts of hues, Or Lords in only blue or red ones.

At least, the fiddlers will be winners, Whatever other trade advances ; As then, instead of Cabinet dinners, We'll have, at Almack's, Cabinet dances ; Nor let this world's important questions Depend on Ministers' digestions. 20

If Ude's receipts have done things ill,
 To Weippert's band they may go
 better;
 There's Lady —, in one quadrille,
 Would settle Europe, if you'd let her:
 And who the deuce or asks, or cares,
 When Whigs or Tories have undone 'em,
 Whether they've danc'd through State affairs,
 Or simply, dully, din'd upon 'em?
 Hurrah then for the Petticoats!
 To them we pledge our free-born votes;
 We'll have all she, and only she— 31
 Pert blues shall act as 'best debaters,'
 Old dowagers our Bishops be,
 And termagants our Agitators.
 If Vestris, to oblige the nation,
 Her own Olympus will abandon,
 And help to prop the Administration,
 It can't have better legs to stand on.
 The fam'd Macaulay (Miss) shall show,
 Each evening, forth in learn'd oration;
 Shall move (midst general cries of 'Oh!')
 For full returns of population:
 And, finally, to crown the whole,
 The Princess Olive,¹ Royal soul,
 Shall from her bower in Banco Regis,
 Descend, to bless her faithful lieges,
 And, 'mid our Union's loyal chorus,
 Reign jollily for ever o'er us.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE —

SIR,
 Having heard some rumours respecting the strange and awful visitation under which Lord
 H—nl—y has for some time past been suffering, in consequence of his declared hostility to
 'anthems, solos, duets', &c., I took the liberty of making enquiries at his Lordship's house
 this morning, and lose no time in transmitting to you such particulars as I could collect. It is said that the screams of his Lordship, under the operation of this nightly concert, (which is, no doubt, some trick of the Radicals,) may be heard all over the neighbourhood. The female who personates St. Cecilia is supposed to be the same that, last year, appeared in the character of Isis, at the Rotunda. How the cherubs are managed, I have not yet ascertained.
 Yours, &c. P. P.

LORD H-NL-Y AND ST. CECILIA

—in Metii descendat Judicis aures. Horace.

As snug in his bed Lord H—nl—y lay,
 Revolving much his own renown,
 And hoping to add thereto a ray,
 By putting duets and anthems down,

Sudden a strain of choral sounds
 Mellifluous o'er his senses stole;
 Whereat the Reformer mutter'd,
 'Zounds!
 For he loath'd sweet music with all his soul.

Then, starting up, he saw a sight
 That well might shock so learn'd a snorer— 10
 Saint Cecilia, rob'd in light,
 With a portable organ slung before her.

And round were Cherubs, on rainbow
 wings,
 Who, his Lordship fear'd, might tire
 of flitting,
 So begg'd they'd sit—but ah! poor
 things,
 They'd, none of them, got the means of sitting.²

'Having heard,' said the Saint, 'you're fond of hymns,
 And indeed, that musical snore
 betray'd you,
 Myself, and my choir of cherubims, 19
 Are come, for a while, to serenade
 you.'

In vain did the horrified H—nl—y
 say
 'Twas all a mistake'—'she was mis-directed';
 And point to a concert over the way,
 Where fiddlers and angels were expected.

In vain—the Saint could see in his looks
 (She civilly said) much tuneful lore;
 So, at once, all open'd their music-
 books,
 And herself and her Cherubs set off at score.

All night duets, terzets, quartets,
 Nay, long quintets most dire to hear;
 Ay, and old motets, and canzonets, 31
 And glees, in sets, kept boring his ear:

¹ A personage, so styling herself, who attained considerable notoriety at that period.

² In a work, on Church Reform, published by his Lordship in 1832.

³ 'Asseyez-vous, mes enfans.'—'Il n'y a pas
 de quoi, mon Seigneur.'

He tried to sleep—but it wouldn't do ;
 So loud they squall'd, he must attend
 to 'em ;
 Though Cherubs' songs, to his cost he
 knew,
 Were like themselves, and had no end
 to 'em.
 Oh judgment dire on judges bold,
 Who meddle with music's sacred strains !
 Judge Midas tried the same of old,
 And was punish'd, like H—n—y, for his pains. 40

But worse on the modern judge,
 alas !
 Is the sentence launch'd from Apollo's
 throne ;
 For Midas was given the ears of an ass,
 While H—n—y is doom'd to keep
 his own !

MISSING or lost, last Sunday night,
 A Waterloo coin, whereon was trac'd
 'The' inscription, 'Courage !' in letters
 bright,
 Though a little by rust of years defac'd.
 The metal thereof is rough and hard,
 And ('tis thought of late) mix'd up
 with brass ;
 But it bears the stamp of Fame's award,
 And through all Posterity's hands
 will pass.

How it was lost God only knows,
 But certain City thieves they say,
 Broke in on the owner's evening doze,
 And filch'd this 'gift of gods' away !
 One ne'er could, of course, the Cits suspect,
 If we hadn't, that evening, chanc'd to
 see,
 At the robb'd man's door, a Mare
 elect,
 With an ass to keep her company.

MISSING

Carlton Terrace, 1832.

WHEREAS, Lord——de——
 Left his home last Saturday,
 And, though inquir'd for, round and
 round,
 Through certain purlieus, can't be found ;
 And whereas, none can solve our queries
 As to where this virtuous Peer is,
 Notice is hereby given that all
 May forthwith to inquiring fall,
 As, once the thing's well set about,
 No doubt but we shall hunt him out. 10

His Lordship's mind, of late, they say,
 Hath been in an uneasy way
 Himself and colleagues not being let
 To climb into the Cabinet,
 To settle England's state affairs,
 Hath much, it seems, unsettled theirs ;
 And chief to this stray Plenipo
 Hath been a most distressing blow.
 Already,—certain to receive a
 Well-paid mission to the Neva, 20
 And be the bearer of kind words
 To tyrant Nick from Tory Lords,—
 To fit himself for free discussion,
 His Lordship had been learning Russian ;
 And all so natural to him were
 The accents of the Northern bear,
 That, while his tones were in your ear,
 you
 Might swear you were in sweet Siberia.
 And still, poor Peer, to old and young,
 He goes on raving in that tongue ; 30

dining with the Lord Mayor.

² Among other remarkable attributes by which Sir Cl—d—s distinguished himself, the dazzling whiteness of his favourite steed was not the least conspicuous.

Tells you how much you would enjoy a Trip to Dálnodoubrowskoya ;¹
Talks of such places, by the score, on
As Ouliffirmchinagoboron,²
And swears (for he at nothing sticks)
That Russia swarms with Raskol-niks,³ Though one such Nick, God knows, must be
A more than ample quantity.

Such are the marks by which to know

This stray'd or stolen Plenipo ; 40
And whosoever brings or sends
The unhappy statesman to his friends,
On Carlton Terrace, shall have thanks,
And—any paper but the Bank's.

P.S.—Some think, the disappearance
Of this our diplomatic Peer hence
Is for the purpose of reviewing,
In person, what dear Mig is doing
So as to 'scape all tell-tale letters
'Bout B—s—d, and such abettors,— 50
The only 'wretches' for whose aid
Letters seem not to have been made.

THE DANCE OF BISHOPS ;

OR, THE EPISCOPAL QUADRILLE⁴

1838.

'Solemn dances were, on great festivals and celebrations, admitted among the primitive Christians, in which even the Bishops and dignified Clergy were performers. Scaliger says, that the first Bishops were called Præ- sules,⁵ for no other reason than that they led off these dances.'—Cyclopædia, art. 'Dances.'

I've had such a dream—a frightful
dream—

Though funny, mayhap, to wags 'twill seem,

By all who regard the Church, like
us,

'Twill be thought exceedingly ominous!

As reading in bed I lay last night—
Which (being insured) is my delight—

² Territory belonging to the mines of Kolivanc-Kosskressense.

³ The name of a religious sect in Russia. 'Il existe en Russie plusieurs sectes ; la plus nombreuse est celle des Raskol-niks, ou vraicroiyants.'—Gamba, Voyage dans la Russie Méridionale.

I happen'd to doze off just as I got to
The singular fact which forms my motto.

Only think, thought I, as I doz'd away,
Of a party of Churchmen dancing the hay ! 10
Clerks, curates, and rectors, capering all,
With a neat-legg'd Bishop to open the ball !

Scarce had my eyelids time to close,
When the scene I had fancied before me rose—

An Episcopal Hop, on a scale so grand
As my dazzled eyes could hardly stand.
For, Britain and Erin clubb'd their Sees
To make it a Dance of Dignities,
And I saw—oh brightest of Church events !

A quadrille of the two Establishments,
Bishop to Bishop vis-à-vis, 21
Footing away prodigiously.

There was Bristol capering up to Derry,
And Cork with London making merry ;
While huge Llandaff, with a See, so so,
Was to dear old Dublin pointing his toe.
There was Chester, hatch'd by woman's
smile,

Performing a chaine des Dames in style ;
While he who, where'er the Lords'
House dozes,

Can waken them up by citing Moses,⁷ 30
The portly Tuam was all in a hurry
To set, en avant, to Canterbury.

Meantime, while pamphlets stuff'd his
pockets,
(All out of date, like spent sky-rockets,)
Our Exeter stood forth to caper,
As high on the floor as he doth on paper—
Much like a dapper Dancing Dervise,
Who pirouettes his whole church-service—

Performing, 'midst those reverend souls,

⁴ 'Heav'n first taught letters for some wretch's aid.' Pope.

⁵ Written on the passing of the memorable
Bill, in the year 1833, for the abolition of ten Irish Bishoprics.

⁶ Literally, First Dancers.

⁷ 'And what does Moses say?'—One of the ejaculations with which this eminent prelate enlivened his famous speech on the Catholic question.

Such entrechats, such cabrioles, 40
 Such balonnés,¹ such—rigmaroles,
 Now high, now low, now this, now that,
 That none could guess, what the devil
 he'd be at;
 Though, watching his various steps,
 some thought
 That a step in the Church was all he sought.

But alas, alas! while thus so gay,
 These reverend dancers frisk'd away,
 Nor Paul himself (not the saint, but he
 Of the Opera-house) could brisker be,
 There gather'd a gloom around their glee— 50

A shadow, which came and went so fast,
 That ere one could say, 'Tis there,'
 'twas past—

And, lo, when the scene again was clear'd,
 Ten of the dancers had disappear'd!
 Ten able-bodied quadrillers swept
 From the hallow'd floor where late they
 slept,

While twelve was all that footed it still,
 On the Irish side of that grand Quadrille!

Nor this the worst:—still danc'd they on,
 But the pomp was sadden'd, the smile
 was gone; 60

And again, from time to time, the same
 Ill-omen'd darkness round them came—
 While still, as the light broke out anew,
 Their ranks look'd less by a dozen or
 two;

Till ah! at last there were only found
 Just Bishops enough for a four-hands-
 round;

And when I awoke, impatient getting,
 I left the last holy pair poussetting!

N.B.—As ladies in years, it seems,
 Have the happiest knack at solving
 dreams, 70
 I shall leave to my ancient feminine friends
 Of the Standard to say what this portends.

¹ A description of the method of executing this step may be useful to future performers in the same line:—"Ce pas est composé de deux mouvements différens, savoir, plier, et sauter sur un pied, et se rejeter sur l'autre."—Dictionnaire de Danse, art. 'Contre-temps.'

DICK ———

A CHARACTER

Of various scraps and fragments built,
 Borrow'd alike from fools and wits,
 Dick's mind was like a patchwork quilt,
 Made up of new, old, motley bits—
 Where, if the Co. call'd in their shares,
 If petticoats their quota got,
 And gowns were all refunded theirs,
 The quilt would look but shy, God wot.

And thus he still, new plagiaries seeking,
 Revers'd ventriloquism's trick,
 For, 'stead of Dick through others
 speaking,

'Twas others we heard speak through
 Dick.

A Tory now, all bounds exceeding,
 Now best of Whigs, now worst of rats;
 One day, with Malthus, foe to breeding,
 The next, with Sadler, all for brats. „

Poor Dick!—and how else could it be?
 With notions all at random caught,
 A sort of mental fricassee,
 Made up of legs and wings of thought—
 The leavings of the last Debate, or
 A dinner, yesterday, of wits,
 Where Dick sat by, and, like a waiter,
 Had the scraps for perquisites.

A CORRECTED REPORT OF SOME LATE SPEECHES

'Then I heard one saint speaking, and another saint said unto that saint.'

1834.

St. S.—NCL—R rose and declar'd in sooth,
 That he wouldn't give sixpence to Maynooth.

He had hated priests the whole of his life,
 For a priest was a man who had no wife,²
 And, having no wife, the Church was his mother,

The Church was his father, sister, and brother.

This being the case, he was sorry to say,
 That a gulf 'twixt Papist and Protestant lay,³

of celibacy, which, as it were, gave them the church as their only family, making it fill the places of father and mother and brother."—Debate on the Grant to Maynooth College, The Times, April 19.

³ 'It had always appeared to him that between the Catholic and Protestant a great gulf intervened, which rendered it impossible, &c.

So deep and wide, scarce possible was it
To say even 'how d'ye do?' across it:
And though your Liberals, nimble as fleas,
Could clear such gulfs with perfect ease,
'Twas a jump that nought on earth
could make 13

Your proper, heavy-built Christian take.
No, no,—if a Dance of Sects must be,
He would set to the Baptist willingly,¹
At the Independent deign to smirk,
And rigadoon with old Mother Kirk;
Nay even, for once, if needs must be,
He'd take hands round with all the three;
But, as to a jig with Popery, no,—
To the Harlot ne'er would he point his toe. 21

St. M—n—d—v—le was the next that rose,—

A Saint who round, as pedlar, goes,
With his pack of piety and prose,
Heavy and hot enough, God knows,—
And he said that Papists were much inclin'd

To extirpate all of Protestant kind,
Which he couldn't, in truth, so much condemn, 29

Having rather a wish to extirpate them;

That is,—to guard against mistake,—
To extirpate them for their doctrine's sake;

A distinction Churchmen always make,— Insomuch that, when they've prime control,

Though sometimes roasting heretics
whole,

They but cook the body for sake of the soul.

Next jump'd St. J—hnst—n jollily
forth,

The spiritual Dogberry of the North,²
A right 'wise fellow, and, what's more,
An officer,'³ like his type of yore; 40
And he ask'd, if we grant such toleration,
Pray, what's the use of our Reformation? ⁴

What is the use of our Church and State?
Our Bishops, Articles, Tithe, and Rate?
And, still as he yell'd out 'what's the use?' ⁵

Old Echoes, from their cells recluse
Where they'd for centuries slept, broke loose,

Yelling responsive, 'What's the use?' ⁶

MORAL POSITIONS

A DREAM

'His Lordship said that it took a long time for a moral position to find its way across the Atlantic. He was very sorry that its voyage had been so long,' &c.—Speech of Lord Dudley and Ward on Colonial Slavery, March 8.

T'OTHER night, after hearing Lord Dudley's oration
(A treat that comes once a-year as May-day does),
I dreamt that I saw—what a strange operation!

A 'moral position' shipp'd off for Barbadoes.

The whole Bench of Bishops stood by in grave attitudes,
Packing the article tidy and neat;—
As their Rev'rences know, that in southerly latitudes
'Moral positions' don't keep very sweet.

There was B—th—st arranging the custom-house pass;
And, to guard the frail package from tousing and routing,
There stood my Lord Eld—n, endorsing it 'Glass,'
Though as to which side should lie uppermost, doubting.

¹ 'The Baptist might acceptably extend the offices of religion to the Presbyterian and the Independent, or the member of the Church of England to any of the other three; but the Catholic,' &c.

² 'Could he then, holding as he did a spiritual office in the Church of Scotland,' (cries of hear, and laughter,) 'with any consistency give his consent to a grant of money?' &c.

³ 'I am a wise fellow, and, which is more, an officer.'—Much Ado about Nothing.

⁴ 'What, he asked, was the use of the Reformation? What was the use of the Articles of the Church of England, or of the Church of Scotland?' &c.

The freight was, however, stow'd safe in the hold;
 The winds were polite, and the moon look'd romantic,
 While off in the good ship 'The Truth' we were roll'd,
 With our ethical cargo, across the Atlantic.

Long, dolefully long, seem'd the voyage we made;
 For 'The Truth,' at all times but a very slow sailer,
 By friends, near as much as by foes, is delay'd,
 And few come aboard her, though so many hail her.

At length, safe arriv'd, I went through 'tare and tret,' Deliver'd my goods in the primeest condition,
 And next morning read, in the Bridgetown Gazette,
 'Just arriv'd by "The Truth," a new moral position.'

'The Captain'—here, startled to find myself nam'd
 As 'the Captain'—(a thing which, I own it with pain,
 I through life have avoided,) I woke—look'd asham'd,
 Found I wasn't a captain, and doz'd off again.

THE MAD TORY AND THE COMET

FOUNDED ON A LATE DISTRESSING INCIDENT

1832-3.

'Mutantem regna cometam.' Lucan.¹

'THOUGH all the pet mischiefs we count upon, fail,
 Though Cholera, hurricanes, Wellington leave us,
 We've still in reserve, mighty Comet, thy tail;—
 Last hope of the Tories, wilt thou too deceive us ?

No—'tis coming, 'tis coming, the' avenger is nigh;
 'Heed, heed not, ye placemen, how Herapath flatters;
 One whisk from that tail, as it passes us by,
 Will settle, at once, all political matters;—

'The East-India Question, the Bank, the Five Powers,
 (Now turn'd into two) with their rigmarole Protocols;—' 10
 Ha! ha! ye gods, how this new friend of ours
 Will knock, right and left, all diplomacy's what-d'ye-calls!

'Yes, rather than Whigs at our downfall should mock,
 Meet planets, and suns, in one general hustle!
 While, happy in vengeance, we welcome the shock
 That shall jerk from their places, Grey, Althorp, and Russell.'

Thus spoke a mad Lord, as, with telescope rais'd,
 His wild Tory eye on the heavens he set;
 And, though nothing destructive appear'd as he gaz'd,
 Much hop'd that there would, before Parliament met. 20

And still, as odd shapes seem'd to fit through his glass,
 'Ha! there it is now,' the poor maniac cries;
 While his fancy with forms but too monstrous alas!
 From his own Tory zodiac, peoples the skies:—

¹ Eclipses and comets have been always looked to as great changers of administrations. Thus Milton, speaking of the former:—

'With fear of change
 Perplexing monarchs.'

And in Statius we find,

'Mutant quae sceptrum cometæ

² See, for some of these Protocols, the Annual Register, for the year 1832.

' Now I spy a big body, good heavens, how big !
 Whether Bucky¹ or Taurus I cannot well say :—
 And, yonder, there's Eld—n's old Chancery-wig,
 In its dusty aphelion fast fading away.

I see 'mong those fatuous meteors behind,
 L—nd—nd—ry, in vacuo, flaring about ;— 30
 While that dim double star, of the nebulous kind,
 Is the Gemini, R—den and L—rt—n, no doubt.

Ah, El—b'r—h ! 'faith, I first thought 'twas the Comet ;
 So like that in Milton, it made me quite pale ;
 The head with the same "horrid hair"² coming from it,
 And plenty of vapour, but—where is the tail ?

Just then, up aloft jump'd the gazer elated—
 For, lo, his bright glass a phenomenon show'd,
 Which he took to be C—mb—rl—d, upwards translated,
 Instead of his natural course, t'other road ! 40

But too awful that sight for a spirit so shaken,—
 Down dropp'd the poor Tory in fits and grimaces,
 Then off to the Bedlam in Charles Street was taken,
 And is now one of Halford's most favourite cases.

FROM THE HON. HENRY ———, TO LADY EMMA ———

Paris, March 30, 1832.

You bid me explain, my dear angry Ma'amselle,
 How I came thus to bolt without saying farewell ;
 And the truth is,—as truth you will have, my sweet railer,—

There are two worthy persons I always feel loth
 To take leave of at starting,—my mistress and tailor,—
 As somehow one always has scenes with them both ;
 The Snip in ill-humour, the Syren in tears,
 She calling on Heaven and he on the' attorney,—
 Till sometimes, in short, 'twixt his duns and his dears,
 A young gentleman risks being stopp'd in his journey. 10

But, to come to the point,—though you think, I dare say,
 That 'tis debt or the Cholera drives me away,
 'Pon honour you're wrong ;—such a mere bagatelle
 As a pestilence, nobody, now-a-days, fears ;
 And the fact is, my love, I'm thus bolting, pell-mell,

To get out of the way of these horrid new Peers ;³
 This deluge of coronets, frightful to think of,
 Which England is now, for her sins, on the brink of ;
 This coinage of nobles,—coin'd, all of 'em, badly,
 And sure to bring Counts to a discount most sadly. 20

Only think, to have Lords overrunning the nation,
 As plenty as frogs in a Dutch inundation ;
 No shelter from Barons, from Earls no protection,
 And tadpole young Lords, too, in every direction,—

² 'And from his horrid hair
 Shakes pestilence and war.'

³ A new creation of Peers was generally expected at this time.

Things created in haste, just to make a Court list of,
 Two legs and a coronet all they consist of !
 The prospect's quite frightful, and what Sir George R—se
 (My particular friend) says is perfectly true,
 That, so dire the alternative, nobody knows,
 'Twixt the Peers and the Pestilence, what he's to do ;
 And Sir George even doubts,—could he choose his disorder,—
 'Twixt coffin and coronet, which he would order. 30

This being the case, why, I thought, my dear Emma,
 'Twere best to fight shy of so curs'd a dilemma ;
 And though I confess myself somewhat a villain,
 To've left idol mio without an addio,
 Console your sweet heart, and, a week hence, from Milan
 I'll send you—some news of Bellini's last trio.

N.B.—Have just pack'd up my travelling set-out,
 Things a tourist in Italy can't go without— 40
 Viz., a pair of gants gras, from old Houbigant's shop,
 Good for hands that the air of Mont Cenis might chap.
 Small presents for ladies,—and nothing so wheedles
 The creatures abroad as your golden-eyed needles.
 A neat pocket Horace, by which folks are cozen'd
 To think one knows Latin, when—one, perhaps, doesn't ;
 With some little book about heathen mythology,
 Just large enough to refresh one's theology ;
 Nothing on earth being half such a bore as
 Not knowing the difference 'twixt Virgins and Floras. 50
 Once more, love, farewell, best regards to the girls,
 And mind you beware of damp feet and new Earls.

HENRY.

TRIUMPH OF BIGOTRY

'COLLEGE.—We announced, in our last, that Lefroy and Shaw were returned. They were chaired yesterday ; the Students of the College determined, it would seem, to imitate the mob in all things, harnessing themselves to the car, and the Masters of Arts bearing Orange flags and bludgeons before, beside, and behind the car.'—Dublin Evening Post, Dec. 20, 1832.

AY, yoke ye to the bigots' car,
 Ye chosen of Alma Mater's scions ;—
 Fleet chargers drew the God of War,
 Great Cybele was drawn by lions,
 And Sylvan Pan, as Poets dream,
 Drove four young panthers in his team.
 Thus classical L—fr—y, for once, is,
 Thus, studious of a like turn-out,

He harnesses young sucking dunces,
 To draw him, as their Chief, about,
 And let the world a picture see
 Of Dulness yok'd to Bigotry :
 Showing us how young College hacks
 Can pace with bigots at their backs,
 As though the cubs were born to draw
 Such luggage as L—fr—y and Shaw.

Oh shade of Goldsmith, shade of Swift,
 Bright spirits whom, in days of yore,
 This Queen of Dulness sent adrift,
 As aliens to her foggy shore ;—¹
 Shade of our glorious Grattan, too,
 Whose very name her shame recalls ;
 Whose effigy her bigot crew
 Revers'd upon their monkish walls,—²

¹ See the lives of these two poets for the circumstances under which they left Dublin College.

² In the year 1799, the Board of Trinity College, Dublin, thought proper, as a mode of expressing their disapprobation of Mr. Grattan's public conduct, to order his portrait, in the Great Hall of the University, to be turned upside down, and in this position it remained for some time.

Bear witness (lest the world should doubt)

To your mute Mother's dull renown,
Then famous but for Wit turn'd out,
And Eloquence turn'd upside down;
But now ordain'd new wreaths to win,

Beyond all fame of former days,
By breaking thus young donkies in
To draw M.P.'s, amid the brays
Alike of donkies and M.A.s;—
Defying Oxford to surpass 'em
In this new 'Gradus ad Parnassum.'

TRANSLATION FROM THE GULL LANGUAGE

Scripta manet.

1838.

'Twas grav'd on the Stone of Destiny,¹
In letters four, and letters three;
And ne'er did the King of the Gulls go
by

But those awful letters scar'd his
eye;

For he knew that a Prophet Voice had
said,

'As long as those words by man were read,

The ancient race of the Gulls should ne'er

One hour of peace or plenty share.'

But years on years successive flew,
And the letter still more legible grew,—

At top, a T, an H, an E, 11
And underneath, D. E. B. T.

Some thought them Hebrew,—such as Jews,

More skill'd in Scrip than Scripture,
use;

While some surmis'd 'twas an ancient
way

Of keeping accounts, (well known in the
day

Of the fam'd Didlerius Jeremias,
Who had thereto a wonderful bias,)]

And prov'd in books most learnedly boring, 19

'Twas called the Pontick way of scoring.

¹ Liafail, or the Stone of Destiny,—for which,
see Westminster Abbey.

Howe'er this be, there never were yet
Seven letters of the alphabet,
That, 'twixt them form'd so grim a
spell,

Or scar'd a Land of Gulls so well,
As did this awful riddle-me-ree
Of T. H. E. D. E. B. T.

Hark!—it is struggling Freedom's cry;
'Help, help, ye nations, or I die;

'Tis freedom's fight, and, on the field
Where I expire, your doom is seal'd.' 30
The Gull-King hears the awakening
call,

He hath summon'd his Peers and Patriots
all,

And he asks, 'Ye noble Gulls, shall we

Stand basely by at the fall of the Free,
Nor utter a curse, nor deal a blow?'
And they answer, with voice of thunder,
'No.'

Out fly their flashing swords in the
air!—

But,—why do they rest suspended there?
What sudden blight, what baleful charm,
Hath chill'd each eye, and check'd each arm? 40

Alas! some withering hand hath thrown
The veil from off that fatal stone,
And pointing now, with sapless finger,
Showeth where dark those letters linger,—

Letters four, and letters three,
T. H. E. D. E. B. T.

At sight thereof, each lifted brand
Powerless falls from every hand;
In vain the Patriot knits his brow,—
Even talk, his staple, fails him now. 50
In vain the King like a hero treads,
His Lords of the Treasury shake their heads;

And to all his talk of 'brave and free,'
No answer getteth His Majesty
But 'T. H. E. D. E. B. T.'

In short, the whole Gull nation feels They're fairly spell-bound, neck and heels;

And so, in the face of the laughing world,
Must e'en sit down, with banners furl'd,
Adjourning all their dreams sublime 60
Of glory and war to—some other time.

NOTIONS ON REFORM

BY A MODERN REFORMER

OF all the misfortunes as yet brought to pass
 By this comet-like Bill, with its long tail of speeches,
 The saddest and worst is the schism which, alas!
 It has caus'd between W—th—r—l's waistcoat and breeches.

Some symptoms of this Anti-Union propensity
 Had oft broken out in that quarter before;
 But the breach, since the Bill, has attain'd such immensity,
 Daniel himself could have scarce wish'd it more.

Oh! haste to repair it, ye friends of good order,
 Ye Atw—ds and W—nns, ere the moment is past;
 Who can doubt that we tread upon Anarchy's border,
 When the ties that should hold men are loosening so fast? 10

Make W—th—r—l yield to 'some sort of Reform'
 (As we all must, God help us! with very wry faces),
 And loud as he likes let him bluster and storm
 About Corporate Rights, so he'll only wear braces.

Should those he now sports have been long in possession,
 And, like his own borough, the worse for the wear,
 Advise him, at least, as a prudent concession
 To Intellect's progress, to buy a new pair. 20

Oh! who that e'er saw him, when vocal he stands,
 With a look something midway 'twixt Filch's and Lockit's,
 While still, to inspire him, his deeply thrust hands
 Keep jingling the rhino in both breeches-pockets—

Who that ever has listen'd, through groan and through cough,
 To the speeches inspir'd by this music of pence,—
 But must grieve that there's any thing like falling off
 In that great nether source of his wit and his sense?

Who that knows how he look'd when, with grace debonair,
 He began first to court—rather late in the season—
 Or when, less fastidious, he sat in the chair
 Of his old friend, the Nottingham Goddess of Reason;¹ 30

That Goddess, whose borough-like virtue attracted
 All mongers in both wares to proffer their love;
 Whose chair like the stool of the Pythoness acted,
 As W—th—r—l's rants, ever since, go to prove;²

Who, in short, would not grieve, if a man of his graces
 Should go on rejecting, unwarn'd by the past,
 The 'moderate Reform' of a pair of new braces,
 Till, some day,—he'll all fall to pieces at last. 40

¹ It will be recollected that the learned gentleman himself boasted one night in the House of Commons, of having sat in the very chair which this allegorical lady had occupied.

² Lucan's description of the effects of the tripod on the appearance and voice of the sitter, shows that the symptoms are at least very similar:

Spumes tunc primum rabies vesana per ora
 Effluit
 tunc moestus vastis ululatus in antris.

TORY PLEDGES

I PLEDGE myself through thick and thin,
To labour still, with zeal devout,
To get the Outs, poor devils, in,
And turn the Ins, the wretches, out.

I pledge myself, though much bereft
Of ways and means of ruling ill,
To make the most of what are left,
And stick to all that's rotten still.

Though gone the days of place and pelf,
And drones no more take all the honey,
I pledge myself to cram myself 11
With all I can of public money;

To quarter on that social purse
My nephews, nieces, sisters, brothers,
Nor, so we prosper, care a curse
How much 'tis at the expense of others.

I pledge myself, whenever Right
And Might on any point divide,
Not to ask which is black or white, 19
But take, at once, the strongest side.

For instance, in all Tithe discussions,
I'm for the Reverend encroachers :—
I loathe the Poles, applaud the Russians,
Am for the Squires against the Poachers.

Between the Corn-Lords and the Poor
I've not the slightest hesitation,—
The people must be starv'd to' insure
The Land its due remuneration.

I pledge myself to be no more
With Ireland's wrongs bepros'd or 30
shamm'd,—

I vote her grievances a bore,
So she may suffer, and be d—d.

Or if she kick, let it console us,
We still have plenty of red coats,
To cram the Church, that general bolus,
Down any giv'n amount of throats.

I dearly love the Frankfort Diet,—
Think newspapers the worst of crimes;
And would, to give some chance of quiet,
Hang all the writers of The Times ; 40

Break all their correspondents' bones,
All authors of 'Reply,' 'Rejoinder,'
From the Anti-Tory, Colonel J—es,
To the Anti-Suttee, Mr. P—ynd—r.

Such are the Pledges I propose ;
And though I can't now offer gold,
There's many a way of buying those Who've but the taste for being sold.

So here's, with three times three hurrahs,
A toast, of which you'll not complain,
'Long life to jobbing ; may the days
Of Peculation shine again !' 52

ST. JEROME ON EARTH

FIRST VISIT

1832.

As St. Jerome, who died some ages ago,
Was sitting, one day, in the shades below,
'I've heard much of English bishops,'
quoth he,

'And shall now take a trip to earth, to see How far they agree, in their lives and ways,
With our good old bishops of ancient days.'

He had learn'd—but learn'd without misgivings—

Their love for good living, and eke good
livings ;

Not knowing (as ne'er having taken degrees)

That good living means claret and fricassees, 10

While its plural means simply—pluralities.

'From all I hear,' said the innocent man,
'They are quite on the good old primitive plan.

For wealth and pomp they little can care,
As they all say "No" to the' Episcopal chair ;

And their vestal virtue it well denotes,
That they all, good men, wear petticoats.'

Thus saying, post-haste to earth he hurries,

And knocks at the' Archbishop of Canterbury's.

The door was oped by a lackey in lace,
Saying, 'What's your business with his
Grace ?' 21

'His grace !' quoth Jerome—for pos'd was he,

Not knowing what sort this Grace could
be ;

Whether Grace preventing, Grace particular,
Grace of that breed called Quinquarticular—¹

In short, he rummag'd his holy mind,
The' exact description of Grace to find,
Which thus could represented be
By a footman in full livery.

At last, out loud in a laugh he broke, 30
(For dearly the good saint lov'd his joke)²
And said—surveying, as sly he spoke,
The costly palace from roof to base—
'Well, it isn't, at least, a saving Grace !'
'Umph,' said the lackey, a man of few words,

The' Archbishop is gone to the House of Lords.'

'To the House of the Lord, you mean,
my son,

For in my time, at least, there was but one;
Unless such many-fold priests as these Seek, ev'n in their LORD, pluralities !'³
'No time for gab,' quoth the man in lace : 41

Then, slamming the door in St. Jerome's
face,

With a curse to the single knockers all,
Went to finish his port in the servants'
hall,

And propose a toast (humanely meant
To include even Curates in its extent)
'To all as serves the' Establishment.'

ST. JEROME ON EARTH

SECOND VISIT

'This much I dare say, that, since lording and loitering hath come up, preaching hath come down, contrary to the Apostles' times. For they preached and lorded not : and now they lord and preach not Ever since the Prelates were made Lords and Nobles, the plough standeth ; there is no work done, the people starve.'—Latimer, Sermon of the Plough.

'Once more,' said Jerome, 'I'll run up and see
How the Church goes on,'—and off set he.

¹ So called from the proceedings of the Synod of Dort.

² Witness his well-known pun on the name of his adversary, Vigilantius, whom he calls facetiously Dormitantius.

³ The suspicion attached to some of the early Fathers of being Arians in their doctrine would appear to derive some confirmation from this passage.

Just then the packet-boat, which trades
Betwixt our planet and the shades,
Had arriv'd below, with a freight so queer,
'My eyes !' said Jerome, 'what have we here ?'—

For he saw, when nearer he explor'd,
They'd a cargo of Bishops' wigs aboard.
'They are ghosts of wigs,' said Charon, 'all,
Once worn by nob's Episcopal.' 10
For folks on earth, who've got a store
Of cast off things they'll want no more,
Oft send them down, as gifts, you know,
To a certain Gentleman here below.
'A sign of the times, I plainly see,'
Said the Saint to himself as, pondering, he Sail'd off in the death-boat gallantly.

Arriv'd on earth, quoth he, 'No more
I'll affect a body, as before ;
For I think I'd best, in the company 20
Of Spiritual Lords, a spirit be,
And glide, unseen, from See to See.'
But oh ! to tell what scenes he saw,—
It was more than Rabelais' pen could draw.

For instance, he found Ex—t—r,
Soul, body, inkstand, all in a stir,—
For love of God ? for sake of King ?
For good of people ?—no such thing ;
But to get for himself, by some new trick,
A shove to a better bishoprick. 30

He found that pious soul, Van M—ld—t,
Much with his money-bags bewilder'd ;
Snubbing the Clerks of the Diocese,⁴
Because the rogues showed restlessness
At having too little cash to touch,
While he so Christianly bears too much.
He found old Sarum's wits as gone
As his own beloved text in John,—⁵
Text he hath prosed so long upon,
That 'tis thought when ask'd, at the gate of heaven, 40
His name, he'll answer 'John v. 7.'

'But enough of Bishops I've had to-day,'
Said the weary Saint,—'I must away.'

⁴ The wig, which had so long formed an essential part of the dress of an English bishop, was at this time beginning to be dispensed with.

⁵ See the Bishop's Letter to Clergy of his Diocese.

⁶ 1 John v. 7. A text which, though long given up by all the rest of the orthodox world, is still pertinaciously adhered to by this Right
Reverend scholar.

Though I own I should like, before
I go,

To see for once (as I'm ask'd below
If really such odd sights exist)
A regular six-fold Pluralist.¹

Just then he heard a general cry—
'There's Doctor Hodgson galloping by!'
'Ay, that's the man,' says the Saint,
'to follow,' 50

And off he sets, with a loud view-hollo,
At Hodgson's heels, to catch, if he can,

A glimpse of this singular plural man.
But,—talk of Sir Boyle Roche's bird!¹ To compare him with Hodgson is absurd.

'Which way, sir, pray, is the doctor
gone?'—

'He is now at his living at Hillingdon.'—

'No, no,—you're out, by many a mile,
He's away at his Deanery, in Carlisle.'—

'Pardon me, sir; but I understand 60
He's gone to his living in Cumberland.'—
'God bless me, no,—he can't be there;
You must try St. George's, Hanover
Square.'

Thus all in vain the Saint inquir'd,
From living to living, mock'd and tir'd;—

'Twas Hodgson here, 'twas Hodgson
there,

'Twas Hodgson nowhere, everywhere;
Till, fairly beat, the Saint gave o'er,
And flitted away to the Stygian shore,
To astonish the natives under ground 70
With the comical things he on earth had found.

THOUGHTS ON TAR BARRELS

(VIDE DESCRIPTION OF A LATE FÊTE.²)

1832.

WHAT a pleasing contrivance! how aptly devis'd
'Twixt tar and magnolias to puzzle one's noses!
And how the tar-barrels must all be surpris'd
To find themselves seated like 'Love among roses!

What a pity we can't, by precautions like these,
Clear the air of that other still viler infection;
That radical pest, that old whiggish disease,
Of which cases, true-blue, are in every direction.

'Stead of barrels, let's light up an Auto da Fé
Of a few good combustible Lords of 'the Club';
They would fume, in a trice, the Whig cholera away,
And there's B—cky would burn like a barrel of bub.

How R—d—n would blaze! and what rubbish throw out!
A volcano of nonsense, in active display;
While V—ne, as a butt, amidst laughter, would spout
The hot nothings he's full of, all night and all day.

And then, for a finish, there's C—mb—d's Duke,—
Good Lord, how his chin-tuft would crackle in air!
Unless (as is shrewdly surmis'd from his look)
He's already bespoken for combustion elsewhere.

¹ It was a saying of the well-known Sir Boyle, that 'a man could not be in two places at once, unless he was a bird.'

² The M—s of H—tf—d's Fête.—From dread of cholera his Lordship had ordered tar-barrels to be burned in every direction.

THE CONSULTATION¹

'When they do agree, their unanimity is wonderful.' The Critic.

1833.

Scene discovers Dr. Whig and Dr. Tory in consultation. Patient on the floor between them

Dr. Whig.—THIS wild Irish patient does pester me so,
That what to do with him, I'm curst if I know;
I've promis'd him anodynes ———

Dr. Tory. Anodynes!—Stuff.
Tie him down—gag him well—he'll be tranquil enough.
That's my mode of practice.

Dr. Whig. True, quite in your line,
But unluckily not much, till lately, in mine.
'Tis so painful ———

Dr. Tory.—Pooh, nonsense—ask Ude how he feels,
When, for Epicure feasts, he prepares his live eels,
By finging them in, 'twixt the bars of the fire,
And letting them wriggle on there till they tire.
He, too, says 'tis painful'—quite makes his heart bleed'—

10

But 'your eels are a vile, oleaginous breed.'—
He would fain use them gently, but Cookery says 'No,'
And—in short—eels were born to be treated just so.¹
'Tis the same with these Irish,—who're odder fish still,—
Your tender Whig heart shrinks from using them ill;
I, myself, in my youth, ere I came to get wise,
Used, at some operations, to blush to the eyes;—
But, in fact, my dear brother,—if I may make bold
To style you, as Peachum did Lockit, of old,—
We, Doctors, must act with the firmness of Ude,
And, indifferent like him,—so the fish is but stew'd,—
Must torture live Pats for the general good,

20

[Here patient groans and kicks a little.

Dr. Whig.—But what, if one's patient's so devilish perverse,
That he wo'n't be thus tortur'd?

Dr. Tory. Coerce, sir, coerce.
You're a juvenile performer, but once you begin,
You can't think how fast you may train your hand in:
And (smiling) who knows but old Tory may take to the shelf,
With the comforting thought that, in place and in pelf,
He's succeeded by one just as—bad as himself?

30

Dr. Whig (looking flattered).—Why, to tell you the truth, I've a small matter here,

Which you help'd me to make for my patient last year,—

[Goes to a cupboard and brings out a strait waistcoat and gag.
And such rest I've enjoy'd from his raving since then,
That I have made up my mind he shall wear it again.

¹ These verses, as well as some others that follow (p. 646), were extorted from me by that lamentable measure of the Whig ministry, the Irish Coercion Act.

² This eminent artist, in the second edition of the work wherein he propounds this mode of purifying his eels, professes himself much concerned at the charge of inhumanity brought against his practice, but still begs leave respectfully to repeat that it is the only proper mode of preparing eels for the table.

Dr. Tory (embracing him).—Oh, charming!
 My dear Doctor Whig, you're a treasure.
 Next to torturing myself, to help you is a pleasure.
[Assisting Dr. Whig.]
 Give me leave—I've some practice in these mad machines;
 There—tighter—the gag in the mouth, by all means.
 Delightful!—all's snug—not a squeak need you fear,—
 You may now put your anodynes off till next year. 39
[Scene closes.]

TO THE REV. CH—RL—S OV—RT—N,

CURATE OF ROMALDKIRK

AUTHOR OF THE POETICAL PORTRAITURE OF THE CHURCH¹

1833.

SWEET singer of Romaldkirk, thou who art reckon'd,
 By critics Episcopal, David the Second,²
 If thus, as a Curate, so lofty your flight,
 Only think, in a Rectory, how you would write!
 Once fairly inspir'd by the 'Tithe-crown'd Apollo,'
 (Who beats, I confess it, our lay Phoebus hollow,
 Having gotten, besides the old Nine's inspiration,
 The Tenth of all eatable things in creation,
 There's nothing, in fact, that a poet like you,
 So be-nin'd and be-tenth'd, couldn't easily do.
 Round the lips of the sweet-tongued Athenian³ they say,
 While yet but a babe in his cradle he lay,
 Wild honey-bees swarm'd, as a presage to tell
 Of the sweet-flowing words that thence afterwards fell.
 Just so round our Ov—rt—n's cradle, no doubt,
 Tenth ducklings and chicks were seen flitting about;
 Goose embryos, waiting their doom'd decimation,
 Came, shadowing forth his adult destination,
 And small, sucking tithe-pigs, in musical droves,
 Announc'd the Church poet whom Chester approves.

O Horace! when thou, in thy vision of yore,
 Didst dream that a snowy-white plumage come o'er Thy etherealis'd limbs, stealing downily on,
 Till, by Fancy's strong spell, thou wert turn'd to a swan,⁴
 Little thought'st thou such fate could a poet befall,
 Without any effort of fancy, at all;
 Little thought'st thou the world would in Ov—rt—n find
 A bird, ready-made, somewhat different in kind,
 But as perfect as Michaelmas' self could produce,
 By gods yeleft anser, by mortals a goose.

¹ See Edinburgh Review, No. 117.² 'Your Lordship,' says Mr. Ov—rt—n, in the Dedication of his Poem to the Bishop of Chester, 'has kindly expressed your persuasion that my "Muse will always be a Muse of sacred song, and that it will be tuned as David's was."'

SCENE

FROM A PLAY, ACTED AT OXFORD, CALLED

'MATRICULATION' ¹

1834.

[Boy discovered at a table, with the Thirty-nine Articles before him.—Enter the Rt. Rev. Doctor Ph—llp—ts.]

Doctor P.—THERE, my lad, lie the Articles—(Boy begins to count them) just thirty-nine—

No occasion to count—you've now only to sign.

At Cambridge, where folks are less High-church than we,

The whole Nine-and-Thirty are lump'd into Three.

Let's run o'er the items;—there's Justification,

Predestination, and Supererogation,—

Not forgetting Salvation and Creed Athanasian,

Till we reach, at last, Queen Bess's Ratification.

That's sufficient—now, sign—having read quite enough,

You 'believe in the full and true meaning thereof?' [Boy stares.]

Oh, a mere form of words, to make things smooth and brief,—

A commodious and short make-believe of belief,

Which our Church has drawn up, in a form thus articular,

To keep out, in general, all who're particular.

But what's the boy doing? what! reading all through,

And my luncheon fast cooling!—this never will do.

Boy (poring over the Articles).—Here are points which—pray, Doctor, what's 'Grace of Congruity?'

Doctor P. (sharply).—You'll find out, young sir, when you've more ingenuity.

At present, by signing, you pledge yourself merely,

Whate'er it may be, to believe it sincerely.

Both in dining and signing we take the same plan,—

First, swallow all down, then digest—as we can.

Boy (still reading).—I've to gulp, I see, St. Athanasius's Creed,

Which, I'm told, is a very tough morsel, indeed;

As he damns—

Doctor P. (aside).—Ay, and so would I, willingly, too,

All confounded particular young boobies, like you.

This comes of Reforming!—all's o'er with our land,

When people wo'n't stand what they can't understand;

Nor perceive that our ever-rever'd Thirty-Nine

Were made, not for men to believe, but to sign.

[Exit Dr. P. in a passion.]

¹ 'It appears that when a youth of fifteen goes to be matriculated at Oxford, and is required first to subscribe Thirty-nine Articles of Religious Belief, this only means that he engages himself afterwards to understand what is now above his comprehension; that he expresses no assent at all to what he signs; and that he is (or, ought to be) at full liberty, when he has studied the subject, to withdraw his provisional assent.'—Edinburgh Review, No. 120.

LATE TITHE CASE

'Sic vos non vobis.'

1833.

'The Vicar of B—mh—m desires me to state that, in consequence of the passing of a recent Act of Parliament, he is compelled to adopt measures which may by some be considered harsh or precipitate: but, in duty to what he owes to his successors, he feels bound to preserve the rights of the vicarage.'—Letter from Mr. S. Powell, August 6.

No, not for yourselves, ye reverend men,
Do you take one pig in every ten,
But for Holy Church's future heirs, Who've an abstract right to that pig, as theirs ;—

The law supposing that such heirs male
Are already seised of the pig, in tail.

No, not for himself hath B—mh—m's priest
His 'well-belov'd' of their pennies
fleece'd :

But it is that, before his prescient eyes,
All future Vicars of B—mh—m rise, 10
With their embryo daughters, nephews,
nieces,

And 'tis for them the poor he fleeces.
He heareth their voices, ages hence,
Saying 'Take the pig'—oh take the
pence ;

The cries of little Vicarial dears,
The unborn B—mh—mites, reach his
ears ;

And, did he resist that soft appeal,
He would not like a true-born Vicar feel.

Thou, too, L—ndy of L—ck—ngt—n !
A Rector true, if e'er there was one, 20
Who, for sake of the L—ndies of coming
ages,

Gripest the tenths of labourers' wages.¹
'Tis true, in the pockets of thy small-clothes

The claim'd 'obvention'² of four-pence goes ;

But its abstract spirit, unconfin'd,
Spreads to all future Rector-kind, 26
Warning them all to their rights to wake,
And rather to face the block, the stake,
Than give up their darling right to take.

¹ Fourteen agricultural labourers (one of whom received so little as six guineas for yearly wages, one eight, one nine, another ten guineas, and the best paid of the whole not more than 18*l.* annually) were all, in the course of the autumn of 1832, served with demands of tithe

One grain of musk, it is said, perfumes
(So subtle its spirit) a thousand rooms,
And a single four-pence, pocketed well,
Through a thousand rectors' lives will tell.

Then still continue, ye reverend souls,
And still as your rich Pactolus rolls,
Grasp every penny on every side,
From every wretch, to swell its tide :
Remembering still what the Law lays
down,

In that pure poetic style of its own, 39
'If the parson in esse submits to loss, he Inflicts the same on the parson in posse.'

FOOLS' PARADISE

DREAM THE FIRST

I HAVE been, like Puck, I have been, in
a trice,

To a realm they call Fools' Paradise,
Lying N. N. E. of the Land of Sense,
And seldom bless'd with a glimmer
thence.

But they want it not in this happy place,
Where a light of its own gilds every face ;
Or, if some wear a shadowy brow,
'Tis the wish to look wise,—not knowing
how. 8

Self-glory glistens o'er all that's there,
The trees, the flowers have a jaunty air ;
The well-bred wind in a whisper blows,
The snow, if it snows, is couleur de rose,
The falling founts in a titter fall,
And the sun looks simpering down on all.

Oh, 'tisn't in tongue or pen to trace
The scenes I saw in that jovous place.
There were Lords and Ladies sitting
together,

In converse sweet, 'What charming
weather !—

You'll all rejoice to hear, I'm sure,
Lord Charles has got a good sinecure ; 20
And the Premier says, my youngest brother

(Him in the Guards) shall have another.
Isn't this very, very gallant !—
As for my poor old virgin aunt,

at the rate of 4*l.* in the 1*l.* sterling, on behalf of the Rev. F. L—dy, Rector of —, &c. &c.—
The Times, August 1833.

² One of the various general terms under which oblations, tithes, &c. are comprised.

Who has lost her all, poor thing, at whist,
 We must quarter her on the Pension List;
 Thus smoothly time in that Eden roll'd;
 It seem'd like an Age of real gold,
 Where all who lik'd might have a slice,
 So rich was that Fools' Paradise. 30

But the sport at which most time they spent,

Was a puppet-show, call'd Parliament,
 Perform'd by wooden Ciceros,
 As large as life, who rose to prose,
 While, hid behind them, lords and squires,
 Who own'd the puppets, pull'd the wires;
 And thought it the very best device
 Of that most prosperous Paradise,
 To make the vulgar pay through the nose
 For them and their wooden Ciceros. 40

And many more such things I saw
 In this Eden of Church, and State, and Law;

Nor e'er were known such pleasant folk
 As those who had the best of the joke.
 There were Irish Rectors, such as resort
 To Cheltenham yearly, to drink—port,
 And bumper, 'Long may the Church
 endure,

May her cure of souls be a sinecure,
 And a score of Parsons to every soul
 A moderate allowance on the whole.' 50
 There were Heads of Colleges, lying about,
 From which the sense had all run out,
 Even to the lowest classic lees,
 Till nothing was left but quantities;
 Which made them heads most fit to be
 Stuck up on a University,
 Which yearly hatches, in its schools,
 Such flights of young Elysian fools.

Thus all went on, so snug and nice,
 In this happiest possible Paradise. 60
 But plain it was to see, alas!
 That a downfall soon must come to pass.

For grief is a lot the good and wise
 Don't quite so much monopolise,
 But that ('lapt in Elysium' as they are)
 Even blessed fools must have their share.
 And so it happen'd:—but what befell,
 In Dream the Second I mean to tell.

THE RECTOR AND HIS CURATE;

OR, ONE POUND TWO

'I trust we shall part, as we met, in peace and charity. My last payment to you paid your salary up to the 1st of this month. Since that, I owe you for one month, which, being a long month, of thirty-one days, amounts, as near as I can calculate, to six pounds eight shillings. My steward returns you as a debtor to the amount of SEVEN POUNDS TEN SHILLINGS
 FOR CON-ACRE-GROUND, which leaves some trifling balance in my favour.'—Letter of Dismissal from the Rev. Marcus Beresford to his Curate, the Rev. T. A. Lyons.

THE account is balanc'd—the bill drawn
 out,—

The debit and credit all right, no doubt—
 The Rector, rolling in wealth and state,
 Owes to his Curate six pound eight;
 The Curate, that least well-fed of men,
 Owes to his Rector seven pound ten,
 Which maketh the balance clearly due
 From Curate to Rector, one pound two.

Ah balance, on earth unfair, uneven!
 But sure to be all set right in heaven,
 Where bills like these will be check'd,
 some day,

And the balance settled the other way:
 Where Lyons the curate's hard-wrung sum

Will back to his shade with interest
 come;

And Marcus, the rector, deep may rue
 This tot, in his favour, of one pound two.

PADDY'S METAMORPHOSIS¹

1833.

ABOUT fifty years since, in the days of our daddies,
 That plan was commenc'd which the wise now applaud,
 Of shipping off Ireland's most turbulent Paddies,
 As good raw materials for settlers, abroad.

¹ I have already in a preceding page, referred to this squib, as being one of those wrung from me by the Irish Coercion Act of my friends, the Whigs.

Some West-Indian island, whose name I forget,
Was the region then chosen for this scheme so romantic;
And such the success the first colony met,
That a second, soon after, set sail o'er the Atlantic.

Behold them now safe at the long-look'd for shore,
Sailing in between banks that the Shannon might greet,
And thinking of friends whom, but two years before,
They had sorrow'd to lose, but would soon again meet.

And, hark! from the shore a glad welcome there came—
'Arrah, Paddy from Cork, is it you, my sweet boy?'
While Pat stood astounded, to hear his own name
Thus hail'd by black devils, who caper'd for joy!

Can it possibly be?—half amazement—half doubt,
Pat listens again—rubs his eyes and looks steady;
Then heaves a deep sigh, and in horror yells out,
'Good Lord! only think—black and curly already!'

Deceiv'd by that well-mimick'd brogue in his ears,
Pat read his own doom in these wool-headed figures,
And thought, what a climate, in less than two years,
To turn a whole cargo of Pats into niggers!

MORAL

'Tis thus,—but alas!—by a marvel more true
Than is told in this rival of Ovid's best stories,—
Your Whigs, when in office a short year or two,
By a lusus naturae, all turn into Tories.

And thus, when I hear them 'strong measures' advise,
Ere the seats that they sit on have time to get steady,
I say, while I listen, with tears in my eyes,
'Good Lord!—only think!—black and curly already!'

COCKER, ON CHURCH REFORM

FOUNDED UPON SOME LATE CALCULATIONS

1833.

FINE figures of speech let your orators follow,
Old Cocker has figures that beat them all hollow;
Though fam'd for his rules Aristotle may be,
In but half of this Sage any merit I see,
For, as honest Joe Hume says, the 'tottle'¹ for me!

For instance, while others discuss and debate,
It is thus about Bishops I ratiocinate.

In England, where, spite of the infidel's laughter,
'Tis certain our souls are look'd very well after,
Two Bishops can well (if judiciously sunder'd)
Of parishes manage two thousand two hundred,—
Said number of parishes, under said teachers,
Containing three millions of Protestant creatures,—

¹ The total,—so pronounced by this industrious senator.

So that each of said Bishops full ably controls
 One million and five hundred thousands of souls.
 And now comes old Cocker. In Ireland we're told,
Half a million includes the whole Protestant fold ;
 If, therefore, for three million souls 'tis conceded
Two proper-sized Bishops are all that is needed,
 'Tis plain, for the Irish half million who want 'em,
One third of one Bishop is just the right quantum.
 And thus, by old Cocker's sublime Rule of Three,
 The Irish Church question's resolv'd to a T ;
 Keeping always that excellent maxim in view,
 That, in saving men's souls, we must save money too.

Nay, if—as St. Roden complains is the case—
 The half million of soul is decreasing apace,
 The demand, too, for bishop will also fall off,
 Till the tithe of one, taken in kind, be enough.
 But, as fractions imply that we'd have to dissect,
 And to cutting up Bishops I strongly object,
 We've a small, fractious prelate whom well we could spare,
 Who has just the same decimal worth, to a hair ;
 And, not to leave Ireland too much in the lurch,
 We'll let her have Ex—t—r, *sole*¹, as her Church.

LES HOMMES AUTOMATES

1834.

'We are persuaded that this our artificial man will not only walk and speak, and perform most of the outward functions of animal life, but (being wound up once a week) will perhaps reason as well as most of your country parsons.'
 —Memoirs of Martinus Scriblerus, chap. xii.

It being an object now to meet
 With Parsons that don't want to eat,
 Fit men to fill those Irish rectories,
 Which soon will have but scant refec-
 tories,
 It has been suggested,—lest that Church
 Should, all at once, be left in the lurch,
 For want of reverend men endowed
 With this gift of ne'er requiring food,—
 To try, by way of experiment, whether There couldn't be made, of wood and leather,² 10
 (Howe'er the notion may sound chimerical,)
 Jointed figures not lay,² but clerical,
 Which, wound up carefully once a week,
 Might just like parsons look and speak,
 Nay even, if requisite, reason too,
 As well as most Irish parsons do.

The' experiment having succeeded quite,
 (Whereat those Lords must much delight,
 Who've shown, by stopping the Church's food,

They think it isn't for her spiritual good
 To be serv'd by parsons of flesh and blood,) 21

The Patentees of this new invention
 Beg leave respectfully to mention,
 They now are enabled to produce
 An ample supply, for present use,
 Of these reverend pieces of machinery,
 Ready for vicarage, rectory, deanery,
 Or any such-like post of skill
 That wood and leather are fit to fill.

N.B.—In places addicted to arson, 30
 We can't recommend a wooden parson :
 But, if the Church any such appoints,
 They'd better, at least, have iron joints.
 In parts, not much by Protestants
 haunted,
 A figure to look at's all that's wanted—
 A block in black, to eat and sleep,
 Which (now that the eating's o'er) comes cheap.

Savans, mentioned by Scriblerus, constructed their artificial man.

³ The wooden models used by painters are,
 it is well known, called 'lay figures.'

² The materials of which those Nuremberg

P.S.—Should the Lords, by way of a treat, Permit the clergy again to eat, The Church will, of course, no longer need Imitation-parsons that never feed ; 41 And these wood creatures of ours will sell For secular purposes just as well—	Our Beresfords, turn'd to bludgeons stout, May, 'stead of beating their own about, Be knocking the brains of Papists out ; While our smooth O'Sullivans, by all means, Should transmigrate into turning ma- chines.

HOW TO MAKE ONE'S SELF A PEER,

ACCORDING TO THE NEWEST RECEIPT, AS DISCLOSED IN A LATE HERALDIC WORK¹

CHOOSE some title that's dormant—the Peerage hath many— 1834.

Lord Baron of Shamdos sounds nobly as any.

Next, catch a dead cousin of said defunct Peer,

And marry him off-hand, in some given year,

To the daughter of somebody,—no matter who,—

Fig, the grocer himself, if you're hard run, will do ;

For, the Medici pills still in heraldry tell,

And why shouldn't lollypops quarter as well ?

Thus, having your couple, and one a lord's cousin,

Young materials for peers may be had by the dozen ;

And 'tis hard if, inventing each small mother's son of 'em, 10

You can't somehow manage to prove yourself one of 'em.

Should registers, deeds, and such matters refractory,

Stand in the way of this lord-manufactory,

I've merely to hint, as a secret auricular,

One grand rule of enterprise,—don't be particular.

A man who once takes such a jump at nobility,

Must not mince the matter, like folks of nihility,²

But clear thick and thin with true lordly agility.

'Tis true, to a would-be descendant from Kings, 20

Parish-registers sometimes are troublesome things ;

As oft, when the vision is near brought about,

Some goblin, in shape of a grocer, grins out ;

Or some barbor, perhaps, with my Lord mingles bloods,

And one's patent of peerage is left in the suds.

But there are ways—when folks are resolv'd to be lords—

Of expurging ev'n troublesome parish records :

What think ye of scissors ? depend on't no heir

Of a Shamdos should go unsupplied with a pair,

As, whate'er else the learn'd in such lore may invent, 30

Your scissors does wonders in proving descent.

Yes, poets may sing of those terrible shears

With which Atropos snips off both bumpkins and peers,

But they're nought to that weapon which shines in the hands

Of some would-be Patrician, when proudly he stands

O'er the careless churchwarden's baptismal array,

And sweeps at each cut generations away.

By some babe of old times in his peerage resisted ?

One snip,—and the urchin hath never existed !

¹ The Claim to the barony of Chandos (if I recollect right) advanced by the late Sir Eg-r-t-n Br-d-s. ² 'This we call pure nihility, or mere nothing.' —Watts's Logic.

Does some marriage, in days near the Flood, interfere
 With his one sublime object of being a Peer?
 Quick the shears at once nullify bridegroom and bride,—
 No such people have ever liv'd, married, or died!

40

Such the newost receipt for those high-minded elves,
 Who've a fancy for making great lords of themselves.
 Follow this, young aspirer, who pant'st for a peerage,
 Take S—m for thy model and B—z for thy steerage,
 Do all and much worse than old Nicholas Flam does,
 And—who knows but you'll be Lord Baron of Shamdos?

THE DUKE IS THE LAD

Air.—A master I have, and I am his man,
 Galloping dreary dun.—Castle of Andalusia.

THE Duke is the lad to frighten a lass, Galloping, dreary duke; The Duke is the lad to frighten a lass, He's an ogre to meet, and the d—l to pass, With his charger prancing, Grim eye glancing, Chin, like a Mufti, Grizzled and tufty, Galloping, dreary Duke.	Ye misses, beware of the neighbourhood Of this galloping dreary Duke; Avoid him, all who see no good In being run o'er by a Prince of the Blood. For, surely, no nymph is Fond of a grim phiz, And of the married, Whole crowds have miscarried At sight of this dreary Duke.

EPISTLE

FROM ERASMUS ON EARTH TO CICERO IN THE SHADES

Southampton.

As 'tis now, my dear Tully, some weeks since I started
 By rail-road, for earth, having vow'd, ere we parted,
 To drop you a line, by the Dead-Letter post,
 Just to say how I thrive, in my new line of ghost,
 And how deucedly odd this live world all appears,
 To a man who's been dead now for three hundred years,
 I take up my pen, and, with news of this earth,
 Hope to waken, by turns, both your spleen and your mirth.

In my way to these shores, taking Italy first,
 Lest the change from Elysium too sudden should burst,
 I forgot not to visit those haunts where, of yore,
 You took lessons from Paetus in cookery's lore,¹
 Turn'd aside from the calls of the rostrum and Muse,
 To discuss the rich merits of rôties and stews,
 And preferr'd to all honours of triumph or trophy,
 A supper on prawns with that rogue, little Sophy.²

10

Having dwelt on such classical musings awhile,
 I set off, by a steam-boat, for this happy isle,
 (A conveyance you ne'er, I think, sail'd by, my Tully,
 And therefore, per next, I'll describe it more fully.)

20

 20, &c.

² Ingentium squillarum cum Sophia Septi- miae.—Lib. ix, epist. 10.

Having heard, on the way, what distresses me greatly,
 That England's o'er-run by idolaters lately,
 Stark, staring adorers of wood and of stone,
 Who will let neither stick, stock, or statue alone.
 Such the sad news I heard from a tall man in black,
 Who from sports continental was hurrying back,
 To look after his tithes;—seeing, doubtless, 'twould follow,
 That, just as, of old, your great idol, Apollo,
 Devour'd all the Tenth's,¹ so the idols in question,
 These wood and stone gods, may have equal digestion, 30
 And the idolatrous crew, whom this Rector despises,
 May eat up the tithe-pig which he idolizes.

'Tis all but too true—grim Idolatry reigns, London.
 In full pomp, over England's lost cities and plains!
 On arriving just now, as my first thought and care
 Was, as usual, to seek out some near House of Prayer,
 Some calm, holy spot, fit for Christians to pray on,
 I was shown to—what think you?—a downright Pantheon!
 A grand, pillar'd temple, with niches and halls,²
 Full of idols and gods, which they nickname St. Paul's;— 40
 Though 'tis clearly the place where the idolatrous crew,
 Whom the Rector complain'd of, their dark rites pursue;
 And, 'mong all the 'strange gods' Abraham's father carv'd out,³
 That he ever carv'd stranger than these I much doubt.

Were it even, my dear TULLY, your Hebes and Graces,
 And such pretty things, that usurp'd the Saints' places,
 I shouldn't much mind,—for, in this classic dome,
 Such folks from Olympus would feel quite at home.
 But the gods they've got here!—such a queer omnium gatherum
 Of misbegot things, that no poet would father 'em;— 50
 Britannias, in light, summer-wear for the skies,—
 Old Thames, turn'd to stone, to his no small surprise,— Father Nile, too,—a portrait, (in spite of what's said,
 That no mortal e'er yet got a glimpse of his head,⁴)
 And a Ganges, which India would think somewhat fat for't,
 Unless 'twas some full-grown Director had sat for't;—
 Not to mention the' et caeteras of Genii and Sphinxes,
 Fame, Victory, and other such semi-clad minxes;—
 Sea Captains,⁵—the idols here most idolised;
 And of whom some, alas, might too well be comprised 60
 Among ready-made Saints, as they died cannonised;—
 With a multitude more of odd cockneyfied deities,
 Shrined in such pomp that quite shocking to see it 'tis;
 Nor know I what better the Rector could do
 Than to shrine there his own below'd quadruped too;
 As most surely a tithe-pig, whate'er the world thinks, is
 A much fitter beast for a church than a Sphinx is.

But I'm call'd off to dinner—grace just has been said,
 And my host waits for nobody, living or dead.

ON THE DEPARTURE OF LORDS C—ST—R—GH AND ST—W—RT FOR THE CONTINENT

*At Paris*² et Fratres, et qui rapuere sub illis, Vix tenuere manus (scis hoc, Menclae) nefandas. Ovid. Metam. lib. xiii, v. 202.

Go, Brothers in wisdom—go, bright pair of Peers,
And may Cupid and Fame fan you both with their pinions!
The one, the best lover we have—of his years,
And the other Prime Statesman of Britain's dominions.

Go, Hero of Chancery, blest with the smile
Of the Misses that love, and the monarchs that prize thee;
Forget Mrs. Ang—lo T—yl—r awhile,
And all tailors but him who so well dandifies thee.

Never mind how thy juniors in gallantry scoff,
Never heed how perverse affidavits may thwart thee, 10
But show the young Misses thou'rt scholar enough
To translate 'Amor Fortis' a love, about forty!

And sure 'tis no wonder, when, fresh as young Mars,
From the battle you came, with the Orders you'd earn'd in't,
That sweet Lady Fanny should cry out 'My stars !'
And forget that the Moon, too, was some way concern'd in't.

For not the great R—g—t himself has endur'd
(Though I've seen him with badges and orders all shine, Till he looked like a house that was over insured)
A much heavier burden of glories than thine. 20

And 'tis plain, when a wealthy young lady so mad is,
Or any young ladies can so go astray,
As to marry old Dandies that might be their daddies,
The *stars*³ are in fault, my Lord St—w—rt, not they!

Thou, too, t'other brother, thou Tully of Tories,
Thou Malaprop Cicero, over whose lips
Such a smooth rigmarole about 'monarchs,' and 'glories,'
And 'nullidge,'⁴ and 'features,' like syllabub slips.

Go, haste, at the Congress pursue thy vocation
Of adding fresh sums to this National Debt of ours, 30
Leaguings with Kings, who, for mere recreation,
Break promises, fast as your Lordship breaks metaphors.

Fare ye well, fare ye well, bright Pair of Peers,
And may Cupid and Fame fan you both with their pinions!
The one, the best lover we have—of his years,
And the other, Prime Statesman of Britain's dominions.

¹ This and the following squib, which must have been written about the year 1815-16, have been by some oversight misplaced.

² Ovid is mistaken in saying that it was 'at Paris' these rapacious transactions took place—we should read 'At Vienna.'

³ 'When weak women go astray,
The stars are more in fault than they.'

⁴ It is thus the noble lord pronounces the word 'knowledge'—deriving it, as far as his own share is concerned, from the Latin, 'nullus.'

(As Van, or any other calf,

May find, without much figuring). 10

Waft him, oh ye kindly breezes,

Waft this Lord of place and pelf,

Any where his Lordship pleases,

Though 'twere to Old Nick himself !

Oh, what a face of brass was his,⁵

Who first at Congress show'd his phiz—

In vain we wish our Secs. at home⁷To mind their papers, desks, and shelves,If silly Secs. abroad will roam,

And make such noodles of themselves.

But such hath always been the case—

For matchless impudence of face, 30

There's nothing like your Tory race !⁸First, Pitt,⁹ the chosen of England, taught her

A taste for famine, fire, and slaughter.

Then came the Doctor,¹⁰ for our ease,

Necessity brought in the Whigs :¹¹

And oh, I blush, I blush to say,

When these, in turn, were put to flight, too, 40

Illustrious T—MF—E flew away

With lots of pens he had no right to !¹²In short, what will not mortal man do ?¹³

And now, that—strife and bloodshed

past—

We've done on earth what harm we can

This alludes to the 1,200*l.* worth of stationery, which his Lordship is said to have ordered, when on the point of vacating his place.¹³ Nil mortalibus arduum est.¹⁴ Coelum ipsum petimus stultitia

Here she wink'd to her subaltern imps to be steady,
 And all wagg'd their fire-tipp'd tails and stood ready.
 'So, now for the ingredients:—first, hand me that bishop;'
 Whereon, a whole bevy of imps run to fish up,
 From out a large reservoir, wherein they pen 'em,
 The blackest of all its black dabblers in venom;
 And wrapping him up (lest the virus should ooze,
 And one 'drop of the immortal' Right Rev.² they might lose)
 In the sheets of his own speeches, charges, reviews,
 Pop him into the caldron, while loudly a burst
 From the by-standers welcomes ingredient the first!

10

'Now fetch the Ex-Chancellor,' mutter'd the dame—
 'He who's call'd after Harry the Older, by name.'
 'The Ex-Chancellor!' echoed her imps, the whole crew of 'em—
 Why talk of one Ex, when your Mischief has two of 'em?'
 'True, true,' said the hag, looking arch at her elves,
 'And a double-Ex dose they compose, in themselves.'
 This joke, the sly meaning of which was seen lucidly,
 Set all the devils a laughing most deucedly,
 So, in went the pair, and (what none thought surprising)
 Show'd talents for sinking as great as for rising;
 While not a grim phiz in that realm but was lighted
 With joy to see spirits so twin-like united—
 Or (plainly to speak) two such birds of a feather,
 In one mess of venom thus spitted together.
 Here a flashy imp rose—some connection, no doubt,
 Of the young lord in question—and, scowling about,
 'Hop'd his fiery friend, St—n!—y, would not be left out;
 As no schoolboy unwhipp'd, the whole world must agree,
 Lov'd mischief, pure mischief, more dearly than he.'

20

30

But, no—the wise hag wouldn't hear of the whipster;
 Not merely because, as a shrew, he eclips'd her,
 And nature had given him, to keep him still young,
 Much tongue in his head and no head in his tongue;
 But because she well knew that, for change ever ready,
 He'd not even to mischief keep properly steady;
 That soon even the wrong side would cease to delight,
 And, for want of a change, he must swerve to the right;
 While, on each, so at random his missiles he threw,
 That the side he attack'd was most safe of the two.—
 This ingredient was therefore put by on the shelf,
 There to bubble, a bitter, hot mess, by itself.
 'And now,' quoth the hag, as her caldron she ey'd,
 And the titbits so friendlily rankling inside,
 'There wants but some seasoning;—so, come, ere I stew 'em,
 By way of a relish, we'll throw in " + John Tuam."
 In cooking up mischief, there's no flesh or fish
 Like your meddling High Priest, to add zest to the dish.'
 Thus saying, she pops in the Irish Grand Lama—
 Which great event ends the First Act of the Drama.

ANIMAL MAGNETISM

THOUGH fam'd was Mesmer, in his
day,
Nor less so, in ours, is Dupotet,
To say nothing of all the wonders
done
By that wizard, Dr. Elliotson,
When, standing as if the gods to invoke,
he
Up waves his arm, and—down drops
Okey!¹

Though strange these things, to mind
and sense,
If you wish still stranger things to
see—

If you wish to know the power immense

Of the true magnetic influence, 10
Just go to her Majesty's Treasury,
And learn the wonders working there—
And I'll be hang'd if you don't stare!
Talk of your animal magnetists,
And that wave of the hand no soul
resists,

Not all its witcheries can compete
With the friendly beckon towards Downing Street,

Which a Premier gives to one who wishes
To taste of the Treasury loaves and fishes.

It actually lifts the lucky elf, 20
Thus acted upon, above himself;—
He jumps to a state of clairvoyance,
And is placeman, statesman, all, at once!

These effects observe (with which I begin),

Take place when the patient's motion'd
in;

Far different, of course, the mode of affection,

When the wave of the hand's in the out
direction;

The effects being then extremely un-
pleasant,

As is seen in the case of Lord B——m, at present;

¹ The name of the heroine of the performances at the North London Hospital.

² The technical term for the movements of the magnetizer's hand.

In whom this sort of manipulation 30
Has lately produc'd such inflammation,
Attended with constant irritation,
That, in short—not to mince his situation—

It has work'd in the man a transformation
That puzzles all human calculation!

Ever since the fatal day which saw
That 'pass²' perform'd on this Lord of Law—

A pass potential, none can doubt,
As it sent Harry B——m to the right
about—

The condition in which the patient has
been 40

Is a thing quite awful to be seen.

Not that a casual eye could scan

This wondrous change by outward survey;

It being, in fact, the 'interior' man

That's turn'd completely topsy-turvy:—

Like a case that lately, in reading o'er
'em,

I found in the Acta Eruditorum,

Of a man in whose inside, when dis-
clos'd,

The whole order of things was found transpos'd;³

By a lusus naturae, strange to see, 50
The liver plac'd where the heart should
be,

And the spleen (like B——m's, since laid on the shelf)

As diseas'd and as much out of place as himself.

In short, 'tis a case for consultation,
If e'er there was one, in this thinking
nation;

And therefore I humbly beg to propose,
That those savans who mean, as the rumour goes,

To sit on Miss Okey's wonderful case,
Should also Lord Harry's case embrace;
And inform us, in both these patients'
states, 60

Which ism it is that predominates,
Whether magnetism and somnambulism,
Or, simply and solely, mountebankism.

THE SONG OF THE BOX

LET History boast of her Romans and Spartans,
And tell how they stood against tyranny's shocks;
They were all, I confess, in my eye, Betty Martins,
Compar'd to George Gr—te and his wonderful Box.

Ask, where Liberty now has her seat?—Oh, it isn't
By Delaware's banks or on Switzerland's rocks;—
Like an imp in some conjuror's bottle imprison'd,
She's slily shut up in Gr—te's wonderful Box.

How snug!—'stead of floating through ether's dominions,
Blown this way and that, by the 'populi vox,' 10
To fold thus in silence her sinecure pinions,
And go fast asleep in Gr—te's wonderful Box.

Time was, when free speech was the life-breath of freedom—
So thought once the Seldens, the Hampdens, the Lockes;
But mute be our troops, when to ambush we lead 'em,
For 'Mum' is the word with us Knights of the Box.

Pure, exquisite Box! no corruption can soil it;
There's Otto of Rose, in each breath it unlocks;
While Gr—te is the 'Betty,' that serves at the toilet,
And breathes all Arabia around from his Box.' 20

'Tis a singular fact, that the fam'd Hugo Grotius²
(A namesake of Gr—te's—being both of Dutch stocks),
Like Gr—te, too, a genius profound as precocious,
Was also, like him, much renown'd for a Box;—

An immortal old clothes-box, in which the great Grotius
When suffering, in prison, for views heterodox,
Was pack'd up incog., spite of gaolers ferocious,³
And sent to his wife,⁴ carriage free, in a Box!

But the Fame of old Hugo now rests on the shelf,
Since a rival hath risen that all parallel mocks;— 30
That Grotius ingloriously sav'd but himself,
While ours saves the whole British realm by a Box!

And oh when, at last, even this greatest of Gr—tes
Must bend to the Power that at every door knocks,⁵
May he drop in the urn like his own 'silent votes,'
And the tomb of his rest be a large Ballot-Box.

While long at his shrine, both from county and city,
Shall pilgrims triennially gather in flocks,
And sing, while they whimper, the 'appropriate ditty,'
'Oh breathe not his name, let it sleep—in the Box.' 40

¹ And all Arabia breathes from yonder box
Pope's Rape of the Lock.

² Groot, or Grote, Latinized into Grotius.

³ For the particulars of this escape of Grotius from the Castle of Louvenstein, by means of a box (only three feet and a half long, it is said)
in which books used to be occasionally sent to him and foul linen returned, see any of the Biographical Dictionaries.

⁴ This is not quite according to the facts of the case; his wife having been the contriver of the stratagem, and remained in the prison herself to give him time for escape.

ANNOUNCEMENT OF A NEW THALABA

ADDRESSED TO ROBERT SOUTHEY, ESQ.

WHEN erst, my Southey, thy tuneful tongue

The terrible tale of Thalaba sung—
Of him, the Destroyer, doom'd to rout
That grim divan of conjurors out,
Whose dwelling dark, as legends say,
Beneath the roots of the ocean lay,
(Fit place for deep ones, such as they.)
How little thou knew'st, dear Dr.
Southey,

Although bright genius all allow thee,
That, some years thence, thy wond'ring
eyes

Should see a second Thalaba rise—
As ripe for ruinous rigs as thine,
Though his havoc lie in a different line,
And should find this new, improv'd
Destroyer

Beneath the wig of a Yankee lawyer ;
A sort of an 'alien,' alias man,
Whose country or party guess who can,
Being Cockney half, half Jonathan ; 18
And his life, to make the thing completer,
Being all in the genuine Thalaba metre,
Loose and irregular as thy feet are ;—
First, into Whig Pindarics rambling,
Then in low Tory doggerel scrambling ;
Now love his theme, now Church his glory
(At once both Tory and ama-tory),
Now in the ' Old Bailey-lay' meandering,
Now in soft couplet style philandering ;
And, lastly, in lame Alexandrine,
Dragging his wounded length along,¹
When scourg'd by Holland's silken thong.

In short, dear Bob, Destroyer the Second May fairly a match for the First be reckon'd ;

Save that your Thalaba's talent lay
In sweeping old conjurors clean away,
While ours at aldermen deals his blows,
(Who no great conjurors are, God knows,)
Lays Corporations, by wholesale, level,
Sends Acts of Parliament to the devil,
Bullies the whole Milesian race— 39
Seven millions of Paddies, face to face ;

¹ 'A needless Alexandrine ends the song
That, like a wounded snake, drags its slow length along.'

And, seizing that magic wand, himself,
Which erst thy conjurors left on the shelf,
Transforms the boys of the Boyne and Liffey

All into foreigners, in a jiffey—
Aliens, outcasts, every soul of 'em,
Born but for whips and chains, the whole of 'em !

Never, in short, did parallel
Betwixt two heroes gee so well ;
And, among the points in which they fit,
There's one, dear Bob, I can't omit. 50
That hacking, hectoring blade of thine
Dealt much in the Domdaniel line ;²
And 'tis but rendering justice due,
To say that ours and his Tory crew
Damn Daniel most devoutly too.

RIVAL TOPICS *

AN EXTRAVAGANZA

Oh W—ll—ngt—n and Stephenson,
Oh morn and evening papers,
Times, Herald, Courier, Globe, and Sun,
When will ye cease our ears to stun
With these two heroes' capers ?
Still 'Stephenson' and 'W—ll—ngt—n,'
The everlasting two !—
Still doom'd, from rise to set of sun,
To hear what mischief one has done,
And t'other means to do :— 10
What bills the banker pass'd to friends,
But never meant to pay ;
What Bills the other wight intends,
As honest, in their way ;—
Bills, payable at distant sight,
Beyond the Grecian kalends,
When all good deeds will come to light,
When W—ll—ngt—n will do what's
right,
And Rowland pay his balance.

To catch the banker all have sought, 20
But still the rogue unhurt is ;
While t'other juggler—who'd have
thought ?
Though slippery long, has just been caught
By old Archbishop Curtis ;—

² 'Vain are the spells, the Destroyer
Treads the Domdaniel floor.'

Thalaba, a Metrical Romance.

³ The date of this squib must have been, I think, about 1828-9.

And, such the power of papal crook,
The crosier scarce had quiver'd
About his ears, when, lo, the Duke
Was of a Bull deliver'd !

Sir Richard Birnie doth decide
That Rowland ' must be mad,' 30
In private coach, with crest, to ride,
When chaises could be had.
And t'other hero, all agree,
St. Luke's will soon arrive at,
If thus he shows off publicly,
When he might pass in private.

Oh W—ll—ngt—n, oh Stephenson,
Ye ever-boring pair,
Where'er I sit, or stand, or run,
Ye haunt me every where. 40
Though Job had patience tough enough,
Such duplicates would try it ;
Till one's turn'd out and t'other off,
We shan't have peace or quiet.
But small's the chance that Law affords—
Such folks are daily let off ;
And, 'twixt the old Bailey and the Lords,
They both, I fear, will get off.

THE BOY STATESMAN

BY A TORY

'That boy will be the death of me.' Mathews at Home.

AN, Tories dear, our ruin is near,
With St—nl—y to help us, we can't but fall ;
Already a warning voice I hear,
Like the late Charles Mathews' croak in my ear,
'That boy—that boy'll be the death of you all.'

He will, God help us !—not even Scriblerius
In the 'Art of Sinking' his match could be ;
And our case is growing exceeding serious,
For, all being in the same boat as he,
If down my Lord goes, down go we, 10
Lord Baron St—nl—y and Company,
As deep in Oblivion's swamp below
As such 'Masters Shallow' well could go ;
And where we shall all, both low and high,
Embalm'd in mud, as forgotten lie
As already doth Gr—h—m of Netherby !
But that boy, that boy !—there's a tale I know,
Which in talking of him comes à propos.
Sir Thomas More had an only son,
And a foolish lad was that only one, 20
And Sir Thomas said, one day to his wife,
'My dear, I can't but wish you joy,
For you pray'd for a boy, and you now have a boy,
Who'll continue a boy to the end of his life.'

Even such is our own distressing lot,
With the ever-young statesman we have got ;—
Nay even still worse ; for Master More
Wasn't more a youth than he'd been before,
While ours such power of boyhood shows,
That, the older he gets, the more juvenile he grows, 30
And, at what extreme old age he'll close
His schoolboy course, heaven only knows ;—

Some century hence, should he reach so far,
 And ourselves to witness it heaven condemn,
 We shall find him a sort of cub Old Parr,
 A whipper-snapper Methusalem;
 Nay, ev'n should he make still longer stay of it,
 The boy'll want judgment, ev'n to the day of it
 Meanwhile, 'tis a serious, sad infliction;
 And, day and night, with awe I recall
 The late Mr. Mathews' solemn prediction,
 'That boy'll be the death, the death of you all.'

LETTER

FROM LARRY O'BREANIGAN TO THE REV. MURTAGH O'MULLIGAN

ARRAH, where were you, Murthagh, that beautiful day?—
 Or, how came it your riverence was laid on the shelf,
 When that poor craythur, Bobby—as you were away—
 Had to make twice as big a Tom-fool of himself.

Throth, it wasn't at all civil to lave in the lurch
 A boy so deserving your tindh'rest affection;—
 Two such iligant Siamase twins of the Church,
 As Bob and yourself, ne'er should cut the connection.

If thus in two different directions you pull,
 'Faith, they'll swear that yourself and your riverend brother
 Are like those quare foxes, in Gregory's Bull,
 Whose tails were join'd one way, while they look'd another!¹

Ooh bless'd be he, whosomdever he be,
 That help'd soft Magee to that Bull of a Letther!
 Not ev'n my own self, though I sometimes make free
 At such bull-manufacture, could make him a betther.

To be sure, when a lad takes to forgin', this way,
 'Tis a thrick he's much timplt to carry on gaily;
 Till, at last, his 'injanious devices,'² some day,
 Show him up, not at Exether Hall, but the 'Ould Bailey.

That parsons should forge thus appears mighty odd,
 And (as if somethin' 'odd' in their names, too, must be,)
 One forger, of ould, was a riverend Dod,
 While a riverend Todd's now his match, to a T.³

But, no matther who did it—all blessins betide him,
 For dishin' up Bob, in a manner so nate;
 And there wanted but you, Murthagh 'vourneen, beside him,
 To make the whole grand dish of bull-calf complete.

¹ 'You will increase the enmity with which they are regarded by their associates in heresy, thus tying these foxes by the tails, that their faces may tend in opposite directions.'—Bob's Bull, read at Exeter Hall, July 14.

² 'An ingenious device of my learned friend.'—Bob's Letter to Standard.

³ Had I consulted only my own wishes, I should not have allowed this hasty attack on Dr. Todd to have made its appearance in this Collection; being now fully convinced that the charge brought against that reverend gentleman of intending to pass off as genuine his famous mock Papal Letter was altogether unfounded. Finding it to be the wish, however, of my reverend friend—as I am now glad to be permitted to call him—that both the wrong and the reparation, the Ode and the Palinode, should be thus placed in juxtaposition, I have thought it but due to him to comply with his request.

MUSINGS OF AN UNREFORMED PEER

Of all the odd plans of this monstrously queer age,
The oddest is that of reforming the peerage;—
Just as if we, great dons, with a title and star,
Did not get on exceedingly well, as we are,
And perform all the functions of noodles, by birth,
As completely as any born noodles on earth.

How acres descend, is in law-books display'd,
But we as wiseacres descend, ready made;
And, by right of our rank in Debrett's nomenclature,
Are, all of us, born legislators by nature;—
Like ducklings, to water instinctively taking,
So we, with like quackery, take to law-making;
And God forbid any reform should come o'er us,
To make us more wise than our sires were before us.

10

The' Egyptians of old the same policy knew—
If your sire was a cook, you must be a cook too:
Thus making, from father to son, a good trade of it,
Poisoners by right (so no more could be said of it),
The cooks, like our lordships, a pretty mess made of it;
While, fam'd for conservative stomachs, the' Egyptians
Without a wry face bolted all the prescriptions.

20

It is true, we've among us some peers of the past,
Who keep pace with the present most awfully fast—
Fruits, that ripen beneath the new light now arising
With speed that to us, old conserves, is surprising,
Conserves, in whom—potted, for grandmamma uses—
'Twould puzzle a sunbeam to find any juices.
'Tis true, too, I fear, midst the general movement,
Ev'n our House, God help it, is doom'd to improvement,
And all its live furniture, nobly descended,
But sadly worn out, must be sent to be mended.
With moveables 'mong us, like Br—m and like D—rh—m,
No wonder ev'n fixtures should learn to bestir 'em;
And, distant, ye gods, be that terrible day,
When—as playful Old Nick, for his pastime, they say,
Flies off with old houses, sometimes, in a storm—
So ours may be whipt off, some night, by Reform;
And, as up, like Loretto's fam'd house,¹ through the air,
Not angels, but devils, our lordships shall bear,
Grim, radical phizzes, unus'd to the sky,
Shall sit round, like cherubs, to wish us 'good-by,'
While, perch'd up on clouds, little imps of plebeians,
Small Grotes and O'Connells, shall sing Io Paeans.

THE REVEREND PAMPHLETEER

A ROMANTIC BALLAD

Oh, have you heard what hap'd of late ?

If not, come lend an ear,
While sad I state the piteous fate
Of the Reverend Pamphleteer.

All prais'd his skilful jockeyship,
Loud rung the Tory cheer,
While away, away, with spur and whip,
Went the Reverend Pamphleteer.

The nag he rode—how could it err ?
'Twas the same that took, last year,
That wonderful jump to Exeter 11
With the Reverend Pamphleteer.

Set a beggar on horseback, wise men
say
The course he will take is clear ;
And in that direction lay the way
Of the Reverend Pamphleteer.

'Stop, stop,' said Truth, but vain her cry—
Left far away in the rear,
She heard but the usual gay 'Good-by'
From her faithless Pamphleteer. 20

You may talk of the jumps of Homer's
gods,
When cantering o'er our sphore—
I'd back for a hounce, 'gainst any odds,
This Reverend Pamphleteer.

But ah, what tumbles a jockey hath !
In the midst of his career,
A file of the Times lay right in the path
Of the headlong Pamphleteer.

Whether he tripp'd or shy'd thoreat,
Doth not so clear appear : 30
But down he came, as his sermons flat—
This Reverend Pamphleteer !

Lord King himself could scarce desire
To see a spiritual Peer Fall much more dead, in the dirt and mire,
Than did this Pamphleteer.

Yet pitying parsons, many a day,
Shall visit his silent bier,
And, thinking the while of Stanhope, say
'Poor dear old Pamphleteer !' 40

'He has finish'd, at last, his busy
span,
And now lies coolly here—
As often he did in life, good man,
Good, Reverend Pamphleteer !

A RECENT DIALOGUE

1825.

A BISHOP and a bold dragoon,
Both heroes in their way,
Did thus, of late, one afternoon,
Unto each other say :—
'Dear bishop,' quoth the brave hussar,
'As nobody denies
That you a wise logician are,
And I am—otherwise,
'Tis fit that in this question, we
Stick each to his own art—
That yours should be the sophistry,
And mine the fighting part.
My creed, I need not tell you, is Like that of W—n,
To whom no harlot comes amiss,
Save her of Babylon ;¹
And when we're at a loss for words,
If laughing reasoners flout us,
For lack of sense we'll draw our swords—
The sole thing sharp about us.'—
'Dear bold dragoon,' the bishop said,
'Tis true for war thou art meant ;
And reasoning—bless that dandy head !
Is not in thy department.
So leave the argument to me—
And, when my holy labour
Hath lit the fires of bigotry,
Thou'lt poke them with thy sabre.
From pulpit and from sentry-box,
We'll make our joint attacks,
I at the head of my Cassocks,
And you of your Cossacks.
So here's your health, my brave hussar,
My exquisite old fighter—
Success to bigotry and war,
The musket and the mitre !'
Thus pray'd the minister of heaven—
While Y—k, just entering then, Snor'd out (as if some Clerk had
given
His nose the cue) 'Amen.'

THE WELLINGTON SPA

'And drink oblivion to our woes.' ANNA MATILDA.

1829.

TALK no more of your Cheltenham and Harrowgate springs,
 'Tis from Lethe we now our potations must draw;
 Your Lethe's a cure for—all possible things,
 And the doctors have nam'd it the Wellington Spa.

Other physical waters but cure you in part;
One cobbles your gout—'other mends your digestion—
 Some settle your stomach, but this—bless your heart!—
 It will settle, for ever, your Catholic Question.

Unlike, too, the potions in fashion at present,
 This Wellington nostrum, restoring by stealth,
 So purges the mem'ry of all that's unpleasant,
 That patients forget themselves into rude health.

For instance, the' inventor—his having once said
 'He should think himself mad, if, at any one's call
 He became what he is'—is so purg'd from his head,
 That he now doesn't think he's a madman at all.

Of course, for your mem'ries of very long standing—
 Old chronic diseases, that date back, undaunted,
 To Brian Boroo and Fitz-Stephens' first landing—
 A dev'l of a dose of the Lethe is wanted.

But ev'n Irish patients can hardly regret
 An oblivion, so much in their own native style,
 So conveniently plann'd, that, whate'er they forget,
 They may go on rememb'ring it still, all the while!¹

1834.

HALF Whig, half Tory, like these midway things,
 'Twixt bird and beast, that by mistake have wings;
 A mongrel Statesman, 'twixt two factions nurst,
 Who, of the faults of each, combines the worst—
 The Tory's loftiness, the Whigling's sneer,
 The lovelier's rashness, and the bigot's fear;
 The thirst for meddling, restless still to show
 How Freedom's clock, repair'd by Whigs, will go;
 The' alarm when others more sincere than they,
 Advance the hands to the true time of day.

10

By Mother Church, high-fed and haughty dame,
 The boy was dandled, in his dawn of fame;
 List'ning, she smil'd, and bless'd the flippant tongue
 On which the fate of unborn tithe-pigs hung.
 Ah, who shall paint the grandam's grim dismay,
 When loose Reform entic'd her boy away;

¹ The only parallel I know to this sort of oblivion is to be found in a line of the late Mr. R. P. Knight,

'The pleasing memory of things forgot.'

When shock'd she heard him ape the rabble's tone,
 And, in Old Sarum's fate, foredoom her own !
 Groaning she cried, while tears roll'd down her cheeks,
 'Poor, glib-tongued youth, he means not what he speaks. 20
 Like oil at top, these Whig professions flow,
 But, pure as lymph, runs Toryism below.
 Alas, that tongue should start thus, in the race,
 Ere mind can reach and regulate its pace !—
 For, once outstripp'd by tongue, poor, lagging mind,
 At every step, still further limps behind.
 But, bless the boy !—whate'er his wandering be,
 Still turns his heart to Toryism and me.
 Like those odd shapes, portray'd in Dante's lay,¹
 With heads fix'd on, the wrong and backward way. 30
 His feet and eyes pursue a diverse track,
 While those march onward, these look fondly back.'
 And well she knew him—well foresaw the day,
 Which now hath come, when snatch'd from Whigs away,
 The self-same changeling drops the mask he wore,
 And rests, restor'd, in granny's arms once more.

But whither now, mixt brood of modern light
 And ancient darkness, can'st thou bend thy flight ?
 Tried by both factions, and to neither true,
 Fear'd by the old school, laugh'd at by the new ; 40
 For this too feeble, and for that too rash,
This wanting more of fire, that less of flash ;
 Lone shalt thou stand, in isolation cold,
 Betwixt two worlds, the new one and the old,
 A small and 'vex'd Bermoothes,' which the eye
 Of venturous seaman sees—and passes by.

A GHOST STORY

TO THE AIR OF 'UNFORTUNATE MISS BAILEY'

1835.

Nor long in bed had L—ndh—rst lain,
 When, as his lamp burn'd dimly,
 The ghosts of corporate bodies slain, ²
 Stood by his bed-side grimly.
 Dead aldermen, who once could feast,
 But now, themselves, are fed on,
 And skeletons of mayors deceas'd,
 This doleful chorus led on :—
 'Oh Lord L—ndh—rst,
 Unmerciful Lord L—ndh—rst, 10
 Corpses we,
 All burk'd by thee,
 Unmerciful Lord L—ndh—rst !'

'Avaunt, ye frights !' his Lordship cried,
 'Ye look most glum and whitely.'
 'Ah, L—ndh—rst, dear !' the frights replied,
 'You've us'd us unpolitely ;
 And now, ungrateful man ! to drive
 Dead bodies from your door so,
 Who quite corrupt enough, alive, 20
 You've made, by death, still more so.
 Oh, Ex-Chancellor,
 Destructive Ex-Chancellor,
 See thy work,
 Thou second Burke,
 Destructive Ex-Chancellor !'

¹ 'È dalle reni era tornato 'l volto,
 E indietro venir li convenia,
 Perché 'l veder dinanzi era lor tolto.'

² Referring to the line taken by Lord L—ndh—rst, on the question of Municipal Reform.

Bold L—ndh—rst then, whom nought could keep
Awake, or surely that would,
Cried 'Curse you all'—fell fast asleep—
And dreamt of 'Small v. Attwood.'³⁰
While, shock'd, the bodies flew downstairs,
But, courteous in their panic,

Precedence gave to ghosts of mayors,
And corpses aldermanic,
Crying, 'Oh, Lord L—ndh—rst,
That terrible Lord L—ndh—rst,
Not Old Scratch
Himself could match
That terrible Lord L—ndh—rst.'

THOUGHTS ON THE LATE DESTRUCTIVE PROPOSITIONS OF THE TORIES¹

BY A COMMON-COUNCILMAN

1835.

I SAT me down in my easy chair,
To read, as usual, the morning papers;
But—who shall describe my look of despair,
When I came to Lefroy's 'destructive'
capers!
That he—that, of all live men, Lefroy
Should join in the cry 'Destroy, destroy!'
Who, ev'n when a babe, as I've heard
said,
On Orange conserve was chiefly fed,
And never, till now, a movement made
That wasn't most manfully retrograde!
Only think—to sweep from the light of
day
Mayors, maces, criers, and wigs away;
To annihilate—never to rise again—
A whole generation of aldermen,
Nor leave them ev'n the 'accustom'd tolls,
To keep together their bodies and souls!—
At a time, too, when snug posts and places
Are falling away from us one by one,
Crash—crash—like the mummy-cases
Belzoni, in Egypt, sat upon,²⁰
Wherein lay pickled, in state sublime,
Conservatives of the ancient time;—
To choose such a moment to overset
The few snug nuisances left us yet;
To add to the ruin that round us reigns,
By knocking out mayors' and town-
clerks' brains;
By dooming all corporate bodies to fall,
Till they leave, at last, no bodies at all—
Nought but the ghosts of by-gone glory,
Wrecks of a world that once was Tory!
Where pensive criers, like owls unblest,

Robb'd of their roosts, shall still hoot o'er them!
Nor mayors shall know where to seek a nest,
Till Gally Knight shall find one for
them;—
Till mayors and kings, with none to rue
'em,
Shall perish all in one common plague;
And the sovereigns of Belfast and Tuam
Must join their brother, Charles Dix at Prague.

Thus mus'd I, in my chair, alone,
(As above describ'd) till dozy grown, 40
And nodding assent to my own opinions,
I found myself borne to sleep's dominions,
Where, lo, before my dreaming eyes,
A new House of Commons appear'd to
rise,
Whose living contents, to fancy's survey,
Seem'd to me all turn'd topsy-turvy—
A jumble of polypi—nobody knew
Which was the head or which the queue.
Here, Inglis, turn'd to a sans-culotte,
Was dancing the hays with Hume and Grote;⁵⁰
There, ripe for riot, Recorder Shaw
Was learning from Roebuck 'Caira';
While Stanley and Graham, as poissarde
wenches,
Scream'd 'abas!' from the Tory benches;
And Peel and O'Connell, cheek by jowl,
Were dancing an Irish carmagnole.

The Lord preserve us!—if dreams come
true,

What is this hapless realm to do?

¹ These verses were written in reference to the Bill brought in at this time, for the reform of Corporations, and the sweeping amendments proposed by Lord Lyndhurst and other Tory Peers, in order to obstruct the measure.

ANTICIPATED MEETING

OF THE BRITISH ASSOCIATION IN THE YEAR 2836

1836.

AFTER some observations from Dr. M'Grig
 On that fossile reliquium call'd Petrified Wig,
 Or Perruquolithus—a specimen rare
 Of those wigs, made for antediluvian wear,
 Which, it seems, stood the Flood without turning a hair—
 Mr. Tomkins rose up, and requested attention
 To facts no less wondrous which he had to mention.

Some large fossil creatures had lately been found
 Of a species no longer now seen above ground,
 But the same (as to Tomkins most clearly appears) 10
 With those animals, lost now for hundreds of years,
 Which our ancestors us'd to call 'Bishops' and 'Peers,'
 But which Tomkins more erudite names has bestow'd on,
 Having call'd the Peer fossil the' Aristocratodon,¹
 And, finding much food under t'other one's thorax,
 Has christen'd that creature the' Episcopus Vorax.

Lest the savants and dandies should think this all fable,
 Mr. Tomkins most kindly produced on the table
 A sample of each of these species of creatures,
 Both tol'rably human, in structure and features, 20
 Except that the' Episcopus seems, Lord deliver us!
 To've been carnivorous as well as granivorous;
 And Tomkins, on searching its stomach, found there
 Large lumps, such as no modern stomach could bear,
 Of a substance call'd Tithe, upon which, as 'tis said,
 The whole Genus Clericum formerly fed;
 And which having lately himself decomposed,
 Just to see what 'twas made of, he actually found it
 Compos'd of all possible cookable things
 That e'er tripp'd upon trotters or soar'd upon wings— 30
 All products of earth, both gramineous, herbaceous,
 Hordeaceous, fabaceous, and eke farinaceous,
 All clubbing their quotas to glut the oesophagus
 Of this ever greedy and grasping Tithophagus.²
 'Admire,' exclaim'd Tomkins, 'the kind dispensation
 By Providence shed on this much-favour'd nation,
 In sweeping so ravenous a race from the earth,
 That might else have occasion'd a general dearth—
 And thus burying 'em, deep as even Joe Hume would sink 'em,
 With the Ichthyosaurus and Palaeorynchum, 40
 And other queer ci-devant things, under ground—
 Not forgetting that fossilised youth,³ so renown'd,
 Who liv'd just to witness the Deluge—was gratified
 Much by the sight, and has since been found stratified!'

¹ A term formed on the model of the Mastodon, &c.

² The zoological term for a tithe-eater.

³ The man found by Scheuchzer, and supposed by him to have witnessed the Deluge ('homo diluvii testis'), but who turned out, I am sorry to say, to be merely a great lizard.

This picturesque touch—quite in Tomkins's way—
 Call'd forth from the savants a general hurrah;
 While inquiries among them went rapidly round,
 As to where this young stratified man could be found.
 The 'learn'd Theban's' discourse next as lively flow'd on,
 To sketch t'other wonder, the 'Aristocratodon—' 50
 An animal, differing from most human creatures
 Not so much in speech, inward structure, or features,
 As in having a certain exorcence, T. said,
 Which in form of a coronet grew from its head,
 And devolv'd to its heirs, when the creature was dead;
 Nor matter'd it, while this heir-loom was transmitted,
 How unfit were the heads, so the coronet fitted.

He then mention'd a strange zoological fact,
 Whose announcement appear'd much applause to attract.
 In France, said the learned professor, this race 60
 Had so noxious become, in some centuries' space,
 From their numbers and strength, that the land was o'errun with 'em,
 Every one's question being, 'What's to be done with 'em?'
 When, lo! certain knowing ones—savants, mayhap,
 Who, like Buckland's deep followers, understood trap,¹
 Silly hinted that nought upon earth was so good
 For Aristocratodons, when rampant and rude,
 As to stop, or curtail, their allowance of food.
 This expedient was tried, and a proof it affords 70
 Of the effect that short commons will have upon lords;
 For this whole race of bipeds, one fine summer's morn,
 Shed their coronets, just as a deer sheds his horn,
 And the moment these gewgaws fell off, they became Quite a new sort of creature—so harmless and tame,
 That zoologists might, for the first time, maintain 'em
 To be near akin to the genus humanum,
 And the experiment, tried so successfully then,
 Should be kept in remembrance, when wanted again.

SONGS OF THE CHURCH

No. 1

LEAVE ME ALONE

A PASTORAL BALLAD

'We are ever standing on the defensive. All that we say to them is, "leave us alone." The Established Church is part and parcel of the constitution of this country. You are bound to conform to this constitution. We ask of you nothing more;—let us alone.'—Letter in The Times, Nov. 1838.

1838.

COME, list to my pastoral tones,
 In clover my shepherds I keep;
 My stalls are well furnish'd with drones,
 Whose preaching invites one to sleep.

At my spirit let infidels scoff,
 So they leave but the substance my
 own;
 For, in sooth, I'm extremely well off,
 If the world will but let me alone.

Dissenters are grumblers, we know;—
 Though excellent men, in their way,
 They never like things to be so, 11
 Let things be however they may.
 But dissenting's a trick I detest;
 And, besides, 'tis an axiom well known,
 The creed that's best paid is the best,
 If the unpaid would let it alone.

¹ Particularly the formation called Transition Trap.

To me, I own, very surprising
Your Newmans and Puseys all seem,
Who start first with rationalizing,
Then jump to the other extreme. 20
Far better, 'twixt nonsense and sense,
A nice half-way concern, like our own,
Where piety's mix'd up with pence,
And the latter are ne'er left alone.

Of all our tormentors, the Press is
The one that most tears us to bits ;
And, now, Mrs. Woolfrey's 'excesses',
Have thrown all its imps into fits.
The dev'ls have been at us, for weeks,
And there's no saying when they'll have done ;— 30
Oh dear, how I wish Mr. Breeks
Had left Mrs. Woolfrey alone !

If any need pray for the dead,
'Tis those to whom post-obits fall ;
Since wisely hath Solomon said,
'Tis 'money that answereth all.'
But ours be the patrons who live ;—
For, once in their glebe they are thrown,
The dead have no living to give,
And therefore we leave them alone. 40
Though in morals we may not excel,
Such perfection is rare to be had ;
A good life is, of course, very well,
But good living is also—not bad,
And when, to feed earth-worms, I go,
Let this epitaph stare from my stone,
'Here lies the Right Rev. so and so ;
Pass, stranger, and—leave him alone.'

EPISTLE FROM HENRY OF EX—T—R TO JOHN OF TUAM

DEAR John, as I know, like our brother of London,
You've sipp'd of all knowledge, both sacred and mundane,
No doubt, in some ancient Joe Miller, you've read
What Cato, that cunning old Roman, once said—
That he ne'er saw two rev'rend soothsayers meet,
Let it be where it might, in the shrine or the street,
Without wondering the rogues, 'mid their solemn grimaces,
Didn't burst out a laughing in each other's faces.¹
What Cato then meant, though 'tis so long ago,
Even we in the present times pretty well know ; 10
Having soothsayers also, who—sooth to say, John—
Are no better in some points than those of days gone,
And a pair of whom, meeting (between you and me),
Might laugh in their sleeves, too—all lawn though they be.
But this, by the way—my intention being chiefly
In this, my first letter, to hint to you briefly,
That, seeing how fond you of *Tuum*² must be,
While Meum's at all times the main point with me,
We scarce could do better than form an alliance,
To set these sad Anti-Church times at defiance : 20
You, John, recollect, being still to embark,
With no share in the firm but your title³ and mark ;
Or ev'n should you feel in your grandeur inclin'd
To call yourself Pope, why, I shouldn't much mind ;
While my church as usual holds fast by your Tuum,
And every one else's, to make it all Suum.

¹ Mirari se, si augur augurem aspiciens sibi temperaret a risu.

² So spelled in those ancient versicles which John, we understand, frequently chants :—

'Had every one Suum,
You wouldn't have Tuum,

But I should have Meum,
And sing Tu Deum.

³ For his keeping the title he may quote classical authority, as Horace expressly says, 'Poteris servare Tuam,' De Art. Poet. v. 329.—Chronicle.

Thus allied, I've no doubt we shall nicely agree,
 As no twins can be liker, in most points than we;
 Both, specimens choice of that mix'd sort of beast,
 (See Rev. xiii. 1.) a political priest;
 Both mettlesome chargers, both brisk pamphleteers,
 Ripe and ready for all that sets men by the ears;
 And I, at least one, who would scorn to stick longer
 By any giv'n cause than I found it the stronger,
 And who, smooth in my turnings as if on a swivel,
 When the tone ecclesiastic wo'n't do, try the civil.

30

In short (not to bore you, ev'n jure divino)
 We've the same cause in common, John—all but the rhino;
 And that vulgar surplus, whate'er it may be,
 As you're not us'd to cash, John, you'd best leave to me.
 And so, without form—as the postman wo'n't tarry—
 I'm, dear Jack of Tuam,

40

Yours,
 EXETER HARRY.

SONG OF OLD PUCK

'And those things do best please me,
 That befall preposterously.'

Puck Junior,
Midsummer Night's Dream.

Who wants old Puck? for here am I,
 A mongrel imp, 'twixt earth and sky,
 Ready alike to crawl or fly;
 Now in the mud, now in the air
 And, so 'tis for mischief, reckless where.

As to my knowledge, there's no end to't,
 For where I haven't it, I pretend to't;
 And, 'stead of taking a learn'd degree
 At some dull university,
 Puck found it handier to commence so
 With a certain share of impudence,
 Which passes one off as learn'd and clever,

Beyond all other degrees whatever;
 And enables a man of lively scone
 To be Master of all the Arts at once.
 No matter what the science may be—
 Ethics, Physics, Theology,
 Mathematics, Hydrostatics,
 Aerostatics or Pneumatics—
 Whatever it be, I take my luck,
 'Tis all the same to ancient Puck;
 Whose head's so full of all sorts of wares,
 That a brother imp, old Smugden, swears

20

If I had but of law a little smatt'ring,
 I'd then be *perfect*¹—which is flatt'ring.

My skill as a linguist all must know
 Who met me abroad some months ago;
 (And heard me abroad exceedingly, too,
 In the moods and tenses of parlez-vous)
 When, as old Chambaud's shade stood
 mute,

30

I spoke such French to the Institute
 As puzzled those learned Thebans
 much,
 To know if 'twas Sanscrit or High
 Dutch,

And might have pass'd with the' un-observing
 As one of the unknown tongues of Irving.
 As to my talent for ubiquity,
 There's nothing like it in all antiquity.
 Like Mungo (my peculiar care),
 'I'm here, I'm dere, I'm ebery where.'²
 If any one's wanted to take the chair, 40
 Upon any subject, any where,
 Just look around, and—Puck is there!
 When slaughter's at hand, your bird of prey

Is never known to be out of the way;
 And wherever mischief's to be got,
 There's Puck instantan, on the spot.

friend, Dr. — : 'Il se connoit en tout; et même un peu en médecine.'

² Song in The Pudlock.

¹ Verbatim, as said. This tribute is only equalled by that of Talleyrand to his medical

Only find me in negus and applause,
And I'm your man for any cause.
If wrong the cause, the more my de-
light;
But I don't object to it, ev'n when
right,
If I only can vex some old friend by't;
There's D—rh—m, for instance;—to worry him
Fills up my cup of bliss to the brim!

(NOTE BY THE EDITOR)

Those who are anxious to run a muck
Can't do better than join with Puck, They'll find him bon diable—spite of his phiz—
And, in fact, his great ambition is,
While playing old Puck in first-rate style,
To be thought Robin Goodfellow all the while.

POLICE REPORTS

CASE OF IMPOSTURE

AMONG other stray flashmen, dispos'd of, this week,
Was a youngster, nam'd St—nl—y, genteelly connected,
Who has lately been passing off coins, as antique,
Which have prov'd to be sham ones, though long unsuspected.

The ancients, our readers need hardly be told,
Had a coin they call'd 'Talents,' for wholesale demands;¹
And 'twas some of said coinage this youth was so bold
As to fancy he'd got, God knows how, in his hands.

People took him, however, like fools, at his word;
And these talents (all priz'd at his own valuation) 10
Were bid for, with eagerness ev'n more absurd
Than has often distinguish'd this great thinking nation.

Talk of wonders one now and then sees advertiz'd,
'Black swans'—'Queen Anne farthings'—or ev'n 'a child's caul'—
Much and justly as all these rare objects are priz'd,
'St—nl—y's talents' outdid them—swans, farthings, and all!

At length, some mistrust of this coin got abroad;
Even quondam believers began much to doubt of it;
Some rung it, some rubb'd it, suspecting a fraud—
And the hard rubs it got rather took the shine out of it. 20

Others, wishing to break the poor prodigy's fall,
Said 'twas known well to all who had studied the matter,
That the Greeks had not only great talents but small,²
And those found on the youngster were clearly the latter.

While others, who view'd the grave farce with a grin—
Seeing counterfeits pass thus for coinage so massy,
By way of a hint to the dolts taken in,
Appropriately quoted Budaëus de Asse.

In short, the whole sham by degrees was found out,
And this coin, which they chose by such fine names to call, 30
Prov'd a mere lacker'd article—showy, no doubt,
But, ye gods, not the true Attic Talent at all.

¹ For an account of the coin called Talents by the ancients, see Budaëus de Asse, and the other writers de Re Nummariâ.

² The Talentum Magnum and the Talentum Atticum appear to have been the same coin.

As the' impostor was still young enough to repent,
 And, besides, had some claims to a grandee connexion,
 Their Worship—considerate for once—only sent
 The young Thimbleric off to the House of Correction.

REFLECTIONS

ADDRESSED TO THE AUTHOR OF THE ARTICLE ON THE CHURCH, IN THE LAST NUMBER OF THE QUARTERLY REVIEW

I'm quite of your mind;—though these Pats cry aloud
 That they've got 'too much Church,' 'tis all nonsense and stuff;
 For Church is like Love, of which Figaro vow'd
 That even too much of it's not quite enough.¹

Ay, dose them with parsons, 'twill cure all their ills;—
 Copy Morison's mode when from pill-box undaunted he Pours through the patient his black-coated pills,
 Nor cares what their quality, so there's but quantity.

I verily think, 'twould be worth England's while
 To consider, for Paddy's own benefit, whether
 'Twould not be as well to give up the green isle
 To the care, wear and tear of the Church altogether.

10

The Irish are well us'd to treatment so pleasant;
 The harlot Church gave them to Henry Plantagenet,²
 And now, if King William would make them a present
 To 'tother chaste lady—ye Saints, just imagine it!

Chief Secs., Lord-Lieutenants, Commanders-in-chief,
 Might then all be cull'd from the' episcopal benches;
 While colonels in black would afford some relief
 From the hue that reminds one of the' old scarlet wench's.

20

Think how fierce at a charge (being practis'd therein)
 The Right Reverend Brigadier Ph—ll—tts would slash on!
 How General Bl—mf—d, through thick and through thin,
 To the end of the chapter (or chapters) would dash on!

For, in one point alone do the amply fed race
 Of bishops to beggars similitude bear—
 That, set them on horseback, in full steeple chase,
 And they'll ride, if not pull'd up in time—you know where.

But, bless you, in Ireland, that matters not much,
 Where affairs have for centuries gone the same way;
 And a good staunch Conservative's system is such
 That he'd back even Beelzebub's long-founded sway.

30

I am therefore, dear Quarterly, quite of your mind;—
 Church, Church, in all shapes, into Erin let's pour;
 And the more she rejecteth our med'cine so kind,
 The more let's repeat it—'Black dose, as before.'

¹ En fait d'amour, trop même n'est pas assez.
 —Barbier de Séville.

² Grant of Ireland to Henry II by Pope
 Adrian.

Let Coercion, that peace-maker, go hand in hand
 With demure-ey'd Conversion, fit sister and brother;
 And, covering with prisons and churches the land,
 All that wo'n't go to one, we'll put into the other.

40

For the sole, leading maxim of us who're inclin'd
 To rule over Ireland, not well, but religiously,
 Is to treat her like ladies, who've just been confin'd,
 (Or who ought to be so) and to church her prodigiously.

NEW GRAND EXHIBITION OF MODELS OF THE TWO HOUSES OF PARLIAMENT

Come, step in, gentlefolks, here ye may view
 An exact and nat'ral representation
 (Like Siburn's Model of Waterloo¹)
 Of the Lords and Commons of this here nation.

There they are—all cut out in cork—
 The 'Collective Wisdom' wondrous to see;
 My eyes! when all them heads are at work,
 What a vastly weighty consarn it must be.

As for the 'wisdom,'—that may come anon;
 Though, to say truth, we sometimes see
 (And I find the phenomenon no uncommon 'un)
 A man who's M.P. with a head that's M.T.

10

Our Lords are rather too small, 'tis true;
 But they do well enough for Cabinet shelves;
 And, besides,—what's a man with creeturs to do
 That make such verry small figures themselves?

There—don't touch those lords, my pretty dears—(Aside.)
 Curse the children!—this comes of reforming a nation:
 Those meddling young brats have so damag'd my peers,
 I must lay in more cork for a new creation.

20

Them yonder's our bishops—'to whom much is given,'
 And who're ready to take as much more as you please:
 The seers of old times saw visions of heaven,
 But these holy seers see nothing but Sees.

Like old Atlas² (the chap, in Cheapside, there below,)
 'Tis for so much per cent. they take heaven on their shoulders;
 And joy 'tis to know that old High Church and Co.,
 Though not capital priests, are such capital-holders.

There's one on 'em, Ph—llp—ts, who now is away,
 As we're having him fill'd with bumbustible stuff,
 Small crackers and squibs, for a great gala-day,
 When we annually fire his Right Reverence off.

30

'Twould do your heart good, ma'am, then to be by,
 When, bursting with gunpowder, 'stead of with bile,
 Crack, crack, goes the bishop, while dowagers cry,
 'How like the dear man, both in matter and style!'

¹ One of the most interesting and curious of all the exhibitions of the day. ² The sign of the Insurance Office in Cheap-side.

Should you want a few Peers and M.P.s, to bestow,
As presents to friends, we can recommend these:—¹
Our nobles are come down to nine-pence, you know,
And we charge but a penny a piece for M.P.s.

40

Those of bottle-corks made take most with the trade,
(At least, 'mong such as my Irish writ summons.)
Of old whiskey corks our O'Connells are made,
But those we make Shaws and Lefroys of, are rum 'uns
So, step in, gentlefolks, &c. &c.

Da Capo.

ANNOUNCEMENT

OF

A NEW GRAND ACCELERATION COMPANY FOR THE PROMOTION OF
THE SPEED OF LITERATURE

LOUD complaints being made, in these quick-reading times,
Of too slack a supply, both of prose works and rhymes,
A new Company, form'd on the keep-moving plan,
First propos'd by the great firm of Catch-'em-who-can,
Beg to say they've now ready, in full wind and speed,
Some fast-going authors, of quite a new breed—
Such as not he who runs but who gallops may read—
And who, if well curried and fed, they've no doubt,
Will beat ev'n Bentley's swift stud out and out.
It is true, in these days, such a drug is renown,
We've 'Immortals' as rife as M.P.s about town;
And not a Blue's rout but can off-hand supply
Some invalid bard who's insur'd 'not to die.'
Still, let England but once try our authors, she'll find
How fast they'll leave ev'n these Immortals behind;
And how truly the toils of Alcides were light,
Compar'd with his toil who can read all they write.

10

In fact, there's no saying, so gainful the trade,
How fast immortalities now may be made;
Since Helicon never will want an 'Undying One,'
As long as the public continues a Buying One;
And the Company hope yet to witness the hour,
When, by strongly applying the mare-motive² power,
A three-decker novel, 'midst oceans of praise,
May be written, launch'd, read, and—forgot, in three days!

20

In addition to all this stupendous celerity,
Which—to the no small relief of posterity—
Pays off at sight the whole debit of fame,
Nor troubles futurity ev'n with a name
(A project that wo'n't as much tickle Tom Tegg as us, Since 'twill rob him of his second-priced Pegasus);
We, the Company—still more to show how immense
Is the power o'er the mind of pounds, shillings, and pence;

30

And that not even Phoebus himself, in our day,
 Could get up a lay without first an oullay—
 Beg to add, as our literature soon may compare,
 In its quick make and vent, with our Birmingham ware,
 And it doesn't at all matter in either of these lines,
 How sham is the article, so it but shines,—
 We keep authors ready, all perch'd, pen in hand, 40
 To write off, in any given style, at command.
 No matter what bard, be he living or dead,¹
 Ask a work from his pen, and 'tis done soon as said :
 There being, on the 'establishment, six Walter Scotts,
 One capital Wordsworth, and Southey's in lots ;—
 Three choice Mrs. Nortons, all singing like syrens,
 While most of our pallid young clerks are Lord Byrons.
 Then we've —s and —s (for whom there's small call),
 And —s and —s (for whom no call at all).

In short, whosoe'er the last 'Lion' may be, 50
 We've a Bottom who'll copy his roar² to a T,
 And so well, that not one of the buyers who've got 'em
 Can tell which is lion, and which only Bottom.

N.B.—The company, since they set up in this line,
 Have mov'd their concern, and are now at the sign
 Of the Muse's Velocipede, Fleet Street, where all
 Who wish well to the scheme are invited to call.

SOME ACCOUNT OF THE LATE DINNER TO DAN

From tongue to tongue the rumour flew ;
 All ask'd, aghast, 'Is't true ? is't true ?'
 But none knew whether 'twas fact or fable :
 And still the unholy rumour ran,
 From Tory woman to Tory man,
 Though none to come at the truth was able—
 Till, lo, at last, the fact came out,
 The horrible fact, beyond all doubt,
 That Dan had din'd at the Viceroy's table ;
 Had flesh'd his Popish knife and fork 10
 In the heart of the 'Establish'd mutton and pork !

Who can forget the deep sensation
 That news produc'd in this orthodox nation ?
 Deans, rectors, curates, all agreed,
 If Dan was allow'd at the Castle to feed,
 'Twas clearly all up with the Protestant creed !
 There hadn't, indeed, such an apparition
 Been heard of, in Dublin, since that day
 When, during the first grand exhibition
 Of Don Giovanni, that naughty play, 20
 There appear'd, as if rais'd by necromancers,
 An extra devil among the dancers !

¹ We have lodgings apart, for our posthumous people.
 As we find that, if left with the live ones, they keep ill.
² 'Bottom : Let me play the lion ; I will roar you as 'twere any nightingale '

Yes—ev'ry one saw, with fearful thrill,
That a devil too much had join'd the quadrille;¹
And sulphur was smelt, and the lamps let fall
A grim, green light o'er the ghastly ball,
And the poor sham devils didn't like it at all;
For, they knew from whence the' intruder had come,
Though he left, that night, his tail at home.

This fact, we see, is a parallel case
To the dinner that, some weeks since, took place. 30
With the difference slight of fiend and man,
It shows what a nest of Popish sinners
That city must be, where the devil and Dan
May thus drop in, at quadrilles and dinners!

But, mark the end of these foul proceedings,
These demon hops and Popish feedings.
Some comfort 'twill be—to those, at least,
Who've studied this awful dinner question—
To know that Dan, on the night of that feast, 40
Was seiz'd with a dreadful indigestion;
That envoys were sent, post-haste, to his priest,
To come and absolve the suffering sinner,
For eating so much at a heretic dinner;
And some good people were even afraid
That Peel's old confectioner—still at the trade—
Had poison'd the Papist with orangeade.

NEW HOSPITAL FOR SICK LITERATI

With all humility we beg
To inform the public, that Tom Tegg—
Known for his spunky speculations,
In buying up dead reputations,
And, by a mode of galvanizing
Which, all must own, is quite surprising,
Making dead authors move again,
As though they still were living men;—
All this, too, manag'd, in a trice,
By those two magic words, 'Half Price,'
Which brings the charm so quick about,
That worn-out poets, left without 12
A second foot whereon to stand,
Are made to go at second hand;—
'Twill please the public, we repeat,
To learn that Tegg, who works this feat,
And, therefore, knows what care it needs
To keep alive Fame's invalids,
Has oped an Hospital, in town,
For cases of knock'd-up renown— 20
Falls, fractures, dangerous Epic fits
(By some call'd Cantos), stabs from wits;

And, of all wounds for which they're
nurs'd,
Dead cuts from publishers, the worst;—
All these, and other such fatalities,
That happen to frail immortalities,
By Tegg are so expertly treated,
That oft-times, when the cure's completed,
The patient's made robust enough
To stand a few more rounds of puff, 30
Till, like the ghosts of Dante's lay,
He's puff'd into thin air away!

As titled poets (being phenomenons)
Don't like to mix with low and common
'uns,
Tegg's Hospital has separate wards,
Express for literary lords,
Where prose-peers, of immoderate length,
Are nurs'd, when they've outgrown
their strength,
And poets, whom their friends despair
of,
Are—put to bed and taken care of. 40

¹ History of the Irish stage.

Tegg begs to contradict a story,
 Now current both with Whig and Tory,
 That Doctor W—rb—t—n, M.P.,
 Well known for his antipathy,
 His deadly hate, good man, to all
 The race of poets, great and small—
 So much, that he's been heard to own,
 He would most willingly cut down
 The holiest groves on Pindus' mount,
 To turn the timber to account! —
 The story actually goes, that he Prescribes at Tegg's Infirmary;
 And oft, not only stints, for spite,
 The patients in their copy-right,
 But that, on being call'd in lately
 To two sick poets, suffering greatly,

This vaticidal Doctor sent them
 So strong a dose of Jeremy Bentham,
 That one of the poor bards but cried,
 'Oh, Jerry, Jerry!' and then died; 60
 While t'other, though less stuff was
 given,
 Is on his road, 'tis fear'd, to heaven!

Of this event, howe'er unpleasant,
 Tegg means to say no more at present,—
 Intending shortly to prepare
 A statement of the whole affair,
 With full accounts, at the same time,
 Of some late cases (prose and rhyme).
 Subscrib'd with every author's name,
 That's now on the Sick List of Fame. 70

RELIGION AND TRADE

'Sir Robert Peel believed it was necessary to originate all respecting religion and trade in a Committee of the House.'—Church Extension, May 22, 1830.

SAY, who was the wag, indecorously witty,
 Who, first in a statute, this libel convey'd;
 And thus slyly referr'd to the self-same committee,
 As matters congenial, Religion and Trade?

Oh surely, my Ph—llp—ts, 'twas thou didst the deed;
 For none but thyself, or some pluralist brother,
 Accustom'd to mix up the craft with the creed,
 Could bring such a pair thus to twin with each other.

And yet, when one thinks of times present and gone,
 One is for'd to confess, on maturer reflection,
 That 'tisin't in the eyes of committees alone
 That the shrine and the shop seem to have some connection.

Not to mention those monarchs of Asia's fair land,
 Whose civil list all is in 'god-money' paid;
 And where the whole people, by royal command,
 Buy their gods at the government mart, ready made;—¹

There was also (as mention'd, in rhyme and in prose, is)
 Gold heap'd, throughout Egypt, on every shrine,
 To make rings for right reverend crocodiles' noses—
 Just such as, my Ph—llp—ts, would look well in thine.

But one needn't fly off, in this erudite mood;
 And 'tis clear, without going to regions so sunny,
 That priests love to do the least possible good,
 For the largest most possible quantum of money.

'Of him,' saith the text, 'unto whom much is given,
 Of him much, in turn, will be also requir'd:—'
 'By me,' quoth the sleek and obese man of heaven—
 'Give as much as you will—more will still be desir'd.'

¹ The Birmans may not buy the sacred marble in mass, but must purchase figures of the deity already made.—Symes.

More money! more churches!—oh Nimrod, hadst thou
 'Stead of Tower-extension, some shorter way gone—
 Hadst thou known by what methods we mount to heaven now,
 And tried Church-extension, the feat had been done!

MUSINGS

SUGGESTED BY THE LATE PROMOTION OF MRS. NETHERCOAT

'The widow Nethercoat is appointed gaoler of Loughrea, in the room of her deceased husband.'
 —Limerick Chronicle.

WHETHER as queens or subjects, in these days,
 Women seem form'd to grace alike each station;—
 As Captain Flaherty gallantly says,
 'You, ladies, are the lords of the creation!'

Thus o'er my mind did prescient visions float
 Of all that matchless woman yet may be;
 When, hark, in rumours less and less remote,
 Came the glad news o'er Erin's ambient sea,
 The important news—that Mrs. Nethercoat
 Had been appointed gaoler of Loughrea;
 Yes, mark it, History—Nethercoat is dead,
 And Mrs. N. now rules his realm instead;
 Hers the high task to wield the' uplocking keys,
 To rivet rogues and reign o'er Rapparees!
 Thus, while your blust'ers of the Tory school
 Find Ireland's sanest sons so hard to rule,
 One meek-ey'd matron, in Whig doctrines nurst,
 Is all that's ask'd to curb the maddest, worst!

10

Show me the man that dares, with blushless brow,
 Prate about Erin's rage and riot now;—

20

Now, when her temperance forms her sole excess;
 When long-lov'd whiskey, fading from her sight,
 'Small by degrees, and beautifully less,'
 Will soon, like other spirits, vanish quite;

When of red coats the number's grown so small,
 That soon, to cheer the warlike parson's eyes,
 No glimpse of scarlet will be seen at all,
 Save that which she of Babylon supplies;—

Or, at the most, a corporal's guard will be,
 Of Ireland's red defence the sole remains;
 While of its gaols bright woman keeps the key,
 And captive Paddies languish in her chains!

30

Long may such lot be Erin's, long be mine!
 Oh yes—if ev'n this world, though bright it shine,
 In Wisdom's eyes a prison-house must be,
 At least let woman's hand our fetters twine,
 And blithe I'll sing, more joyous than if free,
 The Nethercoats, the Nethercoats for me!

INTENDED TRIBUTE

TO THE

AUTHOR OF AN ARTICLE IN THE LAST NUMBER OF THE QUARTERLY REVIEW, ENTITLED

'ROMANISM IN IRELAND'

It glads us much to be able to say,
That a meeting is fix'd, for some early day,
Of all such dowagers—he or she—
(No matter the sex, so they dowagers be,)
Whose opinions, concerning Church and State,
From about the time of the Curfew date—
Staunch sticklers still for days by-gone,
And admiring them for their rust alone—
To whom if we would a leader give,
Worthy their tastes conservative,
We need but some mummy statesman raise,
Who was pickled and potted in Ptolemy's days;
For that's the man, if waked from his shelf,
To conserve and swaddle this world, like himself.

10

Such, we're happy to state, are the old he-dames
Who've met in committee, and given their names
(In good hieroglyphics), with kind intent
To pay some handsome compliment
To their sister-author, the nameless he,
Who wrote, in the last new Quarterly,
That charming assault upon Popery;
An article justly prized by them,
As a perfect antediluvian gem—
The work, as Sir Sampson Legend would say,
Of some 'fellow the Flood couldn't wash away.'¹

20

The fund being rais'd, there remain'd but to see
What the dowager-author's gift was to be.
And here, I must say, the Sisters Blue
Show'd delicate taste and judgment too.
For, finding the poor man suffering greatly
From the awful stuff he has thrown up lately—
So much so, indeed, to the alarm of all,
As to bring on a fit of what doctors call
The Antipapistico-monomania
(I'm sorry with such a long word to detain ye),
They've acted the part of a kind physician,
By suiting their gift to the patient's condition;
And, as soon as 'tis ready for presentation,
We shall publish the facts, for the gratification
Of this highly-favour'd and Protestant nation.

30

40

Meanwhile, to the great alarm of his neighbours,
He still continues his Quarterly labours;
And often has strong No-Popery fits,
Which frighten his old nurse out of her wits.

Sometimes he screams, like Scrub in the play,¹
 'Thieves! Jesuits! Popery!' night and day;
 Takes the Printer's Devil for Doctor Dens,²
 And shies at him heaps of High-church pens;³
 Which the Devil (himself a touchy Dissenter)
 Feels all in his hide, like arrows, enter.
 'Stead of swallowing wholesome stuff from the druggist's, 50
 He will keep raving of 'Irish Thuggists';⁴
 Tells us they all go murd'ring, for fun,
 From rise of morn till set of sun,
 Pop, pop, as fast as a minute-gun!⁵
 If ask'd, how comes it the gown and cassock are Safe and fat, 'mid this general massacre—
 How haps it that Pat's own population
 But swarms the more for this trucidation—
 He refers you, for all such memoranda, 60
 To the 'archives of the Propaganda!'⁶

This is all we've got, for the present, to say—
 But shall take up the subject some future day.

GRAND DINNER OF TYPE AND CO.

A POOR POET'S DREAM⁷

As I sat in my study, lone and still,
 Thinking of Sergeant Talfourd's Bill,
 And the speech by Lawyer Sugden made,
 In spirit congenial, for 'the Trade,'
 Sudden I sunk to sleep, and, lo,
 Upon Fancy's reinless night-mare sitting,
 I found myself, in a second or so,
 At the table of Messrs. Type and Co.
 With a goodly group of diners sitting;
 All in the printing and publishing line, 10
 Drest, I thought, extremely fine,
 And sipping, like lords, their rosy wine;
 While I, in a state near inanition,
 With coat that hadn't much nap to spare
 (Having just gone into its second edition),
 Was the only wretch of an author there.
 But think, how great was my surprise,
 When I saw, in casting round my eyes,
 That the dishes, sent up by Type's she-cooks, 20
 Bore all, in appearance, the shape of books;
 Large folios—God knows where they got 'em,
 In these small times—at top and bottom;

² The writer of the article has groped about, with much success, in what he calls 'the dark recesses of Dr. Dens's disquisitions.—Quarterly Review.

³ 'Pray, may we ask, has there been any rebellious movement of Popery in Ireland, since the planting of the Ulster colonies, in which something of the kind was not visible among the Presbyterians of the North?'—Ib.

⁴ 'Lord Lorton, for instance, who, for clearing his estate of a village of Irish Thuggists.' &c. &c.—Ib.

⁵ 'Observe how murder after murder is committed like minute-guns.'—Ib.

⁶ 'Might not the archives of the Propaganda possibly supply the key?'

⁷ Written during the late agitation of the question of Copyright.

And quartos (such as the Press provides
 For no one to read them) down the sides.
 Then flash'd a horrible thought on my brain,
 And I said to myself, 'Tis all too plain;
 Like those, well known in school quotations,
 Who ate up for dinner their own relations,
 I see now, before me, smoking here,
 The bodies and bones of my brethren dear ;— 30
 Bright sons of the lyric and epic Muse,
 All cut up in outlets, or hash'd in stews;
 Their works, a light through ages to go,
Themselves, eaten up by Type and Co. !'

While thus I moraliz'd, on they went,
 Finding the fare most excellent;
 And all so kindly, brother to brother,
 Helping the tidbits to each other;
 'A slice of Southey let me send you'—
 'This out of Campbell I recommend you'— 40
 'And here, my friends, is a treat indeed,
 The immortal Wordsworth fricassee'd !'

Thus having, the cormorants, fed some time,
 Upon joints of poetry—all of the prime—
 With also (as Type in a whisper averr'd it)
 'Cold prose on the sideboard, for such as preferr'd it'—
 They rested awhile, to recruit their force,
 Then pounc'd, like kites, on the second course,
 Which was singing-birds merely—Moore and others— 50
 Who all went the way of their larger brothers;
 And, num'rous now though such songsters be,
 'Twas really quite distressing to see
 A whole dishful of Toms—Moore, Dibdin, Bayly,— Bolted by Type and Co. so gaily !

Nor was this the worst—I shudder to think
 What a scene was disclos'd when they came to drink.
 The warriors of Odin, as every one knows,
 Used to drink out of skulls of slaughter'd foes:
 And Type's old port, to my horror I found, 60
 Was in skulls of bards sent merrily round.
 And still as each well-fill'd cranium came,
 A health was pledg'd to its owner's name;
 While Type said sily, 'midst general laughter,
 'We eat them up first, then drink to them after.'

There was no standing this—incens'd I broke
 From my bonds of sleep, and indignant woke,
 Exclaiming, 'Oh shades of other times,
 Whose voices still sound, like deathless chimes,
 Could you e'er have foretold a day would be,
 When a dreamer of dreams should live to see 70
 A party of sleek and honest John Bulls
 Hobnobbing each other in poets' skulls !'

CHURCH EXTENSION

TO THE EDITOR OF THE MORNING CHRONICLE

Sir,—A well-known classical traveller, while employed in exploring, some time since, the supposed site of the Temple of Diana of Ephesus, was so fortunate, in the course of his researches, as to light upon a very ancient bark manuscript, which has turned out, on examination, to be part of an old Ephesian newspaper :—a newspaper published, as you will see, so far back as the time when Demetrius, the great Shrine-Extender,¹ flourished. I am, Sir, yours, &c.

EPHESIAN GAZETTE

Second edition.

IMPORTANT event for the rich and religious !

Great Meeting of Silversmiths held in Queen Square ;—
Church Extension, their object,—the' excitement prodigious ;—
Demetrius, head man of the craft, takes the chair !

Third edition.

The Chairman still up, when our dev'l came away ;
Having prefac'd his speech with the usual state prayer,
That the Three-headed Dian² would kindly, this day,
Take the Silversmiths' Company under her care.

Being ask'd by some low, unestablish'd divines,
'When your churches are up, where are flocks to be got ?'
He manfully answer'd, 'Let us build the shrines,'³
And we care not if flocks are found for them or not.'

He then added—to show that the Silversmiths' Guild
Were above all confin'd and intolerant views—
'Only pay through the nose to the altars we build,
You may pray through the nose to what altars you choose.'

This tolerance, rare from a shrine-dealer's lip,
(Though a tolerance mix'd with due taste for the till)—
So much charm'd all the holders of scriptural scrip,
That their shouts of 'Hear !' 'Hear !' are re-echoing still.

Fourth edition.

Great stir in the Shrine Market ! altars to Phoebus
Are going dog-cheap—may be had for a rebus.
Old Dian's, as usual, outsell all the rest ;—
But Venus's also are much in request.

LATEST ACCOUNTS FROM OLYMPUS

As news from Olympus has grown rather rare,
Since bards, in their cruises, have ceased to touch there,
We extract for our readers the' intelligence given,
In our latest accounts from that ci-devant heaven—
That realm of the By-gones, where still sit, in state,
Old god-heads and nod-heads, now long out of date.

¹ 'For a certain man named Demetrius, a silversmith, which made shrines for Diana, brought no small gain unto the craftsmen ; whom he called together with the workmen of like occupation, and said, Sirs, ye know that by this craft we have our wealth.'—Acts xix.

² Tria Virginis ora Dianae.

³ The 'shrines' are supposed to have been small churches, or chapels, adjoining to the great temples ;—'aediculae, in quibus statuae reponerantur.'—Erasm.

Jove himself, it appears, since his love-days are o'er,
 Seems to find immortality rather a bore;
 Though he still asks for news of earth's capers and crimes,
 And reads daily his old fellow-Thund'rer, the Times. 10
 He and Vulcan, it seems, by their wives still hen-peck'd are,
 And kept on a stinted allowance of nectar.

Old Phoebus, poor lad, has given up inspiration,
 And pack'd off to earth on a puff-speculation.
 The fact is, he found his old shrines had grown dim,
 Since bards look'd to Bentley and Colburn, not him.
 So, he sold off his stud of ambrosia-fed nags,
 Came incog. down to earth, and now writes for the Mags;
 Taking care that his work not a gleam hath to linger in't,
 From which men could guess that the god had a finger in't. 20

There are other small facts, well deserving attention,
 Of which our Olympic despatches make mention.
 Poor Bacchus is still very ill, they allege,
 Having never recover'd the Temperance Pledge.
 'What, the Irish!' he cried—'those I look'd to the most!
 If they give up the spirit, I give up the ghost:'
 While Momus, who us'd of the gods to make fun,
 Is turn'd Socialist now, and declares there are none!

But these changes, though curious, are all a mere farce,
 Compar'd to the new 'casus belli' of Mars, 30
 Who, for years, has been suffering the horrors of quiet,
 Uncheer'd by one glimmer of bloodshed or riot!
 In vain from the clouds his belligerent brow
 Did he pop forth, in hopes that somewhere or somehow,
 Like Pat at a fair, he might 'coax up a row:'
 But the joke wouldn't take—the whole world had got wiser;
 Men lik'd not to take a Great Gun for adviser;
 And, still less, to march in fine clothes to be shot,
 Without very well knowing for whom or for what.
 The French, who of slaughter had had their full swing, 40
 Were content with a shot, now and then, at their King;
 While, in England, good fighting's a pastime so hard to gain,
 Nobody's left to fight with, but Lord C—rd—g—n.

'Tis needless to say, then, how monstrously happy
 Old Mars has been made by what's now on the tapis;
 How much it delights him to see the French rally,
 In Liberty's name, around Mehemet Ali;
 Well knowing that Satan himself could not find
 A confection of mischief much more to his mind
 Than the old Bonnet Rouge and the Bashaw combin'd. 50
 Right well, too, he knows, that there ne'er were attackers,
 Whatever their cause, that they didn't find backers;
 While any slight care for Humanity's woes
 May be sooth'd by that 'Art Diplomatique,' which shows
 How to come, in the most approv'd method, to blows.

This is all, for to-day—whether Mars is much vext
 At his friend Thiers's exit, we'll know by our next.

THE TRIUMPHS OF FARCE

Our earth, as it rolls through the regions of space,
 Wears always two faces, the dark and the sunny;
 And poor human life runs the same sort of race,
 Being sad, on one side—on the other side, funny.

Thus oft we, at eve, to the Haymarket hie,
 To weep o'er the woes of Macready;—but scarce
 Hath the tear-drop of Tragedy pass'd from the eye,
 When, lo, we're all laughing in fits at the Farce.

And still let us laugh—preach the world as it may—
 Where the cream of the joke is, the swarm will soon follow;
 Heroics are very grand things, in their way,
 But the laugh at the long run will carry it hollow.

For instance, what sermon on human affairs
 Could equal the scene that took place t'other day
 'Twixt Romeo and Louis Philippe, on the stairs—
 The Sublime and Ridiculous meeting half-way!

Yes, Jocus! gay god, whom the Gentiles supplied,
 And whose worship not ev'n among Christians declines,
 In our senate thou'st languish'd since Sheridan died,
 But Sydney still keeps thee alive in our shrines.

Rare Sydney! thrice honour'd the stall where he sits,
 And be his every honour he deigneth to climb at!
 Had England a hierarchy form'd all of wits,
 Who but Sydney would England proclaim as its primate?

And long may he flourish, frank, merry, and brave—
 A Horace to hear, and a Pascal to read;¹
 While he laughs, all is safe, but, when Sydney grows grave,
 We shall then think the Church is in danger indeed.

Meanwhile, it much glads us to find he's preparing
 To teach other bishops to 'seek the right way';²
 And means shortly to treat the whole bench to an airing,
 Just such as he gave to Charles James t'other day.

For our parts, though gravity's good for the soul,
 Such a fancy have we for the side that there's fun on,
 We'd rather with Sydney south-west take a 'stroll,'
 Than coach it north-east with his Lordship of Lunnun.

¹ Some parts of the Provinciales may be said to be of the highest order of jeux d'esprit or, squibs.

² This stroll in the metropolis is extremely well contrived for your Lordship's speech; but suppose, my dear Lord, that instead of going E. and N. E. you had turned about, &c. &c.—Sydney Smith's Last Letter to the Bishop of London.

THOUGHTS ON PATRONS, PUFFS,
AND OTHER MATTERS

IN AN EPISTLE FROM T. M. TO S. R.

WHAT, thou, my friend! a man of rhymes,

And, better still, a man of guineas,
To talk of 'patrons,' in these times,
When authors thrive, like spinning jennies,

And Arkwright's twist and Bulwer's
page

Alike may laugh at patronage!

No, no—those times are pass'd away,
When, doom'd in upper floors to star it,

The bard inscrib'd to lords his lay,—
Himself, the while, my Lord Mountgarret. 10

No more he begs, with air dependent,
His 'little bark may sail attendant'

Under some lordly skipper's steerage;
But launch'd triumphant in the Row,
Or ta'en by Murray's self in tow, Cuts both Star Chamber and the peerage.

Patrons, indeed! when scarce a sail
Is whisk'd from England by the gale,
But bears on board some authors,
shipp'd

For foreign shores, all well-equipp'd 20
With proper book-making machinery,
To sketch the morals, manners, scenery,
Of all such lands as they shall see,
Or not see, as the case may be:—

It being enjoind on all who go
To study first Miss M—,
And learn from her the method true,
To do one's books—and readers, too.
For so this nymph of nous and nerve
Teaches mankind 'How to Observe';
And, lest mankind at all should swerve,
Teaches them also 'What to Observe.' 32

No, no, my friend—it can't be blink'd—
The Patron is a race extinct;
As dead as any Megatherion
That ever Buckland built a theory on.
Instead of bartering, in this age,
Our praise for pence and patronage,
We authors, now, more prosperous elves,
Have learn'd to patronise ourselves; 40

And since all-potent Puffing's made
The life of song, the soul of trade,
More frugal of our praises grown,
We puff no merits but our own.

Unlike those feeble gales of praise
Which critics blew in former days,
Our modern puffs are of a kind
That truly, really raise the wind;
And since they've fairly set in blowing,
We find them the best trade-winds going.
'Stead of frequenting paths so slippery 51
As her old haunts near Aganippe,
The Muse, now, taking to the till,
Has open'd shop on Ludgate Hill
(Far handier than the Hill of Pindus,
As seen from bard's back attic windows);

And swallowing there without cessation
Large draughts (at sight) of inspiration,
Touches the notes for each new theme,
While still fresh 'change comes o'er her
dream.' 60

What Steam is on the deep—and more—
Is the vast power of Puff on shore;
Which jumps to glory's future tenses
Before the present even commences;
And makes 'immortal' and 'divine' of
us

Before the world has read one line of us.

In old times, when the God of Song
Drove his own two-horse team along,
Carrying inside a bard or two,
Book'd for posterity 'all through';— Their luggage, a few close-pack'd
rhymes, 71

(Like yours, my friend,) for after-times
So slow the pull to Fame's abode,
That folks oft slept upon the road;—
And Homer's self, sometimes, they say,
Took to his nightcap on the way.¹

Ye Gods! how different is the story
With our new galloping sons of glory,
Who, scorning all such slack and slow
time,

Dash to posterity in no time! 80
Raise but one general blast of Puff
To start your author—that's enough.
In vain the critics, set to watch him,
Try at the starting post to catch him:

Horat.

He's off—the puffers carry it hollow—
 The critics, if they please, may follow.
 Ere they've laid down their first positions,
 He's fairly blown through six editions!
 In vain doth Edinburgh dispense
 Her blue and yellow pestilence 90
 (That plague so awful in my time
 To young and touchy sons of rhyme)—
 The Quarterly, at three months' date,
 To catch the 'Unread One, comes too
 late;

And nonsense, litter'd in a hurry,
 Becomes 'immortal,' spite of Murray.

But, bless me!—while I thus keep fooling,

I hear a voice cry, 'Dinner's cooling,'
 That postman, too, (who, truth to tell,
 'Mong men of letters bears the bell,) 100
 Keeps ringing, ringing, so infernally
 That I must stop—

Yours sempiternally.

THOUGHTS ON MISCHIEF

BY LORD ST—NL—Y

(HIS FIRST ATTEMPT IN VERSE)

'Evil, be thou my good.' Milton.

How various are the inspirations
 Of different men, in different nations!
 As genius prompts to good or evil,
 Some call the Muse, some raise the devil.

Old Socrates, that pink of sages,
 Kept a pet demon, on board wages
 To go about with him incog.,
 And sometimes give his wits a jog.
 So L—nd—st, in our day, we know,
 Keeps fresh relays of imps below, 10
 To forward, from that nameless spot,
 His inspirations, hot and hot.

But, neat as are old L—nd—st's doings—
 Beyond even Hecate's 'hell-broth'
 brewings—

Had I, Lord Stanley, but my will,
 I'd show you mischief prettier still;
 Mischief, combining boyhood's tricks
 With age's sourest politics;
 The urchin's freaks, the veteran's gall,
 Both duly mix'd, and matchless all; 20
 A compound nought in history reaches
 But Machiavel, when first in breeches!

Yes, Mischief, Goddess multiform, Whene'er thou, witch-like, rid'st the
 storm,

Let Stanley ride cockhorse behind thee—
 No livelier lackey could they find thee.
 And, Goddess, as I'm well aware,
 So mischief's done, you care not where,
 I own, 'twill most my fancy tickle
 In Paddyland to play the Pickle; 30
 Having got credit for inventing
 A new, brisk method of tormenting—
 A way, they call the Stanley fashion,
 Which puts all Ireland in a passion;
 So neat it hits the mixture due
 Of injury and insult too;
 So legibly it bears upon't
 The stamp of Stanley's brazen front.

Ireland, we're told, means land of Ire;
 And why she's so, none need inquire, 40
 Who sees her millions, martial, manly,
 Spat upon thus by me, Lord St—nl—y.
 Already in the breeze I scent
 The whiff of coming devilment;
 Of strife, to me more stirring far
 Than the 'Opium or the Sulphur war,
 Or any such drug ferments are.
 Yes—sweeter to this Tory soul
 Than all such pests, from pole to pole,
 Is the rich, 'swelter'd venom' got 50
 By stirring Ireland's 'charmed pot';¹
 And, thanks to practice on that land,
 I stir it with a master-hand.

Again thou'lt see, when forth hath gone
 The War-Church-cry, 'On, Stanley, on!'
 How Caravats and Shanavests
 Shall swarm from out their mountain nests,
 With all their merry moonlight brothers,
 To whom the Church (step-dame to others)

Hath been the best of nursing mothers.
 Again o'er Erin's rich domain 61
 Shall Rockites and right reverends reign;
 And both, exempt from vulgar toil,
 Between them share that titheful soil;
 Puzzling ambition which to climb at,
 The post of Captain, or of Pimate.

And so, long life to Church and Co.—
 Hurrah for mischief!—here we go.

¹ 'Swelter'd venom, sleeping got,
 Boil thou first i' the charmed pot.'

EPISTLE FROM CAPTAIN ROCK TO LORD L—NDH—T

DEAR L—ndh—t,—you'll pardon my making thus free,—
 But form is all fudge 'twixt such 'comrogues' as we,
 Who, whate'er the smooth views we, in public, may drive at,
 Have both the same praiseworthy object, in private—
 Namely, never to let the old regions of riot,
 Where Rock hath long reign'd, have one instant of quiet,
 But keep Ireland still in that liquid we've taught her
 To love more than meat, drink, or clothing—hot water.

All the difference betwixt you and me, as I take it,
 Is simply, that you make the law and I break it; 10
 And never, of big-wigs and small, were there two Play'd so well into each other's hands as we do;
 Inasmuch, that the laws you and yours manufacture,
 Seem all made express for the Rock-boys to fracture.
 Not Birmingham's self—to her shame be it spoken—
 E'er made things more neatly contriv'd to be broken;
 And hence, I confess, in this island religious,
 The breakage of laws—and of heads is prodigious.

And long may it thrive, my Ex-Bigwig, say I,—
 Though, of late, much I fear'd all our fun was gone by; 20
 As, except when some tithe-hunting parson show'd sport,
 Some rector—a cool hand at pistols and port,
 Who 'keeps dry' his powder, but never himself—
 One who, leaving his Bible to rust on the shelf,
 Sends his pious texts home, in the shape of ball-cartridges,
 Shooting his 'dearly beloved,' like partridges;—
 Except when some hero of this sort turn'd out,
 Or, the' Exchequer sent, flaming, its tithe-writs¹ about—
 A contrivance more neat, I may say, without flattery,
 Than e'er yet was thought of for bloodshed and battery; 30
 So neat, that even I might be proud, I allow,
 To have hit off so rich a receipt for a row;—
 Except for such rigs turning up, now and then,
 I was actually growing the dullest of men;
 And, had this blank fit been allow'd to increase,
 Might have snor'd myself down to a Justice of Peace.
 Like you, Reformation in Church and in State
 Is the thing of all things I most cordially hate;
 If once these curst Ministers do as they like,
 All's o'er, my good Lord, with your wig and my pike, 40
 And one may be hung up on t'other, henceforth,
 Just to show what such Captains and Chancellors were worth.

But we must not despair—even already Hope sees You're about, my bold Baron, to kick up a breeze
 Of the true baffling sort, such as suits me and you,
 Who have box'd the whole compass of party right through,
 And care not one farthing, as all the world knows,
 So we but raise the wind, from what quarter it blows.

¹ Exchequer tithe processes, served under a commission of rebellion.—Chronicle.

Forgive me, dear Lord, that thus rudely I dare
 My own small resources with thine to compare : 50
 Not even Jerry Diddler, in 'raising the wind,' durst
 Compete, for one instant, with thee, my dear L—ndh—t.

But, hark, there's a shot!—some parsonic practitioner?
 No—merely a bran-new Rebellion Commissioner;
 The Courts having now, with true law erudition,
 Put even Rebellion itself 'in commission.'
 As seldom, in this way, I'm any man's debtor,
 I'll just pay my shot, and then fold up this letter.
 In the mean time, hurrah for the Tories and Rocks!
 Hurrah for the parsons who fleece well their flocks! 60
 Hurrah for all mischief in all ranks and spheres,
 And, above all, hurrah for that dear House of Peers!

CAPTAIN ROCK IN LONDON

LETTER FROM THE CAPTAIN TO TERRY ALT, ESQ.¹

HERE I am, at head-quarters, dear Terry, once more,
 Deep in Tory designs, as I've oft been before :—
 For, bless them! if 'twasn't for this wrong-headed crew,
 You and I, Terry Alt, would scarce know what to do;
 So ready they're always, when dull we are growing,
 To set our old concert of discord a-going,
 While L—ndh—t's the lad, with his Tory-Whig face,
 To play, in such concert, the true double-base.
 I had fear'd this old prop of my realm was beginning
 To tire of his course of political sinning, 10
 And, like Mother Cole, when her heyday was past,
 Meant, by way of a change, to try virtue at last.
 But I wrong'd the old boy, who as staunchly derides
 All reform in himself as in most things besides;
 And, by using two faces through life, all allow,
 Has acquir'd face sufficient for any thing now.

In short, he's all right; and, if mankind's old foe,
 My 'Lord Harry' himself—who's the leader, we know,
 Of another red-hot Opposition, below—
 If that 'Lord,' in his well-known discernment, but spares 20
 Me and L—ndh—t, to look after Ireland's affairs,
 We shall soon such a region of devilment make it,
 That Old Nick himself for his own may mistake it.

Even already—long life to such Big-wigs, say I,
 For, as long as they flourish, we Rocks cannot die—
 He has serv'd our right riotous cause by a speech
 Whose perfection of mischief he only could reach;
 As it shows off both his and my merits alike,
 Both the swell of the wig, and the point of the pike;
 Mixes up, with a skill which one can't but admire, 30
 The lawyer's cool craft with the incendiary's fire,
 And enlists, in the gravest, most plausible manner,
 Seven millions of souls under Rockery's banner!

¹ The subordinate officer or lieutenant of Captain Rock.

Oh Terry, my man, let this speech never die;
 Through the regions of Rockland, like flame, let it fly;
 Let each syllable dark the Law-Oracle utter'd
 By all Tipperary's wild echoes be mutter'd,
 Till nought shall be heard, over hill, dale, or flood,
 But 'You're aliens in language, in creed, and in blood;' 40
 While voices, from sweet Connemara afar,
 Shall answer, like true Irish echoes, 'We are!'
 And, though false be the cry, and though sense must abhor it,
 Still the' echoes may quote Law authority for it,
 And nought L—ndh—t cares for my spread of dominion,
 So he, in the end, touches cash 'for the' opinion.'

But I've no time for more, my dear Terry, just now,
 Being busy in helping these Lords through their row:
 They're bad hands at mob-work, but, once they begin,
 They'll have plenty of practice to break them well in.

THE FUDGES IN ENGLAND

BEING A SEQUEL TO 'THE FUDGE FAMILY IN PARIS'

PREFACE

THE name of the country town, in England—a well-known fashionable watering-place—in which the events that gave rise to the following correspondence occurred, is, for obvious reasons, suppressed. The interest attached, however, to the facts and personages of the story, render it independent of all time and place; and when it is recollected that the whole train of romantic circumstances so fully unfolded in these Letters has passed during the short period which has now elapsed since the great Meetings in Exeter Hall, due credit will, it is hoped, be allowed to the Editor for the rapidity with which he has brought the details before the Public; while, at the same time, any errors that may have been the result of such haste will, he trusts, with equal consideration, be pardoned.

LETTER I

FROM PATRICK MAGAN, ESQ., TO THE REV. RICHARD ———, CURATE
 OF ———, IN IRELAND

WHO d'ye think we've got here?—quite reform'd from the giddy,

Fantastic young thing, that once made such a noise—

Why, the famous Miss Fudge—that delectable Biddy,

Whom you and I saw once at Paris, when boys,

In the full blaze of bonnets, and ribands, and airs—

Such a thing as no rainbow hath colours to paint;

Ere time had reduced her to wrinkles and prayers,

And the Flirt found a decent retreat in the Saint.

Poor 'Pa' hath popp'd off—gone, as charity judges,

To some choice Elysium reserv'd for the Fudges;

And Miss, with a fortune, besides expectations 10

From some much rever'd and much-palsied relations,

Now wants but a husband, with requisites meet,—
 Age thirty, or thereabouts—stature six feet,
 And warranted godly—to make all complete.
Nota Bene—a Churchman would suit, if he's high,
 But Socinians or Catholics need not apply.

What say you, Dick? doesn't this tempt your ambition?
 The whole wealth of Fudge, that renown'd man of pith,
 All brought to the hammer, for Church competition,— 20
 Sole encumbrance, Miss Fudge to be taken therewith.
 Think, my boy, for a Curate how glorious a catch!
 While, instead of the thousands of souls you now watch,
 To save Bidly Fudge's is all you need do;
 And her purse will, meanwhile, be the saving of you.

You may ask, Dick, how comes it that I, a poor elf,
 Wanting substance even more than your spiritual self,
 Should thus generously lay my own claims on the shelf,
 When, God knows! there ne'er was young gentleman yet 30
 So much lack'd an old spinster to rid him from debt,
 Or had cogenter reasons than mine to assail her
 With tender love-suit—at the suit of his tailor.

But thereby there hangs a soft secret, my friend,
 Which thus to your reverend breast I commend:
 Miss Fudge hath a niece—such a creature!—with eyes
 Like those sparklers that peep out from summernight skies
 At astronomers-royal, and laugh with delight
 To see elderly gentlemen spying all night.
 While her figure—oh, bring all the gracefulest things
 That are borne through the light air by feet or by wings, 40
 Not a single new grace to that form could they teach,
 Which combines in itself the perfection of each;
 While, rapid or slow, as her fairy feet fall,
 The mute music of symmetry modulates all.

Ne'er in short, was there creature more form'd to bewilder
 A gay youth like me, who of castles aerial
 (And only of such) am, God help me! a builder;
 Still peopling each mansion with lodgers ethereal,
 And now, to this nymph of the seraph-like eye,
 Letting out, as you see, my first floor next the sky.¹ 50

But, alas! nothing's perfect on earth—even she,
 This divine little gipsy, does odd things sometimes;
 Talks learning—looks wise (rather painful to see),
 Prints already in two County papers her rhymes;
 And raves—the sweet, charming, absurd little dear!
 About Amulets, Bijous, and Keepsakes, next year,
 In a manner which plainly bad symptoms portends
 Of that Annual blue fit, so distressing to friends;
 A fit which, though lasting but one short edition,
 Leaves the patient long after in sad inanition. 60

¹ That floor which a facetious garreteer called 'le premier en descendant du ciel.'

However, let's hope for the best—and, meanwhile,
 Be it mine still to bask in the niece's warm smile;
 While you, if you're wise, Dick, will play the gallant (Uphill work, I confess,) to her Saint of an Aunt.
 Think, my boy, for a youngster like you, who've a lack,
Not indeed of rupees, but of all other specie,
 What luck thus to find a kind witch at your back,
 An old goose with gold eggs, from all debts to release ye;
 Never mind, tho' the spinster be reverend and thin,
 What are all the Three Graces to her Three per Cents.? 70
 While her acres!—oh Dick, it don't matter one pin
 How she touches the' affections, so you touch the rents;
 And Love never looks half so pleas'd as when, bless him! he Sings to an old lady's purse 'Open, Sesamé.'

By the way, I've just heard, in my walks, a report,
 Which, if true, will insure for your visit some sport.
 'Tis rumour'd our Manager means to bespeak
 The Church tumblers from Exeter Hall for next week;
 And certainly ne'er did a queerer or rummer set 80
 Throw, for the' amusement of Christians, a summerset.
 'Tis fear'd their chief 'Merriman,' C—ke, cannot come,
 Being called off, at present, to play Punch at home;¹
 And the loss of so practis'd a wag in divinity
 Will grieve much all lovers of jokes on the Trinity;—
 His pun on the name Unigenitus, lately
 Having pleas'd Robert Taylor, the Reverend, greatly.²

'Twill prove a sad drawback, if absent he be,
 As a wag Presbyterian's a thing quite to see;
 And, 'mong the Five Points of the Calvinists, none of 'em 90
 Ever yet reckon'd a point of wit one of 'em.
 But even though depriv'd of this comical elf,
 We've a host of buffoni in Murtagh himself,
 Who of all the whole troop is chief mummer and mime,
 As C—ke takes the Ground Tumbling, he the Sublime;³
 And of him we're quite certain, so pray, come in time.

LETTER II

FROM MISS BIDDY FUDGE TO MRS. ELIZABETH ———

JUST in time for the post, dear, and monstrously busy,
 With godly concernments—and worldly ones, too;
 Things carnal and spiritual mix'd, my dear Lizzy,
 In this little brain till, bewilder'd and dizzy,
 'Twixt heaven and earth, I scarce know what I do.
 First, I've been to see all the gay fashions from Town,
 Which our favourite Miss Gimp for the spring has had down.

¹ See the Dublin Evening Post, of the 9th of this month (July), for an account of a scene which lately took place at a meeting of the Synod of Ulster, in which the performance of the above-mentioned part by the personage in question appears to have been worthy of all its former reputation in that line.

² 'All are punsters if they have wit to be so; and therefore when an Irishman has to commence with a Bull, you will naturally pronounce it a bull. (A laugh.) Allow me to bring before you the famous Bull that is called Unigenitus, referring to the only-begotten Son of God.'—Report of the Rev. Doctor's speech, June 20, in the Record Newspaper.

³ In the language of the play-bills, 'Ground and Lofty Tumbling.'

Sleeves still worn (which I think is wise), à la folle,
 Charming hats, pou de soie—though the shape rather droll.
 But you can't think how nicely the caps of tulle lace,
 With the mentonnières, look on this poor sinful face;
 And I mean, if the Lord in his mercy thinks right,
 To wear one at Mrs. Fitz-wigram's to-night.
 The silks are quite heavenly:—I'm glad, too, to say,
 Gimp herself grows more godly and good every day;
 Hath had sweet experience—yea, even doth begin
 To turn from the Gentiles, and put away sin—
 And all since her last stock of goods was laid in.
 What a blessing one's milliner, careless of pelf,
 Should thus 'walk in newness' as well as one's self!

So much for the blessings, the comforts of Spirit
 I've had since we met, and they're more than I merit!—
 Poor, sinful, weak creature in every respect;
 Though ordain'd (God knows why) to be one of the' Elect.
 But now for the picture's reverse.—You remember
 That footman and cook-maid I hir'd last December;
He, a Baptist Particular—she, of some sect
 Not particular, I fancy, in any respect;
 But desirous, poor thing, to be fed with the Word,
 And 'to wait,' as she said, 'on Miss Fudge and the Lord.'

Well, my dear, of all men, that Particular Baptist
 At preaching a sermon, off hand, was the aptest;
 And, long as he staid, do him justice, more rich in Sweet savours of doctrine, there never was kitchen.
 He preach'd in the parlour, he preach'd in the hall,
 He preach'd to the chambermaids, scullions, and all.

All heard with delight his reprovings of sin,
 But above all, the cook-maid;—oh, ne'er would she tire—
 Though, in learning to save sinful souls from the fire,

She would oft let the soles she was frying fall in.
 (God forgive me for punning on points thus of piety!—
 A sad trick I've learn'd in Bob's heathen society.)
 But ah! there remains still the worst of my tale;
 Come, Asterisks, and help me the sad truth to veil—
 Conscious stars, that at even your own secret turn pale!

* * * * *

In short, dear, this preaching and psalm-singing pair, Chosen 'vessels of mercy,' as I thought they were,
 Have together this last week elop'd; making bold
 To whip off as much goods as both vessels could hold—
 Not forgetting some scores of sweet tracts from my shelves,
 Two Family Bibles as large as themselves,
 And besides, from the drawer—I neglecting to lock it—
 My neat 'Morning Manna, done up for the pocket.'

¹ 'Morning Manna, or British Verse-book, neatly done up for the pocket,' and chiefly intended to assist the members of the British Verse Association, whose design is, we are told, 'to induce the inhabitants of Great Britain and Ireland to commit one and the same verse of Scripture to memory every morning. Already, it is known, several thousand persons in Scotland, besides tens of thousands in America and Africa, are every morning learning the same verse.'

Was there e'er known a case so distressing, dear Liz?
 It has made me quite ill:—and the worst of it is,
 When rogues are all pious, 'tis hard to detect
Which rogues are the reprobate, which the elect.
 This man 'had a call,' he said—impudent mockery! 60
 What call had he to my linen and crockery?

I'm now, and have been for this week past, in chase
 Of some godly young couple this pair to replace.
 The inclos'd two announcements have just met my eyes,
 In that venerable Monthly where Saints advertise
 For such temporal comforts as this world supplies;¹
 And the fruits of the Spirit are properly made
 An essential in every craft, calling, and trade.
 Where the' attorney requires for his 'prentice some youth
 Who has 'learn'd to fear God, and to walk in the truth;' 70
 Where the sempstress, in search of employment, declares,
 That pay is no object, so she can have prayers;
 And the 'Establish'd Wine Company proudly gives out,
 That the whole of the firm, Co. and all, are devout.

Happy London, one feels, as one reads o'er the pages,
 Where Saints are so much more abundant than sages;
 Where Parsons may soon be all laid on the shelf,
 As each Cit can cite chapter and verse for himself,
 And the serious frequenters of market and dook 80
 All lay in religion as part of their stock.²
 Who can tell to what lengths we may go on improving,
 When thus through all London the Spirit keeps moving,
 And heaven's so in vogue, that each shop advertisement
 Is now not so much for the earth as the skies meant?

P. S.

Have mislaid the two paragraphs—can't stop to look,
 But both describe charming—both Footman and Cook,
 She, 'decidedly pious'—with pathos deplores
 The' increase of French cookery and sin on our shores;
 And adds—(while for further accounts she refers To a great Gospel preacher, a cousin of hers,) 90

¹ The Evangelical Magazine.—A few specimens taken at random from the wrapper of this highly esteemed periodical will fully justify the character which Miss Fudge has here given of it. 'Wanted, in a pious pawnbroker's family, an active lad as an apprentice.' 'Wanted, as housemaid, a young female who has been brought to a saving knowledge of the truth.' 'Wanted immediately, a man of decided piety, to assist in the baking business.' 'A gentleman who understands the Wine Trade is desirous of entering into partnership, &c. &c. He is not desirous of being connected with any one whose system of business is not of the strictest integrity as in the sight of God, and seeks connection only with a truly pious man, either Churchman or Dissenter.'

² According to the late Mr. Irving, there is even a peculiar form of theology got up expressly for the money-market. 'I know how far wide,' he says, 'of the mark my views of Christ's work in the flesh will be viewed by those who are working with the stock-jobbing theology of the religious world.' 'Let these preachers,' he adds, '(for I will not call them theologians), cry up, broker-like, their article.' Morning Watch.—No. iii. 442, 443.

From the statement of another writer, in the same publication, it would appear that the stock-brokers have even set up a new Divinity of their own. 'This shows,' says the writer in question, 'that the doctrine of the union between Christ and his members is quite as essential as that of substitution, by taking which latter alone the Stock-Exchange Divinity has been produced.'—No. x. p. 375.

Among the ancients, we know the money-market was provided with more than one presiding Deity.—'Deae Pecuniae' (says an ancient author) 'commendabantur ut pecuniosi essent.'

That 'though some make their Sabbaths mere matter-of-fun days,
 She asks but for tea and the Gospel, on Sundays,
 The footman, too, full of the true saving knowledge;—
 Has late been to Cambridge—to Trinity College;
 Serv'd last a young gentleman, studying divinity,
 But left—not approving the morals of Trinity.

P. S.

I enclose, too, according to promise, some scraps
 Of my Journal—that Day-book I keep of my heart;
 Where, at some little items, (partaking, perhaps,
 More of earth than of heaven,) thy prudery may start,
 And suspect something tender, sly girl as thou art. 100
 For the present, I'm mute—but, whate'er may befall, Recollect, dear, (in Hebrews, xiii. 4.) St. Paul Hath himself declar'd, 'Marriage is honourable in all.'

EXTRACTS FROM MY DIARY

Monday.

TRIED a new châlé gown on—pretty.
 No one to see me in it—pity!
 Flew in a passion with Friz, my maid;—
 The Lord forgive me!—she look'd dismay'd;
 But got her to sing the rooth Psalm,
 While she curl'd my hair, which made me calm. 110
 Nothing so soothes a Christian heart
 As sacred music—heavenly art!

Tuesday.

At two, a visit from Mr. Magan—
 A remarkably handsome, nice young man;
 And, all Hibernian though he be,
 As civilis'd, strange to say, as we!
 I own this young man's spiritual state
 Hath much engross'd my thoughts of late;
 And I mean, as soon as my niece is gone,
 To have some talk with him thereupon. 120
 At present, I nought can do or say,
 But that troublesome child is in the way:
 Nor is there, I think, a doubt that he
 Would also her absence much prefer,
 As oft, while list'ning intent to me,
 He's forc'd, from politeness, to look at her.

Heigho!—what a blessing should Mr. Magan
 Turn out, after all, a 'renewed' young man;
 And to me should fall the task, on earth,
 To assist at the dear youth's second birth. 130
 Blest thought! and, ah, more blest the tie,
 Were it heaven's high will, that he and I—
 But I blush to write the nuptial word—
 Should wed, as St. Paul says, 'in the Lord';
 Not this world's wedlock—gross, gallant,
 But pure—as when Amram married his aunt.

Our ages differ—but who would count
 One's natural sinful life's amount,
 Or look in the Register's vulgar page
 For a regular twice-born Christian's age, 140
 Who, blessed privilege! only then
 Begins to live when he's born again.
 And, counting in this way—let me see—
 I myself but five years old shall be,
 And dear Magan, when the' event takes place,
 An actual new-born child of grace—
 Should Heaven in mercy so dispose—
 A six-foot baby, in swaddling clothes.

Wednesday.

Finding myself, by some good fate,
 With Mr. Magan left tête-à-tête, 150
 Had just begun—having stirr'd the fire,
 And drawn my chair near his—to inquire
 What his notions were of Original Sin,
 When that naughty Fanny again bounc'd in;
 And all the sweet things I had got to say
 Of the Flesh and the Devil were whisk'd away!

Much griev'd to observe that Mr. Magan
 Is actually pleas'd and amus'd with Fan!
 What charms any sensible man can see 160
 In a child so foolishly young as she—
 But just eighteen, come next May-day,
 With eyes, like herself, full of nought but play—
 Is, I own, an exceeding puzzle to me.

LETTER III

FROM MISS FANNY FUDGE, TO HER COUSIN, MISS KITTY ———

STANZAS (INCLOSED)

TO MY SHADOW; OR, WHY?—WHAT?—HOW?

DARK comrade of my path! while earth and sky
 Thus wed their charms, in bridal light array'd,
 Why in this bright hour, walk'st thou ever nigh,
 Black'ning my footsteps with thy length of shade—
 Dark comrade, WHY?

Thou mimic Shape that, 'mid these flowery scenes,
 Glidest beside me o'er each sunny spot,
 Sadd'ning them as thou goest—say, what means
 So dark an adjunct to so bright a lot—
 Grim goblin, WHAT?

10

Still, as to pluck sweet flowers I bend my brow,
 Thou bendest, too—then risest when I rise;—
 Say, mute mysterious Thing! how is't that thou
 Thus comest between me and those blessed skies—
 Dim shadow, How?

(ADDITIONAL STANZA, BY ANOTHER HAND)

Thus said I to that Shape, far less in grudge
 Than gloom of soul; while, as I eager cried,
 Oh, Why? What? How?—a Voice, that one might judge
 To be some Irish echo's, faint replied,
 Oh fudge, fudge, fudge!

20

You have here, dearest Coz, my last lyric effusion;
 And, with it, that odious 'additional stanza,'
 Which Aunt will insist I must keep, as conclusion,
 And which, you'll at once see, is Mr. Magan's;—a
 Most cruel and dark-design'd extravaganza,
 And part of that plot in which he and my Aunt are
 To stifle the flights of my genius by banter.

Just so 'twas with Byron's young eagle-eyed strain,
 Just so did they taunt him;—but vain, critics, vain,
 All your efforts to saddle Wit's fire with a chain!
 To blot out the splendour of Fancy's young stream,
 Or crop, in its cradle, her newly-fledg'd beam!!!
 Thou perceiv'st, dear, that, even while these lines I indite,
 Thoughts burn, brilliant fancies break out, wrong or right,
 And I'm all over poet, in Criticism's spite!

30

That my Aunt, who deals only in Psalms, and regards
 Messrs. Sternhold and Co. as the first of all bards—
 That she should make light of my works I can't blame;
 But that nice, handsome, odious Magan—what a shame!
 Do you know, dear, that, high as on most points I rate him,
 I'm really afraid—after all, I—must hate him.
 He is so provoking—nought's safe from his tongue;
 He spares no one authoress, ancient or young.
 Were you Sappho herself, and in Keepsake or Bijou
 Once shone as contributor, Lord how he'd quiz you!
 He laughs at all Monthlies—I've actually seen
 A sneer on his brow at the Court Magazine!—
 While of Weeklies, poor things, there's but one he peruses,
 And buys every book which that Weekly abuses.
 But I care not how others such sarcasm may fear,
 One spirit, at least, will not bend to his sneer;
 And though tried by the fire, my young genius shall burn as Uninjur'd as crucified gold in the furnace!
 (I suspect the word 'crucified' must be made 'crucible,' Before this fine image of mine is producible.)

40

50

And now, dear—to tell you a secret which, pray
 Only trust to such friends as with safety you may—
 You know, and indeed the whole county suspects
 (Though the Editor often my best things rejects),
 That the verses signed so, ~~so~~, which you now and then see
 In our County Gazette (vide last) are by me.
 But 'tis dreadful to think what provoking mistakes
 The vile country Press in one's prosody makes.
 For you know, dear—I may, without vanity, hint—
 Though an angel should write, still 'tis devils must print;

60

And you can't think what havoc these demons sometimes
 Choose to make of one's sense, and what's worse, of one's rhymes.
 But a week or two since, in my Ode upon Spring,
 Which I meant to have made a most beautiful thing,
 Where I talk'd of the 'dewdrops from freshly-blown roses,' 70
 The nasty things made it 'from freshly-blown noses!'
 And once when, to please my cross Aunt, I had tried
 To commemorate some saint of her clique, who'd just died,
 Having said he 'had tak'n up in heav'n his position,'
 They made it, he'd 'taken up to heaven his physician!'

This is very disheartening;—but brighter days shine,
 I rejoice, love, to say, both for me and the Nine;
 For, what do you think?—so delightful! next year,

Oh, prepare, dearest girl, for the grand news prepare—
 I'm to write in the Keepsake—yes, Kitty, my dear, 80

To write in the Keepsake, as sure as you're there!!
 T'other night, at a Ball, 'twas my fortunate chance
 With a very nice elderly Dandy to dance,
 Who, 'twas plain, from some hints which I now and then caught,
 Was the author of something—one couldn't tell what;
 But his satisfied manner left no room to doubt
 It was something that Colburn had lately brought out.

We convers'd of belles-lettres through all the quadrille,—
 Of poetry, dancing, of prose, standing still;
 Talk'd of Intellect's march—whether right 'twas or wrong— 90
 And then settled the point in a bold en avant.
 In the course of this talk 'twas that, having just hinted
 That I too had Poems which—long'd to be printed,
 He protested, kind man! he had seen, at first sight,
 I was actually born in the Keepsake to write.
 'In the Annals of England let some,' he said, 'shine,
 But a place in her Annuals, Lady, be thine!
 Even now future Keepsakes seem brightly to rise,
 Through the vista of years, as I gaze on those eyes,—
 All letter'd and press'd, and of large-paper size! 100
 How unlike that Magan, who my genius would smother,
 And how we, true geniuses, find out each other!

This, and much more he said, with that fine frenzied glance
 One so rarely now sees, as we slid through the dance;—
 Till between us 'twas finally fix'd that, next year,

In this exquisite task I my pen should engage;
 And, at parting, he stoop'd down and lisp'd in my ear
 These mystical words, which I could but just hear,
 'Terms for rhyme—if it's prime—ten and sixpence per page.'
 Think, Kitty, my dear, if I heard his words right, 110

What a mint of half-guineas this small head contains;
 If for nothing to write is itself a delight,
 Ye Gods, what a bliss to be paid one's strains!

Having dropp'd the dear fellow a court'sy profound,
 Off, at once, to inquire all about him, I ran;
 And from what I could learn, do you know, dear, I've found
 That he's quite a new species of literary man;

One, whose task is—to what will not fashion accustom us ?
 To édite live authors, as if they were posthumous.
 For instance—the plan, to be sure, is the oddest !— 120
 If any young he or she author feels modest
 In venturing abroad, this kind gentleman-usher
 Lends promptly a hand to the interesting blusher ;
 Indites a smooth Preface, brings merit to light,
 Which else might, by accident, shrink out of sight,
 And, in short, renders readers and critics polite.
 My Aunt says—though scarce on such points one can credit her—
 He was Lady Jane Thingumbob's last novel's editor.
 'Tis certain the fashion's but newly invented ;
 And, quick as the change of all things and all names is, 130
 Who knows but, as authors, like girls, are presented,
 We, girls, may be edited soon at St. James's ?

I must now close my letter—there's Aunt, in full screech,
 Wants to take me to hear some great Irvingite preach.
 God forgive me, I'm not much inclin'd, I must say,
 To go and sit still to be preach'd at, to-day.
 And, besides—'twill be all against dancing, no doubt,
 Which my poor Aunt abhors, with such hatred devout,
 That, so far from presenting young nymphs with a head,
 For their skill in the dance, as of Herod is said, 140
 She'd wish their own heads in the platter, instead.
 There, again—coming, Ma'am !—I'll write more, if I can,
 Before the post goes,

Your affectionate Fan.

Four o'clock.

Such a sermon !—though not about dancing, my dear ;
 'Twas only on the' end of the world being near.
 Eighteen Hundred and Forty's the year that some state
 As the time for that accident—some Forty-Eight :¹
 And I own, of the two, I'd prefer much the latter,
 As then I shall be an old maid, and 'two'n't matter.
 Once more, love, good-bye—I've to make a new cap ; 150
 But am now so dead tir'd with this horrid mishap
 Of the end of the world, that I must take a nap.

LETTER IV

FROM PATRICK MAGAN, ESQ. TO THE REV. RICHARD ———

HE comes from Erin's speechful shore
 Like fervid kettle, bubbling o'er
 With hot effusions—hot and weak ;
 Sound, Humbug, all your hollowest
 drums,
 He comes, of Erin's martyrdoms
 To Britain's well-fed Church to speak.
 Puff him, ye Journals of the Lord,²

Twin prozers, Watchman and Record !
 Journals reserv'd for realms of bliss,
 Being much too good to sell in this. 10
 Prepare, ye wealthier Saints, your dinners, Ye Spinsters, spread your tea and crumpets ;
 And you, ye countless Tracts for Sinners,
 Blow all your little penny trumpets.

¹ With regard to the exact time of this event, there appears to be a difference only of about two or three years among the respective calculators. — M. Alphonse Nicole, Decteur en Droit, et Avocat, merely doubts whether it is to be in 1846 or 1847. 'A cette époque,' he says, 'les fideles peuvent espérer de voir s'effectuer la purification du Sanctuaire.'

² 'Our anxious desire is to be found on the side of the Lord.'—Record Newspaper.

He comes, the reverend man, to tell
To all who still the Church's part take,
Tales of parsonic woe, that well
Might make ev'n grim Dissenter's heart ache :—

Of ten whole Bishops snatch'd away
For ever from the light of day ; 20
(With God knows, too, how many more,
For whom that doom is yet in store)—
Of Rectors cruelly compell'd

From Bath and Cheltenham to haste
home,

Because the tithes, by Pat withheld,
Will not to Bath or Cheltenham come ;
Nor will the flocks consent to pay
Their parsons thus to stay away ;—
Though, with such parsons, one may
doubt

If 't isn't money well laid out ;— 30
Of all, in short, and each degree
Of that once happy Hierarchy,
Which us'd to roll in wealth so pfeas-
antly ;

But now, alas, is doom'd to see
Its surplus brought to nonplus presently !

Such are the themes this man of pathos,
Priest of prose and Lord of bathos,
Will preach and preach t'ye, till you're dull again ;

Then, hail him, Saints, with joint acclaim,

Shout to the stars his tuneful name, 40
Which Murtagh was, ere known to fame,
But now is Mortimer O'Mulligan !

All true, Dick, true as you're alive—
I've seen him, some hours since, arrive.
Murtagh is come, the great Itinerant—

And Tuesday, in the market-place,
Intends, to every saint and sinner in't,

To state what he calls Ireland's Case ;
Meaning thereby the case of his shop,—

Of curate, vicar, rector, bishop, 50
And all those other grades seraphic,

That make men's souls their special traffic,

Though caring not a pin which way
The' erratic souls go, so they pay.—

Just as some roguish country nurse,
Who takes a foundling babe to suckle,

First pops the payment in her purse,
Then leaves poor dear to—suck its knuckle :

Even so these reverend rigmaroles
Pocket the money—starve the souls. 60
Murtagh, however, in his glory,
Will tell, next week, a different story ;
Will make out all these men of barter,
As each a saint, a downright martyr,
Brought to the stake—i. e. a beef one,
Of all their martyrdoms the chief one ;
Though try them even at this, they'll bear it,

If tender and wash'd down with claret.

Meanwhile Miss Fudge, who loves all lions,

Yoursaintly, next to great and high'uns—
(A Viscount, be he what he may, 71

Would cut a Saint out, any day,)
Has just announc'd a godly rout,

Where Murtagh's to be first brought
out,

And shown in histame, week-day state :—
'Prayers, half-past seven, tea at eight.'

Even so the circular missive orders—
Pink cards, with cherubs round the borders.

Haste, Dick—you're lost, if you lose
time ;

Spinsters at forty-five grow giddy, 80
And Murtagh, with his tropes sublime,

Will surely carry off old Biddy,
Unless some spark at once propose,

And distance him by downright prose.
That sick, rich squire, whose wealth and
lands

All pass, they say, to Biddy's hands,
(The patron, Dick, of three fat rectories!)

Is dying of angina pectoris ;—
So that, unless you're stirring soon,

Murtagh, that priest of puff and pelf,
May come in for a honey-moon, 91

And be the man of it, himself !

As for me, Dick—'tis whim, 'tis folly,
But this young niece absorbs me wholly.

'Tis true, the girl's a vile verse-maker—
Would rhyme all nature, if you'd let
her ;—

But even her oddities, plague take her,
But make me love her all the better.

Too true it is, she's bitten sadly
With this new rage for rhyming badly,

Which late hath seiz'd all ranks and classes, 101

Down to that new Estate, 'the masses ;'

Till one pursuit all taste combines—
One common rail-road o'er Parnassus,
Where, sliding in those tuneful grooves,
Call'd couplets, all creation moves,

And the whole world runs mad in lines.
Add to all this—what's even still worse,
As rhyme itself, though still a curse,
Sounds better to a chinking purse— 110
Scarce sixpence hath my charmer got,
While I can muster just a groat ;

So that, computing self and Venus, Tenpence would clear the' amount between us.

However, things may yet prove better:—
Meantime, what awful length of letter !
And how, while heaping thus with gibes
The Pegasus of modern scribes,
My own small hobby of farrago 119
Hath beat the pace at which even they go!

LETTER V

FROM LARRY O'BREANIGAN, IN ENGLAND, TO HIS WIFE JUDY, AT MULLINAFAD

DEAR JUDY, I send you this bit of a letter,
By mail-coach conveyance—for want of a better—
To tell you what luck in this world I have had Since I left the sweet cabin, at Mullinafad.
Och, Judy, that night!—when the pig which we meant
To dry-nurse, in the parlour, to pay off the rent,
Julianna, the craythur—that name was the death of her!¹—
Gave us the shlip and we saw the last breath of her!
And there were the childher, six innocent sows,
For their nate little play-fellow tuning up howls; 10
While yourself, my dear Judy (though grievin's a folly),
Stud over Julianna's remains, melancholy—
Cryin', half for the craythur, and half for the money,
'Arrah, why did ye die till we'd sow'd you, my honey?'

But God's will be done!—and then, faith, sure enough,
As the pig was desaiiced, 'twas high time to be off.
So we gother'd up all the poor duds we could catch,
Lock'd the owld cabin-door, put the kay in the thatch,
Then tuk laave of each other's sweet lips in the dark,
And set off, like the Chrishtians turn'd out of the Ark; 20
The six childher with you, my dear Judy, ochone!
And poor I wid myself, left condolin' alone.

How I came to this England, o'er say and o'er lands,
And what cruel hard walkin' I've had on my hands,
Is, at this present writin', too tedious to speak,
So I'll mintion it all in a postscript, next week:—
Only starv'd I was, surely, as thin as a lath,
Till I came to an up-and-down place they call Bath,
Where, as luck was, I manag'd to make a meal's meat,
By dhraggin owld ladies all day through the street— 30
Which their docthors (who pocket, like fun, the pound starlins,)
Have brought into fashion to plase the owld darlins.
Div'l a boy in all Bath, though I say it, could carry
The grannies up hill half so handy as Larry;
And the higher they liv'd, like owld crows, in the air,
The more I was wanted to lug them up there.

¹ The Irish peasantry are very fond of giving fine names to their pigs. I have heard of one instance in which a couple of young pigs were named, at their birth, Abelard and Eloisa.

But luck has two handles, dear Judy, they say,
 And mine has both handles put on the wrong way.
 For, pondherin', one morn, on a drame I'd just had
 Of yourself and the babbies, at Mullinafad, 40
 Och, there came o'er my sinces so plasin' a flutther,
 That I spilt an owld Countess right clane in the gutther,
 Muff, feathers and all!—the descint was most awful,
 And—what was still worse, faith—I knew 'twas unlawful:
 For, though, with mere women, no very great evil,
 To' upset an owld Countess in Bath is the divil!
 So, liftin' the chair, with herself safe upon it,
 (For nothin' about her was kilt, but her bonnet,)
 Without even mentionin' 'By your lave, ma'am,'
 I tuk to my heels and—here, Judy, I am! 50

What's the name of this town I can't say very well,
 But your heart sure will jump when you hear what befell
 Your own beautiful Larry, the very first day,
 (And a Sunday it was, shinin' out mighty gay,)
 When his brogues to this city of luck found their way.
 Bein' hungry, God help me, and happenin' to stop,
 Just to dine on the shmell of a pasthry-cook's shop,
 I saw, in the window, a large printed paper,
 And read there a name, och! that made my heart caper—
 Though printed it was in some quare A B C, 60
 That might bother a schoolmather, let alone me.
 By gor, you'd have laugh'd, Judy, could you've but listen'd,
 As, doubtin', I cried, 'why it is l—no, it isn't!'
 But it was, after all—for, by spellin' quite slow,
 First I made out 'Rev. Mortimer'—then a great 'O';
 And, at last, by hard readin' and rackin' my skull again,
 Out it came, nate as imported, 'O'Mulligan!'

Up I jump'd, like a sky-lark, my jewel, at that name,—
 Div'l a doubt on my mind, but it must be the same.
 'Masther Murthagh, himself,' says I, 'all the world over! 70
 My own foster-brother—by jinks, I'm in clover.
 Though there, in the play-bill, he figures so grand,
 One wet-nurse it was brought us both up by hand,
 And he'll not let me shtarve in the inemy's land!'

Well, to make a long hishtory short, niver doubt
 But I manag'd, in no time, to find the lad out;
 And the joy of the meetin' bethuxt him and me,
 Such a pair of owld cumrogues—was charmin' to see.
 Nor is Murthagh less plas'd with the' evint than I am, 80
 As he just then was wanting a Valley-de-sham;
 And, for dressin' a gintleman, one way or t'other,
 Your nate Irish lad is beyant every other.

But now, Judy, comes the quare part of the case;
 And, in throth, it's the only drawback on my place,
 'Twas Murthagh's ill luck to be cross'd, as you know,
 With an awkward mishfortune some short time ago;
 That's to say, he turn'd Protestant—why, I can't larn;
 But, of coorse, he knew best, and it's not my consarn.

All I know is, we both were good Cath'lics, at nurse,
 And myself am so still—nayther better nor worse. 90
 Well, our bargain was all right and tight in a jiffey,
 And lads more contint never yet left the Liffey,
 When Murthagh—or Morthimer, as he's now chrishen'd,
 His name being convarted, at laist, if he isn't—
 Lookin' sly at me (faith, 'twas divartin' to see)
 'Of coorse, you're a Protestant, Larry,' says he.
 Upon which says myself, wid a wink just as shly,
 'Is't a Protestant?—oh yes, I am, sir,' says I;—
 And there the chat ended, and div'l a more word
 Controversial between us has since then occur'd. 100

What Murthagh could mane, and, in troth, Judy dear,
 What I myself meant, doesn't seem mighty clear;
 But the thruth is, though still for the Owld Light a stickler,
 I was just then too shtarv'd to be over partic'lar:—
 And, God knows, between us, a comic'ler pair
 Of twin Protestants couldn't be seen any where.

Next Tuesday (as towld in the play-bills I mintion'd, Address'd to the loyal and godly intintion'd,) 110
 His rivrence, my master, comes forward to preach,—
 Myself doesn't know whether sarmon or speech,
 But it's all one to him, he's a dead hand at each;
 Like us, Paddys, in gin'ral, whose skill in orations
 Quite bothers the blarney of all other nations.

But, whisht!—there's his Rivrence, shoutin' out 'Larry,'
 And sorra a word more will this shmall paper carry;
 So, here, Judy, ends my short bit of a letther,
 Which, faix, I'd have made a much bigger and better,
 But div'l a one Post-office hole in this town
 Fit to swallow a dacent siz'd billy-dux down. 120
 So good luck to the childer!—tell Molly, I love her;
 Kiss Oonagh's sweet mouth, and kiss Katty all over—
 Not forgettin' the mark of the red currant whiskey
 She got at the fair when yourself was so frisky.
 The heavens be your bed!—I will write, when I can again,
 Yours to the world's end,

LARRY O'BREANIGAN.

LETTER VI

FROM MISS BIDDY FUDGE, TO MRS. ELIZABETH ———

How I grieve you're not with us!—pray, come, if you can,
 Ere we're robb'd of this dear oratorical man,
 Who combines in himself all the multiple glory
 Of Orangeman, Saint, quondam Papist and Tory:— (Choice mixture! like that from which, duly confounded,
 The best sort of brass was, in old times, compounded)—
 The sly and the saintly, the worldly and godly,
 All fus'd down in brogue so deliciously oddly!

In short, he's a dear—and such audiences draws,
Such loud peals of laughter and shouts of applause, 10
As can't but do good to the Protestant cause.

Poor dear Irish Church!—he to-day sketch'd a view
Of her history and prospects, to me at least new,
And which (if it takes as it ought) must arouse
The whole Christian world her just rights to espouse.
As to reasoning—you know, dear, that's now of no use,
People still will their facts and dry figures produce,
As if saving the souls of a Protestant flock were
A thing to be manag'd 'according to Cocker!' 20
In vain do we say, (when rude radicals hector
At paying some thousands a year to a Rector,
In places where Protestants never yet were,)
'Who knows but young Protestants may be born there?'
And granting such accident, think, what a shame,
If they didn't find Rector and Clerk when they came!
It is clear that, without such a staff on full pay,
These little Church embryos must go astray;
And, while fools are computing what Parsons would cost,
Precious souls are meanwhile to the 'Establishment lost!

In vain do we put the case sensibly thus;— 30
They'll still with their figures and facts make a fuss,
And ask 'if, while all, choosing each his own road,
Journey on, as we can, towards the Heavenly Abode,
It is right that seven eighths of the travellers should pay
For one eighth that goes quite a different way?'—
Just as if, foolish people, this wasn't, in reality,
A proof of the Church's extreme liberality,
That, though hating Popery in other respects,
She to Catholic money in no way objects;
And so liberal her very best Saints, in this sense, 40
That they even go to heaven at the Catholic's expense.

But, though clear to our minds all these arguments be,
People cannot or will not their cogeny see;
And, I grieve to confess, did the poor Irish Church
Stand on reasoning alone, she'd be left in the lurch.
It was therefore, dear Lizzy, with joy most sincere,
That I heard this nice Reverend O' something we've here,
Produce, from the depths of his knowledge and reading,
A view of that marvellous Church, far exceeding,
In novelty, force, and profoundness of thought, 50
All that Irving himself, in his glory, e'er taught.

Looking through the whole history, present and past,
Of the Irish Low Church, from the first to the last;
Considering how strange its original birth—
Such a thing having never before been on earth—
How oppos'd to the instinct, the law, and the force
Of nature and reason has been its whole course;
Through centuries encount'ring repugnance, resistance,
Scorn, hate, execration—yet still in existence!

Considering all this, the conclusion he draws
Is that Nature exempts this one Church from her laws— 60
That Reason, dumb-founder'd, gives up the dispute,
And before the portentous anomaly stands mute ;—
That, in short, 'tis a Miracle !—and, once begun,
And transmitted through ages, from father to son,
For the honour of miracles, ought to go on.

Never yet was conclusion so cogent and sound,
Or so fitted the Church's weak foes to confound.
For, observe, the more low all her merits they place,
The more they make out the miraculous case, 70
And the more all good Christians must deem it profane
To disturb such a prodigy's marvellous reign.

As for scriptural proofs, he quite plac'd beyond doubt
That the whole in the Apocalypse may be found out,
As clear and well-prov'd, he would venture to swear,
As any thing else has been ever found there :—
While the mode in which, bless the dear fellow, he deals
With that whole lot of vials and trumpets and seals,
And the ease with which vial on vial he strings,
Shows him quite a first-rate at all these sort of things. 80

So much for theology :—as for the' affairs
Of this temporal world—the light, drawing-room cares
And gay toils of the toilet, which, God knows, I seek,
From no love of such things, but in humbleness meek,
And to be, as the' Apostle was, 'weak with the weak,'
Thou wilt find quite enough (till I'm somewhat less busy)
In the' extracts inclosed, my dear news-loving Lizzy.

EXTRACTS FROM MY DIARY

Last night, having nought more holy to do, Thursday.
Wrote a letter to dear Sir Andrew Agnew,
About the 'Do-nothing-on-Sunday-Club,' 90
Which we wish by some shorter name to dub :—
As the use of more vowels and consonants
Than a Christian, on Sunday, really wants,
Is a grievance that ought to be done away,
And the Alphabet left to rest, that day.

Sir Andrew's answer !—but, shocking to say,
Being franked unthinkingly yesterday,
To the horror of Agnews yet unborn,
It arriv'd on this blessed Sunday morn ! !—
How shocking !—the postman's self cried 'shame on't,' 100
Seeing the' immaculate Andrew's name on't ! !
What will the Club do ?—meet, no doubt.
'Tis a matter that touches the Class Devout,
And the friends of the Sabbath must speak out.

Saw to-day, at the raffle—and saw it with pain—
That those stylish Fitzwigrams begin to dress plain. Tuesday.

Even gay little Sophy smart trimmings renounces—
 She, who long has stood by me through all sorts of flounces,
 And showed, by upholding the toilet's sweet rites,
 That we, girls, may be Christians, without being frights. 110
 This, I own, much alarms me; for though one's religious,
 And strict and—all that, there's no need to be hideous;
 And why a nice bonnet should stand in the way
 Of one's going to heaven, 'tisn't easy to say.

Then, there's Gimp, the poor thing—if her custom we drop,
 Pray, what's to become of her soul and her shop?
 If by saints like ourselves no more orders are given,
 She'll lose all the interest she now takes in heaven;
 And this nice little 'fire-brand, pluck'd from the burning,'
 May fall in again at the very next turning. 120

Wednesday.

Mem.—To write to the India-Mission Society;
 And send £20—heavy tax upon piety!

Of all Indian luxuries we now-a-days boast,
 Making 'Company's Christians'¹ perhaps costs the most.
 And the worst of it is, that these converts full grown,
 Having liv'd in our faith, mostly die in their own,²
 Praying hard, at the last, to some god who, they say,
 When incarnate on earth, used to steal curds and whey.³
 Think, how horrid, my dear!—so that all's thrown away;
 And (what is still worse) for the rum and the rice 130
 They consum'd, while believers, we saints pay the price.

Still 'tis cheering to find that we do save a few—
 The Report gives six Christians for Cunnangcadoo;
 Doorkotchum reckons seven, and four Trevandrum,
 While but one and a half's left at Coorooapadum.
 In this last-mention'd place 'tis the barbers enslave 'em,
 For, once they turn Christians, no barber will shave 'em.⁴

To atone for this rather small Heathen amount,
 Some Papists, turn'd Christians,⁵ are tack'd to the' account.
 And though, to catch Papists, one needn't go so far, 140
 Such fish are worth hooking, wherever they are;
 And now, when so great of such converts the lack is,
 One Papist well caught is worth millions of Blackies.

Friday.

Last night had a dream so odd and funny,
 I cannot resist recording it here.—
 Methought that the Genius of Matrimony
 Before me stood, with a joyous leer,

¹ The title given by the natives to such of their countrymen as become converts.

² Of such relapses we find innumerable instances in the accounts of the Missionaries.

³ The god Krishna, one of the incarnations of the god Vishnu. 'One day' (says he Bhagavata) 'Krishna's playfellows complained to Tasada that he had pilfered and ate their curds.'

⁴ 'Roteen wants shaving; but the barber here will not do it. He is run away lest he should be compelled. He says he will not shave Yesoo Kreest's people.'—Bapt. Mission Society, vol. ii, p. 493.

⁵ In the Reports of the Missionaries, the Roman Catholics are almost always classed along with the Heathen. 'I have extended my labours,' (says James Venning, in a Report for 1831,) 'to the Heathen, Mahomedans, and Roman Catholics.' 'The Heathen and Roman Catholics in this neighbourhood' (says another missionary for the year 1832) 'are not indifferent, but withstand, rather than yield to, the force of truth.'

Leading a husband in each hand,
 And both for me, which look'd rather queer ;—
 One I could perfectly understand,
 But why there were two wasn't quite so clear. 150
 'Twas meant, however, I soon could see,
 To afford me a choice—a most excellent plan ;
 And—who should this brace of candidates be,
 But Messrs. O'Mulligan and Magan :—
 A thing, I suppose, unheard of till then,
 To dream, at once, of two Irishmen !—
 That handsome Magan, too, with wings on his shoulders
 (For all this pass'd in the realms of the Blest),
 And quite a creature to dazzle beholders ; 160
 While even O'Mulligan, feather'd and drest
 As an elderly cherub, was looking his best.
 Ah Liz, you, who know me, scarce can doubt
 As to which of the two I singled out.
 But—awful to tell—when, all in dread
 Of losing so bright a vision's charms,
 I grasp'd at Magan, his image fled,
 Like a mist, away, and I found but the head
 Of O'Mulligan, wings and all, in my arms !
 The Angel had flown to some nest divine,
 And the elderly Cherub alone was mine ! 170
 Heigho !—it is certain that foolish Magan
 Either can't or won't see that he might be the man ;
 And, perhaps, dear—who knows ?—if nought better befall
 But—O'Mulligan may be the man, after all.

N.B.

Next week mean to have my first scriptural rout,
 For the special discussion of matters devout ;—
 Like those soirées, at Powerscourt,¹ so justly renown'd,
 For the zeal with which doctrine and negus went round ;
 Those theology routs which the pious Lord R—d—n, 180
 That pink of Christianity, first set the mode in ;
 Where, blessed down-pouring !² from tea until nine,
 The subjects lay all in the Prophecy line ;—

¹ An account of these Powerscourt Conversations (under the direct presidency of Lord Roden), as well as a list of the subjects discussed at the different meetings, may be found in the Christian Herald for the month of December, 1832. The following is a specimen of the nature of the question submitted to the company :—
 'Monday Evening, Six o'clock, September 24, 1832.
 —"An examination into the quotations given in the New Testament from the Old, with their connection and explanation, viz. &c. &c."—
 Wednesday. —"Should we expect a personal Antichrist? and to whom will he be revealed?" &c. &c.—Friday. —"What light does Scripture throw on present events, and their moral character? What is next to be looked for or expected?" &c.

The rapid progress made at these tea parties in settling points of Scripture, may be judged from a paragraph in the account given of one of their evenings, by the Christian Herald :—

'On Daniel a good deal of light was thrown, and there was some, I think not so much, perhaps, upon the Revelations ; though particular parts of it were discussed with considerable accession of knowledge. There was some very interesting inquiry as to the quotation of the Old Testament in the New ; particularly on the point, whether there was any "accommodation," or whether they were quoted according to the mind of the Spirit in the Old : this gave occasion to some very interesting development of Scripture. The progress of the Antichristian powers was very fully discussed.'

² 'About eight o'clock the Lord began to pour down his spirit copiously upon us—for they had all by this time assembled in my room for the purpose of prayer. This downpouring continued till about ten o'clock.'—Letter from Mary Campbell to the Rev. John Campbell, of Row, (dated Fernicary, April 4, 1830), giving an account of her 'miraculous cure.'

Then, supper—and then, if for topics hard driven,
 From thence until bed-time to Satan was given;
 While R—d—n, deep read in each topic and tome,
 On all subjects (especially the last) was at home.

LETTER VII

FROM MISS FANNY FUDGE TO HER COUSIN, MISS KITTY ———

IRREGULAR ODE

BRING me the slumbering souls of flowers,
 While yet, beneath some northern sky,
 Ungilt by beams, ungemm'd by showers,
 They wait the breath of summer hours,
 To wake to light each diamond eye,
 And let loose every florid sigh!

Bring me the first-born ocean waves,
 From out those deep primeval caves,
 Where from the dawn of Time they've lain—
 THE EMBRYOS OF A FUTURE MAIN!—
 Untaught as yet, young things, to speak
 The language of their PARENT SEA
 (Polyphylsbaean¹ nam'd in Greek),
 Though soon, too soon, in bay and creek,
 Round startled isle and wondering peak,
 They'll thunder loud and long as HE!

10

Bring me, from Hecla's iced abode,
 Young fires——

I had got, dear, thus far in my ODE,
 Intending to fill the whole page to the bottom,
 But, having invok'd such a lot of fine things,
 Flowers, billows and thunderbolts, rainbows and wings,
 Didn't know what to do with 'em, when I had got 'em.
 The truth is, my thoughts are too full, at this minute,
 Of past MSS. any new ones to try.
 This very night's coach brings my destiny in it—
 Decides the great question, to live or to die!
 And, whether I'm henceforth immortal or no,
 All depends on the answer of Simpkins and Co.!

20

You'll think, love, I rave, so 'tis best to let out
 The whole secret, at once—I have publish'd a Book!!!
 Yes, an actual Book:—if the marvel you doubt,
 You have only in last Monday's Courier to look,
 And you'll find 'This day publish'd by Simpkins and Co.
 A Romaunt, in twelve Cantos, entitled "Woe Woe!"
 By Miss Fanny F——, known more commonly so .
 This I put that my friends mayn't be left in the dark,
 But may guess at my writing by knowing my mark.

30

¹ If you guess what this word means, 'tis more than I can:—
 I but give't as I got it from Mr. Magan. F. F.

How I manag'd, at last, this great deed to achieve,
 Is itself a 'Romaunt' which you'd scarce, dear, believe;
 Nor can I just now, being all in a whirl,
 Looking out for the Magnet,¹ explain it, dear girl. 40
 Suffice it to say, that one half the expense
 Of this leasehold of fame for long centuries hence—(Though 'God knows,' as aunt says, my humble ambition Aspires not beyond a small Second Edition.)—
 One half the whole cost of the paper and printing,
 I've manag'd to scrape up, this year past, by stinting
 My own little wants in gloves, ribands, and shoes,
 Thus defrauding the toilet to fit out the Muse!

And who, my dear Kitty, would not do the same?
 What's eau de Cologne to the sweet breath of fame? 50
 Yards of riband soon end—but the measures of rhyme,
 Dipp'd in hues of the rainbow, stretch out through all time.
 Gloves languish and fade away, pair after pair,
 While couplets shine out, but the brighter for wear,
 And the dancing-shoe's gloss in an evening is gone,
 While light-footed lyrics through ages trip on.

The remaining expense, trouble, risk—and, alas!
 My poor copyright too—into other hands pass;
 And my friend, the Head Dev'l of the 'County Gazette' 60
 (The only Mecaenas I've ever had yet),
 He who set up in type my first juvenile lays,
 Is now set up by them for the rest of his days;
 And while Gods (as my 'Heathen Mythology' says)
 Live on nought but ambrosia, his lot how much sweeter
 To live, lucky dev'l, on a young lady's metre!

As for puffing—that first of all lit'rary boons,
 And essential alike both to bards and balloons—
 As, unless well supplied with inflation, 'tis found
 Neither bards nor balloons budge an inch from the ground;— 70
 In this respect, nought could more prosp'rous befall;
 As my friend (for no less this kind imp can I call)
 Knows the whole world of critics—the hypers and all.
 I suspect he himself, indeed, dabbles in rhyme,
 Which, for imps diabolic, is not the first time;
 As I've heard uncle Bob say, 'twas known among Gnostics,
 That the Dev'l on Two Sticks was a dev'l at Acrostics.

But hark! there's the Magnet just dash'd in from Town—
 How my heart, Kitty, beats! I shall surely drop down.
 That awful Court Journal, Gazette, Athenaeum, 80
 All full of my book—I shall sink when I see 'em.
 And then the great point—whether Simpkins and Co.
 Are actually pleas'd with their bargain or no!—

Five o'clock.

All's delightful—such praises!—I really fear
 That this poor little head will turn giddy, my dear;
 I've but time now to send you two exquisite scraps—
 All the rest by the Magnet, on Monday, perhaps.

FROM THE 'MORNING POST'

'Tis known that a certain distinguish'd physician
 Prescribes, for dyspepsia, a course of light reading;
 And Rhymes by young Ladies, the first, fresh edition 90
 (Ere critics have injur'd their powers of nutrition),
 Are he thinks, for weak stomachs, the best sort of feeding.
 Satires irritate—love-songs are found calorific;
 But smooth, female sonnets he deems a specific,
 And, if taken at bed-time, a sure soporific.
 Among works of this kind, the most pleasing we know,
 Is a volume just publish'd by Simpkins and Co.,
 Where all such ingredients—the flowery, the sweet,
 And the gently narcotic—are mix'd per receipt,
 With a hand so judicious, we've no hesitation 100
 To say that—'bove all, for the young generation—
 'Tis an elegant, soothing, and safe preparation.

Nota bene—for readers, whose object's to sleep,
 And who read, in their nightcaps, the publishers keep
 Good fire-proof binding, which comes very cheap.

ANECDOTE—FROM THE 'COURT JOURNAL'

T'other night, at the Countess of —'s rout,
 An amusing event was much whisper'd about,
 It was said that Lord —, at the Council, that day,
 Had, more than once, jump'd from his seat, like a rocket,
 And flown to a corner, where—heedless, they say, 110
 How the country's resources were squander'd away—
 He kept reading some papers he'd brought in his pocket.
 Some thought them despatches from Spain or the Turk,
 Others swore they brought word we had lost the Mauritius;
 But it turn'd out 'twas only Miss Fudge's new work,
 Which his Lordship devour'd with such zeal expeditious—
 Messrs. Simpkins and Co., to avoid all delay,
 Having sent it in sheets, that his Lordship might say,
 He had distanc'd the whole reading world by a day!

LETTER VIII

FROM BOB FUDGE, ESQ., TO THE REV. MORTIMER O'MULLIGAN

Tuesday evening.

I MUCH regret, dear Reverend Sir,
 I could not come to — to meet you;
 But this curst gout wo'n't let me stir—
 Ev'n now I but by proxy greet you,
 As this vile scrawl, whate'er its sense is,
 Owes all to an amanuensis.
 Most other scourges of disease
 Reduce men to extremities—
 But gout wo'n't leave one even these.

From all my sister writes, I see 10
 That you and I will quite agree.
 I'm a plain man, who speak the truth,

And trust you'll think me not uncivil,
 When I declare that, from my youth,
 I've wish'd your country at the devil:
 Nor can I doubt, indeed, from all
 I've heard of your high patriot fame—
 From every word your lips let fall—
 That you most truly wish the same.
 It plagues one's life out—thirty years 20
 Have I had dinning in my ears,
 'Ireland wants this, and that, and t'other,'
 And, to this hour, one nothing hears
 But the same vile, eternal bother.

While, of those countless things she
wanted,
Thank God, but little has been granted,
And ev'n that little, if we're men
And Britons, we'll have back again !

I really think that Catholic question
Was what brought on my indigestion ; 30
And still each year, as Popery's curse
Has gather'd round us, I've got worse ;
Till ev'n my pint of port a day
Can't keep the Pope and bile away.
And whereas, till the Catholic bill,
I never wanted draught or pill,
The settling of that cursed question
Has quite unsettled my digestion.

Look what has happen'd since—the
Elect

Of all the bores of every sect, 40
The chosen triers of men's patience,
From all the Three Denominations,
Let loose upon us ;—even Quakers
Turn'd into speakers and law-makers,
Who'll move no question, stiff-rump'd
elves,

Till first the Spirit moves themselves ;
And whose shrill Yeas and Nays, in
chorus,

Conquering our Ays and Nos sonorous,
Will soon to death's own slumber
snore us.

Then, too, those Jews !—I really sicken
To think of such abomination ; 51
Fellows, who wo'n't eat ham with chicken,

To legislate for this great nation !—
Depend upon't, when once they've sway,
With rich old Goldsmid at the head o'
them,

The' Excise laws will be done away,
And Circumcise ones pass'd instead o'
them !

In short, dear sir, look where one will,
Things all go on so devilish ill,
That 'pon my soul, I rather fear 60
Our reverend Rector may be right,
Who tells me the Millennium's near ;
Nay, swears he knows the very year,
And regulates his leases by't ;—

¹ This appears to have been the opinion also of an eloquent writer in the Morning Watch. 'One great object of Christ's second Advent, as the Man and as the King of the Jews, is to

Meaning their terms should end, no
doubt,

Before the world's own lease is out.
He thinks, too, that the whole thing's ended

So much more soon than was intended,
Purely to scourge those men of sin
Who brought the 'accurst Reform Billin.'

However, let's not yet despair ; 71
Though Toryism's eclips'd, at present,
And—like myself, in this old chair—
Sits in a state by no means pleasant ;
Feet crippled—hands, in luckless hour,
Disabled of their grasping power ;
And all that rampant glee, which revell'd
In this world's sweets, be-dull'd, bedevil'd—

Yet, though condemn'd to frisk no more,
And both in Chair of Penance set, 80
There's something tells me, all's not o'er,
With Toryism or Bobby yet ;
That though, between us, I allow
We've not a leg to stand on now ;
Though curst Reform and colchicum
Have made us both look deuced glum,
Yet still, in spite of Grote and Gout,
Again we'll shine triumphant out !

Yes—back again shall come, egad,
Our turn for sport, my reverend lad. 90
And then, O'Mulligan—oh then,
When mounted on our nags again,
You, on your high-flown Rosinante,
Bedizen'd out, like Show-Gallantee
(Glitter great from substance scanty) ;—
While I, Bob Fudge, Esquire, shall ride
Your Faithful Sancho, by your side ;
Then—talk of tilts and tournaments
Dam'me, we'll—

'Squire Fudge's clerk presents
To Reverend Sir his compliments ;
Is griev'd to say an accident 101
Has just occur'd which will prevent
The Squire—though now a little better
From finishing this present letter.
Just when he'd got to 'Dam'me,
we'll—

His Honour, full of martial zeal, punish the Kings who do not acknowledge that their authority is derived from him, and who submit to receive it from that many-headed monster, the mob. No. x, p. 373.

Grasp'd at his crutch, but not being able
To keep his balance or his hold,
Tumbled, both self and crutch, and
roll'd

Like ball and bat, beneath the table. 110

All's safe—the table, chair, and crutch;—

Nothing, thank God, is broken much,
But the Squire's head, which, in the fall,
Got bump'd consid'rably—that's all.

At this no great alarm we feel,
As the Squire's head can bear a deal.

Wednesday morning.

Squire much the same—head rather
light—

Rav'd about 'Barbers' Wigs' all night.

Our housekeeper, old Mrs. Griggs,
Suspects that he meant 'barbarous
Whigs.' 120

LETTER IX

FROM LARRY O'BRANIGAN, TO HIS WIFE JUDY

As it was but last week that I sint you a letther,
You'll wondher, dear Judy, what this is about;
And, throth, it's a letther myself would like better,
Could I manage to lave the contints of it out;
For sure, if it makes even me onaisy,
Who takes things quiet, 'twill dhrive you crazy.

Oh, Judy, that riverind Murthagh, bad scran to him!
That e'er I should come to've been sarvant-man to him,
Or so far demane the O'Branigan blood,
And my Aunts, the Diluvians (whom not ev'n the Flood 10
Was able to wash away clane from the earth)¹
As to sarve one whose name, of mere yestherday's birth,
Can no more to a great O, before it, purtend,
Than mine can to wear a great Q at its end.

But that's now all over—last night I gev warnin',
And, masth'r as he is, will discharge him this mornin'.
The thief of the world!—but it's no use balraggin';²
All I know is, I'd fifty times rather be draggin'
Ould ladies up hill to the ind of my days,
Than with Murthagh to rowl in a chaise, at my aise, 20
And be forc'd to discind thro' the same dirty ways.
Arrah, sure, if I'd heerd where he last show'd his phiz,
I'd have known what a quare sort of monsther he is;
For, by gor, 'twas at Exether Change, sure enough,
That himself and his other wild Irish show'd off;
And it's pity, so 'tis, that they hadn't got no man
Who knew the wild craythurs to act as their show-man—
Sayin', 'Ladies and Gintlemen, plaze to take notice,
How shlim and how shleek this black animal's coat is;
All by raison, we're towld, that the nathur o' the baste 30
Is to change its coat once in its lifetime, at laste;
And such objiks, in our country, not bein' common ones,
Are bought up, as this was, by way of Fine Nomenons.

¹ 'I am of your Patriarchs, I, a branch of one of your antediluvian families—fellows that the Flood could not wash away.'—Congreve, Love for Love.

² To balrag is to abuse—Mr. Lover makes it ballyrag, and he is high authority: but if I remember rightly, Curran in his national stories used to employ the word as above.—See Lover's most amusing and genuinely Irish work, the Legends and Stories of Ireland.

In regard of its name—why, in throth, I'm consarn'd
To differ on this point so much with the Larn'd,
Who call it a "Morthimer," whereas the craythur
Is plainly a "Murthagh," by name and by nathur.'

This is how I'd have towld them the rights of it all,
Had I been their showman at Exether Hall—
Not forgettin' that other great wondher of Airin 40
(Of th' owld bitter breed which they call Prosbetairin),
The fam'd Daddy C—ke—who, by gor, I'd have shown 'em
As proof how such bastes may be tam'd, when you've thrown 'em
A good frindly sop of the rale Raigin Donem.¹

But, throth, I've no laisure just now, Judy dear,
For any thing, barrin' our own doings here,
And the cursin' and dammin' and thund'rin, like mad,
We Papists, God help us, from Murthagh have had.
He says we're all murtherers—div'l a bit less—
And that even our priests, when we go to confess, 50
Give us lessons in murth'ring and wish us success!

When ax'd how he daar'd, by tongue or by pen,
To belie, in this way, seven millions of men,
Faith, he said 'twas all towld him by Docthor Den!²
'And who the div'l's he?' was the question that flew
From Chrishtian to Chrishtian—but not a sowl knew.
While on went Murthagh, in iligant style,
Blasphaming us Cath'lics all the while,
As a pack of desaivers, parjurers, villians,
All the whole kit of th' aforesaid millions,—³ 60
Yourself, dear Judy, as well as the rest,
And the innocent craythur that's at your breast,
All rogues together, in word and deed,
Owld Den our insthuctor and Sin our creed!

When ax'd for his proofs again and again,
Div'l an answer he'd give but Docthor Den.
Couldn't he call into coort some livin' men?
'No, thank you'—he'd stick to Docthor Den—
An ould gentleman dead a century or two,
Who all about us, live Cath'lics, knew; 70
And of coorse was more handy, to call in a hurry,
Than Docthor Mac Hale or Docthor Murray!

But, throth, it's no case to be jokin' upon,
Though myself, from bad habits, is makin' it one.
Even you, had you witness'd his grand climacterics,
Which actially threw one owld maid in hysterics—
Or, och! had you heerd such a purty remark as his,
That Papists are only 'Humanity's carcasses,

¹ Larry evidently means the Regium Donum:—a sum contributed by the government annually to the support of the Presbyterian churches in Ireland.

² Correctly, Dens—Larry not being very particular in his nomenclature.

³ 'The deeds of darkness which are reduced to horrid practice over the drunken debauch of the midnight assassin are debated, in principle, in the sober morning religious conference of the priests.'—Speech of the Rev. Mr. M'Ghee.—

'The character of the Irish people generally is, that they are given to lying and to acts of theft.'—Speech of the Rev. Robert Daly.

'Ris'n'—but, by dad, I'm afeard I can't give it ye—
 'Ris'n from the sepulchre of—inactivity ; 80
 And, like owld corpses, dug up from antikity,
 Wandrin' about in all sorts of inikity !'¹
 Even you, Judy, true as you are to the Owld Light,
 Would have laugh'd, out and out, at this iligant flight
 Of that figure of speech call'd the Blatherumskite.
 As for me, though a funny thought now and then came to me,
 Rage got the betther at last—and small blame to me !
 So, slapping my thigh, 'by the Powers of Delf,'
 Says I bowldly, 'I'll make a noration myself'
 And with that up I jumps—but, my darlint, the minit 90
 I cock'd up my head, div'l a sinse remain'd in it.
 Though, saited, I could have got beautiful on,
 When I tuk to my legs, faith, the gab was all gone :—
 Which was odd, for us, Pats, who, whate'er we've a hand in,
 At laste in our legs show a sthrong understandin'.
 Howsumdover, detarmin'd the chaps should pursaive
 What I thought of their doin's, before I tuk lave,
 'In regard of all that,' says I—there I stopp'd short—
 Not a word more would come, though I sthruugled hard for't.
 So, shnapping my fingers at what's call'd the Chair, 100
 And the owld Lord (or Lady, I b'lieve) that sat there—
 'In regard of all that,' says I bowldly again—
 'To owld Nick I pitch Mortimer—and Dochter Den ;'
 Upon which the whole company cried out 'Amen ;'
 And myself was in hopes 'twas to what I had said,
 But, by gor, no such thing—they were not so well bred :
 For, 'twas all to a pray'r Murthagh just had read out,
 By way of fit finish to job so devout ;
 That is—afther well damning one half the community,
 To pray God to keep all in peace an' in unity ! 110
 This is all I can shtuff in this letther, though plinty
 Of news, faith, I've got to fill more—if 'twas twinty.
 But I'll add, on the outside, a line, should I need it,
 (Writin' 'Private' upon it, that no one may read it,)
 To tell you how Mortimer (as the Saints chrishen him)
 Bears the big shame of his sarvant's dismissin' him.

(Private outside.)

Just come from his riv'rence—the job is all done—
 By the powers, I've discharg'd him as sure as a gun !
 And now, Judy dear, what on earth I'm to do
 With myself and my appetite—both good as new— 120
 Without ev'n a single traneeen in my pocket,
 Let alone a good, dacent pound-starlin', to stock it—
 Is a mysht'ry I lave to the One that's above,
 Who takes care of us, dissolute sowls, when hard dhrove !

¹ 'But she (Popery) is no longer the tenant of the sepulchre of inactivity. She has come from the burial-place, walking forth a monster, as if the spirit of evil had corrupted the carcass of her departed humanity ; noxious and noisome, an object of abhorrence and dismay to all who are not leagued with her in iniquity.'—Report of the Rev. Gentleman's Speech, June 20, in the Record Newspaper.

We may well ask, after reading this and other such reverend ravings, 'Quis dubitat quin omne sit hoc rationis egestas ?'

LETTER X

FROM THE REV. MORTIMER O'MULLIGAN, TO THE REV. —

THESE few brieflines, my reverend friend,
By a safe, private hand I send,
(Fearing lest some low Catholic wag
Should pry into the Letter-bag,)
To tell you, far as pen can dare,
How we, poor errant martyrs, fare ;—
Martyrs, not quite to fire and rack,
As Saints were, some few ages back,
But—scarce less trying in its way—
To laughter, wheresoe'er we stray ; 10
To jokes, which Providence mysterious
Permits on men and things so serious,
Lowering the Church still more each
minute,

And—injuring our preferment in it.
Just think, how worrying 'tis, my friend,
To find, where'er our footsteps bend,
Small jokes, like squibs, around us
whizzing ;

And bear the eternal torturing play
Of that great engine of our day,
Unknown to the' Inquisition—
quizzing ! 20

Your men of thumb-screws and of racks
Aim'd at the body their attacks ;
But modern torturers, more refin'd,
Work their machinery on the mind.
Had St. Sebastian had the luck

With me to be a godly rover,
Instead of arrows, he'd be stuck

With stings of ridicule all over ;
And poor St. Lawrence, who was kill'd
By being on a gridir'n grill'd, 30
Had he but shar'd my errant lot,
Instead of grill on gridir'n hot,
A moral roasting would have got.
Nor should I (trying as all this is)

Much heed the suffering or the shame—
As, like an actor, used to hisses,

I long have known no other fame,
But that (as I may own to you,
Though to the world it would not do,)
No hope appears of fortune's beams 40
Shining on any of my schemes ;
No chance of something more per ann.
As supplement to K—llym—n ;

No prospect that, by fierce abuse
Of Ireland, I shall e'er induce
The rulers of this thinking nation
To rid us of Emancipation ;
To forge anew the sever'd chain,
And bring back Penal Laws again.

Ah, happy time! when wolves and priests

Alike were hunted, as wild beasts ; 51
And five pounds was the price, per head,
For bagging either, live or dead ;—¹
Though oft, we're told, one outlaw'd
brother

Sav'd cost, by eating up the other.

Finding thus all those schemes and hopes
I built upon my flowers and tropes
All scatter'd, one by one, away,
As flashy and unsound as they, 59
The question comes—what's to be done?
And there's but one course left me—
one.

Heroes, when tired of war's alarms,
Seek sweet repose in beauty's arms.
The weary Day-God's last retreat is
The breast of silv'ry-footed Thetis ;
And mine, as mighty Love's my judge,
Shall be the arms of rich Miss Fudge !

Start not, my friend,—the tender scheme

Wild and romantic though it seem,
Beyond a parson's fondest dream, 70
Yet shines, too, with those golden dyes
So pleasing to a parson's eyes—
That only gilding which the muse
Cannot around her sons diffuse ;—
Which, whencesoever flows its bliss,
From wealthy Miss or benefice,
To Mortimer indifferent is,
So he can make it only his.
There is but one slight damp I see
Upon this scheme's felicity, 80
And that is, the fair heroine's claim
That I shall take her family name.
To this (though it may look henpeck'd),
I can't quite decently object,

¹ ' Among other amiable enactments against the Catholics at this period (1849), the price of five pounds was set on the head of a Romish priest—being exactly the same sum offered by the same legislators for the head of a wolf.—Memoirs of Captain Rock, book i chap. 10.

Having myself long chos'n to shine
 Conspicuous in the *alias*¹ line;
 So that henceforth, by wife's decree,
 (For Biddy from this point wo'nt budge
 Your old friend's new address must be
 The Rev. Mortimer O'Fudge— 90
 The 'O' being kept, that all may see
 We're both of ancient family.

Such, friend, nor need the fact amaze you,
 My public life's calm Euthanasia.
 Thus bid I long farewell to all
 The freaks of Exeter's old Hall—
 Freaks, in grimace, its apes exceeding,
 And rivalling its bears in breeding.
 Farewell, the platform fill'd with preachers—
 The pray'r giv'n out, as grace,² by speakers 100
 Ere they cut up their fellow creatures:—

Farewell to dead old Dens's volumes,
 And, scarce less dead, old Standard's columns:—

From each and all I now retire,
 My task, henceforth, as spouse and sire,
 To bring up little filial Fudges,
 To be M.P.s, and Peers, and Judges—
 Parsons I'd add too, if, alas!

There yet were hope the Church could pass
 The gulf now op'd for hers and her, 110
 Or long survive what Exeter—
 Both Hall and Bishop, of that name—
 Have done to sink her reverend fame.
 Adieu, dear friend—you'll oft hear from
 me,

Now I'm no more a travelling drudge;
 Meanwhile I sign (that you may judge
 How well the surname will become me)

Yours truly,

MORTIMER O'FUDGE.

LETTER XI

FROM PATRICK MAGAN, ESQ., TO THE REV. RICHARD ———, Ireland.

DEAR DICK—just arriv'd at my own humble gite,
 I inclose you, post-haste, the account, all complete,
 Just arriv'd, per express, of our late noble feat.

[Extract from the 'County Gazette.']

This place is getting gay and full again.

Last week was married, 'in the Lord,'
 The Reverend Mortimer O'Mulligan,
 Preacher, in Irish, of the Word,
 (He, who the Lord's force lately led on—Exeter Hall his Armagh-geddon,)²
 To Miss B. Fudge of Pigsaw Place, 10
 One of the chos'n, as 'heir of grace,'
 And likewise heiress of Phil. Fudge,
 Esquire, defunct, of Orange Lodge.

Same evening, Miss F. Fudge, 'tis hinted—
 Niece of the above, (whose 'Sylvan Lyre,'
 In our Gazette, last week, we printed,) Elop'd with Pat. Magan, Esquire.

¹ In the first edition of his Dictionary, Dr. Johnson very significantly exemplified the meaning of the word 'alias' by the instance of Mallet, the poet, who had exchanged for this more refined name his original Scotch patronymic, Malloch. 'What other proofs he gave' (says Johnson) 'of disrespect to his native country, I know not, but it was remarked of him that he was the only Scot whom Scotchmen did not commend.'—Life of Mallet.

² 'I think I am acting in unison with the feelings of a Meeting assembled for this solemn object, when I call on the Rev. Doctor Holloway to open it by prayer.'—Speech of Lord Kenyon.

³ The Rectory which the Rev. gentleman holds is situated in the county of Armagh!—a most remarkable coincidence—and well worthy of the attention of certain expounders of the Apocalypse.

The fugitives were track'd, some time,
 After they'd left the Aunt's abode,
 By scraps of paper, scrawl'd with rhyme, 20
 Found strew'd along the Western road;—
 Some of them, ci-devant curl-papers,
 Others, half burnt in lighting tapers.
 This clue, however, to their flight,
 After some miles was seen no more;
 And, from inquiries made last night,
 We find they've reach'd the Irish shore.

Every word of it true, Dick—th' escape from Aunt's thrall—
 Western road—lyric fragments—curl-papers and all.
 My sole stipulation, ere link'd at the shrine 30
 (As some balance between Fanny's numbers and mine),
 Was that, when we were one, she must give up the Nine;
 Nay, devote to the Gods her whole stock of MS.
 With a vow never more against prose to transgress.
 This she did, like a heroine;—smack went to bits
 The whole produce sublime of her dear little wits—
 Sonnets, elegies, epigrams, odes, canzonets—
 Some twisted up neatly, to form allumettes,
 Some turn'd into papillotes, worthy to rise
 And enwreathe Berenice's bright locks in the skies! 40
 While the rest, honest Larry (who's now in my pay),
 Begg'd, as 'lover of po'thry, to read on the way.

Having thus of life's poetry dar'd to dispose,
 How we now, Dick, shall manage to get through its prose,
 With such slender materials for style, Heaven knows!
 But—I'm call'd off abruptly—another Express!
 What the deuce can it mean?—I'm alarm'd, I confess.

P.S.

Hurrah, Dick, hurrah, Dick, ten thousand hurrahs!
 I'm a happy, rich dog to the end of my days.
 There—read the good news—and while glad, for my sake, 50
 That Wealth should thus follow in Love's shining wake,
 Admire also the moral—that he, the sly elf,
 Who has fudg'd all the world, should be now fudg'd himself!

EXTRACT FROM LETTER INCLOSED

With pain the mournful news I write,
 Miss Fudge's uncle died last night;
 And much to mine and friends' surprise,
 By will doth all his wealth devise—
 Lands, dwellings—rectories likewise—
 To his 'belov'd grand-niece,' Miss Fanny,
 Leaving Miss Fudge herself, who many 60
 Long years hath waited—not a penny!
 Have notified the same to latter,
 And wait instructions in the matter.
 For self and partners, &c. &c.

SONGS FROM M.P.; OR, THE BLUE-STOCKING

SUSAN

YOUNG Love liv'd once in an humble
shed,

Where roses breathing,
And woodbines wreathing
Around the lattice their tendrils spread,
As wild and sweet as the life he led.

His garden flourish'd,
For young Hope nourish'd
The infant buds with beams and
showers ;
But lips, though blooming, must still be fed,

And not even Love can live on flowers.

Alas ! that Poverty's evil eye
Should e'er come hither,
Such sweets to wither !
The flowers laid down their heads to die,
And Hope fell sick as the witch drew
nigh.

She came one morning,
Ere Love had warning,
And rais'd the latch, where the young god lay ;

' Oh ho ! ' said Love—' is it you ?
good-by ; '

So he oped the window, and flew away !

To sigh, yet feel no pain,
To weep, yet scarce know why ;
To sport an hour with Beauty's chain,
Then throw it idly by.

To kneel at many a shrine,
Yet lay the heart on none ;
To think all other charms divine,
But those we just have won.

This is love, faithless love,
Such as kindleth hearts that rove.

To keep one sacred flame,
Through life unchill'd, unmov'd,
To love, in wintry age, the same
As first in youth we lov'd ;

To feel that we adore,
Ev'n to such fond excess,
That, though the heart would break,
with more,

It could not live with less.
This is love, faithful love,
Such as saints might feel above.

SPRIT of Joy, thy altar lies
In youthful hearts that hopelikemine ;
And 'tis the light of laughing eyes,
That leads us to thy fairy shrine.
There if we find the sigh, the tear,
They are not those to Sorrow known ;
But breath so soft, and drops so clear,
That Bliss may claim them for her own.
Then give me, give me, while I weep,
The sanguine hope that brightens woe,
And teaches ev'n our tears to keep
The tinge of pleasure as they flow.

The child, who sees the dew of night
Upon the spangled hedge at morn,
Attempts to catch the drops of light,
But wounds his finger with the thorn.
Thus oft the brightest joys we seek
Are lost, when touch'd, and turn'd to
pain ;
The flush they kindled leaves the cheek,
The tears they waken long remain.
But give me, give me, &c. &c.

WHEN Leila touch'd the lute,
Not then alone 'twas felt,
But, when the sounds were mute,
In memory still they dwelt.
Sweet lute ! in nightly slumbers
Still we heard thy morning numbers.

Ah, how could she, who stole
Such breath from simple wire,
Be led, in pride of soul,
To string with gold her lyre ?
Sweet lute ! thy chords she breaketh ;
Golden now the strings she waketh ?

But where are all the tales
Her lute so sweetly told ?
In lofty themes she fails,
And soft ones suit not gold.
Rich lute ! we see thee glisten,
But, alas ! no more we listen !

BOAT GLEE

THE song that lightens our languid way
When brows are glowing,
And faint with rowing,
Is like the spell of Hope's airy lay,
To whose sound through life we stray.
The beams that flash on the oar awhile,
As we row along through waves so
clear,
Illume its spray, like the fleeting smile
That shines o'er Sorrow's tear.

Nothing is lost on him who sees
With an eye that Feeling gave ;—
For him there's a story in every breeze,
And a picture in every wave.
Then sing to lighten the languid way ;—
When brows are glowing,
And faint with rowing :
'Tis like the spell of Hope's airy lay,
To whose sound through life we stray.

OH think, when a hero is sighing,
What danger in such an adorer !
What woman could dream of denying
The hand that lays laurels before her ?
No heart is so guarded around,
But the smile of a victor would take it ;
No bosom can slumber so sound,
But the trumpet of Glory will wake it.
Love sometimes is given to sleeping,
And woe to the heart that allows him ;

For soon neither smiling nor weeping
Will e'er from such slumber arouse him.
But though he were sleeping so fast,
That the life almost seem'd to forsake him,
Even then, one soul-thrilling blast
From the trumpet of Glory would wake him.

CUPID'S LOTTERY

A LOTTERY, a Lottery,
In Cupid's Court there us'd to be ;
Two roguish eyes
The highest prize
In Cupid's scheming Lottery ;
And kisses, too,
As good as new,
Which weren't very hard to win,
For he, who won
The eyes of fun,
Was sure to have the kisses in.
A Lottery, a Lottery, &c.

This Lottery, this Lottery,
In Cupid's Court went merrily,
And Cupid play'd
A Jewish trade
In this his scheming Lottery ;
For hearts, we're told,
In shares he sold
To many a fond believing drone,
And cut the hearts
So well in parts,
That each believ'd the whole his own.
Chor.—A Lottery, a Lottery,
In Cupid's Court there us'd to be
Two roguish eyes
The highest prize
In Cupid's scheming Lottery.

SONG¹

THOUGH sacred the tie that our country entwineth,
And dear to the heart her remembrance remains,
Yet dark are the ties where no liberty shineth,
And sad the remembrance that slavery stains.

Oh Liberty, born in the cot of the peasant,
But dying of languor in luxury's dome,
Our vision, when absent—our glory, when present—
Where thou art, O Liberty ! there is my home.

Farewell to the land where in childhood I wander'd!
 In vain is she mighty, in vain is she brave;
 Unbless'd is the blood that for tyrants is squander'd,
 And Fame has no wreaths for the brow of the slave.
 But hail to thee, Albion! who meet'st the commotion
 Of Europe, as calm as thy cliffs meet the foam;
 With no bonds but the law, and no slave but the ocean,
 Hail, Temple of Liberty! thou art my home.

MISCELLANEOUS POEMS

AT NIGHT¹

At night, when all is still around, How sweet to hear the distant sound Of footstep, coming soft and light! What pleasure in the anxious beat, With which the bosom flies to meet That foot that comes so soft at night!	And then, at night, how sweet to say 'Tis late, my love!' and chide delay, Though still the western clouds are bright; Oh! happy, too, the silent press, The eloquence of mute caress, With those we love exchange'd at night!

TO LADY HOLLAND

ON NAPOLEON'S LEGACY OF A SNUFF-BOX

GIFT of the Hero, on his dying day,
 To her, whose pity watch'd, for ever nigh;
 Oh! could he see the proud, the happy ray,
 This relic lights up in her generous eye,
 Sighing, he'd feel how easy 'tis to pay
 A friendship all his kingdoms could not buy.

Paris, July 1821.

EPILOGUE

WRITTEN FOR LADY DACRE'S TRAGEDY OF INA

LAST night, as lonely o'er my fire I sat,
 Thinking of cues, starts, exits, and—all that
 And wondering much what little knavish sprite
 Had put it first in women's heads to write:
 Sudden I saw—as in some witching dream—
 A bright-blue glory round my book-case beam,
 From whose quick-opening folds of azure light
 Out flew a tiny form, as small and bright
 As Puck the Fairy, when he pops his head,
 Some sunny morning, from a violet bed.
 'Bless me!' I starting cried, 'what imp are you?'—
 'A small he-devil, Ma'am—my name BAS BLEU—
 A bookish sprite, much giv'n to routs and reading;
 'Tis I who teach your spinsters of good breeding,

10

¹ These lines allude to a curious lamp, which has for its device a Cupid, with the words 'at night' written over him.

The reigning taste in chemistry and caps,
The last new bounds of tuckers and of maps,
And, when the waltz has twirl'd her giddy brain,
With metaphysics twirl it back again !'

I view'd him, as he spoke—his hose was blue,
His wings—the covers of the last Review— 20
Cerulean, border'd with a jaundice hue,
And tinsell'd gaily o'er for evening wear,
Till the next quarter brings a new-fledg'd pair.
'Inspir'd by me—(pursued this waggish Fairy)—
That best of wives and Sapphos, Lady Mary,
Votary alike of Crispin and the Muse,
Makes her own splay-foot epigrams and shoes,
For me the eyes of young Camilla shine,
And mingle Love's blue brilliances with mine ;
For me she sits apart, from coxcombs shrinking, 30
Looks wise—the pretty soul !—and thinks she's thinking.
By my advice Miss Indigo attends
Lectures on Memory, and assures her friends,
"'Pon honour !—(mimics)—nothing can surpass the plan
Of that professor—(trying to recollect)—pssha ! that memory-man—
That—what's his name ?—him I attended lately—
'Pon honour, he improv'd my memory greatly."

Here, curtseying low, I ask'd the blue-legg'd sprite,
What share he had in this our play to-night.
'Nay, there—(he cried)—there I am guiltless quite— 40
What ! choose a heroine from that Gothic time,
When no one waltz'd, and none but monks could rhyme ;
When lovely woman all unschoold and wild,
Blush'd without art, and without culture smil'd—
Simple as flowers, while yet unclass'd they shone,
Ere Science call'd their brilliant world her own,
Rang'd the wild, rosy things in learned orders,
And fill'd with Greek the garden's blushing borders !—
No, no—your gentle Inas will not do—
To-morrow evening, when the lights burn blue, 50
I'll come—(pointing downwards)—you understand—till then adieu !'

And has the sprite been here ? No—jests apart—
Howe'er man rules in science and in art,
The sphere of woman's glories is the heart.
And, if our Muse have sketch'd with pencil true
The wife—the mother—firm, yet gentle too—
Whose soul, wrapp'd up in ties itself hath spun,
Trembles, if touch'd in the remotest one ;
Who loves—yet dares even Love himself disown,
When Honour's broken shaft supports his throne : 60
If such our Ina, she may scorn the evils,
Dire as they are, of Critics and—Blue Devils.

THE DAY-DREAM

THEY both were hush'd, the voice, the chords,—

I heard but once that witching lay ;
And few the notes, and few the words,
Myspell-bound memory brought away ;

Traces remember'd here and there,
Like echoes of some broken strain ;—
Links of a sweetness lost in air,
That nothing now could join again.

Ev'n these, too, ere the morning, fled ;
And, though the charm still linger'd on, ¹⁰

That o'er each sense her song had shed,
The song itself was faded, gone ;—

Gone, like the thoughts that once were
ours,

On summer days, ere youth had set ;
Thoughts bright, we know, as summer
flowers,

Though what they were, we now forget.

In vain, with hints from other strains,
I woo'd this truant air to come—
As birds are taught, on eastern plains,
To lure their wilder kindred home. ²⁰

In vain :—the song that Sappho gave,
In dying, to the mournful sea,
Not muter slept beneath the wave,
Than this within my memory.

At length, one morning, as I lay
In that half-waking mood, when
dreams

Unwillingly at last give way
To the full truth of daylight's beams,

A face—the very face, methought,
From which had breath'd, as from a shrine

Of song and soul, the notes I sought—
Came with its music close to mine ; ³⁰

And sung the long-lost measure o'er,—
Each note and word, with every tone
And look, that lent it life before,—
All perfect, all again my own !

¹ In these stanzas I have done little more than relate a fact in verse ; and the lady, whose singing gave rise to this curious instance of the power of memory in sleep, is Mrs. Robert Arkwright.

Like parted souls, when, mid the Blest
They meet again, each widow'd sound
Through memory's realm had wing'd in quest ³⁹

Of its sweet mate, till all were found.

Nor even in waking did the clue,
Thus strangely caught, escape again ;
For never lark its matins knew
So well as now I knew this strain.

And oft, when memory's wondrous spell
Is talk'd of in our tranquil bower,
I sing this lady's song, and tell
The vision of that morning hour.

SONG

WHERE is the heart that would not give
Years of drowsy days and nights,
One little hour, like this, to live—
Full, to the brim, of life's delights ?

Look, look around
This fairy ground,
With love-lights glittering o'er ;
While cups that shine
With freight divine
Go coasting round its shore.

Hope is the dupe of future hours,
Memory lives in those gone by ;
Neither can see the moment's flowers
Springing up fresh beneath the eye.
Wouldst thou, or thou,
Forego what's now,
For all that Hope may say ?
No—Joy's reply,
From every eye,
Is, 'Live we while we may.'

SONG OF THE POCO-CURANTE SOCIETY

Haud curat Hippocrides.
Erasm. Adag.

To those we love we've drank to-night ;
But now attend, and stare not,
While I the ampler list recite
Of those for whom WE CARE NOT.

For royal men, howe'er they frown,
If on their fronts they bear not
That noblest gem that decks a crown,
The People's Love—WE CARE NOT.

For slavish men, who bend beneath
A despot yoke, yet dare not 10
Pronounce the will, whose very breath
Would rend its links—WE CARE NOT.

For priestly men, who covet sway
And wealth, though they declare not ;
Who point, like finger-posts, the way
They never go—WE CARE NOT.

For martial men, who on their sword,
Howe'er it conquers, wear not
The pledges of a soldier's word, 19
Redeem'd and pure—WE CARE NOT.

For legal men, who plead for wrong,
And, though to lies they swear not,
Are hardly better than the throng
Of those who do—WE CARE NOT.

For courtly men, who feed upon
The land, like grubs, and spare not
The smallest leaf, where they can sun
Their crawling limbs—WE CARE NOT.

For wealthy men, who keep their mines
In darkness hid, and share not 30
The paltry ore with him who pines
In honest want—WE CARE NOT.

For prudent men, who hold the power
Of Love aloof, and bare not
Their hearts in any guardless hour
To Beauty's shaft—WE CARE NOT.

For all, in short, on land or sea,
In camp or court, who are not,
Who never were, or e'er will be
Good men and true—WE CARE NOT. 40

ANNE BOLEYN

TRANSLATION FROM THE METRICAL
'HISTOIRE D'ANNE BOLEYN'

S'elle estoit belle et de taille élégante,
Estoit des yeulx encor plus attirante,
Lesquelz scavoit bien conduire à propos
En les tenant quelquefoys en repos ;
Aucune foyz envoyant en message
Porter du cuer le secret tesmoignage.

MUCH as her form seduc'd the sight,
Her eyes could even more surely woo ;
And when and how to shoot their light
Into men's hearts full well she knew.

For sometimes, in repose, she hid
Their rays beneath a downcast lid ;
And then again, with wakening air,
Would send their sunny glances out,
Like heralds of delight, to bear
Her heart's sweet messages about.

THE DREAM OF THE TWO SISTERS

FROM DANTE

Nell' ora, credo, che dell' oriente
Prima raggiò nel monte Citerea,
Che di fuoco d' amor par sempre ardente,
Giovane e bella in sogno mi pareo
Donna vedere andar per una landa
Cogliendo fiori ; e cantando dicea :—
Sappia qualunque il mio nome dimanda,
Ch' io mi son Lia, e vo movendo intorno
Le belle mani a farmi una ghirlanda.
Per piacermi allo specchio qui m' adorno ;
Ma mia suora Rachel mai non si smaga
Dal suo miraglio, e siede tutto giorno.
Ell' è de' suoi begli occhi veder vaga,
Com' io dell' adornarmi con le mani ;
Lei lo vedere e me l'oprare appaga.
Dante, Purg. canto xxvii.

'Twas eve's soft hour, and bright, above,
The star of Beauty beam'd,
While lull'd by light so full of love,
In slumber thus I dream'd—
Methought, at that sweet hour,
A nymph came o'er the lea,
Who, gath'ring many a flow'r,
Thus said and sung to me :—
'Should any ask what Leila loves,
Say thou, To wreath her hair
With flow'rets cull'd from glens and
groves,
Is Leila's only care.

While thus in quest of flow'rets rare,
O'er hill and dale I roam,
My sister, Rachel, far more fair,
Sits lone and mute at home.
Before her glass untiring,
With thoughts that never stray,
Her own bright eyes admiring,
She sits the live-long day ;
While I—oh, seldom even a look
Of self salutes my eye ;—
My only glass, the limpid brook,
That shines and passes by.'

SOVEREIGN WOMAN

A BALLAD

THE dance was o'er, yet still in dreams

That fairy scene went on ;
Like clouds still flush'd with daylight gleams,

Though day itself is gone.
And gracefully, to music's sound,
The same bright nymphs went gliding round ;

While thou, the Queen of all, wert there—
The Fairest still, where all were fair.

The dream then chang'd—in halls of state,

I saw thee high enthron'd ;
While, rang'd around, the wise, the great

In thee their mistress own'd :
And still the same; thy gentle sway
O'er willing subjects won its way—
'Till all confess'd the Right Divine
To rule o'er man was only thine !

But, lo, the scene now chang'd again—

And borne on plumed steed,
I saw thee o'er the battle-plain
Our land's defenders lead ;
And stronger in thy beauty's charms,
Than man, with countless hosts in arms,

Thy voice, like music, cheer'd the Free,
Thy very smile was victory !

Nor reign such queens on thrones alone ;

In cot and court the same,
Wherever woman's smile is known,
Victoria's still her name.

For though she almost blush to reign,
Though Love's own flow'rets wreath the chain,

Disguise our bondage as we will,
'Tis woman, woman, rules us still.

COME, PLAY ME THAT SIMPLE
AIR AGAIN

A BALLAD

COME, play me that simple air again,
I us'd so to love, in life's young day,
And bring, if thou canst, the dreams that then

Were waken'd by that sweet lay.
The tender gloom its strain
Shed o'er the heart and brow,
Grief's shadow, without its pain—
Say where, where is it now ?

But play me the well-known air once more,

For thoughts of youth still haunt its strain,

Like dreams of some far, fairy shore
We never shall see again.

Sweet air, how every note brings back
Some sunny hope, some day-dream bright,

That, shining o'er life's early track,
Fill'd ev'n its tears with light.

The new-found life that came
With love's first echo'd vow ;—
The fear, the bliss, the shame—

Ah—where, where are they now ?
But, still the same lov'd notes prolong,
For sweet 'twere thus, to that old lay,
In dreams of youth and love and song
To breathe life's hour away.

ALCIPHRON

A FRAGMENT

LETTER I

FROM ALCIPHRON AT ALEXANDRIA TO CLEON AT ATHENS

WELL may you wonder at my flight
From those fair Gardens, in whose
bowers

Lingers whate'er of wise and bright,
Of Beauty's smile or Wisdom's light,
Is left to grace this world of ours.

Well may my comrades, as they roam,
On such sweet eves as this, inquire
Why I have left that happy home

Where all is found that all desire,
And Time hath wings that never tire;

Where bliss, in all the countless shapes
That Fancy's self to bliss hath given,
Comes clustering round, like road-side
grapes

That woo the traveller's lip, at even;
Where Wisdom flings not joy away—
As Pallas in the stream, they say,
Once flung her flute—but smiling owns
That woman's lip can send forth tones
Worth all the music of those spheres
So many dream of, but none hears; 20
Where Virtue's self puts on so well
Her sister Pleasure's smile, that, loth
From either nymph apart to dwell,
We finish by embracing both.

Yes, such the place of bliss, I own,
From all whose charms I just have flown;

And even while thus to thee I write,
And by the Nile's dark flood recline,
Fondly, in thought, I wing my flight
Back to those groves and gardens bright,
And often think, by this sweet light, 31
How lovelily they all must shine;
Can see that graceful temple throw
Down the green slope its lengthen'd
shade,

While, on the marble steps below,
There sits some fair Athenian maid,

Over some favourite volume bending;
And, by her side, a youthful sage
Holds back the ringlets that, descending,
Would else o'ershadow all the page. 40
But hence such thoughts!—nor let me grieve

O'er scenes of joy that I but leave,
As the bird quits awhile its nest
To come again with livelier zest.

And now to tell thee—what I fear
Thou'lt gravely smile at—why I'm here.
Though through my life's short, sunny
dream,

I've floated without pain or care,
Like a light leaf, down pleasure's stream,
Caught in each sparkling eddy there;
Though never Mirth awaked a strain 51
That my heart echoed not again;
Yet have I felt, when even most gay,
Sad thoughts—I knew not whence or
why—

Suddenly o'er my spirit fly,
Like clouds, that, ere we've time to say
'How bright the sky is!' shade the
sky.

Sometimes so vague, so undefin'd,
Were these strange dark'nings of my
mind—

While nought but joy around me
beam'd— 60

So causelessly they've come and flown,
That not of life or earth they seem'd,
But shadows from some world un-
known.

More oft, however, 'twas the thought
How soon that scene, with all its play
Of life and gladness, must decay—
Those lips I prest, the hands I caught—Myself—the crowd that mirth had brought

Around me—swept like weeds away!

This thought it was that came to shed
 O'er rapture's hour its worst alloys ;
 And, close as shade with sunshine, wed
 Its sadness with my happiest joys. 73
 Oh, but for this disheart'ning voice,
 Stealing amid our mirth to say
 That all, in which we most rejoice,
 Ere night may be the earth-worm's
 prey ;

But for this bitter—only this—
 Full as the world is brimm'd with bliss,
 And capable as feels my soul 80
 Of draining to its dregs the whole,
 I should turn earth to heav'n, and be,
 If bliss made Gods, a Deity !

Thou know'st that night—the very last
 That 'mong my Garden friends I pass'd—
 When the School held its feast of mirth
 To celebrate our founder's birth,
 And all that He in dreams but saw
 When he set Pleasure on the throne
 Of this bright world, and wrote her law
 In human hearts, was felt and known—
 Not in unreal dreams, but true 92
 Substantial joy as pulse e'er knew—
 By hearts and bosoms, that each felt
Itself the realm where Pleasure dwelt.

That night, when all our mirth was
 o'er,

The minstrels silent, and the feet
 Of the young maidens heard no more,—
 So stilly was the time, so sweet,
 And such a calm came o'er that scene,
 Where life and revel late had been— 101
 Lone as the quiet of some bay,
 From which the sea hath ebb'd away—
 That still I linger'd, lost in thought,
 Gazing upon the stars of night,
 Sad and intent, as if I sought

Some mournful secret in their light ;
 And ask'd them, 'mid that silence, why
 Man, glorious man, alone must die,
 While they, less wonderful than he, 110
 Shine on through all eternity.

That night—thou haply may'st forget
 Its loveliness—but 'twas a night
 To make earth's meanest slave regret
 Leaving a world so soft and bright.
 On one side, in the dark blue sky,
 Lonely and radiant, was the eye
 Of Jove himself, while, on the other,
 'Mong stars that came out one by one,

The young moon—like the Roman mother
 Among her living jewels—shone. 121
 'Oh that from yonder orbs,' I thought,
 'Pure and eternal as they are,
 There could to earth some power be brought,
 Some charm, with their own essence fraught,

To make man deathless as a star ;
 And open to his vast desires
 A course, as boundless and sublime
 As that which waits those comet-fires,
 That burn and roam throughout all
 time !' 130

While thoughts like these absorb'd my
 mind,
 That weariness which earthly bliss,
 However sweet, still leaves behind,
 As if to show how earthly 'tis,
 Came lulling o'er me, and I laid
 My limbs at that fair statue's base—
 That miracle, which Art hath made
 Of all the choice of Nature's grace—
 To which so oft I've knelt and sworn,
 That, could a living maid like her 140
 Unto this wondering world be born,
 I would, myself, turn worshipper.

Sleep came then o'er me—and I seem'd
 To be transported far away
 To a bleak desert plain, where gleam'd
 One single, melancholy ray,
 Throughout that darkness dimly shed
 From a small taper in the hand
 Of one, who, pale as are the dead,
 Before me took his spectral stand, 150
 And said, while, awfully, a smile
 Came o'er the wanness of his cheek—
 'Go, and beside the sacred Nile
 You'll find the 'Eternal Life you seek.'

Soon as he spoke these words, the hue
 Of death o'er all his features grew,
 Like the pale morning, when o'er night
 She gains the victory, full of light ;
 While the small torch he held became
 A glory in his hand, whose flame 160
 Brighten'd the desert suddenly,
 Even to the far horizon's line—
 Along whose level I could see Gardens and groves that seem'd to
 shine,
 As if then o'er them freshly play'd
 A vernal rainbow's rich cascade ;

And music floated every where,
Circling, as 'twere itself the air,
And spirits, on whose wings the hue 169
Of heaven still linger'd, round me flew,
Till from all sides such splendours broke,
That, with the excess of light, I woke!

Such was my dream;—and, I confess,
Though none of all our creedless
School

E'er conn'd, believ'd, or reverenc'd less
The fables of the priest-led fool,
Who tells us of a soul, a mind,
Separate and pure, within us shrin'd,
Which is to live—ah, hope too bright!—
For ever in yon fields of light; 180

Who fondly thinks the guardian eyes
Of Gods are on him—as if, blest
And blooming in their own blue skies,
The' eternal Gods were not too wise

To let weak man disturb their rest!—
Though thinking of such creeds as thou
And all our Garden sages think,
Yet is there something, I allow,

In dreams like this—a sort of link
With worlds unseen, which, from the
hour 190

I first could lisp my thoughts till now,
Hath master'd me with spell-like power.

And who can tell, as we're combin'd
Of various atoms—some refin'd
Like those that scintillate and play
In the fix'd stars—some, gross as they
That frown in clouds or sleep in clay—
Who can be sure, but 'tis the best

And brightest atoms of our frame,
Those most akin to stellar flame, 200
That shine out thus, when we're at
rest;—

Ev'n as the stars themselves, whose light
Comes out but in the silent night.
Or is it that there lurks, indeed,
Some truth in Man's prevailing creed,

And that our Guardians, from on high,
Come, in that pause from toil and sin,
To put the senses' curtain by,
And on the wakeful soul look in!

Vain thought!—but yet, howe'er it be,
Dreams, more than once, hath prov'd to
me 211

Oracles, truer far than Oak,
Or Dove, or Tripod, ever spoke.
And 'twas the words—thou'lt hear and
smile—

The words that phantom seem'd to speak—

'Go, and beside the sacred Nile

You'll find the Eternal Life you seek'—

That, haunting me by night, by day,

At length, as with the unseen hand

Of Fate itself, urg'd me away 220

From Athens to this Holy Land;

Where, 'mong the secrets, still untaught,

The myst'ries that, as yet, nor sun

Nor eye hath reach'd—oh, blessed
thought!—

May sleep this everlasting one.

Farewell—when to our Garden friends

Thou talk'st of the wild dream that sends

The gayest of their school thus far,

Wandering beneath Canopus' star,

Tell them that, wander where he will,

Or, howsoe'er they now condemn 231

His vague and vain pursuit, he still

Is worthy of the School and them;—

Still, all their own—nor e'er forgets,

Ev'n while his heart and soul pursue

Th' Eternal Light which never sets,

The many meteor joys that do,

But seeks them, hails them with delight,

Where'er they meet his longing sight.

And, if his life must wane away, 240

Like other lives, at least the day,

The hour it lasts shall, like a fire

With incense fed, in sweets expire.

LETTER II

FROM THE SAME TO THE SAME

Memphis.

'Tis true, alas—the myst'ries and the lore
I came to study on this wondrous shore,
Are all forgotten in the new delights,
The strange, wild joys that fill my days and nights.
Instead of dark, dull oracles that speak
From subterranean temples, those I seek

Come from the breathing shrines where Beauty lives,
 And Love, her priest, the soft responses gives.
 Instead of honouring Isis in those rites
 At Coptos held, I hail her, when she lights 10
 Her first young crescent on the holy stream—
 When wandering youths and maidens watch her beam,
 And number o'er the nights she hath to run,
 Ere she again embrace her bridegroom sun.
 While o'er some mystic leaf, that dimly lends
 A clue into past times, the student bends,
 And by its glimmering guidance learns to tread
 Back through the shadowy knowledge of the dead—
 The only skill, alas, I yet can claim
 Lies in deciphering some new lov'd-one's name— 20
 Some gentle missive, hinting time and place,
 In language, soft as Memphian reed can trace.
 And where—oh where's the heart that could withstand
 The' unnumber'd witcheries of this sun-born land,
 Where first young Pleasure's banner was unfurl'd,
 And Love hath temples ancient as the world!
 Where mystery, like the veil by Beauty worn,
 Hides but to win, and shades but to adorn;
 Where that luxurious melancholy, born
 Of passion and of genius, sheds a gloom 30
 Making joy holy;—where the bower and tomb
 Stand side by side, and Pleasure learns from Death
 The instant value of each moment's breath.

Couldst thou but see how like a poet's dream
 This lovely land now looks!—the glorious stream,
 That late, between its banks, was seen to glide
 'Mong shrines and marble cities, on each side
 Glittering like jewels strung along a chain,
 Hath now sent forth its waters, and o'er plain
 And valley, like a giant from his bed 40
 Rising with outstretch'd limbs, hath grandly spread;
 While far as sight can reach, beneath as clear
 And blue a heaven as ever bless'd our sphere,
 Gardens, and pillar'd streets, and porphyry domes,
 And high-built temples, fit to be the homes
 Of mighty Gods, and pyramids, whose hour
 Outlasts all time, above the waters tower!

Then, too, the scenes of pomp and joy, that make
 One theatre of this vast, peopled lake,
 Where all that Love, Religion, Commerce gives 50
 Of life and motion, ever moves and lives.
 Here, up the steps of temples from the wave
 Ascending, in procession slow and grave,
 Priests in white garments go, with sacred wands
 And silver cymbals gleaming in their hands;
 While there, rich barks—fresh from those sunny tracts
 Far off, beyond the sounding cataracts—
 Glide, with their precious lading to the sea,
 Plumes of bright birds, rhinoceros ivory,

Gems from the Isle of Meroe, and those grains
Of gold, wash'd down by Abyssinian rains. 60
Here, where the waters wind into a bay
Shadowy and cool, some pilgrims, on their way
To Sais or Bubastus, among beds
Of lotus flowers, that close above their heads,
Push their light barks, and there, as in a bower,
Sing, talk, or sleep away the sultry hour ;
Oft dipping in the Nile, when faint with heat,
That leaf, from which its waters drink most sweet.—
While haply, not far off, beneath a bank 70
Of blossoming acacias, many a prank
Is played in the cool current by a train
Of laughing nymphs, lovely as she,¹ whose chain
Around two conquerors of the world was cast,
But, for a third too feeble, broke at last.

For oh, believe not them, who dare to brand,
As poor in charms, the women of this land.
Though darkened by that sun, whose spirit flows
Through every vein, and tinges as it goes,
'Tis but the' embrowning of the fruit that tells 80
How rich within the soul of ripeness dwells—
The hue their own dark sanctuaries wear,
Announcing heaven in half-caught glimpses there.
And never yet did tell-tale looks set free
The secret of young hearts more tenderly.
Such eyes !—long, shadowy, with that languid fall
Of the fring'd lids, which may be seen in all
Who live beneath the sun's too ardent rays—
Lending such looks as, on their marriage days,
Young maids cast down before a bridegroom's gaze ! 90
Then for their grace—mark but the nymph-like shapes
Of the young village girls, when carrying grapes
From green Anthylla, or light urns of flowers—
Not our own Sculpture, in her happiest hours,
E'er imag'd forth, even at the touch of him²
Whose touch was life, more luxury of limb ;
Then, canst thou wonder if, 'mid scenes like these,
I should forget all graver mysteries,
All lore but Love's, all secrets but that best
In heaven or earth, the art of being blest ! 100
Yet are there times—though brief, I own, their stay,
Like Summer clouds that shine themselves away—
Moments of gloom, when even these pleasures pall
Upon my sadd'ning heart, and I recall
That Garden dream—that promise of a power—
Oh, were there such !—to lengthen out life's hour,
On, on, as through a vista, far away
Opening before us into endless day !
And chiefly o'er my spirit did this thought
Come on that evening—bright as ever brought 110

¹ Cleopatra.² Apelles.

Light's golden farewell to the world—when first
 The' eternal pyramids of Memphis burst
 Awfully on my sight—standing sublime
 'Twixt earth and heaven, the watch-towers of Time,
 From whose lone summit, when his reign hath past
 From earth for ever, he will look his last !

There hung a calm and solemn sunshine round
 Those mighty monuments, a hushing sound
 In the still air that circled them, which stole
 Like music of past times into my soul. 120
 I thought what myriads of the wise, and brave,
 And beautiful, had sunk into the grave,
 Since earth first saw these wonders—and I said,
 'Are things eternal only for the Dead ?
 Hath man no loftier hope than this, which dooms
 His only lasting trophies to be tombs ?
 But 'tis not so—earth, heaven, all nature shows
 He may become immortal—may unclothe
 The wings within him wrapt, and proudly rise,
 Redeem'd from earth, a creature of the skies ! 130

And who can say, among the written spells
 From Hermes' hand, that, in these shrines and cells
 Have, from the Flood, lay hid, there may not be
 Some secret clue to immortality,—
 Some amulet, whose spell can keep life's fire
 Awake within us, never to expire !
 'Tis known that, on the Emerald Table, hid
 For ages in yon loftiest pyramid,
 The Thrice-Great¹ did himself, engrave, of old,
 The chymic mystery that gives endless gold. 140
 And why may not this mightier secret dwell
 Within the same dark chambers ? who can tell
 But that those kings, who, by the written skill
 Of the' Emerald Table, call'd forth gold at will,
 And quarries upon quarries heap'd and huri'd,
 To build them domes that might outstand the world—
 Who knows but that the heavenlier art, which shares
 The life of Gods with man, was also theirs—
 That they themselves, triumphant o'er the power
 Of fate and death, are living at this hour ; 150
 And these, the giant homes they still possess,
 Not tombs, but everlasting palaces,
 Within whose depths, hid from the world above,
 Even now they wander, with the few they love,
 Through subterranean gardens, by a light
 Unknown on earth, which hath nor dawn nor night !
 Else, why those deathless structures ? why the grand
 And hidden halls, that undermine this land ?
 Why else hath none of earth e'er dared to go Through the dark windings of that realm below, 160

¹ The Hermes Trismegistus.

Nor aught from heav'n itself, except the God
 Of Silence, through those endless labyrinths trod ?'
 Thus did I dream—wild, wandering dreams, I own,
 But such as haunt me ever, if alone,
 Or in that pause, 'twixt joy and joy I be,
 Like a ship hush'd between two waves at sea.
 Then do these spirit whisperings, like the sound
 Of the Dark Future, come appalling round ;
 Nor can I break the trance that holds me then,
 Till high o'er Pleasure's surge I mount again !

170

Even now for new adventure, new delight,
 My heart is on the wing ;—this very night,
 The Temple on that Island, half-way o'er
 From Memphis' gardens to the eastern shore,
 Sends up its annual rite¹ to her, whose beams
 Bring the sweet time of night-flowers and dreams ;
 The nymph, who dips her urn in silent lakes,
 And turns to silvery dew each drop it takes ;—
 Oh, not our Dian of the North, who chains
 In vestal ice the current of young veins,
 But she who haunts the gay Bubastian² grove,
 And owns she sees, from her bright heaven above,
 Nothing on earth to match that heaven but Love.
 Think, then, what bliss will be abroad to-night !—
 Besides those sparkling nymphs, who meet the sight
 Day after day, familiar as the sun,
 Coy buds of beauty, yet unbreath'd upon,
 And all the hidden loveliness, that lies,
 Shut up, as are the beams of sleeping eyes,
 Within these twilight shrines—to-night shall be Let loose, like birds, for this festivity !

180

190

And mark, 'tis nigh ; already the sun bids
 His evening farewell to the Pyramids,
 As he hath done, age after age, till they Alone on earth seem ancient as his ray ;
 While their great shadows, stretching from the light,
 Look like the first colossal steps of Night,
 Stretching across the valley, to invade
 The distant hills of porphyry with their shade.
 Around, as signals of the setting beam,
 Gay, gilded flags on every house-top gleam :
 While, hark !—from all the temples a rich swell
 Of music to the Moon—farewell—farewell.

² Bubastis, or Isis, was the Diana of the Egyptian mythology.

LETTER III

FROM THE SAME TO THE SAME

Memphis.

THERE is some star—or it may be
 That moon we saw so near last night—
 Which comes athwart my destiny
 For ever, with misleading light.
 If for a moment, pure and wise
 And calm I feel, there quick doth fall
 A spark from some disturbing eyes,
 That through my heart, soul, being flies,
 And makes a wildfire of it all.
 I've seen—oh, Cleon, that this earth so Should e'er have giv'n such beauty
 birth!—
 That man—but, hold—hear all that
 pass'd
 Since yester-night, from first to last.
 The rising of the Moon, calm, slow,
 And beautiful, as if she came
 Fresh from the Elysian bowers below,
 Was, with a loud and sweet acclaim,
 Welcom'd from every breezy height,
 Where crowds stood waiting for her light.
 And well might they who view'd the
 scene 20
 Then lit up all around them, say,
 That never yet had Nature been Caught sleeping in a lovelier ray,
 Or rival'd her own noon-tide face,
 With purer show of moonlight grace.
 Memphis—still grand, though not the
 same
 Unrival'd Memphis, that could seize
 From ancient Thebes the crown of Fame,
 And wear it bright through centuries— 29
 Now, in the moonshine, that came down
 Like a last smile upon that crown,—
 Memphis, still grand, among her lakes,
 Her pyramids and shrines of fire,
 Rose, like a vision, that half breaks
 On one who, dreaming still, awakes,
 To music from some midnight choir :
 While to the west—where gradual sinks
 In the red sands, from Libya roll'd,
 Some mighty column, or fair sphynx, 39
 That stood in kingly courts, of old—
 It seem'd as, 'mid the pomps that shone
 Thus gaily round him, Time look'd on,
 Waiting till all, now bright and blest,
 Should sink beneath him like the rest.

No sooner had the setting sun
 Proclaim'd the festal rite begun,
 And, 'mid their idol's fullest beams,
 The Egyptian world was all afloat,
 Than I, who live upon these streams,
 Like a young Nile-bird, turn'd my boat
 To the fair island, on whose shores, 51
 Through leafy palms and sycamores,
 Already shone the moving lights
 Of pilgrims hastening to the rites.
 While, far around, like ruby sparks
 Upon the water, lighted barks,
 Of every form and kind—from those
 That down Syene's cataract shoot,
 To the grand, gilded barge, that rows
 To tambour's beat and breath of flute, 60
 And wears at night, in words of flame,
 On the rich prow, its master's name ;—
 All were alive, and made this sea
 Of cities busy as a hill
 Of summer ants, caught suddenly
 In the overflowing of a rill.

Landed upon the isle, I soon
 Through marble alleys and small
 groves
 Of that mysterious palm she loves,
 Reach'd the fair Temple of the Moon ; 70
 And there—as slowly through the last
 Dim-lighted vestibule I pass'd—
 Between the porphyry pillars, twin'd
 With palm and ivy, I could see
 A band of youthful maidens wind,
 In measur'd walk, half dancingly,
 Round a small shrine, on which was plac'd
 That bird,¹ whose plumes of black and white
 Wear in their hue, by Nature trac'd,
 A type of the moon's shadow'd light.
 In drapery, like woven snow, 81
 These nymphs were clad ; and each, below
 The rounded bosom, loosely wore
 A dark blue zone, or bandelet,
 With little silver stars all o'er,
 As are the skies at midnight, set,
 While in their tresses, braided through,
 Sparkled that flower of Egypt's lakes,
 The silvery lotus, in whose hue
 As much delight the young Moon takes,
 As doth the Day-God to behold 91
 The lofty bean-flower's buds of gold.

And, as they gracefully went round
The worshipp'd bird, some to the beat
Of castanets, some to the sound

Of the shrill sistrum tim'd their feet ;
While others, at each step they took,
A tinkling chain of silver shook.

They seem'd all fair—but there was one
On whom the light had not yet shone, 100
Or shone but partly—so downcast
She held her brow as slow she past.

And yet to me, there seem'd to dwell
A charm about that unseen face—

A something in the shade that fell
Over that brow's imagin'd grace,
Which won me more than all the best
Outshining beauties of the rest.

And her alone my eyes could see,
Enchain'd by this sweet mystery ; 110
And her alone I watch'd, as round
She glided o'er that marble ground,
Stirring not more the' unconscious air
Than if a Spirit were moving there.

Till suddenly, wide open flew
The Temple's folding gates, and threw
A splendour from within, a flood
Of glory, where these maidens stood.
While, with that light—as if the same
Rich source gave birth to both—there
came 120

A swell of harmony, as grand
As e'er was born of voice and hand,
Filling the gorgeous aisles around
With luxury of light and sound.

Then was it, by the flash that blaz'd
Full o'er her features—oh 'twas then,
As startingly her eyes she rais'd,

But quick let fall their lids again,
I saw—not Psyche's self, when first
Upon the threshold of the skies 130
She paus'd, while heaven's glory burst
Newly upon her downcast eyes,
Could look more beautiful, or blush

With holier shame, than did this maid,
Whom now I saw, in all that gush
Of splendour from the aisles, display'd,
Never—though well thou know'st how much

I've felt the sway of Beauty's star—
Never did her bright influence touch
My soul into its depths so far ; 140
And had that vision linger'd there

One minute more, I should have flown,
Forgetful who I was and where,

And, at her feet in worship thrown,
Proffer'd my soul through life her
own.

But, scarcely had that burst of light
And music broke on ear and sight,
Than up the aisle the bird took wing,
As if on heavenly mission sent, 149
While after him, with graceful spring,
Like some unearthly creatures, meant
To live in that mix'd element
Of light and song, the young maids
went ;

And she, who in my heart had thrown
A spark to burn for life, was flown.

In vain I tried to follow ;—bands
Of reverend chanters fill'd the aisle :
Where'er I sought to pass, their wands
Motion'd me back, while many a file
Of sacred nymphs—but ah, not they 160
Whom my eyes look'd for—throng'd the
way.

Perplex'd, impatient, 'mid this crowd
Of faces, lights—the o'erwhelming cloud
Of incense round me, and my blood
Full of its new-born fire—I stood,
Nor mov'd, nor breath'd, but when
I caught

A glimpse of some blue, spangled
zone,

Or wreath of lotus, which, I thought,
Like those she wore at distance shone.

But no, 'twas vain—hour after hour, 170
Till my heart's throbbing turn'd to
pain,

And my strain'd eyesight lost its power,
I sought her thus, but all in vain.
At length, hot—wilder'd—in despair,
I rush'd into the cool night-air,
And, hurrying (though with many a look Back to the busy Temple), took
My way along the moonlight shore,
And sprang into my boat once more.

There is a Lake, that to the north 180
Of Memphis stretches grandly forth,
Upon whose silent shore the Dead
Have a proud City of their own,¹
With shrines and pyramids o'erspread—
Where many an ancient kingly head
Slumbers, immortalis'd in stone ;

¹ Necropolis, or the City of the Dead, to the south of Memphis.

And where, through marble grots beneath,

The lifeless, rang'd like sacred things,
Nor wanting aught of life but breath,
Lie in their painted coverings, 190

And on each new successive race,
That visit their dim haunts below,
Look with the same unwithering face
They wore three thousand years ago.
There, Silence, thoughtful God, who loves

The neighbourhood of death, in groves
Of asphodel lies hid, and weaves
His hushing spell among the leaves—
Nor ever noise disturbs the air,
Save the low, humming, mournful
sound 200

Of priests, within their shrines, at prayer
For the fresh Dead entomb'd around.

'Twas tow'rd this place of death—in mood
Made up of thoughts, half bright, half dark—

I now across the shining flood Unconscious turn'd my light-wing'd
bark.

The form of that young maid, in all
Its beauty, was before me still;
And oft I thought, if thus to call
Her image to my mind at will, 210

If but the memory of that one
Bright look of hers, for ever gone,
Was to my heart worth all the rest
Of woman-kind, beheld, possess—
What would it be, if wholly mine,
Within these arms, as in a shrine,
Hallow'd by Love, I saw her shine—
An idol, worshipp'd by the light
Of her own beauties, day and night—
If 'twas a blessing but to see 220
And lose again, what would this be?

In thoughts like these—but often crost
By darker threads—my mind was lost,
Till, near that City of the Dead,
Wak'd from my trance, I saw o'erhead—
As if by some enchanter bid

Suddenly from the wave to rise—
Pyramid over pyramid

Tower in succession to the skies;
While one, aspiring, as if soon 230
'Twould touch the heavens, rose o'er
all;

And, on its summit, the white moon
Rested, as on a pedestal!

The silence of the lonely tombs
And temples round, where nought was heard

But the high palm-tree's tufted plumes,
Shaken, at times, by breeze or bird,
Form'd a deep contrast to the scene
Of revel, where I late had been; 239
To those gay sounds, that still came o'er,
Faintly, from many a distant shore,
And the unnumber'd lights, that shone
Far o'er the flood, from Memphis on
To the Moon's Isle and Babylon.

My oars were lifted, and my boat
Lay rock'd upon the rippling stream;
While my vague thoughts, alike afloat,
Drifted through many an idle dream,
With all of which, wild and unfix'd
As was their aim, that vision mix'd, 250
That bright nymph of the Temple—now,
With the same innocence of brow
She wore within the lighted fane—
Now kindling, through each pulse and vein,

With passion of such deep-felt fire
As Gods might glory to inspire;—
And now—oh Darkness of the tomb,
That must eclipse even light like hers!
Cold, dead, and blackening, 'mid the gloom
Of those eternal sepulchres. 260

Scarce had I turn'd my eyes away
From that dark death-place, at the
thought,
When by the sound of dashing spray
From a light oar my ear was caught,
While past me, through the moonlight,
sail'd

A little gilded bark that bore
Two female figures, closely veil'd
And mantled, towards that funeral
shore.

They landed—and the boat again
Put off across the watery plain. 270

Shall I confess—to thee I may—
That never yet hath come the chance
Of a new music, a new ray
From woman's voice, from woman's
glance,

Which—let it find me how it might,
In joy or grief—I did not bless,
And wander after, as a light
Leading to undreamt happiness.

And chiefly now, when hopes so vain
Were stirring in my heart and brain, 280
When Fancy had allur'd my soul

Into a chase, as vague and far
As would be his, who fix'd his goal
In the horizon, or some star—
Any bewilderment, that brought More near to earth my high-flown
thought—

The faintest glimpse of joy, less pure,
Less high and heavenly, but more sure,
Came welcome—and was then to me
What the first flowery isle must be 290
To vagrant birds blown out to sea.

Quick to the shore I urg'd my bark,
And, by the bursts of moonlight, shed
Between the lofty tombs, could mark
Those figures, as with hasty tread
They glided on—till in the shade
Of a small pyramid, which through
Some boughs of palm its peak display'd,
They vanish'd instant from my view.

I hurried to the spot—no trace 300
Of life was in that lonely place;
And, had the creed I hold by taught
Of other worlds, I might have thought
Some mocking spirits had from thence
Come in this guise to cheat my sense.

At length, exploring darkly round
The Pyramid's smooth sides, I found
An iron portal—opening high
'Twixt peak and base—and, with a prayer

To the bliss-loving Moon, whose eye 310
Alone beheld me, sprung in there.
Downward the narrow stairway led
Through many a duct obscure and dread,
A labyrinth for mystery made,
With wanderings onward, backward,
round,
And gathering still, where'er it wound,
But deeper density of shade.

Scarce had I ask'd myself, 'Can aught
That mandelights in sojourn here?'—
When, suddenly, far off, I caught 320
A glimpse of light, remote, but clear—
Whose welcome glimmer seem'd to pour
From some aloof or cell, that ended
The long, steep, marble corridor,
Through which I now, all hope,
descended.

Never did Spartan to his bride
With warier foot at midnight glide.
It seem'd as echo's self were dead
In this dark place, so mute my tread.
Reaching, at length, that light, I saw—
Oh listen to the scene, now rais'd 331
Before my eyes—then guess the awe,
The still, rapt awe with which I gaz'd.
'Twas a small chapel, lin'd around
With the fair, spangling marble, found
In many a ruin'd shrine that stands
Half seen above the Libyan sands.
The walls were richly sculptur'd o'er,
And character'd with that dark lore,
Of times before the Flood, whose key
Was lost in the 'Universal Sea.'— 341
While on the roof was pictur'd bright
The Theban beetle, as he shines,
When the Nile's mighty flow declines,
And forth the creature springs to light,
With life regenerate in his wings:—
Emblem of vain imaginings!
Of a new world, when this is gone,
In which the spirit still lives on!

Direct beneath this type, reclin'd 350
On a black granite altar, lay
A female form, in crystal shrin'd,
And looking fresh as if the ray
Of soul had fled but yesterday.
While in relief, of silv'ry hue,
Grav'd on the altar's front were seen
A branch of lotus, broken in two,
As that fair creature's life had been,
And a small bird that from its spray
Was winging, like her soul, away. 360

But brief the glimpse I now could spare,
To the wild, mystic wonders round;
For there was yet one wonder there,
That held me as by witch'ry bound.
The lamp, that through the chamber shed
Its vivid beam, was at the head
Of her who on that altar slept;
And near it stood, when first I came—
Bending her brow, as if she kept
Sad watch upon its silent flame— 370
A female form, as yet so plac'd Between the lamp's strong glow and
me,
That I but saw, in outline trac'd,
The shadow of her symmetry.
Yet did my heart—I scarce knew why—
Even at that shadow'd shape beat high.

Nor was it long, ere full in sight
 The figure turn'd; and by the light
 That touch'd her features, as she bent
 Over the crystal monument, 380
 I saw 'twas she—the same—the same—
 That lately stood before me, bright'n-
 ing
 The holy spot, where she but came
 And went again, like summer lightning!

Upon the crystal, o'er the breast
 Of her who took that silent rest,
 There was a cross of silver lying—
 Another type of that blest home,
 Which hope, and pride, and fear of dying
 Build for us in a world to come:— 390
 This silver cross the maiden rais'd
 To her pure lips:—then, having gaz'd
 Some minutes on that tranquil face,
 Sleeping in all death's mournful grace,
 Upward she turn'd her brow serene,
 As if, intent on heaven, those eyes
 Saw then nor roof nor cloud between
 Their own pure orbits and the skies;
 And, though her lips no motion made,
 And that fix'd look was all her speech,
 I saw that the rapt spirit pray'd 401
 Deeper within than words could reach.

Strange power of Innocence, to turn
 To its own hue whate'er comes near,
 And make even vagrant Passion burn
 With purer warmth within its sphere!
 She who, but one short hour before,
 Had come, like sudden wild-fire, o'er
 My heart and brain—whom gladly, even
 From that bright Temple, in the face
 Of those proud ministers of heaven, 411
 I would have borne, in wild embrace,
 And risk'd all punishment, divine
 And human, but to make her mine;—
 She, she was now before me, thrown
 By fate itself into my arms—
 There standing, beautiful, alone,
 With nought to guard her, but her
 charms.
 Yet did I, then—did even a breath
 From my parch'd lips, too parch'd to move, 420
 Disturb a scene where thus, beneath
 Earth's silent covering, Youth and Death
 Held converse through undying love?
 No—smile and taunt me as thou wilt—
 Though but to gaze thus was delight,

Yet seem'd it like a wrong, a guilt,
 To win by stealth so pure a sight:
 And rather than a look profane
 Should then have met those thoughtful eyes,
 Or voice or whisper broke the chain 430
 That link'd her spirit with the skies,
 I would have gladly, in that place,
 From which I watch'd her heavenward
 face,
 Let my heart break, without one beat
 That could disturb a prayer so sweet.
 Gently, as if on every tread,
 My life, my more than life, depended,
 Back through the corridor that led
 To this blest scene I now ascended,
 And with slow seeking, and some pain,
 And many a winding tried in vain, 441
 Emerg'd to upper air again.

The sun had freshly risen, and down
 The marble hills of Araby,
 Scatter'd, as from a conqueror's crown,
 His beams into that living sea.
 There seem'd a glory in his light,
 Newly put on—as if for pride
 Of the high homage paid this night
 To his own Isis, his young bride, 450
 Now fading feminine away
 In her proud Lord's superior ray.

My mind's first impulse was to fly
 At once from this entangling net—
 New scenes to range, new loves to try,
 Or, in mirth, wine, and luxury
 Of every sense, that night forget.
 But vain the effort—spell-bound still,
 I linger'd, without power or will
 To turn my eyes from that dark door,
 Which now enclos'd her 'mong the dead;
 Oft fancying, through the boughs, that
 o'er 462
 The sunny pile their flickering shed,
 'Twas her light form again I saw
 Starting to earth—still pure and bright,
 But wakening, as I hop'd, less awe,
 Thus seen by morning's natural light,
 Than in that strange, dim cell at night.

But no, alas—she ne'er return'd:
 Nor yet—though still I watch—nor
 yet, 470
 Though the red sun for hours hath
 burn'd,
 And now, in his mid course, hath met

The peak of that eternal pile
 He pauses still at noon to biess,
 Standing beneath his downward smile,
 Like a great Spirit, shadowless!—
 Nor yet she comes—while here, alone,
 Saunt'ring through this death-peopled
 place,

Where no heart beats except my own,
 Or 'neath a palm-tree's shelter thrown,
 By turns I watch, and rest, and trace
 These lines, that are to wait to thee 482
 My last night's wondrous history.

Dost thou remember, in that Isle
 Of our own Sea, where thou and I
 Linger'd so long, so happy a while,
 'Till all the summer flowers went by—
 How gay it was, when sunset brought
 To the cool Well our favourite maids—
 Some we had won, and some we sought—
 To dance within the fragrant shades,
 And, till the stars went down attune 492
 Their Fountain Hymns¹ to the young
 moon?

That time, too—oh, 'tis like a dream—
 When from Scamander's holy tide
 I sprung as Genius of the Stream;
 And bore away that blooming bride,
 Who thither came, to yield her charms
 (As Phrygian maids are wont, ere wed)

Into the cold Scamander's arms, 500
 But met, and welcom'd mine, instead—

Wondering, as on my neck she fell,
 How river-gods could love so well!
 Who would have thought that he, who rovd

Like the first bees of summer then;
 Rifling each sweet, nor ever lov'd

But the free hearts, that lov'd again,
 Readily as the reed replies
 To the least breath that round it sighs—
 Is the same dreamer who, last night, 510
 Stood aw'd and breathless at the sight
 Of one Egyptian girl; and now
 Wanders among these tombs, with brow
 Pale, watchful, sad, as though he just,
 Himself, had risen from out their dust!

Yet so it is—and the same thirst
 For something high and pure, above
 This withering world, which, from the first,

Made me drink deep of woman's love—
 As the one joy, to heaven most near 520
 Of all our hearts can meet with here—
 Still burns me up, still keeps awake
 A fever nought but death can slake.

Farewell; whatever may befall—
 Or bright, or dark—thou'lt know it all.

LETTER IV

FROM ORCUS, HIGH PRIEST OF MEMPHIS, TO DECIUS, THE PRAETORIAN PREFECT

REJOICE, my friend, rejoice:—the youthful Chief
 Of that light Sect which mocks at all belief,
 And, gay and godless, makes the present hour
 Its only heaven, is now within our power.
 Smooth, impious school!—not all the weapons aim'd
 At priestly creeds, since first a creed was fram'd,
 E'er struck so deep as that sly dart they wield,
 The Bacchant's pointed spear in laughing flowers conceal'd.
 And oh, 'twere victory to this heart, as sweet
 As any thou canst boast—even when the feet 10
 Of thy proud war-steed wade through Christian blood,
 To wrap this scoffer in Faith's blinding hood,
 And bring him, tam'd and prostrate, to implore
 The vilest gods even Egypt's saints adore.
 What!—do these sages think, to them alone
 The key of this world's happiness is known?
 That none but they, who make such proud parade
 Of Pleasure's smiling favours, win the maid,

¹ These songs of the Well, as they were called by the ancients, are still common in the Greek isles.

Or that Religion keeps no secret place,
 No niche, in her dark fanes, for Love to grace ? 20
 Fools !—did they know how keen the zest that's given
 To earthly joy, when season'd well with heaven ;
 How Piety's grave mask improves the hue
 Of Pleasure's laughing features, half seen through,
 And how the Priest, set aptly within reach
 Of two rich worlds, traffics for bliss with each,
 Would they not, Decius—thou, whom the' ancient tie
 Twixt Sword and Altar makes our best ally—
 Would they not change their creed, their craft, for ours ?
 Leave the gross daylight joys that, in their bowers, 30
 Languish with too much sun, like o'erblown flowers,
 For the veil'd loves, the blisses undisplay'd
 That slyly lurk within the Temple's shade ?
 And, 'stead of haunting the trim Garden's school—
 Where cold Philosophy usurps a rule,
 Like the pale moon's, o'er passions heaving tide,
 Till Pleasure's self is chill'd by Wisdom's pride—
 Be taught by us, quit shadows for the true,
 Substantial joys we sager Priests pursue,
 Who, far too wise to theorise on bliss, 40
 Or Pleasure's substance for its shade to miss,
 Preach other worlds, but live for only this :—
 Thanks to the well-paid Mystery round us flung,
 Which, like its type, the golden cloud that hung
 O'er Jupiter's love-couch its shade benign,
 Round human frailty wraps a veil divine.

Still less should they presume, weak wits, that they Alone despise the craft of us who pray ;—
 Still less their creedless vanity deceive
 With the fond thought, that we who pray believe. 50
 Believe !—Apis forbid—forbid it, all
 Ye monster Gods, before whose shrines we fall—
 Deities, fram'd in jest, as if to try
 How far gross Man can vulgarise the sky ;
 How far the same low fancy that combines
 Into a drove of brutes yon zodiac's signs,
 And turns that Heaven itself into a place
 Of sainted sin and deified disgrace,
 Can bring Olympus even to shame more deep,
 Stock it with things that earth itself holds cheap, 60
 Fish, flesh, and fowl, the kitchen's sacred brood,
 Which Egypt keeps for worship, not for food—
 All, worthy idols of a Faith that sees
 In dogs, cats, owls, and apes, divinities !

Believe !—oh, Decius, thou, who feel'st no care
 For things divine, beyond the soldier's share,
 Who takes on trust the faith for which he bleeds,
 A good, fierce God to swear by, all he needs—
 Little canst thou, whose creed around thee hangs
 Loose as thy summer war-cloak, guess the pangs 70

Of loathing and self-scorn with which a heart,
 Stubborn as mine is, acts the zealot's part—
 The deep and dire disgust with which I wade
 Through the foul juggling of this holy trade—
 This mud profound of mystery, where the feet,
 At every step, sink deeper in deceit.
 Oh, many a time, when, 'mid the Temple's blaze,
 O'er prostrate fools the sacred cist I raise,
 Did I not keep still proudly in my mind
 The power this priestcraft gives me o'er mankind— 80
 A lever, of more might, in skilful hand,
 To move this world, than Archimede e'er plann'd—
 I should, in vengeance of the shame I feel
 At my own mockery, crush the slaves that kneel
 Besotted round; and—like that kindred breed
 Of reverend, well-drest crocodiles they feed,
 At fam'd Arsinoë—make my keepers bless,
 With their last throb, my sharp-fang'd Holiness.

Say, is it to be borne, that scoffers, vain
 Of their own freedom from the altar's chain, 90
 Should mock thus all that thou thy blood hast sold,
 And I my truth, pride, freedom, to uphold?
 It must not be:—think'st thou that Christian sect,
 Whose followers, quick as broken waves, erect
 Their crests anew and swell into a tide,
 That threats to sweep away our shrines of pride—
 Think'st thou, with all their wondrous spells, even they Would triumph thus, had not the constant play
 Of Wit's resistless archery clear'd their way?—
 That mocking spirit, worst of all the foes, 100
 Our solemn fraud, our mystic mummery knows,
 Whose wounding flash thus ever 'mong the signs
 Of a fast-falling creed, prelusive shines,
 Threat'ning such change as do the awful freaks
 Of summer lightning, ere the tempest breaks.

But, to my point—a youth of this vain school,
 But one, whom Doubt itself hath fail'd to cool
 Down to that freezing point where Priests despair
 Of any spark from the altar catching there—
 Hath, some nights since—it was, methinks, the night 110
 That follow'd the full Moon's great annual rite—
 Through the dark, winding ducts, that downward stray
 To these earth-hidden temples, track'd his way,
 Just at that hour when, round the Shrine, and me,
 The choir of blooming nymphs thou long'st to see,
 Sing their last night-hymn in the Sanctuary.
 The clangour of the marvellous Gate, that stands
 At the Well's lowest depth—which none but hands
 Of new, untaught adventurers, from above,
 Who know not the safe path, e'er dare to move— 120
 Gave signal that a foot profane was nigh:—
 'Twas the Greek youth, who, by that morning's sky,

Had been observ'd, curiously wand'ring round
The mighty fanes of our sepulchral ground.

Instant, the' Initiate's Trials were prepar'd,—
The Fire, Air, Water; all that Orpheus dar'd,
That Plato, that the bright-hair'd Samian¹ pass'd,
With trembling hope, to come to—what, at last?
Go, ask the dupes of Priestcraft! question him
Who, 'mid terrific sounds and spectres dim, 130
Walks at Eleusis; ask of those, who brave
The dazzling miracles of Mithra's Cave,
With its seven starry gates; ask all who keep Those terrible night-mysteries, where they weep
And howl sad dirges to the answering breeze,
O'er their dead Gods, their mortal Deities—
Amphibious, hybrid things, that died as men,
Drown'd, hang'd, empal'd, to rise, as gods, again;—
Ask them, what mighty secret lurks below
This seven-fold mystery—can they tell thee? No; 140
Gravely they keep that only secret, well
And fairly kept—that they have none to tell;
And, dup'd themselves, console their humbled pride
By duping thenceforth all mankind beside.

And such the' advance in fraud since Orpheus' time—
That earliest master of our craft sublime—
So many minor Mysteries, imps of fraud,
From the great Orphic Egg have wing'd abroad,
That, still to' uphold our Temple's ancient boast,
And seem most holy, we must cheat the most; 150
Work the best miracles, wrap nonsense round
In pomp and darkness, till it seems profound;
Play on the hopes, the terrors of mankind,
With changeful skill; and make the human mind
Like our own Sanctuary, where no ray,
But by the Priest's permission, wins its way—
Where through the gloom as wave our wizard-rods,
Monsters, at will, are conjur'd into Gods;
While Reason, like a grave-fac'd mummy, stands,
With her arms swath'd in hieroglyphic bands. 160
But chiefly in that skill with which we use
Man's wildest passions for Religion's views,
Yoking them to her car like fiery steeds,
Lies the main art in which our craft succeeds.
And oh! be blest, ye men of yore, whose toil
Hath, for her use, scoop'd out from Egypt's soil
This hidden Paradise, this mine of fanes,
Gardens, and palaces, where Pleasure reigns
In a rich, sunless empire of her own,
With all earth's luxuries lighting up her throne;— 170
A realm for mystery made, which undermines
The Nile itself, and, 'neath the Twelve Great Shrines

¹ Pythagoras.

That keep Initiation's holy rite,
 Spreads its long labyrinths of unearthly light,
 A light that knows no change—its brooks that run
 Too deep for day, its gardens without sun,
 Where soul and sense, by turns, are charm'd, surpris'd,
 And all that bard or prophet e'er devis'd
 For man's Elysium, priests have realis'd.

Here, at this moment—all his trials past, 180
 And heart and nerve unshrinking to the last—
 Our new Initiate roves—as yet left free
 To wander through this realm of mystery ;
 Feeding on such illusions as prepare
 The soul, like mist o'er waterfalls, to wear
 All shapes and hues, at Fancy's varying will,
 Through every shifting aspect, vapour still ;—
 Vague glimpses of the Future, vistas shown,
 By scenic skill, into that world unknown,
 Which saints and sinners claim alike their own ; 190
 And all those other witching, wildering arts,
 Illusions, terrors, that make human hearts,
 Ay, even the wisest and the hardiest, quail
 To any goblin thron'd behind a veil.

Yes—such the spells shall haunt his eye, his ear,
 Mix with his night-dreams, form his atmosphere ;
 Till, if our Sage be not tam'd down, at length,
 His wit, his wisdom, shorn of all their strength,
 Like Phrygian priests, in honour of the shrine—
 If he become not absolutely mine, 200
 Body and soul, and, like the tame decoy
 Which wary hunters of wild doves employ,
 Draw converts also, lure his brother wits
 To the dark cage where his own spirit fits,
 And give us, if not saints, good hypocrites—
 If I effect not this, then be it said
 The ancient spirit of our craft hath fled,
 Gone with that serpent-god the Cross hath chas'd
 To hiss its soul out in the Theban waste.

A beam of tranquillity smil'd in the west	96	' And now,' quoth the Minister, (eased of his panics) 594
A Bishop and a bold dragoon	661	And now with all thy pencil's truth 15
A broken cake, with honey sweet	32	Angel of Charity, who, from above 260
A certain Sprite, who dwells below	588	Arm'd with hyacinthine rod 19
A Donkey, whose talent for burdens was wondrous	586	Around the tomb, oh, bard divine 34
A hunter once in that grove reclin'd	298	Arrah, where were you , Murthagh, that beautiful day? 659
A Lottery, a Lottery	716	Array thee, love, array thee, love 269
A Millennium at hand!—I'm delighted to hear it	577	As a beam o'er the face of the waters may glow 184
A Spirit there is, whose fragrant sigh	367	As, by his Lemnian forge's flame 19
A Sylph, as bright as ever sported	528	As by the shore, at break of day 282
' A Temple to Friendship,' said Laura, enchanted	234	As down in the sunless retreats of the Ocean 259
A wounded Chieftain, lying	299	As I sat in my study, lone and still 678
About fifty years since, in the days of our daddies	646	As it was but last week that I sint you a letter 709
According to some learn'd opinions	615	As late I sought the spangled bowers 11
After some observations from Dr. M'Grig	665	As Love, one summer eve, was straying 291
Ah, Tories dear, our ruin is near	658	As news from Olympus has grown rather rare 680
Ah! where are they, who heard, in former hours	284	As o'er her loom the Lesbian Maid 279
Alas! my dear friend, what a state of affairs	619	As once a Grecian maiden wove 287
All, as he left it!—ev'n the pen	533	As recruits in these times are not easily got 178
All in again—unlook'd for bliss	607	As St. Jerome, who died some ages ago 639
All that's bright must fade	235	As slow our ship her foamy track 212
Almighty God! when round thy shrine Alone by the Schuyllkill a wanderer rovd	119	As snug in his bed Lord H—n!—y lay 629
Alone in crowds to wander on	229	As snug, on a Sunday eve, of late 623
Among other stray flashmen, dispos'd of, this week	669	As the gay tint, that decks the vernal rose 142
Among the Spirits, of pure flame	557	As 'tis now, my dear Tully, some weeks since I started 650
And are you then a thing of art	74	As vanquish'd Erin wept beside 225
And do I then wonder that Julia deceives me	49	As Whig Reform has had its range 628
And doth not a meeting like this make amends	224	Ask not if still I love 335
And hast thou mark'd the pensiveshade	82	Ask what prevailing, pleasing power 39
And is there then no earthly place	516	At length, dearest Freddy, the moment is nigh 164
And now—crossbuns and pancakes o'er ' And now,' quoth the goddess, in accents jocose	572	At length thy golden hours have wing'd their flight 36
	653	At morn, beside yon summer sea 238
		At morning, when the earth and sky 112
		At night, when all is still around 717

	PAGE		PAGE
At the mid hour of night, when stars are weeping, I fly	201	Cease the sighing fool to play . . .	73
Avenging and bright fall the swift sword of Erin	199	Chloris, I swear, by all I ever swore .	53
Awake, arise, thy light is come . . .	262	Choose some title that's dormant— the Peerage hath many	649
Awake to life, my sleeping shell . . .	29	Cloris! if I were Persia's king . . .	46
Away, away, ye men of rules	26	Come, chase that starting tear away .	241
Away, away—you're all the same . . .	88	'Come, come,' said Tom's father, 'at your time of life	561
Awhile I bloom'd, a happy flower . .	33	Come, fill round a bumper, fill up to the brim	306
Ay, down to the dust with them, slaves as they are	535	Come, fly to these arms, nor let beau- ties so bloomy	174
Ay, yoke ye to the bigots' car	636	Come, give us more Livings and Rectors	626
B		'Come, if thy magic Glass have pow'r	299
B—kes is weak, and G—lb—n too . . .	574	Come, list to my pastoral tones . . .	666
Be still, my heart: I hear them come	323	Come list, while I tell of the heart- wounded Stranger	302
Behold, my love, the curious gem . . .	109	Come, listen to my story, while . . .	245
Behold the Sun, how bright	260	Come, maids and youths, for here we sell	324
Behold, the young, the rosy Spring . .	24	Come, May, with all thy flowers . . .	309
Being weary of love	310	Come not, oh Lord, in the dread robe of splendour	258
Believe me, if all those endearing young charms	189	Come o'er the sea	205
Between Adam and me the great difference is	179	Come, play me that simple air again .	721
Blest infant of eternity	82	Come, rest in this bosom, my own stricken deer	208
Beast on, my friend—though stript of all beside	133	Come, riddle-me-ree, come, riddle- me-ree	599
Boy, tell the Cook that I hate all nick-nackeries	179	Come, send round the wine, and leave points of belief	188
Bright be thy dreams—may all thy weeping	242	Come, step in, gentlefolks, here ye may view	671
Bright moon, that high in heav'n art shining	338	Come, take my advice, never trouble your cranium	598
Bring hither, bring thy lute, while day is dying	274	Come, take thy harp—'tis vain to muse	88
Bring metheslumbering souls of flowers	705	'Come, tell me,' says Rosa, as kissing and kist	72
Bring the bright garlands hither . . .	250	Come, tell me where the maid is found	54
Buds of roses, virgin flowers	23	Come to our Fête, and bring with thee	158
But, whither have these gentle ones .	91	Come wed with me, and we will write	624
But who shall see the glorious day . .	259	Come with me, and we will blow . .	585
By that Lake, whose gloomy shore . .	197	'Come, Y—rm—th, my boy, never trouble your brains	171
By the fair and brave	368	Come, ye disconsolate, where'er you languish	262
By the Feal's wave benighted	225	Comrades and friends! with whom, where'er	532
By the hope within us springing . . .	192	Conceal'd within the shady wood . .	65
C		Couldst thou look as dear as when . .	315
Call the Loves around	276	Count me, on the summer trees . . .	13
Calm as, beneath its mother's eyes . .	291
Calm be thy sleep as infants' slumbers	324
Canonize him!—yea, verily, we'll canonize him	583

Cupid once upon a bed	21	Fare thee well, thou lovely one! . .	237
Cupid, whose lamp has lent the ray .	33	Farewell!—but whenever you welcome the hour	204
D
Dark comrade of my path! while earth and sky	693	Farewell—farewell to thee, Araby's daughter	434
Dear Coz, as I know neither you nor Miss Draper	579	Farewell, Theresa! yon cloud that over	246
Dear Dick—just arriv'd at my own humble gîte	713	Fear not that, while around thee . .	252
Dear Doll, while the tails of our horses are plaiting	457	Fill high the cup with liquid flame .	58
Dear Goddess of Corn, whom the ancients, we know	570	Fill me, boy, as deep a draught . .	30
Dear Harp of my Country! in dark- ness I found thee	210	Fill the bumper fair	210
Dear John, as I know, like our brother of London	667	Fill'd with the wonders I had seen .	522
Dear Judy, I find you this bit of a letther.	698	Fine and feathery artisan	167
Dear L—ndh—t,—you'll pardon my making thus free	685	Fine figures of speech let your orators follow	647
Dear Sir, I've just had time to look .	150	Fleety o'er the moonlight snows . .	339
Dear ? yes, though mine no more .	335	Flow on, thou shining river	235
Die when you will, you need not wear	73	Fly from the world, O Bessy! to me .	58
Do not say that life is waning. . .	248	Fly not thus my brow of snow . . .	26
Dost thou not hear the silver bell . .	249	Fly not yet, 'tis just the hour . . .	182
Dost thou remember that place so lonely	237	Fly swift, my light gazelle.	331
Down in the valley come meet me to-night	218	Forget not the field where they perish'd	215
Down in yon summer vale	328	For thee alone I brave the boundless deep	320
Dreaming for ever, vainly dreaming .	339	Friend of my soul, this goblet sip . .	54
Drink of this cup; you'll find there's a spell in	218	From dread Leucadia's frowning steep	34
Drink to her, who long	190	From life without freedom, say, who would not fly?	312
E
Ere Psyche drank the cup, that shed .	561	From rise of morn till set of sun . .	120
Erin, the tear and the smile in thine eyes	181	From this hour the pledge is given .	233
Even here in this region of wonders, I find	509	From tongue to tongue the rumour flew	673
Ev'ry season hath its pleasures . .	253	G
F
Faintly as tolls the evening chime .	124	Gaily sounds the castanet	240
Fairest! put on awhile	223	Gift of the Hero, on his dying day .	717
Fall'n is thy Throne, oh Israel . .	255	Give me the harp of epic song . . .	10
Fare thee well, perfidious maid . .	32	Go, Brothers in wisdom—go, bright pair of Peers	652
		Go, let me weep—there's bliss in tears	258
		Go forth to the Mount—bring the olive-branch home	265
		Go, now, and dream o'er that joy in thy slumber	246
		'Go!' said the angry, weeping maid .	86
		Go seek for some abler defenders of wrong	608
		Go then, if she, whose shade thou art	82
		Go then—'tis vain to hover	242
		Go where glory waits thee	180

	PAGE		PAGE
God preserve us!—there's nothing now safe from assault	621	How can you, my Lord, thus delight to torment all	569
'Good night! good night!'—And is it so?	56	How dear to me the hour when day- light dies	185
Good reader! if you e'er have seen .	73	How happy, once, though wing'd with sighs	317
Great Sir, having just had the good luck to catch	575	How heav'nly was the poet's doom .	56
Great Sultan, how wise are thy state compositions	587	How I grieve you're not with us!— pray, come, if you can	700
Grow to my lip, thou sacred kiss . .	72	How I love the festive boy	22
H		How lightly mounts the Muse's wing .	264
Hail, reverend Hat!—sublime 'mid all	579	How oft a cloud, with envious veil .	71
Half Whig, half Tory, like those mid- way things	662	How oft has the Benshee cried . . .	186
Hark! the vesper hymn is stealing .	238	How sad a case!—just think of it .	626
Hark! 'tis the breeze of twilight calling	264	How sweet the answer Echo makes .	220
Has sorrow thy young days shaded .	206	How various are the inspirations .	684
Haste, Maami, the spring is nigh . .	565	'Hurra! hurra!' I heard them say .	593
Haste thee, nymph, whose well-aim'd spear	31	'Hush, hush!'—how well	307
Have you not seen the timid tear . .	40	Hush, sweet Lute, thy songs remind me	338
Having sent off the troops of brave Major Camac	173	Hymen, late, his love-knots selling .	244
He comes from Erin's speechful shore,	696	I
He, who instructs the youthful crew .	27	I'm quite of your mind;—though these Pats cry aloud	670
Hear me but once, while o'er the grave	241	I bring thee, love, a golden chain . .	81
Her last words, at parting, how can I forget?	321	I care not for the idle state	11
Here, at thy tomb, these tears I shed	332	I come from a land in the sun-bright deep	328
Here I am, at head-quarters, dear Terry, once more	686	I could resign that eye of blue . .	81
Here's a choice set of Tools for you, Ge'mmen and Ladies	176	I do confess, in many a sigh . . .	54
Here is one leaf reserv'd for me . . .	64	I dreamt that, in the Paphian groves	48
Here's the bower she lov'd so much .	312	I fear that love disturbs my rest . .	34
Here lies Factotum Ned at last . . .	562	I fill'd to thee, to thee I drank . .	53
Here recline you, gentle maid	16	I found her not—the chamber seem'd	69
Here sleeps Anacreon, in this ivied shade	35	I give thee all—I can no more . . .	318
Here sleeps the Bard who knew so well	248	I hate thee, oh, Mob, as my Lady hates delf	178
Here, take my heart—'twill be safe in thy keeping	308	I have a garden of my own	326
'Here we dwell, in holiest bowers . .	200	I've a secret to tell thee, but hush! not here	230
Here, while the moonlight dim	285	I have been, like Puck, I have been, in a trice	645
Hither, Flora, Queen of Flowers . .	170	'I've been, oh, sweet daughter . . .	322
Hither, gentle Muse of mine	33	I have found out a gift for my Erin .	596
Hold, hold, my good sir, go a little more slowly	174	I've had a dream that bodes no good	493
Hope comes again, to this heart long a stranger	251	I've had such a dream—a frightful dream	631
How am I to punish thee	12	I've heard, there was in ancient days	76
		I heard, as I lay, a wailing sound .	590
		I just had turn'd the classic page .	106

I knew by the smoke, that so gracefully curl'd	124	In myrtle wreaths my votive sword I'll cover	335
I know that Heaven bath sent me here	22	In slumber, I prithee how is it	47
I know thou lov'st a brimming measure	34	In that delightful Province of the Sun	343
I love a maid, a mystic maid	336	In the dirge we sung o'er him no censure was heard	452
I'll ask the sylph who round thee flies	54	In the morning of life, when its cares are unknown	211
I more than once have heard, at night	86	In vain all the Knights of the Underwald woo'd her	300
I much regret, dear Reverend Sir	707	In vain we fondly strive to trace	45
'I never give a kiss' (says Prue)	73	In wedlock a species of lottery lies	50
I often wish this languid lyre	17	In witching slumbers of the night	49
I pledge myself through thick and thin	639	In yonder valley there dwelt, alone	224
I pray thee, by the gods above	12	Is all then forgotten? those amorous pranks	567
I pray you, let us roam no more	105	Is it not sweet, beloved youth	39
I sat me down in my easy chair	664	Is it not sweet to think, hereafter	265
I saw from the beach, when the morning was shining	209	Is not thy mind a gentle mind?	43
I saw, from yonder silent cave	283	Is the song of Rosa mute?	53
I saw it all in Fancy's glass	496	Is there no call, no consecrating cause	38
I saw the moon rise clear	312	It being an object now to meet	648
I saw the peasant's hand unkind	51	It came o'er her sleep, like a voice of those days	296
I saw the smiling bard of pleasure	9	It glads us much to be able to say	677
I saw thy form in youthful prime	197	It is not the tear at this moment shed	194
I stole along the flowery bank	108	It is o'er, it is o'er, my reign is o'er	613
I thought this heart enkindled lay	50
I turn'd my steps, and lo, a shadowy throng	605	J
'I want the Court Guide,' said my lady, 'to look	170	Just in time for the post, dear	689
I will, I will, the conflict's past	13
I wish I was by that dim Lake	226	K
I'd mourn the hopes that leave me	205	Keep those eyes still purely mine	251
If, after all, you still will doubt and fear me	318	King Crack was the best of all possible Kings	169
If ever life was prosperously cast	565	Know'st thou not him the poet sings	602
If former times had never left a trace	112
If hoarded gold possess'd the power	21	L
If I speak to thee in Friendship's name	253	Ladies and Gentlemen, on Monday night	527
If I swear by that eye, you'll allow	39	Lady! where'er you roam, whatever land	100
If I were yonder wave, my dear	108	Lament, lament, Sir Isaac Heard	578
If in loving, singing, night and day	250	Last night, as lonely o'er my fire I sat	717
If it be true that Music reigns	518	Last night I toss'd and turn'd in bed	164
If life for me hath joy or light	319	Last week, dear N—ch—l, making merry	152
If thou'lt be mine, the treasures of air,	214	Lay his sword by his side, it hath serv'd him too well	232
If thou wouldst have me sing and play	324	Lesbia hath a beaming eye	196
If thou wouldst have thy charms enchant our eyes	254
If to see thee be to love thee	276
Important event for the rich and religious	680
In days, my Kate, when life was new	97

Let Erin remember the days of old	187	'Mong our neighbours, the French, in the good olden time	604
Let History boast of her Romans and Spartans	656	Mourn not for Venice—let her rest	512
Let me, a moment, ere with fear and hope	513	Much as her form seduc'd the sight	720
Let me resign this wretched breath	34	My banks are all furnish'd with rags	574
Let other bards to groves repair	609	'My birth-day!' what a different sound	530
Let thy joys alone be remember'd now	318	My dear Lady —! I've been just sending out	154
Let us drain the nectar'd bowl	22	My dear Lady Bab, you'll be shock'd, I'm afraid	148
Let's take this world as some wide scene	321	My fates had destin'd me to rove	44
Light sounds the harp when the combat is over	57	My gentle Harp, once more I waken	211
Lightly, Alpine rover	320	My harp has one unchanging theme	239
Like morning, when her early breeze	262	My Lords, I'm accus'd of a trick that, God knows, is	595
Like one who, doom'd o'er distant seas	252	My love and I, the other day	52
Like one who trusts to summer skies	57	My Mopsa is little, my Mopsa is brown	334
Like some wanton filly sporting	31
Like the bright lamp, that shone in Kildare's holy fane	190	N
Listen to the Muse's lyre	10	Nay, do not weep, my Fanny dear	78
Long as I waltz'd with only thee	273	Nay, tell me not, dear, that the goblet drowns	198
Long years have pass'd, old friend, since we	338	Nay, tempt me not to love again	104
'Look here,' said Rose, with laughing eyes	330	Ne'er ask the hour—what is it to us	216
Lord, who shall bear that day, so dread, so splendid	260	Ne'er talk of Wisdom's gloomy schools	248
Loud complaints being made, in these quick-reading times	672	Never mind how the pedagogue prosed pow'r	49
Love had a fever—ne'er could close	535	'Never shall woman's smiles have pow'r	532
Love is a hunter-boy	241	Next week will be publish'd (as 'Lives' are the rage)	600
Love thee, dearest? love thee?	318	Night clos'd around the conqueror's way	193
Love thee?—so well, so tenderly	315	Night waneth fast, the morning star	324
Love, wand'ring through the golden maze	314	Nights of music, nights of loving	311
		No—Lady! Lady! keep the ring	59
M		No—leave my heart to rest, if rest it may	249
March! nor heed those arms that hold thee	294	No life is like the mountaineer's	289
Mark those proud boasters of a splendid line	38	No longer, dear V—sey, feel hurt and uneasy	610
Mary, I believ'd thee true	75	No, ne'er did the wave in its element steep	108
Merrily every bosom boundeth	314	No, never shall my soul forget	87
Methinks, the pictur'd bull we see	26	No, not for yourselves, ye reverend men	645
Mind not though daylight around us is breaking	325	No, not more welcome the fairy numbers	206
Missing or lost, last Sunday night	630	No—'tis not the region where Love's to be found	517
Mix me, child, a cup divine	34	No wonder bards, both high and low	566
Mock me no more with Love's beguil- ing dream	44	No wonder, Mary, that thy story	524
Monarch Love, resistless boy	33	Not from thee the wound should come	336

Of all my happiest hours of joy	74	Oh, the sight entrancing	221
Of all speculations the market holds forth	535	Oh! think not my spirits are always as light	183
Of all that, to the sage's survey	497	Oh think, when a hero is sighing	716
Of all the fair months, that round the sun	219	Oh thou, of all creation blest	20
Of all the odd plans of this mon- strously queer age	660	Oh, Thou! who dry'st the mourner's tear	256
Of old, the Sultan Genius reign'd	565	Oh tidings of freedom! oh accents of hope!	611
Of various scraps and fragments built Oft have I seen, in gay, equestrian pride	632 602	Oh! weep for the hour	187
Oft, in the stilly night	238	Oh W—ll—ngt—n and Stephenson	657
Oft, when the watching stars grow pale	246	Oh, what a sea of storm we've pass'd Oh, where art thou dreaming	102 275
Oh albums, albums, how I dread	566	Oh, where's the slave so lowly	208
Oh! Arranmore, lov'd Arranmore	231	Oh woman, if through sinful wile	73
Oh banquet not in those shining bowers	220	Oh, ye Dead! oh, ye Dead! whom we On beds of snow the moonbeam slept	219 52
Oh! blame not the bard, if he fly to the bowers	190	On one of those sweet nights that oft	274
Oh! breathe not his name, let it sleep in the shade	181	On to the field, our doom is seal'd	307
Oh, call it by some better name	309	Once in each revolving year	18
Oh, come to me when daylight sets	238	'Once more,' said Jerome, 'I'll run up and see	640

Put off the vestal veil, nor, oh! . . .	64	See those cherries, how they cover . . .	608
Q		See you, beneath yon cloud so dark . .	129
Quick! we have but a second	223	Shall the Harp, then, be silent, when he who first gave	220
Quit the sword, thou King of men . . .	592	'She has beauty, but still you must keep your heart cool	312
R		She is far from the land where her young hero sleeps	198
'Raise the buckler—poise the lance . .	282	'She never look'd so kind before	51
Reason, and Folly, and Beauty, they say	236	She sung of Love, while o'er her lyre . .	227
Rejoice, my friend, rejoice:—the youthful Chief	734	Shine out, Stars! let Heav'n assemble .	310
Remember him thou leav'st behind . . .	39	Should those fond hopes e'er forsake thee	236
Remember the glories of Brien the brave	181	Silence is in our festal halls	234
Remember the time, in La Mancha's shades	314	Silent, oh Moyle, be the roar of thy water	188
Remember thee? yes, while there's life in this heart	213	Since first Thy Word awak'd my heart .	264
Rememb'rest thou that setting sun . .	308	Sing—sing—Music was given	227
Resolv'd—to stick to every particle . .	156	Sing, sweet Harp, oh sing to me	228
Rich and rare were the gems she wore	184	Sing to Love—for, oh, 'twas he	322
Rich in bliss, I proudly scorn	32	Sir Hudson Lowe, Sir Hudson Low . . .	567
Ripen'd by the solar beam	29	'Slumber, oh slumber; if sleeping thou mak'st	250
Rose of the Desert! thou, whose blushing ray	319	Smoothly flowing through verdant vales	272
Round the world goes, by day and night	329	So gently in peace Alcibiades smil'd . .	179
Row gently here	243	So may my Lady's prayers prevail . . .	653
		So warmly we met and so fondly we parted	235
		Some mortals there may be, so wise, or so fine	270
		Some think we bards have nothing real .	533

Sound the loud Timbrel o'er Egypt's dark sea	257
Spirit of Joy, thy altar lies	715
Spirit of Love, whose locks unroll'd	33
Start not, my friend, nor think the muse will stain	137
Still, like dew in silence falling	334
Still the question I must parry	53
Still thou fliest, and still I woo thee	337
Still thus, when twilight gleam'd	300
Still when daylight o'er the wave	325
Stop, Intellect, in mercy stop	614
Strange power of Genius, that can throw Strew me a fragrant bed of leaves	525 20
Strike the gay harp! see the moon is on high	230
Sublime was the warning that Liberty spoke	189
Sweet Innisfallen, fare thee well	222
Sweet lady, look not thus again	45
Sweet Moon! if, like Crotona's sage	95
Sweet singer of Romaldkirk, thou who art reckon'd	643
Sweet Sirmio! thou, the very eye	532
Sweet spirit! if thy airy sleep	49

Take back the sigh, thy lips of art	77
Take back the virgin page	185
Take hence the bowl;—though beam- ing	246
Take your bell, take your bell	570
Talk no more of your Cheltenham and Harrowgate springs	662
Tell her, oh, tell her, the lute she left lying	311
'Tell me, gentle youth, I pray thee	12
'Tell me, kind Seer, I pray thee	298
Tell me not of joys above	404
Tell me the witching tale again	69
'Tell me, what's Love?' said Youth, one day	299
Tell me, why, my sweetest dove	14
That sky of clouds is not the sky	104
That wrinkle, when first I espied it	42
The account is balanc'd—the bill drawn out	646
The beam of morning trembling	316
The bird, let loose in eastern skies	255
The brilliant black eye	311
The Budget—quite charming and witty—no hearing	573

The dance was o'er, yet still in dreams	721
The darkness that hung upon Willum- berg's walls	41
The dawn is breaking o'er us	331
The dawning of morn, the day- light's sinking	220
'The daylight is gone—but, before we depart	110
The dream of those days when first I sung thee is o'er	233
The Duke is the lad to frighten a lass	650
The Garland I send thee was cull'd from those bowers	253
The Ghost of Miltiades came at night	620
The halcyon hangs o'er ocean	326
The happy day at length arriv'd	61
The harp that onethrough Tara's halls	182
'The longer one lives, the more one learns'	627
The man who keeps a conscience pure	172
The Minstrel Boy to the war is gone	203

The song of war shall echo through our mountains	316
The song that lightens our languid way	716
The summer webs that float and shine	325
The time I've lost in wooing	208
The turf shall be my fragrant shrine	257
The valley lay smiling before me	203
The wine-cup is circling in Almhin's hall	232
The wisest soul, by anguish torn	47
The women tell me every day	11
The world had just begun to steal	48
The world is all a fleeting show	256
The world was hush'd, the moon above	326
The wreath you wove, the wreath you wove	47
The young May moon is beaming, love	202
The young rose I give thee, so dewy and bright	316
Then, fare thee well, my own dear love	240

Then first from Love, in Nature's bow'rs	337	This day a New House, for your edifi- cation	175
There are echoes we know, of all sorts	616	This life, dear Corry, who can doubt ?	562
There are sounds of mirth in the night-air ringing	231	This life is all chequer'd with pleasures and woes	200
There are two Loves, the poet sings .	327	This tribute's from a wretched elf .	57
There breathes a language, known and felt	303	This wild Irish patient does pester me so	642
There came a nymph dancing	323	This world is all a fleeting show . .	256
There comes a time, a dreary time .	239	Those evening bells! those evening bells!	236
There is a bleak Desert, where day- light grows weary	263	Those lips, then, hallow'd sage, which pour'd along	5
There's a bower of roses by Bende- meer's stream	366	'Thou art not dead—thou art not dead!'	290
There's a song of the olden time . .	320	Thou art, O God, the life and light .	254
There's not a look, a word of thine .	110	Thou bidst me sing the lay I sung to thee	329
There is not in the wide world a valley so sweet	184	Thou oft hast told me of the happy hours	121
There is some star—or it may be . .	729	Thou told'st me, in our days of love .	532
There's something strange, I know not what	336	Thou, whose soft and rosy hues . .	14
There lies a shell beneath the waves .	66	'Though all the pet mischiefs we count upon, fail	634
There, my lad, lie the Articles—just thirty-nine	644	Tho' dark are our sorrows, to-day we'll forget them	195
There was a little Man, and he had a little Soul	177	Though fam'd was Mesmer, in his day	655
These few brief lines, my reverend friend	712	Though Fate, my girl, may bid us part	44
They both were hush'd, the voice, the chords	719	Though humble the banquet to which I invite thee	228
They came from a land beyond the sea	230	Though lightly sounds the song I sing to thee	339
They know not my heart, who believe there can be	226	Though long at school and college dosing	75
'They made her a grave, too cold and damp	99	Though many great Doctors there be	578
They may rail at this life—from the hour I began it	215	Though sacred the tie that our coun- try entwineth	716
They met but once, in youth's sweet hour	326	Though soldiers are the true supports	502
They say that Love had once a book .	64	Though sorrow long has worn my heart	50
They tell how Atys, wild with love .	13	Tho' the last glimpse of Erin with sorrow I see	183
They tell me thou'rt the favour'd guest	323	Though 'tis all but a dream at the best	247
They tell me thou'rt the favour'd guest (another version)	516	Thrice hath scribbling K—ny—n scrawl'd	617
They tell us of an Indian tree . . .	535	Through Erin's Isle	201
They told her that he, to whose vows she had listen'd	296	Through grief and through danger thy smile hath cheer'd my way . .	193
They try to persuade me, my dear little sprite	60	Through M—nch—st—r Square took a canter just now	168
They wove the lotus band to deck .	32	Thus did Soame Jenyns—though a Tory	499
Think on that look whose melting ray	72	Thy brave, thy learn'd, have pass'd away	514
		Thy harp may sing of Troy's alarms .	18
		Thy song has taught my heart to feel	74

'Tis believ'd that this Harp, which I wake now for thee	195	'Twas midnight dark	301
'Tis evening now; beneath the western star	116	'Twas night, and many a circling bowl	21
'Tis gone, and for ever, the light we saw breaking	209	'Twas noon of night, when round the pole	20
'Tis moonlight over Oman's Sea . .	405	'Twas on a day	84
'Tis said—but whether true or not .	313	'Twas on the Red Sea coast, at morn, we met	88
'Tis sweet to think, that, where'er we rove	193	'Twas one of those dreams, that by music are brought	222
'Tis the last rose of summer	202	'Twas when the world was in its prime	538
'Tis the Vine! 'tis the Vine!' said the cup-loving boy	295	Twin'st thou with lofty wreath thy brow?	333
'Tis time, I feel, to leave thee now .	87	'Twixt Eld—n's Hat and Eld—n's Wig	592
'Tis true, alas—the myst'ries and the lore	724
'Tis true, my fading years decline .	24	U
To all that breathe the air of heaven	18	Unbind thee, love, unbind thee, love	336
To be the theme of every hour . . .	66	Up and march! the timbrel's sound	288
To catch the thought, by painting's spell	83	'Up!' said the Spirit, and, ere I could pray	580
To Ladies' eyes around, boy	214	Up, sailor boy, 'tis day	335
To Love, the soft and blooming child	31	Up with the sparkling brimmer . .	293

To see thee every day that came . .	90	Vill nobodies try my nice Annual Pill	610
To sigh, yet feel no pain	715	Vulcan! hear your glorious task . .	10
To Swanage—that neat little town, in whose bay	596
To the people of England, the humble Petition	582	W
To thee, the Queen of nymphs divine	31	Wake thee, my dear—thy dreaming .	320
To those we love we've drank to-night	719	'War against Babylon!' shout we around	266
To weave a garland for the rose . .	333	Wake up, sweet melody	323
To-day, dearest! is ours	308	Wanted—Authors of all-work, to job for the season	589
Too plain, alas, my doom is spoken .	251	Was it the moon, or was it morning's ray	79
T'other night, after hearing Lord Dudley's oration	633	We're told the ancient Roman nation	153
'Twas a new feeling—something more	42	We may roam through this world, like a child at a feast	186
'Twas a proud moment—er'n to hear the words	519	We miss'd you last night at the 'hoary old sinner's'	151
'Twas but for a moment—and yet in that time	129	We read the flying courser's name .	18
'Twas evening time, in the twilight sweet	585	Weep not for those whom the veil of the tomb	256
'Twas eve's soft hour, and bright, above	720	Weep on, weep on, your hour is past .	196
'Twas grav'd on the Stone of Destiny	637	Weep, weep for him, the Man of God	261
'Twas in a land, that far away . .	539	Weeping for thee, my love, through the long day	280
'Twas in a mocking dream of night .	19	Welcome, sweet bird, through the sunny air, winging	293
'Twas in the fair Aspasia's bower . .	78	Well may you wonder at my flight .	722
'Twas in the summer time so sweet .	77
'Twas late—the sun had almost shone	507
